If yes, please explain how you will address the disproportionality.

Small numbers of students participating in state assessments can also greatly influence percentages. For example, a risk ratio may be high because 1 student participated and there were only a few students in the category. An example would be a group of 6 [redacted] students and 1 participated in the DLM.

To ensure appropriate choices are made, the district reviews red-flag data and DLM participation guidelines annually with IEP teams. Participation in the DLM is made annually by IEP TEAMS on an individual student basis considering each student's unique needs. When determining the appropriate assessment for a student, teams consider the instructional content and intensity of instruction provided, and a variety of data points included in the Individual Education Plan for each student. During the annual review or initial IEP meeting for students recently identified, the Districts IEP teams are guided in the process of selecting the appropriate assessment by utilizing the Dynamic Learning MAP's Participation Guidelines for Kansas when considering a student for a DLM. The team decision and rationale for that decision is documented annually in each child's IEP.
Specifically, teams review individual student data to determine:
1. The student has a significant cognitive disability, or multiple handicaps that significantly impacts cognitive functioning and significant deficits in adaptive behavior, and:
2. Instruction and IEP Goals for the student are tied to grade level essential elements, and:
3. The student requires direct and individualized instruction and substantial supports that are not transient in nature, using adaptive individualized materials and methodology to access and learn grade and age appropriate curriculum.

[X] Please provide a narrative that includes the data types and processes that the IEP teams are utilizing to qualify students for the Alternate Assessments (DLM) in the box below and press Save.

Teams use the DLM participation guidelines and are guided in the determination by agency prompts embedded in the IEP. Specifically, teams review individual student data to determine:

1. The student has a cognitive disability, or multiple handicaps that significantly impacts cognitive functioning and significant deficits in adaptive behavior, and:
2. Instruction and IEP Goals for the student are tied to grade level essential elements, and:
3. The student requires direct and individualized instruction and substantial supports that are not transient in nature, using adaptive individualized materials and methodology to access and learn grade and age appropriate curriculum.

These areas are considered individually for each student.

To further ensure effective practice, the district trained last year on Kansas Dynamic Learning Participation guidelines and use the Rubric for determining eligibility for taking the DLM and will continue to provide this training to key stakeholders.

[X] What are the district's next steps to ensure that annually the appropriate test is administered to each student?

The district trained last year on Kansas Dynamic Learning Participation guidelines and use the Rubric for determining eligibility for taking the DLM and will continue to provide this training to key stakeholders.

Further, IEP Teams also review red-flag data annually to review district participation in the DLM and ensure appropriate decisions were made for all students participating in the DLM or State Assessment.

Based on the data for our district, our LEA needs additional training.

As part of Interlocal 637 practice, we provide the above training to key stakeholders on an annual basis. We include 'red-flag' analysis of prior year data in that training.

Our district anticipates testing over 1% of our students in one or more content areas during the school year.
