If yes, please explain how you will address the disproportionality.

SKACD has been using the DLM rubric to ensure that the appropriate students are identified as needing an alternative assessment measure. SKACD continues to provide ongoing training to case managers and building administrators about the importance of selecting the most appropriate state assessment.

IEP teams will continue to review each student's unique learning needs when selecting the most appropriate state assessment.

[X] Please provide a narrative that includes the data types and processes that the IEP teams are utilizing to qualify students for the Alternate Assessments (DLM) in the box below and press Save.

Students do not “qualify” for an alternative assessment. Qualification refers to some type of standard of measurement against a singular data set. IEP teams instead evaluate each student's unique learning needs to determine which type of state assessment is the most appropriate.

In making this type of determination, IEP teams review each student's cognitive, academic, functional performance, and adaptive skills using currently available data. Once these initial/informal discussions have been held, if the IEP teams believe that an alternative assessment may be appropriate for the student, the IEP team will then complete the DLM rubric. The DLM rubric requires that teams use empirical evidence and follow data-based decision making practices.

If students are not shown to be a candidate per the DLM rubric, then they are not identified as a student who would take the alternative assessment. This proposal is then made formally to the IEP team (including the student’s legal education decision makers). Again, preset "qualification" criteria have no part in this discussion.

[X] What are the district's next steps to ensure that annually the appropriate test is administered to each student?

SKACD continues to provide ongoing training to case managers and building administrators about the importance of selecting the most appropriate state assessment. This training will continue to remind professionals about the requirement in order to ensure that the appropriate test type is administered to each student. Furthermore, training will also be provided to remind educators about the importance of providing “instructionally embedded” lessons during the course of the student’s academic year.

SKACD has also provided clearly defined expectations for teams when making these types of decisions. Directions are available to all professional employees and building administrators, conveniently located in writing in our district’s policies, procedures, and practices manual.

Our agency also adheres to principles of continuous improvement to help our agency refine our training and improve educational outcomes for students with disabilities.

Based on the data for our district, our LEA needs additional training.
