Part C is required to refer to the LEA [typically a school district]/SEA as soon as possible after eligibility is determined for any child referred to Part C between 45 and 90 days prior to the 3rd birthday.

...When a child who has been served Part C is referred to Part B, the LEA is responsible to giving the parents of the child a copy of the procedural safeguards notice [34CFR 300.504(a)(1)]. A child who is receiving services in Part C, 90 days prior to their 3rd birthday, or determined eligible 45 days prior to their 3rd birthday, is potentially eligible for Part B. Therefore, the LEA must initiate the evaluation process to determine whether the child is a child with a disability [34 CFR 300.301(b)]. Before conducting an initial evaluation under Part B, the LEA must, after providing the parents prior written notice consistent with 34 CFR 300.503, obtain informed written consent...from the parent of the child [34 CFR 300.300(a)]."

At K.A.R. 91-40-8, Kansas special education regulations require the following:

f) Unless an agency has obtained written parental consent to an extension of time and except as otherwise provided in subsection (g), the agency shall complete the following activities within 60 school days of the date the agency receives written parental consent for evaluation of a child:

(1) Conduct the evaluation of the child;

(2) conduct a meeting to determine whether the child is an exceptional child and, if so, to develop an IEP for the child. The agency shall give notice of this meeting to the child's parent or parents as required by K.A.R. 91-40-17(a); and

(3) implement the child's IEP in accordance with K.A.R. 91-40-16.

g) An agency shall not be subject to the time frame prescribed in subsection (f) if either of the following conditions is met:

(1) The parent or parents of the child who is to be evaluated repeatedly fail or refuse to produce the child for the evaluation.

(2) The child enrolls in a different school before the evaluation is completed, and the parent and new school agree to a specific date by which the evaluation will be completed.

h) In complying with subsection (f), each agency shall ensure that an IEP is developed for each exceptional child within 30 days from the date on which the child is determined to need special education and related services.

As stated under question 18 of the document entitled "Kansas Early Childhood Transition from IDEA Part C to Part B - Frequently Asked Questions" developed by the Kansas State Department of Education (see page 12), if a mutually agreed upon time for the scheduling of an IEP team meeting cannot be scheduled before a child's 3rd birthday, a district would be considered noncompliant with the State's Indicator 12. It is the responsibility of the district to proactively schedule IEP meetings at a time that allows such meetings to be rescheduled should unexpected events occur. Question 19 of that same document notes that a district cannot extend the timeline for evaluation beyond a child's third birthday unless the parents have repeatedly refused to make the child available for an evaluation.

Evaluations and IEP meetings should be scheduled with enough lead time to allow the parent viable options. The inability of a parent to present their child for evaluation on a given day should not be considered as "refusal" if other options have not been offered.

Investigative Findings

In conducting this investigation, the investigator reviewed documents related to a total of 25 students who were identified by one or more of the parties (Complainant 1, Complainant 2, and the district). Two of the students identified by complainants went through the transition from Part C to Part B outside of the 12-month window covered by these complaints; their cases were, therefore, not investigated.

The 23 remaining students represent only a tiny portion (less than 4%) of the approximately 620 referrals that have been received and processed for Part C to Part B during the period of July 23, 2023 through March 7, 2025. While both complainants allege that there have been widespread violations of the requirement to provide FAPE to students by their third birthday, no other specific students were identified.

The case of one of the identified students was addressed in a formal complaint filed in August 2024 (24FC500-009). Issue 7 of that complaint specifically targeted the question of whether the student was receiving services on his 3rd birthday. That investigator determined that a violation of special education statutes and regulations had not been substantiated. No further investigation of that issue was conducted as a part of this complaint.

One of the students identified by a complainant was referred to Part B less than 45 days before the student's third birthday.

In the course of this investigation, the investigator reviewed documents related to each student in order to determine,

- when consent was obtained from the parent(s) for evaluation to determine eligibility for special education services;
- when the evaluation was completed;
- when an evaluation meeting was held;
- when notice of meetings were provided to the parent(s);
- when IEP meetings were held;
- what services were recommended; and
- when the parent(s) provided written consent for those services to be provided.

Student 1:

A violation regarding Student 1 was established under Issue 1.

Student 2:

This student was born on August 23, 2021. An email from ITS staff dated July 30, 2024 shows that contact had been lost with the parent who had gotten a new phone number. The district had been unable to reach the parent in June to schedule an earlier evaluation. The ITS staff member reported that the parent was still interested in having the student evaluated in order to determine eligibility for special education services. Contact information for the parent was provided, and the district reached out to the parent who provided written consent for evaluation of the student on August 20, 2024. The student was evaluated on that same date. An evaluation/eligibility meeting was scheduled for August 22, 2024, but that meeting was subsequently rescheduled for August 29, 2024, 6 days after the student's third birthday. An IEP for this student was developed on August 29, 2024, 6 days after the student's third birthday.

Because of the mitigating circumstances outlined above, a violation of special education statutes and regulations is not substantiated with regard to this student.

Student 3:

This student was born on September 25, 2021. The district obtained consent for evaluation of this student on June 21, 2024. An eligibility/IEP team meeting was conducted for the student on August 27, 2024. The parent provided written consent for proposed services on September 23, 2024, and services were initiated on September 25, 2024.

This student's date of birth is November 9, 2020. The student's transition from Part C to Part B fell outside of the 12-month window covered by this complaint and therefore was not investigated further.

Student 5:

This student was born on February 5, 2022. The student's parents provided consent for his evaluation on January 6, 2025. An eligibility/IEP meeting was originally scheduled for January 30, 2025, but that meeting was delayed because the student was not evaluated until February 4, 2025. The student's IEP meeting was conducted on February 13, 2025, the same day the parents gave written consent for proposed services.

As a result of the delay, Student 5 is entitled to compensatory services of:

- 15 minutes of Occupational Therapy;
- 30 minutes of Speech/Language services;
- 795 minutes of special education services in an Early Childhood Special Education classroom setting; and
- transportation to and from these services if needed in order to access these additional services.

A violation of special education statutes and regulations is substantiated with regard to this student.

Student 6:

This student was born on March 10, 2021. The students provided consent for an evaluation on December 4, 2023. A meeting to discuss eligibility and develop an IEP was originally scheduled February 12, 2024 but was moved to February 13, 2024. The parents provided consent for the provision of special education services on the day of the IEP meeting, and services for the student were initiated on the student's third birthday.

This student was born on December 2, 2021. Consent for evaluation was sent to the parents on October 9, 2024 and an appointment for the evaluation was scheduled for November 13, 2024. The parent and student did not come at the scheduled time, and a new evaluation date was set for November 18, 2024 but the student's father cancelled that appointment because of transportation problems. A new appointment was scheduled with the district offering to provide transportation if needed. While the district had proposed that an eligibility/IEP meeting be held for the student on December 10, 2024, the student was not evaluated until January 2025. The student was determined to be eligible for services, and an IEP was developed on January 16, 2025. The parents gave written consent for the provision of those services on that same date.

While the IEP for this student was not implemented until more than 30 days beyond her 3rd birthday, the parent cancelled two evaluation appointments and did not make the student available for evaluation until more than two months after the originally scheduled evaluation date. The district worked promptly to determine the student's eligibility and develop an IEP after the evaluation was conducted.

Because of these mitigating circumstances, a violation of special education statutes and regulations *is not substantiated i*n the case of this student.

Student 8:

This student was born on January 8, 2021. The transition for this student was completed prior to the 12-month period covered by this complaint. Circumstances regarding this student were, therefore, not investigated.

Student 9:

This student was born on April 25, 2021. Consent for evaluation of the student was provided by the parents on February 5, 2024, the same date the evaluation was conducted. A meeting was held to determine the student's eligibility and to develop an IEP on April 18, 2024. The parents provided consent for services to begin on the student's birthday.

A violation of special education statutes and regulations is not substantiated in the case of this student.

This student was born on March 17, 2021. While the parent provided consent on November 17, 2023 for the student to be evaluated, the evaluation was not completed until March 1, 2024. An eligibility/IEP meeting was held on March 8, 2024 and the student began receiving services on her birthday.

Student 11:

This student was born on March 14, 2021. While consent was obtained on January 11, 2024 for the evaluation of this student, the evaluation was not completed until March 1, 2024. An Eligibility/ IEP meeting was held on March 4, 2024. While the district proposed that the IEP for the student be implemented as of her 3rd birthday, the parents did not give consent for services to be implemented until March 20, 2024.

Because the parents did not provide written consent for the implementation of the student's IEP until after her 3rd birthday, a violation of special education statutes and regulations is not substantiated in the case of this student.

Student 12:

This student was born on January 29, 2022. Consent for evaluation was provided by the parents on December 13, 2024, and the results of the initial evaluation of the student were presented to the parents on January 7, 2025. An IEP was developed for the student on February 11, 2025, 14 calendar days (7 school days) after the student's 3rd birthday. The parents provided written consent on February 11, 2025 for the services outlined in the student's IEP.

Because of the delay in provision of services, Student 12 is entitled to the following compensatory services:

- 30 minutes of Speech/Language services in a special education setting;
- 30 minutes of Speech/Language services in a Reverse Mainstream setting; and
- 140 minutes of special education services in a Reverse Mainstream ECSE setting.

Because the district failed to provide a FAPE to this student beginning on his 3rd birthday, a violation of special education statutes and regulations is substantiated.

Student 13:

This student was born on January 28, 2022. Records provided by the district show that the district first contacted the parent on January 14, 2025. Questions surfaced as to whether the student was a resident of the state since the student's siblings attended school in Missouri. Ultimately, the district determined that the student should be evaluated, and consent for evaluation of the student was provided by the parent on January 31, 2025. An eligibility meeting was scheduled for the student on February 20, 2025, but the physical therapy evaluation of the student was not conducted until February 14, 2025, and an IEP was not developed for the student until March 3, 2025, at which time services were initiated with the written consent of the parent.

As a result of the delay, the student did not receive a FAPE until more than 30 calendar days and 17 school days beyond his 3rd birthday. Therefore, Student 13 is entitled to the following compensatory services:

- 75 minutes of Occupational Therapy;
- 75 minutes of Physical Therapy;
- 150 minutes of Speech/Language Therapy;
- 600 minutes of B time; and
- transportation to receive these services if needed.

Because the district failed to provide this student with a FAPE by his 3rd birthday, a violation of special education statutes and regulations is substantiated.

Student 14:

This student was born on February 2, 2022. Consent for an initial evaluation of the student was obtained from the parents on January 14, 2025, and the results of the evaluation of the student was reported to the parents on January 30, 2025 at an eligibility meeting. An IEP was developed for the student on February 13, 2025, the same day the parents gave written consent for services to be provided - 11 calendar days and 6 school days after the student's 3rd birthday.

As a result of this delay, Student 14 is entitled to the following compensatory services:

- 30 minutes of Speech/Language Therapy in a special education setting;
- 30 minutes of Speech/Language Therapy in a Reverse Mainstream ECSE setting; 180 minutes of Special Education services in a Reverse Mainstream ECSE setting; and
- transportation to receive these services if needed.

Because the district failed to provide a FAPE to this student by his 3rd birthday, a violation of special education statutes and regulations is substantiated.

Student 15:

Because this student was referred for Part B services less than 45 days prior to her 3rd birthday, this case was not investigated further.

Student 16:

This student was the subject of a formal complaint (24FC500-009) filed against the district in April 2024. Issue 7 of that complaint addressed the allegations of the parents that the district had failed to provide services to the student by his 3rd birthday. The investigator determined that a violation of special education statutes and regulations was not substantiated. This case was not reviewed further as a part of this investigation.

Student 17:

This student was born on January 24, 2022. Consent for an initial evaluation of the student was provided by the parents on December 4, 2024. On February 14, 2025, the district conducted an eligibility/IEP meeting regarding the student, and the parents provided written consent for services proposed by the district - 21 calendar days after the student's 3rd birthday. Because students were not in school on February 14, 2025, services for the student were initiated on February 18, 2025, 13 school days after the student's birthday.

Because of the delay in the provision of FAPE to this student, Student 17 is entitled to the following compensatory services:

- 45 minutes of Occupational Therapy in a special education setting;
- 45 minutes of Speech/Language Therapy in a special education setting;
- 45 minutes of Speech/Language Therapy in a Reverse Mainstream ECSE setting; and
- 3 hours of special education services in a Reverse Mainstream ECSE setting.

Because the district failed to provide this student with a FAPE by her 3rd birthday, a violation of special education statutes and regulations is substantiated.

Student 18

This student was born on January 31, 2022. The written consent of the parents for the initial evaluation of this student was obtained on December 4, 2024. The student was evaluated in December 2024, but an eligibility meeting for the student was not held until January 31, 2025. The parents then participated in an IEP meeting for the student on February 10, 2025 and gave their written consent for the services proposed by the district.

As a result of delays, Student 18 did not receive special education services until 5 school days after his 3rd birthday and is entitled to the following compensatory services:

- 15 minutes of Speech/Language Services in a special education setting;
- 15 minutes of Speech/Language Services in a Reverse Mainstream ECSE setting;
- 150 minutes of Special Education services in a Reverse Mainstream ECSE setting; and
- transportation for these services if needed.

Student 19:

This student was born on January 6, 2022. Consent for evaluation was emailed to the parents on September 30, 2024, and attempts to schedule the initial evaluation of the student were made in October 2024. A scheduled evaluation in early December was rescheduled when the parent experienced car trouble. The parents signed a new consent for evaluation on January 28, 2025. Ultimately, the IEP meeting for this student was not held until February 25, 2025, and the parents did not provide written consent for the district to implement proposed services until March 4, 2025.

While the district's staffing problems certainly contributed to a delay of special education service implementation of more than 2 months beyond the student's 3rd birthday, the student was not made available for evaluation until nearly a month after he turned 3, and the parents took a few days to consider the district's recommendations for service before providing their written consent.

In a report provided to the investigator, the district has calculated compensatory special education services for this student covering 25 school days, which, in the opinion of the investigator more than makes up for any of the missed services that were solely the responsibility of the district. Therefore, Student 19 is entitled to the following compensatory services:

- 90 minutes (6 weeks at 15 minutes per week) of Speech/Language Services in a Reverse Mainstream ECSE setting;
- 90 minutes (6 weeks at 15 minutes per week) of Speech/Language Services in a special education setting; and

- 750 minutes of Special Education Services in a Reverse Mainstream ECSE setting.

Because the district failed to provide a FAPE to this student by his third birthday, a violation of special education statutes and regulations is substantiated.

Student 20:

This student was born on January 30, 2022. Consent for an initial evaluation of this student was obtained from the parents on December 4, 2024. The results of the evaluation were reviewed with the parents on January 30, 2025, and an IEP meeting for the student was held on February 11, 2025, the same day the parents provided written consent for the district's proposed services. This resulted in the student missing 7 school days of special education services.

Student 20 is therefore entitled to the following compensatory services:

- 30 minutes of Speech/Language Services in a special education setting;
- 30 minutes of Speech/Language Services in a Reverse Mainstream ECSE setting;
- 210 minutes of Special Education Services in a Reverse Mainstream ECSE setting; and
- transportation to receive these services if needed.

Because the district did not provide special education and related services to this student until 7 school days past her 3rd birthday, a violation of special education statutes and regulations is substantiated.

Student 21:

This student was born on February 3, 2022. The district first contacted the parent in mid-November 2024 but did not obtain parental consent for an initial evaluation until January 16, 2025. An eligibility meeting for the student was held at the end of January 2025, and an IEP team meeting was held on February 6, 2025 at which time the parent provided written consent for the delivery of special education services to the student. This delay resulted in the student missing a total of 30 minutes of special education services in an Early Childhood classroom. The student is, therefore, entitled to compensatory services for this time.

Because the district failed to provide special education services to this student by his 3rd birthday, a violation of special education statutes and regulations is substantiated.

Student 22:

This student was born on February 13, 2022. On December 13, 2024, the district obtained consent from the parents for an initial evaluation of the student. That evaluation was completed and an eligibility/IEP meeting regarding the student was held on January 28, 2025. It was determined that the student's primary delays were in the area of speech and language. The IEP team recommended that he receive 30 minutes of speech/language services per week, and the parent provided written consent for those services to begin on the student's 3rd birthday.

Student 23:

This student was born on February 5, 2022. The district obtained parental consent from the parents on December 6, 2024 to conduct an initial evaluation of the student. Inclement weather caused the district to cancel an eligibility/IEP team meeting originally scheduled for January 31, 2025. That meeting - which included representatives from outside agencies - was held on February 6, 2025 - the first school day following the student's third birthday. The parents provided written consent on February 24, 2025 for the services proposed by the district.

The district was ready, willing, and able to begin providing services to this student on the first school day following his 3rd birthday, however, they lacked the parents' consent until 18 calendar days later. Therefore, a violation of special education statutes and regulation*s is not substantiated* in the case of this student.

Student 24:

This student was born on February 17, 2021. The parents provided written consent on December 12, 2023 for the district to conduct an initial evaluation of the student. An eligibility/IEP meeting regarding the student was conducted on February 22, 2024 - 2 school days after the student's 3rd birthday. The parents provided written consent that same date for the special education services proposed by the district.

Because this student was not receiving special education services from the district as of her 3rd birthday, a violation of special education statutes and regulations is substantiated.

No evidence was presented to show that the district failed to provide the speech and language services (15 minutes a week of speech/language services in a special education setting and 15 minutes a week of speech/language services in an Early Childhood setting) called for in the student's IEP during the two days the student attended school in the week of February 19, 2024. Therefore, no compensatory services are warranted.

Student 25:

This student was born on April 3, 2021. Consent for an initial evaluation was given on February 6, 2024. An eligibility/IEP meeting regarding the student was conducted on April 1, 2024. The parents provided written consent on that same day for the implementation of the special education services specified in the student's IEP, and he was able to begin to receive those services on April 4, 2024, the first school day after his 3rd birthday. A violation of special education statutes and regulations is not substantiated in the case of this student.

Summary and Conclusions

Twenty-five (25) students were identified by the parties to this complaint for review, and as noted above the records for 23 of those students were investigated. Violations of special education statutes and regulations regarding the provision of services to those students by their 3rd birthday were substantiated for 11 of the 23 students (48%). Of those 11 students, 9 were self-identified by the district as having been negatively impacted due to the resignation of the contracted academic evaluator (special education teacher) for the Early Childhood evaluation team, far fewer than the twenty or more students that the executive director of special education had - as she told the director of ITS in an email - feared might be impacted.

The district anticipated that compensatory services could be warranted for students impacted by this situation, and compensatory services are due to 8 of these students as enumerated above.

The complainants identified 2 other students who were determined through this investigation to have not been receiving services by their 3rd birthday, but compensatory services are only warranted for 1 of those students.

While the resignation of the special education teacher did result in numerous violations of special education statutes and regulations, there is - based upon this investigation - no indication of a systemic violation outside of this situation caused by that resignation.

It is important to note, however, that while there are no indications that the district is routinely delaying services to students transitioning from Part C to Part B services beyond their 3rd birthday, this investigation did determine that there are reasons for the district to take a close look at how the transition process is being managed.

The district generally appears to be providing services to students by the deadline established by statutes and regulations - the child's 3rd birthday. However, the district's transition process has not consistently provided these children and their families with what the Assistant Director of Special Education for the Special Education and Title Services (SETS) division of the Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) describes as "a soft landing" into public school programs.

Much attention is given by KSDE to the transition process from Part C to Part B. Part C providers, in this case ITS, are directed to refer students to the district well before their 3rd birthday so that the district can obtain consent for and conduct evaluations to determine whether or not a student is eligible to receive special education services from the district under an IEP. There is an expectation that there will not be an eleventh-hour rush to complete the process so that the district can meet the letter-of-the-law deadline for the provision of services.

Rather, the intent of established policies and procedures is to ensure that - even if there are bumps in the road due to scheduling problems - families will glide into that soft landing in plenty of time for all arrangements regarding the provision of special education services to have been put in place well before their child turns 3.

District procedural guides direct staff to move promptly to complete evaluations of students once they are referred by ITS. A review of the records associated with the students identified in this complaint shows that consent for evaluations were for the most part obtained early on in the transition process. On average, the district obtained consent for evaluations 44 days ahead of students' 3rd birthdays (median of 35 days with a range of 120 days ahead to 3 days ahead).

However, the results of these evaluations were not reviewed with the parents until on average 6 days before the child's birthday (median of 4 days with a range of 50 days before to 45 days after). While this pattern may not be typical of all transitioning students, the data suggests that the evaluation team has not consistently acted timely to complete evaluations once consent had been obtained.

The district is strongly encouraged to establish and follow timelines for completing evaluations so that IEPs for students can be developed at least 2 weeks prior to a student's 3rd birthday. Doing so will allow time to set up transportation if needed and will provide some "wiggle room" in those cases where last-minute meeting changes need to be made.

Additional Issues

The investigator reviewed the IEPs and associated meeting notices of each of the 25 students identified through this investigation. In the course of those reviews, two additional issues were identified. Both of these issues appear to be systemic in nature.

Issue Five

Parents have not consistently been provided with 10-day notice of their child's IEP team meeting.

Applicable Statutes and Regulations

After an evaluation is completed and the information is compiled, the team must schedule a time to convene in order to make the determination of eligibility. Parents are to be provided an opportunity to participate in the eligibility meeting, which can be conducted at the same time as the IEP team meeting. The school must provide a notice of the meeting at least 10 calendar days prior to the meeting date that includes the requirements in K.A.R. 91-40-17(b)(1). The notice must indicate the purpose, time, and location of the meeting and who will be in attendance, and inform the parents that they may invite others who have knowledge of or special expertise about the child.

If the parents want to waive their right to 10-day notice of an IEP team meeting in order to expedite the development of their child's IEP, the district may honor their request and have the parents formally waive the required notice. It should not, however, be a common practice of a district to request that parents waive their right to 10-day notice because tight time lines make it difficult to complete a student's IEP and have him/her ready for service by the student's third birthday.

Investigative Findings and Conclusions

In 13 of the 23 (57%) cases investigated, parents were given less than a 10-day notice of eligibility and/or IEP team meetings. In some cases, parents were given less than a 10-day notice of more than one meeting. On average, this group of parents were given a 5-day notice of meetings (range of 0 to 9 days and a median of 5).

While the resignation of the special education teacher may have prompted teams to try to move quickly in scheduling meetings once staff was in place, it is noteworthy that in at least five of the cases reviewed, parents were given less than a 10-day notice and did not waive their right for that notice.

Because in multiple cases associated with this investigation parents were provided with less than a 10-day notice of meetings and did not waive their right to such notice, a violation of special education statutes and regulations has been identified.

Issue Six

A general education teacher was not consistently included as a member of the IEP team for students transitioning from Part C to Part B.

Applicable Statutes and Regulations

K.S.A. 72-3404(u)(2) requires that the IEP team include at least one regular education teacher of the child, if the child is, or may be, participating in the regular education environment.

If a school district provides "regular education" preschool services to nondisabled children, or if a preschool child with disabilities is enrolled in a preschool program for children without disabilities operated by the school district, the preschool teacher has the same requirements to attend the IEP meeting as for school age children. If the child is enrolled in a preschool program for children without disabilities that is not operated by the school district, the school is required to invite the preschool teacher, but has no authority to require the preschool teacher's attendance. If the preschool teacher of the child does not attend, the school shall designate a teacher who, under state standards, is qualified to serve children without disabilities of the same age.

For a child 3–5 years of age, the representative may be a preschool teacher (e.g., regular preschool, Title I preschool, Even Start, Head Start, Migrant, Bilingual, Early Learning Kansans, Kansas Parent Education Program, etc.). For a child 3–5 years of age that is in a setting that does not provide a preschool educational component (e.g. home setting or child care), it is considered the child does not have a regular education teacher and is not participating in a general education environment, therefore, a general education teacher is not required to be part of the IEP team. However, a parent may invite a child care provider to attend the IEP team meeting as a person with knowledge or expertise about the child.

Investigative Findings and Conclusions

In the course of reviewing student records related to these complaints, the investigator observed that a general education teacher was rarely in attendance at the IEP meetings for these students including the case of students whose IEPs reflected that they were participating in "K" setting programs. "K" programs are defined by the KSDE Data Dictionary as > "...a regular early childhood program. These qualified programs may include Head Start; community based or private preschools, group child development / childcare center, Preschool age at risk programs, district run universal preschool programs, preschool classes offered to eligible pre-KG children by the public-school system."

In total, 10 of the 23 (43%) students whose files were reviewed as a part of this investigation had IEPs that referenced participation in a K setting, but a general education teacher did not participate in the development of the IEPs of any of those students. In fact, in none of the 23 cases reviewed was a general education teacher identified as a part of the IEP team.

Because the district has on multiple occasions failed to include a general education teacher as a member of the team when developing IEPs for students who either were or might be participating in a regular education environment as defined for children ages 3 to 5 years of age, a violation of special education statutes and regulations has been identified.

Corrective Action

Information gathered in the course of this investigation has substantiated noncompliance with special education statutes and regulations on an issue presented in this complaint. Specifically, multiple violations were substantiated with regard to K.A.R. 91-40-2(b)(1) and (2) which require districts to provide FAPE (a free appropriate public education) to each child with a disability residing in its jurisdiction beginning not later than the child's third birthday and to ensure that an IEP or IFSP is in effect by the child's third birthday unless that birthday occurs during the summer when school is not in session.

Additionally, during the course of this investigation, violations were also established with regard to:

- K.A.R. 91-40-17(b)(1) which requires that parents be provided 10-day notice of an IEP team meeting for their child; and
- K.S.A. 72-3404(u)(2) which requires that a general education teacher participate as a member of an IEP team when determining services for a child who is is, or may be, participating in the regular education environment.

Therefore, USD #500 is directed to take the following actions:

1) Submit to Special Education and Title Services (SETS) by no later than April 14, 2025 a written statement of assurance stating that it will comply with

    a. K.A.R. 91-40-2(b)(1) and (2) by making a FAPE available to all applicable resident students by their 3rd birthday;

    b. K.A.R. 91-40-17(b)(1) by routinely providing 10-day notice to parents of children transitioning from Part C to Part B of eligibility/IEP team meetings; and

    c. K.S.A. 72-3404(u)(2) by including a general education teacher as a member of the IEP team for every child transitioning from Part C to Part B services who is, or may be, participating in the regular education environment.

2) By no later than April 14, 2025, USD #500 shall develop and present to the parents of each of the following students a plan for the delivery of compensatory services in the amounts outlined below. (The names of the numbered students below will be provided to the district.)

Parents shall be given the option of accepting some, all, or none of the compensatory services offered. If any of these plans require the student to come to a district location at times outside of the regular school day for the 2024-25 school year, the district shall either provide transportation for the student or shall compensate the parents at the standard district rate for transporting their child for services.

All compensatory services shall be delivered by no later than August 1, 2025.

3) By no later than August 2, 2025, USD #500 shall provide to SETS a summative document showing, for each of the 9 identified students,

   b) when any accepted compensatory services for each student were completed.

4) By no later than April 14, 2025, USD #500 shall provide to SETS a plan to train all staff involved in the Part C to Part B transition process on the requirement for providing parents with 10-day notice of eligibility and IEP team meetings. This plan should address the training of current staff and any new staff members joining the transition team at the beginning of the 2025-56 school year.

5) By no later than August 1, 2025, USD #500 shall provide to SETS a summative report documenting the delivery of 10-day notice to parents of any eligibility or IEP team meeting held with regard to Part C to Part B students during the period of April 14, 2025 through July 31, 2025. That report should include documentation as to why any parent is provided with less than 10-day notice of such a meeting. For any instance where less than 10-day notice was provided, the report should include a copy of the notice of meeting form documenting the parents' consent to waive the prior notice requirement.

6) By no later than April 14, 2025, USD #500 shall provide to SETS a plan for the training of all Part C to Part B transition staff regarding the requirement that a general education teacher be included as a member of the IEP team of any transitioning student who either is or may be participating in a regular education environment during the course of the period covered by the student's IEP. This includes any student who is being considered for services through any K setting.

   A document entitled "Regular Education Preschool Teacher at the IEP/IFSP Meeting" developed by the Kansas State Department of Education provides guidance to districts on when a preschool general education teacher must attend the IEP meeting and who meets the requirements of a general education teacher for early childhood may prove useful to the district in establishing who teams should be inviting to participate in these meetings.

7) By no later than August 1, 2025, USD #500 shall submit to SETS a summative document reflecting the presence of a general education teacher as a part of the IEP team for each student transitioning from Part C to Part B services during the period of April 14 through July 31, 2025. For any case wherein a general education teacher did not participate, the district shall provide documentation (e.g. IEP service delivery pages) to show that the student will not be participating in the regular education environment during the period covered by the student's IEP.

   Further, USD #500 shall, within 20 calendar days of the date of this report, submit to SETS one of the following:

   a) A statement verifying acceptance of the corrective action or actions specified in this report;
   b) a written request for an extension of time within which to complete one or more of the corrective actions specified in the report together with justification for the request; or
   c) a written notice of appeal. Any such appeal shall be in accordance with K.A.R. 91-40-51(f).

ON FEBRUARY 17, 2025

DATE OF REPORT: MARCH 20, 2025

This report is in response to a complaint -------- filed with our office, on behalf of their child, ---------. For the remainder of this report -------- will be referred to as "the student." -------- will be referred to as "the parent."

Investigation of Complaint

K.A.R. § 91-40-5(c)(5) requires that the complaint investigation include "[a] discussion with the complainant during which additional information may be gathered and specific allegations of noncompliance identified, verified, and recorded." Laura Jurgensen, complaint investigator, held this discussion with the parent via phone call on February 25, gathering additional information and verifying the specific allegations to be investigated. Laura Jurgensen provided a draft of the specific allegations to be investigated to the parent via email on February 24 that could then be discussed during the February 25 phone call. The parent did not dispute how the complaint investigator framed the issues to be investigated. The parent also provided documentation for the complaint investigator to consider as part of the investigation and the parent and complaint investigator exchanged multiple emails. The district provided the complaint investigator with a response to the issues the complaint investigator identified, as well as documentation and data the complaint investigator requested, and the complaint investigator exchanged multiple emails with the district superintendent and special education director. The complaint investigator and student's first grade teacher and private school principal also exchanged multiple emails.

Background Information

This complaint focuses on a student in the first grade during the 2024–25 school year. (Student's Dec. 19, 2024, IEP.) The student attends a private school located within the district boundaries and lives within the district boundaries. (Email Exchange Between Special Education Director and Private School General Education Teacher Regarding Transportation for Special Education Services, Jan. 17–21, 2025.) The student was determined eligible for special education services on December 19, 2024, and this concern focuses on the initial provision of services the IEP Team developed at the December 19, 2024, IEP Team meeting. (Student's Dec. 19, 2024, IEP.)

Issues

In the written complaint and the complaint investigator's discussion with the complainant, the parent alleges seven issues upon which this investigation will focus:

Issue One: Whether the district consulted with the parent or guardian of the student and with officials of the private, nonprofit elementary or school in determining the site for the provision of special education services for the student. K.S.A. § 72-3462.

Issue Two: Whether the district provided the special education services articulated in the December 19, 2024, individualized education program to the student? K.S.A. § 72- 3462.

Issue Three: Whether the student experienced a substantial change in placement, which would require the district to obtain parental consent before taking that action. K.A.R. § 91-40-1(sss); K.A.R. § 91-40-27(a)(3).

Issue Four: Whether the district ensured that the student's IEP included a statement of measurable annual goals, including academic and functional goals designed to meet the student's needs that result from the student's disability, to enable the student to be involved in and make progress in the general education curriculum; and meet each of the student's other educational needs that results from the student's disability. K.S.A. § 72-3429(c)(2).

Issue Five: Whether the district ensured that the student's IEP included a statement of the special education services, based on peer-reviewed research to the extent practicable, that will be provided for the student to advance appropriately toward attaining the annual goals and to be involved in and make progress in the general education curriculum in accordance with the student's present levels of academic achievement and functional performance. K.S.A. § 72-3429(c)(4).

Issue Six: Whether the district gave the parent a copy of the student's current IEP. K.A.R. § 91-40-18(d).

Issue Seven: Whether the district allowed the parent an opportunity to inspect and review all the student's education records. K.A.R. § 91-40-25(a).

Issue One

Consultation on the Site for Services

Applicable Law

Kansas statute adds to federal requirements regarding special education services for students attending a private school. In Kansas:

[e]very school district shall provide special education services for exceptional children who reside in the school district and attend a private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school, whether such school is located within or outside the school district, upon request of a parent or guardian of any such child for the provision of such services. Special education services which are provided under this section for exceptional children who attend a private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school which is located in the school district may be provided in the private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school or in the public schools of the school district. The site for the provision of special education services under this section for an exceptional child shall be determined by the school district in consultation with the parent or guardian of the child and with officials of the private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school.

K.S.A. § 72-3462. A private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school "means an organization which regularly offers education at the elementary or secondary level, which is exempt from federal income taxation under section 501 of the federal internal revenue code of 1954, as amended, which conforms to the civil rights act of 1964, and attendance at which satisfies any compulsory school attendance laws of this state." K.S.A. § 72-3461.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The student attends a private school, which meets the definition in K.S.A. § 72-3461, that is located within the district boundaries. Additionally, the student lives within the district boundaries. (Email Exchange Between Special Education Director and Private School General Education Teacher Regarding Transportation for Special Education Services, Jan. 17–21, 2025.) The district's response indicates the site for the student's special education services was not discussed at the December 19, 2024, IEP Team meeting and IEP Team meeting notes do not record a discussion of the site for services. (District's Response to the Complaint, Feb. 27, 2025; IEP Team Meeting Notes, Dec. 19, 2024.) The student's IEP indicates the "setting" for special education services will be "G – Special Ed Classroom In Regular Ed Class Building." (Student's Dec. 19, 2024, IEP.) This setting reference indicates how the district will report the setting for the student's services to KSDE. (2024-2025 School Year, KSDE Special Education Individual Student Data, Report Preparation Instructions and Data Dictionary, Guidelines for IDEA, Part B and Gifted Reporting of Special Education Data.) This data reporting to KSDE is required, but this setting is not required to be included in a student's IEP. What must be included in the student's IEP is the location of the student's special education services. K.S.A. § 72-3429(c)(7). In this student's IEP, the district appears to be using the "setting" to indicate the location of the services.

In the district's response, the district confuses the requirement in K.S.A. § 72-3462 to consult "with the parent or guardian of the child and with officials of the private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school" with the private school consultation requirement in K.A.R. § 91-40-42a to "engage in timely and meaningful consultation with representatives of private schools located in the school district and representatives of parents of children with disabilities enrolled in those private schools before making determinations regarding" the consultation process, child find, and spending the proportionate share of federal funds providing special education services to children with IEPs in private school, providing evidence that it has met both requirements. K.A.R. § 91-40-42a is a Kansas regulation implementing a federal requirement for children whose parents voluntarily enrolled in private school and is not at issue in this complaint. At issue in this complaint is whether the district consulted with the parent and official of the private school regarding the site for services for the student at the focus of this complaint, under K.S.A. § 72-3462.

The district initially provided the student's services by transporting the student from the private school to the public elementary school and providing the services in a special education classroom. (Email Exchange Between Special Education Director and Private School General Education Teacher Regarding Transportation for Special Education Services, Jan. 17–21, 2025.) The student's IEP does not include transportation. (Student's Dec. 19, 2024, IEP.) On January 24 and 25, the special education director exchanged emails with the private school principal, setting up a phone call to discuss the student's services (Email Exchange Between Special Education Director and Private School Principal Setting Up Phone Call, Jan. 24–25, 2024.) On January 28, the special education director called the private school principal and indicates the result of this call was the private school principal "agree[ing] to services being provided at St. John's Lutheran and to assign a staff member to support the student by keeping [the student] engaged, on task, and ensuring they had the appropriate materials during direct services." (District's Response to the Complaint, Feb. 27, 2025.) The private school principal characterized this phone call as a "discussion." (Email from Private School Principal to Complaint Investigator, Mar. 11, 2025.)

On January 28, the special education director called the parent to discuss the location of the student's services. (Complaint Investigator Interview with Parent, Feb. 25, 2025; Call Log with Notes from Phone Call Between Special Education Director and Parent to Discuss Location of Services, Jan. 28, 2025.) The parent perceived this phone call as "informing" him that the site for services was changing from a special education classroom in the public elementary school to the student's general education classroom via a virtual meeting with the special education teacher. (Complaint Investigator Interview with Parent, Feb. 25, 2025.) The district characterizes this call, in its call log with notes on the phone conversation, as a call "to consult" and in the district's response to this complaint as a "consultative conversation." (District's Response to the Complaint, Feb. 27, 2025; Call Log with Notes from Phone Call Between Special Education Director and Parent to Discuss Location of Services, Jan. 28, 2025.)

The requirement here is for the district to "consult" and then to "determine" the site for services. The district provided evidence that it consulted with the private school principal regarding the site for the student's services. The district's position is that it consulted with the parent regarding the site for the student's services and the parent's position is that the district informed him of the site for the student's services. When parties to a complaint disagree, the investigator must consider the evidence provided and determine whether a legal requirement has been violated. In addition to each party's position, the district provides notes from the special education director's phone call with the parent and a follow-up email from the special education director to the parent, private school principal, district superintendent, and special education teacher. (Call Log with Notes from Phone Call Between Special Education Director and Parent to Discuss Location of Services, Jan. 28, 2025; Email from Special Education Director to Parent Following Up on Phone Call to Discuss Location of Services, Jan. 28, 2025.) It would have been most helpful for the special education director's January 28 email to the parent to describe the nature of the January 28 phone call on the site for services, but the email simply indicates the director is "following up on [the] phone conversation." (Email from Special Education Director to Parent Following Up on Phone Call to Discuss Location of Services, Jan. 28, 2025.) The special education director and parent continue to exchange emails on this topic, but neither describes the nature of the January 28 phone call. (Email Exchange Between Parent and Special Education Director Regarding Location of Student's Special Education Services, Feb. 13–14, 2025.) The parent does not provide any information on the nature of the January 28 phone call outside of the complaint and the interview with the complaint investigator.

Conclusion

This complaint investigator finds the district's call log of the January 28 phone call between the special education director and parent to be credible and absent additional information, it appears that the district met its requirement to consult with the parent and private school officials regarding the site for services and then made a decision. Therefore, this investigation concludes that the district did not violate its obligation to consult with the parent of the student and with officials of the private, nonprofit elementary school before determining the site for the provision of special education services for the student under K.S.A. § 72-3462.

Issue Two

Provision of Special Education Services

Applicable Law

In Kansas, "[e]very school district shall provide special education services for exceptional children who reside in the school district and attend a private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school, whether such school is located within or outside the school district, upon request of a parent or guardian of any such child for the provision of such services." K.S.A. § 72-3462. The statement of special education services in a child's IEP must include, "the projected date for the beginning of the services … and the anticipated frequency, location, and duration of those services " K.S.A. § 72-3429(c)(7).

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The facts for Issue Two are closely intertwined with the facts from Issue One and those facts are incorporated here by reference. The parent asserts in his complaint that the district has not provided the student's special education services in accordance with the student's IEP as the student's IEP requires the special education services to be provided in a special education classroom. (Parent's Complaint, Feb. 17, 2025.) The district asserts that it has not made any changes to the provision of special education services in the student's IEP as the student continues to receive special education services outside a regular education classroom as the student is removed from the general education environment to receive special education services even though the student does not actually leave the general education classroom.

SE - Special Education Services	G – Special Ed Classroom in Regular Ed Class Building	20	4	Every week	12/19/2024	12/18/2025

(Student's Dec. 19, 2024, IEP.) The student's IEP indicates that the "setting" of the special education services is "Special Ed Classroom In Regular Ed Class Building." (Student's Dec. 19, 2024, IEP.) Again, what must be included in the student's IEP is the location of the student's special education services and in this student's IEP, the district appears to be using the "setting" to indicate the location of the services. (K.S.A. § 72- 3429(c)(7).)

The parent asserts that the parent did not know that the district interpreted "Special Ed Classroom" to mean both the special education classroom at the public elementary school where the district initially provided the student with services and the student's regular first grade classroom at the private school. (Complaint Investigator Interview with Parent, Feb. 25, 2025.) The district argues in its response that a "special education classroom can include a designated area within the general education classroom where a licensed special education teacher delivers individualized or small group instruction either in person or virtually." (District's Response to the Complaint, Feb. 27, 2025.) The problem with how the district's response interprets the location of the student's special education services on the student's IEP is that the district confuses the concept of placement with the concept of location. The United States Department of Education's Office of Special Education Programs (OSEP) refers to " 'location' as the physical surrounding, such as the classroom, in which a child with a disability receives special education and related services" and " 'placement' as points along the continuum of placement options available for a child with a disability." (Letter to Trigg, U.S. Dep't of Educ. Office of Special Educ. Programs (Nov. 30, 2007), available at https://sites.ed.gov/idea/files/idea/policy/speced/guid/idea/letters/2007-4/trigg113007lre4q2007.pdf.)

The district's response that a special education classroom can be a designated area within the general education classroom is a placement concept, as the district describes how the student's removal from general education peers during the student's special education services moves the student along the continuum of placement options, transforming the part of the student's first grade classroom where they are receiving special education services into a special education classroom. The requirement to include within each IEP the location of special education services is instead focused on the location of the student's services or "the physical surrounding" where the student receives special education services. For this student, the district initially provided special education services in "the physical surrounding" of a special education classroom at the public elementary school. The district then changed the location, or "the physical surrounding" where the student received special education services, to the student's regular first grade classroom in the private school. Because the two locations (physical surroundings) where the district provided special education services were not the same, the district was required to amend the student's IEP to change the location of the student's special education services either through an IEP Team meeting or by asking the parent if they would agree to amend the IEP outside of an IEP Team meeting and following relevant requirements to amend.

Regarding the provision of services, the district's response includes information on whether the district has provided special education services from the start date of services indicated in the student's IEP (12/19/2024) through February 21, 2025. The student's IEP indicates that he would receive special education services four days per week. (Student's Dec. 19, 2024, IEP.) The December 19, 2024, IEP Team meeting notes do not provide information on the days of the week that services would occur. (IEP Team Meeting Notes, Dec. 19, 2024.) The district's response indicates that the private school principal requested services occur Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday. (District's Response to the Complaint, Feb. 27, 2025.) Despite the IEP Team listing a service start date of December 19, the district did not provide services that day or on December 20 as the St. John's Lutheran principal indicated the student was unavailable due to Christmas celebrations. (Email from St. John's Lutheran Principal to Complaint Investigator, Mar. 11, 2025.) From December 23 through January 8 the district had winter break and inclement weather. (District's Response to the Complaint, Feb. 27, 2025.) The first email the district provided that shows an attempt to schedule services is from January 9 and the student's first grade teacher indicates this is the first time the district contacted her to arrange services. (Email from Student's First Grade Teacher to Complaint Investigator, Mar. 11, 2025; Email from Special Education Teacher to St. John Lutheran's Staff, Jan. 9, 2025.) The district did not provide services on January 10 due to inclement weather and January 17 and 20 as the district did not have school). (District's Response to the Complaint, Feb. 27, 2025.) From January 22 through February 21, 2025, the district's information indicates services were provided. (District's Response to the Complaint, Feb. 27, 2025.) The district does not provide information that it provided special education services to the student on three school days the student appears to have been available: December 19 and January 13 and 14.

It is important to note that this issue arose because the district's IEP web-based tool placed a chart used for data reporting to KSDE within the student's IEP. Data reporting to KSDE is not intended to be included within student IEPs. Data reporting to KSDE is not intended to and does not meet the district's obligation to ensure each student's IEP includes the projected date for the beginning of special education services, and the anticipated frequency, location, and duration for special education services. As illustrated here, the data reporting to KSDE that the district included in the student's IEP provides the "setting" and not location, as IEPs require. KSDE uses setting codes to report data to the United States Department of Education about the placement (points along the continuum of placement options available for a child with a disability) where a student receives special education services. The district's location change of the student's special education services would not change the setting code the district used to report the student's services to KSDE as setting codes report placement information, not location information. Additionally, the "Start Date" of special education services included within the table used for KSDE reporting is used to represent the start date of that particular IEP going into effect, which could be a different date than the IEP Team intended to begin certain special education services, related services, accommodations, modifications, and supports for school personnel. This further illustrates why data reporting information does not belong in student IEPs.

Conclusion

The student's IEP states the "setting" of the student's services is "Special Ed Classroom" and does not provide a "location" for the student's services, in violation of K.S.A. § 72- 3429(c)(7). Despite the student's IEP not providing a location for special education services, the district was able to show it provided most days of special education services to this student with three days unaccounted for in the evidence the district submitted. Based on a lack of evidence that it provided services to the student on December 19 and January 13 and 14 the district is in violation of K.S.A. § 72-3462.

Issue Three

Substantial Change in Placement

Applicable Law

K.A.R. § 91-40-1(sss) indicates that a substantial change in placement "means the movement of an exceptional child, for more than 25 percent of the child's school day, from a less restrictive environment to a more restrictive environment or from a more restrictive environment to a less restrictive environment." K.A.R. § 91-40-27(a)(3) requires that "each agency shall obtain parental consent before . . . making a substantial change in the placement of, an exceptional child"

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The parent asserts in the complaint that the district was required to obtain his consent before changing the location of the student's services. (Parent's Complaint, Feb. 17, 2025.) The district responds that the student's placement did not change at all and, therefore, the district was not required to obtain the parent's consent as a substantial change in placement did not occur. (District's Response to the Complaint, Feb. 27, 2025.) As established in Issue Two, a change of placement did not occur with this student, including a substantial change of placement.

Although parent consent was not required, this investigation must also consider whether written prior notice was required under K.S.A. § 72-3430(b)(2). This statute requires "written prior notice in accordance with K.S.A. 72-3432, and amendments thereto, whenever an agency: (A) Proposes to initiate or change; or (B) refuses to initiate or change, the identification, evaluation, or educational placement of the child or the provision of a free appropriate public education to the child." This change did not concern identification or evaluation and, as established in Issue Two and in the previous paragraph, this change did not constitute a change in the educational placement of the student. The question is whether this change involved the provision of a free appropriate public education to the student. KSDE's guidance on prior written notice indicates that the provision of a free appropriate public education, within the context of this statute, means the same thing as the "provision of special education and related services." (Kan. State Dep't of Educ., Kansas Special Education Process Handbook 6 (2025).) The change with this student involved the location of the provision of special education services. As indicated in Issue Two, the district's response provides that its position is that when the provision of the student's special education services moved from a special education classroom at the public elementary school to the student's first grade classroom at the private school, the "setting" stated in the student's IEP did not change. (District's Response to the Complaint, Feb. 27, 2025.) As the district did not believe any change had occurred, the district did not provide the parent with a Prior Written Notice.

Conclusion

Because a substantial change of placement did not occur with this student, the district did not violate K.A.R. § 91-40-27(a)(3). However, as established in Issue Two, because the two locations where the district provided special education services were not the same, the district was required to amend the student's IEP to change the location of the student's special education services. This change impacted the provision of special education services (free appropriate public education) to the student and required the district to provide the parent with a Prior Written Notice. As the district did not do this, it is in violation of K.S.A. § 72-3430(b)(2).

Issue Four

Measurable Annual Goals

Applicable Law

K.S.A. § 72-3429(c)(2) require that the "IEP for each exceptional child shall include . . . a statement of measurable annual goals, including academic and functional goals designed to . . . [m]eet the child's needs that result from the child's disability . . ., to enable the child to be involved in and make progress in the general education . . . curriculum; and meet each of the child's other educational needs that result from the child's disability"

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The parent asserts in the complaint that the district has not designed appropriate goals to meet all the student's needs that result from the student's disability. (Parent's Complaint, Feb. 17, 2025.) Specifically, the parent indicates that the student's goal is "hard to understand" and the student's evaluation results merit goals in "several areas .. . including writing." (Parent's Complaint, Feb. 17, 2025.) The district's response indicates that the student's evaluation indicated the student's needs are related to reading, which led to the team designing a goal to build the student's reading skills. (District's Response to the Complaint, Feb. 27, 2025.)

The student's IEP includes one goal, in the area of reading, that states "By the end of this IEP in December 2025, when shown a list of 20 blend-vowel, digraph-vowel, vowel- blend, and vowel-digraph combinations, [the student] will give the correct sound of the blend/digraph and vowel with 70% accuracy (14 of 20 correct) when given over 4 consecutive weeks." (Student's Dec. 19, 2024, IEP.) To meet the requirements of the statute, the goal must be measurable, academic or functional, meet the need's resulting from the student's disability, and enable the student to be involved in and make progress in the general education curriculum. (K.S.A. § 72-3429(c)(2).) To be measurable, the goal must indicate how the IEP Team will know if the student has accomplished the goal, which is indicated by "with 70% accuracy (14 of 20 correct) when given over 4 consecutive weeks" and aligns with the data provided as the student's baseline "[the student] gave the correct sound of the blend/digraph and vowel with 40% accuracy." (Student's Dec. 19, 2024, IEP.) This goal is a reading goal, which is academic. (Student's Dec. 19, 2024, IEP.) The student's evaluation and IEP provides assessment results and staff information that indicate the student needs assistance with correctly identifying letter sounds. (Student's Dec. 19, 2024, IEP; Student's Dec. 19, 2024, Evaluation.) The student's IEP provides the first grade reading standards with which the student's goal is aligned, showing the IEP Team's intent to enable the student to be involved in and make progress in the general education curriculum. (Student's Dec. 19, 2024, IEP.)

KSDE guidance provides:

> '[f]our critical components of a well-written goal' as (1) 'timeframe . . . usually specified in the number of weeks or a certain date for completion;'
> (2) 'conditions [that] specify the manner in which progress toward the goal is measured;' (3) "behavior [that] clearly identifies the performance . . . being monitored;' and (4) 'criterion [that] identifies how much, how often, or to what standards the behavior must occur . . . to demonstrate that the goal has been reached.'

(Kan. State Dep't of Educ., Kansas Special Education Process Handbook 77 (2025).) Applying these components to the student's goal, the timeframe is indicated through "by the end of this IEP in December 2025," the conditions are "when shown a list of 20 blend-vowel, digraph-vowel, vowel-blend, and vowel-digraph combinations," the behavior is "give the correct sound of the blend/digraph and vowel," and the criterion are "70% accuracy (14 of 20 correct)." (Student's Dec. 19, 2024, IEP.)

In reviewing the student's evaluation, the student participated in FastBridge testing and scored in the 16th percentile in reading, 5th percentile in English, and 42nd percentile in Math. (Student's Dec. 19, 2024, Evaluation.) The student also participated in the Woodcock-Johnson IV Tests of Cognitive Abilities and scored below average in comprehension-knowledge, fluid reasoning, oral vocabulary, numbers reversed, letter- pattern matching, long-term retrieval, and visual-auditory learning. (Student's Dec. 19, 2024, Evaluation.) The student scored significantly below average in cognitive processing speed and pair cancellation. (Student's Dec. 19, 2024, Evaluation.) The student also participated in the Woodcock-Johnson IV Tests of Achievement and scored below average in word attack and significantly below average in reading, letter- word identification, passage comprehension, and basic reading skills. (Student's Dec. 19, 2024, Evaluation.) The student's IEP includes that the student participated in the Phonological Awareness Screening Test and scored between 0 and 50% on Syllable Levels and Phoneme Levels. (Student's Dec. 19, 2024, IEP.) The student's IEP additionally indicates that the student participated in the Quick Phonics Screener and scored 50% or less on vowel consonant and consonant vowel consonant nonsense words and common beginning- and ending-consonant digraphs nonsense words. (Student's Dec. 19, 2024, IEP.)

The district's response indicates that the student's goal "is specific to building reading skills as per [the student's] performance on the Quick Phonics Screener." (District's Response to the Complaint, Feb. 27, 2025.) There is no information within the student's evaluation, IEP, IEP Team meeting notes, or district response about why the student's IEP Team determined that out of all the student's evaluation data, the student only needed one goal based on the student's "performance on the Quick Phonics Screener." The student's evaluation indicates the student is not achieving adequately for their age to meet state-approved, grade-level standards when provided with appropriate instruction and learning experiences for the student's age and grade level in basic reading skills, reading fluency skills, and reading comprehension. (Student's Dec. 19, 2024, Evaluation.) The student's evaluation indicates the student is achieving adequately for their age to meet state-approved, grade-level standards when provided with appropriate instruction and learning experiences for the student's age and grade level in written expression and the student's IEP indicates that the student does not have needs in writing that require special education or related services. (Student's Dec. 19, 2024, IEP; Student's Dec. 19, 2024, Evaluation.)

Conclusion

The student's current reading goal meets legal requirements and KSDE guidance for measurable annual goals. However, the district has not ensured the student's IEP includes measurable annual goals designed to meet the student's needs that result from the student's disability and to enable the student to be involved in and make progress in the general education curriculum in the areas of reading fluency skills and reading comprehension in violation of K.S.A. § 72-3429(c)(2).

Issue Five

Statement of Special Education Services

Applicable Law

K.S.A. § 72-3429(c)(4) requires "[t]he IEP for each exceptional child shall include . . . a statement of the special education . . . services . . ., based on peer-reviewed research to the extent practicable, and services to be provided to the child, . . . [t]o advance appropriately toward attaining the annual goals [and] to be involved in and make progress in the general education curriculum in accordance with" the student's present levels of academic achievement and functional performance." Kansas special education regulations go on to further define special education as:

> specially designed instruction . . . to meet the unique needs of a child with a disability . . . adapting, as appropriate to the needs of [the] child . . . , the content, methodology, or delivery of instruction [t]o address the unique needs of the child that result from the child's disability and to ensure access of the child to the general curriculum, so that the child can meet the educational standards within the [district].

(K.A.R. § 91-40-1(lll).)

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The parent's complaint indicates that the student's goal is of an "insufficient" frequency and duration to meet the needs resulting from the student's disability. (Parent's Complaint, Feb. 17, 2025.) The district's response maintains that the student's special education services "are providing the student with FAPE [free appropriate public education] and the student is making progress in the curriculum." (District's Response to the Complaint, Feb. 27, 2025.)

The district's response indicates the "statement of special education services is in the service line within the IEP." (District's Response to the Complaint, Feb. 27, 2025.) This table duplicates the header row of this chart and the row of this chart at issue in this complaint investigation:

(Student's Dec. 19, 2024, IEP.)

The student's IEP only references the special education services the student will receive in the chart reproduced above. There is no other statement that describes these special education services. The district uses the web-based tool WebKIDSS to create student's IEPs. (Email from Special Education Director to Complaint Investigator, Mar. 18, 2025.) The district's response indicates that how these services were determined was to consider the student's "PLAAFPs for reading and the cognitive/intelligence, and Impact of Exceptionality statements." (District's Response to the Complaint, Feb. 27, 2025.) The IEP Team meeting notes indicate that the district proposed the number of days per week "due to many weeks throughout the year being only four days long" allowing for "flexibility and less missed opportunities." (IEP Team Meeting Notes, Dec. 19, 2024.) The district's response indicates that the "school, district, and cooperative make the determination of how services are provided[, t]he licensed special education provider has the authority and autonomy to make these decisions[, and t]he fully licensed special education teacher is using a research, evidence-based intervention curriculum to provide services specific to the student's skill deficits." (District's Response to the Complaint, Feb. 27, 2025.)

The chart in the student's IEP does not contain the results of the IEP Team's discussion and decision and simply states "Special Education Services." The district's response provides information to show alignment between the special education services provided and the statute, but the statute requires this information to be in the IEP, within the statement that explains the services that will be provided to enable the student to advance appropriately toward attaining the student's annual goals, to be involved in and make progress in the general education curriculum, to participate in extracurricular and other nonacademic activities, and to be educated and participate with other children with disabilities. From the term "Special Education Services" it is not possible to determine whether these services are based on peer-reviewed research, to the extent practicable, or the Kansas regulatory definition of specially designed instruction. A previous KSDE state complaint decision included language from a Colorado Department of Education state complaint decision that explains that the statement of special education services translates into practice as a "service delivery statement" and that it must be "must be sufficiently detailed for parents to understand what specific services and supports the school district is offering to provide." (Report of Complaint Filed Against Unified Sch. Dist. #458 (SEA KS 2024), https://www.ksde.gov/Portals/0/SES/legal/decisions/24FC.pdf #page=649, Adams 12 Five Star Schs., 75 IDELR 86 (SEA CO 2019)). In the comments to the regulations implementing IDEA, OSEP provides guidance on the requirements applicable to the statement of special education services in a child's IEP that is applicable to the vagueness we see in the location of this student's statement of special education services. (Assistance to States for the Education of Children With Disabilities and Preschool Grants for Children With Disabilities, 71 Fed. Reg., 46,540, 46,667 (Aug. 14, 2006).) In responding to a recommendation about the term "duration" OSEP commented:

> What is required is that the IEP include information about the amount of services that will be provided to the child, so that the level of the agency's commitment of resources will be clear to parents and other IEP Team members. The amount of time to be committed to each of the various services to be provided must be appropriate to the specific service, and clearly stated in the IEP in a manner that can be understood by all involved in the development and implementation of the IEP.

(Assistance to States for the Education of Children With Disabilities and Preschool Grants for Children With Disabilities, 71 Fed. Reg., 46,540, 46,667 (Aug. 14, 2006).) Despite OSEP responding to a recommendation about duration of a service, the regulation cited is clearly focused on clarity for all involved with the child and should be applied when drafting a statement of special education services.

The district's response indicates the duration and frequency of the student's special education services is appropriate as "the student is making progress in the curriculum." (District's Response to the Complaint, Feb. 27, 2025.) Because the student just began special education services in January, there is insufficient information to show whether the current frequency and duration of the services is appropriate. The special education director indicated in an email to the complaint investigator that the first progress report since the student began services will be available soon. (Email from Special Education Director to Complaint Investigator, Mar. 10, 2025.) As soon as the district has information on the student's progress, the district would then have an obligation to act should the student not be making appropriate progress toward meeting the student's goal.

Conclusion

The chart to indicate the special education services the student is to receive does not meet the special education legal requirement for the IEP to include a statement of special education services, based on peer-reviewed research to the extent practicable, that will be provided to enable the student to advance appropriately toward attaining the student's annual goals, to be involved in and make progress in the general education curriculum, to participate in extracurricular and other nonacademic activities, and to be educated and participate with other children with disabilities and nondisabled children. As indicated in previous issues, this chart is likely appropriate to report special education data to KSDE, but does not include the clarity required for the team supporting the student, including the parents, to understand the special education services that the district will provide to enable the student to advance appropriately toward attaining the student's annual goals, to be involved in and make progress in the general education curriculum, to participate in extracurricular and other nonacademic activities, and to be educated and participate with other children with disabilities and nondisabled children. Districts must meet KSDE's data reporting requirements but that does not require including this chart within a student's IEP. Based on the foregoing, this investigation concludes that the district violated its obligation to ensure that the student's IEP include a statement of special education services as K.S.A. § 72-3429(c)(4) requires.

Issue Six

Copy of IEP

Applicable Law

K.A.R. § 91-40-18(d) requires that [e]ach agency shall give the parent a copy of the child's IEP at no cost to the parent."

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The parent's complaint indicates the district never provided him with a copy of the student's IEP. (Parent's Complaint, Feb. 17, 2025.) In the complaint investigator's interview with the parent, the parent stated that the district brought a draft IEP to the student's December IEP Team meeting and that he was provided a copy of the draft. (Complaint Investigator Interview with Parent, Feb. 25, 2025.) The parent also stated that the special education teacher took notes on the draft IEP at the meeting and that the special education teacher indicated she would incorporate the notes into the IEP, creating a final version, and provide it to the parent, which the parent maintains he has never received. (Complaint Investigator Interview with Parent, Feb. 25, 2025.)

The district's response also indicates that it provided the parent with a copy of the draft IEP at the December IEP Team meeting and the parent signed a document indicating he had received a copy of the IEP. (District's Response to the Complaint, Feb. 27, 2025; Student's Dec. 19, 2024, IEP.) The district also provided an email request from the parent to the special education teacher requesting a copy of the IEP and the special education teacher's response, providing a copy of the IEP. (Email Exchange Between Special Education Teacher and Parent Regarding Parent Request for Dec. 19, 2024, IEP, Jan. 29–30, 2025.) When the complaint investigator requested that the parent provide the draft copy of the IEP he received at the December IEP Team meeting, the parent provided the investigator with the copy the special education teacher sent on January 30. (Email from Parent to Complaint Investigator, Feb. 25, 2025.)

Conclusion

The parent indicated that the district never provided him with a final copy of the IEP, but when the complaint investigator requested that the parent provide the draft copy of the IEP, the parent provided the investigator with an IEP with a print date of January 30, 2025, the date the special education teacher sent the IEP to the parent. (Student's Dec. 19, 2024, IEP with a Jan. 30, 2025, Printed Date.) This, along with the evidence the district provided, shows that the district met its obligation to provide the parent with a copy of the IEP and did not violate K.A.R. § 91-40-18(d).

The district should be cautious about its practice of documenting that it met this obligation by providing a parent with a draft copy of the IEP, which it did at the December IEP Team meeting by having the parent sign that he received a copy of the IEP, but the district, at that point, had only provided a draft copy of the IEP. The district should establish and follow a procedure to document only when a parent is provided a final copy of an IEP, not a draft copy of the IEP. In this situation, the district is found not to violate the relevant Kansas regulation because it had evidence it provided a final copy of the IEP to the parent in January, when the parent requested it. If the parent had not made this request, the district would not have been able to show it met this requirement based on providing the parent with a draft copy of the IEP at the December IEP Team meeting.

Issue Seven

Inspect and Review Education Records

Applicable Law

K.A.R. § 91-40-25(a) requires "[e]ach agency shall allow the parents of an exceptional child an opportunity to inspect and review all education records . . . concerning their child with respect to the following: The identification, evaluation, or education placement of the child; and the provision of FAPE to the child."

Analysis: Findings of Fact

In the complaint the parent indicates that he "went to the . . . District Office on 2/14/2025" to "view everything in my child's file" and was told the district "did not have a copy of the [student's] file." (Parent's Complaint, Feb. 17, 2025.) The district's response indicates that the February 14, 2025, visit from the parent did not include a request to inspect and review the student's education records, but was a request for a copy of the student's IEP. (District's Response to the Complaint, Feb. 27, 2025.) The district provided a statement from the board clerk that interacted with the parent on February 14, 2025, and she indicated that the parent "visited the district office . . . requesting a hard copy of [the student's] IEP." (Statement from USD 329 Board Clerk Regarding Parent's Feb. 14, 2025, Request, Feb. 27, 2025.) The district maintains it has not received a request from the parent to inspect and review the student's education records. (District's Response to the Complaint, Feb. 27, 2025.) When asked, the parent was unable to provide the complaint investigator with any documentation of his request to inspect and review the student's education record, outside of the statements within the complaint. (Email Exchange Between Complaint Investigator and Parent, Mar. 10, 14, and 17, 2025.)

Conclusion

There is not sufficient evidence to show that the parent made a request to inspect and review the student's education record, therefore the district did not violate K.A.R. § 91- 40-25(a).

Summary of Conclusions and Corrective Action

Issue One

This investigation found no violations and there is no corrective action.

The district violated K.S.A. § 72-3429(c)(7) and K.S.A. § 72-3462, based on the findings of fact listed above. Corrective action is required, as follows:

1. Within 10 calendar days of the date of this report, the district must submit a written statement to KSDE Special Education and Title Services (SETS) that it will comply with:
    a. State legal requirements at K.S.A. § 72-3429(c)(7) which requires the IEP for each exceptional child to include the anticipated location of special education services; and
    b. State legal requirements at K.S.A. § 72-3462 which requires the district to provide special education services for exceptional children who reside in the school district and attend a private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school, whether such school is located within or outside the school district, upon the request of a parent or guardian of any such child for the provision of such services.

a. Within ten calendar days of the date of this report, the district must contact its WebKIDSS representative and inform them that the district's web-based IEP tool must include a prompt to require IEP Teams to provide a location of special education services. The district may provide a redacted version of this report to WebKIDSS as part of its request to add this prompt. The district should also consider removing the table used for KSDE data reporting from student IEPs.

b. Within one school day of completing this portion of the corrective action, the district must confirm to SETS that it completed this portion of the corrective action.

c. The district must obtain a date from its WebKIDSS representative in writing as to when this prompt will be added to the district's web-based IEP tool and the district must provide this information to SETS within one business day of receiving it.

d. Once WebKIDSS adds the prompt to the district's web-based IEP tool, SETS must submit this IEP page to SETS within one business day for its review and approval.

e. Within two calendar weeks of the date of this report, provide SETS with a progress report on the student's goal since beginning special education services and the student's general progress report for the second and third quarters of the 2024–25 school year.

f. SETS will then review and determine whether compensatory services are required and, if so, the amount of compensatory services required. If SETS requires compensatory services, within two calendar weeks of receiving notice from SETS of the amount of compensatory services required, the district must submit to SETS a proposed plan for compensatory services that includes any compensatory services required due to Issue Four, 3. Corrective Action that the district presented to the parent and evidence of whether the parent accepted all, some, or none of the proposed compensatory services.

g. If SETS requires compensatory services and the parent accepts all or some of the proposed compensatory services, SETS will establish a due date based on the plan by which the district must submit a log of the services provided and documentation explaining any services not provided.

2. Within two calendar weeks of this report the student's IEP Team must add a location of special education services to the student's IEP that meets special education legal requirements either using the IEP amendment process described in K.S.A. 72-3429(b)(4) or in an IEP Team meeting.

3. Due Dates:

   h. March 31, 2025: 1. and 2.a.;

   i. April 2, 2025: 3.a. and 4.;

   j. Within one school day of contacting its WebKIDSS representative: 2.b.;

   k. Within one business day of receiving the date of when the prompt will be added: 2.c.;

   l. Within one business day of receiving the prompt: 2.d.;

   m. Within two calendar weeks of receiving notice from SETS of the amount of compensatory services required: 3.b.; and

   n. If SETS requires compensatory services and the parent accepts all or some of the proposed compensatory services, SETS will establish a due date: 3.c.

Issue Three

The district violated K.S.A. § 72-3430(b)(2), based on the findings of fact listed above. Corrective action is required, as follows:

1. Within 10 calendar days of the date of this report, the district must submit a written statement to SETS that it will comply with:

   a. State legal requirements at K.S.A. § 72-3430(b)(2) which requires prior written notice in accordance with K.S.A. § 72-3432 whenever a district proposes to initiate or change or refuses to initiate or change, the identification, evaluation, or educational placement of the child or the provision of a free appropriate public education (special education and related services) to the child

   a. Background Information

This investigation involved a second-grade student enrolled at an elementary school in the District. The Student is eligible for special education services with a disability of Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD), per the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA).

Findings of the Investigation

The following findings are based on a review of documentation and interviews with the Parent and staff in the District.

Bus Arriving Late

1. According to the District Response, the Student's IEP indicated Transportation service was to be provided for 30 minutes a day, 5 days a week, to and from the School. The Parent had not sent the Student on the bus since December 23, 2024, at the Parent's request.

   Per the Transportation Director of the District, when the Student utilized the school bus, they were picked up at home between 11:50-11:55 a.m. and dropped off at the School at 12:00 p.m. The Student was picked up from the school at 2:00 p.m. and returned home at 2:10 p.m. The District stated special transportation was still available to the Student and wrote that there was, "… no documentation to show that the bus picked [the Student] up late or brought [them] back late."

2. The Student was assigned to bus #11, which picked up students at their residences. The driver of bus #11, who the Parent had an issue with, was no longer the bus driver. Additionally, all the information shared with the Parent about transportation was provided by a district-provided interpreter.

3. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Parent explained the Student stopped taking the bus around February 2025. The Parent stated this was their decision. The Parent shared that when the bus was late, it would arrive at the house at the time the Student was supposed to be at school. They said they observed the bus be up to 15 minutes late during the 2023-24 school year. The Parent believed this impacted the Student's education because they were spending less time in school. The Parent said there was no reason given for why the bus was late.

4. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Special Education Teacher explained the Student arrived on time when taking the bus and when the Parent dropped them off. They stated that neither the bus nor the Parent was late in picking the Student up from school.

5. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Assistant Principal stated that during the 2023-24 school year there were issues where the bus went to the Student's house and nobody came out, and then the bus had to be called back to the house.) The Assistant Principal recalled it happened more than once, but stated it was not a consistent, pervasive issue. They did not recall any issues with the bus in the 2024-25 school year after a new bus director was hired.

Translation Services

6. According to the District Response, most meetings with the Parent had an interpreter present, and if an interpreter was not available through the District, the District had a contract with a translating service. The District stated they had not utilized that service yet because translators were available.
7. The Parent explained that at the beginning of the 2023-24 school year, they had a relative come and translate for them two or three times. They did not recall specific dates. The Parent recalled having an interpreter at meetings where the Student's IEP was discussed. The Parent stated that documents were not consistently provided to them in Spanish. The Parent explained they only started receiving documents in Spanish at a meeting in 2025.
8. The District Response indicated that the Parent received a NOM through text and hand delivery on January 31, 2025. Parent Rights were provided in English and Spanish on February 6, 2025, and a PWN was given to the Parent in English and Spanish the following day. The District indicated a translator attended the meeting on February 6, 2025.
9. The District Response indicated that for the IEP meeting on April 23, 2024, the Parent was provided a Notice of Meeting (NOM), IEP, and PWN in English and Spanish. The Parent also initialed that Parental Rights were provided to them in their native language. The Spanish IEP was signed by the Parent. The District indicated there was no documentation to show there was a translator present at the IEP meeting on April 23, 2024.
10. The Special Education Director did not recall if a translator was present at the meeting on April 23, 2024, but stated that translators did attend most of the IEP meetings. They explained that if a translator attended a meeting, they would sign the signature page. The Assistant Principal did not recall if a translator was present at the meeting, but did not recall attending a meeting without a translator.

FAPE & Least Restrictive Environment

11. The Parent stated in their interview that the Student attending school less than full-time impacted their emotional and psychological development, and that the Student had regressed.
12. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the School Psychologist explained the Student was on a shortened day because the Student required significant adult intervention. They said the Student had a limited tolerance for this type of interaction, and when that limit was reached, the Student exhibited aggressive behaviors. The Assistant Principal stated their understanding of why a shortened day was the least restrictive environment was because the Student was an "eloper" and "aggressive".

13. The Special Education Teacher stated the Student did not go to the general education classroom, had lunch in the classroom, and attended recess. The Assistant Principal stated the Student participated in lunch and recess as a group with the special education class, which sometimes coincided with the general education students.
14. According to the District Response, the Student had started their elementary school career on a shortened school day of 60 minutes/day.
15. A NOM dated April 19, 2024 proposed a meeting for April 23, 2024 to conduct an annual review of the Student's IEP. It was signed by the Parent on April 22, 2024, and provided in English and Spanish.
16. The Student's IEP, dated April 23, 2024, and provided in English and Spanish, indicated:
    a. The Student demonstrated motor skills at a lower level than same-aged peers. The IEP Team had concerns about the Student in the area of "Motor" that impacted the ability to learn or access the general curriculum.
    b. The IEP Team had concerns about the Student in the area of "Communication" that impacted the[ir] ability to learn or access the general curriculum.
        i. The Student had been receiving speech therapy services to increase communication skills; and
        ii. A Speech-Language goal was created to address a language delay.
        iii. "[The Student's] participation and behavior is not consistent. There are sessions that have been productive; however, there are also sessions [the Student] runs, hits, and spits."
    c. The Student's social/emotional skills were delayed when compared to same-aged peers. The IEP Team believed the delay would negatively impact the Student's ability to interact with peers in the general education classroom.
        i. "[The Student] needs constant staff supervision to ensure [their] safety in the classroom."
    d. The IEP Team had concerns about the Student in the area of "General Intelligence" that impacted their ability to learn or access the general curriculum.
        i. The IEP indicated the Student was diagnosed with Autism Spectrum Disorder, Level Three, and struggled with "…expressive communication, social skills, and engage[d] in repetitive/stereotyped behaviors."
    e. The IEP Team had concerns about the Student in the area of "Academic/Functional Performance" that impacted their ability to learn or access the general curriculum.
    f. The Student required Assistive Technology aids/services in order to be educated in a less restrictive environment.

i. The Student had been introduced to the LAMP program on the iPad for communication, and had been working on using voice buttons to communicate.

g. The IEP determined that for the Student to have opportunities to participate with non-disabled peers in extracurricular and nonacademic activities, regularly scheduled special education and related services would not occur when it would prevent the Student from participating in field trips, assemblies, and special events for the general education classroom.

h. In response to the question "Do the positive effects of the placement outweigh the potential harmful effects?", the IEP team wrote, "… the positives outweigh the harmful effects because [the Student] shows a need for individualized instruction in special education and it is the least restrictive placement that is appropriate for [them] at this time."

i. When discussing the least restrictive environment for the Student's services to take place, the IEP team considered the Student's current skill level, the quality of services that could be provided in which environments, and the potential harmful effects of each option. After considering those factors, it was determined the Student's needs would best be met in the special education setting. The IEP team reviewed the educational placement and/or services and considered it reasonably designed to deliver a FAPE in the Student's least restrictive environment.

j. Services included:

ii. "Special Ed Direct Service Outside Regular Ed classroom for academics, life skills, and social[-]emotional, for 120 minutes two days per week";

iii. "Special Ed Direct Service Outside Regular Ed classroom for academics, life skills, and social[-]emotional, for 105 minutes three days per week"; and

iv. "Special Ed Direct Service Outside Regular Ed classroom for speech and language, for 15 minutes per three days per week."

17. A PWN dated April 23, 2024, written in English and Spanish, indicated:

a. The IEP Team met to discuss special education and related services the Student needed, and the appropriate educational placement for the Student.

b. The IEP team determined to continue a schedule of 120 minutes/day until the end of the 2023-24 school year, and then increase the Student's day to 150 minutes/day at the start of the 2024-25 school year. The Parent provided their consent.

i. Through their investigation, the District found that the increased service time did not begin in the 2024-25 school year as indicated in the IEP, and remained at 120 minutes/day. The District wrote, "… the current school team failed to implement the IEP beginning 8/14/24 through current. Based on the [D]istrict calendar, [the District] owes [the Student] 57 hours of compensatory services from 8/14/24-2/28/25."

c. "The team supports increasing time in the special education classroom and it is most appropriate for the least restrictive environment. [The Student] is making progress towards [their] goals while in the special education classroom."

18. The Student's Progress Report dated April 29, 2024 described the Student's progress toward their goals and indicated:
    a. As of April 23, 2024, it was anticipated the Student would not meet their communication goal.
    b. As of March 18, 2024, it was anticipated the Student would meet their Academic Performance goals in designated area and engagement.
    c. As of March 18, 2024, it was anticipated the Student would meet their Social-Emotional goal.
19. The Student's Progress Report dated May 21, 2024 described the Student's progress toward their goals and indicated:
    a. As of May 15, 2024, it was anticipated that the Student would meet their communication goal.
20. A summary of the Student's 1st Quarter and 2nd Quarter Progress Reports detailed the Student's use of the iPad and LAMP program, in addition to notes on the Student's participation in activities and the level at which they could express vocabulary words and make requests. The information was also written in Spanish.
21. The Student's Progress Report for the 2024-25 school year described their Measurable Annual Goal. Updates for the Speech-Language goal were the only ones written in English and Spanish. The report indicated:
    a. As of December 16, 2024, it was anticipated the Student would meet their Speech-Language goal.
    b. As of December 19, 2024, it was anticipated the Student would meet their Academic Performance goals in letters and numbers, and for daily living skills.
22. On January 30, 2025, the Parent arrived at the School and spoke to the Assistant Principal, and stated they wanted the Student's educational day to be extended. The Assistant Principal stated to the Parent that an action to extend a student's school day for an IEP would require an IEP team meeting. The Assistant Principal informed the Parent that they would request the Special Education Teacher to set up an IEP meeting, which was set for February 6, 2025.
23. The Assistant Principal recalled the Parent had asked for the Student's day to be extended once each year the Student had been at the School. The Special Education Teacher stated their understanding of why the Parent requested to extend the Student's school day was because the Parent had no way to earn income when the Student was with them all day.

24. A NOM was sent to the Parent via phone/text on January 31, 2025, with a proposed meeting date of February 6, 2025. A copy was also provided to the Parent in Spanish.
    a. A second notification was hand-delivered to the Parent's home on February 5, 2025. Additional notes were written in English and Spanish.
    b. Boxes checked included that the Parent would attend the meeting as scheduled and that they consented to waive their rights to a 10-day PWN of the meeting.
25. A PWN notice sent to the Parent on February 6, 2025 indicated:
    a. A consideration to increase the Student's school day. At the time, the Student was attending two hours daily with 120 minutes of pullout services.
    b. The Parent reported they had been advised not to sign any documents until reviewed by their attorney.
    c. A proposal to increase the Student's school attendance by one hour.
        i. "Pullout Special Education Setting 180 minutes 4 x a week"; and
        ii. "Pullout Special Education Setting 150 minutes 1 x a week (district early release day)."
    d. The proposal was agreed to verbally by the Parent. The draft IEP and PWN Identification would be completed and sent to the Parent for review, with a meeting to follow.
    e. "It was relayed to [the Parent] by the interpreter no changes will be made to the schedule until the meeting takes place and official signed consent of [sic] obtained."
    f. The PWN was hand-delivered to the Parent on February 7, 2025 in both English and Spanish, but the Parent did not provide consent. The same day, a new NOM, in English and Spanish, was hand-delivered to the Parent for a meeting scheduled on February 18, 2025.
    g. The follow-up meeting was rescheduled to February 28, 2025 due to inclement weather and illness.
    h. According to the Special Education Teacher, the Student's school day did not increase.
26. The Student's school schedule detailed that for Monday through Friday:
    a. The Student was in the Special Education Teacher's classroom for 1:1 direct instruction from 12:00 p.m. - 1:40 p.m. and 1:55 p.m. - 2 p.m.
    b. The Student was in the gym from 12:05 p.m. - 1:00 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays.
    c. The Student had speech therapy from 1:40 p.m. - 1:55 p.m., Monday through Wednesday.
    d. Dismissal was at 2 p.m.

e. Paraprofessionals rotated every 30 minutes to work with the Student at 12:00 p.m., 12:30 p.m., 1:00 p.m., and 1:30 p.m.

27. The Special Education Teacher said the Student's school day had recently been extended to four hours a day for the 2024-25 school year. They said that during the 2023-24 school year, the Student attended school from 12 p.m. to 1 p.m., and then from 12 p.m. to 1:30 p.m.
28. The Parent said, "...they told me that the teacher that [the Student] has now is going to be leaving ... and they're gonna put in a substitute ... . The [person] that ... takes [the Student] when I bring [them] to school, told me that there have been four teachers that have been switching off every 30 minutes." The Special Education Teacher stated they only had a substitute when they were gone, but that the same staff remained in their room.
29. Speech Language Pathology Services Data and Notes from August 22, 2024 through February 11, 2025 indicated the Student achieved either minimal improvement, or no level of progress was circled.

    b. Addressed Parent concerns of wanting the Student at school for a full day and the plan on getting them to a full day.
    c. Signed by the Parent and District on February 28, 2025.
32. A PWN dated February 28, 2025 summarized the meeting and indicated the Student would be attending school for 240 minutes, five times a week. The amendment indicated the Student would start attending school for 180 minutes, five times a week. It also included an additional 60 minutes, five times a week, for compensatory services. The latter would go through the end of the 2024-25 school year, which would be a payback of 49 hours of compensatory services.
    a. The PWN indicated the District would provide 30 minutes four times a week of compensatory services during the Extended School Year (ESY) dates of June 2, 2025 through July 24, 2025, for a total of 65 hours of compensatory services from March 3, 2025 through July 24, 2025. The Parent declined ESY services at this time because the Student would be out of state over the summer.

Positions of the Parties, Applicable Regulations, and Conclusions

Issue One

Whether USD #446, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to implement the Student's IEP when the bus frequently arrived at the Student's house 5-7 minutes late. K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(3); 34 CFR §300.323(a).

According to 34 CFR §300.323(a) and K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(3), an IEP must be in effect for each exceptional child at the beginning of each school year.

The Parent alleged that during 2024, the Student's bus "always arrived 5 to 7 minutes late."

The District stated that special transportation continued to be available for the Student, but the service had not been utilized for two months at the Parent's request. There was no documentation to show that the bus picked the Student up late or brought them back late.

The Student's IEP, dated April 23, 2024, indicated Transportation services were to be provided for 30 minutes a day, 5 days a week, to and from the School. The Student had not ridden the bus since December 23, 2024, at the Parent's request. No documentation showed that the bus was late picking up the Student or returning them home. The Student was placed on a bus which picked up identified students at their residences. This information was shared with the Parent through a District-provided interpreter.

The Parent explained the Student stopped taking the bus around February 2025, and that it was the Parent's decision. The Parent said they observed the bus arriving up to 15 minutes late during the 2023-24 school year, and believed this negatively impacted the Student's education. The Special Education Teacher stated that the Student arrived at and left school on time, and that neither the bus nor the Parent was ever late. The Assistant Principal reported that during the 2023-24 school year, the bus sometimes had to be called back to the Student's house because nobody came out to the bus. This was not a consistent issue, and there were no further problems after a new bus director was hired for the 2024-25 school year.

Some inconsistencies were noted with the timelines of when the Student stopped riding the bus, but it was consistently stated that it was the Parent's decision to stop utilizing the bus service. While the Parent indicated they had observed the bus arriving late, there was no documentation or additional evidence to indicate this occurred; however, statements from the Assistant Principal confirmed there were times when the bus was called back to the Student's house. Anecdotal evidence from the Special Education Teacher supported the Student did not arrive at or depart late from school. There were some conflicting statements regarding the bus's arrival, but there was no direct evidence or documentation to corroborate the allegation.

Issue Two

According to K.A.R. 91-40-17, K.A.R. 91-40-1(l)(1), K.A.R. 91-40-21(d)(5), and 34 C.F.R. § 300.322(e), an agency shall take action to ensure that parents understand the discussions that occur at IEP team meetings, any discussions concerning educational placement, and information related to all activities for which consent is sought. This includes arranging for an interpreter for parents whose native language is other than English. Additionally, K.A.R. 91-40-26(b), 34 C.F.R. §§ 300.503(c), and 300.504(d) require that any procedural safeguards and notices of proposed actions or refusals shall be written in language understandable to the general public and provided in the native language of the parent or other mode of communication used by the parent unless it is clearly not feasible to do so.

The Parent alleged that the District did not provide an interpreter for the school meetings with the Parent. The Parent reported that they brought a relative to help interpret so they could understand what was happening with the Student's education.

The District responded that they had historically, and continued to, provide Notice of Meetings, IEPs, and PWNs in the Parent's native language. Translators were typically at the Student's meetings for the Parent, but there was no documentation to show there was one present at the April 23, 2024 IEP meeting. There was a translator at the February 6, 2025 meeting.

The District stated that most meetings with the Parent had an interpreter present and that they had a contract with a translating service if needed. The Parent noted that during the 2023-24 school year, they had a relative come and translate for them two or three times but did not recall specific dates. However, the Parent recalled having an interpreter at meetings where the Student's IEP was discussed. The Parent stated that documents were not consistently provided to them in Spanish.

The District indicated that for the IEP meeting on April 23, 2024, the Parent was provided a NOM, IEP, and PWN in English and Spanish. The Parent signed the IEP which was written in Spanish. No documentation showed there was a translator present at this meeting, and District staff did not recall whether a translator attended the meeting. However, the Assistant Principal did not recall attending a meeting without a translator present. Parent Rights were provided to the Parent in English and Spanish on February 6, 2025, and a PWN was given to the Parent in English and Spanish the following day. The District indicated a translator attended the meeting on February 6, 2025.

Documentation indicated the Parent received information about the Student's education in English and Spanish, in accordance with K.A.R. 91-40-26(b), 34 C.F.R. §§ 300.503(c), and 300.504(d). There was no documentation or evidence from either party to determine if an interpreter attended the meeting on April 23, 2024. While the Parent stated the District did not provide an interpreter, the statements could not be linked to a specific meeting. While it is plausible that an interpreter was not present at the meeting on April 23, 2024, it could not be conclusively determined.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the District failed to provide information to the Parent in their native language to assist the Parent in understanding the special education proceedings.

Issue Three

Whether USD #446, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to offer the Student a free appropriate public education (FAPE) in the least restrictive environment when the Student was in school for only two hours per day. K.A.R. 91-40-1(II), K.A.R. 91-40-2(a)(e), K.A.R. 91-40-3(a)(b), K.S.A. 72-3420; 34 C.F.R. §§ 300.101(a), 300.114, 300.116-117.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-1(II), K.S.A. 72-3420, and 34 C.F.R. § 300.114, "Least restrictive environment" and "LRE" mean the educational placement in which, to the maximum extent appropriate, children with disabilities, including children in institutions or other care facilities, are educated with children who are not disabled. Agencies are to provide special classes, separate schooling, or remove children with disabilities from the regular education environment only when the nature or severity of the disability of the child is such that education in regular classes with supplementary aids and services cannot be achieved satisfactorily.

Additionally, K.A.R. 91-40-2(a)(e), K.A.R. 91-40-3(a)(b), and 34 C.F.R. § 300.101(a), requires that agencies provide FAPE based upon a child's unique needs, including offering the same variety of educational programs, services, nonacademic and extracurricular services and activities that are available to nondisabled children served by the agency. These activities and services include counseling, athletics, transportation, health services, and recreational opportunities.

Finally, according to 34 C.F.R. §§ 300.116-117, for any child with a disability, when determining their educational placement, public agencies must ensure specific conditions are met. The placement decision must be made by a group including parents and knowledgeable individuals about the child, evaluation data, and placement options, and must align with the LRE provisions. The child's placement must be determined at least yearly, must be based on the child's IEP, and must be as close as possible to the child's home. Unless the child's IEP requires otherwise, the child must be educated in their neighborhood school, and when choosing the LRE, potential harmful effects on the child or the quality of needed services must be considered. Agencies must also ensure that each child with a disability has the supplementary aids and services determined by the child's IEP Team to be appropriate and necessary for the child to participate in nonacademic settings.

The Parent alleged that the Student was not receiving the support and intervention they needed to address their behavior and receive an appropriate education. The Parent reported that during 2024, the Student was only in school for 2 hours per day and "this has affected [the Student's] learning progress tremendously."

The District responded that after investigating the Student's history and current IEP, the current School team failed to implement the Student's IEP beginning on August 14, 2024. Based on the District calendar, the District owed the Student 57 hours of compensatory services from August 14, 2024 through February 28, 2025, and a proposal would be offered to the Parent.

The Student began their elementary school career on a shortened school day of 60 minutes/day. The Parent stated the Student had regressed due to not attending school full-time. The School Psychologist explained that the Student was on a shortened day due to requiring significant adult intervention and engaging in occasional aggressive behaviors, which the Assistant Principal confirmed and was indicated in their IEP. The Special Education Teacher stated the Student did not go to the general education classroom.

A NOM, signed by the Parent on April 22, 2024, proposed a meeting for April 23, 2024 to review the Student's IEP. It was provided in English and Spanish. The Student's IEP, dated April 23, 2024 and written in English and Spanish, identified significant delays in motor skills, communication, social-emotional development, general intelligence, and academic/functional performance, with a diagnosis of Autism Spectrum Disorder Level Three. The IEP team determined that the Student required individualized instruction in the special education setting and that their current placement was the least restrictive environment appropriate to provide a FAPE. A PWN from the same day summarized the meeting and indicated the Parent consented to increase the Student's day to 150 minutes per day at the start of the 2024-25 school year.

A Progress Report dated April 29, 2024 indicated it was anticipated the Student would not meet their communication goal, but would meet their Academic Performance and Social-Emotional goals. A Progress Report dated May 21, 2024 stated that it was anticipated the Student would meet their communication goal. The Student's iPad and LAMP usage, activities, vocabulary, and requests were detailed in their Progress Reports, which were also written in Spanish. The Student's Progress Report for the 2024-25 school year indicated it was anticipated the Student would meet their Speech-Language and Academic Performance goals. Speech-Language Pathology Services Data and Notes from August 22, 2024 through February 11, 2025 indicated the Student achieved minimal improvement. The Student's Report Card for Q2 of the 2024-25 school year indicated they had a passing grade for music and PE, and an "A" in grammar and science lab.

On January 30, 2025, the Parent told the Assistant Principal they wanted to extend the Student's school day. The Assistant Principal stated that would require an IEP meeting, which was scheduled for February 6, 2025. The Assistant Principal recalled the Parent had also asked for the Student's day to be extended in prior years. A NOM was sent to the Parent on January 31, 2025, with a proposed meeting date of February 6, 2025. A second notification was delivered to the Parent's home on February 5, 2025.

A PWN sent on February 6, 2025 proposed increasing the Student's school day by one hour, which the Parent verbally agreed to. The PWN and NOM were delivered to the Parent in English and Spanish, but the Parent did not provide consent. A follow-up meeting was scheduled for February 28, 2025.

The Student's weekly schedule indicated that paraprofessionals rotated every 30 minutes to work with the Student. The Special Education Teacher said that during the 2023-24 school year, the Student attended school from 12 p.m. to 1 p.m., and then from 12 p.m. to 1:30 p.m. The Parent indicated they were told the Student had four teachers who switched off every 30 minutes. The Parent believed these adults were substitutes.

On February 28, 2025, the Student's IEP was revised, increasing special education services for academics and social-emotional skills, effective March 3, 2025. The meeting outlined a plan to achieve the Parent's desire for a full school day. The Parent signed the IEP amendment, which was provided in English and Spanish. A PWN from the same day documented the meeting, outlining a 240-minute school day, which included 180 minutes of regular attendance and 60 minutes of compensatory services to address past deficits.

When addressing the issue of least restrictive environment, the Student's access to general education, their grades, and attendance were reviewed. Overall, the Student demonstrated progress toward their IEP goals, achieved passing grades, and only missed 1.5 days of school in Q2 of the 2024-25 school year. The District documented in the IEP that the Student occasionally engaged in aggressive behaviors and required "… constant staff supervision to ensure [their] safety in the classroom." The District also provided their reasoning for determining why the Student's needs would best be met in the special education setting. The District detailed in the IEP that they weighed the positive effects of the placement against potential harmful effects and concluded that it was the least restrictive placement.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the District failed to offer the Student a free appropriate public education (FAPE) in the least restrictive environment when the Student was in school for only two hours per day.

While gathering information for the Complaint Investigation, the District discovered it failed to implement the Student's IEP from August 14, 2024 through February 28, 2025, which denied the Student a FAPE. The District did not contest this and created a proposal for compensatory services. This additional finding is substantiated.

Corrective Action

Information gathered in the course of this investigation has substantiated noncompliance with special education statutes and regulations. A violation occurred in the following area:

A. State and federal regulations at K.A.R. 91-40-1(II), K.A.R. 91-40-2, K.A.R. 91-40-3, K.S.A. 72-3420; 34 C.F.R. § § 300.101(a), 300.114, 300.116-117 require that agencies provide a FAPE based upon a child's unique needs.

In this case, the evidence supports the finding that USD # 446 did not provide a FAPE to the Student when the District scheduled the Student to attend only a portion of their shortened school day from August 14, 2024 through February 28, 2025. The Student missed 57 hours of school and instruction.

Based on the foregoing, USD # 446 is directed to take the following actions:

1. Within 15 calendar days of the date of this report, USD # 446 shall submit a written statement of assurance to Special Education and Title Services (SETS) stating that it will comply with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) at K.A.R. 91-40-1(II), K.A.R. 91-40-2, K.A.R. 91-40-3, K.S.A. 72-3420; 34 C.F.R. § § 300.101(a), 300.114, 300.116-117 that require agencies to provide a FAPE based upon a child's unique needs.
2. Further, by April 15, 2025, USD #446 will complete and submit a written statement of assurance to Special Education and Title Services (SETS) that the district's practices and procedures for a FAPE have been reviewed and revised as appropriate to be responsive and compliant with FAPE requirements of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) and the Kansas Special Education for Exceptional Children Act.
3. Within 15 calendar days of the date of this report, USD # 446 shall submit a service schedule that shows the dates the 57 hours of compensatory services will be provided.
4. Within one year of the date of this report, USD #446 shall submit verification that the compensatory services have been completed.

The Investigator first spoke with the father by phone on March 3, 2025 and again on March 21, 2025. The Investigator spoke with the district special education director by phone on March 4 and 5, 2025 to clarify the issues and discuss requested evidence. The investigator interviewed the principal, school psychologist, special education administrator, student's case manager, speech and language therapist, and general education teacher on March 13, 2025 by video conference.

Background Information

The student is a ten-year-old fourth grader and is eligible for special education and related services under the category of Speech / Language Disabilities according to the most current re-evaluation dated April 20, 2023. The Current Classroom Based Assessment and Performance in the General Curriculum describes the student's Social Skills/Peer interaction: "At the beginning of the year, [student] struggled with peer relationships and telling the truth about what happened between [student] and [student's] peers. However, [student] has made great improvements and [student's] peer relationships have greatly improved. [Student] enjoys being with [student's] friends and [student's] friends enjoy being with [student]." Attention issues/Behavioral concerns were not reported. The Social Work Evaluation Summary indicated the student had strengths with prosocial skills, emotionality, hyperactivity, and peer relationships. Further, the student would benefit from continued general education lessons and practice with peers focusing on conflict resolution, but the student does not show a need for specialized instruction in social work.

The IEP dated April 17, 2024 lists 4 annual goals and includes 20 minutes of direct speech and language services in the special education classroom 2 days every week, 30 minutes of direct special education services in the special education classroom 5 days every week and 60 minutes of direct special education services in the general education classroom 5 days every week. The IEP lists that in addition to instruction targeting reading and writing goals, instruction will include guided and repeated practice, reteaching, and immediate feedback on decoding single and multi-syllabic words, encoding/spelling skills, high-frequency words, and syllable types. The student's IEP includes one accommodation, take test in a quiet, non-competitive setting.

Issues Investigated

ISSUE ONE: Did the district discuss and respond to the father's request for a school-based special education evaluation to investigate behaviors resulting from not expressing feelings and emotions due to a speech and language disability during the 2024-2025 annual IEP meeting?

ISSUE TWO: Did the district discuss and respond to the father's request for mental health aid services for anxiety and oppositional defiant behavior due to the student's speech and language disability during the annual 2024-2025 IEP meeting?

Issue One

Did the district discuss and respond to the father's request for a school-based special education evaluation to investigate behaviors resulting from not expressing feelings and emotions due to a speech and language disability during the 2024-2025 annual IEP meeting?

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.503(a)(2) states that prior written notice needs to be provided to the parents of a child with a disability a reasonable time before the public agency proposes or refuses to initiate or change the identification, evaluation, or educational placement of the child or the provision of FAPE to the child.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The Father alleged that the student's behavior was changing at school, showing anxious and oppositional-defiant behaviors because the student could not express fears, embarrassment with other peers and could not speak up consistently. This has resulted in decreasing the student's development. The father stated that he asked for evaluation at the September 5, 2024 IEP meeting and the school psychologist denied this request.

The district responded that two IEP meetings occurred during the fall, September 5, 2024 and November 15, 2024. "The September 5th IEP meeting was requested to review his [student's] progress. However, during the meeting, [Father] requested a Motivational Interview with an outside evaluator. The district responded with a PWN declining the request, as it was not necessary to determine needs and additional support needed for [student] to make progress. At no time did [parent] state that his [student's] perceived behavior difficulties were because of [student's] speech and language disability, nor did the IEP team believe that [student] required additional special education services for behavior to make progress on [student's] IEP goals and general education curriculum."

The director of special education stated in a phone interview with the investigator on March 5, 2025 that the parent did not ask for special education evaluation for the student's behavior or inability to express feelings but instead requested an outside evaluator to complete a motivational interview not related to special education services.

The student's IEP's present levels of performance, meeting notes, and PWN from the April 17, 2024 annual IEP meeting do not indicate behavioral concerns or concerns with expressing feelings. Instead, it is recorded in the April 17, 2024 IEP that the student's father would like his child to be able to speak in normal conversations and normal settings, to be able to join two phrases in a sentence and be capable of having a conversation with kids the age of his child.

The September 5, 2024 IEP meeting notes record Father's statement that, "[Student] is having trouble with the process they are going through as a family. We need to consider interview of [Student] in navigating this process." to which the principal responded that the school is not seeing issues at school.

The PWN issued on September 11, 2024 following the September 5, 2024 IEP meeting stated, "While the school team considered the need for an outside provider to complete a motivational interview for [student], it was determined that this was not necessary to determine needs and additional supports for [student]." The rationale for rejecting the parent request was, "they have all the resources to support [student's] progress towards [student's] special education goals and needs with the staff and tools available at [student's] home school, [name of school]." The PWN describes that progress monitoring, parent Input and collaboration with the student's IEP team members including the general education teacher was used to make the decision.

The principal stated during the interview on March 13, 2025 that the student's school team does not see reason to conduct additional special education evaluation related to the parent's concerns about behavior or social emotional needs as these behaviors are not seen at school or during school activities. Participants on the district call additionally stated that the parent has not requested special education evaluation regarding these concerns.

The student's speech/language therapist stated during the March 13, 2024 interview that the student's goals and SPL services are not directed to expressing feelings and emotions although the student may practice relating feelings and emotions while practicing the goals during SPL services.

Conclusion

The issue investigated was in response to a parent request for an evaluation that was denied by the district with a prior written notice. IDEA regulations are clear that the district must consider a parent's request for an evaluation (or any other action) and then issue a prior written notice documenting and explaining the decision.

The district issued a PWN on September 11, 2024 in response to the September 5, 2024 IEP meeting in which the request was made. The prior written notice and district interviews document that the request for the evaluation was not related to special education services or concerns, but instead to a transition happening with the student's home life. It is found that the district considered whether the parent's request and followed all of the procedures for denying a parent request for a specific evaluation. The PWN dated September 11, 2024 documents the decision and follows procedural steps for denying the request as specified in 34 C.F.R. 300.503(a)(2).

Therefore, it is found that the district is I*N compliance* and followed proper procedure in responding to a parent request with a prior written notice.

Issue Two

Did the district discuss and respond to the father's request for mental health aid services for anxiety and oppositional defiant behavior due to the student's speech and language disability during the annual 2024-2025 IEP meeting?

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.503(a)(2) states that prior written notice needs to be provided to the parents of a child with a disability a reasonable time before the public agency proposes or refuses to initiate or change the identification, evaluation, or educational placement of the child or the provision of FAPE to the child.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The findings of Issue One are incorporated herein by reference. The parent alleged in the complaint that his child was denied access to mental health aid services in an IEP meeting after his child was showing a change in behavior. The child's father stated that the student "couldn't express [student's] fears, embarrassment needs with other peers and had an anxious, oppositional defiant behavior and couldn't speak up consistently."

The district responded that throughout the fall of 2024 they had shared with the parent that the student was not exhibiting any behaviors out of the norm of a typical fourth grader experiencing a temporary home life transition and that this was not due to the student's disability. They further stated that the district could provide mental health services for the student with parent consent. Later, the parent reiterated in an email to the director of special education that the student needed mental health services, but they were not an IEP issue. At the November 14, 2024 IEP meeting the parent again requested mental health services for his student and again the director of special education described the social work support provided to any student in the district during periods of transition. The district reported that a family member signed consent to this general education support in January 2025.

The April 17, 2024 IEP, meeting notes, nor PWN indicate behavioral concerns or mental health services.

The IEP meeting minutes dated September 5, 2024 recorded that the father stated, "[Student] is having trouble with the process they are going through as a family. We need to consider interview of [student] in navigating this process. It is hard for [student] to not be seeing dad for almost 4 months. Don't want counselor or LMSW working with [student]. [Father] wants someone outside of [school] to work with [student]." The director of special education offered to help with district resources for a therapist, but the father declined.

An email from the parent to the district on October 16, 2024 at 3:04 p.m. reported that while the parent had concerns about his child's classroom behavior, the parent was "not talking about [student's] IEP". This led the special education director to direct the parent to general education resources, such as the student's general education teacher.

During the March 13, 2025 investigator's interview with the IEP team members they recalled that the father stated during the November 15, 2024 IEP meeting that a court appointed evaluation had been conducted in relation to an issue outside of school and based on the results of that the father was wanting the school psychologist to work with the student about the home life transition. During that meeting the IEP team reiterated that the father was wanting services offered by general education, not special education services. They further shared that a social worker would provide the services rather than the school psychologist and referred to a memo describing district services for students in transition outside of school.

In a memo shared with all parents regarding services, "The [District] employs masters-level social workers, as well as partners with [local hospital] to provide additional masters-level social workers within [District] Schools. These social workers work in collaboration with the school counselors and school psychologists to provide large and small group instruction, as well as individual services." This memo outlines the general responsibilities for each, school counselors, school social workers and school psychologists in the 1) prevention and responding to a crisis and 2) collaboration as part of school team. The memo further states, "The school team may offer ongoing support to any child or family to meet needs beyond academic learning following a referral by parents, teachers, school counselor, psychologist, principal, or self-referral. We would like to provide an opportunity for your child to benefit from the supports of the social workers if needed. With the exception of health and safety emergencies that require immediate interventions, signed parent consent is required to receive ongoing services." Both the principal on March 13, 2025 and the director of special education on March 5, 2025 reported that this service was offered to the parent at the IEP meeting in November and consent was signed by the mother in January, 2025.

Conclusion

In this case the parent and district acknowledge that the parent requested mental health services for his child during the November 15, 2024 IEP. However, an email from the father to the director of special education in October demonstrates that the district and parent recognized that the father's request for mental health services during the meeting was not an IEP issue, but instead a concerned father requesting support for his child during a meeting with school staff. In the meeting minutes and interview with the parent, district staff and director of special education it became clear that all parties were discussing a general education service rather than a parent request for a special education service. The special education regulation is directed to a district providing a PWN in response to parent request for a special education service, rather than a general education service discussed during an IEP meeting.

Based on the documentation and interviews with the parent and the district is found that is IN compliance with IDEA regulations.

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST
UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #348
ON FEBRUARY 14, 2025

DATE OF REPORT: MARCH 28, 2025

This report is in response to a complaint filed with the Kansas State Department of Education on behalf of -------- by her mother, --------. In the remainder of the report -------- will be referred to as the "student" and -------- will be referred to as the "complainant", the "parent", or the "mother".

The complaint is against USD #348 (Baldwin City Public Schools) who contracts with the East Central Kansas Cooperative in Education (Interlocal #614) to provide special education services to students enrolled in the school district. In the remainder of the report, both of these responsible public agencies may also be referred to as "the district", "the local education agency (LEA)", or "the school". Individually, they will be referred to by "USD #348" and "the Interlocal #614" respectively.

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) allows for a 60-day timeline to investigate a complaint and allow for an appeal process from the date on which it was filed. A complaint is considered filed on the date on which it was received by KSDE. In this case, the KSDE initially received the complaint on February 14, 2025 and assigned the case for investigation on February 17, 2025.

Evidence Reviewed

During the investigation, the Complaint Investigator, Nancy Thomas, reviewed all the documentation provided by both the complainant and the LEA.

Interviews were conducted with both parties. The parent was interviewed by telephone on February 25 and March 10, 2025.

A telephone interview was held on March 10, 2025 with the following school district staff:

- Derek Bland, Principal
- Bench Curry, Assistant Principal
- Randi Dalton, Gifted Teacher
- Ryan Cox, 6th Grade Math Teacher
- Kelly Evans, 6th Grade Reading Teacher
- Sarah Johnson, 6th Grade Language Arts Teacher

Background Information

The student is a 13-year-old girl who is currently enrolled in in the 7th grade at Baldwin Junior High School (BJHS) in USD #348 for the 2024-25 school year. It is noted that she also attended BJHS for 6th grade.

The student was initially evaluated for special education services during the fifth grade in USD #348. On February 3, 2023, the multidisciplinary team determined she was eligible for special education and related services due to meeting the eligibility criteria for the exceptionality category of Gifted. The IEP team then developed an initial IEP and the student has continuously received special education services to the present time.

Issues Investigated

Based on the written complaint and an interview with the complainant, three issues were identified and investigated.

According to Chapter 1, Section H of the Kansas Special Education Process Handbook, special education services are not compulsory for children who are gifted. Therefore, parents of gifted children may choose to accept whatever special education services are proposed by the IEP team. Schools are required to provide the services specified in an IEP once the parent gives consent as required by Kansas state statutes and regulations. As such, the parents and children who are gifted have the same rights as parents and children with disabilities with certain exceptions. It is noted that none of the exceptions apply to the issues being investigated in this particular case.

Issue One

USD #348, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to respond appropriately to the parent's request for an IEP team meeting in August 2024.

Applicable Law

Kansas statutes at K.S.A. 72-3429(f) require public agencies to ensure that each child's IEP is reviewed periodically, but not less than annually, to determine whether the annual goals for the child are being achieved; and revises the IEP, as appropriate, to address information about the child provided to, or by, the parents.

Kansas statutes at K.S.A. 72-3429(b)(4) allows the public agency and the parent of a child with a disability to agree to make changes to a child's IEP after the annual IEP Team meeting for a school year, if the parent of a child with a disability and the public agency agree not to convene an IEP Team meeting for the purposes of making those changes, and instead develop a written document to amend or modify the child's current IEP.

Kansas statutes at K.S.A. 72-3430 require school districts to provide parents with prior written notice a reasonable time before they propose or refuse to initiate or change the identification, evaluation, or educational placement of the child or the provision of FAPE (free appropriate public education) to a child who has or is suspected of having a disability.

Positions of the Parties

The parent alleged that the LEA failed to respond to her request for an IEP team meeting at the beginning of the 2024-25 school year. The mother reported requesting an IEP team meeting shortly after school started in August; however, an IEP team meeting was not held until after the end of the first quarter in October 2024.

The district acknowledged that the parent requested an IEP team meeting in August 2024 but reported that the parent agreed to a "pre-IEP" meeting with the Gifted Teacher to discuss her concerns. The district stated:

Following this [the pre-IEP meeting] there was email correspondence between the Gifted Teacher, Principal, and parent planning the procedure for the student to participate in pre-testing as discussed in the pre-meeting. Next additional emails document the parent's agreement to amendments to the service time without an IEP team meeting. Additionally, the parent agreed that she preferred to wait until after her daughter had completed the math pre-tests before having an IEP team meeting. Upon completion, the IEP team meeting was scheduled for October 22nd due to the length of time it took for the student to complete all pre-tests.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

Documentation shows the parent requested an IEP team meeting to discuss the student's educational program for 7th grade in an email written to the Gifted Teacher on August 20, 2024.

Emails between the Gifted Teacher and the parent dated August 21, 2024 document that a "pre-IEP meeting" was offered and the parent accepted this meeting. The meeting was scheduled and held according to both the parent and the Gifted Teacher. Both parties reported that a plan to conduct pre-tests for math was developed at the meeting and a regular schedule would be developed for the special education instruction to be provided in the 7th grade.

An email dated August 27, 2024 from the Gifted Teacher to the parent stated:

I met with the student today for pull-out and we talked about her interests and possibilities for EL [Enhanced Learning] time . . . She would like to be in Period 3 EL pull-out. This is during robotics. I emailed her teacher and created a recurring ehall pass for every Tuesday during period 3. Class periods are 49 minutes long. Her IEP currently states 30 minutes, 2 times a week. Would you be fine if I created an amendment for 49 minutes once a week and then added the rest of the minutes together as a one time a quarter or something similar? That way she would only miss one class period a week but would also have an opportunity to do something a bit longer such as a Friday field trip or group project day to make up the remaining minutes. Alternatively, we could just reduce her minutes to 49 minutes once a week . . . If we agree to either of these changes in anticipated service minutes, we could do an amendment without a meeting now and then we can hold an IEP meeting to put a math plan in place. Would you prefer to wait for an IEP meeting?

The parent responded via email to the Gifted Teacher the same day indicating that she was "fine with an amendment for 49 min once a week and then add the rest of the minutes together for once a quarter. And fine with just waiting to have an IEP meeting for the math plan".

The district provided a copy of an IEP dated January 31, 2024 requiring 30 minutes of special education extended learning services twice a week starting January 31, 2024 and ending January 30, 2025. However, there was no written documentation to amend this IEP showing the change in the services described in the August 27, 2024 email and agreed to by the parent.

Conclusion

The IDEA allows for two responses when a parent requests an IEP team meeting: 1) Reconvene the IEP team to discuss the information shared by or with the parent, or 2) the LEA and the parent agree to amend the IEP without conducting an IEP team meeting and a written document describing the changes agreed upon is created to amend or modify the IEP.

In this case, interviews and documentation found that the parent did request an IEP team meeting on August 20, 2024 via an email to the Gifted Teacher. The Gifted Teacher responded by offering a "pre-IEP meeting" to discuss the parent concerns and the parent participated in this meeting on August 23, 2024. On August 27, 2024, the parent agreed to wait to conduct an IEP Team Meeting to discuss the math plan.

It also appears that the parent and the Gifted Teacher agreed to amend the student's IEP services without conducting an IEP Team Meeting in response to the parent's request for a meeting to discuss concerns on August 20, 2024

Based on the email dated August 27, 2024 between the parent and the Gifted Teacher, there was a mutual agreement to change the delivery of the special education services from 30 minutes twice a week as described in the January 31, 2024 IEP to 49 minutes one time per week with the remaining 11 minutes per week for the nine weeks in a quarter being combined and provided once each quarter for a total of 99 minutes per quarter.

Based upon the way the services were described as being provided, the student was continuing to receive a total of 540 minutes per quarter of special education services [30 minutes x 2 times per week x 9 weeks in a quarter = 540 minutes equals 49 minutes x 9 week in a quarter + 11 minutes per week x 9 weeks for a combined 99 minutes once per quarter = 540 minutes]. It is noted that while the total amount of services being provided was not changed, this change did affect the frequency the services were to be provided for the student, and, therefore, a prior written notice (PWN) for a change in services should have been provided to the parent. For this reason, the LEA is found to be out of compliance for not providing the parent with appropriate PWN following the August 27, 2024 mutual agreement to amend the IEP.

In addition, the LEA was required to develop a written document to amend the student's IEP and none was created. Based on the foregoing, the LEA is also found to be OUT compliance with the requirement to appropriately respond to the parent's request for an IEP team meeting in August 2024 when it agreed to amend the student's IEP without conducing an IEP Team Meeting on August 27, 2024 by failing to develop a written document to amend the student's IEP showing the agreed upon changes.

Issue Two

USD #348, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to implement the student's IEP dated January 31, 2024, specifically the accommodations and special education services, between February 14, 2024 through October 21, 2024.

Applicable Law

State regulations at K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(3) require school districts to have an IEP in place at the beginning of each school year for every child with a disability within its jurisdiction. In addition, state regulations at K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(2) require school districts to ensure that as soon as possible following the development of an IEP, special education and related services are made available to the child in accordance with that child's IEP.

The parent alleged that the general education teachers failed to challenge the student in math and reading/language arts classes by not providing the accommodations required by the IEP during both 6th and 7th grade. The parent reported she complained multiple times that the accommodations in the general education math and reading/language arts classes were not being provided and questioned whether the student was receiving the required special education extended learning instruction as required by the IEP during 7th grade but none of these issues was ever resolved. The parent believes the disparity between the 98-100% scores on the student's grade cards and her Fastbridge and Kansas Assessment Program (KAP) state assessment scores indicated that the IEP was not being implemented as written.

The district reported the accommodations on the IEP as well as the special education services were provided as required by the January 31, 2024 IEP during the second semester of 6th grade and the first semester of 7th grade.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The following findings of fact are based upon interviews and record review.

The findings of Issue One are incorporated herein by reference.

The January 31, 2024 IEP was in effect between February 14, 2024 and October 21, 2024. This IEP required 30 minutes twice per week of special education instruction for extended learning. This IEP was amended on August 27, 2024 to provide 49 minutes once per week with 99 minutes provided one time each quarter through an agreement made between the parent and the 2024-25 Gifted Teacher.

An email dated August 21, 2023 written by Patricia Lenning, the 2023-24 Gifted Teacher, documents that special education extended learning services were scheduled to be provided for 30 minutes on Tuesdays and Thursdays each week during the 2023-24 school year. It is noted that Ms. Lenning is no longer employed by the LEA. The parent and district agree that these services were provided during the 6th grade.

The Schedule of Gifted Services Minutes during the 2024-25 School Year written by the 2024-25 Gifted Teacher documents that the special education extended learning services were scheduled to be provided during one 48-minute class period on Tuesdays with an additional 108 minutes provided each quarter. The 2024-25 Gifted Teacher noted:

This schedule was created to align with the Junior High Bell Schedule and meant she only missed one elective class a week regularly. Her mother was informed in person that the remaining time would be made up so that all of her service minutes would be met.

It is noted this schedule does not match the times agreed upon by both parties on August 27, 2024; however, again, the total amount of services is 540 minutes per quarter.

Based upon the school calendar and the schedule of special education extended learning services during the first quarter, the student received the weekly services during the 7th period of the school day on Tuesdays when she was in attendance and received an additional 330 minutes of extended learning through a field trip experience to the Heartland Literature Festival in Topeka, Kansas on October 2, 2024.

The January 31, 2023 IEP included four accommodations to be provided in the general education setting. However, the parent only expressed concerns regarding the provision of the three accommodations required in the math and reading/language arts classes so these are the only ones addressed in this investigation.

The first accommodation required pre-testing for math tests to allow the student to demonstrate mastery and the to provide extension as appropriate on a weekly or bi-weekly basis. The 6th grade Math Teacher stated:

In January 2024, Mrs. Lenning, the Gifted Teacher at the time, approached me to discuss the possibility of accelerating Rue in math, allowing her to advance to high school Algebra I. Based on my observations of her performance up to that point, I did not believe this would be in her best interest. After discussion, we reached an agreement to pre-assess the student before each unit throughout the second semester. If she scored 90% or higher on the pre-assessment, she would engage in a project or a more challenging activity instead of completing the unit's standard coursework . . . At the end of the school year, we planned to evaluate the student's overall progress to determine if she could potentially skip a grade level or more in mathematics. Before each new unit, I provided the post-assessment to Mrs. Lenning, who administered it to the student as a pre-assessment. This approach allowed us to gauge the student's understanding of the material. Either Mrs. Lenning or I would grade the assessment and discuss the next steps. This process was followed for Units 8, 9, and 10 during the second semester. Each time, the student's pre-assessment scores fell within the 60-70% range, which we determined was not high enough to warrant acceleration. As a result, she continued following the class curriculum, participating in regular coursework. Occasionally, she attempted "challenge problems" when they were included in assignments. Upon completing the final exam, the student improved her score to the 90-100% range, which was consistent with other mathematically proficient students in my class . . . Throughout the semester in question, Mrs.

Lenning and I maintained ongoing communication, primarily in face-to-face discussions, as our classrooms were located next to each other.

The parent indicated she spoke to the 2023-24 Gifted Teacher regarding her concerns that the pre-testing was not being conducted. The Gifted Teacher then checked with the 6th grade Math Teacher who said the student hadn't passed any of the pre-tests. The parent reported that she and the Gifted Teacher were never provided with any data to support this assertion. The parent also stated, "The student was not aware that she had ever taken even one chapter pre-test, let alone one for each chapter that semester".

The 7th grade Math Teacher stated:

The student is currently enrolled in Foundations of Algebra, which is the advanced math placement class for 7th grade students. The student has a very strong foundation in general math concepts and her ability to use rational thinking when problem solving is above average. The student scored in the top one percent on both the Fall (243) and Winter (245) Fastbridge testing opportunities and her classroom performance is consistently in the 90-100% range. She is a copious note taker and always demonstrates using the necessary steps/formulas when needed. The curriculum within the Foundations class has provided an adequate challenge for the Student and her success is definitely a product of hard work.

An email dated August 27, 2024 written to the 7th grade Math Teacher by the 2024-25 Gifted Teacher indicates the student is to be pre-tested by taking the end-of-year test for Foundations of Algebra and the end-of-year test for Pre-Algebra in order to "get an idea of which skills she has already mastered and which skills she still needs to learn". The email indicates these tests can be administered in either the special education or general education setting and "Ideally she would take both no later than mid-week next week". The Math Teacher responded in an email dated the same day indicating "I don't have a preference for when you test the student. Let me know and I'll send her as needed". Interviews with both the parent and school staff found this pre-testing of the 7th grade math curriculum was not completed until mid-October and triggered the October 22, 2024 IEP Team Meeting to review and revise the IEP.

The second and third accommodations related to the student's reading and language arts classes. The second accommodation requires that when the student is given a writing assignment, the student "will be allowed to write more in depth or go beyond the rubric and/or chose a more advanced presentation method" in the general education setting "as needed" and noted the student "may require additional time to complete writing assignments". The third accommodation states that "When asked to read a novel of her choice, the student will be allowed to read a higher level book of her choice" on an "as needed" basis.

The 6th grade Language Arts Teacher stated:

The student's writing goal states that accommodations are to be provided "as needed." However, in practice, most conversations about accommodations revolved around offering extensions, which were generally left up to student choice or by her EL [Gifted] teacher. The student was always encouraged to write more than the expectation or in general. To add, the majority of assignments were ones she had never done before, this being her first class directed towards writing, speaking, listening, and critical thinking skills.

The 6th grade Reading Teacher reported that the student was permitted to select any book she desired for all reading assignments and completed a reading log for grading purposes. In addition, the student participated in two novel studies conducted in class and, while she was given the opportunity to read a different book as were the other gifted students, the student chose to read the classroom novel.

The 7th grade Language Arts Teacher reported the student chose the books that the whole class read for assignments. In addition, she provided copies of three grading rubrics and stated:

I use rubrics for formal paper assignments. My first paper is at a higher level for all students and part of the assignment is to be concise. The student is on the advanced level in Amplify [an online curriculum with a personalized learning path]. Assignments with worksheets will not have rubrics. I teach how to use higher level verbs through paper analysis.

Conclusion

In this case, interviews and documentation support a finding that the special education services for extended learning were provided during the time period between February 14, 2024 and October 21, 2024 as required by the student's IEP. Both parties acknowledged the required services were provided during the second semester of the 2023-24 school year and there is evidence the student received the required total of 540 minutes of special education extended learning service during the first semester of the 2024-25 school year.

However, interviews and documentation also show that the accommodations were not provided as required by the IEP. It appears that the math accommodation was provided during the second semester of 6th grade based on the detailed description from the 6th grade Math Teacher even though the student did not remember completing any assignment titled a "pre-test". However, during the first semester of the 7th grade, it appears that the pre-tests for math were designed as end-of-course tests or comprehensive course exams . The plain language of the accommodation calls for a frequency of "weekly or bi-weekly" which would not be the frequency these types of tests/exams would be given to students following the curriculum in the general education math class.

In regard to the writing and reading accommodations, the frequency was described "as needed". During the second semester of the 6th grade, it appears that these accommodations were provided to the student "as needed" as determined by the 6th grade Reading and Language Arts Teachers based on their detailed descriptions. Evidence shows the 7th grade Language Arts Teacher also determined and provided accommodations "as needed".

Based on the foregoing, the district is found to be OUT compliance in regards to implementing the student's IEP, specifically by not providing the math accommodation as required by the January 31, 2024 IEP during the first semester of the 2024-25 school year.

Issue Three

USD #348, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to implement the student's IEP dated October 22, 2024, specifically the accommodations, goals, and services, between October 22, 2024 and the current date.

Applicable Law

State regulations at K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(2)requires school districts to ensure that as soon as possible following the development of the IEP, special education and related services are made available to the child in accordance with the child's IEP.

Kansas statutes at K.S.A. 72-3430 require school districts to provide parents with prior written notice a reasonable time before they propose or refuse to initiate or change the identification, evaluation, or educational placement of the child or the provision of FAPE (free appropriate public education) to a child who has or is suspected of having a disability.

State regulations at K.A.R. 91-40-27(a)(3) require school districts to obtain parent consent before making a material change in services or a substantial change in placement. "Material change in services" is defined at K.A.R. 91-40-1(mm) as an increase or decrease of 25% or more of the frequency or duration of a special education service, related service, or supplementary aid or service specified in the child's IEP. "Substantial change in placement" is defined at K.A.R. 91-40-1(sss) as the movement of an exceptional child for more than 25% of the child's school day from a less restrictive environment to a more restrictive environment or from a more restrictive environment to a less restrictive environment.

The parent believes the LEA is failing to implement the student's most recent IEP developed on October 22, 2024. She indicated the student is not receiving the required special education extended learning instruction to address the IEP goals. In addition, the accommodations for reading and writing are still not being provided appropriately in the 7th grade language arts class.

The LEA again reported that the special education services are being provided to address the IEP goals as evidenced by the fact the student is making progress towards meeting all of them at this time. In addition, the accommodations are being provided in the language arts class as required by the IEP.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The following findings of fact are based upon interviews and record review.

The findings of Issue One and Two are incorporated herein by reference.

An IEP Team Meeting was held on October 22, 2024 with the parent in attendance. IEP team meeting notes kept by the parent and the LEA staff show the IEP team reviewed state and district assessments, progress towards the previous IEP's goals, and current information shared by both the parent and the student's teachers. Both sets of notes reflect updates to the IEP goals and accommodations. It is noted that the accommodation for math was removed and replaced with an accommodation to allow the student to take placement tests for language arts, science, and math to determine class assignment in 8th grade for the 2025-26 school year.

A prior written notice (PWN) dated November 13, 2024 was provided to the parent describing the proposed action as "Changed gifted pull-out minutes to 30 minutes one time a week; Changed her goals; and Updated her accommodations". The PWN explained these proposed changes were needed to reflect her current needs and schedule and were based on the Fastbridge and KAP scores, a review of grades, as well as input from the parent, student, and teachers. The PWN requested consent for a material change in services and a substantial change of placement and the parent signed the PWN electronically granting consent for the proposed changes on November 13, 2024.

During the parent interview and in an email dated February 28, 2025 written to the Investigator, the parent reported that she requested a copy of the October 22, 2024 IEP on November 11, 2024 because she had not yet received a copy. On November 13, 2024, she was provided with a copy of the IEP and PWN and was asked to sign and return the PWN, which she did on that same date.

When asked about her written consent for the material change of services and the substantial change of placement described in the PWN, the parent stated:

I am now very confused about this time change situation...I just re-read the PWN that they sent on Nov 13 for the IEP held on Oct 22. It states that her minutes were changed to 30 minutes to "fit her needs and her MS schedule." This was not discussed at the IEP meeting and the middle school class periods are 49 minutes long which is why we did the amendment in August to change her minutes to 49 minutes. So I apparently missed that on the PWN that they sent post-meeting? But it was not discussed at the meeting nor was I ever asked about it - as you could probably tell since I thought she was still getting the same # of minutes. I don't have any idea why that change was made.

IEP goal progress reports for the second quarter of the 2024-25 school year indicate the student is making progress towards both IEP goals.

The reading accommodation in the October 22, 2024 IEP requires that the student be allowed to read a higher level book of her choice when asked to read a novel of her choice for a novel study assignment.

The parent reported the 7th grade Language Arts Teacher failed to provide the reading accommodation in January 2025 when she assigned the student to study "junior level Shakespeare independently" and that her grades would be based on "writing papers" over the reading. The parent indicated the student was not given any choice in this novel study and she met with the school social worker and the Principal to resolve the situation.

The 7th grade Language Arts Teacher stated, "I tried to give her a higher level book to read because I thought it was desired by her mom. This was not welcomed".

Conclusion

In this case, the 7th grade Language Arts Teacher clearly misunderstood the IEP accommodation by assigning a novel study instead of allowing the student to make a choice to read a higher level book of her choice for the assignment.

In regard to the provision of the special education extended learning services, it is clear that the parent and the LEA have very different understandings of the amount of services that were to be provided to the student in the October 22, 2024 IEP. This is complicated by the fact that the IEP notes kept by both parties are mute to any discussion about changes in services and placement.

It is further complicated by the fact that a copy of the IEP and the PWN proposing the material change of services and the substantial change of placement was provided 22 days following the IEP Team Meeting, and then only provided as a result of a parent request for a copy of the IEP. The parent acknowledged that she signed the PWN but indicated that she did not fully review the copy of the IEP or the PWN because she thought the services remained the same as the August 27, 204 amendment and the changes to the goals and the accommodations discussed at the October 22, 2024 IEP Team Meeting had started immediately following the meeting.

Based on Interviews and documentation, there is evidence to support a finding that the LEA is OUT of compliance for both implementing the October 22, 2024 IEP, specifically the reading accommodation, as well as for not providing appropriate PWN to the parent following the October 22, 2024 IEP Team Meeting.

It is noted that because of the noncompliance with the requirements of PWN, the Investigator is unable to make a determination in regard to implementation of the IEP because it is unclear what services were supposed to be provided based on the discrepancy between the parent's strong belief the services were to remain the same as the August 27, 2024 IEP amendment and the PWN provided to the parent 22 days following the IEP Team Meeting.

Summary of Conclusions/Corrective Action

ISSUE ONE: Interviews and documentation support a finding that the district did not appropriately respond to the parent's request for an IEP team meeting in August 2024 when it agreed to amend the student's IEP without conducing an IEP Team Meeting on August 27, 2024 by failing to develop a written document amending the IEP showing the agreed upon changes. In addition, the agreed upon amendment changed the frequency the IEP services were to be provided to the student and the LEA failed to provide the parent with the appropriate PWN. Based on the foregoing, the district is determined to be OUT of compliance for both of these requirements.

CORRECTIVE ACTION:

1. The LEA will provide training to the Gifted Teacher regarding the IEP amendment process and required documentation required to be created and provided to the parent no later than June 30, 2024. The LEA will provide KSDE with the date of the training, the name of the trainer, and a copy of any handouts or presentation materials no later than one week following the date of the actual training.
2. No individual corrective action is required as documentation and interviews found the parent was in agreement with the changes agreed upon and the student's IEP was subsequently reviewed and revised again on October 22, 2024. Note that allegations of special education services being provided at the beginning of the school year are addressed in Issue Two.

ISSUE TWO: Interviews and documentation support a finding that the district did not provide the accommodation for pre-testing the student on a weekly or bi-weekly basis to determine mastery of math concepts and to provide extension as appropriate. Based on the foregoing, the district is found to be OUT compliance in regards to implementing the student's IEP as written during the between August 15 and October 21, 2024 and corrective action is required.

CORRECTIVE ACTION:

3. The LEA will provide training to the 7th and 8th grade general education teachers assigned to the student regarding the requirements to implement the IEP as written as well as training for how to implement accommodations in the general education setting. This training will occur no later than the first day of the 2025-s6 school year. The LEA will provide KSDE with the date of the training, the name of the trainer, a sign-in sheet signed by the participants showing the names and positions of each attendee, as well as copies of any handouts or presentation materials no later than one week following the date of the actual training.
4. Because of the noncompliance, the student was not provided with potential opportunities for extended learning opportunities in the area of math. The LEA will confer with the parent to identify at least two opportunities to participate in an extended learning opportunity in the area of math during the summer of 2025 at district expense no later than April 30, 2025. The parent may choose to accept one or none of these opportunities. The LEA will notify KSDE of the parent's decision no later than 10 days from the date of the decision. If an extended learning opportunity is accepted by the parent, the LEA will provide documentation of payment for the program to the KSDE no later than August 1, 2025.

ISSUE THREE: Interviews and documentation support a finding that the district did not implement the student's IEP in January 2025, specifically by not providing the reading accommodation required by the October 22, 2024 IEP. In addition, interviews and documentation support a finding that the LEA did not provide the parent with appropriate PWN following the October 22, 2024 IEP team which has resulted in multiple misunderstandings between the two parties as to what services are actually required to be provided to the student between October 22, 2024 through October 21, 2025. Based on the foregoing, the district is determined to be OUT of compliance with the requirements of the IDEA for these issues and corrective action is required.

CORRECTIVE ACTION:

5. Corrective action #3 will address the training that must be provided to the 7th grade Language Arts Teacher in regard to providing the accommodations required by the IEP.
6. The LEA will provide training to the Gifted Teacher regarding the appropriate provision of PWN and the required documentation no later than June 30, 2024. The LEA will provide KSDE with the date of the training, the name of the trainer, and a copy of any handouts or presentation materials no later than one week following the date of the actual training.
7. Because the noncompliance with the PWN caused the misunderstanding in regard to the required minutes of special education extended learning to be provided to the student, it is unclear whether the student was denied potential extended learning opportunities in reading and writing following the October 22, 2024 IEP Team Meeting. The LEA will confer with the parent to identify at least two opportunities to participate in an extended learning opportunity in the area of language arts during the summer of 2025 at district expense no later than April 30, 2025. The parent may choose to accept one or none of these opportunities. The LEA will notify KSDE of the parent's decision no later than 10 days from the date of the decision. If an extended learning opportunity is accepted by the parent, the LEA will provide documentation of payment for the program to the KSDE no later than August 1, 2025.
8. The LEA will reconvene the student's IEP Team no later than 20 days from the date of this report to discuss and determine the amount of special education extended learning services required to be provided in order to provide the student with a free appropriate public education (FAPE). At the end of the meeting, the LEA will describe the actions proposed or refused and explain the parent's rights in regard to consent contained in the Procedural Safeguards document. The LEA will provide the parent with appropriate PWN no later than two days following the date of the IEP Team Meeting. The LEA will provide KSDE with copies of the IEP Team Meeting notes and a copy of the PWN as documentation for correction of the noncompliance.

Background Information

The subject of this complaint is a young woman of 16 enrolled in the 11th grade at the high school during the 2024-2025 school year. She lives at home with her parents and two siblings. The student attended two years of full-time preschool prior to starting kindergarten at a district elementary school. The student's initial evaluation was May 11, 2017 identifying a Learning Disability as the primary exceptionality; her most recent evaluation was conducted on January 16, 2023.

The current IEP is dated March 7, 2024 and states that the student has a math and reading goal and qualifies for special education services in the general education setting for math, social studies and language arts, five days per week, for 45 minutes per day, every other week. The high school utilizes a block schedule which includes a particular class twice a week and then in the next week offers that same class three times, thus offering each class a total of five times in two weeks. There are five accommodations noted including; 1) a quiet, alternate setting for tests upon the student's request when given grade level test, 2) TTS (text-to-speech)/read aloud during grade level assignments/test when reading aloud to herself is not available or appropriate, 3) additional time to complete assignments/tests when expected to read lengthy text at grade level, 4) provide access to notes when required to take notes, and 5) allowed to read aloud to herself when given grade level assignments/tests. It is noted that the student had an annual IEP meeting during the investigation period on March 5, 2025.

Issues Investigated

Based on the written complaint and an interview with the complainant, two concerns which fall under the same IDEA regulations were identified and investigated.

Issue One

Did USD #402 implement the student's IEP specifically related to (1) the accommodations for testing, Text-to-Speech (TTS)/Read Aloud and (2) paraprofessional support as stated in the IEP?

(1) Accommodations for testing, the Text-to-Speech (TTS)/Read Aloud:

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.323(c)(2) requires school districts to ensure that as soon as possible following the development of the IEP, special education and related services are made available to the child in accordance with the child's IEP. K.A.R. §91-40-16(b)(2) further specifies those services for which written consent has been granted as specified by law are implemented not later than 10 school days after parental consent is granted unless reasonable justification for a delay can be shown.

Parent Position

The parents stated in their complaint that, "On March 2nd [student] informed us that she had not received a copy of her Chemistry or Math notes since the beginning of the current semester." Additionally, the complaint states that the "[high school] has not provided paraprofessional support in math class since late October and Social Studies since January."

District Position

In the district response dated March 14, 2025 states that, "[student's] teachers all state that notes were provided by being posted to google classroom or at the end of class when [student] asked for them". Related to the lack of paraprofessional support the district response asserts that, "The IEP indicates "special education services" not "para support"...Starting in January, and per parent request, [student] was moved to a different math teacher. The parents were told that there was no available paraeducator in this class, however, the teacher is a highly qualified math teacher and a certified special education teacher. The parents still requested the change even knowing this information. Despite this, [student] still received equal to or more time in service for specialized instruction than was noted in her IEP as she had access to [second semester math teacher] instruction both in class and during ACE period (45 minutes daily)."

Accommodations

1. The student's IEP dated March 7, 2024 states that she will receive the following five accommodations; 1) a quiet, alternate setting for tests upon request when given grade level test, 2) TTS/read aloud during grade level assignments/test when read aloud to herself is not available or appropriate, 3) additional time to complete assignments/tests when expected to read lengthy text at grade level, 4) provide access to notes when required to take notes, and 5) allowed to read aloud to herself when given grade level assignments/tests.
2. The parent's complaint states that on August 26, 2024 the student was told that she was responsible to find her own alternate setting for the chemistry test and the read-aloud option was not accessible because the test was online and the auto-reader was disabled.
3. According to the parent's complaint, the mother met with the principal over the phone on August 29, 2024 to talk about her concerns related to the chemistry test and lack of a read-aloud option. As a result of this call a meeting with the student's teachers was scheduled to ensure all of the teachers were aware of the student's accommodations.
4. The meeting took place on Friday, September 6, with the principal, general education teachers and the student's IEP teacher in attendance. The parent's complaint states, "During the meeting, we reviewed [student's] accommodations, and the agreed-upon plan was for [student] to notify her advisor when tests were approaching. If her teachers were unavailable that day, she would seek assistance from the principal. When we expressed concerns about similar issues arising in the future, we were assured that this was an isolated incident and would not happen again. [Student] has been able to arrange for her scheduled tests, but for pop up quizzes is often running around in the morning in order to schedule a room. We also used this meeting to clarify any accommodations in [student's] IEP that the teachers might have questions about. None were raised at the time. However, in the weeks following the meeting, [student] did not receive copies of class notes from her Chemistry, Math, and Social Studies teachers. The Chemistry teacher did allow [student] to take pictures of her notes, but [student] found them unhelpful, as they lacked context after classroom discussions. The Math teacher was not providing anything. The Social Studies teacher uploaded his presentation slides, but they were not structured as comprehensive class notes". There are no notes available for the meeting.
5. The parent complaint states, "On September 24, [mother] met with the superintendent to discuss our ongoing concerns. I suggested providing more training for teachers on the importance of implementing IEP accommodations. He agreed to reach out to [assistant director] to discuss next steps. I followed up with [assistant director] via email on October 8 to seek clarification on [student's] accommodations and discuss possible solutions. When we spoke on October 9, she informed me about an upcoming training she had arranged after speaking with [superintendent]". The mother followed up again on October 23, and [assistant director] reported that she had conducted teacher training on October 21, 2024.

6. The district shared the teacher attendance log for October 21, 2024 staff training which confirms the attendance of 42 staff including all but one of the student's teachers. In the March 25, 2025 staff interviews, the director clarified that actually all staff had attended the training, but one of the student's teachers had failed to sign the attendance sheet.
7. The October 21, 2024 training handout reflects general information on IDEA, and the IEP process including a paragraph on supplementary aids and services. There was no specific student information included in this training.
8. The parent complaint states, "On November 13, [father] met with [principal] regarding the continued lack of notes in [student's] classes. During the meeting, [principal] stated that the [first semester math teacher] was doing her best and that he would speak with the teachers again about ensuring accommodations were met. He also requested that [student] begin emailing her teachers, CC'ing both principals, whenever an accommodation listed in her IEP was not provided. Additionally, he planned to speak with [first semester math teacher] about our concerns".
9. The parent complaint states, "On November 15, [parents] received an email from [first semester math teacher] stated that she was learning a new textbook and was trying to determine how to provide [student] with the corresponding Google Slides. [First semester math teacher] began posting incomplete Google Slides in Google Classroom. These slides were intended for in-class discussions, where students filled in missing information provided by the teacher—information [student] could not access afterward. We discussed where they were in the textbook, and I explained the purpose of [student] receiving class notes. I did not receive a response to my email".
10. The parent complaint states, "On November 18, [student] emailed [chemistry teacher] requesting a copy of the class notes. On November 20, [chemistry teacher] pulled [student] aside and asked why she had included the principals in her email. [Student] explained that she had been directed to do so. [Chemistry teacher] was the only teacher to begin consistently providing class notes at that time."
11. The parent complaint states, "On December 11, [student] informed us that her social studies teacher had announced to the class that he would no longer be posting his Google Slides in Google Classroom unless a student had an IEP, in which case the materials would be assigned separately".
12. The parent complaint states, "On March 2, [student] informed us that she had not received a copy of her Chemistry or Math notes since the beginning of the current semester."
13. In the staff interview on March 26, 2025 both the chemistry and math teachers were adamant that they had provided notes since the beginning of the second semester; they offered examples of these notes and how the student could have accessed them. These teachers also shared that they are now also sharing the notes with the mother.

14. The district response stated, "When talking to parents, one of the issues is the definition of "notes". The parents do not feel google slides or PowerPoint notes are comprehensive enough to meet the definition of notes. They want the notes to show examples of how to work the problems or examples of how to break down and chunk the new learning material. While those are conversations that took place at the IEP meeting in March 2025, there is no specificity in the accommodation of what has to be included in the notes and teachers still have autonomy to determine what to include in their notes".

Conclusion: Accommodations

The parents have been strong advocates for the student's accommodations in particular the availability of class notes. There are documented conversations with the principal on August 29, 2024 to which the school responded with a staff meeting on September 6, 2024 to clarify with staff the student's testing and other accommodations.

The parents report that some teachers were still inconsistent in their provision of notes in the weeks after the September 6, 2024 meeting. The mother met with the superintendent on September 24, 2024 to discuss the student's accommodations which the district responded to by conducting staff training focused on the IEP process provided by the interlocal on October 21, 2024.

The father met with the principal on November 13, 2024 to discuss the continued lack of notes in one of the student's classes. The district responded by speaking with the teacher who then posted notes, although considered incomplete by the parents. The parents attempted to clarify with the teacher what type of notes would be most helpful but did not receive a response to their email.

On March 2, 2025 the student reported to her parents that she had not received a copy of her chemistry or math notes since the beginning of the semester, an assertion strongly denied by both teachers.

The district response states that the teacher's interpretation of what they are required to provide the student and what the parents and student finds helpful, are not aligned. The response also shares that, "[student's teachers all state that notes were provided by being posted to google classroom or at the end of class when [student] asked for them". The IEP states that the student will have access to notes when the class is required to take notes, but does not specify what is meant by "notes".

Based on the foregoing, it is found that the district provided the student's accommodations through the provision of some type of class notes and were responsive to the parent's concerns. The district is IN compliance and no corrective actions are required.

This lack of alignment about what the word "notes" means in this student's IEP should be discussed and clarified at an IEP meeting to prevent further similar disputes. The IEP clarification should address not only what the word "notes" means, but also what "access to" means. In the alternative, the IEP team may choose to revise this provision completely, with parent consent.

(2) Paraprofessional support as stated in the IEP?

Analysis: Findings of Fact

Paraprofessional support:

1. The student's IEP dated March 7, 2024 states that she will receive 45 minutes of special education support in the general education setting for math, social studies and language arts. This special education support is to be provided five days per week, for 45 minutes per day, every other week.
2. The parent's complaint reports that the student "has not had a paraprofessional in her classes since late October".
3. The Time in Service document shared by the district on March 11, 2025 states: "[student's] IEP indicates 45 minutes each for reading, math and social studies. She received her full minutes in each of these classes until November 12, 2024. After this date, the para assigned to her math class was no longer employed by the Interlocal. [High school] utilizes a block schedule so she would have missed:
    a. November 12, 2024-December 20, 2024 (math class only):
        i. 5 days x 45 min. of no support in the general education classroom = 225 minutes missed.
        ii. 2 days x 45 min. of support with [advisor] to take a test = 0 minutes missed.
4. The district response states, "While the district acknowledges a brief time from November to December of no paraeducator support in the math class, the district feels that other strategies and options were utilized to help support [student] during that time to help her find success in her advanced level classes". However, in the interview with the IEP teacher on March 27, 2025 she reported that there were no efforts made in the first semester to make up the minutes missed in the IEP because they were hoping to quickly hire a paraprofessional for that classroom.
5. The parent's complaint reports that, "In January, her math class was switched to a new teacher because the previous teacher was not meeting her accommodations. This resulted in a schedule change, which also removed her from the class where she had paraprofessional support in Social Studies. We were not notified of these changes in services until we received the annual meeting notice, at which time the IEP teacher also sent home a prior written notice form indicating a proposed change in services".
6. The PWN sent February 25, 2025 indicates a "substantial change in placement" and the description of the action proposed states, "[Student will have 90 minutes of special education services 5 days a week every other week per the [high school] block schedule. This is down from 135 minutes 5 days every other week". The explanation given for this proposed reduction states, "[Student] is losing 45 minutes of service time due to losing a para educator". The parents signed as not giving consent for this change on March 5, 2025. It is noted that the change in special education services occurred at the beginning of the semester on January 6, 2025, thus made prior to issuance of the PWN.

7. In the March 27, 2025 interview with the IEP teacher she shared that the PWN dated February 25, 2025 was sent due to the lack of paraprofessional support in the second semester math class. She went on to explain that the PWN indicated a change in placement rather than a change in service because the student was placed in a math classroom without paraprofessional support in the second semester.
8. In an email with the parents on March 11, 2025 the director shared her perspective on the special education support offered in lieu of paraprofessional support, "The discussion about para support should be clarified. Time in service on an IEP is not defined as "para support". Time in service on an IEP should be for specialized instruction, which, technically, can be provided by anyone certified and/or working under the supervision of a special educator. Sometimes, time in service helps support the accommodations but in [student]'s case, the accommodations are provided by the general education teachers or special education teachers (which is very appropriate). [student] is clearly very bright and is in advanced coursework. I'm curious to know what the paraeducator does in the classroom "live" that helps support her academic progress. The most qualified person to help [student] learn the content is going to be the highly qualified general education teacher and/or the special education teacher. [student] is going to her math teacher during ACE time to get "specialized instruction" from the highly qualified math teacher who is the expert on the content and much more equipped to help [student] breakdown the problem into manageable steps. She would also have the option of going to one of the special education teachers to get specialized instruction during ACE or she could receive that during a resource hour. This would truly allow her to learn the skills needed to break down the material. I mention this only because the time in service was/is a point of concern for you as parents and I want to make sure that we are talking the same language".
9. The parent's complaint states that once they received the PWN filed February 25, 2025 noting a reduction in services, "we asked [student] about the services she had received this year. She reported that she has not had paraprofessional support in her Math or Social Studies classes".
10. During the student's interview on March 7, 2025 she confirmed that she no longer has paraprofessional support in math and social studies, but does in her reading class. Further, she reported that her current social studies course is a history class which "is a lot harder without a para; there is so much reading".
11. The mother shared in an email on March 26, 2025 that the parents were unaware that the changes to the student's schedule at the beginning of the spring semester impacted the paraprofessional support available to the student. She also shared they did not sign any type of consent for this change in how support was offered. She stated, "In all of our discussions about what options [student] would have, no one mentioned that her support would change".
12. The Time in Service document shared by the district on March 11, 2025 states: "[student's] IEP indicates 45 minutes each for reading, math and social studies.
    a. January 6, 2025 – March 7, 2024 (math class only):

i. [Student]/her parents requested a teacher change at semester. This new teacher [2nd semester Math teacher] does not have a paraeducator assigned to the class, however, he is highly qualified as a math teacher and is a licensed special education teacher. This was a parent/student request, and one made knowing there was no accessibility of a para with this schedule, however, [student] utilizes Academic, Clubs and Educational Opportunities (ACE) time to go to [2nd semester Math teacher] and receive a breakdown of the instruction (specialized instruction).

b. There have been 18 A days in the second semester and 2 of those days [student] went to [advisor's] room to take a test.

c. Additionally, [student] has visited [2nd semester Math teacher's] room during ACE time 18 times and she was there for the entire 45 minute duration of the ACE period (2nd period).

d. [Student] did not miss any other minutes for any other classes.

13. The high school student handbook for 20204-2025 states that "The purpose of ACE is to serve as a remediation, extension and enrichment for the educational programs of [High School]. It will primarily be used for makeup work, tutoring, and homework. Teachers assume the role of a mentor for students in their class. Teachers and students should view ACE as an opportunity to further enhance classroom instructions as well as build a relationship with an adult in the high school. The focus of ACE is to reduce the amount of incomplete work for students to be successful in completing all coursework."

14. In a March 13, 2025 email from the mother, [Student] has gone to her teachers during ACE, but she's using this study hall class in the same way her other non-identified peers are using it. She is going in for extra help on the concept and she also doesn't go into that class [ACE] every day".

15. In a March 14, 2025 email exchange between the mother and investigator the mother shared, "This is the first time they have brought up using ACE as a substitution for the para support". Additionally, the mother stated, "ACE has been helpful for the questions that I can't help her answer, but it hasn't been enough. [Student] said she isn't the only one getting the help and often doesn't get through all of her questions because there are other kids working with the math teacher. There are days when the math teacher isn't available due to club or staff meetings. She also has to use that time for other classes. When she had a para in class she could talk through the problems or would work in small groups to talk about the practice problems. Without that, she does take longer to get through the work. When she gets lost in the lecture, she was able to ask a para to help her get back on track while the teacher is still instructing. [Student] said she felt like she would leave class with a better understanding of the concepts because of the para support".

16. In the district interview on March 25, 2025 the district emphasized that during ACE the student has access to all of her core general education teachers and all three of the special education teachers.

17. The current IEP does not note the use of ACE as a special education support.
18. In the IEP teacher's phone interview on March 27, 2025 she clarified that the student has received the same minutes of ACE regardless of whether she had paraprofessional support, meaning that her minutes of access to ACE do not offset the lost minutes of special education services via paraprofessional support. She also shared that the student is currently getting a D in her math class.
19. In a phone interview March 28, 2025 with the history teacher he shared that there was not a paraprofessional assigned to his room until after the March 7, 2025 he believed as a result of the March 5th 2025 IEP meeting. Prior to March 7, he was in frequent communication with a paraprofessional who helped the student if she requested help and who frequently checked in with the student. He also reported that the student is currently receiving an A and rarely visits him during the ACE period for extra support.
20. The director shared the paraprofessional's log for the student's history class which showed that the student has been in attendance for 16 class periods from January 6, 2025 through March 7, 2025. The paraprofessional was available to the student for 11 of these class periods. Two of the missed days the paraprofessional was unaware that she was to support the student, two days the paraprofessional was ill and one day she was giving a test in a different class.
21. When clarifying with the history teacher in a March 31, 2025 email in regards to the paraprofessional's log of support, he confirmed the dates of available support shared in the paraprofessional's log from January 6 through March 7, 2025.
22. In clarifying with the math teacher in a March 31, 2025 email he shared that he was not asked or provided individualized instruction beyond what he would offer any student.

Conclusion: Paraprofessional support:

There were no minutes of special education services provided from November 12, 2024 to December 20, 2024 due to the loss of a paraprofessional in the student's math class. The district did not offer a replacement strategy for these lost minutes of support.

There were no minutes of special education services provided from January 6 through March 7, 2025 in the student's math classroom due to a change in the student's second semester schedule which placed her in a class with no paraprofessional availability. This change in schedule placed the student in a math class with a teacher whom the student had previously and is a certified special education teacher. Neither the parents or district were able to produce documentation that the parents had been notified or agreed to the lack of paraprofessional support as a result of the schedule change prior to the change on January 6, 2025. A PWN was not issued until February 25, 2025 notifying the parents of this change.

Additionally, the schedule change also placed the student in a history class that did not have ongoing paraprofessional available, however the school ensured there was a paraprofessional available to check in with the student and offer support as requested by the student. The paraprofessional was not available to support the student for four of the 15 class periods from the beginning of the semester to March 7, 2025 when the district scheduled a consistent paraprofessional in the classroom. It is also noted that the student is earning an A in this class.

It is true, as the district response states, that the IEP does not specifically define special education support as paraprofessional time. However, the PWN issued on February 25, 2025 states "[Student] is losing 45 minutes of service time due to losing a para educator". This PWN reflects the district's own definition of special education services as paraprofessional support for this student.

The district's assertion that ACE is a replacement for special education service is not appropriate in light of IDEA's definition of special education including, 300.39(a)(1) "Special education means specially designed instruction to meet the unique needs of a child with a disability", and "Specially designed instruction means "adapting, as appropriate to the needs of an eligible child under this part, the content, methodology, or delivery of instruction--(i) To address the unique needs of the child that result from the child's disability; and (ii) To ensure access of the child to the general curriculum, so that the child can meet the educational standards within the jurisdiction of the public agency that apply to all children [34 C.F.R. 300.39(b)(3)]."

The availability of the math teacher to be consulted with during study hall does not meet the definition of specially designed instruction. The math teacher stated that he has not been asked to, nor does he provide individualized services through adaptation or specialization of instruction beyond what he would do for any of his students. Additionally, the student's access to ACE has been consistent, meaning the loss of special education services was not offset by an increase in ACE time. At no point in the first or second semesters when there was a loss of paraeducator time in math, were these lost minutes of special education services offset by increases in other methods of special education service.

Based on the foregoing, it is found that although there were four days of missed special education services delivered by the paraprofessional in the student's history class, the student is not experiencing material harm as evidenced by her grade. No corrective action is ordered for the missing services in history. However, the student did not receive 225 minutes of special education services for math as required by the IEP from November 12, 2024 through December 20, 2024. Additionally, the student did not receive 720 minutes of special education services for math from January 6 through March 7, 2025. Therefore the district is found to be OUT of compliance with IDEA regulations for the missing special education services in her math class.

1. ISSUE ONE: A violation of 34 C.F.R. §300.323(c)(2) and K.A.R. §91-40-16(b)(2) was found based on the lack of accommodations and paraprofessional support as required by the IEP during the 2024-20205 school year. Corrective action is required.
    a. USD #402 shall reconvene the student's IEP team and will offer a minimum of 945 minutes of special education services for math in the general education setting as described in the March 6, 2024 IEP as compensatory services for failing to implement the student's IEP during the 2024-25 school year.

b. USD #402 shall provide SETS with a copy of the written plan for providing the compensatory services offered and the parents' decision on whether to accept the offer, in whole or in part, no later than 10 days from the date of the IEP team meeting.

Background Information

This investigation involved a ten-year-old student who attends fifth grade at an Elementary School that is not the Student's neighborhood school. The Student has been diagnosed with Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder and Oppositional Defiant Disorder.

Findings of the Investigation

The following findings are based on a review of documentation and interviews with the Parent and staff in the District.

1. The GEI Coordinator stated the Student was having behavior difficulties and was referred to the GEI team to help with interventions that would help them be more successful in school.
2. A General Education Intervention Referral Plan (GEI Referral Plan) dated August 13, 2024 indicated a goal of, "By November 19th, [the Student] will use a calming strategy when [the Student] is escalated 50% of the time as evidenced by [their] behavioral chart." According to Behavior Plan Meeting notes dated October 9, 2024, the team decided to implement for the Student breaks, Check In & Check Out, a behavior chart and reward system, a science class modification, and a Crisis Plan.
3. The Parent stated there were "many plans put in place", and perceived the plans were always changing and inconsistent. The Parent indicated the Student's behavior plan charts also changed, and stated there were two or three versions. The Parent stated the Student reviewed their behavior chart with an adult every day, during check-in/check-out. The Parent stated that the GEI plan was inconsistent, and that sometimes the Student reported the staff had forgotten to give them a break or had denied them a break.
4. The GEI Coordinator said, "… when a student is referred for GEI, we … put them on the calendar and then we meet officially as a GEI team and we like to have at least four to six weeks of intervention to see if whatever the team has come up with is working or not. And then when you meet again, if it is successful, then we just continue on with the plan. If it is not being as successful as we would like, then we come up with a different intervention to try to help the student be more successful at that time." They stated that in general, the GEI team preferred to do at least two or three cycles of interventions before referring for special education evaluation.
5. According to discipline referrals ranging from September 6, 2024, through February 10, 2025, the Student was suspended for fighting, harassment/ bullying, insubordination, obscene behavior, disruptive behavior, and vandalism. The Student received six short-term suspensions and 23 major and minor referrals.
6. An email exchange between the Principal and the Case Manager dated September 27, 2024 indicated the Other Parent suggested the Student not go to specials because the Student continued to have issues in music and science.
7. An email exchange between the Principal and the Case Manager dated October 18, 2024 indicated the Other Parent would like to have the Student, "start fresh each day," meaning the Student would not review their think sheet from the previous day.

8. During an email exchange between the Principal and the Case Manager dated December 2, 2024 the Principal requested the Case Manager attend a meeting with the Parent to "start working on the 504."
9. Daily Point Sheets with date ranges from November 1, 2024 through December 10, 2024 indicated behaviors noted were cussing, rudeness, leaving class without permission, throwing chairs, earning 140 points out of 290 points, 48% on December 9, 2024. On December 10, 2024 the Student earned 89 out of 290 points.
10. A GEI Referral Plan was developed for the Student on November 6, 2024, indicating the Student was on a Tier 2 Plan ending on May 23, 2025. The plan stated the Student was absent 37.5 days from August through February. No year was indicated. There were no math, reading, writing, or speech concerns at the time.

    Student strengths were the following:

    a. Able to focus.
    b. Excels at Mathematics.
    c. Enjoys taking part in class discussions.
    d. Helps others with their math.
    e. Likes to work problems on the board.
    f. Likes to volunteer to walk through the questions as a class.
    g. Likes to read aloud when able.

    The area of concern was for behavior. Behaviors noted were:

    a. Following directions/expectations.
    b. Emotion regulation.
    c. Social Skills.
    d. Self-regulation.
    e. Externalizing behavior (elopement, aggression, inappropriate language, non-compliance).

    Documented concerns noted the Student was easily triggered. "[The Student] enters the classroom in a heightened emotional state (not always negative) and has a difficult time regulating [their] emotions. … emotions are amplified when we transition to S.T.E.M. or Music class. [The Student] has particular feelings towards those subjects and the teachers involved, and refused to show respect to them, their classrooms, or focus on what [the Student] simply needs to do for [themself]." The Student gets physical with things in the classroom. The Student "gets extremely verbal and colorful with [their] word choice, often times leaning towards the F word and disrespecting other teachers and administration with not kind names."

    The team used a behavioral chart with the Student and recorded Student incidents. Incidents were also reported in Synergy. Interventions were implemented for a minimum of 3 weeks. Interventions used were calming strategies and instruction. The Goal stated, "By January 16th, [the Student] will use a calming strategy when escalated 50% of the time. Sessions were for 30 minutes one time a week, starting November 6, 2024. The baseline score was 25%. An accommodation/modification listed was, "[The Student] will go to the SPED teacher for whole group social skills lesson."

The Parents requested a comprehensive evaluation for the Student. The General Education Intervention (GEI) Team recommended moving forward with the request. The team recommended referring the Student for a comprehensive evaluation and continuing the intervention progress monitoring.

11. In an email exchange between the Principal and a Behavioral Consultant dated November 15, 2024, the Behavior Consultant after observing the Student suggested:
    a. "Have [the Student] obtain unconditional connection time with staff."
    b. "Do not get into power struggles."
    c. "Give [the Student] scheduled breaks that are gross motor in nature."
    d. "Have [the Student] use a self-monitoring tool."
12. According to the District General Education Intervention Guide, "the GEI Team can consider a special education referral if they have tried at least two rounds of GEI providing evidence-based interventions with fidelity and the student did not show adequate progress. … A parent can request a special education evaluation. The GEI Team should consider the parent's concern and review the GEI documentation. If there is a concern the student has a disability, the GEI process does not need to be completed prior to an evaluation."
13. Parent concerns dated December 4, 2024 noted, "[The Student] is behind academically due to behavior." The Parent felt the Student was triggered when the Student struggled academically. The Other Parent was concerned that the Student sleeps too often, stating that 90% of the Student's problems are the Student sleeping in class and waking up agitated. The Other Parent wanted the plan to continue in middle school.
14. According to an email exchange between the Assistant Principal and the Instructional Coach dated December 4, 2024, the Student has "great days vs. suspensions-there is no middle." The Parent requested a bag of candy be used with the Student to reward good behavior.
15. A Prior Written Notice (PWN) for Evaluation or Reevaluation and Request for Consent dated December 12, 2024 indicated the District proposed to conduct an initial evaluation. The Parent signed the consent for evaluation on December 12, 2024.
16. On January 23, 2025, a GEI Plan indicated the Student was not able to self-regulate 50% of the time. The performance goal was changed to "By March 27th, [the Student] will self-regulate 50% of the time." The Student does try to calm themself, but it doesn't last. The classroom teacher provided breaks for the Student; however, the Student had been refusing to go.

17. In an email exchange dated February 6, 2025, the School Psychologist emailed the Parent regarding a meeting for a Manifestation Determination Review for the Student.
18. According to a Manifestation Determination Review dated February 11, 2025, which the Parents were notified about on February 6, 2025, the Student had been removed from school for more than 10 consecutive days in a row. The conduct in question was caused by, or had a direct and substantial relationship to, the Student's disability. The IEP/504 Team determined the misconduct was a manifestation of the Student's disability.
19. During an email exchange between the Case Manager and the School Psychologist, dated February 14, 2025, the Parent shared they wanted the assessment completed so the Student can be supported in Middle School. The School Psychologist replied, "I believe we have enough data already gathered to determine eligibility."
20. On February 19, 2025, the Parent withdrew the Student from the Elementary School to be home-schooled.
21. An email exchange between the Case Manager and the District indicated the Parent requested to have the Student dropped on February 27, 2025. The Parent wanted to continue with determining eligibility for special education for the Student. The Parent agreed to waive the ten-day notice of meeting, and an eligibility determination meeting was set up for March 5, 2025.
22. The Attorney for the District said that the Student's evaluation was finished on February 21, 2025, and the evaluation staff determined the Student's eligibility on March 5, 2025.
    a. In an email dated February 20, 2025, one of the Student's teachers wrote, "Parents agreed that they wished the evaluation to continue and testing has been arranged for tomorrow … to complete testing. Then an eligibility meeting will be held soon after."
23. A Notice of Meeting dated March 3, 2025, indicated a meeting to determine if the Student was eligible for special education and related services and if needed, an individualized educational program (IEP) be developed for the Student and appropriate placement determined.The Case Manager requested two meetings to discuss what services for the Student would look like for the remainder of the year.
24. An Evaluation Report dated March 4, 2025 indicated that this was a second initial comprehensive special education evaluation. The Parent reported that the Student was diagnosed with Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD) and Oppositional Defiant Disorder (ODD). The Student recently transitioned to home-schooling. The team determined the Student qualified as a student with a disability under the exceptionality of Other Health Impairment.

Positions of the Parties, Applicable Regulations, and Conclusions

Issue One

Whether USD #501, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to implement the Student's IEP. K.A.R. 91-40-16 (b)(3); 34 C. F. R. § 300.323.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-16 (b)(3) and 34 C. F. R. § 300.323, an IEP must be in effect for each exceptional child at the beginning of each school year.

The Parent alleged that the District was "not following [the Student's] plan that was in place."

The District stated they made a good faith effort to address the Student's educational needs through the Student Intervention Plan Process. When that was not successful, the District proceeded to request a special education evaluation. The District stated there was no evidence to show that they failed to implement the Student's General Education Plan.

The Student was referred to the GEI team for behavioral interventions, and had a General Education Intervention Referral Plan dated August 13, 2024. Behavior Plan Meeting notes dated October 9, 2024 detailed strategies to help the Student. The Parent reported that the Student's GEI plan, behavior plans and charts were inconsistently followed and frequently changed. The GEI Coordinator said they preferred to have at least four to six weeks of intervention to determine the success of a plan, and to try two or three intervention cycles before considering a special education evaluation.

From September 6, 2024 through February 10, 2025, the Student received six short-term suspensions and 23 major and minor referrals. One of the Parents suggested the Student avoid specials due to issues in music and science, and that the Student no longer review their think sheet from the previous day. On December 2, 2024, the Principal emailed the Case Manager requesting their attendance at a meeting with the Parent to begin working on the 504. Daily Point Sheets from November 1, 2024 through December 10, 2024 indicated negative behaviors the Student had displayed.

A GEI Referral Plan was developed for the Student on November 6, 2024, and listed Student strengths and behavior concerns. On November 15, 2024, the Behavior Consultant made recommendations to the Principal after observing the Student. According to the District General Education Intervention Guide, typically, two rounds of effective GEI are needed before a special education referral for lack of progress; however, a parent's request or a team concern about a disability allows for an evaluation without completing the GEI process.

On December 4, 2024, the Parents requested a comprehensive evaluation for the Student. The GEI Team recommended proceeding with the evaluation. A PWN for Evaluation or Reevaluation and Request for Consent dated December 12, 2024 indicated the District proposed to conduct an initial evaluation. The Parent signed the consent for evaluation on December 12, 2024. On February 14, 2025, the School Psychologist shared via email that the Parent still wanted the assessment completed. The Student's assessments were finished on February 21, 2025 and an eligibility meeting was held on March 5, 2025. The evaluation and meeting were completed within 47 school days, meeting the 60-day deadline.

On January 23, 2025, a GEI Plan indicated the Student was not able to self-regulate 50% of the time and a performance goal was changed. A Manifestation Determination Review was held on February 11, 2025. On February 19, 2025, the Parent withdrew the Student from the School. An Evaluation Report dated March 4, 2025 stated that the Student qualified as a student with a disability under the exceptionality of Other Health Impairment.

After reviewing documentation and from interviews with the Parent and District staff, it was determined that the Student did not have an IEP during the complaint range. Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the District failed to implement the Student's IEP in accordance with K.A.R. 91-40-16 (b)(3).; 34 C. F. R. § 300.323.

Background Information

This investigation involved a 15-year-old, ninth-grade student enrolled at a high school in the District. The Student is not currently receiving special education or related services as a child with a disability per the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA). According to the Parent, the Student was evaluated for preschool special education at age three, diagnosed with Attention Deficit/Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD) and "suspected" Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD) Level 1 at age four, and participated in a program focused on developing social-emotional skills for preschoolers for three years. The Student continued receiving special education services through kindergarten and then transitioned to a 504 Plan at private religious schools through eighth grade. The Student was formally medically diagnosed with ASD Level 1 at age eight.

Findings of the Investigation

The following findings are based on a review of documentation and interviews with the Parent and staff in the District.

1. A Private School Student Support Plan dated September 21, 2023 outlined the following for the Student:
    a. Medical diagnoses of ADHD and Autism and current medications.
    b. Documentation of eligibility: "The student has a physical or mental disability which substantially limits one or more major life activities and requires minor adjustments in the classroom."
    c. Area of need: "Adaptations to Assignments and Instruction"
        i. "Minor Adjustments:"
            1. Participation in the enrichment program twice monthly;
            2. Breaking up long-term assignments into interim due dates communicated to the Parents; and
            3. An extra set of books provided at home.
    d. Area of need: "Assessments"
        i. "Minor Adjustments:"
            1. "The opportunity to test in a separate, quiet location, if needed (summative and standard)." (D37-D39)
2. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the School Psychologist stated the Parent called them in January 2024 and told them the Student was planning to attend public school in the fall, and had a 504 plan. They stated the Parent wanted to know how public school accommodations compared to the Private School. The School Psychologist said they talked to the Parent again in April 2024, when they requested a special education evaluation. They stated they met the Student in May 2024, when they started testing for the evaluation. (School Psychologist Interview, P1, 00:57) The School Psychologist indicated the Parent did not ask for an evaluation in January 2024. (School Psychologist Interview, P1, 02:12) The School Psychologist stated that in January 2024, they told the Parent the School would continue with the services on the Student's 504 plan. (School Psychologist Interview, P2, 03:46)

3. The Parent stated when they spoke to the School Psychologist in January 2024, the School Psychologist told them they could wait closer to the end of the semester to start an evaluation. The Parent said, "… they started the evaluation at the end of May, I believe May 20th and May 30th [2024] were the two days that they evaluated [the Student]. Any other evaluations that were done were just observations … . There was nothing else that was done after that. We received the evaluation report on September 24th [2024]. Our 60 [school] day window … was supposed to have been September 25th [2024].(Parent Interview, P6, 13:00)
4. According to a District enrollment report, the Student enrolled for a "special education evaluation" on April 10, 2024, and then as a student at a high school from August 13, 2024 through November 25, 2024. (D110)
5. On April 9, 2024, an Administrative Assistant to Student Services emailed the Parent on behalf of the counseling department, welcoming them to the School and identifying the Student's assigned counselor. They stated that the counselor was currently on leave, but would return in a few weeks, and an appointment would be scheduled for the Parent and Student to meet the counselor, choose classes, and tour the School. The Parent asked if the counselor would help coordinate 504 or IEP services, and the Administrative Assistant responded that those questions would be addressed in a meeting with the counselor, who was scheduled to return the last week of April [2024]. (P8)
6. On April 9 and April 10, 2024, the Parent and the School Psychologist exchanged emails about the Student.
    a. The Parent said they had contacted the School Psychologist a few weeks before to discuss the Student, who would attend as a ninth-grader the next school year. They said they were unable to meet with the Student's assigned counselor until they returned from leave, that the Student had an IEP that was dismissed in 2016, and had a private school 504 Plan since kindergarten. The Parent expressed that the Student was having a "really hard semester that included inpatient hospitalizations and five weeks of intensive outpatient therapy," so they wanted to ensure that support and a plan were in place for the next year.
    b. The School Psychologist replied that they would schedule a meeting once the Student's assigned counselor returned in two weeks since the Counselor was the only one who could access course scheduling for the Student.
    c. The Parent asked what needed to be done for testing for an IEP evaluation because they did not want the school year to end and the Student to be without accommodations the next school year.

d. The School Psychologist notified the Parent of the District's process for enrolling the Student for evaluation purposes. They also said the Private School teachers would be asked for input for the evaluation, and once school was out, they could schedule dates for the Student to be assessed by the School Psychologist. Also, once the Student's assigned high school counselor returned, the Student would be invited in to discuss their schedule and support. Finally, it was noted that they would plan an eligibility meeting within the first couple weeks of school as long as they had all the necessary data. (D246-D247)

7. A Request for Consent dated April 11, 2024 indicated that the District proposed to conduct an initial evaluation to determine the Student's eligibility and need for special education and related services. It listed a review of existing information in all areas and the collection of new data for social/emotional/behavioral status, general intelligence, academic performance, and transition skills. It was based on the Parent's request and medical diagnoses. The Parent signed it, giving consent, on April 11, 2024. (D239-D243, Parent Interview, P5, 12:06)

8. A Notice to Conduct a 504 Meeting dated April 11, 2024 listed a meeting at the School to discuss the need for a 504 evaluation scheduled for November 11, 2024 from 1:00 to 2:00 p.m. It was noted that the date was a placeholder to occur at the same date and time as the IEP to be determined. (D144)

9. On April 26, 2024, emails were exchanged between the School Psychologist and the Parent, scheduling evaluation testing with the Student on May 20, 2024. (D244)

10. On May 3, 2024, the Parent received an email from another District school psychologist assisting the School Psychologist with the Student's evaluation. They sent links for a behavior rating scale and questionnaire for the Parent to complete and asked for the email addresses of the Student's Private School teachers so that they could also submit completed rating scales. The Parent responded by sending three Private School teacher emails. (P10)

11. Between August 2, 2024 and August 6, 2024, emails were exchanged between the Parent and the School Psychologist. The Parent introduced the School Psychologist to the Student's Mental Health Case Manager and asked about the next steps for the Student regarding an IEP or 504 Plan. The School Psychologist replied with the following:

    a. The School would honor the Private School 504 Plan and immediately communicate the accommodations with the Student's teachers.

    b. The Student was enrolled in a "Career and Life Planning" course taught by an interventionist to support the Student with executive functioning, study strategies, and homework while in the IEP evaluation process.

    c. The Student's evaluation was due to be completed by September 25, 2024, meaning the team needed to meet on or before that date to review the completed testing and data collected from the Private School teachers. The School Psychologist added, "There is so much that has already been collected; the last piece is allowing [the Student] to adjust to [the School] with the support of the intervention class plus [their] accommodations to determine if even more support is needed."

d. They concluded by listing the Student's School Counselor and stating that the School Counselor would transfer the incoming 504 Plan information into the School information system and meet weekly with the Intervention Teacher and the School Psychologist to review and adjust support for the Student as needed. (D51-D53)

12. An August 8, 2024 District version of a 504 Accommodation Plan included the information from the September 21, 2023 Private School Support Plan regarding the Student's accommodations and indicated that the Student was in the District's special education evaluation process. (D86)
13. A School class schedule indicated the Student entered their classes on August 13, 2024 and left on September 25, 2024. (D69)
14. On August 16, 2024, the School Psychologist emailed the Parent, confirming that the 504 Plan had been distributed to the Student's teachers and that the Parent could access it via their online parent portal. They also stated that the Private School Psychologist was collecting information from the Student's previous teachers and would send it over once completed. (D54)
15. On August 22, 2024, the School Psychologist emailed the Parent, saying they had sent a release of information to allow communication with the Student's Mental Health Case Manager via the online parent portal. The Parent replied that they signed it. (D93)
16. An email exchange occurred from August 26, 2024 through August 28, 2024 between the Parent and the District School Psychologist:
    a. Monday, August 26, 2024: The Parent notified the School Psychologist that the Student was hospitalized with no discharge date and no anticipation of attending school that week. The Parent asked what they needed to do regarding academics.
    b. Monday, August 26, 2024: The School Psychologist informed the Parent they would connect with other staff and work with teachers to make a plan to catch the Student up upon their return to school. They said, "Focusing on getting well comes first," and asked for a good time to call the Parent.
    c. Wednesday, August 28, 2024: The Parent responded with times for a possible phone call and stated they hoped the Student would be discharged from the hospital on Friday. (D40-D41)
17. A Discharge Summary dated September 1, 2024 from the In-State Hospital indicated the Student had been admitted on August 24, 2024 and discharged on September 1, 2024. (D130)
18. In the Parent's written timeline for September 2024, it noted, "[The School Counselor] requested an extension for the IEP evaluation to allow more time for adjustment but never provided a consent via [the online parent portal]. [The Student] did not have a written safety plan, but [their] verbal safety plan included daily check-ins with a psychologist or counselor. On September 6, [2024], [the School Principal] contacted us, informing us that [the Student] made concerning statements, which were deemed a high-level safety threat. The School advised seeking a medical evaluation." According to the Parent, the Student was offered to have their Parents or the School Resource Officer (SRO) transport them to the hospital and the Student chose the SRO, who then handcuffed the Student and escorted them to a police car while the School was on lockdown. The Parent claimed they never received an incident report regarding these events. (P41-P43)

a. The Parent said,"They did request to extend [the Student's] evaluation. When I met with them [on] September 4th in the office, I did request that they send that in writing to us and we didn't ever receive that. (P42, Parent Interview, P3, 05:24) The Parent said a District administrator told them, "... that the [District], if they had extenuating circumstances, could extend the timeline without us signing consent." (Parent Interview, P13, 30:14)

b. The School Psychologist explained that they met with the Parent in September 2024 about possibly gathering more data and extending the evaluation period. They stated that due to an incident with the Student shortly after, a decision about the extension was not reached and the School Psychologist did not send the Parent any paperwork. (School Psychologist Interview, P4, 11:32) The School Psychologist explained that the offer of an extension was not due to concerns about a specific learning disability. (School Psychologist Interview, P4, 12:58)

19. On September 9, 2024, the School Psychologist emailed the Parent and asked if they could let the School know where the Student was staying and the next steps for them. They stated, "That will help us know how to coordinate from a school standpoint." (D57)

20. A Discharge Summary dated September 11, 2024 from the In-State Hospital indicated the Student had been admitted on September 6, 2024 and discharged on September 11, 2024. It was noted, "Discharge was somewhat complicated by placement, but after coordination with case worker, [the] patient was set to be transferred to a [Psychiatric Residential Treatment Facility] PRTF, [Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency] in [Another State]. [The] patient no longer requires inpatient treatment at the current level of care." (D124-D125)

21. On September 12, 2024, the Academic Coordinator for the Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency emailed the Parent asking for contact information for the School. The Parent replied with the School's phone number and contact information for the School Psychologist and the School Counselor. The Parent sent a follow-up email on September 13, 2024 asking if there were any issues setting the Student up on the District platform and asking when they'd start coursework. (P13)

22. Between September 17, 2024 and September 19, 2024, emails were exchanged between the Parent and the Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency's Academic Coordinator regarding the Student's educational services. The School Psychologist and the Counselor were also included as recipients of the emails.

a. September 17, 2024: The Parent asked if the Student logged on and resumed classes via the District platform, and if not, when would they start and what was needed to help facilitate the process. They also asked for copies of the testing done in May 2024 and what needed to be done in terms of paperwork. They wanted to know if the Student would continue with 504 accommodations or if they would need an "IEP placement" for the virtual platform.

b. September 17, 2024: The Academic Coordinator replied that they had not been able to connect with the School staff and asked the School Psychologist and the School Counselor for a good time to talk via phone.

c. September 17, 2024: The Parent asked if the Academic Coordinator had been in contact with anyone from the District and, if not, what was the anticipated timeline for the Student to start school and what was the Student currently doing during the "time allocated for school."

d. September 17, 2024: The Academic Coordinator responded that they had requested to speak with the School staff via phone the next day, and in the meantime, they had given educational packets to the Student to complete. However, the Student chose to work on "tennis shoe coloring sheets." They said, "We do have a computer assigned to [the Student] and [they] will attempt to log in tomorrow."

e. September 18, 2024: The School Psychologist replied to the emails stating that the District had been unaware that the Student was at the Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency and that the first thing they needed to do was get a signed release of information. They also informed the Parent that the District would coordinate with care providers when students were inpatient, even if they did not have 504 Plans or IEPs.

f. September 18, 2024: The Parent responded that they had signed District "consents" that morning and signed "consents" for the Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency on September 9 and September 11, 2024 (admission date). They also said they had given the Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency's Academic Coordinator the contact information for the District School Psychologist on September 12, 2024 and followed up via email on September 13 and September 17, 2024.

g. September 19, 2024: The Parent asked how things were going and if getting the Student's District laptop to them at the Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency made sense.

h. September 19, 2024: The School Psychologist answered that they had contacted the Academic Coordinator the day before regarding the Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency's educational setup. They said they were scheduled to meet with the School Principal that day to discuss the best way for the Student to access the curriculum and continue earning high school credit during their stay at the Agency. They said they would need to prioritize which courses were most important and consider how much classroom time the Student was scheduled each day.

i. September 19, 2024: The Parent said their priorities were algebra, English, and biology.

j. September 19, 2024: The School Psychologist responded that District leadership would be working on the best learning platform for the Student and the best way to complete the special education evaluation. They said the District had only learned of the Student's placement the day before and needed a few days to figure things out. They said they had talked with the Academic Coordinator and knew there were "many academic activities for students" at the Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency to engage in while they awaited a more tailored plan with their home school. They encouraged the Parent to contact the School Principal with any questions or concerns regarding the process and that someone would contact them as soon as they knew the next steps.

k. September 19, 2024: The Parent stated, "I am very upset that [the Student] has had 6.5 days of admission and there is no plan. I hope that [the Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency] is able to implement an interim plan because I do not think color sheets are appropriate. When can we expect to hear from the district with a time?" (D79-D84; P13-P15)

23. An Authorization to Disclose Health/Education Information dated September 18, 2024 proposed the disclosure and receipt of information between the District and the In-State Hospital. It identified the information to be shared as "any information regarding the diagnosis of and/or the services provided" to the Student from January 1, 2024 through January 1, 2025. The purpose was for special education evaluation and continuity of care. It was electronically signed and marked as "accepted" by the Parent on September 18, 2024. (D122-D123)

24. On September 20, 2024, the Parent emailed the School Principal asking what the "due process" was and the reasoning for it. The School Principal responded that upon the Student's return, the team would meet with them regarding the September 6, 2024 events. The Student would be allowed to share their perspective and comments and answer questions. This would serve as an informal due process hearing. They noted these meetings typically occurred immediately after an incident, but it was postponed due to concerns for the Student's mental health. ((D249-D250) The Parent said they were told that the Student could not attend School until they had met with the School Principal for an informal due process hearing. (Parent Interview, P8, 18:49)

In the Parent's written timeline for the same date, they noted, "[The School Principal] informed the family that [the Student] would be unenrolled from the school due to residency concerns effective September 23, [2024], as the school administration felt [the Student] was not meeting the 51% residency requirement to remain enrolled. … We requested district policy stating this requirement and said that we could bring [the Student] to school on [September 23, 2024] (during the allocated time for schoolwork at [the Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency]) until it was resolved. [The School Principal] stated that [they] would need to complete an informal due process hearing. The school decided to transfer [the Student] to [the Virtual Academy], and consent for enrollment was signed September 25, [2024]." (P42, Parent Interview, P4-5, 10:10)

25. On September 23, 2024, the Parent emailed the School Principal, asking for an update on the status of the Student's enrollment. They stated they had "not received notice of unenrollment, per District policy." They also asked for an update on the Student's IEP evaluation status and the "implementation of educational services" with an estimated timeline during the Student's stay at the Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency. The School Principal responded the same day, "Based on information we received from [the Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency] today, our district has approved enrolling [the Student] in [the Virtual Academy] in partnership with [the District]." They added that they, or another District administrator, would contact them within 48 hours with further enrollment information. (D72-D73, School Psychologist Interview, P7, 20:38)

26. The Assistant Superintendent of Special Education said that when it seemed like the Student was not returning to the School, their thoughts were to close out the file so the deadline was met, and for the School Psychologist to send the evaluation report. (School Psychologist Interview, P5, 15:57)

27. The Other Parent indicated the evaluation process was ongoing throughout the discussions about enrollment. (Parent Interview, P5, 11:25)

28. According to the Parent's written timeline, the Student experienced the following hospitalizations:

    a. September 23, 2024 through October 2, 2024: Admitted to the emergency room and transferred to the Out-of-State Hospital on September 24, 2024.
    b. October 5, 2024 through October 10, 2024: Admitted to the emergency room and transferred to the In-State Hospital.
    c. October 21, 2024 through November 14, 2024: Admitted to the Out-of-State Hospital for further treatment.

    The Parent also noted, "These hospitalizations were partly due to rumors circulating at [the School] about [the Student], stemming from a report by another [School] student who was admitted to the [Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency]." (P42)

29. A September 24, 2024 entry on the Special Education Contact Log indicated that the School Psychologist had responded to the Parent's September 23, 2024 email inquiring about the status of the IEP evaluation by saying, "I am going to send you a separate email with the draft of the special education evaluation report containing all the data collected thus far. … Please let me know what your upcoming availability is to talk through the evaluation – I'd be glad to review any of the assessment scores with you. We can also discuss a meeting date to officially determine eligibility as a team." It was also noted, "No response was ever received on this chain." (D256)

30. On September 26, 2024, the School Psychologist emailed an attachment of the Draft Evaluation Report to the Parent, and the Parent replied, "Thank you for sending this." In the Parent's written timeline, they acknowledged receiving the draft evaluation report on September 24, 2024. (D65, P43)
    a. The School Psychologist stated they could not determine a completion date for the evaluation because the eligibility meeting had not been held. (School Psychologist Interview, P4, 14:10)
    b. The Assistant Superintendent of Special Education said about the evaluation process, "But there's an exception that if the student's not made available to you, that then those days don't count towards the 60 [school] days. And so even though we had the document finished and the evaluation was ready to present to the parents, the Student wasn't available to us. … Even though we were ready to go, the timeline was frozen because we had no access to the kid." (School Psychologist Interview, P9, 26:52)
    c. The School Psychologist indicated that the Student's absences did not impact direct assessments for the evaluation. They also said they would have been able to complete eligibility statements with the information they had available, even though the Student was elsewhere. (School Psychologist Interview, P10, 31:14)
31. On September 26, 2024, emails were exchanged between the District administration and the Virtual Academy Academic Advisor. The District wanted to know if the Virtual Academy had contacted the Parent yet. The Academic Advisor stated that the Student's application for the Virtual Academy had been approved that morning, and as soon as they completed orientation, they would be enrolled in courses. They also acknowledged that the Student had a 504 Plan and was undergoing a special education evaluation. The Academic Advisor asked if any modifications were needed at the time. The Academic Advisor immediately followed up, stating they had contacted the Parent to ensure they understood the orientation requirement and were told the Student had been hospitalized the night before. The Parent asked the Academic Advisor for an extension as they anticipated discharge the following week. The District approved the extension on September 30, 2024. (D103-D105)
32. From September 27, 2024 through November 4, 2024, emails were exchanged between the School staff and the Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency staff regarding coordinating academic services for the Student.
    a. September 27, 2024: The School Psychologist stated the District was working to set the Student up in a Virtual Academy. However, when the Virtual Academy contacted the Parent, the Parent notified them that the Student had been admitted to the hospital and asked for an extension because they anticipated the Student's discharge sometime the next week. The School Psychologist said the Parent had not notified the District of any updates to a change of location or responded to offers to set up a meeting to review evaluation data. The School Psychologist asked if the Student was still at the Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency.

b. September 27, 2024: The Executive Director of the Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency replied, "We will need an extension for [the Student] to begin [their] virtual academy." They stated the Student had been transferred to an "acute setting" that Monday and would not be back at the Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency until the following week.

c. October 2, 2024: The School Psychologist responded, "We would like to schedule a phone call to coordinate whenever [the Student] is back at [the Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency] to make sure you have what you need from our team and that we have any updated information relevant to planning for [the Student's] educational needs when [they return] to [the District]."

d. November 1, 2024: The School Psychologist wrote, "Within the next few weeks, we anticipate meeting with [the Student's] family to discuss [their] special education evaluation that was in progress prior to [the Student's] stay at [the Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency]. In order to make recommendations regarding what [the Student] needs educationally, we will need the most updated information on [the Student's] progress and needs at this time in terms of both academics and social-emotional well[-]being."

e. November 4, 2024: The Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency's Academic Coordinator responded that the Student "refused to participate in anything educational."

f. November 4, 2024: The School Psychologist replied that the Virtual Academy had just contacted the School Principal, confirmed that the Student never started the online curriculum, and indicated that the Parent said the Student was hospitalized. The School Psychologist asked if the Student was presently at the Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency and if the District could have the Student's attendance dates at the Agency.

g. November 4, 2024: The Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency's Enrollment Director stated the Student was not currently a resident at their Agency and that they were discharged from their program on October 21, 2024.

h. November 4, 2024: The School Psychologist said the District was unaware the Student had been discharged and asked if the Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency could share any discharge paperwork, reports, or progress notes covered by the release of information so that the District could best support the Student's safety and well-being. (D58-D63)

33. On October 15, 2024, the Virtual Academy's Academic Advisor emailed the Student and the Parent a reminder about finishing their online courses. The Parent replied that due to mental health, the Student had not yet started their class work since enrolling and asked if their classes would get paused or what would happen. The Academic Advisor explained that the Student's classes would not expire or lock, but that it was up to the District whether the Student continued enrollment with the Virtual Academy. They explained how many credits the School required for graduation and the typical timeline for achieving those credits, acknowledging that sometimes circumstances delayed graduation. (P18)

34. Between October 23, 2024 and November 8, 2024, emails were exchanged between the School Psychologist and the Parent regarding the Student.
    a. October 23, 2024: The School Psychologist said they were checking in to see how the Student was doing. They said the Virtual Academy staff confirmed that the Student had started their coursework. The School Psychologist also said they should set up a meeting to review the results of the special education evaluation and determine whether the Student needed an IEP or updates to the 504 Plan. They asked what the Parent's schedule was like during the week of November 11, 2024.
    b. October 29, 2024: The Parent responded that they anticipated the Student finishing the semester at the Virtual Academy but wanted to know what the next semester's process would look like for the Student to return to the School. They also requested more information about the informal due process hearing, including District policies. Finally, they requested the District's provision of an Independent Educational Evaluation (IEE), including "a neuro[-]psych evaluation to better address [the Student's] social-emotional needs."
    c. October 29, 2024: The School Psychologist said they would ask the School Principal to send the Parent the due process policies and information. They also stated that parents can request an IEE when they "disagree with the results of our evaluation, so we need to have that evaluation meeting first" and asked again about the Parent's availability to have an evaluation meeting.
    d. October 30, 2024: The Parent replied with availability on November 12 or November 19, 2024, and asked for a list of attendees and their roles.
    e. October 31, 2024: The School Psychologist responded that they would check the rest of the team's availability for those dates and listed the District staff they planned to invite.
    f. November 1, 2024: The School Psychologist confirmed a team meeting could occur on November 19, 2024 at 1:45 p.m. and the Parent said that worked for them.
    g. November 6, 2024: The School Psychologist emailed the Notice of Team Meeting, Parent Rights in Special Education, and virtual meeting link to the Parent. They also notified them of one change in attendees for the meeting. Additionally, they asked for the Parent's feedback via a Google form before the meeting regarding their concerns and recommendations for the Student. They indicated that one of the questions on the form was about the Student's care during their time out of the District. The School Psychologist explained that the Virtual Academy had contacted them on November 4, 2024 to say that the Student had not actually begun their coursework. Then, the School Psychologist said they contacted the Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency and were told the student had been discharged to acute care on October 21, 2024, but had not been given any other information.

h. November 7, 2024: The Parent replied that they had received the notice.

i. November 8, 2024: The School Psychologist said that the day marked the 13th consecutive school day that the Student had not accessed the Virtual Academy, and the District did not have confirmation of their whereabouts. They explained that the District was required to file truancy if they had a student unaccounted for after 10 days, but their understanding from the Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency and the Virtual Academy was that the Student was receiving care somewhere. The School Psychologist asked the Parent, "Is there a medical note that you could provide confirming where [the Student] is being treated and the dates of stay so that we can excuse [their] absences? If [the Virtual Academy] is inaccessible at the facility, I would like to problem-solve other ways that [the Student] could access education."

j. November 8, 2024: The Parent replied that the Student had been discharged from the Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency to the Out-of-State Hospital and had not attended school except for the Virtual Academy orientation since leaving the School on September 6, 2024.

k. November 8, 2024: The School Psychologist asked the Parent if they knew of an academic liaison at the Out-of-State Hospital that they could connect with regarding academics. They also said they would need a release of information to contact them.

l. November 8, 2024: The Parent said they did not know about an academic liaison, but they knew the Student did not have access to a laptop or computer while they were there, which was why they had not accessed the Virtual Academy.

m. November 8, 2024: The School Psychologist stated they sent the Parent a release of information to sign via the online parent portal, and once signed, they would contact the Out-of-State Hospital.

n. November 8, 2024: The Parent replied, "[The Out-of-State Hospital] will provide verification of [the Student's] admission date and we will send that when we have it." (D111-D119, Parent Interview, P3, 03:26, School Psychologist Interview, P6, 19:01)

35. On October 29, 2024, the School Principal emailed the Parent information regarding school board documents related to suspension, expulsions, and informal due process, which typically meant meeting with a student and administrator to discuss situations that might require disciplinary action. The Parent asked for a written outline of charges and evidence against the Student as indicated in the school board documents. The Principal replied that the charges to be discussed were "making threats" to the Counselor on September 6, 2024. The Parent asked for clarification, and the Principal stated that since they had not met with the Student, they had made no disciplinary decisions yet. (D95-D98)

36. An October 29, 2024 entry in the Special Education Contact Log indicated that the School Psychologist had called and left a voicemail for the Parent referencing their October 23, 2024 email, asking for an update on the Student, and inquiring about scheduling a meeting to determine special education eligibility. (D255)
37. A Notice of Team Meeting dated and noted as emailed to the Parent on November 6, 2024, proposed a virtual meeting on November 19, 2024 at 1:45 p.m. to review the evaluation and determine eligibility. It also noted, "If [the Student] is determined eligible for special education services, the team will discuss what services would be needed in light of [the Student's] circumstances. If [the Student] is determined ineligible for special education, the team may discuss what/if any adjustments may be needed to [their] current Section 504 Plan." It listed all the people invited to attend the meeting and was signed and shown as "accepted" by the Parent on November 6, 2024. (D42-D43)
38. A November 8, 2024 Special Education Contact Log entry indicated that the School Psychologist received an email with an attached letter from the Out-of-State Hospital indicating that the Student was admitted October 21, 2024 with no discharge date. (D252)
39. An Authorization to Disclose Health/Education Information dated November 8, 2024, indicated a request to disclose and receive information between the District and the Out-of-State Hospital. The information to be disclosed included the "diagnosis of and/or the services provided" to the Student between October 21, 2024 and October 21, 2025. It also stated that special education evaluation data and the Section 504 Plan could be disclosed. The purpose was "coordination of care" and "educational planning." It was electronically signed and marked "declined" by the Parent on November 8, 2024. (D77-D78)

    In the Parent's written timeline, they stated they declined to sign the release of information for the Out-of-State Hospital because "it requested access to all medical and treatment records. We were advised by [the Out-of-State Hospital] staff that the school did not need full access to [the Student's] medical records." (P43) The Parent stated they communicated this reason to the District. (Parent Interview, P1, 00:51)
40. Between November 11, 2024 and November 20, 2024, an email exchange occurred between the Parent and the School Psychologist regarding the upcoming meeting.
    a. November 11, 2024: The Parent emailed the School Psychologist and stated there was a death in the family and the funeral would be on November 19, 2024. They asked if the team could meet the following Monday instead.
    b. November 11, 2024: The School Psychologist responded that they would need to check the team's availability. They also mentioned receiving a letter from the Out-of-State Hospital confirming the Student's admission to the "acute inpatient hospital." They asked if the Student would be residing at the facility after their acute care discharge because that would mean a different School District would take over the special education evaluation. If not, they acknowledged needing to "problem-solve educational access," but stated they could not proceed without information about what was available at the hospital or the Student's current progress, status, or ability to participate in education.

c. November 11, 2024: The Parent replied that the Student was "acutely admitted" as of October 21, 2024, and was not enrolled in the residential program nor would be discharged to the residential program.

d. November 11, 2024: The School Psychologist thanked the Parent for the clarification and stated that if the Student did not have access to their laptop, the team needed to explore alternative options. However, without speaking to staff at the facility, they were unsure what alternatives were available and asked the Parent how they recommended proceeding. They also noted that other staff could not reschedule their meeting to November 18, 2024, but they would check for times after the Thanksgiving break and get back to the Parent.

e. November 11, 2024: The Parent replied with two additional days that they were available to meet during the current week, and mentioned they could meet any other time the following week except the day of the funeral.

f. November 15, 2024: The School Psychologist stated they had tentatively blocked time on November 22, 2024 and December 4, 2024, and asked the Parent if either date worked for them to meet.

g. November 15, 2024: The Parent confirmed they would be able to attend a meeting on November 22, 2024.

h. November 18, 2024: The School Psychologist confirmed they would send an updated meeting notice.

i. November 18, 2024: The Parent stated they found out the Student would be transferring to a different School District online, and they had contacted the school psychologist who coordinated their virtual program.

j. November 20, 2024: The School Psychologist stated they had received a records request from the new School District that morning, and since the Student would be withdrawn and enrolled elsewhere, they would have to cancel their meeting scheduled for November 22, 2024. They stated they would work with the new School District to transition the Student and the IEP evaluation. The Parent replied immediately and confirmed the completed enrollment in the new School District. (D44-D49, School Psychologist Interview, P8-9, 25:11, Parent Interview, P3, 05:10)

41. In the Parent's written timeline on November 14, 2024, it was noted that the Student was transferred to the Psychiatric Residential Treatment Facility (PRTF) following their discharge from the Out-of-State Hospital. A different school district provided "on-site educational services" for students at PRTFs, so the Student was officially withdrawn from the District on November 25, 2024 and the IEP evaluation meeting scheduled for November 22, 2024 was canceled by the School Psychologist. According to the Parent, consent for an evaluation with the new school district was signed and the School Psychologist provided records and engaged in phone conversations with the new school district's school psychologist.

a. The Parent stated the Student's anticipated discharge date from the PRTF is May 15, 2025, and then the Student will be sent back to the District. (P43, Parent Interview, P9, 22:09)

42. The Parent stated they were unable to request an IEE because the meeting on November 22, 2024 had been canceled, due to the Student's enrollment in a new district. (Parent Interview, P4, 07:40)

43. The Parent confirmed that the Student's last enrolled day at the District was November 25, 2024, but the last day the Student attended school on the District campus was September 6, 2024. (Parent Interview, P9, 23:17)

44. A Notice of Team Meeting listed as emailed and dated November 18, 2024, proposed a virtual meeting for November 22, 2024 at 11:00 a.m. to review the evaluation results and determine eligibility. It was also noted, "If [the Student] is determined eligible for special education services, the team will discuss what services would be needed in light of [the Student's] circumstances. If [the Student] is determined ineligible for special education, the team may discuss what/if any adjustments may be needed to [their] current Section 504 Plan." It also said, "I waive my right to a 10-day prior written notice of the IEP meeting" and was electronically signed and marked "accepted" by the Parent on November 18, 2024. (D257-D258)

45. A Google form titled "Parent input form for 11/19/24 meeting" listed five questions specifically about the Student and the Parent's concerns and recommendations for support. One of the questions also asked for a description of the care and approximate dates of stay when the Student was away from the District. The questions did not indicate answers from the Parent. (D100-D101)

46. The School Psychologist explained as part of the evaluation process they included cognitive and academic testing, behavior rating scales, and teacher feedback. (School Psychologist Interview, P3, 06:47) They stated that the Parent completed a Behavior Assessment System for Children (BASC) for the Student. (School Psychologist Interview, P4, 10:12)

The Other Parent stated the Parent told the District the Student had a "serious mental health issue", but that there were no evaluations regarding that concern. The Other Parent said that the District mentioned in the evaluation that the Student's variation between scores on the gifted tests were "extremely rare" and was enough to indicate something. (Parent Interview, P7, 14:59)

47. An Evaluation Report Draft from District was undated, but outlined the following:

a. Type of evaluation: initial

b. The Student "was referred for an evaluation to determine aspects of [their] intellectual, academic, and social/emotional functioning in order to identify an appropriate educational environment for [them]."

c. Referral: The Parent had contacted the School during the spring semester of 2024 to share concerns about the Student, who was finishing up their eighth-grade year at the Private School and planning to enroll at the School to begin ninth grade. The Parent had originally contacted the School Psychologist on January 31, 2024 to discuss available support at the School and shared that the Student had an IEP as a preschooler and kindergartener, diagnoses of ADHD and ASD, and a current 504 Plan at the Private School. On April 10, 2024, the Parent shared with the School Psychologist that the Student was having a difficult semester and had missed a significant amount of school to participate in mental health treatment after being hospitalized for eight days. Upon discharge from an intensive outpatient program, the therapist suggested that the Student's difficulties might be more related to Autism than to mental health issues. The Parent shared significant concerns about the School's ability to support the Student as a ninth grader or to be as accommodating as the Private School regarding their mental health-related absences and requested a plan, such as an IEP, to be established before the beginning of the school year. Consent was obtained for a special education evaluation on April 11, 2024 by the District.

d. Review of existing information:
    i. The Student attended 12 out of 17 school days at the School between August 13, 2024 and September 6, 2024.
    ii. The Student was hospitalized from September 6, 2024 through September 11, 2024.
    iii. Medical information obtained from discharge paperwork from the Out-of-State Hospital was listed.
    iv. The Student had been admitted to the Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency on September 11, 2024.
    v. The Student was approved for the Virtual Academy on September 26, 2024.
    vi. The Student had been transferred from the Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency to an acute care setting on September 23, 2024, returned to the Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency at some point (date unconfirmed), and was transferred to acute care again on October 21, 2024. According to the District, the Parent did not notify the District either time the Student was transferred from the Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency.
    vii. The School Psychologist requested updated information on the Student's progress from the Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency on October 2, November 1, November 4, and November 7, 2024. Reportedly, the only information shared was that the Student did not engage in academics while at the Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency and had conflict with another student.

viii. On November 8, 2024 the Virtual Academy confirmed the Student had not begun their online coursework and the Parent had informed them on November 7, 2024 that the Student was hospitalized without access to a laptop. The same day, the Out-of-State Hospital confirmed the Student's admission to their inpatient care on October 21, 2024 with no discharge date.

ix. The Student was not present for state or district assessments.

e. Background information provided by the Parent, including developmental and school history. The Parent shared concerns about the Student's impulsivity, emotional maturity, and apathy toward schoolwork.

f. Teacher feedback:

i. Private School teachers indicated that the Student was "extremely intelligent" and functioned at a "very high level." They stated that the Student may need help adjusting to high school expectations, struggled with asking for help when needed, and was not bothered by poor grades.

ii. District teachers indicated the Student had several absences, seemed disorganized, had not turned in assignments, was distracted, and socially seemed to take things literally or not speak to other students.

g. Impact: The Student's progress in the ninth-grade curriculum so far was due to attendance and not by a lack of appropriate instruction in math or reading.

h. Additional Data:

i. A classroom observation was not completed.

ii. The Student participated in testing sessions with the School Psychologist on May 20 and May 30, 2024.

iii. The Student's cognitive abilities were assessed on May 20, 2024, and found to be overall in the average range. Working memory and processing speed were the only areas determined to fall in the low average range.

iv. The Student's academic abilities were also assessed and determined to fall within the average range.

v. The Student's social/emotional/behavioral skills were rated by the Parent, the Student, and the Student's eighth-grade Private School teachers. Concerns that emerged were related to organization, specifically planning and submitting assignments. It was also noted that the Student often expressed negative thoughts, argued with others, and had difficulty expressing themself or asking for help when needed. No "clinically significant problems emerged across settings," but ten areas were rated as "at-risk" by at least two raters (hyperactivity, conduct problems, attention problems, behavioral symptoms, withdrawal, adaptive skills, adaptability, social skills, leadership, and functional communication).

vi. The evaluation report contained detailed information from communication exchanges between the Parent and the District staff since the beginning of the 2024-25 school year and details of incidents leading to the Student's hospitalizations. Relevant details of those exchanges are listed elsewhere in this investigative report.

i. The determination of the eligibility section and the list of evaluation team participants was blank. (D173-D183)

48. The Parent documented the following comments and "inaccuracies" regarding the Evaluation Report Draft:

a. "[The Student] was never evaluated for additional social[-]emotional and/or behavioral concerns."

b. "Teacher feedback repeated a pattern of needing help with social-emotional skills at both [the Private School] and [the School]."

c. "Performance by Index demonstrated significant and unusual discrepancy with no additional follow-up testing."

d. "No mention of [the School Principal's] role during the incident, the use of handcuffs, nor follow[-]up phone conversations or email stating that [the Student] would need to complete an 'informal due process' meeting. We were never provided an incident report of the event."

e. "No mention of phone discussion with school administrators on 9/20 in which we were told [the Student] was going to be unenrolled effective September 23, [2024]." (P23-P24)

49. The Parent stated they did not provide the District with their comments regarding the Evaluation Draft Report because they believed they would be meeting with the District to discuss the report. (Parent Interview, P2, 02:55)

50. A New Student Record Release Form dated November 20, 2024, indicated the Student had been enrolled in a different District and asked for the Student's records to be transferred. (D109)

51. On March 11, 2025, the Parent filed the Complaint.

Positions of the Parties, Applicable Regulations, and Conclusions

Issue One

Whether USD #229, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to conduct child find activities to determine whether the Student was a student with a disability who required special education services. K.A.R. 91-40-7; 34 CFR § 300.111.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-7; 34 CFR § 300.111, each governing board is mandated to establish and execute policies and procedures designed to comprehensively identify, locate, and evaluate all children with exceptionalities within its jurisdictional boundaries, encompassing those attending private schools, highly mobile children (including migrant and homeless children), and children suspected of having disabilities who demonstrate academic progression. The governing board's mandated policies and procedures must incorporate age-appropriate screening protocols that, for children under five, utilize observations and instruments to detect potential disabilities or developmental delays, including hearing and vision screenings; for children aged five to 21, utilize observations and instruments to identify potential exceptionalities, including state-mandated hearing and vision screenings; and ensure the implementation of procedures for the early identification and assessment of disabilities in all children.

A school board is authorized to refer a public school student for evaluation when:

1. School personnel possess data-driven evidence that general education interventions are insufficient to address the child's identified concerns;
2. School personnel provide data-driven documentation that the child received appropriate regular education instruction from qualified personnel, underwent repeated academic achievement assessments with results provided to parents, and these results indicate the necessity of an evaluation; or
3. The child's parent requests and consents to an evaluation, and the board concurs that an evaluation is warranted.

The Parent alleged that the Student was not identified or evaluated in a timely manner despite telephone contact with the District in January 2024 and a formal written request in April 2024 prior to the beginning of the 2024-25 academic year.

According to the District, the Student enrolled at a middle school in the District on April 11, 2024 as an “evaluation” student while they were enrolled and attending a private religious school. The enrollment for evaluation purposes allowed the District evaluation team to begin the parent-requested special education evaluation process. The Student began attending a District high school on August 13, 2024, as a general education student with 504 accommodations while the special education evaluation process continued. The District denied there was any delay or inaction that resulted in a failure to conduct child find activities.

A Private School Student Support Plan dated September 21, 2023 indicated the Student had medical diagnoses of ADHD and Autism. The Parent contacted the School Psychologist in January 2024 to inquire about accommodations, and explained the Student had a 504 plan. The Parent requested a special education evaluation in April 2024, and the School Psychologist met with the Student in May 2024 to begin testing. The Parent indicated they received the draft evaluation report on September 24, 2024, and that the 60-school day deadline was September 25, 2024. The Student’s enrollment noted “special education evaluation” on April 10, 2024, and then “high school student” from August 13, 2024 through November 25, 2024.

On April 9, 2024, an Administrative Assistant to Student Services informed the Parent that the counselor would return the last week of April 2024 to schedule a meeting to discuss class selection, and 504 or IEP services. On April 9 and 10, 2024, the Parent inquired about IEP evaluation testing to ensure accommodations for the upcoming school year, and the School Psychologist outlined the process for evaluation. A Request for Consent dated April 11, 2024, signed by the Parent the same day, indicated the District proposed to conduct an initial evaluation to determine the Student's eligibility and need for special education and related services. A Notice to Conduct a 504 Meeting, dated April 11, 2024, listed a meeting to discuss the need for a 504 evaluation, and was scheduled for November 11, 2024. It was noted that the date was a placeholder.

Evaluation testing with the Student was scheduled for May 20, 2024. On May 3, 2024, the Parent received an email requesting completion of a behavior rating scale and questionnaire, and the email addresses of the Student's Private School teachers. The evaluation process included cognitive and academic testing, behavior rating scales, and teacher feedback. The Parent also completed a Behavior Assessment System for Children for the Student. The Other Parent stated the Parent told the District the Student had a "serious mental health issue", but that there were no evaluations done regarding that concern.

Between August 2 and 6, 2024, the Parent emailed the School Psychologist to discuss next steps for an IEP/504 plan. The School Psychologist responded that the Private School 504 Plan would be honored, and that the Student's evaluation was due by September 25, 2024, so the team needed to meet on or before that date to review it. An August 8, 2024 District version of a 504 Accommodation Plan included information from the September 21, 2023 Private School Support Plan. A School class schedule indicated the Student entered classes on August 13, 2024 and left on September 25, 2024.

The Parent signed a release of information to allow communication with the Student's Mental Health Case Manager. Between August 26 to August 28, 2024, the Parent and School Psychologist communicated about the Student's hospitalization. The School Psychologist stated they would coordinate with staff for a plan to help the Student catch up on schoolwork. A Discharge Summary dated September 1, 2024 from the In-State Hospital indicated the Student had been admitted on August 24, 2024 and discharged on September 1, 2024.

In a meeting on September 4, 2024, an extension for the evaluation was discussed, but the paperwork for consent was never sent. The School Psychologist corroborated this. The Parent was contacted on September 6, 2024 about an incident where the Student made concerning statements, which were deemed a high-level safety threat. On September 9, 2024, the School Psychologist asked the Parent if they could let the School know where the Student was staying and next steps. A Discharge Summary dated September 11, 2024 from the In-State Hospital indicated the Student had been admitted on September 6, 2024 and discharged on September 11, 2024. On September 12, 2024, the Academic Coordinator for the Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency asked the Parent for contact information for the School, which the Parent provided.

Between September 17, 2024 and September 19, 2024, the Parent, the Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency's Academic Coordinator, the School Psychologist, and the Counselor discussed the Student's educational services while at the Agency. The Parent inquired about the Student resuming classes and requested testing information and clarification on accommodations. The School Psychologist outlined the District's initial steps to coordinate a learning plan. An Authorization to Disclose Health/Education Information dated September 18, 2024 was electronically signed and marked as "accepted" by the Parent that day. The School Principal informed the Parent that the Student would be unenrolled from the school due to residency concerns effective September 23, 2024. The School later decided to transfer the Student to the Virtual Academy, and consent for enrollment was signed September 25, 2024.

The Student had the following hospitalizations: September 23, 2024 through October 2, 2024; October 5, 2024 through October 10, 2024; and October 21, 2024 through November 14, 2024. The Student was hospitalized a total of 29 school days in that date range. The Parent noted the hospitalizations were due in part to rumors circulating about the Student.

The School Psychologist sent the draft evaluation report to the Parent on September 26, 2024, and could not determine a completion date because the eligibility meeting had not been held. The School Psychologist indicated that the Student's absences did not impact direct assessments for the evaluation, and that they would have been able to complete eligibility statements with the information they had. The School Psychologist wanted to schedule a meeting to review the evaluation. A meeting was scheduled for November 19, 2024, which was documented in a Notice of Team Meeting from November 6, 2024. The Parent canceled the meeting.

On November 15, 2024, the evaluation review meeting was rescheduled for November 22, 2024, and a Notice of Team meeting was sent on November 18, 2024. That day, the Parent learned the Student would be transferring to a different School District online. The School Psychologist received a records request from the new School District and canceled the meeting. The Student was officially withdrawn from the District on November 25, 2024.

The draft evaluation report detailed the referral process initiated by the Parent, and included a history of IEP services, ADHD/ASD diagnoses, and mental health challenges. The report summarized the Student's attendance, hospitalizations, lack of academic engagement, parent/teacher feedback, and cognitive and academic test results. The eligibility determination section was blank. The Parent documented "inaccuracies" with the evaluation, but did not share those with the District.

After reviewing the evidence, it was determined that the District was aware of the Student's Autism diagnosis. The District received paperwork from the Private School that was acknowledged by the Case Manager on August 8, 2024, which contained information about the diagnosis. On September 4, 2024, the Parent provided the District with medical information from a recent hospital stay, which also listed an Autism diagnosis. During the evaluation, the District did not include any Autism rating scales as part of the process, even though they were aware of the diagnosis. Additionally, the District did not complete the evaluation and hold the eligibility meeting within the 60-school day deadline as specified by K.A.R. 91-40-8(f). The District also did not receive parental consent for an extension. Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is substantiated that the District failed to conduct child find activities to determine whether the Student was a student with a disability who required special education services, in accordance with K.A.R. 91-40-7; 34 CFR § 300.111.

Issue Two

Whether USD #229, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to provide the Student with a free appropriate public education when the District did not provide the Student with an IEP. K.A.R. 91-40-1(z); 34 C.F.R. § 300.101.

According to 34 C.F.R. § 300.101, a free appropriate public education (FAPE) must be available to all children residing in the state between the ages of 3 and 21.

K.A.R. 91-40-1(z) defines FAPE as special education and related services that are provided at public expense, under public supervision and direction, and without charge; meet the standards of the state board; include an appropriate preschool, elementary, or secondary school education; and are provided in conformity with an individualized education program.

The Parent alleged that the Student did not receive a FAPE as required under IDEA. The Parent indicated the Student's mental health significantly deteriorated less than two weeks into the semester requiring multiple hospitalizations and during this time, the Student was not provided with an IEP that addressed their individual needs.

The District denied there was any delay or inaction that resulted in a failure to provide FAPE by not providing an IEP.

The Student's Virtual Academy application was approved in September 2024. The Parent notified the Virtual Academy that the Student had been admitted to the hospital and asked for an extension. On October 15, 2024, the Virtual Academy's Academic Advisor emailed the Student and the Parent about finishing their online courses. The Parent replied that the Student had not yet started their work. On October 23, 2024, the School Psychologist said the Virtual Academy staff confirmed that the Student had started their coursework.

On November 4, 2024, the Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency's Academic Coordinator stated that the Student "refused to participate in anything educational." The Virtual Academy contacted the School Principal and indicated that the Student had never actually started the online curriculum. November 8, 2024 marked the 13th consecutive school day that the Student had not accessed the Virtual Academy. The Student had been discharged from the Out-of-State Behavioral Health Agency to the Out-of-State Hospital, and had not attended school except for the Virtual Academy orientation, since leaving School on September 6, 2024. The School Psychologist asked the Parent if they knew of an academic liaison at the Out-of-State Hospital that they could connect with regarding academics.

From reviewing the evidence and interviews, it appears that the Student's entries into hospitals and treatment centers were medically-based. There was not enough evidence to indicate these matters stemmed from educational reasons. Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the District failed to provide the Student with a FAPE when the District did not provide the Student with an IEP, in accordance with K.A.R. 91-40-1(z); 34 C.F.R. § 300.101.

Corrective Action

Information gathered in the course of this investigation has substantiated noncompliance with special education statutes and regulations. A violation occurred in the following area:

B. Federal regulations at K.A.R. 91-40-7; 34 CFR § 300.111 specifies the District's obligations to conduct child find activities to determine whether the Student was a student with a disability who required special education services.

In this case, the evidence supports the finding that USD # 229 did not complete child find activities in accordance with K.A.R. 91-40-7; 34 CFR § 300.111. Documentation and Interviews document this.

1. Within 15 calendar days of the date of this report, USD #229 shall submit a written statement of assurance to Special Education and Title Services (SETS) stating that it will comply with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) at 34 CFR § 300.111 and K.A.R. 91-40-7 by completing timely child find activities.
2. Within 30 calendar days of the date of this report, USD #229 shall develop and conduct KSDE approved training on the District obligations for timely child find activities. The District shall submit training materials for KSDE approval before conducting the training. The District shall submit training materials and attendance sheets no later than 15 days after the training is conducted.

In the Matter of the Appeal of the Report
Issued in Response to a Complaint Filed
Against Unified School District No. 229,
Blue Valley Public Schools: 25FC229-005

DECISION OF THE APPEAL COMMITTEE

Background

This matter commenced with the filing of a complaint on March 11, 2025, by --------, on behalf of her child, --------. In the remainder of this decision, -------- will be referred to as "the parent," and -------- will be referred to as "the student." An investigation of the complaint was undertaken by a complaint investigator on behalf of the Special Education, and Title Services team at the Kansas State Department of Education. Following the investigation, a Complaint Report, addressing the allegations, was issued on April 10, 2025. That Complaint Report concluded that there was a violation of special education statutes and regulations

Thereafter, the parent filed an appeal of the Complaint Report. Upon receipt of the appeal, an Appeal Committee was appointed and it reviewed the original complaint, the Complaint Report, the parent's notice of appeal, and the district's response to the appeal. The Appeal Committee has reviewed the information provided in connection with this matter and now issues this Appeal Decision.

Preliminary Matters

A copy of the regulation regarding the filing of an appeal [K.A.R. 91-40-51(f)] was attached to the Complaint Report. That regulation states, in part, that: "Each notice shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect." Accordingly, the burden for supplying a sufficient basis for appeal is on the party submitting the appeal. When a party submits an appeal and makes statements in the notice of appeal without support, the Committee does not attempt to locate the missing support.

No new issues will be decided by the Appeal Committee. The appeal process is a review of the Complaint Report. The Appeal Committee does not conduct a separate investigation. The Appeal Committee's function will be to determine whether sufficient evidence exists to support the findings and conclusions in the Complaint Report.

Discussion of Issues on Appeal

The report identified two issues:

ISSUE ONE: Whether USD #229, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to conduct child find activities to determine whether the Student was a student with a disability who required special education services. K.A.R. 91-40-7; 34 CFR § 300.111.

ISSUE TWO: Whether USD #229, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to provide the Student with a free appropriate public education when the District did not provide the Student with an IEP. K.A.R. 91-40-1(z); 34 C.F.R. § 300.101.

The investigator concluded that there was a violation with regard to Issue 1, but found no violation with regard to Issue 2. The investigator said that there was no violation with regard to Issue 2 because:

> "From reviewing the evidence and interviews, it appears that the Student's entries into hospitals and treatment centers were medically-based. There was not enough evidence to indicate these matters stemmed from educational reasons. Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the District failed to provide the Student with a FAPE when the District did not provide the Student with an IEP..." (Report, p. 34).

The essential facts, as follows, appear to be undisputed:

1. The student was attending a private school, with a 504 plan (Report, p. 4);
2. The district requested consent for an initial special education evaluation on April 11, 2024 and the parents signed, giving the necessary consent on the same date (Report p. 7);
3. The student's evaluation was due to be completed by September 25, 2024 (Report p. 8)
4. The student entered the public school on August 13, 2024 (Report p. 8)
5. On September 4, 2025, the parties discussed an extension of the evaluation timeline but the paperwork for consent was never sent (Report p. 31)
6. On September 6, 2024, the student made statements that were deemed a high-level safety threat (Report, p. 31)
7. The student was admitted to the district's Virtual Academy sometime in September, 2024, but did not start coursework until October 23, 2024. (Report p. 34)
8. The Student had the following hospitalizations: September 23, 2024 through October 2, 2024; October 5, 2024 through October 10, 2024; and October 21, 2024 through November 14, 2024. The Student was hospitalized a total of 29 school days in that date range. (Report p. 32)

9. The School Psychologist sent the draft evaluation report to the Parent on September 26, 2024 (Report p. 32)
10. An eligibility meeting was scheduled for November 19, 2025, but the parent canceled the meeting. (Report, p. 32)
11. The eligibility meeting was rescheduled for November 22, 2024, but canceled because the student was transferring to a different school online. (Report, p. 32)

The investigator determined that the district did not comply with its child find duty (in Issue 1) because it was aware of the student's Autism diagnosis and recent hospitalizations but still did not complete the evaluation and hold the eligibility meeting within the 60-school day timeline as specified by K.A.R. 91-40-8(f), nor did it receive parental consent for an extension of time to complete the evaluation process. (Report p. 33).

However, in this issue (Issue 2), the investigator concluded there was no violation for not providing the student with an IEP within the 60-school day timeline because, "the Student's entries into hospitals and treatment centers were medically-based. There was not enough evidence to indicate these matters stemmed from educational reasons."

The Appeal Committee finds that Issues 1 and 2 are bound by the same criteria and same timeline. Kansas regulation K.A.R. 91-40-8(f) says:

> (f) Unless an agency has obtained written parental consent to an extension of time and except as otherwise provided in subsection (g), the agency shall complete the following activities within 60 school days of the date the agency receives written parental consent for evaluation of a child:
> (2) conduct a meeting to determine whether the child is an exceptional child and, if so, to develop an IEP for the child. The agency shall give notice of this meeting to the child's parent or parents as required by K.A.R. 91-40- 17(a); and

The Appeal Committee is at a loss to understand how the district could be in violation of K.A.R. 91-40-8(f)(1) but not 91-40-8(f)(2), unless the student is ineligible for special education. Accordingly, that issue must be addressed.

Clearly this student has a disability that adversely affects educational performance, if for no other reason, because the disability is resulting in significant absences from school. However, that is not the end of the eligibility analysis. To be eligible for special education services, the student must also need specially designed instruction as a result of the disability. That need for specially designed instruction as a result of a disability for this student has never been determined by an eligibility team and no convincing evidence was presented to the Appeal Committee to establish such need. Without such convincing evidence of both requirements for eligibility, there can be no violation of the requirement to timely develop and implement an IEP to meet the FAPE requirement.

For the reasons stated above, the Appeal Committee sustains the conclusion of the investigator (although for a different reason) on Issue two, and finds that the district is not in violation of the requirement to conduct an IEP meeting to determine whether the child is an exceptional child within the 60 school-day timeline.

This result is consistent with the circumstances of this case, where the student is no longer attending school in this district, and so the district has no continuing obligation, or even authority, to develop an IEP for this student.

Conclusion

For the reasons stated herein, the Complaint Report is amended as stated herein. The corrective action specified in the report for issue one remains, as so specified.

This is the final decision on this matter. There is no further appeal. This Appeal Decision is issued this 9th day of May, 2025.

The Complaint is against USD # 497 Lawrence Public Schools. In the remainder of the report, the "School," the "District," and the "local education agency (LEA)" shall refer to USD #497

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) allows for a 30-day timeline to investigate a child complaint. A complaint is considered to be filed on the date it is delivered to both the KSDE and the school district. In this case, the KSDE initially received the complaint on March 3, 2025 and the 30-day timeline ended on April 2, 2025. Due to the systemic nature of the complaint and the volume of materials received, an extension was granted by the KSDE and the timeline was extended to April 11, 2025.

Allegations

The following three issues will be investigated:

ISSUE ONE: Whether USD #497, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to provide an environment appropriate to the instructional program being provided. K.A.R. 91-40-52(d).

ISSUE TWO: Whether USD #497, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, failed to provide qualified staff to implement Individual Education Programs (IEPs) for the Students enrolled in the Autism Classroom. K.A.R. 91-31-34; 34 C.F.R. 300.156.

ISSUE THREE: Whether USD #497, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, failed to implement the IEPs of the Students enrolled in the Autism Classroom when the Special Education Teacher was absent. K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(3); 34 C.F.R. § 300.323.

Background Information

This investigation involved an Autism classroom at a Middle School "School" in Lawrence Public Schools USD #497. The Complainant is a former employee who worked in this classroom for three years. This classroom experienced challenges with personnel from the start of the school year including a teacher being out for extended periods, a paraeducator who was eventually dismissed from the School, and interpersonal relationship issues among adults. There were six students in the classroom eligible to receive special education or related services as children with a disability per the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA).

Findings of the Investigation

The following findings are based on a review of documentation and interviews with the Complainant and staff in the District.

The District failed to provide an environment appropriate to the instructional program being provided. K.A.R. 91-40-52(d)(3).

1. On August 19th, 2024 and again on August 26th, 2024, in an email from the Special Education Teacher to the Principal, Assistant Principal, and Director of Special Education it was mentioned that the Special Education Teacher has a PICC line (Peripherally Inserted Central Catheter) on their right arm and would be returning to the School with this. The Special Education Teacher also provided a doctor's note stating "[Special Education Teacher] cannot lift more than 10 lbs with right arm for [the] duration of having IV in place… ."

2. On multiple occasions between September 9th, 2024 and September 26th, 2024, the Special Education Teacher was observed by the Complainant and Paraeducator 1 administering Intravenous Fluids through a PICC line in the Autism Classroom.
3. In an email dated September 26, 2024, the Special Education teacher stated they will be getting their PICC line removed the next day.
4. On October 1, 2024, it was noted in the "BMMS Autism Consultant Meeting Notes" that on September 30, [2024] the Special Education Teacher had ADHD medication that was in an Ibuprofen bottle, in a lunch bag, and it went missing during the school day. The Special Education Teacher suspected it was the Complainant. The Autism Behavior Consultant recommended the Special Education Teacher report this to administration.
5. On October 4, 2024, it was noted in the "BMMS Autism Consultant Meeting Notes" that the Special Education Teacher reported to the Autism Behavior Consultant that "more medication was missing out of [Special Education Teacher]'s purse (2 Adderall) before [Special Education Teacher] had a chance to get them to the nurses office for safe keeping." It is also noted that the Special Education Teacher was reporting the theft to the School Resource Officer.
6. On October 9, 2024, it is noted in the "BMMS Autism Consultant Meeting Notes" that the Special Education Teacher reported to the Autism Behavior Consultant that, via text message, the Complainant admitted to stealing the Special Education Teacher's medication.
7. On November 11, 2024, it is noted in the "BMMS Autism Consultant Meeting Notes" the Complainant was "let go" and the Special Education Teacher was pressing charges for theft. It was also noted that on November 7, [2024] the Complainant "blew up" and "yelled…through the hallways" at the Special Education Teacher.
8. The Autism Behavior Consultant reported that the Special Education Teacher had "IV Antibiotics" that were administered usually a time of day where things were relatively calm in the room, but we just don't have enough staff for [them] to be completely out of the space… [they] would sit in the back corner at [their] desk with [their] IV." It was also stated, "[Special Education Teacher] wasn't able to interact with students physically" and "I never witnessed a time where it prevented [them] from doing what [they] needed to do to help or get help."
9. The Autism Behavior Consultant reported that there were students ("probably three") in the classroom while the Special Education Teacher was administering medication through the PICC line.
10. The Autism Behavior Consultant reported that the Special Education Teacher's medication was stored in a classroom refrigerator that does not lock and students "technically" have access to.
11. The Special Education Teacher stated, they "had to do an infusion once a day at two o'clock every day." They stated, "there was never a student in the classroom."

12. The Special Education Teacher reported [The Director of Special Education] provided an area and time of day to do the IV infusions, but they were not able to get to that location, so they did it in the classroom. They stated they worked on their computer at their desk during this time.
13. The Special Education Teacher reported that their IV medication was stored in their desk and said they kept the desk locked.
14. The Special Education Teacher reported that one time they had their ADHD medication (Adderall) in their lunchbox in a childproof container in the classroom.
15. The Special Education Teacher reported that the Complainant admitted to stealing their Adderall out of their lunchbox that was in the refrigerator and the Complainant was "fired for stealing medication."
16. The Special Education Teacher was shown photos provided by the Complainant and stated, it must have been after the infusion and "I probably just didn't take the bag down." In addition they reported they did not know who the person in the yellow shirt is and they think it is Paraeducator 3.
    a. Paraeducator 3 started working in this classroom in November, 2024 after starting the school year working at an elementary school in the district.
17. The Complainant reported the provided photos were taken September 19th, [2024].
18. Paraeducator 1 reported that the Special Education Teacher did an infusion through her PICC line during the day when there was "maybe only one student and another para." Paraeducator 1 observed this one time and reported that Student 4, along with the Complainant, were in the room.
19. The Principal reported that the Special Education Teacher had ADHD medication (Adderall) under their desk and not locked up.
20. The Principal stated, when asked where the best place would be to administer medication through the PICC line, the Special Education Teacher said it would be administered in the classroom when there was "no one else in the room."
21. The Assistant Director of Special Education indicated the Nurse was asked about where the IV could be administered and the Nurse identified a space that was not in the classroom.
22. The Principal reported the Special Education Teacher performing the procedure with their PICC line in the classroom was an accommodation due to a medical condition.
23. The Complainant reported the Special Education Teacher administered IV medications in the classroom at least four times during the middle of the day with students and other adults in the classroom.
24. The Complainant reported there was a bag of needles behind the Special Education Teacher's desk and that medication was stored in the unlocked classroom refrigerator, visible to students and staff.

25. The Complainant reported that students have access to the classroom refrigerator.
26. The Complainant reported that the Special Education Teacher had a "narcotic" in their lunchbox at school.
27. The Complainant reported staffing issues and the lack of people trained in Safe Crisis Management (SCM) created a less safe environment in the classroom.
28. In a follow up email dated April 2, 2025, the Assistant Director of Special Education noted that "[Special Education Teacher] reports she kept [IV medicine] in a small zipped pouch that was locked in [the] desk."
29. In a follow up email dated April 2, 2025, the Assistant Director of Special Education noted that "[Special Education Teacher] reported "when [the Complainant] stole my meds, my ADHD meds were in a childproof locked pill bottle in the zipper pocket of my lunch bag in the refrigerator."
30. In a follow up email dated April 2, 2025, the Assistant Director of Special Education noted that the Principal recalled "[Special Education Teacher] did have personal medicine (prescription and OTC) that [they] kept in [their] purse in a marked non-student area and in [their] teacher desk." The Special Education Teacher was instructed by the Principal to lock up the medication from that point forward.
31. In a follow up email dated April 2, 2025, the Assistant Director of Special Education noted that the Director of Special Education confirmed that the classroom refrigerator is in a shared area and that students are not in the space without supervision.

The District failed to provide qualified staff to implement IEPs for the Students enrolled in the Autism Classroom. K.A.R. 91-31-34; 34 C.F.R. 300.156.

1. On August 29th, 2024, records reflect that the Special Education Teacher was not at work. One record reflects the Autism Behavior Consultant substituted, but a text message from them to the Complainant on August 29th, 2024, 7:17 a.m. states "…I'll be there this morning to help get everyone settled, but then I have to get home."
2. On September 12th, September 13th, and September 16th, 2024 records reflect that the Special Education Teacher was not at work and there is no record of certified classroom coverage for the afternoons.
3. On Monday, September 16th, 2024, the assigned certified substitute was in the Autism classroom from 8:00 a.m. -10:00 a.m. only.
4. On Monday, September 16th, [2024], a text message was sent from the Complainant to the Speech Therapist that stated, "…it's just [Paraeducator 1] and I this morning. But we will figure it out."
5. On Monday, September 16th, [2024], a text message was exchanged between the Complainant and the Autism Behavior Consultant as follows:

Complainant: "Good Morning, so [Paraeducator 2] is running late, so [Paraeducator 1] has to get them off the bus, and I am not sure how I am going to get [Student 3] and [Student 4] this morning? Any idea if anyone is coming in today?"

Autism Behavior Consultant: "I don't know and I am not able to be there. Let your administration know you need help. Click your button [three] times if you have to."

6. On September 25th, 2024, an email was written by the Complainant and addressed to the Special Education Teacher, the Principal, the Speech Therapist, the Autism Behavior Consultant, and "everyone who [the Complainant] could think of that has been in [the] classroom at [the Middle School] lately," requesting the need for "more people to be SCM trained in case of emergency."
7. On October 3rd, 2024 records reflect that the Special Education Teacher was not at work and there is no record of certified classroom coverage for that day.
8. On Tuesday, October 8th, 2024, the Special Education Teacher was the only adult present in the Autism Classroom who was trained in SCM. There were five out of six students present in the classroom on this day. Four of these students are on a Behavior Intervention Plan (BIP). Student 3 escalated in behavior and untrained staff, Paraeducator 2, "attempted a hold from behind on [Student 3] in order to get [them] moving back towards the school building."
9. On November 4th, 2024 records reflect that the Special Education Teacher was not at work. One record showed a substitute did cover, but a text message from the Substitute on November 4th, 2024 at 6:46 a.m. stated "I will not be in as well today."
10. On January 28th and February 6th, 2025 records reflect that the Special Education Teacher was not at work in the morning and there was no record of certified classroom coverage during that time.
11. SCM certifications are valid for one year. The following is a list of trained staff with certification dates: Principal (June 13, 2024 recertification), Complainant (October 23, 2023 certification, October 2, 2024 recertification), Special Education Teacher (October 2, 2024 certification), Paraeducator 1 (October 11, 2024 certification), Autism & Behavior Consultant (October 24, 2022 recertification).
12. The Autism Behavior Consultant reported they were a long-term sub assigned to the Autism classroom at the beginning of the school year through September 9th [2024] due to the teacher being out on medical leave. They also stated they were "pretty consistently in the classroom" through October 24th [2024].
13. The Special Education Teacher stated, the students that require one-on-one support always had somebody with them during the day.
14. Paraeducator 1 reported there had been a day or two where the Special Education Teacher was absent and a certified person was not in the classroom "all day long."
15. The Principal stated, "we always had a certified staff member in the room" and if there was somebody missing, support would be found. It was also stated that on occasion the Principal or the Assistant Principal would stay in the room until someone with a special education background arrived.

16. The Complainant reported, at the beginning of the school year (August through September), there was no certified substitute provided on "most days." It was also reported that the Autism Behavior Consultant was in the classroom during these times.

The Complainant stated, IEP accommodations not being met were: Student 3 and Student 4 were "supposed to have one-on-one [paraeducators]" but did not; students had a certain amount of time in general education class that was not met "for at least the first month or so" due to not having enough paraeducators and having "such behavioral issues" in the classroom; and some students did not get adaptive PE days.

Positions of the Parties, Applicable Regulations, and Conclusions

Issue One

According to K.A.R. 91-40-52(d), Each agency shall ensure that all facilities for exceptional children shall be comparable to those for non-exceptional children within the same school building. If an agency operates a facility solely for exceptional children, the facility and the services and activities provided in the facility shall be comparable to those provided to nonexceptional children. All facilities for exceptional children shall be age appropriate environments, and each environment shall be appropriate for the instructional program being provided.

The Complainant alleged, "This is a Specialized Classroom. This is also a classroom with multiple aggressive behavior students. [The Special Education Teacher] had to [sit] [there] multiple times, several days in a row, for almost an hour each time with an IV bag and all hooked from the wall to [their]arm."

The District acknowledged that the Special Education Teacher returned to work on September 9, 2024 after significant illness and had a PICC line in which infusions would be done daily at 2:00 PM and last for 30 minutes. The Human Resources Director reported this as an allowable accommodation. The District maintained that an appropriate environment was provided for this classroom and this accommodation did not pose "danger to students."

The District also acknowledged that the Special Education Teacher had brought narcotic/pain medication to school in an unmarked container, but contended that as soon as the Principal learned this, the Special Education Teacher was directed to lock up the purse in which the medication was located.

The Special Education Teacher administered IV fluids through their PICC line in the Autism Classroom on multiple occasions between September 9th and 26th, 2024. The Assistant Director of Special Education indicated the Nurse identified a space outside the classroom for the IV to be administered. The Principal stated the procedure being done in the classroom was a medical accommodation and the Special Education Teacher said they would administer medication in the classroom when no one else was present.

The Special Education Teacher stated they administered infusions daily at 2:00 p.m. and there were never students present. They also stated they did the infusions in the classroom because they couldn't easily get to the provided area. The Special Education Teacher was shown photos that were taken on September 19th, 2024 that showed people in the room while they were administering medication with the PICC line. The Special Education Teacher said they were likely taken after an infusion and they didn't recognize one of the people in the photos, but they thought it might be Paraeducator 3. Paraeducator 3 was not working in this classroom until November 2024, which is after the Special Education Teacher had the PICC line removed.

The Autism Behavior Consultant reported the Special Education Teacher administering IV antibiotics in the classroom, sometimes with students present. Paraeducator 1 reported seeing the Special Education Teacher do an infusion with one student and another paraeducator present. The Complainant reported the Special Education Teacher administered IV medications in the classroom at least four times with students and other adults present.

The Special Education Teacher said their IV medication was stored in a locked desk. They also reported having Adderall in a childproof bottle in their lunchbox in the classroom refrigerator. The Autism & Behavior Consultant and Complainant reported medications being stored in the unlocked classroom refrigerator. The Complainant added that this medication was visible to students and staff. The Complainant stated the Special Education Teacher had a "narcotic" in their lunchbox. The Principal reported the Special Education Teacher had ADHD medication (Adderall) under their desk, in their purse and not locked up. When the Principal learned this, they instructed the Special Education Teacher to lock it up.

The Director of Special Education stated the classroom refrigerator was in a shared classroom area, but also noted that students were supervised. Employees who directly work in the classroom (the Complainant, Paraeducator 1, and the Autism Behavior Consultant) all stated that students had access to the unlocked refrigerator.

The Special Education Teacher's ADHD medication (Adderall) went missing from their lunchbox in the classroom, and they suspected the Complainant. More medication later went missing and the Special Education Teacher reported the theft to the School Resource Officer. The Complainant later admitted to stealing theSpecial Education Teacher's medication and was subsequently terminated. The Special Education Teacher was pressing charges against the Complainant for theft.

These three requirements are intended to add substance to the Least Restrictive Environment (LRE) portion of the Kansas Special Education for Exceptional Children Act. The second part of requirement (3), that "each environment shall be appropriate for the instructional program being provided," refers to the extent to which a child is in a regular education classroom, a special education classroom, self-contained classroom, special school, homebound, etc., and whether that "environment is appropriate for the instructional program being provided." It does not refer to procedures that school officials adopt in the ordinary course of operating a public school, including the kinds of safety concerns presented in this issue. Such procedures often involve judgements, the soundness of which may be questioned publicly or privately, but the special complaint process is not the proper (or legal) forum to do so.

The evidence does not support the allegation that the district failed to provide an environment appropriate to the instructional program being provided, as that requirement is intended under K.A.R. 91-40-52(d)(3).

After reviewing documentation and interviews with the Complainant and District staff, it was determined that according to Kansas special education regulations the District provided an age-appropriate environment that was appropriate for the instructional program being provided.

Issue Two

According to 34 C.F.R. 300.156 and K.A.R. 91-31-34(b)(2)(3)(4)(5)(A), If a teacher holding an appropriate license or certificate is not available, the education system shall use a substitute teacher holding a valid Kansas teacher or administrator license or certificate at any level or in any field or subject. If a substitute teacher holding a valid Kansas teacher or administrator license or certificate is not available, the education system shall use a substitute teacher holding a valid Kansas substitute teaching license or certificate. If a substitute teacher holding a valid Kansas substitute teaching license is not available, the education system shall use a person who holds a baccalaureate degree and an emergency substitute teaching license or certificate. If a person holding a baccalaureate degree and an emergency substitute teaching license is not available, the education system shall use a person who has been licensed or certified by the state board as an emergency substitute teacher.

The Complainant alleged there had been many days that there has been no certified staff in the classroom when the Special Education Teacher has been out sick. Multiple times the paraprofessionals had been responsible for running the classroom with a no certified substitute to provide qualified instruction.

The District responded that qualified staff had been secured to implement IEPs for students in this classroom.

On August 29, 2024, the Special Education Teacher was absent. The Autism Behavior Consultant was present in the morning to help settle students, but then had to leave. There is no record of certified classroom coverage for this afternoon.

September 12th, 13th, and 16th, 2024, the Special Education Teacher was again absent, and there was no record of certified classroom coverage for the afternoons. On Monday, September 16, 2024, the assigned certified substitute was only in the Autism classroom from 8:00 a.m. to 10:00 a.m. A text message from the Complainant to the Speech Therapist that morning indicated that only Paraeducator 1 and the Complainant were present. The Complainant also texted the Autism Behavior Consultant about staffing issues, and they stated they could not be there on that day.

On October 3, 2024, the Special Education Teacher was absent, and there was no record of certified classroom coverage. On November 4, 2024, the Special Education Teacher was absent, and although the long term substitute was scheduled, they texted at 6:46 a.m. that they would not be on that day.

In addition, on January 28th and February 6th, 2025, the Special Education Teacher was absent in the morning, and there was no record of certified classroom coverage during those times.

The Principal stated, “we always had a certified staff member in the room” and if there was somebody missing, support would be found. It was also stated that on occasion the Principal or the Assistant Principal would stay in the room until someone with a special education background arrived. Paraeducator 1 reported there had been days where the Special Education Teacher was absent and a certified person was not in the classroom "all day long."

After reviewing documentation and from interviews with the Complainant and District staff, it was determined that according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations the District failed to provide qualified staff to implement IEPs for the Students enrolled in the Autism Classroom.

Issue Three

Whether USD #497, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to implement the IEPs of the Students enrolled in the Autism Classroom when the Special Education Teacher was absent. K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(3); 34 C.F.R. § 300.323.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(3) each agency shall ensure that an IEP is in effect for each exceptional child at the beginning of each school year.

The Complainant alleged that in the Autism Classroom, specialized instruction must be delivered according to the IEP and the concern revolved around multiple and lengthy absences by the Special Education Teacher, along with staffing shortages, which resulted in student IEPs not being followed as written.

The District responded that student IEPs were appropriately implemented and that each student in the classroom had received a Free and Appropriate Public Education during the Special Education Teacher's absence.

The Complainant stated that IEP accommodations were not always met and specifically cited issues with one-on-one paraeducators for certain students, insufficient time in general education classes due to staff shortages and behavioral issues, and some students missing adaptive PE days.

The Autism Behavior Consultant believed there was always enough staff to implement IEPs. Paraeducator 1 recalled that while IEP work was done on days without a certified teacher, it wasn't at the peak of what could normally be done. Paraeducator 1 also noted that staff inconsistency made it difficult to maintain student routines, but principals and speech pathologists helped ensure student accountability and control on days there was not a certified teacher. The Special Education Teacher mentioned having weekly meetings with the Autism Behavior Consultant, which helped with communication about implementation of IEP's.

Based on service logs and student attendance reports, the IEP requirements for all 6 students for speech and occupational therapy services were met during the times when the Special Education Teacher was absent. In addition, all 6 students demonstrated adequate progress on their IEP goals/objectives to meet the requirements of the IEP.

After reviewing documentation and from interviews with the Complainant and District staff, it was determined that according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, the District did implement the IEPs of the students enrolled in the classroom while the Special Education Teacher was absent.

Corrective Action

Information gathered in the course of this investigation has substantiated noncompliance with special education statutes and regulations. A violation occurred in the following area:

A. State regulations at K.A.R. 91-31-34 specify a clearly defined order in which certified substitute teachers should be provided in a classroom. IDEA regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.156 specifies that school districts must ensure that all personnel necessary to carry out the requirements of the IDEA are appropriately and adequately prepared and trained.

In this case, the evidence supports the finding that USD #497 did not provide certified substitute teachers as defined in K.A.R. 91-31-34. The provided materials and Interviews document this.

Based on the foregoing, USD # 497 is directed to take the following actions:

1. Within 15 calendar days of the date of this report, USD #497 shall submit a written statement of assurance to Special Education and Title Services (SETS) stating that it will comply with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) at 34 C.F.R. 300.156, and K.A.R. 91-31-34 by providing an age-appropriate environment for the instructional program being provided and by ensuring certified substitute teachers are provided in the classroom.
2. Within 30 calendar days of this report, USD#497 will review policies related to substitute requirements and will provide a clear directive to school administrators that outlines a step-by-step procedure to ensure qualified substitutes in classrooms.

In the Matter of the Appeal of the Report
Issued in Response to a Complaint Filed
Against Unified School District No. 497,
Lawrence Public Schools: 25FC497-002

DECISION OF THE APPEAL COMMITTEE

Background

This matter commenced with the filing of a complaint on March 3, 2025, by ------- (former district employee), on behalf of students enrolled in a district autism program.. In the remainder of this decision, ------- will be referred to as "the complainant." An investigation of the complaint was undertaken by a complaint investigator on behalf of the Special Education, and Title Services team at the Kansas State Department of Education. Following the investigation, a Complaint Report, addressing the allegations, was issued on April 11, 2025. That Complaint Report concluded that there was a violation of special education statutes and regulations with regard to Issue 2, and no violation with regard to the remaining issues.

Thereafter, the district filed this appeal of the Complaint Report. Upon receipt of the appeal, an Appeal Committee was appointed and it reviewed the original complaint, the Complaint Report, and the district's notice of appeal. The Appeal Committee has reviewed the information provided in connection with this matter and now issues this Appeal Decision.

Preliminary Matters

A copy of the regulation regarding the filing of an appeal [K.A.R. 91-40-51(f)] was attached to the Complaint Report. That regulation states, in part, that: "Each notice shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect." Accordingly, the burden for supplying a sufficient basis for appeal is on the party submitting the appeal. When a party submits an appeal and makes statements in the notice of appeal without support, the Committee does not attempt to locate the missing support.

No new issues will be decided by the Appeal Committee. The appeal process is a review of the Complaint Report. The Appeal Committee does not conduct a separate investigation. The Appeal Committee's function will be to determine whether sufficient evidence exists to support the findings and conclusions in the Complaint Report.

Discussion of Issues on Appeal

From Complaintant

The issue on appeal is Issue Two:

Issue Two

Whether USD #497, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, failed to provide qualified staff to implement Individual Education Programs (IEPs) for the Students enrolled in the Autism Classroom. K.A.R. 91-31-34; 34 C.F.R. 300.156.

The investigator summarized the findings and reached a conclusion on this issue on pages 23 and 24 of the report, as follows:

On August 29, 2024, the Special Education Teacher was absent. The Autism Behavior Consultant was present in the morning to help settle students, but then had to leave. There is no record of certified classroom coverage for this afternoon.

September 12th, 13th, and 16th, 2024, the Special Education Teacher was again absent, and there was no record of certified classroom coverage for the afternoons. On Monday, September 16, 2024, the assigned certified substitute was only in the Autism classroom from 8:00 a.m. to 10:00 a.m. A text message from the Complainant to the Speech Therapist that morning indicated that only Paraeducator 1 and the Complainant were present. The Complainant also texted the Autism Behavior Consultant about staffing issues, and they stated they could not be there on that day.

On October 3, 2024, the Special Education Teacher was absent, and there was no record of certified classroom coverage. On November 4, 2024, the Special Education Teacher was absent, and although the long term substitute was scheduled, they texted at 6:46 a.m. that they would not be on that day.

In addition, on January 28th and February 6th, 2025, the Special Education Teacher was absent in the morning, and there was no record of certified classroom coverage during those times.

The Principal stated, "we always had a certified staff member in the room" and if there was somebody missing, support would be found. It was also stated that on occasion the Principal or the Assistant Principal would stay in the room until someone with a special education background arrived. Paraeducator 1 reported there had been days where the Special Education Teacher was absent and a certified person was not in the classroom "all day long."

After reviewing documentation and from interviews with the Complainant and District staff, it was determined that according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations the District failed to provide qualified staff to implement IEPs for the Students enrolled in the Autism Classroom.

Using a state general education regulation, K.A.R. 91-31-34, the investigator determined that the district was in violation of this regulation because, "the District failed to provide qualified staff to implement IEPs for the Students enrolled in the Autism Classroom (Report, p. 26)."

On appeal, the district asserts that the district made reasonable attempts to provide substitute teachers in the classroom during the special education teacher's absences, although that was not always possible. In its appeal, the district also asserts that it always provided paraeducator staff who were adequately trained and supervised when a substitute teacher was unavailable.

The relevant federal regulation is 34 C.F.R. 300.156(b)(2)(iii), which describes the extent to which paraprofessionals may be used to provide special education and related services. That regulation says that qualifications of special education personnel must:

> (iii) Allow paraprofessionals and assistants who are appropriately trained and supervised, in accordance with State law, regulation, or written policy, in meeting the requirements of this part to be used to assist in the provision of special education and related services under this part to children with disabilities (emphasis added).

In its appeal, the district correctly points out that Kansas policy regarding special education personnel is recorded in the Kansas Reimbursement Guide. Page 29 of that document states that paraeducators may assist in the delivery of special education and related services, with the following supervision requirement:

> "Unless otherwise indicated, instructional paraeducators must be directly supervised a minimum of 10% of the time they are working with students."

The reimbursement guide then includes further directions for situations not involved in this complaint, except for the additional requirement that, "When the assigned special teacher is not present, a paraeducator must have a designated principal or teacher available in the building for assistance and supervision as needed."

The Appeal Committee finds that the absence of a qualified teacher for the specified portions of the school day described above, and on pages 23 and 24 of the complaint report, when a qualified and adequately supervised paraprofessional was present in the classroom, is not a failure to provide qualified staff. This finding is consistent with the investigator' conclusion in Issue 3 that the district, "did implement the IEPs of the students enrolled in the classroom while the special education teacher was absent (Report, p. 25)."

Conclusion

For the reasons stated above, the conclusion in Issue two of the report is reversed.

All corrective action is rescinded.

This is the final decision on this matter. There is no further appeal. This Appeal Decision is issued this 6th day of May, 2025.

Background Information

This investigation is on behalf of a fifteen-year old high school freshman eligible for special education services as a student with other health impairments with a medical diagnosis of ADHD. The parent reported that the student used a tutor during elementary grades to assist with academics. During elementary school, the student was also diagnosed with ADHD. During the pandemic, the student attended two separate virtual schools. The father reported that the second virtual school did routine testing and discovered the student tested two to three grades below in some content areas needs and recommended special education evaluation and/or services. The student was initially evaluated and qualified for special education and related services May 25, 2021. During the 2023-2024 school year the school requested a re-evaluation, but the parents refused, and the school agreed to waive the re-evaluation. The student has since transitioned to high school and according to the school staff continued to progress and use general education supports.

Issue One

Did the district follow IDEA procedures when conducting evaluation of a student who is eligible for special education and related services?

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.305(e) state that a public agency must evaluate a child with a disability before determining that the child is no longer a child with a disability.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.300(c)(1)(i) state the district must obtain informed parent consent prior to conducting any re-evaluation of a child with a disability.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

Parent Position

The complainant alleged in the complaint of March 6, 2025 that the student's IEP meeting was conducted on January 24, 2025 with the intention of dismissing the student from special education services "before the parents had opportunity for input." The complaint further alleges that a follow-up email from the school psychologist on January 27, 2025 verified the district's feedback from the student's teacher for re-evaluation without giving equal weight to the student's classroom grades, low state assessment scores, and low Pre-ACT scores.

District Position

The district responded that they were following routine IDEA regulations and district procedures when proposing to conduct a re-evaluation for the student whose re-evaluation had previously been scheduled by May 25, 2024 and waived for one year already. The district stated their intention was not predetermined to dismiss the student from special education service, however the school believed a re-evaluation was needed due to the student's continued progress and overall success as the 2024-2025 school year continued. This caused the school to initiate conversation with the parent to explain the re-evaluation process and a meeting to determine a possible plan for the re-evaluation. The parents have continued to refuse to give consent for a re-evaluation. Mediation occurred on April 14, 2025 and an agreement was made to conduct an outside evaluation that will be considered by the district.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The student's initial and most current special education evaluation was May 25, 2021.

The meeting notes for the January 24, 2025 meeting between school staff and parents documented that the district staff shared data, teacher perspective, grades, and Fastbridge and stated these data sources indicated that the student no longer needed specially designed instruction and that the district described three options as next steps in light of these findings: 1) Re-evaluate the student to dismiss; 2) Revoke services so no re-evaluation is needed; or 3)

Review records or Re-Evaluate to determine if the student continues to need special education or related services.

The father stated during his phone conversation with the investigator on March 10, 2025 that they attended a meeting with the intention of determining the student's new IEP and the district staff came in with an agenda to discontinue the student's special education services. The father stated that the student has continuing needs and the data they provided to demonstrate the student did not need services did not consider the student's grade, assessment scores and pre-ACT scores.

The PWN dated January 24, 2025 proposed to evaluate the student to assess a continued need for special education services since the student is performing well academically with minimal special education support. The document recorded that the IEP team considered not to reevaluate, but at this time the IEP team feels that it would be beneficial to determine the student's continued need for special education services and that the evaluation would be conducted with Input from parents, teachers, standardized assessments, curriculum based measures, classroom performance, and record review. The PWN documents that this notice was hand delivered to the parents on January 24, 2025, but was not signed.

The February 7, 2025 meeting minutes between the parents and school staff verified that the parents refused the request by the district to reevaluate and that the district would continue to provide the services to the student as currently written in spite of the parents requesting changes to the IEP for additional services and accommodations.

The PWN dated February 10, 2025 documented the decisions made at the February 7, 2025 meeting " This PWN is in response to the IEP team meeting held on 02/07/2025 concerning the continued IEP services for [student]. [Parents] have requested the initiation of a new annual IEP with additional services and accommodations for their [student]. The [district] and the [coop] are (sic) refusing to initiate a new annual IEP for [student] without completing a comprehensive reevaluation to determine continued eligibility and need for special education services." The PWN documented the explanation of refusal as, "The IEP team does not have sufficient data to demonstrate the need for a new annual IEP to be initiated at this time. The IEP team would like to conduct a reevaluation in order to determine the continued need for special education services at this time. [Parent] have refused to consent to the special education reevaluation." This PWN was hand delivered to the parents on February 10, 2025 and was not signed. Finally, the PWN added one additional consideration as, "The [parents] have also requested that accommodations be made specifically in relation to [student's] ability to take science tests over several sessions, rather than all at once, in order to increase [student's] ability to focus and recall content more easily. [School] will make these accommodations through general education interventions at this time."

The April 14, 2025 Mediation Agreement recorded that "parents agree to outside testing" with specifics noted as "Woodcock cognitive, academic rating, classroom observation, student/teacher interview in addition to testing."

Conclusion

In this case the district followed regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.305(e) by citing reasons for requesting a re-evaluation and the parents refused to consent. Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.300(c)(1)(i) are clear that a district must obtain informed parent consent prior to conducting any re-evaluation of a child with a disability.

Later the parents and district agreed to mediation and a decision was made to conduct some outside evaluation that may be provided to the district for consideration (34 C.F.R. §300.502(c)(1)).

Therefore, it is found that the district is IN of compliance with 34 C.F.R. §300.300(c)(1)(i) and 34 C.F.R. 300.305(e). The district followed IDEA procedures when requesting parent consent to conduct a re-evaluation of a student who is eligible for special education and related services. It did not receive the necessary consent and so was precluded from conducting the proposed re-evaluation.

Issue One: A violation of 34 C.F.R. §300.300(c)(1)(i) and 34 C.F.R. 300.305(e) was not found, based on the facts above. Corrective action is not required.

UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #402
ON MARCH 19, 2025

DATE OF REPORT: APRIL 15, 2025

This report is in response to a complaint filed with our office on behalf of a student, ------, by their parent, ------. In the remainder of the report, the student will be referred to as "the Student" and the parent as "the Parent."

The Complaint is against USD #402 Augusta Public Schools. In the remainder of the report, the "School," the "District," and the "local education agency (LEA)" shall refer to USD #402.

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) allows for a 30-day timeline to investigate a child complaint. In this case, the KSDE initially received the complaint on March 19, 2025, and the 30-day timeline ended on April 18, 2025.

Allegations

The following issues will be investigated:

ISSUE ONE: Whether USD #402, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), on March 11, 2025, failed to implement the Student's Individual Education Program (IEP) when a substitute teacher did not follow the Student's behavior intervention plan (BIP). K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(3); 34 C.F.R. § 300.323.

ISSUE TWO: Whether USD #402, in violation of state and federal regulations and the IDEA, failed to inform the substitute teacher of their roles and responsibilities in implementing the Student's IEP on March 11, 2025. K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(5); 34 C.F.R. 300.323(d)(2).

The Complaint Investigator interviewed the Parent and District staff by video on April 8, 2025.

In completing this investigation, the Complaint Investigator reviewed documentation the District and the Parent provided. The following materials were used as the basis of the findings and conclusions of the investigation:

1. District Response, no date
2. Communication Logs, re: March 11, 2025, 03/09/2025-03/11/2025
3. Individualized Education Program, 10/04/2024

4. Chronological Timeline of Events, 08/30/2024-03/11/2025
5. County Special Education Process Handbook, Publish Date 08/01/2024

Background Information

This investigation involved a 13-year-old seventh-grade student enrolled at a Middle School in USD #402. The Student receives services as a child with a disability per the IDEA.

Findings of the Investigation

The following findings are based on a review of documentation provided by the parties.

1. In the District Response, Teacher 1 described that the Student was "roaming around" the classroom. Teacher 1 stated that when they asked the Student to return to their seat, the Student was "argumentative" but did so. Teacher 1 stated that when the bell rang at 2:06 p.m., Teacher 1 went to the classroom door, and the Student left their seat and headed for the door. Teacher 1 said the Student's name and explained that the Student, "… deliberately shoulder[-]checked me, (with the intent of knocking me down), and pushed their way out the door." (D1)

   Teacher 1 stated they followed the Student to another room and asked them to go to the office. Teacher 1 described that the Student would not leave the room and said Teacher 1 did not need to yell at them. The IEP Manager arrived and helped escort the Student to the office. Teacher 1 reported the Student's behavior to the Principal. (D1)
2. The District Response indicated, "… based on the information from staff, while the substitute teacher had not read [the Student's] IEP, there was a special education staff member assigned to the class that is very familiar with [the Student], [their] IEP and [their] behavior intervention plan." (D3)
3. Communication Logs regarding March 11, 2025 indicated:
   a. March 11, 2025 at 2:45 p.m.
      i. The Principal and the Assistant Principal contacted one of the parents to inform them of the classroom incident and assign consequences.
   b. March 11, 2025 at 2:59 p.m.
      i. The Parent called the School and asked if Teacher 1 had been provided with the Student's behavior plan. The Parent was informed that Teacher 1 had not received it, but that a paraprofessional was in the classroom. (D4)
4. The Student's IEP, dated October 4, 2024, indicated:
   a. The Student experienced a primary exceptionality of an Other Health Impairment (OH).
   b. The Impact of Exceptionality stated, "Due to difficulties in regulating [their] attention and emotional responses, [the Student] requires support with [their] organizational skills, in staying on task during class, and being able to implement coping strategies when emotionally dysregulated. Due to [the Student's] difficulties in regulating [their] emotions, [the Student] requires gentle redirection, friendly reminders, provided breaks, and emotional understanding from [their] teachers to be able to regulate [their] emotions and continue to participate in the general education and special education classroom settings."

c. Strengths and Needs:
    i. The Student actively participated in class discussions and asked relevant questions. The Student struggled with organization, following directions, accepting feedback, completing assignments, and staying on task. The Student would talk out of turn and seek attention more frequently than their classmates. They had difficulty with multi-step instructions and were easily distracted.
d. Current Performance:
    i. Teacher and parent rating scales indicated the Student demonstrated significantly elevated levels of hyperactivity compared to their peers and elevated or significantly elevated levels of inattentiveness, atypicality, and anxiety, which were correlated with school problems. The Student's twice-daily visits to the special education room have improved their ability to maintain attention in class while also offering opportunities to recharge and minimize sensory overload.
e. Accommodations/Modifications/Supplementary Supports in the special education and general education settings, from October 4, 2024 through October 3, 2025 included:
    i. Extra time (not to exceed 1.5 times that of general education peers);
    ii. A quiet and separate setting for school and state assessments;
    iii. Small breaks when the Student is dysregulated and/or showing signs of escalation;
    iv. A scribe when a written exercise exceeds more than one paragraph in length;
    v. Shortened assignments when general education and special education teachers determine the assignment or assessment is too difficult; and
    vi. Notes provided when the Student is asked to copy information during whole group instruction.
f. The BIP indicated:
    i. "[The Student] engages in off-task or inappropriate behavior (breaking classroom or school rules) resulting in redirection from school staff. Needing redirection from school staff can escalate [the Student's] frustration and potentially lead to [the Student] becoming verbally and physically aggressive."
    ii. The Student's behavior occurred within all of their core classes and was more likely to occur during afternoon classes such as ELA or Science.

The Student had the most difficulty with off-task behavior, resulting in redirection during ELA class. The Student also struggled during unstructured times, such as passing periods and lunch.

iii. The Student's behavior could interrupt the learning environment for themself and their peers when needing redirection, which could escalate the Student's frustrations and potentially their aggressive behavior, verbal or physical. The Student's refusal and off-task behaviors could lead to the Student falling behind in instruction/assigned work, which could impact their understanding of material and grades.

iv. Staff Response to Targeted Behavior:

1. "Staff will gently and [with] the use of general rules [,] will redirect the Student."
2. "Staff will walk away after redirection immediately."
3. "Staff observe from [a] distance."
4. "If [the Student] starts to argue [,] staff will ignore and walk away."
5. "If [the Student] begins cussing excessively and arguing [the IEP Manager] will be called or [the Paraeducator] … to remove [the Student] from class: [they] will take a walk, practice self-regulation strategies such as yoga, deep breathing and or drawing."
6. "If these strategies work [,] [the Student] will be allowed to go back to class with a clean slate. If not [,] administration will be contacted." (D5)

5. A documentation log indicated that on March 11, 2025, the Student received an out-of-school suspension for two days due to physical contact. The log stated, "During English, a teacher told the class that they needed to wait until [they] dismissed them to ensure everything was handled in the classroom. [The Student] proceeded to use [their] body to push the teacher out of the way. [The Student] left the classroom, when the teacher asked [them] to come back, [they] proceeded to say 'You can't tell me what the fuck to do. I can do whatever the fuck I want.'" (D6)
6. The County Special Education Interlocal Special Education Process Handbook indicated that:
    a. An IEP "needs to be provided to all general education teachers responsible for providing services or accommodations or modifications for the student."
    b. "Distribution must occur no later than September 1."
    c. "IEPs at a Glance may need to be sent throughout the year as annuals or amendments occur which impact accommodations, modifications, behavior plans, etc." (D39-D40)

Interview Summaries

The following findings are based on interviews with the District and the Parent and have been compiled as interview summaries.

Teacher 1

7. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, Teacher 1 described that they were a full-time 6th-grade English teacher in the building and covered (substituted) for Teacher 2 for one period on March 11, 2025. (P2, 05:01)
8. According to Teacher 1, "I was asked to cover a seventh-grade English class in the afternoon, and when I reached the class, I was met at the door by the teacher next door asking me if I had seen [their] email. I told [them] I hadn't, and [they] said it was a forwarded email from the office with [Teacher 2's] lesson plans. So I opened that up. Once I got seated at the desk, I read it briefly. I explained my expectations. Most of them [students] knew who I was because I'm a sixth-grade teacher. They were working on some rough drafts for a paper, and midway through, [the Student] was wandering between two desk areas. I asked [the Student] to sit down, [the Student] got a little argumentative. I asked [them] again, and [the Student] returned to [their] seat. Then the hour continued. The hour ended at 2:06. At 2:04, I asked the students who had me last year, I asked if any of them could raise their hand and remind everybody what my policy was for dismissal. And one of the kids raised their hand and said, '[Teacher 1] dismisses the class. [Teacher 1] stands by the door, [Teacher 1] dismisses the class.' The bell rang at 2:06. I was standing by the door. I was saying, 'You may go … you may go.' [The Student] was out of [their] seat, heading towards the door. I pointed back to [their] chair. [The Student] continued to come forward. I said [their] name, [the Student], and [the Student] came straight up to the door. I was standing off to the side, and … a little bit of me was in front of the door. [The Student] shoulder checks my right shoulder and then goes out the door." (P1, 01:06)

   Teacher 1 continued, "[The Student] went straight to [their] seventh-hour class, and I was in the hallway. I asked [the Student] from the doorway to go to the office, and [the Student] said that I couldn't talk to [the Student] like that because I wasn't [the Student's] [parent]. … I requested for [the Student] to go to the office. [The Student] wouldn't come out of the room. And [the Student] said I did not need to yell at [the Student] because I was not [their] [parent]. And then [the IEP Manager] arrived at [Teacher 3's] room. Shortly afterwards, [the IEP Manager] began escorting [the Student] to the office and [the IEP Manager] asked me to accompany so I could explain what happened." (P1, 03:21)
9. Teacher 1 indicated that the email they received with the lesson plans contained "… nothing … about anyone's behavior plan." (P2, 04:43) Teacher 1 shared that they were aware that the Student was a part of the special education program, "… but I didn't know anything about a behavior plan." (P3, 05:33) Teacher 1 explained that they were not provided any information about Student 1's IEP or behavior plan before covering the class period on March 11, 2025. (P3, 05:46)

The Paraeducator

10. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Paraeducator said they supported the Student with the Student's work when needed and encouraged the Student to focus. According to the Paraeducator, sometimes the Student listened, sometimes not, depending on the day. The Paraeducator shared that the Student was working on that specific day, March 11, 2025. (P4, 07:02)

11. The Paraeducator was present in the classroom on March 11, 2025 when Teacher 1 covered a class period for Teacher 2. The Paraeducator described, "During that time in class, it was a little different. We had a teacher, [Teacher 1], who was subbing, and it was a different feeling in the room because [Teacher 1] likes to keep things a little more tight than maybe the regular teacher. And so the kids knew to hold … still do their work, not any talking really, which was fine. The kids were doing great. … Towards the end of the class, there's a little more movement. At that point, [the Student] wanted to talk to another student. [The Student] just got up and did it, but [the Student] was standing in the middle of the room also. And that's when [Teacher 1] was asking [the Student] to sit down, and they went back and forth with … more of an argument. Eventually, though, [the Student] sat down. At that point, it felt like [the Student] was deescalated, and there was no other thing to do. There was maybe five minutes before class was getting ready to let out. So at that moment, [Teacher 1] preferred to release the students instead of just going out of the class, stand up, walk out [sic]. And so [the Student] bolted out of the classroom without being told to go, and that's when [the Student] ran into [Teacher 1]." (P2, 01:53)
12. The Paraeducator described that typically, with Teacher 2, students gather their belongings a couple of minutes before the bell and are often standing by the door, ready to leave. This differed from Teacher 1's approach, where students were told to stay seated until explicitly released. On March 11, 2025, the exit procedure differed from the usual routine in Teacher 2's class. (P2, 03:27) When asked how the Student responds to "different" regarding the classroom procedures, the Paraeducator said, "I would say that [the Student] might do it but not like it. [The Student] might argue a little bit more, but if you can tell [the Student], just hold on, it's almost time to go or whatever, [the Student] [will] do it. But in this case, [the Student] did, for the most part, stay quiet. [The Student] stayed where [the Student] was supposed to be, and [they] stayed in [their] seat until it was time to go. But [the Student] didn't wait for … 'You may be dismissed,' [the Student] just left." (P3, 05:46)
13. After the Student left the classroom, the Paraeducator shared, "… I heard the confrontation when [the Student] was leaving. [The Student] went to [their] next class, and that's when [Teacher 1] went to the next room and confronted [the Student] in there for what [the Student] had done by running into [Teacher 1]." The Paraeducator said that the Student did not respond well to confrontation or adult directives unless mutual respect had been established. (P3, 05:30)

The IEP Manager

14. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the IEP Manager described that the Student was in one of their classes and shared that the Student struggled with impulse control and became dysregulated if they did not feel heard. The IEP Manager described, "If [the Student] sees other people … getting in trouble or [the Student] feels that they're not getting justice, [the Student] would take it into [their] own hands and [their] words to try to make everything okay." (P2, 03:25)

15. The IEP Manager described that on March 11, 2025, they were not in the classroom where the "shoulder-checking" incident occurred, "I was in another classroom and it was passing and I came out to go to my classroom and [the Student] and another teacher were engaged in a conversation about what had happened, and I got [the Student] to calm down and just got [the Student] out of the situation and brought [the Student] to the office." (P1, 01:56) The IEP Manager described, "[The Student] was just engaging, yelling with the other adult … I just told [the Student], 'Let's not do this in the hallway. You're making a scene. It's embarrassing. We're going to go to a private area, and we can discuss it there.' [The Student] continued to yell at [Teacher 1], and I just told [the Student] to, 'Please stop. We would discuss it when we got to the office' and [the Student] stopped talking in the hallway until we got into the office." (P1, 01:56)
16. The IEP Manager recalled the Student saying things like, "'[Teacher 1] wasn't going to keep me in the classroom. [Teacher 1] can't hold me there.' [The Student] said that [they] had not shoved [Teacher 1], but kind of moved [Teacher 1] out of the way." The IEP Manager's impression was that the Student felt Teacher 1 couldn't keep them in the classroom and took steps to ensure that did not happen. (P1, 02:28) The IEP Manager described that en route to the office, the Student was "upset, obviously, but I think [the Student] was fine. I mean, until [the Student] got a consequence and then [the Student] was upset about the consequence." (P3, 04:36)
17. When asked about the Student's ability to negotiate changes in procedures, the IEP Manager indicated that the Student's reaction to new procedures was dependent on how the Student was feeling. (P3, 05:01)
18. The IEP Manager indicated that Teacher 1 knew the Student from last year and knew that the Student had an IEP. (P3, 05:48)

The Parent

19. The Parent shared in an interview with the Complaint Investigator that the Student experienced ADHD and anxiety that were "pretty well managed." The Parent shared that the Student struggled to employ appropriate coping mechanisms when upset and that the Student was learning how to manage the diagnosis of Disruptive Mood Dysregulatory Disorder. The Parent indicated that the behavior plan was in place for the Student's and others' safety. The Parent described, "So that headstrong inability to employ any kind of rational thought with [the Student] is a lot of what we see with [the Student's] disability' which was evidenced by verbalizations and "sometimes physical aggression with peers" and resulted in multiple suspensions. (P2, 07:10)
20. The Parent shared their perception of events involving the Student on March 11, 2025. The Parent said, "So [the Student] was in [their] English class with a substitute teacher. [The Student] reported to me that I think some things had not been picked up in the classroom by other students and the teacher asked the whole class to stay after the bell rang. [The Student] does have multiple mental health conditions, one of them being anxiety, and [the Student] had received some counsels for being late to the class that directly follows English. And so [the Student] said, 'My stuff's picked up. I'm leaving.' And the teacher put [themself] between [the Student] and the door. [The Student] said [Teacher 1] was physically barricading [the Student] in the classroom, and [the Student] pushed past [Teacher 1] to get out the door. After that, [Teacher 1] accosted [the Student] out in the hallway to further discuss the issue and told [the Student] that [they] needed to come back and [the Student] did cuss at [Teacher 1] and … told [Teacher 1], 'You can't tell me what the fuck to do. I'll do whatever the fuck I want.' Or something along those lines." (P1, 00:50)

21. When asked to describe "accosted," the Parent said, "[The Student] said that [Teacher 1] ran out of the classroom after [the Student] left and came out into the hallway and was yelling at [the Student] and telling [the Student] [they] needed to come back. And that's when [the Student] turned around and cussed at [Teacher 1] and said, 'No, I'm not going to do that.'" (P2, 04:06)
22. The Parent indicated they were concerned about the School's lack of adherence to the Student's behavior plan, felt the Student had been physically restrained, and that Teacher 1 engaged in a verbal interaction with the Student in the hallway, an action that was contrary to the Student's behavior plan. (P1, 01:39)
23. According to the Parent, the Principal said, "'Well, I don't even think the teacher was aware of [the Student's] behavior plan. We don't share that information with our substitute teachers. That's confidential.' And I said, 'Well, if there are any kids whose plans should be shared with subs, I would think it would be your behavior kids.' And [the Principal] said, 'Sometimes they get a list of accommodations, but they are not privy to that information.' … my concern was, I felt like the School did not follow that behavior plan … ." (P1, 02:40)
24. The Parent listed the parts of the Student's behavior plan they believed should have been implemented:
    a. "Staff will walk away after redirection is given immediately." According to the Parent, "This was not done. After [Teacher 1] told [the Student] to sit back down."
    b. "If [the Student] starts to argue, staff will ignore and walk away." The Parent said, "Apparently there was some kind of conversation that occurred in the classroom between [the Student] and [Teacher 1] when [the Student] said, 'No, I'm leaving.' And [Teacher 1] said, 'No, you're not.'" According to the Parent, the Student reported that "… if [the Student] began cussing excessively or arguing, [the IEP Manager] or [the Paraeducator] will remove [the Student] from the classroom. That did not happen." (P2, 04:46)
    c. The Parent shared, "[The Student] also knows that if there is an incident that occurs during the classroom, that it is not [the Student's] to handle and that it will be handled by [the] administration. So the minute that [Teacher 1] thought [they] had a problem with [the Student], there should have been a call either to > [the IEP Manager] or to the Principal to say, 'We have an issue. Can somebody please come down and address this … .'" (P5, 15:28)

The Principal

25. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Principal shared that on March 11, 2025, Teacher 2 had an emergency and "… ended up leaving … sometime in the morning, so it came out of nowhere. [Teacher 2] didn't even have a lot of time to make sub plans. [Teacher 1] kind of made them up on the fly and knew that the kids were working on a paper … ." The Principal shared that the sub plans were more generic than if a teacher were to have written plans for a scheduled absence. The Principal shared. "… because it was so late in the day, we couldn't find a substitute, so we had a certified teacher cover those classes during [their] plan time." The Principal shared that when a teacher covers a class for another teacher, they do not have access to the Student Information System like the assigned teacher. The Principal confirmed that teachers do not have universal access to student information in the Student Information System. (P2, 06:25)
26. According to the Principal, after the incident with the Student, they spoke with Teacher 1, who was upset about being physically contacted by a student. The Principal shared that they consulted with the assistant principal, who talked to the Student. The Principal also spoke with the Paraeducator and students to gather more information. Ultimately, the Principal decided to issue consequences for the Student's actions and communicated with the Student's parents. (P1, 00:59)
27. The Principal shared that the Parent "… was frustrated that the sub didn't have access to [the Student's] behavior plan. I shared with [the Parent] that we don't usually share that information with subs because it's pretty confidential information and we don't want a sub folder to be left out on a teacher's desk with confidential information on it." The Principal stated that they shared with the Parent that "… there was a Para in the classroom who did know [the Student's] behavior plan and who was actually named in [the Student's] behavior plan. … [The Paraeducator] worked with [the Student] when [the Student] was a sixth grader and also when [they] were a seventh grader, so [the Paraeducator] [was] pretty knowledgeable in what [the Student's] behavior needs are." The Principal indicated that the Paraeducator had taken the Student out of classrooms following the Student's behavior plan when the Student had been elevated in the past. The Principal said, "… We felt comfortable that [the Paraeducator] knew how to help support [the Student] in that situation." (P2, 03:41)
28. The Principal explained that Teacher 1 likely knew the Student by sight due to the Student's presence in the sixth-grade hallway and the Student's history of behavior issues at the School, which led to a behavior plan. However, because Teacher 1's team did not include special education teachers the previous year and Teacher 1 hadn't taught the Student directly, Teacher 1 would not have had access to the specifics of [the Student's] behavior plan despite knowing the Student received special education services due to the resource classroom's proximity to Teacher 1's classroom. (P2, 05:08)

29. The Principal shared that it was common class dismissal practice for a teacher to say, "I dismiss you, not the bell." (P1, 02:45)
30. The Principal described the Student's behaviors, "[The Student] is very physical. I have seen [the Student] physical with peers more so than anything else. I have not seen [the Student] physical with staff members until this instant [sic]. But [the Student] has a track record of being physical with other peers and sometimes in a playful manner, sometimes not in a playful manner … ." (P3, 09:18) When asked about the Student's ability to navigate a change in procedure, the Principal stated, "[The Student] is a hardheaded child who, if [the Student] wants to do something, [the Student's] going to do it. And if [the Student] doesn't want to do it, [the Student's] not going to do it. This might be a change in procedure for this one particular class. … [The Student's] a very strong relationship kid and [the Student] didn't have a relationship with … [Teacher 1]. So asking [the Student] to do something [they] didn't want to do wasn't going to go over well. That doesn't excuse the fact that [the Student] still has to follow our code of conduct at our building." (P3, 10:08)

The Director of Special Education

31. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Director of Special Education described that the Paraeducator had access to the Student's IEP and behavior plan and was "… specifically mentioned in [the Student's] behavior intervention plan as a strategy for non-productive behaviors." (P2, 03:39)
32. The Director of Special Education indicated that the Student was suspended for physical aggression toward Teacher 1. (P3, 04:59)
33. The Director of Special Education shared that "… as a system, we do share IEP and behavior plan information with long-term subs. … This was a unique situation where it wasn't really a sub, it was a teacher taking over for a class." (P4, 07:33)

On March 19, 2025, the Parent filed this complaint.

Positions of the Parties, Applicable Regulations, and Conclusions

ISSUE ONE

Whether USD #402, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), on March 11, 2025, failed to implement the Student's IEP when a substitute teacher did not follow the Student's behavior intervention plan. K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(3); 34 C.F.R. § 300.323.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(3) and 34 C.F.R. § 300.323, an IEP must be in effect for each exceptional child at the beginning of each school year.

The Parent alleged that on March 11, 2025, the Substitute Teacher violated the Student's behavior intervention plan. The Student shoved past the teacher to leave the classroom. The Substitute Teacher approached the Student in the hall afterwards, and it was reported that the Student was verbally inappropriate. Due to making bodily contact with staff, the Student received two days of out-of-school suspension.

In their Response, the District indicated that there had not been a violation of the Student's IEP. The District said neither an IEP nor a BIP removes the option to issue a disciplinary action for a code of conduct violation. The District indicated that physical aggression toward a staff member was a severe code of conduct violation that warranted disciplinary action.

The District's Response did not address the allegation in this Complaint. While it is correct that a District may impose a short-term suspension, even for behavior that is a manifestation of a student's disability (34 C.F.R. 300.530(b)), that does not excuse the District's duty to provide a Free Appropriate Public Education (FAPE) by implementing the IEP. The issue in this Complaint is not that the District suspended the Student, but rather, that it failed to implement the Student's IEP when a Substitute Teacher did not follow the Student's BIP.

On March 11, 2025, when Teacher 1 covered a class for Teacher 2 due to an emergency, the District and Teacher 1 both acknowledged that Teacher 1 had not been provided with the Student's IEP or BIP. K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(3) and 34 C.F.R. § 300.323 requires an IEP to be in effect, implying that all relevant staff responsible for the Student's education should be aware of and able to implement it. Although testimony revealed that Teacher 1 knew that the Student had an IEP, they were unaware of the specific details, which impacted their ability to follow the IEP and BIP.

The BIP outlined specific staff responses to the Student's behavior, including the following:

a. "Staff will gently and [with] the use of general rules [,] will redirect the Student."
b. "Staff will walk away after redirection immediately."
c. "If [the Student] starts to argue [,] staff will ignore and walk away."

Teacher 1 was not privy to the specifics of the IEP or BIP, despite knowing the Student was on an IEP, and their ability to respond appropriately in certain situations was compromised. If Teacher 1 had been furnished with the necessary information and had responded to the verbal interactions with the Student in accordance with the BIP, the subsequent escalation and physical interaction, which ultimately led to the Student's two-day suspension, might have been avoided.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is substantiated that the District failed to implement the Student's IEP when a substitute teacher did not follow the Student's behavior intervention plan, which resulted in a material failure to implement the IEP, denying the Student a FAPE.

ISSUE TWO

Whether USD #402, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to inform the substitute teacher of their roles and responsibilities in implementing the Student's IEP on March 11, 2025. K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(5); 34 C.F.R. 300.323(d)(2).

According to K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(5) and 34 C.F.R. 300.323(d)(2), each agency shall ensure that each teacher and provider is informed of the following: that individual's specific responsibilities related to implementing the child's IEP, and the specific accommodations, modifications, and supports that must be provided for the child in accordance with the IEP.

The Parent alleged that the School acknowledged that they do not share behavior plans with substitute teachers and violated the Student's plan.

The District responded that while the Substitute Teacher had not read the Student's IEP, there was a special education staff member assigned to the class who was familiar with the Student and their IEP and behavior intervention plan.

On March 11, 2025, when Teacher 1 covered a class for Teacher 2 due to an emergency, the District and Teacher 1 both acknowledged that Teacher 1 had not been provided with the Student's IEP or BIP. K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(5) and 34 C.F.R. § 300.323(d)(2) requires each teacher (which would include a substitute teacher covering a class) to be informed of their specific responsibilities for the implementation of a Student's IEP. Testimony indicated that Teacher 1 knew that the Student had an IEP but may not have known the specifics, which impacted their ability to follow the IEP and BIP. Reinforcing this point, the Principal indicated that the District does not "usually share that information with subs because it's pretty confidential."

Although the Paraeducator was aware of the Student's BIP and was present during Teacher 1's class coverage, there was no evidence beyond the Paraeducator's observation that indicates they actively facilitated the BIP's implementation by Teacher 1. Consequently, the argument that the Paraeducator's presence ensured IEP/BIP implementation is unsupported. While the Paraeducator's familiarity with the IEP is a mitigating circumstance, it does not relieve the District of its duty to ensure Teacher 1, the responsible adult for instruction and classroom management on March 11, 2025, received specific information regarding their role in the Student's IEP implementation.

Despite the emergent nature of the need to have a class period covered, the District was obligated to inform Teacher 1 of their responsibilities regarding the implementation of the Student's IEP and BIP, even for a single period. The law does not provide an exception for short-term substitutes related to providing this information.

Additionally, the District's policy of not sharing behavior plans with substitute teachers, while potentially intended to protect confidentiality, creates a barrier to implementing IEPs in situations involving substitute coverage and is contrary to the law.

Relevant caselaw includes:

- Michigan City Area Schools, 74 IDLER 272 (2019)
- Robertson V. East Baton Rouge Parish [school]. Bd., 61 IDELR 201 (2013)
- Douglas County School District, 70 IDELR 111 (2017)

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is substantiated that the District failed to inform the substitute teacher of their roles and responsibilities in implementing the Student's IEP on March 11, 2025, which resulted in a material failure that denied the Student a FAPE.

Corrective Action

Information gathered in the course of this investigation has substantiated noncompliance with special education statutes and regulations. A violation occurred in the following area:

A. Federal regulations at K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(3) and 34 C.F.R. § 300.323 specify that an IEP must be in effect for each exceptional child at the beginning of the school year.

In this case, the evidence supports the finding that USD #402 did not implement the Student's IEP when a substitute teacher did not follow the Student's BIP. Documentation and Interviews document this.

B. Federal regulations at K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(5) and 34 C.F.R. 300.323(d)(2) specify that each agency shall ensure that teachers and providers are informed of their specific responsibilities related to the implementation of a child's IEP.

In this case, the evidence supports the finding that USD #402 did not provide the substitute teacher with their specific responsibilities related to the implementation of the Student's IEP and BIP. Documentation, Interviews, and the District's undated Response letter document this.

Based on the foregoing, USD #402 is directed to take the following actions:

1. Within 15 calendar days of the date of this report, USD #402 shall submit a written statement of assurance to Special Education and Title Services (SETS) stating that it will comply with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) at K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(3), 34 C.F.R. § 300.323, and K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(5), 34 C.F.R. 300.323(d)(2) by designing and describing a system in which all substitutes, internal or external, have access to students' IEP information prior to the commencement of their role as a substitute.
2. Within 20 calendar days of the date of this report, USD #402 shall notify all relevant internal stakeholders of the revisions to substitute staff's access to IEP information. Verification of this notification shall be provided to the Department.

In the Matter of the Appeal of the Report
Issued in Response to a Complaint Filed
Against Unified School District No. 402,
Augusta Public Schools: 25FC402-002

DECISION OF THE APPEAL COMMITTEE

Background

This matter commenced with the filing of a complaint on March 19, 2025, by -------, on behalf of her child, -------. In the remainder of this decision, ------- will be referred to as "the complainant," and ------- will be referred to as "the student." An investigation of the complaint was undertaken by a complaint investigator on behalf of the Special Education, and Title Services team at the Kansas State Department of Education. Following the investigation, a Complaint Report, addressing the allegations, was issued on April 15, 2025. That Complaint Report concluded that there was a violation of special education statutes and regulations

Thereafter, the district filed an appeal of the Complaint Report. Upon receipt of the appeal, an Appeal Committee was appointed and it reviewed the original complaint, the Complaint Report, the district's notice of appeal, and the parent's response to the appeal. The Appeal Committee has reviewed the information provided in connection with this matter and now issues this Appeal Decision.

Preliminary Matters

A copy of the regulation regarding the filing of an appeal [K.A.R. 91-40-51(f)] was attached to the Complaint Report. That regulation states, in part, that: "Each notice shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect." Accordingly, the burden for supplying a sufficient basis for appeal is on the party submitting the appeal. When a party submits an appeal and makes statements in the notice of appeal without support, the Committee does not attempt to locate the missing support.

No new issues will be decided by the Appeal Committee. The appeal process is a review of the Complaint Report. The Appeal Committee does not conduct a separate investigation. The Appeal Committee's function will be to determine whether sufficient evidence exists to support the findings and conclusions in the Complaint Report.

Discussion of Issues on Appeal

From Complainant

The report identified two issues:

ISSUE ONE: Whether USD #402, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), on March 11, 2025, failed to implement the Student's IEP when a substitute teacher did not follow the Student's behavior intervention plan. K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(3); 34 C.F.R. § 300.323.

ISSUE TWO: Whether USD #402, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to inform the substitute teacher of their roles and responsibilities in implementing the Student's IEP on March 11, 2025. K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(5); 34 C.F.R. 300.323(d)(2).

The district appealed the decision rendered on both issues.

Issue One

> Whether USD #402, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), on March 11, 2025, failed to implement the Student's IEP when a substitute teacher did not follow the Student's behavior intervention plan. K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(3); 34 C.F.R. § 300.323.

In its appeal of this issue, the district asserts that it did implement the student's IEP Behavior Intervention Plan (BIP) and that the investigator relied "on the parent's description of what happened on March 11, 2025."

The Appeal Committee disagrees with both assertions. Even disregarding all of the parents statements to the investigator, and relying solely on statements of school personnel made to the investigator, the Appeal Committee notes following facts:

The BIP specified that:

a. "Staff will gently and [with] the use of general rules [,] will redirect the Student."
b. "Staff will walk away after redirection immediately."
c. "If [the Student] starts to argue [,] staff will ignore and walk away."

The incident was described by the paraeducator to the investigator as follows:

> "Towards the end of the class, there's a little more movement. At that point, [the Student] wanted to talk to another student. [The Student] just got up and did it, but [the Student] was standing in the middle of the room also. And that's when [Teacher 1] was asking [the Student] to sit down, and they went back and forth with ... more of an argument. Eventually, though, [the Student] sat down. At that point, it felt like [the > Student] was deescalated, and there was no other thing to do. There was maybe five minutes before class was getting ready to let out. So at that moment, [Teacher 1] preferred to release the students instead of just going out of the class, stand up, walk out [sic]. And so [the Student] bolted out of the classroom without being told to go, and that's when [the Student] ran into [Teacher 1]." Report, p.8-9.

The paraeducator further reported to the investigator that:

> After the Student left the classroom, "… I heard the confrontation when [the Student] was leaving. [The Student] went to [their] next class, and that's when [Teacher 1] went to the next room and confronted [the Student] in there for what [the Student] had done by running into [Teacher 1]." Report, p. 9.

It is clear from this account that teacher 1 did not comply with the portion of the student's IEP/ BIP, cited above. This issue has nothing to do with the suspension. The district had authority to suspend the student for this behavior. This issue is solely about whether the district implemented this student's BIP. The evidence supports the investigator's conclusion that teacher 1 did not implement the BIP, likely because teacher 1 was unaware of the BIP.

This was not just a procedural error. The error likely contributed to negative consequences for the student. As the investigator pointed out, on page 16 of the report, "If Teacher 1 had been furnished with the necessary information and had responded to the verbal interactions with the Student in accordance with the BIP, the subsequent escalation and physical interaction, which ultimately led to the Student's two-day suspension, might have been avoided."

With regard to the district's position that, although teacher 1 did not know of the student's BIP, the paraeducator did and that should be sufficient, that interpretation is in opposition to the clear language in the federal regulation that is addressed in Issue two and this case illustrates why the requirement in issue 2 is so important to ensure the implementation of IEPs.

Issue Two

Whether USD #402, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to inform the substitute teacher of their roles and responsibilities in implementing the Student's IEP on March 11, 2025. K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(5); 34 C.F.R. 300.323(d)(2).

The pertinent federal regulation is 34 C.F.R. 300.323(d), which states (bold, underlined, print added for emphasis):

> (d) Accessibility of child's IEP to teachers and others. Each public agency must ensure that--
>
> (1) The child's IEP is accessible to each regular education teacher, special education teacher, related services provider, and any other service provider who is responsible for its implementation; and
>
> (2) Each teacher and provider described in paragraph (d)(1) of this section is informed of--
>
> (i) His or her specific responsibilities related to implementing the child's IEP; and

The pertinent fact, provided by school personnel to the investigator, is that the District principal, special education director and Teacher 1 each acknowledged that Teacher 1 had not been informed of the Student's IEP or BIP (Finding 9 - p. 8, 25 - p. 12, 27 – p 13, 33 – p. 14). The conclusions of the investigator on both issues are fully supported by evidence presented by school district staff.

Conclusion

For the reasons stated herein, the Complaint Report is sustained in full.

This is the final decision on this matter. There is no further appeal. This Appeal Decision is issued this 6th day of May, 2025.

Background Information

The subject of this complaint is a ten-year-old fourth grader with Speech/Language Disabilities as the qualifying exceptionality as noted in the most recent re-evaluation dated April 20, 2023.

The IEP dated April 17, 2024 lists four annual goals and includes 20 minutes of direct speech and language services in the special education classroom 2 days every week, 30 minutes of direct special education services in the special education classroom 5 days every week and 60 minutes of direct special education services in the general education classroom 5 days every week. The IEP lists that in addition to instruction targeting reading and writing goals, instruction will include guided and repeated practice, reteaching, and immediate feedback on decoding single and multi-syllabic words, encoding/spelling skills, high-frequency words, and syllable types. The student's IEP includes one accommodation, taking tests in a quiet, non-competitive setting. The IEP lists the student's strengths as, "[the student] is a respectful child. [The student] wants to do well and puts forth their best effort. [The student] is personable and friendly with peers and staff members. [The student] has strengths in reading fluency (accuracy and speed) and math. [The student] is highly motivated to do well. [The student] shows grit, perseverance, and is always willing to ask for help when needed. [The student] is very confident in his phonics skills and is always wanting to participate".

There was an IEP meeting on April 10, 2025 during the investigative period at which the team agreed to conduct a psychological evaluation, proposed a reduction in service minutes for speech language services and discussed the father's request for ESY.

Issues Investigated

Based on the written complaint and an interview with the complainant, three concerns which fall under the same IDEA regulations were identified and investigated.

Issue One

Did USD #229 consider and respond to the father's request on November 5, 2024 for a psychological evaluation?

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.503(a)(2) states that prior written notice needs to be provided to the parents of a child with a disability a reasonable time before the public agency proposes or refuses to initiate or change the identification, evaluation, or educational placement of the child or the provision of FAPE to the child.

Parent Position

The father's complaint dated April 10, 2025 states, "[the school psychologist] in the meeting on Nov 5, 2024 refused to do a psychological evaluation".

District Position

The district response notes, " [the school psychologist] has stated that she has not spoken to or communicated with [father] on November 5, 2025. In fact, she has not spoken to or communicated with [father] this year outside the IEP meetings that occurred on September 5, 2024, November 15, 2024 and April 10, 2025".

Additionally, "If [the father] intended to make this accusation about the November 15, 2024 IEP meeting, which took place during parent teacher conferences, the district again denies that they received any request for a psychological evaluation. This was also addressed in the district response to 25FC229-003".

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The following finding of facts is based upon a review of the documentation noted previously and interviews with all parties.

1. In the father's complaint he stated, " [the school psychologist] in the meeting on Nov 5, 2024 refused to do a psychological evaluation".
2. In the interview with the father on April 15, 2025 he stated that the school psychologist denied his request for a psychological evaluation made on November 5, 2024 without consulting with the IEP team, "the decision did not go to the IEP team".
3. In an email exchange with the school psychologist and as stated in the district's response there was no meeting between the father and school psychologist on November 5, 2024.
4. In the minutes from the November 15, 2024 IEP meeting notes make no mention of a psychological evaluation request.
5. The district response denies that the father requested a psychological evaluation at the November 15, 2024 IEP meeting.
6. In the minutes from the April 10, 2025 IEP meeting it notes that the father requested a psychological evaluation due to concerns about his child's behavior.
7. An email sent from the school psychologist to the father, mother, assistant superintendent, case manager and principal included an attached PWN for the psychological evaluation dated April 16, 2025.
8. The PWN for the psychological evaluation states, "[father] has requested that the district complete a "psychological evaluation" on [student] due to his behaviors in the classroom and at recess. At the annual IEP held on 4/10/25, the team discussed this request and agreed to complete behavior scales (specifically the Behavior Assessment System for Children, Third Edition) with [student]".
9. The mother signed the PWN for the psychological evaluation on April 16, 2025

Conclusion

In this case, the father's assertion that he met with the school psychologist on November 5, 2024 where she declined a request for a psychological evaluation is denied by the school psychologist. If the father has the dates confused and is referring to the November 15, 2024 IEP the district denies that they receive any request for a psychological evaluation at the November 15, 2024 IEP meeting, nor is there mention of a psychological evaluation in the IEP meeting minutes.

The father's request for a psychological evaluation at the most recent IEP meeting on April 10, 2025 was responded to with a PWN sent on April 16, 2025 requesting consent to conduct the psychological evaluation. The mother signed the PWN giving consent on April 16, 2025.

Based on the foregoing, there is no evidence of a meeting where a request was made for a psychological evaluation on November 5, 2024, nor at the November 15, 2024 IEP meeting. The district did respond to the father's request for a psychological evaluation when made at the April 10, 2025 IEP meeting with a PWN. Therefore the district is IN compliance with no corrective actions required.

Issue Two

Did USD #229 discuss and respond to the father's concerns related to the reduction in speech/language services as stated in the IEP?

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.503(a)(2) states that prior written notice needs to be provided to the parents of a child with a disability a reasonable time before the public agency proposes or refuses to initiate or change the identification, evaluation, or educational placement of the child or the provision of FAPE to the child.

Parent Position

In the father's second complaint on April 11, 2025 he states, "[the] school district wants to reduce services on my kids IEP for speech language and special education…".

District Position

As noted in the district's response, "The second PWN required parental consent as it decreased services by more than 25% for classroom adult support and [speech language pathologist] SLP services. As the notes show, during the meeting [the father] shared his concerns and the SLP and teacher reviewed the data that supported the proposals. The IEP Team, including the student's mother, ultimately believed that the reduction was appropriate and the student's mother signed the PWN consenting to the change".

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The findings of Issue One are incorporated herein by reference. The following finding of facts is based upon a review of the documentation noted previously and interviews with all parties.

1. The minutes from the IEP meeting on April 10, 2025 reflect discussions about the student's progress on his speech language goals including the father's disagreement and the district's rationale for proposing the change.
2. In the interview with the father he expressed concern that his child was not making appropriate progress on his speech language goals.
3. The meeting minutes reflect lengthy conversations about the student's progress and needs related to speech language services. The team agreed to continue with the student's reading, writing and language goals.
4. The meeting minutes reflect the following changes in services, "It is proposed to decrease [the student's] service for special education support in the general education classroom from 60 minutes to 30 minutes 5x weekly. It is proposed to reduce direct speech-language therapy services from 20 minutes 2x per week to 30 minutes 1x per week".
5. A PWN reflecting the proposal of reduction in services was sent to both parents on April 11, 2025 and signed by the mother giving consent on April 16, 2025.

Conclusion

It was clear in the April 15, 2025 interview between the investigator and father that the father believed the investigator had the power to direct the IEP team's decisions. The investigator clarified with the father several times that the power of the investigator in this case, is limited to ascertaining whether the father's concerns were considered in the IEP meeting and that the district followed the appropriate IDEA regulation for providing notice and obtaining consent for changes for which consent is required.

In this case, the district considered the father's disagreement with the reduction in speech language services at the IEP team meeting. The IEP team, other than the father, agreed that the reduction in speech language services was appropriate. The district issued a PWN for these changes which was signed by the mother. According to the Kansas State Department of Education Kansas Special Education Process Manual "Consent from one parent is sufficient. In the event that the school receives responses from both parents, with one providing consent and the other denying consent, the school is deemed to have received consent and must fulfill its obligation to provide FAPE to the student. The parent who denies consent has the right to request mediation or file for due process." (page 19)

Based on the foregoing, the district followed the process as required by IDEA for consideration of issues raised by the IEP team and responded appropriately, in a timely manner with a PWN. The district is IN compliance and no corrective actions are required.

Issue Three

Did USD #229 discuss and respond to the father's request for Extended School Year (ESY)?

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.503(a)(2) states that prior written notice needs to be provided to the parents of a child with a disability a reasonable time before the public agency proposes or refuses to initiate or change the identification, evaluation, or educational placement of the child or the provision of FAPE to the child.

Parent Position

In the father's second complaint on April 11, 2025 he states, "ESY (extended school year) would be beneficial for his IEP improvement…"

District Position

As noted in the district's response, "[The father's] child was not eligible for ESY as noted on the parent signed April 17, 2024 IEP and the district proposed that [the student] again would not be eligible for ESY 2025. [The father] disagreed with this proposal and the district responded to his concerns as indicated in the first of two PWNs for the 4-10-2025 meeting. This PWN along with the meeting notes clearly shows that the district considered his input before deciding that the student did not qualify for ESY. As this was not a change to the IEP, parent consent was not necessary."

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The findings of Issues One and Two are incorporated herein by reference. The following finding of facts is based upon a review of the documentation noted previously and interviews with all parties.

1. In the notes from the April 10, 2025 IEP meeting, the request from the father for ESY was discussed as follows, "Extended School Year: [The case manager] reinforced that ESY is to remediate goals that are currently on [the student's] IEP. [The assistant superintendent] also clarified that the areas that [the father] is concerned about are more general education issues and those would not be addressed in ESY. [The assistant superintendent] asked both parents if either of them believe [the student] showed regression on [their] special education goals this year? If [the student] met all of [their] goals, we can't say [they] regressed. [The mother] agreed and stated that [student] reports that ESY is boring. [The father] again disagreed with the team proposal regarding ESY".
2. The district sent the PWN to refuse provision of ESY on April 11, 2025.
3. The mother signed the PWN giving consent on April 16, 2025.

Conclusion

In this case, the provision of ESY was discussed at the April 10, 2025 IEP meeting by members of the IEP team. The IEP team, other than the father, agreed that ESY was not appropriate.

Based on the foregoing, the district followed the process as required by IDEA for consideration of issues raised by the IEP team and responded appropriately, in a timely manner with a PWN. The district is IN compliance and no corrective actions are required.

Summary of Conclusions/Corrective Action

1. ISSUE ONE: A violation of 34 C.F.R. 300.503(a)(2) is not found based on the fact that a meeting between the father and school psychologist did not take place on November 5, 2024, the father did not raise the issue at the November 15, 2024 IEP meeting and once the request was made at the April 10, 2025 IEP meeting it was appropriately responded to by the district. Corrective action is not required.
2. ISSUE TWO: A violation of 34 C.F.R. 300.503(a)(2) is not found based on the district's consideration and response with a PWN for reduction in services. Corrective action is not required.

The doctor indicated they believed the Student did better on shortened school days.
47. A Staffing Record, dated March 3, 2025, indicated that the Parents were concerned about the Student's increased anxiety due to fear of their peers. Notes indicated the staff wanted to find a balance, push the Student when things were hard, and keep them around their peers as much as possible. Their response also indicated they would start the re-evaluation and shared possible adjustments to help reduce the Student's anxiety.
    c. One of the Parents replied on March 23, 2025 and reiterated they disagreed with sending the Student to the Alternative School or the State Center. They explained one of their major concerns was the lack of services from a certified Autism Specialist.

Interview Summaries

The following findings are based on interviews with the District and the Parents and have been compiled as interview summaries.

Special Education Teacher 2

56. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, Special Education Teacher 2 described the Student was placed in their class around December 2024 to receive more support with social skills. Special Education Teacher 2 explained their classroom was divided into three rooms: the classroom, an independent living area, and a sensory room with a bathroom. It was not a self-contained classroom.

57. Special Education Teacher 2 explained that sometimes the Student would be willing to engage in activities and sometimes they needed sensory breaks, choices given to them, or would refuse to participate. They indicated the Student was "refusing" the majority of the time. Special Education Teacher 2 explained the Student refused to work because the work was "baby-ish" or they simply did not want to do it.

58. Special Education Teacher 2 shared there were no issues implementing the Student's IEP. They indicated they implemented the following accommodations for the Student: providing choices, different seating, and someone to read with or to the Student. They said, "… when I did have activities with writing, [the Student] would join in most of the time or [they] would try." Special Education Teacher 2 explained that when there were writing assignments, the Student either had a piece of paper with everything spelled out for them, or if that was deemed too overwhelming, then either a paraprofessional or Special Education Teacher 2 would write for the Student.
59. Special Education Teacher 2 indicated the Student had one-on-one support in their classroom. They shared that in addition to themselves, there were two paraprofessionals in the classroom. Special Education Teacher 2 explained the Student had one-on-one support for lunch almost every day.
60. Special Education Teacher 2 perceived the Student's anxiety was brought on by the Student being "hyper-focused" on wanting to go home.
61. Special Education Teacher 2 perceived most of the Student's absences were due to medical reasons.
62. Special Education Teacher 2 said, "… if [the Student] was having a bad day, [they] would get extended time to think about [the] choices [they] wanted to make. If [the Student] requested a certain para[professional] to work with [them], we would try to work that out. … If [the Student] was requesting another [para] throughout the building, we would try to find out if they were busy, if they could come work with [them]."

Special Education Teacher 4

63. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, Special Education Teacher 4 explained that the teaching methods at the Alternative School were proactive and individualized to the student. They indicated a point sheet was used.
64. Special Education Teacher 4 described that for the Student's referrals from January 30, 2025 through March 5, 2025, they used positive statements and told the Student they had lost points, but could earn them back. They said the Student worked through their referrals and earned some points back.
65. Special Education Teacher 4 explained the Student had daily opportunities to interact with non-disabled peers while at the Alternative School.
66. Special Education Teacher 4 did not recall any issues implementing the Student's IEP.
67. Special Education Teacher 4 explained that they followed a behavior plan from the Student's previous school when they came to the Alternative School. They explained some additional items were added to the plan, including breaks and shortened time. Special Education Teacher 4 indicated it felt like they were following two plans, "the one that was amended in" and the Specialized Behavior Program. They indicated there were no conflicts between the two programs.
68. Special Education Teacher 4 recalled the Student had anxiety, but indicated they had positive interactions with the Student.

69. According to Special Education Teacher 4, the Student spent four days at the Alternative School.

Resource Room Teacher

70. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Resource Room Teacher described the Student's behavior as sometimes "erratic", and that the Student would often try to leave the classroom during the second hour. They shared the Student was not at school often. They recalled the Student would try to get out of doing work almost every day. The Resource Room Teacher did not recall issues implementing the Student's IEP. The Resource Room Teacher explained they implemented the Student's IEP by shortening their work, offering breaks, reading aloud to the Student and scribing for them. They did not recall any accommodations not being implemented.
71. The Resource Room Teacher recalled the Student would sometimes get nervous and they would offer the Student breaks, time to use their fidgets, or take a few breaths. They indicated it was "… hard to get [the Student] back after those breaks" and then the Student's anxiety would slowly increase to the point where the Student would not listen or participate.
72. The Resource Room Teacher recalled the Student was absent either due to illness or simply not wanting to attend.

Assistant Director of Special Education

73. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Assistant Director of Special Education explained the Student engaged in some general education classes and received special education services at the School. They explained the Student was demonstrating behaviors such as destroying property, aggression, elopement, and taking their clothes off. They brought in an Educational Behavioral Consultant to observe the Student for about three hours one day in December 2024.

    They continued that the Educational Behavioral Consultant shared their input with the Parents during a virtual meeting, after which, a plan was created to reduce the Student's time in the general education classroom. They indicated the Student had been on a shortened day at the Parents' request.

    The Assistant Director of Special Education explained they discussed the continuum of services with one of the Parents. They described an incident where the Student had been suspended, and the Assistant Director of Special Education suggested the Student receive some special education services at the building which housed the Alternative School. The Assistant Director of Special Education reported that after that day, the Student shared that they wanted to attend the Alternative School, which triggered an IEP meeting with all parties involved, including the Parents. They indicated there was a need to change placement.
74. The Assistant Director of Special Education explained that they discussed doing a re-evaluation to get updated data on academic and social-emotional information for the Student. The re-evaluation was going to start after spring break, but the Student did not return to the Alternative School, so other arrangements were made. They indicated a middle school teacher was conducting the academic assessments with the Student, and the teachers and Parents were completing the rating scales for the social-emotional portion. They shared there was no reason for a re-evaluation to be done prior to the one in March 2025. They said, "… there was never a request or a conversation about the need for a re[-]evaluation on our part until there was conversation about [the Student's] academic levels, and we determined that we were going to rewrite [their] IEP and to do that, we wanted updated academic information as well as social-emotional."

75. When asked about the Student's updated plan from January 13, 2025, the Assistant Director of Special Education shared that earlier in the year, the Parents had requested a shorter day and there was a plan to increase the Student's day slowly over time. When the Student returned after Christmas break, they had challenges transitioning back to school. One of the Parents asked to shorten the Student's day, which was done.

1. The Assistant Director of Special Education shared the plan with the Parents, who agreed to it. They explained that the plan changed to where the Student worked in their own classroom for first and second hour, and then went to Special Education Teacher 2's classroom for third and fourth hour. They shared this new information with the School staff via email on January 11, 2025.

76. The Assistant Director of Special Education did not recall any issues with implementing the Student's IEP.

77. The Assistant Director of Special Education indicated the Student had a BIP from the School. When it was decided the Student would attend the Alternative School, it was found that what was included in the Student's BIP was already built into the model of the Alternative School.

    The IEP team, including the Parents, agreed that the BIP would be removed from the Student's IEP and they would follow the Alternative School program. The Assistant Director of Special Education explained that if the IEP team later saw a need for something to be added, they would amend the IEP.

78. According to the Assistant Director of Special Education, the Alternative School used a specialized social-emotional and social skills curriculum that provided direct, explicit instruction to students. They explained the Alternative School also used a point system as part of that structure, and that the Student was able to get immediate feedback, rewards and incentives. They shared that the Alternative School implemented things that were already part of the Student's BIP.

79. The Assistant Director of Special Education indicated they received letters from outside physicians which stated that those professionals felt the Alternative School was not an appropriate placement for the Student. They recalled these were discussed at an IEP meeting in March 2025. The Assistant Director of Special Education indicated they did not have any documentation that the Student had epilepsy.

80. The Assistant Director of Special Education shared that when the Student was in sixth grade, Special Education Teacher 3 was their special education case manager, and was also on the Autism Interdisciplinary Team in the District. They explained the District provided training for all staff members regarding disabilities, including autism. They indicated that Special Education Teacher 3 attended the last IEP meeting in March 2025 and was conducting the academic testing for the Student's re-evaluation.

81. The Assistant Director of Special Education stated the Student received full day support, including at the Alternative School, but did not recall the IEP stating it had to be one-on-one support.

82. According to the Assistant Director of Special Education, one of the Parents requested an FBA, which was completed and the results were discussed at the IEP meeting on October 2, 2024. The BIP was developed and added to the IEP as an amendment on December 17, 2024. They shared the BIP was removed when the Student moved to the Alternative School.

83. The Assistant Director of Education shared that the IEP team initially recommended the Student attend a full day at the Alternative School. It was determined the Student would have a shortened day, but one that was longer than their day at their previous school. This was agreed to by the Parents. They indicated the Student did not attend the Alternative School long enough to increase their hours.

Director of Special Services

84. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Director of Special Services shared that the Student did not receive supports, accommodations or instruction after they were removed from the Alternative School in late March 2025. They said, "We told [the Parents] in the meeting when they decided to pull [the Student] that we would attempt to set something up just to keep [them] in contact with school staff and we don't have the staff to do it."

85. The Director of Special Services indicated that the Parents shared they did not believe the Alternative School was appropriate for the Student because of their autism diagnosis. They explained the Alternative School had staff well-trained to handle student behaviors, and the program included general education and special education students. They indicated they tried to tell the Parents that the Alternative School had several students who had autistic characteristics.

86. The Director of Special Services explained the District allowed the Student to remain on a shortened day when the Parents requested it, but maintained the offer of a full day.

87. The Director of Special Services explained the accommodations on the Student's IEP were determined by the IEP team, which include the Parents. They stated the Parents gave signed consent for the IEP accommodations.

The Parents

88. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Parent stated they did not believe the Student's IEP had all the necessary accommodations. They indicated that the use of a sensory room was missing from the IEP. The other Parent shared that there was not a plan written into the IEP for what would happen if the Student needed to be removed from the classroom if they had an episode. The other Parent believed that issue was also not addressed in the Student's BIP, and indicated this was when the Student was at the Alternative School. The other Parent indicated they believed the Student's BIP was not implemented correctly.
89. The Parent explained there were IEP meetings on March 3, 2025 and March 5, 2025 to discuss where the Student was going after the Alternative School. The Student's last day of school was March 5, 2025.
90. The Parent shared the Student had anxiety on the highway and PTSD due to a car accident. The Parent indicated this was why they did not want the Student to go to the State Center, in addition to concerns about the Student's epilepsy. The Parent indicated they did not think the District went through the proper steps before moving the Student to the Alternative School, which they did not believe had the proper accommodations for the Student's autism.
91. The Parent shared the Student was not receiving scribe services for their dysgraphia while at the Alternative School.

    The other Parent indicated they did not receive a copy of the Student's class notes because they were never sent home with the Student. They shared that they never saw anything that had been scribed for the Student. The other Parent said, "On occasion, there would be completed papers that were sent home. … but everything on there was [the Student's] handwriting … ."
92. The Parent explained the Student was supposed to be on a point/award system at the Alternative School, but alleged that was not happening.
93. The other Parent said, "I think the least restrictive environment for [the Student] would be in a regular school setting with somebody to be supervising [them] the whole time and following the behavior intervention plan."
94. At the time of the interview, the Parent stated the re-evaluation had just started. The other Parent indicated they emailed the District and encouraged them to do all parts of the re-evaluation.
95. The Parent observed the Student's anxiety worsened after attending the Alternative School.
96. Describing the Student's time at the Alternative School, the other Parent said, "And then the following week, they integrated [the Student] into the regular classroom with a full class. … And [the Student had] been on a shortened day the entire year. … All of a sudden [the Student's in] in a full day environment."
97. The Parent explained that the Student had completed an in-school suspension at the Alternative School on January 17, 2025. The Parent recalled the Student had told the Assistant Director of Special Education they wanted to attend the Alternative School. The Parent indicated they were told the Student would attend full days at the Alternative School, to which they disagreed, but stated were still implemented. The Parent described the Student had many episodes the second week they were going to the Alternative School.

98. The Parents shared they did not know why the Student's BIP was removed after the IEP meeting in January 2025 and it was not their suggestion. The other Parent recalled the Alternative School was going to use their behavior program model for the Student.

99. The Parent shared they were concerned the Student's speech and occupational therapy services were not done fully in person.

100. The other Parent indicated their understanding was that there was a paraprofessional in every classroom the Student was in. The Parent shared their understanding that the paraprofessional helped the Student stay engaged and focused.

Positions of the Parties, Applicable Regulations, and Conclusions

Issue One

Whether USD #290, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to develop an IEP that included the "proper accommodations" for the Student. K.A.R. 91-40-18; 34 CFR §300.320.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-18 and 34 CFR §300.320, in developing or reviewing the IEP of any exceptional child, each agency shall comply with the requirements of K.S.A. 72-3429 and amendments thereto, and shall consider the results of the child's performance on any general state or district-wide assessment programs. If, as a result of its consideration of the special factors described in K.S.A. 72-3429 and amendments thereto, an IEP team determines that a child needs behavioral interventions and strategies, accommodations, assistive technology devices or services, or other program modifications for the child to receive FAPE, the IEP team shall include those items in the child's IEP. Each agency shall ensure that the IEP of each exceptional child includes the information required by K.S.A. 72-3429 and amendments thereto, and shall give the parent a copy of the child's IEP at no cost to the parent.

The Parents alleged the IEP was missing the accommodation of a sensory room and that it did not contain a specific plan regarding what to do if the Student had to be removed from the classroom.

The District indicated that the Student's IEP contained the proper accommodations.

IEP Team Meeting notes from August 13, 2024, indicated one of the Parents wanted the Student to have a shortened school day. The notes also reported the Student had paraprofessional support throughout the day. The Assistant Director of Special Education stated the Student received full day support, including at the Alternative School, but did not recall the IEP stating it had to be one-on-one support. Notes from a phone call between one of the Parents and the Principal on August 30, 2024 indicated their request for an FBA was granted, and the Parents did not feel the Student was ready to increase their school day.

The Student's IEP, dated October 2, 2024, stated the Parents were concerned the Student was not ready for a full schedule and wanted to add time slowly. The IEP indicated the Student had been diagnosed with Developmental Coordination Disorder/Dysgraphia, and that their Autism, ADHD and Dysgraphia impacted their text comprehension, ability to produce legible written work, and their ability to solve multi-digit math problems. The Student also had diagnoses of Generalized Anxiety and PTSD. The IEP indicated that the Student's anxiety could impact their ability to fully engage in the school setting. The IEP included accommodations and services, but did not specifically state the Student had one-on-one support services. The Director of Special Services explained the Parents gave signed consent for the IEP accommodations.

On November 20, 2024, the Director of Special Education sent an email to start the referral process by having the Alternative School staff observe the Student and offer guidance on strategies to help maintain the Student at the School. A Functional Outline dated December 5, 2024 indicated a need to re-evaluate if the Student's biological needs were being met, and to use a plan that shortened the Student's school day. On January 17, 2025, it was decided the Student would attend the Alternative School, and reported that the Parents supported it. This was confirmed by the Assistant Director of Special Education.

The Assistant Director of Special Education shared that the IEP team initially recommended the Student attend a full day at the Alternative School. It was determined the Student would have a shortened day, but one that was longer than at their previous school, which the Parents agreed to. The Assistant Director of Special Education indicated the Student did not attend the Alternative School long enough to increase their hours. A letter from the Student's psychiatric nurse practitioner, dated February 14, 2025, requested that the Student be considered for one-on-one paraprofessional support and reduced school hours.

The Parents did not believe the Student was on a point system at the Alternative School, but there were Daily Points Score Sheets from January 27, 2025 through March 5, 2025. These recorded how the Student earned and lost points, point penalties, and total points. Referral reports from January 30, 2025 through March 5, 2025 detailed behavior incidents with the Student. The use of the score sheets and referral reports was confirmed by Special Education Teacher 4.

The Parents indicated the use of a sensory room was missing from the IEP, but Special Education Teacher 2 explained their classroom had a sensory room with a bathroom, and the Student had one-on-one support in their classroom. They also explained the Student was given extended time to think about choices and allowed to work with a preferred paraprofessional if requested.

The Student's IEP listed their diagnoses and how their disability impacted their ability to participate in the school environment, which informed the accommodations and services listed therein. While not a part of the IEP, the Parents stated several times they thought the Student wasn't ready for a full day, and a shortened day was accommodated by the District. The Parents' allegations that the Student was not using a point system or had access to a sensory room were refuted through documentation and interviews.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the District failed to develop an IEP that included the "proper accommodations" for the Student.

Issue Two

Whether USD #290, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, failed to implement the Student's IEP. K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(3); 34 C.F.R. § 300.323.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(3) and 34 C.F.R. § 300.323, an IEP is in effect for each exceptional child at the beginning of each school year.

The Parent alleged that the District failed to implement the Student's IEP.

The District responded that there were no issues implementing the Student's IEP.

Emails about paraprofessional coverage between August and October 2024 indicated the Student had no coverage for specific times on five days. Team Meeting Notes from October 2, 2024 detailed what was reviewed in the IEP, and also stated the IEP team agreed to tentatively extend the Student's day by 30 minutes every two weeks, starting October 8, 2024. A PWN dated October 2, 2024 indicated that on the same day, the team reviewed the Student's evaluation/assessment data. It also stated that starting October 2, 2024, the Student would receive speech/language services, occupational therapy services, and special education services. The District offered the Student a full school day as part of a FAPE, but the Parents elected for a shortened school day, which the Director of Special Services confirmed. In an email dated October 3, 2024, the Assistant Director of Special Education stated the IEP team planned to gradually increase the Student's school day with the goal of a full return by January, with adjustments as needed.

Between October 6-11, 2024, School staff discussed developing a BIP for the Student. Between October 28-29, 2024, emails were exchanged between District staff regarding the BIP. The School Psychologist emailed the draft of the Student's BIP to the IEP team on November 1, 2024. Staffing Record notes from November 4, 2024 reported the School Psychologist discussed the Student's FBA and BIP with the Parents, and the team agreed to make changes and implement the BIP. Between November 18-22, 2024, the School Psychologist and the IEP team worked on the BIP. The School Psychologist emailed the Parents a draft of the BIP on November 25, 2024. Between December 9-17, 2024, emails were exchanged between the School Psychologist and the IEP team about the BIP.

An IEP amendment, dated December 16, 2024, indicated the BIP would be added to the Student's supports. A PWN dated December 17, 2024 detailed what was described in the aforementioned amendment. The Parents signed the BIP on December 19, 2024. The other Parent alleged there was not a plan written into the IEP or BIP about what would happen if the Student needed to be removed from the classroom if they had an episode. The Student's BIP summary, dated January 9, 2025, detailed several items, including providing the Student with "safe areas" within and outside the classroom, and moving the Student to another area if they were dysregulated.

An updated plan for the Student, which was implemented on January 13, 2025, detailed the Student's day would end at 10:30 a.m. and then their schedule would be gradually extended. It also stated staff should review the Student's BIP. The Assistant Director of Special Education stated the Student's day was shortened at the Parents' request, and the plan was shared with staff on January 11, 2025.

On January 22, 2025, the Assistant Director of Special Education shared the Student's BIP with the Alternative School staff. The next day, the School Psychologist at the Alternative School asked for a copy of the Student's IEP and re-evaluation from October 2024. Notes from January 23, 2025 about the Student's move to the Alternative School reported that the School team and the Parents agreed the Student would start full-time at the Alternative School and the BIP would be rewritten to address the Student's needs. The Parents signed a referral form on January 24, 2025. On January 26, 2025 the Assistant Director of Special Education shared a summary of the Student's academic performance with the Alternative School staff.

A PWN dated January 27, 2025 indicated the Student's IEP had been changed, with adjustments to the change of placement, change of services to a full day of service in the special education setting, removing the BIP, and that the Student's classes would be provided in the special education setting at the Alternative School. The Assistant Director of Special Education explained that the IEP team, including the Parents, agreed the BIP would be removed from the Student's IEP and they would follow the Alternative School program. The Parents gave their signed consent on January 29, 2025, but the Parents shared they did not know why the BIP was removed. A Staffing Record and IEP Amendment from January 24, 2025 described what was discussed in the PWN. According to the Assistant Director of Special Education, the Alternative School used a specialized social-emotional and social skills curriculum, and implemented strategies that were already part of the BIP.

An email from the Assistant Director of Special Education to one of the Parents and the Assistant Principal, dated February 23, 2025, indicated the Assistant Director of Special Education talked to the Assistant Principal about staff reviewing the Student's IEP. An IEP meeting was scheduled for March 3, 2025. An email from one of the Parents on March 4, 2025 shared they did not want the Student at the Alternative School. A meeting was scheduled for March 12, 2025. One of the Parents signed a Parent Questionnaire For Initial Evaluation on March 11, 2025. The Student's last day of school was March 5, 2025.

During interviews, Special Education Teacher 2, Special Education Teacher 4, the Resource Room Teacher, and the Assistant Director of Special Education stated there were no issues implementing the Student's IEP. The Parent indicated they did not think the District went through the proper steps before moving the Student to the Alternative School, which they did not believe had the proper accommodations for the Student's autism diagnosis.

Special Education Teacher 2 indicated they implemented the following accommodations for the Student: providing choices, different seating, someone to read with or to the Student, and writing for the Student. The Parent claimed the Student was not receiving scribe services for their dysgraphia while at the Alternative School and never saw anything that had been scribed.

Special Education Teacher 4 explained that they followed a behavior plan from the Student's previous school when they came to the Alternative School. They indicated it felt like they were following two plans, but that the plans did not conflict. The Resource Room Teacher explained they implemented the Student's IEP by shortening their work, offering breaks, reading aloud to the Student and scribing for them. They recalled the Student would sometimes get nervous and they would offer the Student breaks, time to use their fidgets, or take a few breaths.

Evidence showed the District followed protocol for the IEP, PWNs, the BIP and meeting notes, and that they made regular updates to documents as necessary. Documentation showed the District engaged in other steps prior to the Student attending the Alternative School. During interviews, staff detailed how they implemented the Student's IEP.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the District failed to implement the Student's IEP.

Issue Three

Whether USD #290, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, failed to consider and offer the Student an IEP in their least restrictive environment. K.S.A. 72-3420, K.A.R. 91-40-1.(II), K.A.R. 91-40-21; 34 CFR § 300.116.

According to K.S.A. 72-3420, each school district shall be required, to the maximum extent appropriate, to educate children with disabilities with children who are not disabled, and to provide special classes, separate schooling or for the removal of children with disabilities from the regular education environment only when the nature or severity of the disability of the child is such that education in regular classes with supplementary aids and services cannot be achieved satisfactorily. Nothing in this section shall be construed to authorize the state board or any board to function as an admitting agency to the state institutions or to limit or supersede or in any manner affect the requirements of each board to comply with the provisions of K.S.A. 72-3410, and amendments thereto, to provide special education services for each exceptional child in the school district unless and until such child meets the criteria for admission to a state institution and is so admitted by the state institution. Each state institution shall publish the criteria for admission to such state institution and shall furnish such criteria to each board upon request therefore.

K.A.R. 91-40-1.(ll) states that "Least restrictive environment" and "LRE" mean the educational placement in which, to the maximum extent appropriate, children with disabilities are educated with children who are not disabled.

K.A.R. 91-40-21 and 34 CFR § 300.116 state that each agency shall ensure that the children with disabilities served by the agency are educated in the LRE.

The Parents alleged the Student was moved to the Alternative School without trying other options first, such as positive behavior supports, autism specialists, or a life skills classroom. They claimed this negatively impacted the Student.

The District responded that the Student was referred to the Alternative School due to continued behavior problems. The District indicated that due to the Student's struggles, a plan was created to pull back on their time in the general education classroom.

The Student's IEP from October 2, 2024 indicated the Student would have the opportunity to participate with non-identified peers in all general education classes, except for when they received direct special education. The Student would also have the opportunity to participate in clubs, sports, field trips, assemblies and special events to the same extent as non-identified peers.

The Assistant Director of Special Education explained the Student engaged in some general education classes and received special education services at the School. A Staffing Record from March 12, 2025 indicated the Parents believed the Student should not be in the Alternative School setting. Special Education Teacher 4 explained the Student had daily opportunities to interact with non-disabled peers while at the Alternative School. The Director of Special Services explained the Alternative School included general education and special education students. The other Parent thought the least restrictive environment for the Student was in a regular school setting with somebody supervising them.

The IEP indicated the Student would have opportunities to interact with non-identified peers, which was bolstered by statements from the Assistant Director of Education and Special Education Teacher 4. There was not substantial evidence to show the Student was kept from interacting with non-identified peers.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the District failed to consider and offer the Student an IEP in their least restrictive environment.

Issue Four

Whether USD #290, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, failed to conduct a re-evaluation for the Student. K.S.A. 72-3428(h)(1)(2); 34 CFR § 300.303.

According to K.S.A. 72-3428(h)(1)(2) and 34 CFR § 300.303, each agency shall ensure that a reevaluation of each exceptional child is conducted if the agency determines that the educational or related services needs of the child, including academic achievement or functional performance, warrant a reevaluation; or if the child's parent or teacher requests a reevaluation. An agency shall conduct a reevaluation of a child not more frequently than once a year, unless the parent and the agency agree otherwise; and at least once every three years, unless the parent and the agency agree that a reevaluation is unnecessary.

The Parents stated they decided to pull the Student out of the Alternative School until the District could find a more appropriate placement and perform a re-evaluation.

The District indicated that a re-evaluation was started in March 2025.

A PWN dated September 5, 2024, indicated that the District proposed to conduct a re-evaluation of the Student, which had been requested by the Parents. The Parents gave their signed consent on September 9, 2024. A PWN dated October 2, 2024 showed the team met to discuss the Student's evaluation/assessment data and the proposed actions. A Staffing Record from March 3, 2025, indicated the Parents were concerned about the Student's increased anxiety, and a re-evaluation was recommended. A PWN from March 4, 2025 indicated the District proposed to conduct a re-evaluation. It was signed by one Parent on March 5, 2025, and the other Parent on March 11, 2025. The Assistant Director of Special Education explained the re-evaluation was supposed to start after spring break, but other arrangements were made when the Student did not return to the Alternative School.

On March 24, 2025 the Director of Special Education asked the Parents if they wanted the District to perform cognitive testing for the re-evaluation, and one of the Parents replied they wanted to wait. However, the other Parent indicated they emailed the District and encouraged them to do all parts of the re-evaluation. A middle school teacher was conducting the academic assessments with the Student, and the teachers and Parents were completing the rating scales for the social-emotional portion.

Based on the evidence, a re-evaluation of the Student was initiated in September 2024. A second re-evaluation was started in March 2025, and is ongoing at the time of this report.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the District failed to conduct a re-evaluation for the Student

Issue Five

Whether USD #290, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, failed to provide the Student with a free appropriate public education. K.A.R. 91-40-1(z); 34 C.F.R. § 300.101.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-1(z) and 34 C.F.R. § 300.101, "Free appropriate public education" and "FAPE" mean special education and related services that are provided at public expense, under public supervision and direction, and without charge; meet the standards of the state board; include an appropriate preschool, elementary, or secondary school education; and are provided in conformity with an individualized education program.

The Parent alleged that the District did not follow the proper protocol before moving the Student to the Alternative School.

The District contended they did not deny the Student a FAPE and services were provided in alignment with the Student's IEP.

The Student's Daily Behavior Tracking sheets from August 2024 through January 2025 indicated the Student experienced observable anxiety on multiple occasions and showed the Student's behavior demonstrated a pattern of fluctuating emotional regulation, in addition to positive instances of Student participation and self-regulation. The evidence did not include a tracking sheet for every day. Emails from one of the Parents indicated the Student was absent seven times from September 2024 through December 2024. In an email from October 3, 2024, the Assistant Director of Special Education instructed that the service minutes in the Student's IEP reflect full-day school services.

Notes from a phone call with one of the Parents, dated February 26, 2025, indicated the Student was experiencing anxiety and did not want to return to school. A letter from the Student's doctor, dated February 28, 2025, stated the Student's anxiety had worsened and they did not feel the Alternative School was right for the Student. The Assistant Director of Special Education confirmed receipt of the letters, and that the issues were discussed in an IEP meeting in March 2025.

On March 13, 2025, one of the Parents emailed the Director of Special Education and indicated they did not want the Student at the Alternative School. The Director of Special Education responded they were working on a schedule to provide services and conduct evaluations while the Student was at home. On March 20, 2025, the Director of Special Education emailed the Parents and explained that due to staffing constraints, it wasn't feasible at the time. On March 23, 2025 the Parents explained one of their concerns was the lack of services from a certified Autism Specialist. The Assistant Director of Special Education explained the District provided training for all staff members regarding disabilities, including autism.

Special Education Teacher 2 perceived the Student's anxiety was brought on by the Student being "hyper-focused" on wanting to go home, and that most of the Student's absences were due to medical reasons. The Resource Room Teacher recalled the Student was absent either due to illness or not wanting to attend. There was not substantial evidence to show absences were due to educationally-based reasons.

Through documentation and observations stated in interviews, it was determined the Student experienced anxiety, but that most of their absences were due to medical reasons and happened before they attended the Alternative School. While the District did not provide instruction for the Student after the Parents removed them from the Alternative School, and there were five documented instances where the Student did not have paraprofessional coverage, these did not amount to "material failures."

Relevant case law includes E.C. v. U.S.D. 385 Andover (2020), which held that the district's occasional deviations from the BIP did not amount to a material implementation failure. Because a Kansas district's failure to follow an elementary school student's BIP on three occasions did not cause any lasting harm, the student was not entitled to relief for the implementation failures. U.S. District Judge Eric F. Melgren noted that the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, which includes Kansas, has not decided whether parents are only entitled to relief for a "material" implementation failure. Based on rulings from other federal Circuit Courts, however, the judge determined the parents in this case would need to prove a significant deviation from the BIP. Judge Melgren observed that the parents failed to meet that standard.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the District failed to provide the Student with a FAPE.

The Investigator first spoke with the mother by phone on March 26, 2025 and again on April 11, 2025. The Investigator spoke with the district special education director by phone on March 10, 2025 and April 10, 2025 to clarify the issues and discuss requested evidence. The investigator interviewed the mother of the classmate who reported hearing a teacher disclose personally identifiable information during a phone conversation on April 9, 2025. The investigator interviewed Amanda Todd, School Psychologist; Michael Rasmussen, Assistant Principal; Kinsey Binger, ELA teacher; Kristi Childs Case manager; Leann Voor Vart, Special Education Consultant; and Jennie Perdieu, District Special Education Director on April 9, 2025 by video conference. The investigator then interviewed two paraeducators, Deb Prater-Newell and Leah Moser on April 21, 2025 by video conference with Amanda Todd, School Psychologist.

Background Information

The student is a fourteen-year-old ninth grader who is eligible for special education and related services under the category of specific learning disability, with a subcategory of dyslexia according to the student's initial special education evaluation dated May 15, 2024. According to the special education evaluation report the student received the diagnosis of dyslexia during May 2022 and prior to eligibility had a Section 504 plan to provide the following accommodations for the dyslexia: 1) One additional school day to complete assignments; 2) Advanced notice to practice before reading aloud; 3) Shortened assignments to demonstrate mastery; 4) Extended time (up to 1.5x) to complete exams; 5) Access to text-to-voice technology available on the school issued device; 6) Access to teacher-provided notes; 7) Allowed to have questions on a test read aloud; 8) Checklist for multi-step tasks (Ex: assignment directions, mathematical procedures, paper editing, etc.); 9) Provided directions in a variety of ways; 10) Preferential seating, near the teacher and away from distractions; 11) Utilize a quiet, separate setting for testing and/or completing assignments; and 12) Enrolled in the reading strategies class (an intervention class to help students work on reading skills) and FLEX class (focused and targeted on helping students complete work and work on their executive functioning skills)

The PWN dated May 16, 2024 recorded, "For the remainder of the 23-24 school year, [student] will have indirect services with [student's] special education teacher in order to ensure [student] is being provided with accommodations and modifications as the year ends. For the 2024-2025 school year, [student] will have access to the following special education services:- 90 minutes of special education services in the special education setting 2 days a week to address IEP goals related to encoding and decoding- 53 minutes of special education services in the special education setting 1 day a week to address IEP goals related to encoding and decoding- 90 minutes of special education services in the general education setting 2 days a week to support learning in the ELA classroom- 53 minutes of special education services in the general education setting 1 day a week to support learning in the ELA classroom."

Issues Investigated

ISSUE ONE: Did the district implement the student's IEP specific to instructional and testing accommodations and direct instruction in decoding listed in the May 15, 2024 IEP during 2024-2025 school year?

ISSUE TWO: Did one of the student's teachers disclose personally identifiable information about the student to other students during the 2024-2025 school year?

Issue One

Did the district implement the student's IEP specific to instructional and testing accommodations and direct instruction in decoding listed in the May 15, 2024 IEP during 2024-2025 school year?

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.323(c)(2) require school districts to ensure that as soon as possible following the development of the IEP, special education and related services are made available to the child in accordance with the child's IEP. K.A.R. §91-40-16(b)(2) further specifies those services for which written consent has been granted as specified by law are implemented not later than 10 school days after parental consent is granted unless reasonable justification for a delay can be shown.

K.S.A. 72-3429(c)(7) states that the IEP for each exceptional child shall include: the projected date for the beginning of the services and modifications described in provision (4), and the anticipated frequency, location, and duration of those services and modifications.

Parent Position

The Mother alleged that the student is not being given the accommodations listed in the student's IEP in spite of reaching out to each teacher, the assistant principal and director of special education. Further, the parent alleged that "There is no structured literacy instruction. When I pointed this out, one was implemented. I'm not allowed to see it and the assignments are due in class. It is also an online course of [student] teaches [self]." The parent stated that she was "offered a formal IEP meeting as my only option to discuss my concerns which, I believe, could be resolved with a change in [student's] special education teacher and some reinforcement from administration when accommodations are consistently ignored."

District Position

The district responded that teachers implemented the instructional and testing accommodations included in the May 15, 2024 IEP during the 2024-2025 school year.

Teachers were informed of the IEP accommodations through meetings and conversations and at the start of the school year and at the start of the second semester. In addition, an IEP at a Glance document was finalized on August 27, 2024 and automatically distributed to all of the student's teachers at that time.

During the school year teachers shared their concern that the student often refused the accommodation provided. These refusals were recorded by both the ELA and Biology teachers. When the student received poor grades for not completing assignments (with accommodations), the parent would believe that the teachers had refused to provide the accommodations. Time and again, the parent would communicate that the accommodations were not being followed. When the parent raised these issues, the school offered an IEP meeting to discuss the concerns. The parent refused to attend or did not respond to the offer.

In regard to allegation about providing literacy instruction, the district responded that the student has been provided structured literacy instruction in the case manager's study skills class since the beginning of the school year, using district resources and later an online resource for the student's practice. The district reports that the student has met and exceeded IEP goals, despite becoming increasingly disengaged in the class this semester and openly telling the case manager that the student does not have to participate.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

Accommodations:

The IEP dated May 16, 2024 in effect during the 2024-2025 school year lists the following accommodations under the section, Supplementary Aids and Services (Accommodations and Modifications) These listed accommodations do not list the start date, location, frequency, and duration.

1. Student will have up to one school day of extended time to complete class assignments.
2. Student may complete shortened assignments to demonstrate mastery (to be determined by the resource teacher, general education teacher, and student as needed as a team)
3. When written work is not being assessed for written expression, student will be offered the option to demonstrate knowledge via a video submission or answering questions orally, as determined by the teacher.
4. The student will have teacher-provided notes. Completed copies of notes and study guides will be handed directly to the student, if not readily available on Canvas.
5. The student will be provided directions in a variety of ways (i.e., verbally and written)
6. The student will be provided a checklist for multi-step tasks/assignments (Ex: assignment directions, mathematical procedures, paper editing, etc.) when the assignment is not already broken down in chunks for the whole class.

7. Student will be given advanced notice to practice before reading aloud (please do not call on student without prior notice to read aloud in class.)
8. The student will have preferential seating, near the teacher and away from distractions.
9. The student will be offered to use dictation software for written work.
10. The student will have text-to-voice technology available on the student's school issued device
11. The student will have access to audiobooks. Extended time will be considered based on the extended time it takes to listen to audio versus to read.
12. The student will have access to headphones during independent work time, but not during class times when the teacher is providing direct instruction. Noise-canceling headphones with no music are allowed in class. If the student needs a distraction-free environment for independent work, the student will be offered a quiet separate setting to complete assignments. Headphones can be used in a setting separate from other students.
13. If an assignment is to be completed without the use of word processing technology, points for incorrect spelling, punctuation, or capitalization should not be lost. Points will not be lost for errors in spelling, capitalization, or punctuation when using word processing technology when these skills are not being measured.
14. Three testing accommodations include: 1) the student will be allowed extended time (up to 1.5x) to complete exams; 2) the student will be offered to have questions on a test read aloud; and 3) the student will be offered (privately) to utilize a quiet, separate setting for testing.

The IEP dated May 16, 2024 in effect during the 2024-2025 school year additionally lists four accommodations for assessment that include: 1) take test in a quiet, non-competitive setting; 2) alternate testing format; 3) extended time; and 4) oral test administration and finally, one environmental accommodation to provide support with an organizational system. The assessment accommodations list the start date, location, frequency, and duration in the Assessment section of the IEP.

The district response records that on August 1, 2024 the middle school psychologist stated, "that major changes beyond what was discussed at the initial 8th grade IEP require a meeting with the high school team, copying [school psychologist] to take over".

Emails and documents show that during the summer the mother provided the school with revised accommodations to be made to the May 16, 2024 IEP. Early in August emails between the mother and school psychologists document that the mother intended for the accommodations to be revised to indicate that the accommodation will not be a choice for the student. The Prior Written Notice signed by the parent on August 13, 2024 do not document these changes.

Emails and Notices of Meetings document that the district proposed multiple IEP meetings during the 2024-2025 school year to discuss accommodations and other IEP issues, but no meetings were ever held.

The IEP at a Glance, dated August 27, 2024 included the accommodations listed in the May 16, 2024 IEP. During the interview, all staff indicated they had received or distributed this document and were familiar with the content. During the interview with the staff on April 9, 2025 the general education teacher and other staff were able to describe how the accommodations were implemented with the subject area.

The district stated that as a school their practice with their high school students is that while accommodations are always offered to students at the school they do honor a student's expression to not use an accommodation. Paras stated that when a student declines an accommodation that is included in a student's IEP that would be helpful they will privately talk with the student to learn why they might not be using the accommodation. One example of solving this is that students who can take tests in a quiet environment report directly to the "Satellite room" rather than have to report to the classroom get the test and then walk to the separate setting. The school reports that this is how the student's accommodation is provided for testing.

The paraeducators told the investigator that they are assigned to general education classrooms and then prior to the beginning of the semester during a professional development day they learn more about the accommodations, go over the student's IEP at a Glance document and discuss with the student's case manager and general education teacher how to deliver and use the accommodation in the content class.

The district disclosed in their district response and during interview that while compiling evidence to respond to this complaint, the district identified one time in when a testing accommodation was not offered immediately. The case manager discovered that the student had not received oral test administration for a biology quiz and a test taken in the Satellite testing center. By the time the parent reached out to raise the concern, the case manager had already rectified the situation by re-administering the quiz and test to the student orally.

Literacy Instruction:

The May 16, 2024 IEP includes two literacy goals: one for decoding and one for encoding. The August 10, 2024 PWN revises the service minutes written in the May 16, 2024 IEP to coincide with the high school schedule and lists 90 minutes of special education services in the special education setting 2 days a week to address IEP goals related to encoding and decoding- 53 minutes of special education services in the special education setting 1 day a week to address IEP goals related to encoding and decoding- 90 minutes of special education services in the general education setting 2 days a week to support learning in the ELA classroom- 53 minutes of special education services in the general education setting 1 day a week to support learning in the ELA classroom.

The mother emailed the case manager February 4, 2025 stating, '[student] continues to have the lowest of all [student's] grades in your class and [student's] FastBridge scores demonstrate [student's] definitely not receiving any structured literacy or reading strategies instruction. [Student's] reading scores fell from the 49th to the 11th percentile in three months and [student's] auto reading dropped from the 33rd to the 25th percentile. It's disheartening to say the least." The case manager replied later that day the following explanation, "I am happy to share [student's] progress with you and the structured literacy instruction that [student] has received so far. I would interpret [student's] FastBridge scores with extreme caution – I had to prompt [student] to wake up several times during this computerized screener that is given to all freshmen. As a student with an IEP for reading, that is not a data point we heavily rely on, as we do more in-depth progress monitoring of specific reading skills [student] is practicing. As far as the "due now" assignments in my class, these are very short (~5-10 minute) assignments where the purpose is to engage in the learning in that moment. [Student] has 90 minutes (or 45 minutes on Fridays) to do these ~5-10 minute assignments, with my assistance. If [student] has a zero, it reflects refusal to engage in the assignment after multiple prompts. Today during Study Skills when we were going over the day's assignments (including the assignment you asked me to help [student] with), [student] said that [student] would just do them tonight at home. I am concerned about [student's] hesitancy to accept the help offered to [student] in my class and other classes as well as the sleeping. I would still very much like to schedule a team meeting, and we could even go ahead and update the annual IEP at that time since we have gotten to know [student]."

The student's case manager described how the service minutes to teach the student's literacy goals are taught during the study skills class. On a typical week, one particular literacy skill is addressed explicitly through a structured literacy lesson. The lesson is planned out using a lesson plan template that was provided by the district as part of the district's best practice regarding literacy instruction. This instruction is typically followed by a worksheet packet that allows the student to practice the skills that were explicitly taught. The packets generally contain a decodable reading passage as well as activities to practice spelling. The handouts are consistent with the student's FastBridge scores for reading at the 5th grade level. The case manager clarified that the handouts provided by the complainant from the measuredmom.com are examples of these and regularly used by all case managers teaching literacy in the district. These lessons introduce students to new words, provide a reading passage to practice comprehension/word-meaning skills, and allow practice of word meaning and word relationships.

The study skills class has a focus on reading instruction but also includes other topics such as executive functioning skills and transition skills (college and career exploration/readiness). In addition, the student receives special education adult support in the general education ELA 9 class.

The complainant and case manager agreed that the student started using computer apps about three weeks before spring break to practice literacy skills. An email from the case manager on February 13, 2025 provided the mother a description of Lexia PowerUp Literacy, an online literacy program to be completed during class time on Canvas. The student was awarded points via Canvas assignments for completion. This program was added for additional practice on literacy skills and to allow the teacher to gather valid data on student engagement and potential growth.

The student's progress notes since the initial IEP document student progress: Decoding Baseline averaged 86%. The October Progress Report documented a 90% average. The December Progress Report reported a 88% average, and the March Progress Report documented a 97% average. For the Encoding goal the baseline was recorded at 80% average. The October Progress Report reported an 88% average. The December Progress Report reported an 85% average, and the March Progress Report reported a 91% average. It was further documented that due to an inconsistent schedule during the third quarter the assessment that was used the previous two quarters will be re-administered after the break.

Conclusion

The investigation indicates that a number of accommodations were written into the initial, May 16, 2024 IEP but they did not include a duration, location, or frequency except for those used in state and district testing. This is a procedural violation according to K.S.A. 72-3429(c)(7) which states that the IEP for each exceptional child shall include the projected date for the beginning of the services and modifications described in provision and the anticipated frequency, location, and duration of those services and modifications. Interview and emails reveal that there was disagreement between the mother and district about whether the student was refusing the accommodation written into the IEP or did not have the understanding or self-advocacy to ask for an accommodation. This was further complicated by the lack of any IEP meeting during the 2024-2025 school year to discuss and refine the accommodations. There were several Notices of Meeting, email exchanges and interviews that showed that the IEP team did not meet during the 2024-2025 school year. Documentation was collected in at least two of the student's classes showing that accommodation were offered to the student and that the student declined. The paraeducators reported that they often sought out students to problem solve with the student how to implement the accommodations.

In another case the district identified two instances where an accommodation was not provided but quickly corrected the error.

It is beyond the role of the investigation to determine if the student needs instruction in how to ask for and use accommodations and whether the student should be allowed to decline. This is the role of the IEP team and should be recorded in the duration, frequency, and location of the accommodations. In summary, it is found that the district committed a procedural error by not including the duration, location and frequency and is OUT of compliance for not implementing the student's accommodations.

In regard to implementation of the literacy goals it is found that the staff were able to describe how the literacy goals were taught. The staff described lessons, materials, and how the literacy skills were supported in the general education classes. The location of instruction and student schedule was consistent with what the IEP services indicated. Progress goals showed that the student improved in literacy skills. Based on review of the services written into the IEP, descriptions of how the goals were taught and data from the progress reports it is found that the district is IN compliance with implementing the literacy goals and services.

Issue Two

Did one of the student's teachers disclose personally identifiable information about the student to other students during the 2024-2025 school year?

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §§300.610 through 300.626 identify the confidentiality requirements that apply to children under Part B of the IDEA. They protect the personally identifiable information (PII) in education records collected, maintained, or used under Part B of the IDEA. 34 C.F.R §300.32 defines PII as information that contains the name of the child, the child's parent, or other family member; the address of the child; a personal identifier, such as the child's social security number of student number; or a list of personal characteristics or other information that would make it possible to identify the child with reasonable certainty.

Under 34 CFR § 300.622(a) of the IDEA Part B regulations, parental consent must be obtained before PII is disclosed to parties, other than officials of participating agencies. Under IDEA Part B and pursuant to the FERPA regulations at 34 CFR § 99.31(a)(1), prior written consent is not required to disclose PII from student education records to school officials, including teachers, within the educational agency or institution, whom the agency or institution has determined to have legitimate educational interests. 34 C.F.R. § 99.31(a)(1)(i)(A).

Unless the district has parent consent, or a FERPA exception applies, a district must prevent the disclosure to any unauthorized person of personally identifiable information from student records. Disclosure is the release, transfer or other communication of records, or the personally identifiable information contained in those records, to any party, by any means, including oral, written, or electronic.

Parent Position

The parent alleged in the complaint that the student's "[general education] teacher was bragging to another class about not giving a dyslexic student [student's] accommodations (specifically shortening [student's] assignments) because [student] wouldn't work in class. [General education teacher] was very clearly referring to [student] and the other students happened to be friends of [student] and told [student]. The teacher even referenced where [student] sat in the class."

District Position

The district responded that the teacher did not know what the parent was referring to with the allegation and the district does not have any written documentation regarding the allegation. When approached with the allegation the teacher stated that [teacher] does not share confidential information with students about other students.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The findings of Issue One are incorporated herein by reference.

The investigator interviewed the general education teacher on April 9, 2025 who denied the allegation stating that it would be highly unprofessional to speak of another student in front of other students. The teacher further stated during the interview on April 9, 2025 that if speaking with other staff about a student's assignments, accommodations, or behavior that that conversation would occur outside of student class hours.

The mother of the classmate who reported hearing the teacher disclose personally identifiable information stated her child had not told her about the incident. The classmate's mother stated that her child overheard the reported statements as the teacher was talking to another staff approximately one week before the complaint was filed. The mother reported that after hearing the statements her child repeated the statement to the student who then reported it to the complainant.

The investigator talked with two paraeducators who work in the teacher's class. In response to being asked what they do when they need to discuss a student with a general education teacher they reported they step out into the hallway. They stated that at the beginning of the semester during a professional development day they go over how to support the students and receive the IEP at a glance to learn what each student needs. They additionally reported they had not personally overhead any teachers talking with any student or teacher about any other student.

The complainant said that her student came to her and stated what the classmate said. The complainant said that her belief was that the teacher made the statement to students, not adults and is not sure if other adults are assigned to work in the classroom. The complainant said she did not report the incident to anyone at the school because she was already considered a troublemaker in the school and did not think it would be taken seriously. The parent stated she thought the teacher was a good teacher but was no longer helping her child.

The accommodation log for the content area dated from September 13, 2024 through April 14, 2025 documents that accommodations were offered.

Conclusion

The investigation of this issue was conducted entirely through interview. The issue was complicated as the allegation were made through a thirdhand report and the disclosure was reported between minors (student and classmate). The investigator determined to not interview the minor classmate and instead interview the classmate's mother to ensure the classmate's identity was not disclosed. The conclusion for this allegation was investigated with two goals, 1) was personally identifiable information disclosed and 2) was the disclosure related to the teacher not providing accommodations. All persons interviewed were highly credible and believable so it was difficult to singularly determine if personally identifiable information was disclosed from the interviews. Since the issue was related to disclosing personally identifiable information about not providing accommodations the accommodation log was used to determine if accommodations continued to be offered following the timeframe that the statement was alleged to be made. As the accommodation log demonstrated that accommodations continued to be offered during the entire school year the investigator found that the district is IN compliance with IDEA regulations.

ISSUE ONE: A violation of 34 C.F.R. §300.323(c)(2); K.A.R. §91-40-16(b)(2) was found, based on the facts above. Corrective action is required.

1. By May 30, 2025 USD #229 shall submit a written statement of assurance to Special Education and Title Services (SETS) stating that it will comply with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) at 34 C.F.R. §300.323(c)(2); K.A.R. §91-40-16(b)(2) and K.S.A. 72-3429(c)(7) by implementing the student's IEP and including the projected date for the beginning of the services and modifications described in provision and the anticipated frequency, location, and duration of those services and modifications.
2. By the start of the 2025-2026 school year the district shall convene an IEP meeting with the student's IEP team to review each instructional and testing accommodations and include the required accommodations and include the projected date for beginning services, anticipated frequency, location, and duration for each. Additionally, the IEP team should discuss whether the student needs instruction on how to self-advocate for and use accommodations. The revised IEP/amendment and prior written notice shall be provided to Special Education and Title Services (SETS) within one week after the IEP meeting.

ISSUE TWO: A violation of 34 C.F.R §300.32; 34 C.F.R. §§300.610 through 300.626 was not found, based on the facts above. Corrective action is not required.

If, after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the agency shall be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following:

(A) The issuance of an accreditation deficiency advisement;

In the Matter of the Appeal of the Report
Issued in Response to a Complaint Filed
Against Unified School District No. 229,
Blue Valley Public Schools: 25FC229-006

DECISION OF THE APPEAL COMMITTEE

Background

This matter commenced with the filing of a complaint on March 17, 2025, by ------ on behalf of her child, ------. In the remainder of this decision, ------ will be referred to as "the complainant," and ------ will be referred to as "the student." An investigation of the complaint was undertaken by a complaint investigator on behalf of the Special Education, and Title Services team at the Kansas State Department of Education. Following the investigation, a Complaint Report, addressing the allegations, was issued on May 2, 2025. That Complaint Report concluded that there was a violation of special education statutes and regulations in Issue one, but not in issue 2.

Thereafter, the complainant filed an appeal of the Complaint Report, appealing the conclusion that no violation occurred with regard to Issue two. Upon receipt of the appeal, an Appeal Committee was appointed and it reviewed the original complaint, the Complaint Report, the complainant's notice of appeal, and the district's response to the appeal. The Appeal Committee has reviewed the information provided in connection with this matter and now issues this Appeal Decision.

Preliminary Matters

A copy of the regulation regarding the filing of an appeal [K.A.R. 91-40-51(f)] was attached to the Complaint Report. That regulation states, in part, that: "Each notice shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect." Accordingly, the burden for supplying a sufficient basis for appeal is on the party submitting the appeal. When a party submits an appeal and makes statements in the notice of appeal without support, the Committee does not attempt to locate the missing support.

No new issues will be decided by the Appeal Committee. The appeal process is a review of the Complaint Report. The Appeal Committee does not conduct a separate investigation. The Appeal Committee's function will be to determine whether sufficient evidence exists to support the findings and conclusions in the Complaint Report.

Discussion of Issues on Appeal

From Complaintant

The issue under appeal is issue 2, which is as follows:

> Did one of the student's teachers disclose personally identifiable information about the student to other students during the 2024-2025 school year?

In addressing this appeal, the Appeal Committee first finds that the investigator correctly cited the applicable law, saying:

> "Under 34 CFR § 300.622(a) of the IDEA Part B regulations, parental consent must be obtained before PII is disclosed to parties, other than officials of participating agencies. Under IDEA Part B and pursuant to the FERPA regulations at 34 CFR § 99.31(a)(1), prior written consent is not required to disclose PII from student education records to school officials, including teachers, within the educational agency or institution, whom the agency or institution has determined to have legitimate educational interests. 34 C.F.R. § 99.31(a)(1)(i)(A)". (Report, p. 14).

The supporting evidence for this issue that was provided to the investigator by the parent is described in two paragraphs in the report as follows:

> "The parent alleged in the complaint that the student's "[general education] teacher was bragging to another class about not giving a dyslexic student [student's] accommodations (specifically shortening [student's] assignments) because [student] wouldn't work in class. [General education teacher] was very clearly referring to [student] and the other students happened to be friends of [student] and told [student]. The teacher even referenced where [student] sat in the class. (Report, p. 14-15)"; and
> "The mother of the classmate who reported hearing the teacher disclose personally identifiable information stated her child had not told her about the incident. The classmate's mother stated that her child overheard the reported statements as the teacher was talking to another staff approximately one week before the complaint was filed. The mother reported that after hearing the statements her child repeated the statement to the student who then reported it to the complainant (Report, p.15)."

The investigator acknowledged the difficulty of verifying conflicting accounts of what is essentially an allegation based largely on hearsay evidence, saying:

> "The investigation of this issue was conducted entirely through interview. The issue was complicated as the allegations were made through a thirdhand report and the disclosure was reported between minors (student and classmate). The investigator determined to not interview the minor classmate and instead interview the classmate's mother to ensure > the classmate's identity was not disclosed…All persons interviewed were highly credible and believable so it was difficult to singularly determine if personally identifiable information was disclosed from the interviews." (Report, p. 16).

Because of the difficulty of verifying what may, or may not have been said among disputing parties, the investigator cited two pieces of neutral evidence:

First,

> "The investigator talked with two paraeducators who work in the teacher's class. In response to being asked what they do when they need to discuss a student with a general education teacher they reported they step out into the hallway. They stated that at the beginning of the semester during a professional development day they go over how to support the students and receive the IEP at a glance to learn what each student needs. They additionally reported they had not personally overhead any teachers talking with any student or teacher about any other student." (Report, p. 15-16).

Second,

> "Since the issue was related to disclosing personally identifiable informtion about not providing accommodations, the accommodation log was used to determine if accommodations continued to be offered following the timeframe that the statement was alleged to be made. As the accommodation log demonstrated that accommodations continued to be offered during the entire school year the investigator found that the district is IN compliance with IDEA regulations." (Report, p. 16).

In the appeal, the parent says she is appealing, in part, because her child "and the other child who heard a conversation in a classroom, not a hallway, were not interviewed. Only the teachers, administrators, and paras were interviewed and I don't believe they were honest in their interviews."

The Appeal Committee understands the parent's concern that the children were not interviewed. However, the Appeal Committee grants investigators significant discretion on whether to interview children in a complaint against their teachers, with a strong preference for excluding the children from such complaints due to the effect such involvement can make on the vital relationship between student and teacher. That strong preference is particularly applicable, when, as in this case, there are others who can provide context to classroom activities, such as paraeducators who are present and observing classroom activities and physical records, such as accommodation logs indicating that services remain scheduled. The Appeal Committee finds that the investigator's decision not to involve the children in this. investigation was more than merely appropriate. It was the correct way to proceed.

The parent's appeal also states "I would be glad to discuss the inconsistent responses. I've not appealed or dealt with this in the past, so I'm not sure if I'm supposed to list them here or in a separate document. Please advise."

The Appeal Committee notes that the complaint report is dated May 2, 2025, and the parent sent this appeal by e-mail on May 12, 2025, the last day by which an appeal could be filed. This left no time for an Appeal Committee to be formed and "advise." In any event, an Appeal Committee must remain neutral and so does not "advise" either party to an appeal. As noted in the "Preliminary Matters" portion of this decision, Kansas regulations put "the burden for supplying a sufficient basis for appeal" on the party submitting the appeal. When a party submits an appeal and makes statements in the notice of appeal without support, the Committee does not attempt to locate the missing support. A copy of the applicable Kansas regulation regarding appeal requirements was included at the end of the report that was issued to the parties.

After a thorough review of information provided by both parties in this appeal and the evidence and analysis contained in the Complaint Report, the Appeal Committee finds that the findings and conclusion in Issue two in the report should be sustained.

Conclusion

For the reasons stated herein, the Complaint Report is sustained in full.

This is the final decision on this matter. There is no further appeal. This Appeal Decision is issued this 23rd day of May, 2025.

UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #383
ON APRIL 1, 2025

DATE OF REPORT: MAY 1, 2025

This report is in response to a complaint ------- filed with our office, on behalf of their child, ------. For the remainder of this report -------will be referred to as "the student." ------- will be referred to as "the mother."

Investigation of Complaint

K.A.R. § 91-40-5(c)(5) requires that the complaint investigation include "[a] discussion with the complainant during which additional information may be gathered and specific allegations of noncompliance identified, verified, and recorded." Laura Jurgensen, complaint investigator, held this discussion with the parent via Teams on April 3, gathering additional information and verifying the specific allegations to be investigated. Laura Jurgensen provided the specific allegations to be investigated to the parent via email on April 4. The parent did not dispute how the complaint investigator framed the issues to be investigated. The parent also provided documentation for the complaint investigator to consider as part of the investigation and the parent and investigator exchanged multiple emails. The district provided the investigator with a response to the issues the investigator identified, most documentation and data the investigator requested. The complaint investigator interviewed two district assistant directors of special education and exchanged multiple emails with the district special education director. The complaint investigator also interviewed the private school principal.

In completing this investigation, the complaint investigator reviewed the following:

Kansas regulations require that a complaint "allege a violation that occurred not more than one year before the date the complaint is received" K.A.R. § 91-40-51(b)(1).

Therefore, this complaint investigator did not consider any information either party submitted dated prior to April 1, 2024.

Background Information

The student at the focus of this investigation lives in the public school district at the focus of this investigation and attends a private school within the public school district.

Issues

In the written complaint and the complaint investigator's discussion with the complainant, the parent alleges five issues upon which this investigation will focus:

Issue One: Whether the district provided the student with special education services and accommodations. K.S.A. §§ 72-3462, -3463.

Issue Two: Whether the district ensured the student's IEP is accessible to each regular education teacher, special education teacher, related service provider, and other service provider who is responsible for its implementation. K.A.R. § 91-40-16(b)(4).

Issue Three: Whether the district ensured each regular education teacher, special education teacher, related service provider, and other service provider who is responsible for the implementation of the student's IEP is informed of that individual's specific responsibilities related to implementing the child's IEP and the specific accommodations, modifications, and supports that must be provided for the child in accordance with the IEP. K.A.R. § 91-40-16(b)(5).

Issue Four: In the 2024–25 school year, whether the district provided special education services for all students with IEPs attending the same private school as the student. K.S.A. §§ 72-3462, -3463.

Issue Five: Whether the district provided the parent with prior written notice in response to the parent's request for support for the student in health class. K.S.A. § 72-3430(b)(2).

Additionally, the parent alleged a concern regarding district personnel actions and the district's fulfillment of its contract to the student's private school. These are not allegations of a violation of special education law and this investigation does not have the authority to consider these concerns. K.A.R. § 91-40-51(a). During the investigation, the parent brought up a concern regarding retaliation for filing this complaint. The complaint investigator explained that this complaint process does not have authority to consider retaliation complaints and pointed the parent to the United States Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights.

Issue One

Special Education Services and Accommodations for the Student

Applicable Law

K.S.A. § 72-3462 requires "[e]very school district shall provide special education services for exceptional children who reside in the school district and attend a private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school Special education services provided under this section for exceptional children who attend a private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school are subject to the following requirements If the services are provided for in the private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school, amounts expended for the provision of such services shall not be required to exceed the average cost to the school district for the provision of the same services in the public schools of the school district for children within the same category of exceptionality . . .." K.S.A. § 72-3463 requires that "[n]o special education services shall be provided in connection with religious courses, devotional exercises, religious training, or any other religious activity."

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The student's Nov. 13, 2024, IEP states the student will receive 30 minutes of special education services daily in Study Hall. (Student's Nov. 13, 2024, IEP.) The provider is listed as the special education teacher and there is no language that indicates the special education services in Study Hall would be provided by anyone except the special education teacher. (Student's Nov. 13, 2024, IEP.) The student's IEP also indicates the student will receive 30 minutes of special education services, stated as "paraeducator support in English, Math, Bible, Social Studies and Science." (Student's Nov. 13, 2024, IEP.) The student's IEP provides for 13 accommodations and modifications to be provided in "All Areas," "All Settings," or "in all core subjects." The student's IEP includes a behavior intervention plan focused on keeping the student in class and required data collection. The student's IEP indicates the student is eligible for additional services at the public school, with transportation provided. (Student's Nov. 13, 2024, IEP.) The parent indicated she did not consent to these services as she did not want the student to leave the private school. (Parent Interview with Complaint Investigator, Apr. 3, 2025.)

The parent's particular concerns within this issue are that the student is not receiving 30 minutes of special education services daily from a special education teacher in Study Hall and that instead the student is receiving special education services from a paraeducator in Study Hall. (Parent Interview with Complaint Investigator, Apr. 3, 2025; Parent's Complaint, Apr. 1, 2025.) The parent is also concerned that the student is not receiving the number of special education services minutes of paraeducator support indicated in the student's IEP. (Parent Interview with Complaint Investigator, Apr. 3, 2025; Parent's Complaint, Apr. 1, 2025.) Additionally, the parent included a copy of the student's IEP with her complaint, highlighting the following accommodations the parent does not believe the district is providing:

- Avoid Penalizing for Spelling Errors
- Chunk assignments (give one assignment at a time)
- Provide an alternate/reduced (by half) assignment to show mastery of concepts
- Provide sensory break and rewards when [the student] meets [the] expectation based on the scores on the behavior chart.

- Provide sensory strategies to help reduce frustration (i.e., breaks, walking, using putty, going to a quiet location such as the library).
- Response dictated to scribe.

(Parent Interview with Complaint Investigator, Apr. 3, 2025; Parent's Complaint, Apr. 1, 2025.)

Finally, the parent indicated that she does not believe the district is implementing the student's behavior intervention plan that is part of the student's IEP. (Parent Interview with Complaint Investigator, Apr. 3, 2025; Parent's Complaint, Apr. 1, 2025.)

The district does not maintain documentation of the special education services and accommodations provided to students or behavior intervention plan implementation data. (District Interview with Complaint Investigator, Apr. 25, 2025.) As documentation that the student was provided with the special education services stated in the student's IEP, the district provided the student's class schedule, the paraeducators' and special education teachers' schedule as of August 2024, the current paraeducators' schedule (following a paraeducator resignation), and the current special education teacher's schedule (following a district reassignment of the special education teacher at the private school). (Student's 2024–25 Class Schedule, Apr. 4, 2025; Paraeducator and Special Education Teacher Schedule for Private School, Aug. 2024, Paraeducator Schedule for Private School, Apr. 24, 2025. (District provided.), Special Education Teacher Schedule for Private School, Apr. 2025.) Additionally, the district provided anecdotal data via emails discussing specific student assignments, accommodations, and the student's behavior intervention plan asserting that these emails show that the district provided all the special education services indicated in the student's IEP this school year. (District's Response to the Complaint, Apr. 20, 2025.)

The IEP Team clearly indicated the student's special education services in English, Math, Bible, Social Studies, and Science would be provided by a "paraeducator," but did not indicate the student's special education services in Study Hall would be provided by a paraeducator, listing the special education teacher as the provider of the student. (Student's Nov. 13, 2024, IEP.) The IEP Team makes an intentional distinction that the special education teacher will provide the student's special education services in Study Hall. (Student's Nov. 13, 2024, IEP.) The paraeducators' and special education teacher's schedule dated August 2024 shows the student is not scheduled for special education services during Study Hall with a special education teacher, instead the student is scheduled with a paraeducator. (Paraeducator and Special Education Teacher Schedule for Private School, Aug. 2024.) The current paraeducators' schedule indicates that the student is scheduled for special education services each school day during the student's Study Hall period (Period 6 from 1:01 to 1:48 p.m.) for 30 minutes. (Paraeducator Schedule for Private School, Apr. 24, 2025. (District provided.)) The special education teacher's schedule shows that she is at the private school day each day from 7:45 to 9:00 a.m. and her schedule does not include any time with the student. (Special Education Teacher Schedule for Private School, Apr. 2025.)

The August 2024 paraeducator schedule indicates the district has planned for the student to receive 30 minutes of paraeducator support in English, Math, Bible, Social Studies, and Science. (Paraeducator and Special Education Teacher Schedule for Private School, Aug. 2024.) Following the special education teacher's recognition that K.S.A. § 72-3463 requires that "[n]o special education services shall be provided in connection with religious courses, devotional exercises, religious training, or any other religious activity," the district removed the student's paraeducator support in Bible. (Email from Special Education Teacher to Parents, Dec. 18, 2024.) After a paraeducator resignation, the district developed the current paraeducator schedule. (Paraeducator Schedule for Private School, Apr. 24, 2025.) This schedule does not include any paraeducator support for the student in Social Studies and less than 30 minutes of paraeducator support in Science on Fridays. (Paraeducator Schedule for Private School, Apr. 24, 2025.) On April 3, 2025, the district sent a letter to the parent indicating that "to ensure that all agreed-upon services are provided effectively, it is necessary for our staff to have direct access to [the student]. This would require [the student] to be transported to a public school within our district where [the student] can receive the full scope of services as outlined in [the student's] IEP." (Letter from District to Parent Requesting to Move the Site for Services to the Public School, Apr. 3, 2025.)

Regarding the student's accommodations, the parent indicated that it is her understanding that some accommodations are implemented by the student's general education teacher and others are implemented by the paraeducator. (Parent Interview with Complaint Investigator, Apr. 3, 2025.) The parent teaches at the private school where the student attends and indicated it is her experience that there is typically a conversation between each general education teacher, special education teacher, and paraeducator to discuss who will implement each accommodation for a student. (Parent Interview with Complaint Investigator, Apr. 3, 2025.) The district indicated in the interview with the complaint investigator that general education teachers, in this case the private school general education teachers, are responsible for implementing accommodations for students with IEPs. (District Interview with Complaint Investigator, Apr. 25, 2025.)

Regarding the student's behavior intervention plan, the student's IEP indicates that the special education teacher and paraeducator bear most responsibility for implementation with "General Education Teachers" responsible for providing the student with "[a]dditional prompts for behavior correction [and] [p]rivate/quiet discussions with student while other students are working," as well as participating in the review of the student's behavior intervention plan and data. (Student's Nov. 13, 2024, IEP.) The behavior intervention plan indicates that the "Required Data Collection System" is "ABC documentation" and "Documentation of any discussed issues and duration of the event." (Student's Nov. 13, 2024, IEP.) The district did not provide specific documentation of behavior intervention plan implementation, including any data the behavior intervention plan indicates would be collected. The only documentation the district provided were a few emails with staff discussing the student's behavior, but not any emails that would meet the behavior intervention plan requirement to "[document] any discussed issues and duration of the event." (District's Response to the Complaint, Apr. 20, 2025; Student's Nov. 13, 2024, IEP.)

Regarding the implementation of special education services, the district maintains that its paraeducator and special education teacher schedules ensure implementation as required by IEPs. (District Interview with Complaint Investigator, Apr. 25, 2025.) However, a schedule represents a plan to implement special education services and is not documentation that special education services occurred. For this student, the district did not schedule the student for special education services with a special education teacher during Study Hall, as required in the student's IEP. A schedule certainly cannot serve as documentation of implementation if the schedule does not represent what a student's IEP requires. Additionally, the district's current paraeducator schedule contains insufficient special education services for the student in Social Studies and Science.

Regarding the student's accommodations, district staff indicated in the interview with this complaint investigator that they believe the private school general education teachers are responsible for implementing this student's accommodations. (District Interview with Complaint Investigator, Apr. 25, 2025.) This belief seems to stem from the student's general education teachers participating in the student's IEP Team meetings. (District Interview with Complaint Investigator, Apr. 25, 2025.) K.S.A. § 72- 3462 requires "[e]very school district shall provide special education services for exceptional children who reside in the school district and attend a private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school " (emphasis added) There is nothing in this statute that would place the responsibility of IEP implementation with a private school teacher. The statute clearly places responsibility for providing special education services for a student with an IEP with the school district. District staff indicated the district does not have a contract with the private school for private school staff to provide the special education services outside of their regular work hours and under the supervision and control of the public school. (District Interview with Complaint Investigator, Apr. 25, 2025.) When the district consulted with the parent and the private school officials about the site for services for this student and then the district decided where this student's services would be provided, the district could have decided that the student's accommodations would be available only in a public school building, but there is no documentation that shows that. Alternatively, after deciding that the student's accommodations would be provided in the private school the district could have ensured that a district staff member (e.g., a paraeducator or special education teacher) carried out each accommodation, but the district also did not do this.

On the accommodations where the parent voiced implementation concerns, not all could have been carried out by district staff. In particular, "Avoid Penalizing for Spelling Errors, Chunk assignments (give one assignment at a time), [and] Provide an alternate/reduced (by half) assignment to show mastery of concepts" could not have been carried out by public school staff as public school staff do not have the ability to impact the private school teachers' carrying out of and grading assignments. These are examples of accommodations that the district could have indicated it would provide in a public school, where public school teachers carry out and grade assignment. The accommodations, "Provide sensory break and rewards when [the student] meets [the] expectation based on the scores on the behavior chart, Provide sensory strategies to help reduce frustration (i.e. breaks, walking, using putty, going to a quiet location such as the library), [and] Response dictated to scribe" could have been carried out by public school staff and perhaps were, but the district does not maintain documentation of accommodation implementation. The parent does not provide information that would indicate that if these accommodations have not been provided whether they impacted the student's progress in the general education curriculum or on the student's IEP goals. The district provided progress information for the student, but there is no data or information that shows the impacts of these accommodations on the student's progress or lack of progress in each subject or IEP goal. (Student's 1st, 2nd, and 3rd Quarters and Semester 1 2024–25 Report Card.)

The portions of the student's behavior intervention plan that required implementation by general education teachers were established due to the district's mistaken belief that the student's private school teachers were responsible for implementing the student's behavior intervention plan. The private school teachers were not responsible for implementing any components of the student's behavior intervention plan.

However, the special education teacher and paraeducator were responsible for implementing the student's behavior intervention plan and the district does not have any documentation the behavior intervention plan indicates would be collected.

Setting aside the district's misunderstanding about private school staff being responsible for IEP implementation, there is one explanation regarding the district not providing all this student's special education services and accommodations that could make sense. K.S.A. § 72-3462 indicates that when the district provides services in the private school, ". . . amounts expended for the provision of such services shall not be required to exceed the average cost to the school district for the provision of the same services in the public schools of the school district for children within the same category of exceptionality " KSDE guidance further explains this portion of the statute by saying, "[i]n determining this cost, the public school must look to similar services in the public school for children with the same exceptionality. The average amount expended may or may not allow for the provision of services at a level that would provide a free appropriate public education. For services provided at a private school, state law simply requires the expenditure of this level of funding, however, and does not require the provision of FAPE." This complaint investigator asked the district whether it is undertaking this calculation and then using the calculation to determine the services offered at the private school. (Email from Complaint Investigator to District Staff, Apr. 25, 2025.) The district special education director responded that "[t]he decision regarding whether services are delivered onsite at [the private school] or at a public school location is based on the specific nature of the services required and the resources needed to implement them appropriately—not as a result of any intent to limit funding." (Email from Special Education Director to Complaint Investigator, April 28, 2025.)

When providing services to students with IEPs in a private school, the district does not appear to be calculating "the average cost to the school district for the provision of the same services in the public schools of the school district for children within the same category of exceptionality." (K.S.A. § 72-3462.) This is something that K.S.A. § 72-3462 permits a district to do and could explain why the district has not fully provided services for this student. Instead, the district maintains that it has provided this student with the services, accommodations, and behavior intervention plan support the stuent's IEP requires until its recent letter indicating that the student's site for services need to be at the public school. The parent maintains she received this letter without any consultation from the district and the district special education director indicates that at the beginning of the school year, district staff, the parent, and private school officials discussed that if the district ever could not locate an appropriate number of staff to provide services at the private school, then services would be available at the public school with transportation provided. (Parent Interview with Complaint Investigator, Apr. 3, 2025; District Special Education Director Email to Complaint Investigator, Apr. 24, 2025.)

Conclusion

The district's current method for ensuring the provision of the student's special education services is scheduling district staff to provide the services in the student's IEP. However, the district's schedules fall short with this student as the district's 2024– 25 school year schedules never include a special education teacher providing the student with special education services. The current schedules also do not show the student receiving the required amount of special education services in Science or Social Studies, however the district has indicated these services are available to the student at the public school.

The district misunderstands staff responsibilities for implementing the student's accommodations and behavior intervention plan. For this student, this potentially impacted three of the student's accommodations that the parent is concerned are not being provided. The parent and district disagree about whether these accommodations have been provided and neither party has consistent documentation showing whether these accommodations have been provided. Despite the student's behavior intervention plan requiring data collection and documentation and most of the responsibility for implementation is with the special education teacher and paraeducator, the district does not have any implementation documentation.

Based on the foregoing, this investigation concludes that the district violated K.S.A. § 72-3462.

Issue Two

IEP is Accessible

Applicable Law

K.A.R. § 91-40-16(b)(4) requires ". . . each agency shall ensure that . . . [t]he child's IEP is accessible to each regular education teacher, special education teacher, related service provider, and other service provider who is responsible for its implementation."

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The relevant portions of Issue One are incorporated here. In particular, the Issue One analysis found that the parent and district all misunderstood which staff were required to implement the student's IEP. Only district staff are responsible for implementing the student's IEP and, absent parent consent, the district was required to ensure the student's IEP was accessible to each special education teacher and paraeducator supporting the student.

Most of the parent's concern on this issue are focused on the student's regular education teachers, who are not responsible for implementation of the student's IEP. (Parent Interview with Complaint Investigator, Apr. 3, 2025; Parent's Complaint, Apr. 1, 2025.) The parent also indicated that in October 2024 she sent a copy of the student's IEP to a paraeducator because the paraeducator told the parent she did not know what was in the student's IEP. (Parent Interview with Complaint Investigator, Apr. 3, 2025.) The parent provided the investigator with the email from the parent to the paraeducator and the email is blank, other than the attached IEP. (Email from Parent to Paraeducator Attaching Student's IEP, Oct. 24, 2024.) The parent indicated the conversation with the paraeducator about her lack of access to the student's IEP was verbal. (Parent Interview with Complaint Investigator, Apr. 3, 2025.)

The district special education director indicated that, "paraeducators have full access to students' IEPs to ensure they have a comprehensive understanding of their individual responsibilities." (Email from Special Education Director to Complaint Investigator, Apr. 28, 2025.) The district special education director stated that the district provided the special education teacher and paraeducators with access to the student's IEP by keeping it with all other student IEPs in the special education classroom at the private school. (Email from Special Education Director to Complaint Investigator, Apr. 24, 2025.) The special education director indicated the special education teacher and paraeducators reference student IEPs regularly in their daily planning meetings. (Email from Special Education Director to Complaint Investigator, Apr. 24, 2025.) The district's procedure document indicates that after each IEP Team meeting the Case Manager must provide a copy of the IEP to "all staff who work with student " It is evident from emails from the former and current special education teachers that they both had access to the student's IEP. (Emails from Former Special Education Teacher with Student's IEP, Aug. 14, 2024, and Jan. 9, 2025; Email from Current Special Education Teacher with Student's IEP, Apr. 1, 2025.)

Conclusion

There is not specific documentation that the paraeducators were provided with access to the student's IEP, but because the district is providing paraeducators with a hard copy and not an electronic copy it is reasonable there is not necessarily electronic documentation that the paraeducators received a copy of the student's IEP. The district's written procedure and explanation of how this is carried out at the private school is sufficiently detailed to show that the district ensured access of the student's IEP to the staff responsible for its implementation.

Based on the foregoing, this investigation concludes that the district did not violate K.A.R. § 91-40-16(b)(4).

Issue Three

Inform of IEP Responsibilities

Applicable Law

K.A.R. § 91-40-16(b)(5) requires ". . . each agency shall ensure that . . . [e]ach [regular education teacher, special education teacher, related service provider, and other service provider who is responsible for its implementation] is informed of . . . [t]hat individual's specific responsibilities related to implementing the child's IEP; and . . . the specific accommodations, modifications, and supports that must be provided for the child in accordance with the IEP."

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The relevant portions of Issues One and Two are incorporated here. In particular, the Issue One analysis found that the parent and district all misunderstood which staff were required to implement the student's IEP. Only district staff are responsible for implementing the student's IEP and, absent parent consent, the district was required to ensure the student's special education teacher and paraeducator were informed of their specific responsibilities relating to implementing the student's IEP.

Most of the parent's concern on this issue are focused on the student's regular education teachers, who are not responsible for implementation of the student's IEP. (Parent Interview with Complaint Investigator, Apr. 3, 2025; Parent's Complaint, Apr. 1, 2025.) The parent also provided information, included in the Issue One analysis, which showed it was unclear which of the student's accommodations were to be provided by the special education teacher and paraeducator.

The district special education director indicated that the special education teacher created each paraeducator a "'passport book' that outlines the specific accommodations, modifications, supports, and services required by each student's IEP, including responsibilities related to the implementation of behavior intervention plans." (Email from Special Education Director to Complaint Investigator, Apr. 28, 2025.) The special education director provided photographs of the "passport book" for this student. (Student Passport Book, Aug. 2024.) The photographs provided show the following pages from the student's IEP: special education services; program modifications, accommodations, and supplementary aids and services; state and district assessment accommodations; and the student's behavior intervention plan. (Student Passport Book, Aug. 2024.)

The district is required to ensure that any staff supporting the student, "is informed of .

. . [t]hat individual's specific responsibilities related to implementing the child's IEP; and . . . the specific accommodations, modifications, and supports that must be provided for the child in accordance with the IEP." (K.A.R. § 91-40-16(b)(5).) The photographs of the student's "passport book" show "the specific accommodations, modifications, and supports that must be provided for the child in accordance with the IEP." (K.A.R. § 91- 40-16(b)(5); Student Passport Book, Aug. 2024.)

Conclusion

There is nothing in the "passport book" that shows that the paraeducators were "informed of . . . [their] specific responsibilities related to implementing the child's IEP." (K.A.R. § 91-40-16(b)(5); Student Passport Book, Aug. 2024.) This is evident in that there is no information on what accommodations the paraeducator is expected to implement and no information on the paraeducator's specific responsibilities for carrying out the student's special education services in English, Math, Social Studies, and Science. Additionally, the special education teacher put together the "passport book" for the paraeducators, but there is no documentation to show that the district ensured the special education teacher was informed of her specific responsibilities related to implementing the student's IEP. With this student, there does not appear to be a process by which the district determined and assigned specific responsibilities for all components of the IEP.

Based on the foregoing, this investigation concludes that the district violated K.A.R. § 91-40-16(b)(5).

Issue Four

Special Education Services and Accommodations for All Students Attending the Private School

Applicable Law

K.S.A. § 72-3462 requires "[e]very school district shall provide special education services for exceptional children who reside in the school district and attend a private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school Special education services provided under this section for exceptional children who attend a private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school are subject to the following requirements If the services are provided for in the private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school, amounts expended for the provision of such services shall not be required to exceed the average cost to the school district for the provision of the same services in the public schools of the school district for children within the same category of exceptionality . . . ." K.S.A. §72-3463 requires that "[n]o special education services shall be provided in connection with religious courses, devotional exercises, religious training, or any other religious activity."

This concern stems from a March 27, 2025, email the private school head of school sent to private school staff and one district paraeducator following the change in special education teachers at the private school that states the district does "not have enough resources to support all" IEP service minutes. (Email from Private School's Head of School to Private School Staff Regarding Special Education Teacher's Schedule, Mar. 27, 2025.) The parent also provided information from her own experience as a teacher at the private school of students she knew to have IEPs where she indicated that paraeducators regularly did not come to her classroom, as scheduled, to provide special education services to her students. (Parent Interview with Complaint Investigator, Apr. 3, 2025.) As a teacher at the private school, the parent had a copy of the paraeducator and special education teacher schedule so she would know when paraeducators would be in and out of her classroom throughout the day. (Parent Interview with Complaint Investigator, Apr. 3, 2025.)

As stated in Issue One, the district does not maintain documentation of the special education services provided to students. (District Interview with Complaint Investigator, Apr. 25, 2025.) As documentation that all students with IEPs attending the private school were provided with the special education services stated in the students' IEPs, the district provided the paraeducators' and special education teachers' schedule as of August 2024, the current paraeducators' schedule (following a paraeducator resignation), and the current special education teacher's schedule (following a district reassignment of the special education teacher at the private school). (Paraeducator and Special Education Teacher Schedule for Private School, Aug. 2024, Paraeducator Schedule for Private School, Apr. 24, 2025. (District provided.), Special Education Teacher Schedule for Private School, Apr. 2025.)

The district also provided what it indicated were "paraeducator logs documenting the provision of services." (Email from District Special Education Director to Complaint Investigator, Apr. 25, 2025.) These were photographs of handwritten notes from September 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 23, 24, 24, 30 and October 3, 4, 7, and 8, 2024. (Email from District Special Education Director to Complaint Investigator, Apr. 25, 2025.) These handwritten notes provide blocks of time on each date sometimes accompanied by descriptions like "in class" or "study hall." (Email from District Special Education Director to Complaint Investigator, Apr. 25, 2025.)

Sometimes there are initials next to a block of time that the district indicated are the initials of the student being served during that time. Certain dates are accompanied by the word "absent." (Email from District Special Education Director to Complaint Investigator, Apr. 25, 2025.)

The district also provided IEP Team meeting summaries for two students, which did not include specific services those students were to receive. (Email from District Special Education Director to Complaint Investigator, Apr. 28, 2025.) The district also provided an email from a private school teacher that no longer works for the private school that, in that teacher's experience, the students with IEPs in that teacher's classroom received the special education services their IEPs required. (District's Response to the Complaint, Apr. 20, 2025.) The April 3, 2025, letter referenced in the Issue One analysis went to each student with an IEP indicating that each student's site for services need to be at the public school. (District's Response to the Complaint, Apr. 20, 2025.) For each student with an IEP at the private school whose parents refused services at the public school or did not respond, the district provided email documentation. (District's Response to the Complaint, Apr. 20, 2025.)

What is missing from this extensive documentation is any information about what these students' IEPs require them to receive. The complaint investigator requested the district provide, "documentation showing the services their IEPs indicated they were to receive and documentation these services were actually provided." (Complaint Investigator Email to District, Apr. 25, 2025.) The district special education director responded detailing the information previously provided, all listed above, indicating those documents "collectively demonstrate that services are being provided in accordance with each student's IEP." (Email from District Special Education Director to Complaint Investigator, Apr. 28, 2025.) Additionally, nearly all of the documentation provided does not show that the district delivered all services as indicated in student IEPs. The "paraeducator logs" were very informal, did not contain sufficient information, and were for only a small part of the school year.

Additionally, because the district and the parent disagree about whether the district ensured special education services were provided for each student with an IEP attending the private school, this complaint investigator interviewed the private school principal. The private school principal indicated that the former special education teacher regularly did not come to the private school during her scheduled time and would later inform private school staff she had been pulled into other buildings in the district. (Complaint Investigator Interview with Private School Principal, Apr. 29, 2025.) The private school principal indicated the former special education teacher provided her with IEPs for all students with IEPs attending the private school and she has reviewed them. (Complaint Investigator Interview with Private School Principal, Apr. 29, 2025.) The private school principal does not believe it is possible that the district is providing all special education services indicated in student IEPs, pointing to the regular absences of the former special education teacher, the current special education teacher's schedule (the schedule shows only 30–45 minutes of direct services to students each day), and several experiences of the private school principal finding paraeducators in the special education classroom when she knew they were scheduled to be in a student's general education classroom providing services. (Complaint Investigator Interview with Private School Principal, Apr. 29, 2025.)

Conclusion

The district's current method for ensuring the provision of special education services is scheduling district staff to provide the services in the students' IEPs. However, the district did not provide any information on the services each student's IEP requires and does not have any mechanism to ensure services are provided with a public-school staff member responsible for providing services in the public school is pulled to another district building. The district provided documentation that all services are available to each student at the public school, but that only speaks to the availability of services after April 3, 2025, not prior to that in the 2024–25 school year. The district's misunderstanding of staff responsibilities for implementing accommodations and behavior intervention plans is likely impacting all students with IEPs at the private school. The parent's and private school principal's account of whether the district is providing services undermines the district's assertion that it is providing services as indicated in student's IEPs.

Based on the foregoing, this investigation concludes that the district systemically violated K.S.A. § 72-3462.

Issue Five

Support in Health Class

Applicable Law

K.S.A. § 72-3430(b)(2) requires, "[t]he parents of exceptional children shall have the right to . . . written prior notice in accordance with K.S.A. 72-3432, and amendments thereto, whenever an agency: (A) Proposes to initiate or change; or (B) refuses to initiate or change, the identification, evaluation, or educational placement of the child or the provision of a free appropriate public education to the child."

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The student started health class during second semester and was without paraeducator support, which included no implementation of the student's accommodations and behavior intervention plan. (Parent Interview with Complaint Investigator, Apr. 3, 2025.) District staff indicated that IEP Team meeting notes do not indicate the IEP Team discussed whether the student would need support in health class. (District Interview with Complaint Investigator, Apr. 25, 2025.) District staff stated that the private school health teacher was responsible for implementing the student's accommodations and behavior intervention plan during health class. (District Interview with Complaint Investigator, Apr. 25, 2025.)

On January 15, 2025, the parent emailed the special education teacher and requested "a preemptive plan for health class " The parent maintained the special education teacher did not respond to this email. (Parent Interview with Complaint Investigator, Apr. 3, 2025.) The special education teacher sent an April 7, 2025, email to the district special education director that she followed up "verbally" with the parent. (District's Response to the Complaint, Apr. 20, 2025.) On January 21, 2025, the parent emailed the special education teacher and asked if she "had a chance to think through the email I sent you about support for health, because if [the student] needs a para there then we" may as well include that in an IEP amendment on which they were working. (District's Response to the Complaint, Apr. 20, 2025.) The special education teacher responded to the parent the same day stating, "Unfortunately, we cannot provide support for a class prior to a demonstrated need. We can keep an eye on the situation. I will check in with [the health teacher] and even do some observations to watch for any signs of need." (District's Response to the Complaint, Apr. 20, 2025.) At the end of January, the parent and private school principal decided to move the student to independent study in health class with the parent. (Parent Interview with Complaint Investigator, Apr. 3, 2025.)

Conclusion

The parent's request for support in health class was a request that impacted the student's free appropriate public education. This obligated the district to respond with a Prior Written Notice. The district first responded verbally and then responded in an email, denying the request. Neither method is permitted when a parent makes a request that impacts their child's free appropriate public education. The only appropriate method was for the district to respond with a Prior Written Notice.

Based on the foregoing, this investigation concludes that the district violated K.S.A. § 72-3430(b)(2).

Summary of Conclusions/Corrective Action

Issue One

The district violated K.S.A. § 72-3462, based on the findings of fact listed above. Corrective action is required, as follows:

1. Within 10 calendar days of the date of this report, the district must submit a written statement to KSDE Special Education and Title Services (SETS) that it will comply with state legal requirements at K.S.A. § 72-3462 which requires every school district to provide special education services for exceptional children who reside in the school district and attend a private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school. If the services are provided for in the private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school, amounts expended for the provision of such services shall not be required to exceed the average cost to the school district for the provision of the same services in the public schools of the school district for children within the same category of exceptionality.

a. The district must offer to the parent to provide compensatory special education services to the student in an amount KSDE will determine after submitting the following information. The offered compensatory services are not subject to the average cost calculation in K.S.A. § 72-3462. The district must provide 30 minutes of special education services for each day the student was in school for the 2024–25 school year until the date the district begins to provide the student with special education services from a special education teacher as stated in the student's IEP. Within 11 calendar days of the date of this report, the district must provide KSDE with the student's 2024–25 attendance data and undertake staffing efforts to provide the student with 30 minutes of special education services from a special education teacher as indicated in the student's IEP.

b. Within one school day of beginning to provide the student with special education services from a special education teacher, the district must communicate to KSDE that it has done this. KSDE will then calculate the amount of compensatory services the district must offer to the parent based on the days of the 2024–25 school year the student was in session before the district provided special education services from a special education teacher and communicate that to the district.

c. Within five business days of KSDE communicating the amount of compensatory services, the district must send the parent a Prior Written Notice offering compensatory services from a special education teacher at the private school and, on that same day, send the Prior Written Notice to KSDE. Prior to sending the parent the Prior Written Notice, the district must make reasonable efforts to collaborate with the parent and student on the proposed schedule for compensatory services. In the Prior Written Notice, the district must provide the parent with fifteen school days to accept all, some, or none of the compensatory services.

d. On the same day the district receives the parent's response, it must provide the response to KSDE. If the parent accepts some or all compensatory services, the district must also provide KSDE with the proposed end date for compensatory services based on the proposed schedule.

e. If the parent accepts some or all the compensatory services, the district must maintain documentation of the provision of compensatory services. One business day following the proposed end date for compensatory services, the district must provide this documentation to KSDE.

3. Within 11 calendar days of the date of this report, the district must consult with the parent and private school officials about the location for each of the student's special education services, accommodations, and behavior intervention plan implementation; decide the location for each of the student's special education services, accommodations, and behavior intervention plan implementation; and communicate this decision to the parent, private school officials, and KSDE.
    a. Within 11 calendar days of the date of this report, the district must begin collecting data under the student's behavior intervention plan as stated in the plan.
    b. By May 16, the district must provide KSDE with the data collected under the student's behavior intervention plan.
    a. Within 15 calendar days of this report, the district must develop and submit to KSDE a draft procedure as to how the district will consult with parents and private school officials for students with IEPs in private school the district is serving under K.S.A. § 72-3462 about the location for all services, accommodations, modifications, and support for school personnel included in a student's IEP. KSDE will request any needed revisions to this draft procedure and communication confirmation when the district may finalize the procedure.
    b. Within 15 calendar days of this report, the district must develop and submit to KSDE a draft procedure that assigns staff responsibility and a timeline to create schedules for public school staff serving students in private schools. This draft procedure must include reviewing and revising staff schedules, if needed, each time the IEPs of students in the private school are changed. The draft procedure must also include a step where a public-school staff member that did not create the schedule reviews the schedule and student IEPs to ensure that the schedule includes the support listed in each student's IEP. The draft must also include how services will be provided when a staff member is unable to provide services during a scheduled time due to district staffing decisions. KSDE will request any needed revisions to this draft procedure and communication confirmation when the district may finalize the procedure.
    c. Within three business days of KSDE's confirmation, the district must place the draft procedures into its Special Education Standard Operating Procedures and communicate the procedures to any public-school staff with responsibility for implementing the procedures. On this same date, the district must send to KSDE its Special Education Standard Operating Procedures with the draft procedures included and its communication to relevant staff regarding the procedures.

d. By August 21, 2025, the district must submit to KSDE the public school staff schedule for services the district will provide at the private school, documentation for each student with an IEP attending the private school that show the services and accommodations the district will provide at the private school, and confirmation that the district has followed its procedure to review the schedule. KSDE will review the schedule and IEP pages to ensure that the district has created a staff schedule to implement the services and accommodations for each student that the district will provide at the public school. If, after consultation with each parent of a student with an IEP attending the private school and private school officials, the district decides not to provide services and accommodations at the private school in the 2025–26 school year, the district will communicate this to KSDE on the date indicated at the beginning of this paragraph.

6. Due Dates:
   e. May 12, 2025: 1, 2.a., 3., and 4.a.;
   a. Within one school day of beginning to provide the student with special education services from a special education teacher: 2.b.;
   b. Within five business days of KSDE communicating the amount of compensatory services: 2.c.
   c. On the same day the district receives the parent's response on compensatory services: 2.d.
   d. One business day following the proposed end date for compensatory services: 2.e.

   g. August 21, 2025: 5.d.

Issue Two

This investigation found no violations and there is no corrective action.

Issue Three

The district violated K.A.R. § 91-40-16(b)(5), based on the findings of fact listed above. Corrective action is required, as follows:

1. Within 10 calendar days of the date of this report, the district must submit a written statement to KSDE Special Education and Title Services (SETS) that it will comply with state legal requirements at K.A.R. § 91-40-16(b)(5) which requires each agency to ensure that each regular education teacher, special education teacher, related service provider, and other service provider who is responsible for its implementation is informed of that individual's specific responsibilities related to implementing the child's IEP; and the specific accommodations, modifications, and supports that must be provided for the child in accordance with the IEP.

2. Within 11 calendar days of the date of this report, the district must create a document for each public school staff member responsible for implementation of the student's IEP detailing each staff member's specific responsibilities related to implementing the student's IEP, use this document to inform each public school staff member responsible for implementation of the student's IEP of their specific responsibilities related to implementing the student's IEP, and provide this document to KSDE along with confirmation that the district has informed each staff member of their responsibilities.
    a. Within 15 calendar days of this report, the district must develop and submit to KSDE a draft procedure as to how the district will inform each public-school staff member responsible for implementation of each private school student's IEP of their specific responsibilities related to implementing each student's IEP. This procedure must include how the district will document that it has carried this out. KSDE will request any needed revisions to this draft procedure and communication confirmation when the district may finalize the procedure.
    b. Within three business days of KSDE's confirmation, the district must place the draft procedures into its Special Education Standard Operating Procedures and communicate the procedures to any public-school staff with responsibility for implementing the procedures. On this same date, the district must send to KSDE its Special Education Standard Operating Procedures with the draft procedures included and its communication to relevant staff regarding the procedures.
    c. By August 21, 2025, the district must submit to KSDE the documentation indicated in the district's procedure as to how the district will inform each public-school staff member responsible for implementation of each private school student's IEP of their specific responsibilities related to implementing each student's IEP.
4. Due Dates:
    a. May 12, 2025: 1 and 2;
    b. May 16, 2025: 3.a;
    c. Within three business days of KSDE's confirmation of the draft procedures: 3.b.; and
    d. August 21, 2025: 3.c.

Issue Four

The district violated K.S.A. § 72-3462, based on the findings of fact listed above. Corrective action is required, as follows:

1. Within 11 calendar days of the date of this report, the district must consult with the parent and private school officials about the location for the special education services, accommodations, modification, supports for school personnel, and behavior intervention plan implementation for each student with an IEP attending the private school; decide the location for each of the student's special education services, accommodations, and behavior intervention plan implementation; and communicate this decision to the parent, private school officials, and KSDE.

2. Corrective action ordered in Issue One: 1. and 5. also applies to this issue.
3. Due Date:
    a. May 12, 2025: 1.

Issue Five

1. Within 10 calendar days of the date of this report, the district must submit a written statement to KSDE Special Education and Title Services (SETS) that it will comply with state legal requirements at K.S.A. § 72-3430(b)(2) which requires the district to provide the parents of exceptional children written prior notice in accordance with K.S.A. § 72-3432, whenever the district proposes to initiate or change or refuses to initiate or change, the identification, evaluation, or educational placement of the child or the provision of a free appropriate public education to the child.
2. Within 11 calendar days of the date of this report, the district must provide the parent with a Prior Written Notice of its decision to provide support to the student in health class in the current independent study with the parent and should the parent decide to return the student to the regular health class. If the parent disagrees with the district's decision, the parent could ask the district to go to mediation or could file a due process complaint on the district's decision. If the parent believes that the district's failure to implement the student's IEP in health class impacted the student's right to a free appropriate public education, the parent can file a formal complaint or a due process complaint on that issue as that issue was not included in this investigation.
3. Due Dates:
    a. May 11, 2025: 1 and 2.

Right to Appeal

Either party may appeal the findings or conclusions in this report by filing a written notice of appeal with the State Commissioner of Education, ATTN: Special Education and Title Services, Landon State Office Building, 900 SW Jackson Street, Suite 620, Topeka, KS 66612-1212. The notice of appeal may also be filed by email to formalcomplaints@ksde.gov The notice of appeal must be delivered within 10 calendar days from the date of this report.

For further description of the appeals process, see Kansas Administrative Regulations 91-40-51(f).

(1) Any agency or complainant may appeal any of the findings or conclusions of a compliance report prepared by the special education section of the department by filing a written notice of appeal with the state commissioner of education. Each notice shall be filed within 10 days from the date of the report. Each notice shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect.

Upon receiving an appeal, an appeal committee of at least three department of education members shall be appointed by the commissioner to review the report and to consider the information provided by the local education agency, the complainant, or others. The appeal process, including any hearing conducted by the appeal committee, shall be completed within 15 days from the date of receipt of the notice of appeal, and a decision shall be rendered within five days after the appeal process is completed unless the appeal committee determines that exceptional circumstances exist with respect to the particular complaint. In this event, the decision shall be rendered as soon as possible by the appeal committee.

(2) If an appeal committee affirms a compliance report that requires corrective action by an agency, that agency shall initiate the required corrective action immediately. If, after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the agency shall be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following:

(A) The issuance of an accreditation deficiency advisement;

(B) the withholding of state or federal funds otherwise available to the agency;

(C) the award of monetary reimbursement to the complainant; or

(D) any combination of the actions specified in paragraph (f)(2)

In the Matter of the Appeal of the Report
Issued in Response to a Complaint Filed
Against Unified School District No. 383,
Manhattan-Ogden Public Schools: 25FC383-003

DECISION OF THE APPEAL COMMITTEE

Background

This matter commenced with the filing of a complaint on April 1, 2025, by ------, on behalf of her child, ------. In the remainder of this decision, ------ will be referred to as "the parent," and ------ will be referred to as "the student." An investigation of the complaint was undertaken by a complaint investigator on behalf of the Special Education, and Title Services team at the Kansas State Department of Education. Following the investigation, a Complaint Report was issued on May 1, 2025. That Complaint Report concluded that there were violations of special education statutes and regulations

Thereafter, the district filed an appeal of the Complaint Report. Upon receipt of the appeal, an Appeal Committee was appointed and it reviewed the original complaint, the Complaint Report, and the district's notice of appeal. The Appeal Committee has reviewed the information provided in connection with this matter and now issues this Appeal Decision.

Preliminary Matters

A copy of the regulation regarding the filing of an appeal [K.A.R. 91-40-51(f)] was attached to the Complaint Report. That regulation states, in part, that: "Each notice shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect." Accordingly, the burden for supplying a sufficient basis for appeal is on the party submitting the appeal. When a party submits an appeal and makes statements in the notice of appeal without support, the Committee does not attempt to locate the missing support.

No new issues will be decided by the Appeal Committee. The appeal process is a review of the Complaint Report. The Appeal Committee does not conduct a separate investigation. The Appeal Committee's function will be to determine whether sufficient evidence exists to support the findings and conclusions in the Complaint Report.

Discussion of Issues on Appeal

From Complaintant

Issue One

Whether the district provided the student with special education services and accommodations. K.S.A. §§ 72-3462

The investigator concluded that the district violated K.S. 72-3462 by failing to implement the student's IEP to provide sufficient implementation of:

Services in the Study Hall classroom (Report, p. 6)
Services in Social Studies (Report, p. 6)
Services in Science (Report, p. 6)
Accommodations (Report, p. 7)
Behavior Intervention Plan (Report, p. 7)

The district's appeal argues that, K.S.A. § 72-3462 "requires school districts to provide equitable services—not FAPE—to eligible students enrolled in private schools," and that "In Kansas, equitable services do not have to be identical to those provided in public school, nor do they constitute FAPE under IDEA." The Appeal Committee finds no such language in the statute, nor any language in the statute that supports such an interpretation. The only references to the term "equitable" in Kansas special education law are the "equitable participation" requirement in K.A.R. 91-40-42(a)(1) and the "participate equitably" requirement in K.A.R. 91-40-42a(a)(2)(A), both of which refer to "child find" processes, not to implementation of an IEP.

The investigator's conclusions in the complaint report were based on: (a) a lack of documentation of implementation, rejecting the district's reliance on mere schedules (Report, p. 7); and (b) statements made by district staff during interviews with the investigator. Those statements made to the investigator confirmed that district staff believed the duty to implement IEP accommodations belonged to the private school staff (Report, p. 8). The investigator correctly determined that,

> "There is nothing in this statute that would place the responsibility of IEP implementation with a private school teacher. The statute clearly places responsibility for providing special education services for a student with an IEP with the school district (Report, p. 8)."

As explained by the investigator, on the same page, K.S.A. § 72- 3462 requires that:

> "[e]very school district shall provide special education services for exceptional children who reside in the school district and attend a private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school. (emphasis added)."

The full (relevant) statement in this statute is:

> Every school district shall provide special education services for exceptional children who reside in the school district and attend a private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school, whether such school is located within or outside the school district, upon request of a parent or guardian of any such child for the provision of such services (emphasis added).

The plain reading of this statute is that, for these exceptional children enrolled in a private school, the district must provide the IEP services requested by the child's parents.

The district rightly points out that this statute does not obligate it to provide any IEP services at a private school. However, when a district elects to provide all or a portion of the IEP services requested by parents at a private school, as this district did, it must provide those services.

The district's appeal also cites the statute's provision that when, "the services are provided at the private school, the school district of residence is not required to spend more than the "average cost" of providing the same service in public school. This provision in the statute does not mean the district may simply disregard the bulk of services in an IEP for a student attending and receiving services at a private school, whenever it determines that such services would exceed the average cost of providing the same services in a public school. Such an interpretation of this statute would substantially interfere with the parent's right to be informed of any district proposal related to FAPE before implementation of such proposal, under 34 C.F.R. 300.503.

When a district chooses to limit services to the "average cost" of providing the same service in a public school, it must first notify parents of that decision in a Prior Written Notice (PWN). That PWN must notify the parents of what parts of the IEP will not be provided at the private school and include an explanation why the district is proposing to exclude those services. The district's explanation must be sufficiently complete to enable the parents to make decisions regarding their right to accept services at the public school or to exercise procedural safeguards, such as initiating mediation, due process or complaint procedures.

The district did not provide a PWN notifying the parents that it would limit services to the "average cost" of providing the same service in public school. Lacking such prior written notice, it cannot now assert that it was employing the "average cost" process to limit the services it was providing to this student at the private school.

For the reasons cited above, the Appeal Committee sustains the investigator's conclusion on this issue.

*The term "equitable services" is defined in federal regulation 34 C.F.R. § 300.137 to mean services provided to children with disabilities attending a private school. Under federal law, these equitable services are services provided by a services plan, not by an IEP. These equitable services need only be provided until a district has spent its proportionate share of federal IDEA funds on children with disabilities attending a private school. Under the applicable federal regulations no child has any individual right to any service. Kansas law greatly exceeds this minimal federal service/spending requirement. K.S.A. 72- 3462 is the governing statute for Kansas exceptional children enrolled by their parents in a private school, and the "equitable services" provision in federal law and corresponding "services plan" has no application to how IEP services are to be provided to these Kansas children.

Issue Three

Whether the district ensured each regular education teacher, special education teacher, related service provider, and other service provider who is responsible for the implementation of the student's IEP is informed of that individual's specific responsibilities related to implementing the child's IEP and the specific accommodations, modifications, and supports that must be provided for the child in accordance with the IEP. K.A.R. § 91-40-16(b)(5).

The district's appeal of this issue is summed up in this statement:

> While the finding alleges a lack of individualized assignment of accommodations to staff, such specificity is not required under K.A.R. § 91-40-16(b)(5) or IDEA. The legal standard is informed responsibility, not explicit delegation in writing unless needed for clarity, which the district's procedures already support.

In its appeal, the district cited the correct regulation. K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(5) says:

> (5) Each teacher and provider described in paragraph (4) of this subsection is informed of the following:
>
> *(A) That individual's specific responsibilities related to implementing the child's IEP; and
> (B) the specific accommodations, modifications, and supports that must be provided for the child in accordance with the IEP.

The Appeal Committee agrees that this regulation does not require that personnel be informed of their specific responsibilities in writing. However, the district further asserts that its responsibility under this regulation was fulfilled by distributing a copy of the IEP and what it called a "passport" to all involved staff. This assertion does not address the investigators finding that:

> The photographs of the student's "passport book" show "the specific accommodations, modifications, and supports that must be provided for the child in accordance with the IEP." (Report, p. 13).

However, the investigator also found that:

> There is nothing in the "passport book" that shows that the paraeducators were "informed of . . . [their] specific responsibilities related to implementing the child's IEP." (K.A.R. § 91-40-16(b)(5); Student Passport Book, Aug. 2024.) This is evident in that there is no information on what accommodations the paraeducator is expected to implement and no information on the paraeducator's specific responsibilities for carrying out the student's special education services in English, Math, Social Studies, and Science. Additionally, the special education teacher put together the "passport book" for the paraeducators, but there is no documentation to show that the district ensured the special education teacher was informed of her specific responsibilities related to implementing the student's IEP. With this student, there does not appear to be a process by which the district determined and assigned specific responsibilities for all components of the IEP. (Report, P. 13-14).

By providing an IEP and passport book to all staff, the staff were informed of the services that needed to be provided, but these sources did not inform staff of each of their individual "specific responsibilities."

The investigator found a violation because this portion of the regulation goes beyond mere access to an IEP. It also requires that any individual who is responsible for implementation of any part of an IEP "is informed of…that individual's specific responsibilities." The IEP and "passport book" did not provide that information and nothing in this appeal supports a finding that paraeducator staff were informed of their "individual specific responsibilities" under this student's IEP.

Accordingly, the conclusion of the investigator on this issue is sustained.

Issue Four

> In the 2024–25 school year, whether the district provided special education services for all students with IEPs attending the same private school as the student. K.S.A. §§ 72-3462, 3463.

The district's appeal is based on the district's assertion that the complainant does not have a parental right, or standing, to lawfully file a systemic complaint on behalf of other students, and so this issue is beyond the "jurisdictional scope" of K.A.R. 91-40-51(a).

The Appeal Committee sees nothing in the cited regulation that supports the district's reading of this regulation. K.A.R. 91-40-51(a) says: "Any person or organization may file a written, signed complaint alleging that an agency has violated a state or federal special education law or regulation (emphasis added)." The applicable federal regulation (34 C.F.R. 300.153) has a similar provision. Thus, the Appeal Committee finds that this complainant, like "any person," has a right to file a systemic complaint on behalf of students for which she is not a parent.

The investigator found that:

> "the district did not provide any information on the services each student's IEP requires and does not have any mechanism to ensure services are provided when a public-school staff member responsible for providing services in the public school is pulled to another district building. The district provided documentation that all services are available to each student at the public school, but that only speaks to the availability of services after April 3, 2025, not prior to that in the 2024–25 school year. The district's misunderstanding of staff responsibilities for implementing accommodations and behavior intervention plans is likely impacting all students with IEPs at the private school. The parent's and private school principal's account of whether the district is providing services undermines the district's assertion that it is providing services as indicated in student's IEPs."

The Appeal Committee agrees with the investigator's findings and conclusion on this issue. When public school staff report an understanding that the duty to implement provisions in an IEP belongs to private school staff and not to public school staff, and the principle of the private school reports that public school staff are not implementing those provisions, those factors are strong evidence undermining the district's assertion that public school staff are providing all services within the IEPs of all students with disabilities in the private school.

The Appeal Committee sustains the conclusion of the investigator on this issue.

Issue Five

Whether the district provided the parent with prior written notice in response to the parent's request for support for the student in health class. K.S.A. § 72-3430(b)(2).

The district argues that it did not deny the parent's request for support in the health class when the special education teacher responded to an e-mail from the parent requesting said support. The e-mail response said; "Unfortunately, we cannot provide support for a class prior to a demonstrated need. We can keep an eye on the situation. I will check in with [the health teacher] and even do some observations to watch for any signs of need." (District's Response to the Complaint, Apr. 20, 2025.) (Report, p. 18). The investigator found this response to be a refusal of the parent's request, which required a Prior Written Notice (PWN). The Appeal Committee agrees. Any response to a parent's request for additional support for their child that starts with,

"Unfortunately, we cannot…" is likely a refusal of the request, at least for a period of time. The Appeal Committee finds that this response was clearly a refusal that required a PWN.

The district also argues that "A violation cannot be found where no adverse action occurred." The district asserts that delivery of a PWN is merely a procedural requirement and so failure to deliver a PWN is merely a procedural violation of law.

No statute or regulation addresses this issue with respect to state complaints, such as this one. There is a provision in federal regulations (at 34 C.F.R. 300.513) that states that a hearing officer in a due process hearing must:

> Base any determination of whether a child received FAPE on substantive grounds and that a hearing officer may find that a child did not receive a FAPE only if the procedural inadequacies—
> (i) Impeded the child's right to a FAPE;
>
> (ii) Significantly impeded the parent's opportunity to participate in the decision-making process regarding the provision of a FAPE to the parent's child; or
>
> (iii) Caused a deprivation of educational benefit.

That regulation adds that:

> (3) Nothing in paragraph (a) of this section shall be construed to preclude a hearing officer from ordering an LEA to comply with procedural requirements

Even though this regulatory provision applies only to hearing officers in a due process hearing, Special Education and Title Services (SETS) often applies it to state complaints. In doing so, SETS recognizes the parameters of this federal regulation, as follows:

> It includes more than just the provision of FAPE to the child.
> It also includes significant impediment of the parent's opportunity to participate in the decision-making process and includes deprivation of educational benefit to the child. Additionally, the regulation includes, even when none of the above applies, that the hearing officer may order the district to comply with the procedural requirement. Thus, this regulation authorizes corrective action even when a hearing officer finds no substantive violation.

In this complaint, the investigator found a procedural violation for not providing the parent with a PWN. There was no analysis in the complaint report regarding whether this procedural violation was also a substantive violation because it "significantly impeded the parent's opportunity to participate in the decision making process." The Appeal Committee finds that there is no need to ascertain whether this procedural violation was also a substantive violation because, in either case, the investigator (like hearing officers) has authority to order the district to "comply with procedural requirements." The corrective action on this issue does just that. There was no finding of a violation of FAPE for the Appeal Committee to overturn. The corrective action in the report merely orders the district to submit a written statement of assurance that it will comply with the procedural requirements relating to prior written notice and provide the parents with the PWN that it should have provided. These corrective actions are simply "ordering an LEA to comply with procedural requirements," as authorized in the federal regulations for hearing officers.

Finally, the district also appealed corrective action. There is no appeal process for corrective action. The pertinent regulation, K.A.R. 91-40-51(f) permits an appeal of only the "findings or conclusions" in a complaint report. SETS removes corrective action when an Appeal Committee reverses a decision concluding that a violation has occurred, but that does not apply here, where there is no reversal of any conclusion.

The Appeal Committee sustains all of the conclusions in the complaint report that are under appeal.

Conclusion

For the reasons stated herein, the Complaint Report is sustained in full.

This is the final decision on this matter. There is no further appeal. This Appeal Decision is issued this 23rd day of May, 2025.

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST
UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #305
ON MARCH 26, 2025

DATE OF REPORT: MAY 1, 2025

This report is in response to a complaint filed with the Kansas State Department of Education on behalf of ------- by his mother, -------. In the remainder of the report ------- will be referred to as the "student" and ------- will be referred to as the "complainant", the "parent", or the "mother".

The complaint is against USD #305 (Salina Public Schools) who contracts with the Central Kansas Cooperative in Education (CKCIE) to provide special education services to students enrolled in the school district. In the remainder of the report, both of these responsible public agencies may also be referred to as "the district", "the local education agency (LEA)", or "the school". Individually, they will be referred to by "USD #305" and "CKCIE" respectively.

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) allows for a 60-day timeline to investigate a complaint and allow for an appeal process from the date on which it was filed. A complaint is considered filed on the date on which it was received by KSDE. In this case, the KSDE initially received the complaint on March 26, 2025 and assigned the case for investigation on March 27, 2025.

Evidence Reviewed

Both parties were contacted via telephone during the investigation to gather and clarify information. Both the parent and the 305 LEA representative were interviewed on March 28, 2025 and the parent was interviewed again on April 18, 2025. After an internal investigation, the LEA acknowledged noncompliance for all three issues and an interview was determined to not be necessary.

The LEA provided multiple documents for review and consideration during the investigation. All this documentation was reviewed and considered by the investigator. The following written documentation was viewed as most relevant and primarily used in consideration of the issues:

1. USD #457 Individualize Education Program (IEP) dated March 22, 2024
2. Contact Notes with Angela Alarcon, Oakdale School Administrative Assistant dated March 6 – March 26, 2025
3. Administrative Conversations with Angela Dorzweiler, Oakdale School Principal and April Mayorga, Lead Teacher, dated March 6 – March 31, 2025

4. Timeline of Contacts with Kent Trimmell, School Psychologist dated March 11 – March 31, 2025
5. Communication/Information/Timeline with Lori Thornton, Oakdale School Special Education Coordinator, dated March 11 – April 4, 2025
6. Meeting Notes dated March 27, 2025
7. USD #305 IEP dated April 4, 2025
8. Prior Written Notice (PWN) for Identification, Initial Services, Placement, Change of Services, Change of Placement, and Request for Consent dated April 4, 2025
9. IEP Conference Summary dated April 4, 2025
10. Resolution Meeting Notes dated April 4, 2025
11. Response to the Allegations dated April 14, 2025 written by Sarah Loquist, CKCIE General Counsel

Background Information

The student is an eight-year-old boy who is currently enrolled in in the third grade at Meadowlark Ridge Elementary School in USD #322 for the 2024-25 school year. He was initially evaluated and found eligible for early childhood special education services at the age of three and the student has continuously received special education services to the present time. His most recent reevaluation was conducted on March 22, 2024 and it was determined that he continued to be a child with an exceptionality and in need of special education under the category of autism.

Issues Investigated

Based on the written complaint and an interview with the complainant, three issues were identified and investigated.

Issue One

Did the district provide free appropriate public education (FAPE) to the student, including services comparable to those described in the student's IEP from the previous school district special education services during 2024-2025 school year following a move from one Kansas school district to another?

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at C.F.R. §300.323(e) and state regulations at K.S.A. 72-3429(g) state that if a child with a disability who had an IEP that was in effect in a previous public agency within the same State transfers to a new public agency in the same State, and enrolls in a new school within the same school year, the new public agency, in consultation with the parents, must provide FAPE to the child including services comparable to those described in the child's IEP from the previous public agency, until the new public agency either 1) Adopts the child's IEP from the previous public agency; or develop, adopt, and implement a new IEP that meets the applicable requirements at C.F.R. 300.320 through 300.324.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The following findings of fact are based upon interviews and record review.

The parent and LEA both reported the initial contact regarding enrollment occurred on Thursday, March 6, 2025 and that the parent visited the neighborhood school, Oakdale Elementary School on the afternoon of Friday, March 7, 2025 and provided the required enrollment documentation. The LEA reported that the parent provided a copy of the student's IEP Goal Progress Report at that time; however, she did not provide a copy of the student's current IEP from USD #457, the previous Kansas school district.

Angie Dorzweiler, the Oakdale Elementary School Principal, reported speaking with the parent about the previous educational program for the student on that same day and discussing that the student was partially integrated but also in a behavior classroom where he received supports for social emotional learning and behavior.

The enrollment documentation was processed on Monday, March 10, 2025 and the LEA requested a copy of the student's IEP from USD #457. It is noted that the student's sibling began attending the neighborhood school, Oakdale Elementary School, on Tuesday, March 11, 2025.

According to district staff, a copy of that IEP was not received until Wednesday, March 12, 2025. That IEP was reviewed by the Oakdale team on Thursday, March 13, 2025 The IEP from USD #457 required 60 minutes per day of specialized instruction in social/emotional skills in the special education setting; 180 minutes per day of specialized instruction in the general education setting; 20 minutes per week of social work services, and indirect Autism consultation for 10 minutes one time per each nine-week period.

On March 14, 2025, a referral was sent to Opportunity Now and Meadowlark Ridge Elementary School, the two district programs for students needing emotional and behavioral special education support services.

It is noted that all students in the district were out of school between Friday, March 14 and Friday, March 21, 2025.

Meeting notes kept by Angela Mayorga, Lead Teacher, describes a meeting with the parent on Monday, March 24, 2025 as follows:

Mother arrived at Oakdale asking questions on where we are on the student's paperwork . . . During the meeting Mr. Trimmell [School Psychologist] reviewed the placement piece from the current IEP, inquiring about the behavior school. Mom stated it was not a behavior school, he was in general education as much as possible throughout the day. I asked Mom what his typical day looked like. Mom shared that he would work for 15 minutes, then have breaks throughout the day and that he had some behaviors that occurred. Mom also shared that she would meet with the IEP team every couple of months to check on goals and what is working or not working.

Mom asked about the programs we have in Salina. Mr. Trimmell reviewed the programs that we have in Salina and Mom immediately said no self-contained at all, I do not want that. Mr. Trimmell shared that a meeting to discuss appropriate placement is scheduled for Monday, March 31st at 9:30. Mom is concerned that brother has being going to school, but not the student. Mr. Trimmell stated that we cannot deny you (the student) enrollment starting now. Mom said that will not work for him to start here (Oakdale) then go somewhere else in a week. April [Oakdale Lead Teacher] discussed with Mom that we can send some work and activities home with him, Mom agreed. We assured her that someone will reach out to her Monday to follow up after the meeting. She agreed. At the end of the meeting, we reviewed her concerns and next steps. Mr. Trimmell re-stated that he can begin attending Oakdale today as we work through the process and meeting. Mom again said that will not work for him and agreed to wait for someone to contact her after the meeting. Materials were sent home with sibling at the end of the school day.

On Thursday, March 27, 2025, the parent, the student's IEP team at USD #322 and the student's IEP team from USD #457 met to review the IEP and discuss the student's services. Lori Thornton, Special Education Coordinator for USD #305, reviewed the placement options available in the district and arranged tours for the parent.

On March 31, 2025, an internal team determined that the most appropriate program in the district for the student would be at Meadowlark Ridge Elementary School.

The student's IEP team met on Friday, April 4, 2025 to develop a new IEP for the student. A prior written notice was provided to the parent describing the special education services proposed and the parent provided written consent for these services.

Also at this IEP team meeting, the LEA offered to provide compensatory services "due to the district's delay in determining comparable services and processing the student's enrollment." USD #305 provided the parent with a prior written notice dated April 8, 2025 offering the following services:

It is proposed that the student will be provided an equivalent of 10 days (430 minutes per day) of compensatory education due to delay in his enrollment in school. This compensatory education will be provided in ESY between the dates of 6/2/2025-7/15/2025. The time in service will be provided over the course of 20 days at 215 minutes per day.

The parent did not provide written consent for these services.

Conclusion

In this case, USD #305 acknowledged noncompliance with the requirement to provide FAPE upon the student's transfer from USD #457 by not providing comparable services between March 11, 2025, the date the student's sibling began attending school in USD #305, and April 4, 2025, the date the IEP team met and developed a new IEP for the student.

While the LEA made two offers of services to the student after enrollment, neither of these made comparable services available to the student. First, the district offered the parent the option for the student to begin attending the neighborhood school but comparable services to those provided in the previous school district were not available in this school building and the parent was not in agreement. The district also offered the parent the option of providing classwork while the student remained at home awaiting an IEP team meeting to develop a new IEP but, while the parent agreed, the district did not provide any specialized instruction to the student to address the social/emotional and behavioral support services required in the previous IEP.

The LEA did offer to provide compensatory services but only proposed 10 days of compensatory services when the student was actually denied comparable services for a total of 12 days between March 11, 2025 and April 4, 2025, excluding the days students in the district did not attend school between March 14 and March 21, 2025.

It is unclear how USD #305 determined the student was owed a total of 430 minutes per day of special education services as comparable services. According to the previous IEP, a total of 240 minutes per day of specialized instruction [60 minutes in the special education setting and 180 minutes in general education setting] were required to be provided. In addition, the comparable services offered to the student did not include any weekly social work services or indirect Autism consultation.

Issue Two

Did the district follow IDEA procedures for the eligible student when moving from one Kansas school district to another during 2024-2025 school year by adopting the student's IEP from the previous school district or developing and implementing a new IEP?

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at C.F.R. §300.323(e) and state regulations at K.S.A. 72-3429(g) state that if a child with a disability who had an IEP that was in effect in a previous public agency within the same State transfers to a new public agency in the same State, and enrolls in a new school within the same school year, the new public agency, in consultation with the parents, must provide FAPE to the child including services comparable to those described in the child's IEP from the previous public agency, until the new public agency either 1) Adopts the child's IEP from the previous public agency; or develop, adopt, and implement a new IEP that meets the applicable requirements at C.F.R. 300.320 through 300.324.

The Kansas Special Education Process Manual in Chapter Four, Section G: Transfer within the State and From Out of State notes that when a student moves within the state, eligibility has already been established and a reevaluation is not required. This chapter delineates the following steps for meeting the in-state transfer process requirements:

> Step 1: When a student moves into a new school district, the school district must take reasonable steps to promptly obtain the child's records, including the individualized education program (IEP) and supporting documents and any other records relating to the provision of special education or related services to the child, from the previous school district in which the child was enrolled. The previous school district in which the child was enrolled must take reasonable steps to promptly respond to the request from the new school district. Parent consent is not required to transfer education records to a school where a student intends to enroll, or is already enrolled.
> Step 2: When a child with an exceptionality transfers to a new school district in Kansas, with a current IEP in a previous school district in Kansas, the new school district, in consultation with the parents, must provide a free appropriate public education (FAPE) to the child, including services comparable to those described in the child's IEP from the previous school district.
> Step 3: Once the new district receives the current IEP the new school district may adopt the child's IEP from the previous school district or develop and implement a new IEP. If the new district develops a new IEP, parent consent is required for any substantial change in placement or any material change in services proposed in the new IEP.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.503(a) require school districts to provide parents with prior written notice a reasonable time before they propose or refuse to initiate or change the identification, evaluation, educational placement, or the provision of FAPE to the student.

State regulations at K.A.R. 91-40-27(a)(3) require school districts to obtain parent consent before making a material change in services or a substantial change in placement. "Material change in services" is defined at K.A.R. 91-40-1(mm) as an increase or decrease of 25% or more of the frequency or duration of a special education service, related service, or supplementary aid or service specified in the child's IEP. "Substantial change in placement" is defined at K.A.R. 91-40-1(sss) as the movement of an exceptional child for more than 25% of the child's school day from a less restrictive environment to a more restrictive environment or from a more restrictive environment to a less restrictive environment.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The following findings of fact are based upon interviews and record review.

The findings of Issue One are incorporated herein by reference.

The IEP team met on Friday, April 4, 2025 to develop an IEP for the student. The LEA proposed to provide 60 minutes per day of specialized instruction in the special education setting and 180 minutes per day of specialized instruction in the general education setting to address social/emotional skills as well as indirect behavior consultation for 10 minutes one time per each nine-week period. These services would not be provided in the neighborhood school but instead at Meadowlark Ridge Elementary School.

Also at this IEP team meeting, the LEA offered to provide compensatory services "due to the district's delay in determining comparable services and processing the student's enrollment."

USD #305 provided the parent with a Prior Written Notice (PWN) for Identification, Initial Services, Placement, Change of Services, Change of Placement, and Request for Consent dated April 4, 2025 describing the 60 minutes per day of specialized instruction in the special education setting and 180 minutes per day of specialized instruction in the general education setting to address social/emotional skills and the indirect behavior consultation for 10 minutes one time per each nine-week period.

In addition, the PWN proposed the following compensatory services:

> It is proposed that the student will be provided an equivalent of 10 days (430 minutes per day) of compensatory education due to delay in his enrollment in school. This compensatory education will be provided in ESY between the dates of 6/2/2025-7/15/2025. The time in service will be provided over the course of 20 days at 215 minutes per day.

The PWN did not describe the deletion of the 20 minutes per week of social work services nor did the parent provide written consent for this material change in services.

Conclusion

In this case, the district again acknowledged that it did not follow the required procedures for the transfer of a student with an IEP between two school districts within the same State.

In addition, noncompliance is identified for not providing the parent with appropriate prior written notice to remove the social work services from the proposed IEP and obtaining parental consent for a material change of services following the April 4, 2025 IEP team meeting.

Issue Three

Did the district meet the student's IEP team to review the student's IEP annually during the 2024-2025 school year?

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at C.F.R. §300.324(b)(1)(i) that each public agency must review the child's IEP periodically, but not less than annually, to determine whether the annual goals for the child are being achieved.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The district noted the student's previous IEP was developed on March 22, 2024 in USD #457; however, that IEP was not received by USD #322 until March 12, 2025 through the in-state transfer process. The district reported the district's spring break for student's started on March 14 and ended on March 21, 2025 and there was no opportunity to conduct an IEP review within 365 days of March 22, 2024.

Documentation shows the student's current IEP was developed at an IEP team meeting held on April 4, 2025 in USD #322. The district acknowledged noncompliance and plans to conduct another IEP team meeting with the parent in May to come back into compliance with the requirement for the student's current IEP to be reviewed and revised, as necessary, with 365 days of April 4, 2025.

Conclusion

In this case, USD #322 acknowledged the student's IEP was not reviewed and revised, as necessary, within 365 days of March 22, 2024, the previous IEP team meeting date. Based on the foregoing, noncompliance with the requirements of federal regulations at C.F.R. §300.324(b)(1)(i) is found.

Summary of Conclusion s/Corrective Action

ISSUE ONE: USD #305 acknowledged noncompliance with the requirement to provide FAPE upon the student's transfer from USD #457 by not providing comparable services between March 11, 2025, the date the student's sibling began attending school in USD #305, and April 4, 2025, the date the IEP team met and developed a new IEP for the student. It is noted the LEA did make an offer of compensatory services, but the parent did not provide consent to the prior written notice dated April 8, 2025 which described the offered services. Based on the foregoing, corrective action is required.

Corrective Action

1. The LEA will contact TASN to arrange for training to be provided to the special education staff and building administrators working at Oakdale and Meadowlark Ridge

Elementary Schools in USD #322 and special education staff working with USD # 322 employed with CKCIE regarding the appropriate in-state transfer procedures, specifically the requirement to provide comparable services to the student until such time the LEA adopts the transfer IEP or develops a new IEP for the student no later than August 1, 2025. The LEA will provide KSDE with the date of the training, the name of the trainer, and a copy of any handouts or presentation materials no later than one week following the date of the actual training.

2. Because of the noncompliance, the student was not provided with comparable services for a total of 12 days school days based upon when the sibling began attending school on March 11, 2025 and the date of the IEP team meeting on April 4, 2025. Based upon the March 22, 2024 IEP, the student should have been provided with a total of 12 hours of special education instruction in social/emotional skills in the special education setting (60 minutes per day); a total of 36 hours of special education services for social/emotional skills in the general education setting (180 minutes per day); and 40 minutes of social work services (40 minutes per week) during that timeframe. The LEA will create a plan to provide the student with a minimum of these amounts of compensatory services being provided to the student by the end of the first quarter of the 2025-26 school year. This plan will be provided to the parent no later than May 23, 2025. The parent may choose to accept all, some, or none of these services. The LEA will notify KSDE of the parent's decision no later than 10 days from the date of the parent's decision. If any amount of compensatory service is accepted by the parent, the LEA will provide KSDE with documentation of the provision of these services by the end of the first quarter of the 2025-26 school year.

ISSUE TWO: Again, USD #305 acknowledged noncompliance because it did not follow the procedures for the transfer of a student with an IEP between two school districts within the same state as required by federal regulations at C.F.R. §300.323(e) and state regulations at K.S.A. 72-3429(g). In addition, noncompliance is identified for not providing the parent with appropriate prior written notice to remove the social work services from the proposed IEP and obtaining parental consent for a material change of services following the April 4, 2025 IEP team meeting. Based on the foregoing, corrective action is required.

Corrective Action

3. USD #322 and CKCIE will review their policies, procedures and practices for in-state transfer students with IEPs and develop a checklist form to be used to document the appropriate steps in the process. A copy of the checklist will be provided to KSDE no later than July 1, 2025 for approval. Once approved by KSDE, a copy of this checklist will be shared with all special education staff and building administrators no later than August 1, 2025.
4. The LEA will contact TASN to arrange for training to be provided to the special education staff and building administrators working at Oakdale and Meadowlark Ridge Elementary Schools in USD #322 and special education staff working with USD # 322 employed with CKCIE regarding the appropriate in-state transfer procedures and the checklist no later than August 1, 2025. In addition, this training will include information about the requirements for providing appropriate prior written notice to parents, specifically addressing material changes in service and significant changes of placement. The LEA will provide KSDE with the date of the training, the name of the trainer, and a copy of any handouts or presentation materials no later than one week following the date of the actual training.

5. The LEA will reconvene the student's IEP team no later than May 30, 2025 to review and revise, as appropriate, the provision of social work services to the student as required by the March 22, 2024 IEP and provide the parent with appropriate prior written notice following that IEP team meeting. The LEA will provide KSDE with a copy of the prior written notice within 10 days of the date of the IEP team meeting.

ISSUE THREE: Again, the LEA acknowledged the student's IEP was not reviewed and revised, as necessary, within 365 days of the development of the previous IEP. The previous IEP was developed on March 22, 2024 and the student's current IEP was developed on April 4, 2025. It is noted that the student transferred into the district on March 10, 2025, which was only 12 calendar days prior to the annual review date and that eight of those 12 calendar days were the district's spring break. However, based on the foregoing, the district is determined to be out of compliance with the requirement to review and to revise, as necessary, each student's IEP at least annually.

Corrective Action

6. The LEA will provide KSDE with an assurance statement that it will review each student's IEP periodically, but not less than annually, to determine whether the annual goals for the student are being achieved, and to revise each student's IEP as necessary.

In the Matter of the Appeal of the Report
Issued in Response to a Complaint Filed March 26, 2025
Against Unified School District No. 305

DECISION OF THE APPEAL COMMITTEE

Background

This matter commenced on March 26, 2025, with the parent, ------, filing a complaint on behalf of her child, ------. This decision will refer to ------ as "the parent," and ------ as "the student." A complaint investigator completed the complaint investigation on behalf of the Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) Special Education and Title Services team. Following the investigation, KSDE issued a complaint report addressing the parent's allegations, on May 1, 2025. The complaint report concluded that there were four violations of special education law under three issues.

On May 9, 2025, the district filed an appeal of the complaint report. Upon receiving the appeal, KSDE appointed an Appeal Committee, and it reviewed the district's appeal, the complaint report, the district's response to the parent's complaint and the district's accompanying exhibits that the district referenced in its appeal, and the parent's complaint. The Appeal Committee now issues this Appeal Decision.

Preliminary Matters

KSDE included the text of regulation regarding filing an appeal, § K.A.R. 91-40-51(f)(1), with the complaint report. That regulation states, in part, " Any agency or complainant may appeal any of the findings or conclusions of a compliance report prepared by the special education section of the department by filing a written notice of appeal with the state commissioner of education. Each notice shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect." Accordingly, the KSDE Appeal Committee may only consider appeals of findings or conclusions and the burden for supplying a sufficient basis for appeal is on the party submitting the appeal. When a party submits an appeal and makes statements in the notice of appeal without support for the statement, the Appeal Committee does not attempt to locate the missing support.

The Appeal Committee does not decide new issues as part of the appeal. The Appeal Committee reviews the complaint report and determines whether the appealed findings or conclusions are correct. The Appeal Committee does not conduct a separate investigation. The Appeal Committee's function is to determine whether sufficient evidence exists to support the complaint report's appealed findings and conclusions.

Districts' Appeal

The district raises three allegations that the findings and conclusions from the complaint report are incorrect. The district also raises concern regarding one of the corrective actions ordered. Corrective action is not appealable; only findings or conclusions are appealable under K.A.R. § 91-40-51(f)(1). The Appeal Committee will address the following three allegations:

Allegation One: Date District Began Comparable Services

> Allegation that the complaint investigator's conclusion regarding the district's start date of comparable services should have been the date the student started school in the district. This allegation is connected to complaint report Issue One.

Allegation Two: Comparable Services in Student's Neighborhood School

> Allegation that the complaint investigator's conclusion that the district did not make comparable services available in the student's neighborhood school is not supported by the evidence the district provided in its response. This allegation is connected to complaint report Issue One.

Allegation Three: Material Change of Services Consent Finding

> Allegation that the complaint investigator did not sufficiently investigate prior to concluding that the district violated K.A.R. § 91-40-27(a)(3). This allegation is connected to complaint report Issue Two.

Allegation One: Date District Began Comparable Services

> Whether the complaint investigator should have based the Issue One conclusion of the district providing compensatory services on the date the student started school.

Applicable Law

The regulation at focus in Issue One of the complaint is 34 C.F.R. § 300.323(e), "If a child with a disability (who had an IEP that was in effect in a previous public agency in the same State) transfers to a new public agency in the same State, and enrolls in a new school within the same school year, the new public agency (in consultation with the parents) must provide FAPE to the child (including services comparable to those described in the child's IEP from the previous public agency), until the new public agency either—

(1) Adopts the child's IEP from the previous public agency; or

(2) Develops, adopts, and implements a new IEP that meets the applicable requirements in §§300.320 through 300.324."

Relevant Facts

The district's response indicates that the student began attending school at Meadowlark Ridge Elementary on April 2, 2025. (District's Response, 2, Apr. 14, 2025.) In support of this statement, the district's response points to Exhibit 2, the special education coordinator's notes. (District's Response, 2, Apr. 14, 2025.)

The complaint report indicates that on "March 31, 2025, an internal team determined that the most appropriate program in the district for the student would be at Meadowlark Ridge Elementary School." (Complaint Report, 5, May 1, 2025.) The complaint report further indicates that the "student's IEP team met on Friday, April 4, 2025 to develop a new IEP for the student." (Complaint Report, 5, May 1, 2025.) The complaint report does not include the date the student started school at Meadowlark Ridge Elementary. (Complaint Report, 6, May 1, 2025.)

The complaint investigator concluded that the "LEA made two offers of services to the student after enrollment" and neither offer "made comparable services available to the student." (Complaint Report, 6, May 1, 2025.) The complaint investigator concluded these two offers of non-comparable services were at the student's neighborhood school (Oakdale Elementary) and to provide work for the student to complete at home. (Complaint Report, 6, May 1, 2025.)

The complaint investigator ordered compensatory services for the student based on a calculation that ended on "April 4, 2025, the date the IEP team met and developed a new IEP for the student." (Complaint Report, 6, May 1, 2025.) During the complaint investigation the district offered the parent compensatory services based on a calculation that ended on April 2, 2025, the date the district maintains it began to provide the student with comparable services. (District's Appeal, 2, May 9, 2025.) The district disputes the investigator's conclusion that the district did not provide compensatory services until April 4, 2025, and the corresponding compensatory services calculation the complaint investigator used to determine corrective action. (District's Appeal, 2, May 9, 2025.)

Allegation One Conclusion

Based on its review, the Appeal Committee finds support for the April 4 date the complaint investigator used in the Issue One conclusion as there is no clear evidence that the district clearly communicated to the parent that comparable services were available for the student until April 4. The parent provided enrollment documentation on March 10, the district received the student's IEP from the former district on March 12, staff with the student's neighborhood school reviewed the student's IEP on March 13, staff with the neighborhood school met with the parent on March 24, the student's current and former district IEP Teams met on March 27. On any of these dates the district could have communicated to the parent that comparable services were available to the student and did not. The district also did not provide any evidence both during the investigation and the appeal that the district actually provided comparable services beginning April 2. Based on this evidence and analysis, the Appeal Committee upholds the complaint investigator's conclusion in Issue One on the start date of compensatory services.

Allegation Two: Comparable Services in Student's Neighborhood School

Whether the complaint investigator correctly concluded in Issue One that the district did not make comparable services available in the student's neighborhood school.

Applicable Law

The regulation at focus in Issue One of the complaint is 34 C.F.R. § 300.323(e), "If a child with a disability (who had an IEP that was in effect in a previous public agency in the same State) transfers to a new public agency in the same State, and enrolls in a new school within the same school year, the new public agency (in consultation with the parents) must provide FAPE to the child (including services comparable to those described in the child's IEP from the previous public agency), until the new public agency either—

(1) Adopts the child's IEP from the previous public agency; or

(2) Develops, adopts, and implements a new IEP that meets the applicable requirements in §§300.320 through 300.324."

Relevant Facts

The district's response indicates that at a March 24, 2025, meeting between the parent, school psychologist, and the lead teacher at the student's neighborhood school, the school psychologist informed the parent that the student could attend the neighborhood school immediately. (District's Response, 2, Apr. 14, 2025.) The district's response indicates the parent chose not to send the student to the neighborhood school because there was a possibility the student may attend a different school when the district developed, adopted, and implemented a new IEP. (District's Response, 2, Apr. 14, 2025.) The district points to Exhibit 1, the neighborhood school's principal's notes, and Exhibit 8, the school psychologist's notes in support. (District's Response, 2, Apr. 14, 2025.)

The complaint report included findings that directly quote from the lead teacher's March 24, 2025, meeting notes stating, "[the school psychologist] stated that we cannot deny you (the student) enrollment starting now. Mom said that will not work for [the student] to start here (Oakdale) then go somewhere else in a week. . . . [The school psychologist] re-stated that [the student] can begin attending Oakdale today as we work through the process and meeting." (Complaint Report, 5, May 1, 2025.) The complaint investigator concluded "the district offered the parent the option for the student to begin attending the neighborhood school but comparable services to those provided in the previous school district were not available in this school building and the parent was not in agreement." (Complaint Report, 6, May 1, 2025.)

The district's appeal asserts that the complaint investigator did not ask the district whether comparable services were available at the student's neighborhood school. (District's Appeal, 2, May 9, 2025.) The district's appeal indicates that "the behavior program at Meadowlark is a better fit for [the student], Oakdale could have provided comparable services to [the student] until the IEP meeting was held." (District's Appeal, 2, May 9, 2025.)

Allegation Two Conclusion

The Appeal Committee does not believe the district provided information during the investigation or on appeal to indicate comparable services were available at the neighborhood school. If the district had relevant information to provide regarding comparable services, it could have provided it during the investigation or the appeal and did not. The complaint investigator interprets the district's offer for the student to attend the neighborhood as simply allowing the child to attend the neighborhood school and not as a communication that it would provide comparable services. The complaint investigator bases this conclusion on the district's focus on the student's likely placement being a school other than the student's neighborhood school. In the district's Exhibit 7, included with the district's response to the complaint, the school psychologist notes indicate that at the March 24 meeting with the parent, "I explained that [the student] can begin school at [the student's neighborhood school] today and it will be up to the [neighborhood school] to do their best in providing special education services." The Appeal Committee finds that "to do their best in providing special education services" does not communicate to the parent that comparable services will be provided in the neighborhood. The Appeal Committee finds that the district cannot have it both ways. The district cannot communicate to the parent that the student must ultimately attend a non-neighborhood school and that comparable services can also be provided at the neighborhood school. Based on this evidence and analysis, the Appeal Committee upholds the complaint investigator's conclusion in Issue One that the district did not make comparable services available in the student's neighborhood school.

Allegation Three: Material Change of Services Consent Finding

Whether the complaint investigator correctly concluded in Issue Two that the district violated K.A.R. § 91-40-27(a)(3).

Applicable Law

The regulations at focus in Issue Two of the complaint are 34 C.F.R. § 300.323(e), K.S.A. § 72-3429(g), 34 C.F.R. § 300.503(a), and K.A.R. § 91-40-27(a)(3). Relevant to this allegation, the complaint investigator found a violation of K.A.R. § 91-40-27(a)(3), "[E]ach each agency shall obtain parental consent before . . . making a material change in services to . . . an exceptional child . . . ."

Relevant Facts

The parent's complaint did not include an alleged violation of K.A.R. § 91-40-27(a)(3). The district's response does not provide any information on a material change of services, other than pointing to the Prior Written Notice where the district indicates it will implement a new IEP for the student and does not request parent consent for any services changes. (District's Response, 2, Apr. 14, 2025; Prior Written Notice, Apr. 4, 2025.)

The complaint investigation report indicated that the student's IEP from their previous district required, "20 minutes per week of social work services." (Complaint Report, 4, May 1, 2025.) In explaining the removal of the social work services, the complaint investigator points to the Prior Written Notice the district provided the parent during the complaint investigation offering compensatory services. (Complaint Report, 9, May 1, 2025.) The district pointed out in its appeal that in the investigator's focus on the removal of social work services, the investigator instead should have pointed to the Prior Written Notice the district provided to the parent indicating it would implement a new IEP for the student and not requesting parent consent for any services changes. (District's Appeal, 2, May 9, 2025; Prior Written Notice, Apr. 4, 2025.)

The district's appeal maintains the complaint investigator should have asked the district for information on why social work services were removed from the student's IEP. (District's Appeal, 2, May 9, 2025.) The district indicated in its appeal that the district discussed with the parent that the student will receive "social skills support in the special education classroom for 60 minutes a day . . . provided by his special education teacher . . . [and] . . . access to the building's social worker any time he needs it, just like any other student in the building." (District's Appeal, 2, May 9, 2025.) The district indicated the removal of social work services from the student's IEP should have been "clearly identified on the PWN" and that the district would issue a new PWN and provide the parent "the opportunity to meet with the team again to discuss it further." (District's Appeal, 2, May 9, 2025.) The complaint investigator ordered corrective action for the LEA to "reconvene the student's IEP team no later than May 30, 2025 to review and revise, as appropriate, the provision of social work services to the student as required by the March 22, 2024 IEP and provide the parent with appropriate prior written notice following that IEP team meeting" as well as KSDE. (Complaint Report, 13, May 1, 2025.)

Allegation Three Conclusion

If the district had relevant information to provide regarding social work services, it could have provided it during the investigation and did not. The district provides information regarding the removal of social work services on appeal and also admits a violation of K.A.R. § 91-40-27(a)(3). The investigator cited sufficient evidence to show that the district was required to seek the parent's consent to remove social work services and the district did not do that. Based on this evidence and analysis, the Appeal Committee upholds the complaint investigator's conclusion in Issue Two that the district violated K.A.R. § 91-40-27(a)(3).

Background Information

This investigation involved a seventeen-year-old student enrolled at Andover Central High School (School) and Erin Is Hope Foundation Private School (Private School), in USD #385. The Student is currently receiving special education or related services as a child with a multiple disability per the IDEA. In the fall of 2024, the Student was diagnosed as legally blind from ophthalmologist and optometrist evaluations. Beginning in pre-school, the Student had received special education services for speech and language. The first IEP meeting for the Student at the School was held in April 2024. The Student was found eligible for a Multiple Disability, which the Parent did not agree with. The Parent wanted the Team to consider Traumatic Brain Injury, Learning Disability, or Other Health Impaired. The Student received services in the resource room for writing and math and received reading and English services at the Private School. The Student received direct speech/language services at the Private School and consultative speech services at the School. The Student lives at home with their Parent.

Findings of the Investigation

The following findings are based on a review of documentation and interviews with the Parent and staff in the District.

A Low Vision Eye Report dated October 24, 2024 indicated the Student had Cerebral/cortical visual impairment (CVI) and proptosis in the left eye, with a systemic diagnosis of periventricular leukomalacia. The Student met the definition of legally blind. Vision acuity is 20/200 or less in the better eye with the best correction. Recommendations included:

    a. Environment: "Decrease complexity, simplify, may have difficulty running into things on the left side. This would need assessment in the environment."

b. "In reviewing the eye gaze, there is left-sided neglect of the visual field. This could be related to the PVL."

c. It is hard for the family to come to [the City] just for a visual field. I'm not sure at this time [sic] urgent, as we have evidence to diagnose CVI, and also make some intervention strategies based on information and evaluations to date."

    f. Career Education: "This is an area of need for the Student. [The Student] has opinions and interests but does not know how to find possible training or jobs that match [the Student's] interest. This can be addressed by school staff."

    g. Compensatory Skills: "[The Student] communicates verbally. [The Student] handwrote the answers to [their] assignments. [The Student] does best when a line is provided. Sometimes it helps to highlight the space [the Student] is to write in. … [The Student] is a visual and auditory learner as evidenced by observations in the classroom. [The Student's] area of need in this area would be to determine which assignments would be better to listen or which would be better to read."

    h. Sensory Determination: "[The Student] uses [their] glasses for near work."

    i. A health plan was provided to teachers with whom the Student worked.

xiii. The Parent was given a plan option to consider for the Student to attend the School full time to earn credits.

21. A PWN dated December 12, 202[4] indicated a change in placement that resulted in the movement of more than 25% of the Student's school day from a less restrictive environment to a more restrictive environment. The Student will have an increase of 100 minutes of direct support 5 days a week in the special education resource classroom.

22. On December 5, 2024, the Principal emailed the Parent, "If [the Student] will only be attending [the School] in the afternoon 2nd semester, we do not have any drawing classes available. … we only have drawing available in the morning. … In terms of a diploma from [the School], there is not a Special Education diploma; everyone gets the same diploma and has the same expectation of earning 25 credits."

23. On January 20, 2025, the Special Education Resource Teacher emailed the Assistant Director of Special Education and the Principal to schedule a meeting to inform the Parent of "the materials being used and how they meet the cognitive and visual needs of the Student."

24. Meeting notes dated February 3, 2025 indicated the Parent stated again that they did not agree with the exceptionality of MD for the Student. The Parent stated that they would not fight it but wanted it noted that they did not agree with it. The Parent stated that they felt the Student would benefit from more support.

25. On February 11, 2025, the Parent emailed the Principal to request an IEP meeting to go over Parent questions, access to curriculum, reading programs, and inclusion. The Assistant Director of Special Education responded with the following timeline of events:

    a. April 16, 2024, Initial eligibility meeting: A Notice of IEP Meeting was sent to the Parent. There was a discussion regarding options for vocational education opportunities and alternative graduation plans due to the lack of credits the Student had earned. The Team agreed to reassess the credits for a "clear path for transition-based services." The Parent wanted the Student to attend the School and the Private School. Meeting notes indicated the SLP wanted to re-administer the CELF but had to wait until after June. The team created an IEP. The Special Education Resource Teacher would like Touch Point Math added to the goal.

    b. April 18, 2024, Continuation of eligibility meeting: The Team reviewed exceptionality and reviewed Certificates of Eligibility. The Team felt MD was the best fit, and the Student met all criteria. The team agreed the Student would attend the School from 9:45 a.m. - 3:00 p.m. daily. The Student will attend the Private School prior to attending the School.

    c. May 22, 2024: The team agreed to discuss exceptionality after assessments for Occupational Therapy (OT), Physical Therapy (PT), and Speech- Language (SL), which would be completed in the fall.Meeting notes indicated the Parent would like to keep services at both the School and the Private School.

    d. August 12, 2024: The team discussed exceptionality. The Parent and the Private School team asked to postpone the conversation. Meeting notes indicated the Student's classes would be pass/fail with modifications. The Parent agreed with the proposed schedule. The Student attended the School from 10:45 a.m. -3:00 p.m. as agreed by the team.

    e. September 6, 2024: The Parent requested that exceptionality be discussed. The Parent and the Private School team disagreed with the exceptionality. The Parent had previously signed the consent for the MD exceptionality. The Parent felt that OHI was the best exceptionality. Meeting notes indicated the team reviewed the amendment proposed during the last meeting. Diploma options were discussed. The Principal shared that the Private School was a non-accredited school registered with the State, "they can actually issue [The Student] a diploma with 21 credits. So the State can." The Parent gave permission for a consent to evaluate for VI, SLP, OT, and PT. A Prior Written Notice was signed.

The Special Education Resource Teacher indicated that the team needed to revisit the agreement to the amendment.

November 22, 2024: The Parent requested an additional meeting to discuss the exceptionality. Evaluation data was reviewed, and the Student "performed exceptionally well." A recommended accommodation for the team to consider was "[t]ransitions to and from class prior to the halls being full." The Vision Specialist stated the Student meets the eligibility of legally blind per the Vision Physician. The team agreed that Arial font size 14 seemed best for the Student. The Parent discussed having a touch screen vs. a laptop. The Vision Specialist suggested adding a goal to the IEP about the Student's ability to discuss the issues with their vision. The Vision Specialist recommended direct services and consultative services, "20 minutes 1 time every other week direct; 20 minutes 1 time every other week consultative."

Orientation and Mobility Services were not recommended at that time. Tint options and wraparound sunglasses were suggested to assist the Student's vision.

The Special Education Resource Teacher stated that the Student met the definition of legally blind. The Occupational Therapist indicated no need for OT services based on the Student's accommodations.

The evaluation was completed, and direct VI services were added.

A PWN dated November 22, 2024 indicated a change in services. "It is proposed that [the Student] receive vision support:

- "20 minutes once every other week on consult[ation]."
- "20 minutes once every other week direct services within the resource room."
- "Speech/Language services will remain the same."

f. December 12, 2024: The Student's exceptionality was discussed, and the Parent conditionally agreed to it, "but that [the Parent] doesn't agree." The Parent was informed that they could write a dissent that would be included in the notes. There was no dissent on file as of the meeting date. The IEP was reviewed. Accommodations and modifications were discussed to assist the visual pieces. Transition services were discussed. The Parent wanted to add a statement to the exceptionality. A PWN indicated a substantial change in placement. "Spring 2025 Semester. [The Student] will have an increase of 100 minutes of direct support 5 days a week, every week in the special education resource classroom." Progress reports were to be sent to the Parent on December 20, 2024.

g. February 3, 2025: The Parent stated that they wanted included in the meeting notes that "they do not agree with the exceptionality, but will not fight it." Meeting notes indicated [the School Psychologist] explained to the Parent that it just wasn't the IQ testing that went into the exceptionality, but it was also a full comprehensive review of all data. The Parent agreed but said they would need to review the data.

   The School Psychologist indicated that the testing done by the School Psychologist/Autism Specialist in the past was invalid because the correct test was not given to the Student. The Student had aged out. The Student was also tested within a year of the School Psychologist's testing with the same test. The team met to review services and IEP. The team discussed curriculum options.

h. February 11, 2025: The Parent emailed to request an IEP meeting to "discuss the finalization of the label," among other topics. The Parent requested an IEP meeting to discuss access to FAPE.

26. According to the Assistant Director of Special Education, on February 11, 2025, the Student had access to FAPE. The Student attended the School since the Student's placement and was receiving special education services. "As a [P]arent, you have chosen to have a dual education experience with [the Student] attending [the Private School] setting, previous to attending [the School] and the first 2-3 hours of each school day. This has been a topic discussed at multiple meetings, as it was unclear when we first met, the path you were seeking - a diploma or a certificate of completion."

27. In an email exchange between the Parent and the Special Education Resource Teacher, dated January 16, 2025, the Parent requested an IEP meeting to discuss the Student and plans for the semester. The Special Education Resource Teacher responded on January 17, 2025 asking the Parent to note questions and concerns via email or phone. On January 22, 2025, the Special Education Resource Teacher emailed the Parent to set up an IEP meeting to review and explain how the Parent could access the curriculum.

28. In an email exchange between the SLP and the Special Education Resource Teacher, dated February 4, 2025, the SLP stated, "Talk Path seems to be more of a home program … In an educational setting, I have found that the most beneficial approach is integrating skills into real-life, meaningful opportunities. If the team determines that [the Student] requires additional assistive technology to access the curriculum, I recommend reaching out to our Assistive Technology Specialist. [The Assistive Technology Specialist] can observe [the Student] in [their] educational environment and provide informed recommendations based on [the Student's] specific needs."

   The Parent requested "to speak directly with the ATS person at [the District] and get [their] feedback and ask [them] some other questions that relate directly to [the Student] and challenges [the Student] faces as [they] try to access the curriculum."

29. On February 21, 2025, the Parent emailed the Assistant Director of Special Education requesting to utilize the Readability app and Ello that could be used on iOS devices, which would provide speech recognition at school since they were used at home.
30. According to a Private School Video of the Student working with the Private School SLP, the Student could read orally using glasses. The Private School SLP pointed and tapped at each word while the Student read orally. The Student made five decoding errors with the SLP correcting. The SLP asked comprehension questions with the Student reading the answer.
31. According to a video recorded on April 3, 2025, the Student could read orally using a computer screen without glasses and without decoding errors.
32. According to the Vision Teacher (TSVI) based on their evaluation and records review, the Student does qualify for Visual Impairment. (Vision Teacher) Regarding accommodations and modifications the TSVI shared that they look at what the Student is doing in the classroom, making sure that the print size and materials are appropriate for the Student. The TSVI asked for a larger screened Chromebook with Ariel Font size 14. The TSVI indicted the Student was not aware that they had a visual impairment. The TSVI and the Student conducted conversations about the visual impairment and "I'm trying to get [the Student] to be able to label it like with the acronym CVI, which [the Student] is able to do and now we're working on cortical visual impairment." The TSVI shared they did not know about Transition Services for the Student.
33. The Assistant Director of Special Education indicated that the team met in May to discuss a possible full-time placement at the School and a variety of options for scheduling. The team met again in August 2024 and the Parent wanted to continue having the Student part time at the Private School and part time at the School. The Assistant Director of Special Education shared that the Private School was a private agency, non-accredited school that served students with speech language and "possibly some ABA therapy." The Student had been receiving services there since around fourth, or fifth grade. The District considered the Student enrolled in a private school, not receiving home-school services.

    The Assistant Director of Special Education indicated that vision services were never brought up as a concern in the original evaluation. The original eligibility of MD was chosen because none of the other disabilities fit as "stand-alone exceptionalities." The team looked over learning disability criteria and the Student didn't meet that eligibility based on assessments. The team chose MD. Later in the summer the Parent brought the concern regarding vision. The Student does not have a communication goal.
34. The SLP stated that they re-evaluated the Student in the fall of 2024. When asked to describe how the scores of the CELF influenced the decision that the Student did not need direct services, the SLP replied, "I also did an observation … to see if the accommodations, modifications, and supports that we had in place and implemented were meeting the needs that I found on the testing. And it did. So I felt it was a pretty good indicator that if we support the weaknesses that we found in those testings, that [the Student] can be successful in [their] setting." The SLP provided consultative services. The SLP did not recall if autism was considered on the eligibility.

35. The Special Education Resource Teacher indicated the Student used Google Classroom and Cami, which assisted the Student being able to enlarge print. It was a read aloud program, as well as speech to text. The program highlights and the Student could draw as specified by the Student's IEP modifications. The Special Education Resource Teacher indicated that the Student attended an Art class where the Special Education Resource Teacher checked in and the Student attended a computer class with 100% one-on-one paraprofessional support. The Student received English instruction in the Special Education classroom. The Parent declined career education classes for the Student.

    When asked how the team addressed career education, the Special Education Resource Teacher stated, "We tried to implement for the Student to attend our vocational program at our other high school, learning some skills in the kitchen and also some financial assistance. … The Parent refused to allow the Student to attend that program."

    The Special Education Resource Teacher indicated the Student's service time was reduced by 200 minutes because there was a change in the Student's schedule and "at that point in time, [the Student] was receiving services from me for math and an additional resource time. So that time was reduced because of the request from the Parent wanting [the Student] to be in the general education classroom."

36. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Parent indicated they did not talk to the Assistive Technology Specialist from the District but the Parent had suggested several programs that could be helpful to the Student at school. The Parent stated, "I've been saying in every meeting multiple times, I didn't think that's the correct label. … They didn't acknowledge the psychologist report that was done August 1, 2023. They just used the one that they did in February of 2024 by their own psychologist. … The other two professional psychologists who have interviewed my [Student] and have pointed out [their] strengths and they've really ignored those."

    The Parent didn't think the identified disability was the appropriate one for the Student. The Parent shared that a psychologist tested the Student seven months prior to the Student's public school enrollment and their testing indicated the Student had a learning disability. The Parent shared the report with the District but the District did not consider it because the School Psychologist gave the same test within a year of the School District assessment.

    The Parent shared that the Student had CVI that was found in October of 2024. Because of the diagnosis the Parent had safety concerns for the Student. The Parent stated that the Student takes a PE class on their own, with no support, and some bullying were reasons for their safety concerns.

The Parent shared that when they went into Google Classroom and reviewed the Special Education Resource Teacher's notes that stated what the Student completed, "It looks to me like nothing of real significance at all. I can't go in there and see what [the Student] is really working on." The Parent shared that they have not received IEP progress reports.

37. A Witness Statement from the Private School SLP indicated they did not agree with the Multiple Handicap label, and felt that the Student qualified as a Student with the exceptionality of a Learning Disability. The Private School SLP went on to state that the Student had two other evaluations from outside assessors that recommended the Student have a Specific Learning Disability. The District team indicated that they did not know the Student that well and the team decided to wait until the fall to revisit the label since there was only four weeks of school. The Private School SLP indicated that the Parent signed the Multiple Handicap eligibility because they wanted to attend the School. The Private School SLP stated that the IEP team refused to look at the materials and methods that were used with the Student at the Private School and felt the Private School staff's input was "completely rejected."
38. According to a Witness Statement from the Private School Clinic Instructor, they did not agree with the Multiple Handicap label and felt that a Specific Learning Disability label was more appropriate. The Private School Clinic Instructor stated, "When [the Private School SLP] and I tried to discuss the mislabel, we were told that we were not allowed to have any input." The Private School Clinic Instructor indicated that they felt the Parent signed in agreement to the Multiple Disability eligibility so the School could get to know the Student and would be revisited. The Private School Clinic Instructor felt the Student should be in the general education classroom with a para professional full time. They felt that having the Resource Teacher be the inclusion teacher was problematic.

Positions of the Parties, Applicable Regulations, and Conclusions

Issue One

Whether USD #385 conducted evaluations of the Student and made eligibility determinations in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA. K.A.R. 91-40-8, K.A.R. 91-40-9, K.A.R. 91-40-10(a)(1); 34 CFR §§ 300.8, 300.303-306.

According to K.A.R. 91-40–8 and K.A.R. 91.40-9, as part of an initial evaluation, if appropriate, and as a part of any re-evaluation, each agency shall ensure that members of an appropriate IEP team for the child and other qualified professionals, as appropriate, comply with the requirement that the evaluation team shall review existing evaluation data on the child, including evaluations and information provided by the Parent of the child, current classroom - based assessments, local and state assessments and observations by teachers and related service providers. Based on that review and input from the child's Parent, the evaluation team shall identify what additional data, if any, is needed to determine whether the child has a particular category of exceptionality or, in the case of a reevaluation of a child, whether the child continues to have such an exceptionality. In addition the evaluation team needs to consider what the present levels of academic achievement and educational and related developmental needs of the child are, whether the child needs special education and related services, or in the case of a reevaluation of a child, whether the child continues to need special education and related services. In the case of a reevaluation of the child, any additions or modifications to the special education and related services currently being provided to the child are needed to enable the child to meet the measurable annual goals set out in the IEP of the child and to participate, as appropriate, in the general education curriculum. If the team determines that additional data is required to make any of the determinations, after giving proper written notice to the Parent and obtaining Parental consent, shall administer those tests and evaluations that are appropriate to produce the needed data.

The Parent alleged the IEP team canceled the Parent's input in the determination of the Student's exceptionality determination. The team refused to consider other exceptionalities. The team stated that they did not know the Student, so they could not consider other exceptionalities. The team refused to consider test results from two other psychologists.

The District received a referral for special education comprehensive testing for the Student on February 21, 2024. At that time, the Student was attending a Private School full time. The team conducted a comprehensive evaluation of the Student and considered the exceptionalities of Learning Disability (Parent request), Other Health Impairment (Parent request), Intellectual Disability (exceptionality from previous evaluation), and Multiple Disabilities. Test results indicated Multiple Disabilities was the identified exceptionality because of co-existing impairments that caused severe educational needs that could not be accommodated in special education solely for one of the impairments.

According to the Parent and a non-District evaluation report, seven months before the Student enrolled in the School, a psychologist assessed the Student and identified a learning disability. The District shared that the intelligence test given by the non-District Psychologist was invalid because the Student aged out of the test prior to the test being given. The District's School Psychologist administered the same test within a year of the District's assessment.

During a meeting on September 6, 2024, the Parent requested a discussion regarding the Student's exceptionality. However, both the Parent and the private school team expressed disagreement with the current exceptionality at the meeting. It was noted that the Parent had previously provided consent for the MD exceptionality. In contrast to this, the Parent voiced the opinion that OHI would be the most appropriate exceptionality for the Student. The Private School SLP and the Private School Clinic Instructor indicated that they felt the Student qualified for a Specific Learning Disability because outside assessors recommended that qualification. The District School Psychologist indicated that the intelligence test administered by the outside assessor could not be considered because the Student "aged-out" at the time the test was administered.

The original eligibility of MD was chosen because none of the other disabilities fit as "stand-alone exceptionalities." The team looked over learning disability criteria and the Student didn't meet that eligibility based on assessments the District had completed. The team chose MD. Later in the summer the Parent brought the concern regarding vision. The Assistant Director of Special Education indicated that vision services were never brought up as a concern during the original evaluation time period.

During the meeting on February 3, 2025, the Parent reiterated their disagreement with the Student's MD exceptionality. Although the Parent stated that they would not contest it, the Parent wanted their disagreement documented by the District. The Parent chose not to complete the District form in writing to dissent to the MD exceptionality category but wanted it noted that they did not agree. On December 24, 2024, the Student was found eligible for Vision Impairment after reviewing visual tests, classroom observations and ophthalmologist reports.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations it is not substantiated that the District failed to conduct evaluations and made appropriate eligibility determinations for the Student.

Issue Two

Whether USD #385, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, offered the Student the least restrictive environment (LRE) for their unique needs. K.S.A. 72-3420(a), K.A.R. 91-40-21, 34 C.F.R. § 300.116.

According to K.S.A. 72-3420(a) and K.A.R. 91-40-21 each agency shall give notice to the Parent of any meeting to discuss the educational placement of the child. The notice shall meet the requirements of K.A.R. 91-40-17. Each school district shall be required, to the maximum extent appropriate, to educate children with disabilities with children who are not disabled, and to provide special classes, separate schooling or for the removal of children with disabilities from the regular education environment only when the nature of severity of the disability of the child is such that education in regular classes with supplementary aids and services cannot be achieved satisfactorily. Each agency shall ensure that the children with disabilities served by the agency are educated in the LRE.

The Parent alleged that because of the Multiple Handicap exceptionality label, the Student could not be educated in the LRE. Regular Classroom opportunities are scheduled with the Special Education Resource Teacher, and other resource students are in attendance. The Student was required to leave the general education classroom early to return to the Resource Room.

The District team conducted a comprehensive evaluation that determined the need for services. The Student was a 17-year-old student with zero credits. Vocational opportunities were discussed, and the Parent was not interested in enrolling the Student in the program. The Student attended the School for the last five weeks. The Parent wanted the Student to continue to attend the Private School for a portion of the day. The Student arrived at the School at 9:45 a.m. daily. The team discussed a proposed schedule with full-time attendance at the School, which included Math and English in the resource room and two electives (Drawing and PE, which did not require additional support). The Parent wanted the part-time attendance schedule with the Student enrolled in World Geography with support and Photojournalism. The team agreed to make the amendment.

The Parent alleged that during the IEP team meeting on August 23, 2024, when the IEP was amended and the Student's instructional minutes and goals were adjusted, the Parent stated that this action occurred because the School "didn't want to let [the Student] have an inclusive role in the general curriculum earlier in the summer," reportedly stating, "They just said this is what [the Student] can do." The Parent indicated their agreement with the amendment was because the Parent wanted the Student to attend Public School part-time and Private School part-time.

The District indicated the Student's multiple disabilities exceptionality was determined to have impacted their ability to access the general education curriculum across all academic areas when the Student was expected to perform age-appropriate skills such as reading, math, and writing, in comparison to their peers. “Due to [the Student’s] cognitive ability being significant[ly] lower than peers of the same age, [the Student] will have all core classes and life skills classes in the special education resource classroom.” The District amended the IEP and changed the Student’s class schedule to attend PE class with other students, as well as World Geography, and Photojournalism.

The Student attended the School four hours a day and the Private School for three hours a day. Accommodations, modifications, and supplementary supports were listed with the location specified as "General and special education classroom." These supports had a start date of September 6, 2024, and an end date of April 15, 2025. The Special Education Resource Teacher indicated that the Student attended an Art class where the Special Education Resource Teacher checked in and the Student attended a computer class with 100% one-on-one paraprofessional support. The Student received English instruction in the Special Education classroom.

Ultimately, the team agreed to make the amendment reflecting the Parent's preference. The Parent voiced concerns about safety for the Student during PE.

The signed PWNs, IEP, IEP amendments, and email exchanges between both the Parent and District demonstrate that the Parent consented to the placement but wanted more support in the general education classrooms for the Student. The District did provide extra support in the Photojournalism class and Special Education Resource support for World Geography.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations it is not substantiated that the District failed to offer the Student the LRE for their unique needs.

Issue Three

Whether USD #385, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, offered an appropriate IEP that met the needs of the Student. K.S.A. 72-3429, K.A.R. 91-40-18; 34 CFR § 300.320.

According to K.S.A. 72-3429 and K.A.R. 91-40-18 when conducting the initial IEP meeting for a child who was previously served under Part C of the federal law, an agency, at the request of the Parent, shall send an invitation to attend the IEP meeting to the services coordinator or other representation to assist with the smooth transition of services. Each agency ensures that a continuum of alternative educational placements are available to meet the needs of children with disabilities. These alternative educational placements shall include instruction in regular classes, special classes, and special schools. Further, each agency shall make provisions for supplementary services, including resource room and itinerant services, to be provided in conjunction with regular classroom placement.

In determining the educational placement of a child with a disability, each agency shall ensure that the placement decision meets the following requirements: the decision shall be made by a group of persons, including the parent and other persons who are knowledgeable about the child, the meaning of the evaluation data, and the placement options. In addition, the decision shall be made in conformity with the requirement of providing services in the LRE.

The Parent alleged that at the first IEP meeting in April of 2024 that the Student was found eligible for Multiple Handicapped. The Parent did not agree with that exceptionality. The Parent appealed the exceptionality and suggested consideration of Traumatic Brain Injury, Learning Disability or Other Health Impaired but was rejected by the team. The Parent alleged that the team did not recognize the discrepancy of low verbal skills versus higher social, receptive, and behavioral skills.

The District team made every effort to create an IEP that was appropriate and met the needs of the Student. The team made several amendments to the IEP, which indicated the team's willingness to work with the Parent. The team discussed each semester that the Student needed to attend the School full time to complete credits needed for a diploma by 21. The Parent continued to have the Student attend the School part-time.

During a meeting on September 6, 2024, the Parent requested a discussion regarding the student's exceptionality, expressing disagreement with the Multiple Disabilities (MD) exceptionality for which they had previously signed consent. The Parent believed Other Health Impairment (OHI) was the more appropriate classification. Meeting notes showed the team reviewed an amendment proposed in the prior meeting, and diploma options were discussed. The Principal explained that the Private School, while non-accredited but registered with the State, could issue a diploma with 21 credits, as could the State. The Parent granted permission for evaluations in Visual Impairment (VI), Speech-Language Pathology (SLP), Occupational Therapy (OT), and Physical Therapy (PT), and a Prior Written Notice was signed.

The District indicated that the Student was found eligible for special education on April 16, 2024. The Student's IEP outlined goals in reading, written language, math, adaptive behavior, and transition services. Related services consisted of speech service consultation, and special education resource room support. The IEP detailed accommodations and modifications for both special education and general education settings. Special education services were specified as 50 minutes daily, five days a week, to be delivered within the regular education classroom with special education support. The IEP indicated that the Student would not participate with non-identified peers in all general education classes.

A PWN dated August 19, 2024, indicated a change in services and a substantial change in placement. The SLP explained that the CELF scores were considered alongside an observation to determine if existing accommodations, modifications, and supports effectively addressed the Student's identified needs. The observation confirmed that these measures were successful. Consequently, the SLP concluded that with continued support for the identified weaknesses, the Student could succeed in their current setting, justifying the decision to provide consultative rather than direct services. While the initial IEP stated the Student did not require assistive technology, this changed when vision services were added on December 12, 2024, at which point the Student began receiving assistive technology support.

A Prior Written Notice (PWN) dated December 12, 2024, documented a change in placement that increased the Student's time in a more restrictive environment by more than 25% of their school day. Specifically, the Student would receive an additional 100 minutes of direct support five days a week within the special education resource classroom. In response to an inquiry about career education, the Special Education Resource Teacher explained that the team attempted to enroll the Student in the District’s vocational program at another high school. This program aimed to teach kitchen skills and provide financial assistance knowledge. However, the Parent declined to allow the Student to participate in that program.

Based on their evaluation and a review of records, the Vision Teacher (TSVI) determined that the Student qualified for Visual Impairment services. Regarding classroom accommodations, the TSVI explained their focus on ensuring appropriate print size and materials for the Student. They requested a larger screened Chromebook with Arial font size 14. The TSVI noted that the Student was unaware of their visual impairment and reported having ongoing conversations with the Student to help them understand and label it, specifically mentioning their work on the term CVI. The TSVI also indicated a lack of awareness regarding transition services for the Student. According to a video recorded on April 3, 2025, the Student could read orally using a computer screen without glasses and without decoding errors.

The signed PWNs, the IEP, and the IEP amendments between both the Parent and District demonstrated that the Parent consented to the actions and agreed with the actions even though they verbally disagreed with the exceptionality identification.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations it is not substantiated that the District failed to offer an appropriate IEP that met the needs of the Student.

Issue Four

Whether USD#385, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, provided the Parent with IEP progress reports. K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(3), K.S.A. 72-3429(3); 34 C.F.R. § 300.323.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(3) and K.S.A. 72-3429(3) an IEP is in effect for exceptional children at the beginning of each school year. A description of how the child's progress toward meeting the annual goals will be measured and when periodic reports on the progress the child is making toward meeting the annual goals will be provided, such as through the use of quarterly or other periodic reports issued concurrently with general education report cards.

The Parent alleged that the School refused reasonable transparency. Because of this, the Parent was not allowed reasonable information about the Student's daily academic or social experiences.

The District sent progress reports on December 12, 2024, and May 18, 2024, which was as frequently as progress was reported for non-disabled peers at the School.

The Parent believed the District's Google Classroom was difficult to follow and the information didn't really inform the Parent of what the Student was doing, and how they performed because the notes were not clear to the Parent. During interviews, the Parent stated that they did not receive any IEP progress reports.

The District indicated the IEP outlined that the Parent would receive written progress reports at the same intervals and in the same manner as general education reports. These progress reports were intended to detail the Student's progress toward achieving their IEP goals and objectives/benchmarks.

The Parent observed that the recorded completed work appeared to lack significant substance. Meeting notes from February 3, 2024, reflected that the Special Education Resource Teacher reviewed Google Classroom and told the Parent they had access "to Google Doc, with all of the Student's classroom information."

According to meeting notes from a meeting held on May 22, 2024, which the Parent attended, the Special Education Resource Teacher discussed the Student's progress and performance, reviewing each section of the Progress Report with the Parent.

On September 11, 2024, the Special Education Resource Teacher emailed the Parent a video for the Student and the Parent to watch, which explained how to get homework documents in Google Classroom with log-in information. Progress reports indicated being sent to the Parent on December 20, 2024.

The meeting notes in which the progress reports were discussed between both the Parent and District demonstrate that the Parent did receive progress reports and progress report reviews in person.

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #259
ON APRIL 15, 2025

DATE OF REPORT: MAY 14, 2025

This report is in response to a complaint filed with our office by ------ on behalf of one of her students, ------ as well as four other students in her classroom. For purposes of this investigation, the five students identified by the complainant will be identified as "Student One," "Student Two," "Student Three," "Student Four," and "Student Five" for the remainder of this report. ------ will be referred to as "Student Four." ------ will be referred to as "the complainant." USD #259 will be referred to as "the district."

Investigation of Complaint

Any individual or organization may file a formal complaint if they believe that - within the 12-month period prior to the receipt of that complaint by KSDE - a school district did not comply with federal or state laws or regulations relating to special education.

If the complaint involves a specific child, the formal complaint must include

- the name and address of the child;
- the name of the school the child is attending;
- a description of the problem involving the child; and
- a proposed resolution to the problem, if a possible resolution is known and available to the complainant (K.A.R. 91-40-51).

The complainant is a teacher in a district middle school. She has been assigned to teach a "Mixed Abilities" class. The complainant provided the name of one of her students to the Education Program Consultant at the Special Education and Title Services (SETS) division of the Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE). That student is identified in the appointment letter sent by the consultant to the parties and to the complaint investigator on April 14, 2025 as "Student 1 of 5."

The complainant did not, however, include the name of any of the other four students referenced in her formal complaint nor did she provide any contact information regarding the parents of the students.

Additionally, the facts provide by the complainant provide few specifics to direct the investigator toward any individual student. While Student One is identified by name in this complaint, the facts listed under Student One in the written complaint show that the family of Student One "speaks Vietnamese" which the family of the student named as Student One does not.

While she included copies of prior written notice documents in support of her complaint, all student-specific information had been redacted. A screen shot of a text included in the submitted complaint contained the first name of one student but no other identifying information.

The investigation of a formal complaint requires the investigator to contact the complainant in order to gather additional information and verify specific allegations of noncompliance that may be relevant to the investigation. To that end, the investigator spoke by telephone with the complainant on April 17, 2025.

During the telephone conversation, the investigator requested that the complainant provide the names of the five students referenced in her complaint so that each specific case could be investigated. The investigator also requested that the complainant share contact information regarding the parents of each of these students so that the investigator could reach out to those individuals regarding issues specified in the complaint.

The investigator received an email from the complainant on the evening of April 17, 2025, stating that > "After receiving legal counsel on this matter today, I have been advised not to share parents names to you (sic). I can provide contact information to parents if you would like. This would allow you to speak with you if they feel safe to. I believe there was enough information provided including the attachments sent to the district. If your office decides that an investigation is necessary, I can only imagine that USD 259 will fully cooperate...I do not have any further vested interest in this district, therefore, I have no other reason to communicate with you."

The investigator responded to the complainant via email telling the complainant she could share the investigator's contact information, but the investigator received no follow up call from any of the parents. The mother of one of the students (the student identified in the complaint as "Student 1 of 5") did, however, send an email to the Director of Special Education and Title Services (SETS) providing her contact information.

On April 17, 18, and 23, and on May 1 and 8, 2025, the complaint investigator spoke via telephone with the Mediation/Due Process Supervisor for the district. With input from the investigator and the Mediation/Due Process Supervisor, the district was able to determine the identity of Student One, Student Two, and Student Four. Student Three and Student Five could not be positively identified.

In completing this investigation, the complaint investigator reviewed the following materials:

- Documents related to Student One:
    - Consideration for Waiver Review dated March 28, 2025

  - Waiver of Reevaluation Agreement Form dated March 28, 2025 (English language version)
  - Waiver of Reevaluation Agreement Form dated April 1, 2025 (Vietnamese language version)
  - Special Ed Student Contact log regarding this student covering the period of August 22, 2017 through April 25, 2025
  - Child Study Team (CST) agendas for February 4, 11, and 25 and March 4, 11, and 25, and April 1 and 8, 2025
- Documents related to Student Two:
  - Consideration for Waiver Review dated January 29, 2025
  - Waiver of Reevaluation Agreement Form dated March 28, 2025

  - Email exchange dated April 23, 2025 between the school social worker and the student's mother
  - CST agendas for January 28, February 4, 1, and 25, March 4, 11, and 25, and April 8, 2025

  - Email dated April 15, 2025 from the mother of Student Four to the Director of SETC
  - Email exchange dated April 22, 2025 between the school social worker and the mother of Student Four

Issues

In her complaint, the complainant identified two issues related to the reevaluation of students:

Issue One

The district has failed to obtain the informed written consent of parents when waiving the three-year reevaluation.

Position of the Complainant

The complainant asserts that the district sent the parents of four of her students documents requesting their written consent to waive the triennial reevaluation of their child. Affixed to these documents were "sticky notes" and/or arrows pointing to the signature line indicating where the parent was to sign the form.

According to the complainant, the parents of two of these students had previously told her that they wanted their child to be reevaluated. The complainant reports that she was told by these parents that no one from the district had discussed the waiver of reevaluation form with them before the form was sent home. The complainant states that these parents (one whose primary language is Vietnamese) told her that they did not understand the form and were not aware that by signing the form they were waiving the student's right to a reevaluation.

The complainant further contends that district documents related to the waiver of reevaluation showed that she had participated in a meeting regarding the waiver and agreed with the recommendation. It is the position of the complainant that she neither participated in that meeting nor agreed with the recommendation to waive the reevaluation.

Applicable Statutes and Regulations

An evaluation that is conducted for a child currently identified with an exceptionality, is considered a reevaluation. The reevaluation process is required in order to determine

(1) If the child continues to be a child with an exceptionality;
(2) whether the child continues to need special education and related services;
(3) the educational needs of the child;
(4) the present levels of academic achievement and functional performance (related developmental needs) of the child; and
(5) whether any additions or modifications to the special education and related services are needed to enable the child to meet the measurable annual goals set out in the IEP of the child and to participate, as appropriate, in the general education curriculum.

Schools must ensure that a reevaluation of each child with an exceptionality is conducted if conditions warrant a reevaluation, or if the child's parents or teacher requests a reevaluation, but at least once every three years. Reevaluations may not occur more than once a year, unless the parent and the school agree otherwise. New requirements also allow the parent and the school to agree that a three year reevaluation is not necessary (K.S.A. 72-3428(h)(2)(B); 34 C.F.R. 300.303(b)(2)). The district and the parents must agree that a child's triennial reevaluation can be waived.

Documentation of this agreement must be maintained (Federal Register, August 14, 2006, p. 46640, 46641).

At K.S.A. 72-3428, Kansas statutes state:

> "(k) If the IEP team and other qualified professionals, as appropriate, determine that no additional data are needed to determine whether the child continues to be an exceptional child and the child's educational needs, the agency:
> (1) Shall notify the child's parents of:
> (A) That determination and the reasons for it; and
> (B) the rights of such parents to request an assessment to determine whether the child continues to be an exceptional child and the child's educational needs; and
> (2) shall not be required to conduct such an assessment unless requested by the child's parents."

The agreement to waive reevaluation extends the date for the next three-year evaluation to three years from the date when the last signature is placed on the agreement, whether that is the district's signature or the parent's signature.

Position of the District

The district asserts that it has complied with special education statutes and regulations regarding special education reevaluations, has established a process to be followed by staff when determining whether or not to waive a triennial reevaluation, has provided written guidance that instructs teams on how to correctly follow that process, and has provided targeted training to staff regarding the process. It is the position of the district that, in the case of Student One, Student Two, and Student Four, the district's established process was correctly implemented, and the informed written consent of the parents of each of these students was obtained before the three-year reevaluation of these students was waived.

Investigative Findings

> As of August 2024, the district had established a "Triennial Reevaluation Waiver Process" to "be used...at the middle and high school levels...[That process may] be considered for student with the sole exceptionality of Gifted in grades K-12." The process is summarized in a district-developed document which states that
> "A reevaluation is to occur at least once every three years, unless the parent and the school agree that a reevaluation is unnecessary (K.S.A. 72-3428(h)(2)(B); 34 C.F.R. 300.303(b)(2)). Prior to conducting a reevaluation the parent and the school shall determine whether a reevaluation is needed. They must consider the child's educational needs, which may include whether the child is participating in the general education curriculum and being assessed appropriately. The parent and the school will discuss the advantages and disadvantages of conducting a reevaluation, as well as what effect a reevaluation might have on the child's educational program (Federal Register, August 14, 2006, p. 46640, 46641). Documentation of this agreement must be maintained."

In August 2024, the district also developed a document entitled "Evaluation and IEP Procedures Chart" which was intended to provide guidance to staff regarding the organization and maintenance of special education student records. The chart specified what forms were to be utilized in various situations (Initial Evaluation, Reevaluation, Annual IEP, IEP Amendment, etc.) The chart includes a section entitled "Waiver of Reevaluation." In that section, staff was directed to use two forms:

- Consideration for Waiver Review Form, and
- Reevaluation Waiver Agreement Form.

Signature pages from these forms are to be "submitted to IEP Support." Teams are directed to "begin [the] review process a minimum of 2 months before the reevaluation due date" and to "make sure both Parent and School Representative sign the Waiver Agreement Form" utilizing electronic signatures when possible.

Beginning in August 2024, the district put in place the following written guidance to assist school staff in making decisions regarding reevaluation.

"1. Team completes the Consideration for Waiver Review Form in [the student information system] as part of the process for determining whether a triennial reevaluation is needed.

- If the team determines a reevaluation is needed, see the Reevaluation Process document.
- If the team determines a waiver of reevaluation is appropriate, proceed with step 2.

Consideration for Waiver Review Form Notes:

- The Consideration for Waiver Review form should be started well in advance (recommended 6 to 8 weeks) of the student's triennial reevaluation due date.
- The Consideration for Waiver Review form does not require signatures or entry of all IEP team members. You only need to include the names of CST members completing the form.
- Formal teacher reports are not required as part of the Consideration for Waiver Review Process. CST should work with the student's IEP manager to discuss information relevant to whether a reevaluation is needed and if teacher reports are needed to make the determination.
- Teams should finalize the Consideration for Waiver Review form when completed. There is no need to wait for parent signature on the Waiver of Reevaluation Agreement Form.

2. Team collaborates with parent. Parent input is a critical part of determining whether a triennial reevaluation is needed. CST should discuss information on the Consideration for Waiver Review Form with parents well in advance of the reevaluation due date.
    - If parent agrees to waive reevaluation, proceed to step 3.
    - If parent does not respond or does not agree to waive reevaluation, prepare PWNE for reevaluation and send to parent with copy of Parent Rights.

    Parent Collaboration Notes:

    - Parent signature is not required on the Consideration for Waiver Review Form, only on the Reevaluation Waiver Agreement Form.
    - Teams do not need to give a copy of the Consideration for Waiver Review Form to parents but can do so if parents request or if it would help the parent meaningfully participate in determining whether a triennial reevaluation is needed.
3. Obtain parent signature (paper or electronic) on Waiver of Reevaluation Agreement Form in [the student information system] via one of the following:*
    - Regularly scheduled IEP meeting if before reevaluation due date
    - Conference between parent and designated support staff
    - Phone call between parent and designated support staff with Waiver of Reevaluation Agreement Form mailed or emailed and returned.

    You must have parent signature and school representative signature on the Waiver of Reevaluation Agreement Form. If unable to obtain parent signature, pursue Reevaluation Process.*
4. Finalize Waiver of Reevaluation Agreement Form and send signature page (if paper signature) to IEP Support.
5. Waiver is complete."

According to district practices, the Consideration for Waiver Review does not require a formal convening of a student's IEP team. Instead, it is the Child Study Team that reviews information regarding the need for reevaluation. Formal teacher reports are also not required as a part of the waiver review process. However, when completing the Consideration for Waiver Review document, the CST is expected to work with the student's IEP manager to discuss information relevant to the decision-making process.

At the building where the students identified in this complaint are assigned, the CST is made up of one or more counselors, one or more social workers, a school psychologist, the building principal, the assistant principal and other individuals such as a school nurse and classroom and/or special education teachers who may have relevant information. The CST reviews the possibility of a reevaluation waiver for any given student over a period of several weeks beginning well before the reevaluation due date.

The review process forms allow for the listing of individuals who contributed information regarding the need for a reevaluation but does not require the signatures of those individuals. The date on the waiver review form reflects the CST meeting date when the team has determined from the school's perspective that a reevaluation is not needed. That date does not reflect all the meetings wherein the possible waiver was discussed.

After the CST has completed the Consideration for Waiver Review form and the team has made the determination that it would be appropriate to consider waiving a reevaluation, the CST collaborates with parents to gain their input in making the final decision regarding whether or not a reevaluation is needed. A designated CST member reviews the information on the Consideration for Waiver Review Form with parents in advance of the reevaluation due date. If the parent also feels that it would be appropriate to waive the reevaluation, the parents are sent a Waiver of Reevaluation Agreement Form for their signature. A CST representative must also sign off on the form to show agreement regarding the waiver of the reevaluation.

The district-created Waiver of Reevaluation Agreement Form contains all of the components of the Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) sample form (see the "Re-evaluation Not Needed Agreement Form 8-05" at https://www.ksde.gov/Default.aspx?tabid=544) including the statement that “both parties understand that a reevaluation may be requested by either party at any time in the future”.

Special education statutes and regulations do not specify a timeline for when the consideration for waiving a reevaluation process must begin. The district has determined that two of its guidance documents are inconsistent in statements directing teams when to begin the consideration process ("2 months" vs. "6-8 weeks" prior to the due date of the reevaluation) and is taking steps to amend its guidance for consistency. (The timing of the implementation of the waiver process is not at issue in this complaint.)

Training with School Psychologists (a school psychologist serves on this school's CST) on waiver procedures was conducted in January of 2024. Additional staff training was provided in both October 2024 and January 2025.

Student One:

This student was determined eligible for special education services under the category of Autism. He currently receives support for math, ELA, social studies, and science through the Mixed Abilities program and also receives speech and language services. Student One requires adult assistance to move to and from classes and to walk from his last hour class to the bus. The IEP team met for the student's annual IEP review on March 11, 2025.

This student's reevaluation due date was May 12, 2025. CST agendas produced by the district show that, on February 4, 2025, the CST began discussing a potential waiver for the student's reevaluation. Additional discussions of the need for reevaluation were documented on February 11 and 25, and March 4, 11, and 25, 2025. In completing the Waiver Review form, the CST received input from the school psychologist, speech/language pathologist, and social worker. The CST consulted with the student's IEP Manager (who is not the complainant) in the Consideration for Waiver Review process, completing the form on Mach 28, 2025, at which time the Principal accepted and signed the Waiver of Reevaluation Agreement form.

The school social worker was assigned responsibility for contacting the student's mother to solicit her input regarding the waiver of reevaluation. Although the student information system for the school shows that the parent designated English as the primary language of the home, the district states that the school has routinely used a Vietnamese translator service when communicating with the parent and has provided written notice to the parents in both English and Vietnamese.

On April 1, 2025, the social worker called the student's mother via the district's Multilingual Educational Services (MES) translator. In the course of the call, the parent agreed to the waiver process in lieu of conducting a reevaluation and asked for paperwork to be sent home with student. On April 1, 2025, the social worker sent home copies of the waiver of reevaluation agreement via the student's backpack. One version of the form was in English, the other in Vietnamese. On April 2, 2025, a second Vietnamese version of the form was sent home to the student's mother who signed the form that same date and returned it to the school.

The CST kept the student on their meeting agendas for April 4 and 11, 2025 to discuss and update the team about receiving the parent signature on waiver and finalizing the process.

In an effort to ensure that the student's mother had clearly understood that she had agreed to waive the triennial reevaluation of the student, the school social worker placed a call to the parent via the MES translator the morning of April 25, 2025. The school psychologist sat in on the call. The parent told staff that she wished to proceed with the waiver of the reevaluation as previously agreed and had no questions or concerns at that time. The school social worker again told the student's mother that parents have the right to request a reevaluation at any time.

Student Two:

This student was determined eligible for special education services under the category of Intellectual Disability. He receives core instruction in the Mixed Abilities program and attends elective classes with paraprofessional support. He also is supported by a paraprofessional for lunch/recess. The IEP team met for the student's annual review on March 11, 2025.

This student's reevaluation due date was May 9, 2025. His last previous reevaluation was completed on May 10, 2022. According to CST meeting agendas provided by the district, the CST began discussing a potential waiver for the student's reevaluation on January 28, 2025 (although the Consideration for Waiver Review form is dated January 29, 2025). Additional discussions of the need for reevaluation were documented on February 4, 11, and 25 and March 4, 11, and 25, 2025. In completing the Waiver Review form, the CST received input from the school psychologist. The IEP Manager (the complainant) was - according to the waiver review form - consulted on January 30, 2025. No specific input from the complainant is, however, documented on the waiver review form. Based upon the documentation provided by the district, it is unclear when the waiver review was finalized. The Principal accepted and signed the Waiver of Reevaluation Agreement form on March 28, 2025.

A district-produced contact log for this student shows that the school social worker placed a call to the student's mother on April 1, 2025 regarding the waiver of reevaluation. When the parent did not answer, the log notes that the social worker left a voicemail message regarding "paperwork." The social worker placed a second call to the student's mother on April 2, 2025 at 10:10 AM to discuss the potential waiver of reevaluation. The school psychologist also sat in on the call. According to the contact log, the student's mother stated that she had "not yet listened to the voicemail" left the previous day by the social worker. The parent reported that "she just got off the phone with the IEP manager [the complainant] who "relayed incorrect information about the waiver process." According to the contact log, the parent had "no concerns for [the student] at [that] time, other than [his] transition to high school. "Mother states that she is happy with the placement and services he is currently receiving...and states that she would like him to remain in that program through high school."

The contact log shows that the "mother confirmed that she [was] willing to proceed with waiver, [and] asked social worker to resend waiver paperwork home with [the student]." The parent electronically signed the waiver of reevaluation agreement form on April 2, 2025.

An April 23, 2025 entry in the contact log shows that the school social worker placed another call to the student's mother on that date to discuss the waiver and confirm that the parent was comfortable with the district's recommendation that a formal reevaluation be waived. The parent stated that she had been "confused by additional information given/sent by the IEP manager [complainant]." The social worker reviewed the waiver process, the reasons for a reevaluation, and the CST's reasons for recommending that a reevaluation be waived. According to the log, the social worker told the parent that she could request a reevaluation at any time.

The parent agreed to send an email to the district confirming her agreement with the waiver. That confirmation email from the parent was sent at 10:40 PM on April 23, 2025.

Student Three:

The complainant did not identify this student by name. While her written complaint included the statement that "all documents are available upon your request and clearance," the complainant did not provide any documents to support her contention that the parents of Student Three had repeatedly asked for a reevaluation of the student.

No evidence was provided by the complainant to show that this student had not had a reevaluation report "put into the IEP since the child was 6" or to support the complainant's contention that the student had "not been reevaluated since age 6; she [emphasis added] is now 14." In an effort to determine the identity of this student, the district reviewed the files of all female students on the complainant's caseload who were scheduled to be reevaluated during the 2024-25 school year. All had been reevaluated after the age of 6.

Because this student could not be identified, circumstances surrounding Student Three were not investigated further.

Student Four:

This student was determined eligible for special education services under the category of Autism. He receives core instruction in the Mixed Abilities program and attends elective classes with special education support. He also is supported for lunch/recess. The IEP team met for the student's annual review on March 21, 2025.

This student's reevaluation due date was March 7, 2025. His last previous reevaluation was completed on March 8, 2022. CST agendas provided by the district show that on January 14, 2025, the CST began discussing a potential waiver for the student's reevaluation. Additional discussions of the need for reevaluation were documented on January 28, and February 4 and 11, 2025. In completing the Waiver Review form, the CST reviewed data from the student's previous IEP and considered the student's current grades. Input was provided by the school psychologist who had previously consulted with the IEP Case Manager. The Consideration for Waiver Review process was completed on February 11, 2025, at which time the Principal accepted and signed the Waiver of Reevaluation Agreement form.

According to the contact log provided by the district, the school social worker contacted the student's mother on February 11, 2025 regarding the reevaluation waiver. The contact log shows that the parent "agrees to waiver process and states she can sign electronically.

On February 22, 2025, the mother of Student Four electronically consented to waive the triennial reevaluation of Student Four. The Waiver of Reevaluation Agreement Form signed by the parent states

> "Special Education law requires a re-evaluation of a child with an exceptionality at least once every three years, unless the school and the parents(s), or other legally authorized education decision maker, of the student agree that a re-evaluation is unnecessary. The above named parent(s)/legal decision maker and the school representative, representing the consensus of the Child
> Study Team, agree that a re-evaluation for the above named student is not necessary at this time, and therefore no reevaluation will be conducted. Both parties understand that a reevaluation may be requested by either party at any time in the future. The above named student will continue to be considered a student with an exceptionality and will continue to receive the special education services identified in the Individual Education Plan."

On February 25, 2025, the CST again reviewed Student Four, confirming parental agreement with the reevaluation waiver and finalizing the waiver process.

The mother of Student Four sent an email to the Director of SETS on April 15, 2025 stating

> "It has come to my attention that I signed the waiver form for re-evaluation. It was NOT my intention to sign the waiver form as I want my child...to continue with the re-evaluation every 3 years."

The school social worker placed a call to the student's mother on April 22, 2025 to discuss the reevaluation waiver. When the parent did not answer, the social worker requested a return phone call. The parent subsequently called the social worker. In their conversation, the contact log states that the parent

> "...reports that she was confused by additional paperwork that was sent home by IEP manager at the same time and states that she was under the impression that in signing the waiver form, she was exiting her child from the Mixed Abilities program [but] after social worker explained the purpose and the reevaluation process and clarified the waiver process, parent reports that she better understands the waiver process and agrees with the team's original recommendation that a reevaluation is not necessary at this time."

On April 22, 2025, the school social worker sent an email to the mother of Student Four summarizing their telephone conversation regarding the waiver process. The social worker wrote

> "If you wish to proceed with the team's proposal to waive the reevaluation at this time, please copy and paste this statement in your reply email:
> "I [parent's name] agree to waive the triennial reevaluation as originally proposed on February 11, 2025.'

The parent responded to the social worker via email on April 22, 2025 including the above statement.

On April 23, 2025, the district sent the parent a prior written notice form summarizing the history of the district's request for parental consent to waive the reevaluation of Student Four as follows:

> "On 4/22/25 social worker spoke to mother...Social worker informed mother that this worker was calling to touch base about the concern submitted to clarify any confusion and answer any questions about the waiver process. Mother reports that she was confused by additional paperwork that was sent home by IEP manager at the same time and states that she was under the impression that in signing the waiver form, she was exiting her child from the Mixed Abilities program. Social worker explained that schools are required to conduct a reevaluation every three years unless the parent and the school agree that a reevaluation is unnecessary. [Student Four] was due for a reevaluation this school year. After reviewing his > special education file, previous evaluations, and current performance, the team felt a reevaluation to determine if [Student Four] continues to need special education and related services under the exceptionality of Autism was not warranted at this time and [Student Four] continues to qualify under this exceptionality and placement within the Mixed Abilities program. The team believes that any changes needed in the IEP can be made by the IEP team without standardized assessments or the reevaluation process. Mother and social worker spoke via phone previously on 2/11/25 about this waiver process. Social worker relayed to mother that as a parent, she can request a reevaluation at any time. After social worker explained the purpose of the reevaluation process and clarified the waiver process, parent reports that she better understands the waiver process and agrees with the team's original proposal that a reevaluation is not necessary for [Student Four] at this time. Mother stated that she wants her son to remain in the Mixed Abilities program and to continue to receive the services he is currently receiving in his IEP. Mother also responded via email on 4/22/25 that she agreed to waive the triennial reevaluation as originally proposed on 2/11/25 and agreed for [Student Four] to remain in the Mixed Abilities program and continue to receive services provided in his current IEP."

The investigator spoke by telephone with the mother of Student Four on May 6, 2025. During that conversation, the parent confirmed that she was in agreement with the decision to waive the reevaluation of the student, stating

> "I got myself confused and thought that [the student] would be excluded from the Mixed Abilities class if he didn't have a reevaluation."

According to the parent, the student has been very successful in the program, and she didn't want him to be removed from it. The parent stated that she sent the email to KSDE because the complainant had encouraged her to do so. The parent reported that she didn't remember getting a call regarding the waiver from the school in February 2025 but noted that the call from the school in April had helped her fully understand the waiver process. The parent acknowledged that she was told that her son did not have to be reevaluated at this time in order to continue in the Mixed Abilities program but that she could request a reevaluation in the future should she want to do so.

Summary and Conclusions

The complainant alleged that the district failed to obtain the consent of the parents of four students before waiving those student's triennial reevaluation. Only three of those four students could be positively identified through information provided by the complainant.

The investigation of those three students determined that the district has established and published procedures regarding the process to be implemented when determining whether or not to waive a student's triennial reevaluation. Staff training has been provided on this process which requires teams to obtain the written agreement of the parent before the reevaluation can be waived.

The parents of all three of these students agreed to the waiver of their children's triennial reevaluation prior to the date this complaint was received by KSDE, and these same parents subsequently confirmed that earlier decision after the complaint was made.

The district has provided documented evidence to show that the written agreement of the parents of the three students who were able to be definitively identified in this complaint was obtained before waiving the triennial evaluations of those students. A violation of special education statutes and regulations is not substantiated on this issue.

Additional Comments

The complainant contends that she did not participate in any meeting regarding the waiver of reevaluation for Student Four, did not provide information to anyone regarding such a waiver, and was unaware that such a waiver was being considered.

The Consideration for Waiver Review form for Student Four provided by the district identifies the "IEP Manager" for the student as the complainant and notes that "Communication with IEP Manager" occurred on February 11, 2025, but the complainant asserts that she was not working on that date and could not have communicated with the CST on that date.

The waiver review form documents input from a "Special Education Teacher" other than the complainant, but the complainant is not cited as the source of any of the information that the team reviewed.

Special education statutes and regulations require only that the parent and the school reach an understanding that a triennial reevaluation is not needed before such reevaluation is waived (Federal Register, August 14, 2006, p. 46640, 46641). The law does not specify how such an understanding is to be reached, who will participate in the process of reaching such an understanding, or how such an agreement should be documented. Therefore, because special education statutes and regulations do not include any requirements that would address this aspect of the complaint, the participation of the complainant in the determination of waiver of reevaluation for this student was not investigated.

No corrective actions are required because a violation of special education statutes was neither investigated nor substantiated. However, in the interest of accuracy, the district is encouraged to review the Consideration for Waiver Review form for this student and to make any changes needed to ensure that the participation of this complainant is correctly represented.

Issue Two

The findings of the reevaluation of Student Five were not available to the team when that student's IEP meeting was held.

Position of the Complainant

The complainant asserts that while the annual IEP review meeting for Student Five was held several weeks following the completion of that student's reevaluation, the results of the reevaluation were not made available to the team when revising the student's IEP.

Applicable Statutes and Regulations

The information gathered as a result of the reevaluation provides valuable information about child progress and needs. In addition to using the information to determine whether the child continues to be eligible for special education and related services, this information should be used to review the IEP, revising it if necessary, in accordance with K.S.A. 72-3428(h)-(l), as well as 34 C.F.R. 300.301 through 300.311: K.S.A. 72-3428.

As noted above under Issue One, the results of a student's reevaluation are to be used by the IEP team to determine

(1) the educational needs of the child;
(2) the present levels of academic achievement and functional performance (related developmental needs) of the child; and
(3) whether any additions or modifications to the special education and related services are needed to enable the child to meet the measurable annual goals set out in the IEP of the child and to participate, as appropriate, in the general education curriculum.

Investigative Findings, Summary and Conclusions

The complainant did not provide any specific identifying information regarding Student Five aside from stating that the "IEP reevaluation Meeting was postponed due to scheduling." The district made a good faith effort to try to identify this student and provided the investigator with a response to allegations regarding a student who was deemed "probable" to be Student Five. However, the district also confirmed that the IEP meetings for other students have been postponed due to scheduling. Because the identity of this student could not be definitively determined, this allegation was not investigated.

Corrective Action

Information gathered in the course of this investigation has not substantiated noncompliance with special education statutes and regulations on issues presented in this complaint. Therefore, no corrective actions are required.

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST
UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #322
ON APRIL 3, 2025

DATE OF REPORT: MAY 16, 2025

This report is in response to a complaint filed with the Kansas State Department of Education on behalf of -------- by --------, the student's parent. In the remainder of the report -------- will be referred to as the "student" and -------- will be referred to as the "parent" or "complainant".

It is noted that the student is 18 years of age and her own legal guardian. However, the student has signed and provided a written copy of a Durable Power of Attorney for Health Care and Education Related Decisions dated March 5, 2025 which states that the student's parents will "serve as the decision maker in educational related matters related to my education, including, but not limited to enrollment in secondary or post-secondary school or schools, administration of the IEPs".

The complaint is against USD #322 (Onaga Public Schools) who contracts with the Holten Special Education Cooperative (HSEC) to provide special education services to students enrolled in the school district. In the remainder of the report, both of these responsible public agencies may also be referred to as "the district", "the local education agency (LEA)", or "the school". Individually, they will be referred to by "USD #322" and "HSEC" respectively.

The IDEA allows for the investigation of allegations of noncompliance for a period up to 12-months from the date on which a complaint was filed. The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) allows for a 60-day timeline to investigate a complaint and issue a final report from the date on which a complaint was filed. A complaint is considered filed on the date on which it was received by KSDE. In this case, the KSDE initially received the complaint on March 27, 2025 and additional complaints on April 3, 2025. These complaints were combined into one investigation and the 60-day timeline extended to begin on April 3, 2025. It is noted that the investigation timeline was extended due to the number of allegations and the amount of documentation provided by both parties that needed to be reviewed and carefully considered during the investigation.

Based upon the written complaint, six issues were identified to be investigated. It is noted that several issues included in the parent's complaint fell outside of the 12-month investigation window and will not be addressed in this investigation.

These issues are related to the issuance of the IEP Goal Progress Report in February 2025 and the in-state IEP transfer process which occurred in August 2023. The parent should review the IDEA Procedural Safeguards for other options for resolving complaint and may want to consider having these allegations of noncompliance addressed through a due process complaint which allows for the investigation of allegations of noncompliance for a period up to two years from the date on which a complaint is filed.

56. USD #322 School Calendar for the 2024-25 school year

Background Information

The student is an 18-year-old female who is currently enrolled in the 12th grade at the Onaga Senior High School in USD #322 for the 2024-25 school year. The student was initially evaluated on March 24, 2022 and determined eligible for special education and related services under the exceptionality category of Emotional Disturbance in Olathe Public Schools. It is noted that the required three-year reevaluation, which was due on March 23, 2025, is the subject of Issue Five in this evaluation report.

Records and interviews found the student began receiving special education services during the 9th grade following the eligibility determination. She transferred into USD #322 from at the beginning of her 11th grade year during the 2023-24 school year from Topeka Public Schools while in the custody of the Kansas Department of Children and Family Services (DCF). She currently lives with a foster family and has a case manager at KVC through a contract with DCF. The student became her own educational decisionmaker when she turned 18 on March 6, 2025 but signed a Power of Attorney (POA) document naming her parents as her educational decision makers. It is reported that the student has met graduation requirements and is scheduled to graduate with a high school diploma on May 17, 2025.

Issues Investigated

Issue One

USD #322, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to implement the student's IEP, specifically the accommodation to allow the use of stress pass during the past 12 months.

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.323(c)(2) require school districts to ensure that as soon as possible following the development of the IEP, special education and related services are made available to the child in accordance with the child's IEP.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The following findings of fact are based upon interviews and record review.

The parent and district both identify the last agreed upon IEP for the student as being developed on January 17, 2024. It is noted that the district reconvened the IEP team on December 19, 2024 to review this IEP and revise, as needed. The district provided the parent with prior written notice PWN of the proposed changes to move from direct special education services to indirect special education services at that time but the parent refused to provide consent for this substantial change of placement. Since that time, the parent and the district have made multiple and ongoing efforts to reach an agreement on an IEP that provides a free appropriate public education for the student. However, since no agreement has been reached, the January 17, 2024 IEP is in effect at this time and will be the IEP to be used for determining whether or not the district is in compliance with the requirements of the IDEA.

The January 17, 2024 IEP requires the following accommodation related to the stress pass:

> When the student is experiencing an upsetting event and is unable to self-regulate, she can ask for a stress pass to see her contact person or school counselor.

The parent reports the student has not been allowed to use a stress pass to remove herself from upsetting events on a regular basis during the past 12 months. She specifically refers to an email dated March 28, 2024 written by the Special Education Teacher which states, "She had a rough time waiting to hear about her probation. Once she was cleared, I told her she had to go and stay in all her classes. She was not happy about that". The parent believes the stress caused by the student not being allowed to use a stress pass was a contributing factor to the student being hospitalized approximately two weeks later.

The Special Education Teacher reported that the student was actually using her stress pass accommodation to practice using the calming strategies in the special education setting to address her upset in regard to the probation prior to learning the outcome of the situation. These strategies were successful, and the student was able to return to class although she would have preferred to remain in the special education classroom for the remainder of the day. The daily expectation is that the student will remain in her general education classes but that she always has the option of using a stress pass if an upsetting event that may occur during the class period. This was the same expectation for the student on March 27, 2024.

The LEA provided a Log dated between January 22, 2024 and April 8, 2025 which shows the student used the stress pass on March 26, 2024 to remain in the special education room for approximately three hours that day. In addition, the Log shows the student used a stress pass to visit with the High School Counselor on April 19, 2024 and that she was hospitalized on April 22, 2024.

The High School Counselor stated that the student is often anxious and needs to have "down time" to reset or talk through her concerns. She indicated that the student can visit with her or the Special Education Teacher at these times. She also noted that the student typically attends the one hour and thirty-minute general education classes for the lectures (approximately one hour) and can use her pass to come to the special education classroom or counselor's office to work on homework and de-stress.

The former High School Principal also reported that the student was allowed to use the stress pass whenever she needed a break during the school day for sensory and self-regulation breaks. She noted, "These visits were often a necessary part of her coping strategy and self-care routine, and they allowed her to remain engaged in her academic and social environments".

Conclusion

In this case, the IEP in effect does contain an accommodation which allows the student to use a stress pass to visit with the High School Counselor and the Special Education Teacher when she is experiencing an upsetting event. Documentation and interviews show that the student has used this accommodation during the past 12-months and there is no evidence directly connecting the implementation of this accommodation to the student's hospitalization in April 2024.

Based on the foregoing, the district is found to be IN compliance for implementing the student's IEP, specifically the accommodation to use a stress pass when she is experiencing an upsetting event.

Issue Two

USD #322, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to implement the student's IEP, specifically by not providing the specialized instruction required to address the IEP goal related to personal safety during the past 12 months.

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.323(c)(2) require school districts to ensure that as soon as possible following the development of the IEP, special education and related services are made available to the child in accordance with the child's IEP.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The findings of Issue One are incorporated herein by reference.

The January 17, 2024 IEP has one goal which states, "By the end of this IEP, the student will be able to use strategies (deep breathing, coloring, fidgets) to return to her regularly scheduled class during the day within 15 minutes".

The January 17, 2024 IEP requires 10 minutes per day, five days per week of resource/ pull-out special education services to address this goal. The IEP includes the following explanation regarding these services, "The student needs to have a daily check-in for social / emotional support".

The district reported that the student checks in every morning with the Special Education Teacher. The student provides two numbers - one for self-harm (e.g: cutting) and one for suicidal ideation. The rating is on a scale from 1-10, with 1 being she feels safe and nothing is going to happen. The special education teacher provides explicit instruction and review of the self-regulation strategies and also involves asking the student to confirm who her contacts and resources are if she needs help throughout the day so that she can use her strategies to remain in the general education setting as much as possible to access the general education curriculum.

The district provided a Log dated between January 22, 2024 and April 8, 2025 which shows the student checked-in with the Special Education Teacher.

The parent believes the January 17, 2024 IEP should also have included 45 minutes per day of direct special education instruction in addition to the check-in minutes. She reported these minutes were discontinued when the student transferred into the district in August 2023. As noted previously, this allegation falls outside the one-year investigation window allowed in the state complaint process and the parent is referred to the IDEA Procedural Safeguards section on dispute resolution addressing due process which allows for a two-year investigation window.

Conclusion

In this case, the IEP in effect does contain a goal related to personal safety and specialized instruction for 10 minutes per day, five days per week to address that goal. Documentation and interviews show that the student checks in each morning with the Special Education Teacher and rates how she is feeling that day in regard to self-harm and suicidal ideation. The special education teacher provides explicit instruction and review of the student's self-regulation strategies and also asks the student to confirm who her contacts and resources are if she needs help throughout the day so that she can use her strategies to remain in the general education setting as much as possible to access the general education curriculum. The district provided a Log showing data supporting the check-in process being implemented with the student.

Based on the foregoing, the district is found to be IN compliance for implementing the student's IEP, specifically the special education services to address the personal safety goal.

Issue Three

USD #322, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to develop measurable goals and benchmarks to address the areas of need identified in the present level of performance in the student's IEP during the past 12 months.

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.320(a)(2) require school districts to develop an IEP for each eligible student with a disability which includes a statement of measureable annual goals, including academic and functional goals, designed to meet the student's needs that result from the student's disability in order to enable the student to be involved in and make progress in the general education curriculum as well as meet each of the student's other educational needs that result from the student's disability.

According to Chapter 4, Section 2.b of the Kansas Special Education Process Manual, measurable goals must contain a timeframe, a description of the conditions, a description of the behavior, and the criterion established for meeting the goal.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.320(b)(1)(i) require school districts to review each student's IEP periodically, but not less than annually, to determine whether the annual goals for the child are being achieved; and revise the IEP, as appropriate, to address: 1) any lack of expected progress toward the annual goals and in the general education curriculum; 2) the results of any reevaluation conducted; 3) information about the child provided to, or by, the parents; 4) the child's anticipated needs; or 5) other matters.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.503(a) require school districts to provide parents with prior written notice a reasonable time before they propose or refuse to initiate or change the identification, evaluation, educational placement, or the provision of FAPE to the student.

In addition, Kansas state regulations at K.A.R. 91-40-27(a)(3) require school districts to obtain parent consent before making a material change in services or a substantial change in placement. "Material change in services" is defined at K.A.R. 91-40-1(mm) as an increase or decrease of 25% or more of the frequency or duration of a special education service, related service, or supplementary aid or service specified in the child's IEP. "Substantial change in placement" is defined at K.A.R. 91-40-1(sss) as the movement of an exceptional child for more than 25% of the child's school day from a less restrictive environment to a more restrictive environment or from a more restrictive environment to a less restrictive environment.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The findings of Issue One and Two are incorporated herein by reference. This allegation will be investigated looking at both the last agreed upon IEP as well as the process for reviewing and revising that IEP, as necessary, to identify appropriate goals and services to provide a free appropriate public education (FAPE) to the student.

Documentation shows the parent attended the IEP team meeting on January 17, 2024 when the IEP currently in effect was developed. The parent was provided with PWN following that meeting and signed consent for the IEP on that same date. The investigator will not second-guess the IEP team's decisions regarding the chosen goals and services to address the student's needs described in the present level as the parent had the opportunity to participate in the process and gave consent for the special education services required by this IEP.

The January 17, 2024 IEP has one goal. This goal includes a timeframe for achieving the goal "By the end of this IEP". The IEP reflects the anticipated start date of the IEP was January 17, 2024 and the anticipated end date was January 16, 2025. The conditions of the goal are for the student to use strategies such as deep breathing, coloring, or fidgets when she is upset during the school day. The observable behavior in the goal is for the student to return to her regularly scheduled class during the day. The criterion for the goal is for the student to return to her regularly scheduled class within 15 minutes from the time she began using the self-regulation strategies.

The district scheduled and held an IEP team meeting on December 19, 2024 to review and revise the IEP, as appropriate, and the parent attended and participated in that IEP team meeting. Also participating in the meeting were the following school staff: Staci Claycamp, General Education Teacher; Brian Sixbury, High School Principal; the Special Education Teacher; the Pre-ETS Specialist; the Pre-ETS Manager; and the Supervisor of Permanency at KVC Kansas.

Following the IEP team meeting, the district provided the parent with a PWN proposing changes in services from direct to indirect; however, the parent refused to provide consent at that time because she disagreed with proposed changes as well as the transition plan for the student. The parent believed that a follow-up IEP meeting would be scheduled to further discuss her concerns regarding the necessary services and transition plan which would provide FAPE to the student.

The district reported a snow day occurred on the original rescheduled meeting date at the beginning of January. However, the parent indicated that the district did not contact her about the meeting and she requested another IEP team meeting via an email on January 9, 2025.

On January 16, 2025, the Special Education Teacher emailed the parent regarding the need to obtain signatures on the December 19, 2024 IEP in order to remain in compliance with the IDEA requirement to review the IEP at least annually. The parent attached a "fixed" copy of the IEP moving the proposed services back to direct special education services rather than the proposed indirect services because of the parent's concerns with this proposed change of placement. The Special Education Teacher also provide the parent with another copy of the PWN, still dated December 19, 2024, which now stated, "This action [changing from direct services to indirect services] is proposed but rejected because parents want to continue with the current IEP and meet again at the beginning of the 2nd semester after Pre-Ets (sic) and Voc-Rehab services are in place".

In the January 16, 2025 email, the Special Education Teacher stated, "As I look at the calendar and the IEP, I notice that we will be out of compliance if we cannot meet on or before the 17th. In order to stay in compliance, I need your signature on the IEP I fixed after our last meeting using that date. I can create a new IEP when we meet again".

On January 17, 2025, the parent refused explaining that, if she signed the documents, it would indicate that she was in agreement, and she was definitely not in agreement with the IEP as written. The parent provided the Special Education Teacher with a list of her specific concerns regarding the draft version of the December 19, 2024 IEP on that same date. The parent stated in her email written to the Special Education Teacher,

> In terms of your request for me to sign the IEP, I understand the need for compliance deadlines, however, the proposed plan does not include the required transition plan or services. Signing the IEP is an indication that we agree with it, which does not reflect our position. As we plan to meet to address the concerns, we are choosing to exercise the "stay put" provision of IDEA to maintain the student's previous IEP until a new one is developed by the team that includes a transition plan and services.

On January 22, 2025, the district sent a Notification of Meeting scheduling an IEP team meeting for January 28, 2025. On January 27, 2025, the Special Education Teacher sent the parent an updated draft version of the IEP which incorporated the parent's list of concerns and on January 28, 2025, the following persons met to review this updated draft version of the IEP: the parent; the student; the Special Education Teacher; the High School Principal; the School Psychologist; the Director of Special Education; the Pre-ETS Specialist; the Pre-ETS Manager; the Supervisor of Permanency at KVC Kansas; and Addie Larson, Secondary School Psychologist. It is noted that a general education teacher did not participate and that additional school staff joined the IEP team at this IEP team meeting.

Following the January 28, 2025 IEP team meeting, the district provided the parent with an updated version of an IEP, still dated December 19, 2024, which included the list of parent concerns and now included statements of how each concern would be addressed by the district. The district provided the parent with the same PWN, still dated December 19, 2024, keeping the direct special education services rather than changing the services to indirect.

The parent refused to sign the PWN and, subsequently, the Special Education Teacher and the parent exchanged multiple emails during February and March 2025 trying to come to an agreement on what needed to be changed in the draft version of the IEP and PWN. On March 6, 2025, the Special Education Teacher provided the parent with another copy of an IEP and a PWN, both still dated December 19, 2024.

The student turned age 18 on March 6, 2025 and, on March 12, 2025, she requested the IEP team be reconvened to review and revise the IEP, as needed. On March 14, 2025, the parent sent an email to the Special Education Teacher again refusing to sign the PWN as written and sharing another list of concerns for the different draft versions of the IEP provided to the parent between January and March 2025 , all of which are dated December 19, 2024.

On March 31, 2025, the district provided a Notification of Meeting scheduling an IEP team meeting for April 10, 2025. The parent canceled this meeting on April 8, 2025 because she had filed a formal complaint with KSDE and wanted to wait for the completion of the investigation of her allegations. The Special Education Director encouraged the parent to attend this IEP team meeting to discuss another draft version of the IEP that addressed all of the concerns that had been shared with the district. A copy of this most recent draft version of the IEP and a PWN with a summary of the December, January, and April proposals, all still dated December 19, 2024, were emailed to the parent on April 10, 2025.

Conclusion

In this case, there sufficient evidence to support a finding that the current IEP dated January 17, 2024 does address the areas of need identified in the present level of performance as determined by the IEP team, which included the parent, and that the IEP does include a measurable goal which includes a timeframe, a description of the conditions, a description of the behavior, and the criterion for measuring achievement of the goal.

However, there is also sufficient evidence to support a finding that the district failed to review the IEP at least annually and to revise the IEP based on information provided by the parent at the IEP team meetings held on December 19, 2024 and January 28, 2025.

While the district made multiple and ongoing attempts to address the parent's concerns by creating the multiple versions of the IEPs and PWNs over a four-month period, the end result was very confusing as all the various versions continued to be dated December 19, 2024. It is also noted that these versions were developed by different IEP teams and included updates and referred to discussions that were not known or had not happened at the time of the original meeting date on December 19, 2024.

There are situations when it is appropriate to schedule a continuation of an IEP team meeting with the same IEP team members over a short period in order to allow for additional time to discuss all issues and allow the district to propose the final IEP and to provide the parent with appropriate PWN, if necessary. However, in this situation, the various IEPs were developed by different IEP teams and, after almost four months, the district is still proposing final IEPs and providing PWNs with the original IEP meeting date of December 19, 2024.

This situation is complicated by the parent's belief that "signing the IEP" means she agrees with the IEP and, that by refusing to sign the IEP, "stay put" provisions take effect. The IEP does not have to be signed because the IDEA only requires the IEP to include a listing of the IEP team members who attended the IEP team meeting, their positions, and their method of attendance. Instead, parent written consent is requested through PWN and is only required for initial evaluations, reevaluations with assessment, initial services, material changes in services, and substantial changes of placement. The IDEA only requires "stay put" when a parent has filed for a due process hearing and this concept is not triggered by the parent refusing to provide written consent for a proposed action described in a PWN.

Further complicating the situation, it appears that the district misunderstood the PWN requirement for notifying the parent of proposed changes to the IEP and when parental consent must be obtained. It appears the district originally proposed changing the special education services from a direct to an indirect delivery model at the December 19, 2024 IEP team meeting which would be considered a substantial change of placement and require parental consent. However, the parent was not in agreement with this proposal and would not agree to provide consent. The parent wanted the services to remain the same until the IEP team was able to meet again to continue the discussion regarding services and the transition plan.

On January 16, 2025, the district sent the parent an updated draft of the IEP changing the services back to the original direct services delivery model and provided the parent with a PWN explaining the district was rejecting their previously proposed change to indirect services because the parents wanted to "continue with the current IEP and meet again at the beginning of the 2nd semester after Pre-Ets (sic) and Voc-Rehab services are in place". These two documents appear to be an accurate reflection of what was ultimately decided at the December 19, 2024 IEP team meeting and both the draft IEP and the PWN were accurately dated December 19, 2024.

The Special Education Teacher requested the parent sign the updated IEP and PWN, and on January 17, 2025, the parent refused to sign and then provided the district with a list of all the things that needed to be changed in the draft IEP dated December 19, 2024. This started the ongoing cycle of draft versions of IEPs and PWN, all of which were dated December 19, 2024, which were responding to the multiple lists of concerns from the parent. However, in looking at the IEP and PWN provided to the parent on January 16, 2025, there was no need to obtain written parent consent as the district was proposing nothing that changed from the student's previous IEP.

The documents resulting from the subsequent January 28, 2025 IEP team meeting held with a different group of IEP team members would have then described the proposed changes resulting from the review and discussion of the parents' January 17, 2025 written concerns. In this way, each subsequent IEP team meeting and the resulting decisions could have been more accurately shared with all parties and avoided the confusion which was caused by the constant stream of updated IEPs and PWN, all of which were dated December 19, 2024.

Based on the foregoing, the district is found to be OUT of compliance with the requirements to review the IEP periodically, but at least annually, and to revise the IEP as appropriate to include information shared by the parent and to address the student's anticipated needs because the IEP has not been reviewed and revised, as needed, for more than 16 months. In addition, the district also failed to provide the parent with appropriate PWN for any proposed changes in the IEP because all PWNs are inaccurately dated December 19, 2024 and contain information which was not discussed or was unavailable as of December 19, 2024.

Issue Four

USD #322, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to develop and implement an IEP with appropriate transition services, specifically by failing to conduct appropriate transition assessments, failing to involve external agencies in transition planning with parent consent, and failing to create and appropriate course of study aligned with the student's post-secondary goals during the past 12 months.

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.320(a)(2) require that , beginning not later than the first IEP to be in effect when the student turns 16 and updated annually, school districts must develop IEPs that include 1) appropriate measurable post-secondary goals based on age appropriate transition assessments related to training, education, employment, and, where appropriate, independent living skills, and 2) transition services, including a course of study, needed to assist the student in reaching those goals.

However, Kansas statutes at K.S.A. 72-3429(c)(8)) require this transition planning to begin at the age 14. In addition, at age 16, these Kansas statutes require a statement of needed transition services for the student, including, when appropriate, a statement of the interagency responsibilities or any needed linkages.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.322(b)(ii) require that the school district notify the parent of any agency that will be invited to send a representative when the purpose of the IEP team meeting is to consider the post-secondary goals and transition services for the student.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The findings of Issues One, Two, and Three are incorporated herein by reference. This allegation will be investigated looking at both the last agreed upon IEP as well as the process for reviewing and revising that IEP, as necessary, to develop an appropriate post-secondary transition plan for the student.

The student was 16 years of age when the January 17, 2024 IEP was developed. This IEP documents that two transition assessments were administered to the student and the results considered in the development of the transition plan. Charting Your Life Course and Xello are both programs designed to allow students to assess and explore interests and strengths for potential vocational paths. Xello is used district-wide to develop each student's Individual Plan of Study (IPS) and the Charting Your Life Course is used by students in the special education program for obtaining data to assist IEP teams in developing post-secondary transition plans.

Summarized results of these two assessments noted the student enjoys drawing and prefers to work in a quiet environment. She wants to have a professional career, live on her own, and care for her own needs. She has a Creator/Artistic and Helper/Social personality style and her preferred Career Clusters fall in the Arts, Communications, Law, Public Safety, and Audio/Visual Technology. The student prefers to make her own decisions and identified that continuing to work on her mental health is important for her to be able to meet her life goals.

This IEP also includes post-secondary goals for the student. The goal in Education/Training is "After finishing high school, I will pursue education / training in the following areas: college in the area of counseling". The goal for Employment is "After completing high school, I will work in the following job/profession: Counselor in the area of Art Therapy". No goal was identified for Independent living skills because "The student has adequate skills in this area". The current IEP identifies the annual measurable goal addressing the social/emotional skills of self-regulation as being related to the student's post-secondary outcomes.

The anticipated course of study states the student will earn her high school diploma by earning credits based on Kansas graduation requirements and that the student is currently on course to graduate in May 2025. Art, music and band are shown as elective classes the student will take based on her post-secondary goals and preferences.

The IEP notes the student was initially referred to Vocational Rehabilitation at age 15 on March 25, 2022 by the Olathe Public Schools when she was initially determined eligible for special education services. The IEP team did not identify any agency collaborations as necessary for grades 9, 10, and 11. The IEP team determined the student did not require any additional transition services in instruction, employment, adult living and post school objectives, related services, community experience, functional vocational assessment or daily living beyond what was being provided through the general education curriculum.

As noted in Issue Three, noncompliance was identified for the district in regards to reviewing and revising the student's IEP at least annually. This delay has impacted the development of an appropriate post-secondary transition plan for the student for at least five months to date. However, interviews and documentation show the district was able to collaborate with the Pre-ETS program to provide some pre-employment transition services during the second semester of the student's 12th grade school year prior to the anticipated graduation date.

Notifications of Meetings provided to the parent and student dated November 26, 2024, January 13, 2025 and January 22, 2025 all contain the following statement, "If necessary, and with your consent, staff from other agencies that may be able to provide appropriate transition services/linkages will be invited to our meeting. The agencies they represent are shown below: Voc-Rehab, Pre-ETS". The documentation shows the parent signed these Notifications of Meetings.

In an email dated January 17, 2025 explaining why she refused to sign the proposed IEP resulting from the December 19, 2024 IEP team meeting, the parent stated, "During the last meeting the majority of time was focused on the lack of transition services up to this point and the unjust ramifications of it".

During the January 28, 2025 IEP team meeting, the IEP team included multiple representatives from the Pre-ETS program as well as the Supervisor of Permanency at KVC Kansas. Notes of this meeting written by the Director of Special Education stated, "The student described everything she is planning to do, and speaks very well on her own, has a plan, and doesn't seem to need additional support".

The student reported that she had decided to change her post-secondary goals and now wanted to "take a gap year" to get a job and find a place to live prior to studying for a career in the culinary field. The notes reflect discussions related to obtaining necessary personal documents including a social security card and birth certificate for obtaining a driver's license, applying for a job, getting a bank account, etc. Information about the plan for services being provided through the foster care program through KVC Kansas prior to the student "aging out of the system" was also shared. It was also noted that another referral for Vocational Rehabilitation was being made.

The district provided the parent with a draft IEP and PWN following this meeting which the parent refused to sign because she believed the transition plan was inadequate. As noted previously, this started the cycle of draft IEPs being created in response to lists of concerns provided by the parent followed by the parent refusing to provide consent for the proposed changes in the transition plan.

Conclusion

In this case, there is sufficient evidence to support a finding that the current IEP dated January 17, 2024 does include an appropriate transition plan as determined by the IEP team, which included the parent. It is noted that the investigator will not second guess the content of the decisions made by the IEP team.

There is also evidence that the district did invite external agencies to the student's IEP meetings held during the 2024-25 school year with parent consent. In addition, the student received transition assessments both in the general education and special education setting through the use of Xello and Charting Your Life Course.

However, as noted in Issue Three, noncompliance was identified for the district reviewing and revising the student's IEP at least annually. This delay has impacted the development of an appropriate post-secondary transition plan for the student and the district is found to be OUT of compliance with 34 C.F.R. 300.320(a)(2).

Issue Five

USD #322, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to follow the appropriate procedures to conduct the required three-year reevaluation of the student during the 2024-25 school year.

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.303(b)(2) require public agencies to conduct a reevaluation of the student at least once every three years unless the parent and the public agency agree that a reevaluation is unnecessary.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.305 require the IEP Team and other qualified professionals, as appropriate, to conduct a review of existing data with or without a meeting. Based on that review, the public agency must determine what additional data, if any, is required to 1) whether the student continues to have such a disability, and the educational needs of the child; 2) the present levels of academic achievement and related developmental needs of the child; 3) whether the student continues to need special education and related services; and 4) whether any additions or modifications to the special education and related services are needed to enable the student to meet the measurable annual goals set out in the IEP of the child and to participate, as appropriate, in the general education curriculum.

If the IEP Team and other qualified professionals, as appropriate, determine that no additional data are needed to determine whether the child continues to be a child with a disability, and to determine the child's educational needs, the public agency must notify the child's parents of that determination and the reasons for the determination; and the right of the parents to request an assessment to determine whether the child continues to be a child with a disability, and to determine the child's educational needs. The public agency is not required to conduct the assessment unless requested to do so by the child's parents.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

Interviews and documentation show the student was initially found eligible for special education and related services on March 24, 2022.

On December 10, 2024, the Special Education Teacher made the parent aware of the upcoming reevaluation and possible options. The email stated:

> Our school psychologist is asking me about dismissing the student from services because she is doing so well. She is turning 18 soon and graduating in May. I wanted to give you a heads-up for when he contacts you. My thoughts: She is doing very well in school. However, because she is aging out of the system and has and IEP, more services may be available for her. I am trying to research this to get you more information.

On December 13, 2024, the Special Education Teacher sent an email to the general education staff gathering current information about the student's school performance in preparation for the December 19, 2024 IEP team meeting. However, the triennial reevaluation of the student was not discussed at this IEP team meeting.

As noted previously, the December 19, 2024 IEP meeting was continued at the January 28, 2025 IEP team meeting. The School Psychologist informed the IEP team of the need to conduct the triennial review and asked if they wanted to wait until closer to the student's 18th birthday or proceed at this time. The IEP team did not have a preference but all agreed that the student continued to be eligible for special education services.

On March 12, 2025, the student notified the district that she had given POA to her parent in an email written to the Special Education Teacher. However, the district reported a copy of the POA was not received in USD #322 until March 14, 2025.

The School Psychologist and Special Education Teacher reported they met with the student on March 13, 2025 to discuss the need for a reevaluation and to gather student input. The student refused to sign any documentation at the meeting and stated that she had given power of attorney (POA) to her parent for making educational decisions.

On March 15, 2025, the School Psychologist summarized the situation in an email to school staff as follows:

> On 03/13/2025, I met with the student and Tracy [the Special Education Teacher] via phone to discuss the student's triennial revaluation due on 03/24/2025. I explained that she is now 18 years old and that she now has educational rights to make decisions for herself. I explained that since she wished to remain on her IEP, we could propose a reevaluation waiver since we did not need additional data to determine her eligibility for special education services and that she wished for her IEP to continue. If the student wanted additional data, I informed her we could send her consent for a reevaluation as well to address her concerns. I also informed her that since she is now her own legal educational decision-maker, we could have her sign a release of information to talk to her mother as the student expressed concerns that she wanted us to talk to her mother as well. I explained that to protect her confidentiality, that is why we proposed the release of information. Tracy [the Special Education Teacher] took notes during this meeting, had the student take a picture at the end, and share it with her mother as the student stated that she did not feel comfortable signing any documents without consulting with her mother first. Tracy and I stressed to the student that we did not want her to sign any documents that she did not feel comfortable signing and that we encouraged her to consult with her mother before she signed anything.
> On 03/14/2025, Tracy and I again attempted to meet with the student but we were not able to meet. I called the student's foster parent, to talk to the student in the evening as this was the phone number the student provided Tracy and me to contact her on as she does not > have her own phone. The foster parent did not allow me to talk to the student as she said that this was stressing the student and that we should contact the student's mother to discuss the next steps. I then proceeded to call the parent and had an approximately 20-minute phone conversation with her. I explained to the parent that I was calling in reference to the student's reevaluation that I initiated talking to her about during the student's IEP meeting on 01/28/2025 via Google Meet. The mother stated that I did not make any reference to the student's reevaluation at the time of the meeting. . The parent stated that she has a Power of Attorney in place to make all decisions for the student and that was sent to the school. I told her that I apologized as I did not know this was in place as we work under the assumption that students who turn 18 years old are their own legal educational decision-makers unless we have documentation otherwise and I was not aware of this documentation.

The parent expressed her concerns for not addressing the reevaluation until nine days prior to the due date and questioned if the district had deliberately waited until the student had reached the age of majority in order to take advantage of her "inexperience" in making such decisions. According to the parent:

> Staff improperly compelled the student to waive the reevaluation on March 13, 2025, even if a POA had not been in place, justification to waive a reevaluation must be based on a review of existing data AND collaboration with the IEP team. Students are also members of the IEP team – not just the school. Staff instructed the student to state that she still needed services when asking for her consent. That is not collaboration.

On March 24, 2025, the School Psychologist responded to the parent in an email explaining that he was unaware of the power of attorney paperwork and stating:

> Now that I am aware of the POA and have documentation, I am seeking consent from you to waive the 3-year reevaluation. There is no recommendation to dismiss from special education, and there is no need for formal assessments to determine continued eligibility. The reevaluation waiver will include the information that was used to make the recommendation, and you can add any additional parent information, as it relates to the student's continued eligibility for special education. I have attached a draft copy of the reevaluation waiver for you to review. I have intentionally left the "Parent Input" section per your request to review the form and input your own parent input. Additionally, there was never any purposeful intent to delay the process timeline.

A Re-Evaluation Not Needed Agreement Form dated March 14, 2024 includes the following parent input, "I agree that the student continues to qualify for special education services under the ED category. I support the recommendation that a re-evaluation is not needed at this time. Please note this form was received until 3/24/25". The parent signed consent for this action on March 27, 2025.

Conclusion

In this case, the required reevaluation should have been conducted no later than March 23, 2025. Interview and documentation show that the parent was initially made aware of the required three-year reevaluation on December 10, 2024; however, despite the two IEP Team meetings held on December 19, 2024 and January 28, 2025, a decision for how to proceed with the reevaluation was not made.

The district did not take any action on conducting the triennial review until March 13, 2025 when the Special Education Teacher and School Psychologist met with the student to discuss the reevaluation and attempted to obtain consent from the student to waive the three-year reevaluation. It is noted this meeting was only 10 days prior to the triennial due date.

The parent was not provided the opportunity to provide input in regards to the reevaluation until March 24, 2025. However, the Re-Evaluation Not Needed Agreement Form containing the parent input continued to be dated March 14, 2024 and the parent only provided written consent for this document on March 27, 2025, which is beyond the three-year timeframe.

Based on the foregoing, the district is found to be OUT of compliance with the requirements of federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.303(b)(2) which require public agencies to follow appropriate procedures to conduct a reevaluation of the student at least once every three years unless the parent and the public agency agree that a reevaluation is unnecessary.

Issue Six

USD #322, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to provide the parent with the opportunity to participate in the development of the student's IEP and to provide appropriate prior written notice regarding parent requests made during IEP team meetings during the past 12 months.

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.322(a) require each public agency to take steps to ensure that one or both of the parents of a child with a disability are present at each IEP Team meeting or are afforded the opportunity to participate, including notifying parents of the meeting early enough to ensure that they will have an opportunity to attend and scheduling the meeting at a mutually agreed on time and place.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.503(a) require school districts to provide parents with prior written notice a reasonable time before they propose or refuse to initiate or change the identification, evaluation, educational placement, or the provision of FAPE to the student.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.503(b)(1-2) require the prior written notice to include a description of the action and an explanation of why the action is being proposed or refused.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The findings of Issues One, Two, Three, Four, and Five are incorporated herein by reference.

The parent expressed concerns with being provided with appropriate Notifications of Meetings throughout the past 12 months with inaccurate information and the timeliness of the notifications. However, interviews and documentation show that the parent attended every IEP team meeting held during the past 12 months either in person or virtually and thus had the opportunity to participate in the development of the student's IEP.

As noted previously, between December 2024 and March 2025, the district provided the parent with multiple versions of IEPs and accompanying PWNs, all of which were dated December 19, 2024, regardless of when they were actually created. These documents often contained information that was discussed or obtained subsequent to the December 19, 2024 IEP team meeting which was confusing and made these documents an inaccurate record or IEP team decisions. The investigator chose to look at three specific PWNs as representative samples for this issue.

As noted in Issue Three, the IEP team met on December 19, 2024 and the district proposed changing the student's special education services from direct to indirect but the parent disagreed and refused to provide consent for this change. On December 20, 2024, the Special Education Teacher sent the parent an email stating, "I just made the changes to the IEP back to direct services. I am emailing this back to you".

The parent was then provided with another PWN proposing "to move from direct to indirect services for the student" and this PWN included an explanation of the action stating, "This action is proposed but rejected because parents want to continue with the current IEP and meet again at the beginning of the 2nd semester after Pre-ETS and Voc-Rehab services are in place". The Special Education Teacher's email encouraged the parent to review and agree to the updated IEP and indicated, "There are several places for signatures . . . page 15, the legal part stating what services and placement the student will receive" which was referring to the signature page of the PWN.

On January 17, 2025, the parent provided the district with a list of specific concerns for the December 19, 2024 IEP along with a list of "Immediate Actions Requested" which included requests for transition assessments, independent living services, and compensatory services for lack of transition services over the past year.

The parent concerns were incorporated verbatim into the proposed IEP developed at the January 28, 2025 IEP team meeting. This IEP also included a listing of "How these concerns will be addressed" which described the district's actions in regards to each concern. However, despite all of this additional information and proposed changes, the parent was provided with the same PWN that was provided on December 20, 2024, which did not address the decisions regarding the parent's specific requests included in the "Immediate Action Requested" list or the "How these concerns will be addressed" list.

It is noted the parent and student requested an IEP team meeting in March and the district scheduled this meeting for April 10, 2025. However, the parent informed the district on April 8, 2025 that she would not participate in that scheduled IEP team meeting because the state complaint had been filed on April 3, 2025 and she requested that the meeting be cancelled. On April 9, 2025, the Director of Special Education emailed the parent stating,

> The school team has been working on the IEP to consider the concerns you noted in your March 14, 2025 document. We are fully prepared to propose a draft IEP that addresses these concerns. Waiting for the investigation to be completed will push this out to May. We are concerned that further postponement of this meeting will result in the student not receiving the transition services we are proposing, as we need your consent for implementation. Will you reconsider attending the scheduled IEP meeting tomorrow to review our proposed IEP?

The parent did not attend the April 10, 2025 meeting but the district did provide the parent with a copy of the draft IEP and a summary PWN, still dated December 19, 2024, which included information dated December 2024, January 2025, and April 2025.

Conclusion

The purpose of the PWN is to clearly explain to the parent what action is being proposed or rejected and the rationale for why the district made that determination. In this case, the district provided the parents with multiple PWNs between December 2024 and April 2025; however, all of these PWN are dated December 19, 2024. The various versions of these PWNs did contain information that was discussed and proposed or rejected in an effort to respond to the parent's listing of concerns dated January 17 and March 14, 2025. However, by having every PWN continue to be dated December 19, 2024, the more recent versions of the PWNs contained information that was unavailable and incongruous with the date of the document This has created a very confusing situation and has led to ongoing misunderstandings between the parent and the district.

Summary of Conclusions/Corrective Action

ISSUE ONE: No violations of federal and state regulations were found for the implementation of the student's IEP, specifically the accommodation for use of a stress pass. Therefore, no corrective action is required.

ISSUE TWO: No violations of federal and state regulations were found for the implementation of the student's IEP, specifically the special education services required to address the personal safety goal. Therefore, no corrective action is required.

ISSUE THREE: A violation of federal regulations is found in the following areas:

1) Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.320(b)(1)(i) which require school districts to review each student's IEP periodically, but not less than annually, to determine whether the annual goals for the child are being achieved; and revise the IEP, as appropriate, to address: 1) any lack of expected progress toward the annual goals and in the general education curriculum; 2) the results of any reevaluation conducted; 3) information about the child provided to, or by, the parents; 4) the child's anticipated needs; or 5) other matters. In this case, the annual review of the student's IEP should have occurred on or before January 16, 2025; however, at this time, it has been almost 16 months since the annual IEP was reviewed and revised, as necessary. Please note that the violations related to 34 C.F.R. 300.503(a) will be addressed under the Correction Actions ordered under Issue Six, which also relates to PWN.

a) Corrective Action Required

i) Within 10 days of this report, both USD #322 and HSEC shall provide an assurance statement that it will comply with federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.320(b)(1)(i) to Special Education and Title Services (SETS) at KSDE

ii) Prior to the beginning of the 2025-26 school year, HSEC shall contact TASN and arrange for training for all special education staff working with USD #322 regarding the procedures for the development of an IEP and then providing the parent with a copy of the IEP in a timely manner following the IEP team meeting. HSEC shall provide SETS with the date of the training, the names/positions of the staff who were trained, and a copy of the presentation handouts or slides within 10 days of the date of the training.

iii) No individual corrective action is required at this point as the student has met the graduation requirements and no longer requires an IEP to access the general education curriculum. Compensatory services resulting in the delay in developing the annual IEP will be addressed through the corrective action required for Issue Four.

ISSUE FOUR: A violation of federal regulations is found in the following area:

2) Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.320(a)(2) which require that , beginning not later than the first IEP to be in effect when the student turns 16 and updated annually, school districts must develop IEPs that include 1) appropriate measurable post-secondary goals based on age appropriate transition assessments related to training, education, employment, and, where appropriate, independent living skills, and 2) transition services, including a course of study, needed to assist the student in reaching those goals and Kansas statutes at K.S.A. 72-3429(c)(8) which require a statement of needed transition services for the student, including, when appropriate, a statement of the interagency responsibilities or any needed linkages.

a) Corrective Action Required

i) Within 10 days of this report, both USD #322 and HSEC shall provide an assurance statement that it will comply with federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.320(a)(2) and K.S.A. 72-3429(c)(8) to Special Education and Title Services (SETS) at KSDE .

ii) Prior to August 1, 2025, HSEC shall collaborate with representatives of Pre-ETS and Vocational Rehabilitation to review policies, procedures, and practices for the development of post-secondary plans for students with IEPs. A summary of findings and any recommended changes in procedures shall be sent to SETS along with a plan for sharing any necessary changes with staff prior to the first day of the 2025-26 school year.

iii) Prior to the beginning of the 2025-26 school year, HSEC shall contact TASN and arrange for training for all special education staff working with USD #322 regarding the procedures for the development of a post-secondary transition plan. HSEC shall provide SETS with the date of the training, the names/positions of the staff who were trained, and a copy of the presentation handouts or slides within 10 days of the date of the training.

iv) No later than July 31, 2025, the district will convene an interagency team consisting of representatives of Pre-ETS, Vocational Rehabilitation, the Center for Independent Living, and TASN along with the parent, the student, the foster parent, and the Supervisor of Permanency at KVC Kansas to develop a plan to transition the student to agencies and resources who will be providing adult services to the student in the areas of education/training, employment, and independent living. The district will provide the parent, the student, and SETS with a summary of this meeting including a detailed listing of the transition linkages and contact information.

ISSUE FIVE: A violation of federal regulations is found in the following area:

3) Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.303(b)(2) which require public agencies to follow appropriate procedures to conduct a reevaluation of the student at least once every three years unless the parent and the public agency agree that a reevaluation is unnecessary. In this case, the triennial review should have occurred on or before March 23, 2025. In addition, the review of existing data was conducted over a three month period of time which caused confusion for the parent and student and would not have allowed time to conduct a reevaluation with assessment, if one had been needed for this student.

a) Corrective Action Required

i) Within 10 days of this report, both USD #322 and HSEC shall provide an assurance statement that it will comply with federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.303(b)(2) to SETS at KSDE

ii) Prior to the beginning of the 2025-26 school year, HSEC shall contact TASN and arrange for training for all special education staff working with USD #322 regarding the procedures for conducting a reevaluation, specifically the review of existing data and the timeline to meet the triennial due date. HSEC shall provide SETS with the date of the training, the names/positions of the staff who were trained, and a copy of the presentation handouts or slides within 10 days of the date of the training.

iii) No individual corrective action is required at this point as the parent was in agreement that a reevaluation was not necessary at this time to determine continued eligibility, the need for continued special education services, and the educational needs of the student.

ISSUE SIX: A violation of federal regulations is found in the following area:

4) Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.503(b)(1-2) which require the prior written notice to include a description of the action and an explanation of why the action is being proposed or refused. In this case, the district provided the parent with multiple PWN over a period of approximately four months but dated each PWN as December 19, 2024. This created confusion and misunderstandings as the various versions of these PWN contained information which was not discussed or was unavailable as of December 19, 2024.

a) Corrective Action Required

i) Within 10 days of this report, both USD #322 and HSEC shall provide an assurance statement that it will comply with federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.503(b)(1-2) to SETS at KSDE.

ii) Prior to the beginning of the 2025-26 school year, HSEC shall contact TASN and arrange for training for all special education staff working with USD #322 regarding the provision of appropriate PWN, specifically the content requirements and when parental consent is required. HSEC shall provide SETS with the date of the training, the names/positions of the staff who were trained, and a copy of the presentation handouts or slides within 10 days of the date of the training.

iii) Within 10 days of this report, the district will provide SETS with a copy of the PWN provided to the parent and the student proposing a material change of services and a substantial change of placement due to the student meeting the requirements to earn her high school diploma. The PWN will include the correct content, be provided in a timely manner, and document that written consent from the parent was obtained prior to graduation from high school on May 17, 2025.

If, after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the agency shall be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following:

In the Matter of the Appeal of the Report
Issued in Response to a Complaint Filed
Against Unified School District No. 322
Onaga Public Schools: 25FC322-001

DECISION OF THE APPEAL COMMITTEE

Background

This matter commenced with the filing of a complaint on April 3, 2025, by ---------, on behalf of her child, ---------. In the remainder of this decision, --------- will be referred to as "the complainant," and --------- will be referred to as "the student." An investigation of the complaint was undertaken by a complaint investigator on behalf of the Special Education, and Title Services team at the Kansas State Department of Education. Following the investigation, a Complaint Report, addressing the allegations, was issued on April 3, 2025. That Complaint Report concluded that there were violations of special education statutes and regulations

Thereafter, both the school district and the parent filed an appeal of the Complaint Report. Upon receipt of the appeals, an Appeal Committee was appointed and it reviewed the original complaint, the Complaint Report, the district's notice of appeal, the parent's notice of appeal, the district's response to the parent's appeal and the parent's response to the district's appeal. The Appeal Committee has reviewed the information provided in connection with this matter and now issues this Appeal Decision.

Preliminary Matters

A copy of the regulation regarding the filing of an appeal [K.A.R. 91-40-51(f)] was attached to the Complaint Report. That regulation states, in part, that: "Each notice shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect." Accordingly, the burden for supplying a sufficient basis for appeal is on the party submitting the appeal. When a party submits an appeal and makes statements in the notice of appeal without support, the Committee does not attempt to locate the missing support.

No new issues (issues not a part of the original complaint) will be addressed by the Appeal Committee. The appeal process is a review of the Complaint Report. The Appeal Committee does not conduct a separate investigation. The Appeal Committee's function will be to determine whether sufficient evidence exists to support the findings and conclusions in the Complaint Report.

Discussion of Issues on Appeal

From Complainant

The district appeals the decision in Issues 3, 4 and 6. The parent appeals the decision in Issues 1 and 4, and additional fact findings.

The Appeal Committee first addresses the district's appeal.

District's Appeal of Issues 3, 4 and 6

Issue Three

> USD #322, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to develop measurable goals and benchmarks to address the areas of need identified in the present level of performance in the student's IEP during the past 12 months.

The investigator concluded that the district did "include a measurable goal which includes a timeframe, a description of the conditions, a description of the behavior, and the criterion for measuring achievement of the goal (Report, p. 15). In her conclusion on this issue, the investigator added:

However, there is also sufficient evidence to support a finding that the district failed to review the IEP at least annually and to revise the IEP based on information provided by the parent at the IEP team meetings held on December 19, 2024 and January 28, 2025. (Report, p. 16)

It is this additional conclusion that the district appeals.

The district's appeal summarizes the following from pertinent findings in the report:

1. The student's functioning IEP was developed on January 17, 2024 (Report, p. 12)
2. An annual IEP review meeting was held on December 19, 2024 (Report, p. 7)
3. At the December 19, 2024 IEP meeting, the district gave the parent a Prior Written Notice (PWN) proposing to change services from direct to indirect services (Report, p. 13, 17, 27 and 28).
4. The parent refused to give the necessary consent to make the proposed change from direct to indirect services (Report, p. 13, 16, 27 and 28).
5. On January 16, 2025, the Special Education Teacher then provided the parent with another copy of the PWN, still dated December 19, 2024, which now stated, "This action [changing from direct services to indirect services] is proposed but rejected because parents want to continue with the current IEP and meet again at the beginning of the 2nd semester after Pre-Ets (sic) and Voc-Rehab services are in place". (Report, p. 13, 28)
6. In the January 16, 2025 email, the Special Education Teacher stated, "As I look at the calendar and the IEP, I notice that we will be out of compliance if we cannot meet on or before the 17th. In order to stay in compliance, I need your signature on the IEP I fixed after our last meeting using that date. I can create a new IEP when we meet again". (Report, p. 14).

7. On January 17, 2025, the parent refused explaining that,
"In terms of your request for me to sign the IEP, I understand the need for compliance deadlines, however, the proposed plan does not include the required transition plan or services. Signing the IEP is an indication that we agree with it, which does not reflect our position. As we plan to meet to address the concerns, we are choosing to exercise the "stay put" provision of IDEA to maintain the student's previous IEP until a new one is developed by the team that includes a transition plan and services" (Report, p. 14).
8. On January 28, 2025, the IEP team met again(Report, p. 14). The parent again refused to sign the PWN and, subsequently, the Special Education Teacher and the parent exchanged multiple emails during February and March 2025, trying to come to an agreement on what needed to be changed in the draft version of the IEP and PWN. On March 6, 2025, the Special Education Teacher provided the parent with another copy of an IEP and a PWN, both still dated December 19, 2024. The student turned age 18 on March 6, 2025 and, on March 12, 2025, she requested the IEP team be reconvened to review and revise the IEP, as needed. On March 14, 2025, the parent sent an email to the Special Education Teacher again refusing to sign the PWN as written and sharing another list of concerns for the different draft versions of the IEP provided to the parent between January and March 2025 , all of which are dated December 19, 2024. Another IEP meeting was scheduled for April 10, 2025, but did not take place because the parent canceled the meeting on April 8, 2025. (Report, p. 15).

On page 17 of the report, the investigator says:

> The Special Education Teacher requested the parent sign the updated IEP and PWN, and on January 17, 2025, the parent refused to sign and then provided the district with a list of all the things that needed to be changed in the draft IEP dated December 19, 2024. This started the ongoing cycle of draft versions of IEPs and PWN, all of which were dated December 19, 2024, which were responding to the multiple lists of concerns from the parent. However, in looking at the IEP and PWN provided to the parent on January 16, 2025, there was no need to obtain written parent consent as the district was proposing nothing that changed from the student's previous IEP (emphasis added).

The district's appeal asserts that an IEP review that starts within the annual review date is a timely review even when the review continues after the annual review date. The district's appeal goes on to say that the time is extended "UNTIL we obtain consent from the parent."

Neither the statute nor regulation directly addresses this question of whether the annual review requirement means the district must "start" the annual IEP review within one year of the date it completed its last review or whether it must "complete" the annual review within that timeline. Accordingly, we must look to the courts for guidance. The highest court to consider this question is the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in the 9th Circuit. In Doug C. V. State of Hawaii, 61 IDELR 91 (9th Cir. 2013), the court was faced with a situation where the parent became ill and could not attend a scheduled IEP meeting. Faced with a situation where resetting the meeting would mean missing the annual IEP review date, the district elected to meet the required meeting date by conducting the meeting without the parent.

In that case, the court said, "The more difficult question is what a public agency must do when confronted with the difficult situation of being unable to meet two distinct procedural requirements of the IDEA, in this case parental participation and timely annual review of the IEP." It answered its own question stating, "When confronted with the situation of complying with one procedural requirement of the IDEA or another, we hold that the agency must make a reasonable determination of which course of action promotes the purposes of the IDEA and is least likely to result in the denial of a FAPE. In reviewing an agency's action in such a scenario, we will allow the agency reasonable latitude in making that determination." (Emphasis added).

In this circuit court case, the court ruled that the district erred when it chose to meet the annual IEP review date rather than accommodate a parent's request for continued discussion. The court said, "the Supreme Court and this court have both repeatedly stressed the vital importance of parental participation in the IEP creation process...Under the circumstances of this case, the Department's decision to prioritize strict deadline compliance over parental participation was clearly not reasonable (Emphasis added).

With this authoritative guidance, the Appeal Committee will allow the district reasonable latitude in making that same kind of determination, and finds that there was nothing unreasonable about the districts actions. This is particularly the case because this is not a case where the district negligently lost track of time and failed to even schedule a meeting on or before the annual IEP review date. The initial IEP meeting was held on December 19, 2024, almost a full month before the annual review date. Subsequent meetings were scheduled to address parent concerns, and, as noted in Finding of Fact 5 of this decision, on page 3, "On January 16, the Special Education Teacher then provided the parent with another copy of the PWN, still dated December 19, 2024, which now stated, "This action [changing from direct services to indirect services] is proposed but rejected because parents want to continue with the current IEP and meet again at the beginning of the 2nd semester after Pre-Ets (sic) and Voc-Rehab services are in place". (Report, p. 13, 28). This PWN issued on January 16, was within the annual review period and effectively ended any further required action by the district in conducting the annual review of this student's IEP because there was no further consent requirement that would prevent implementation of that IEP.

This PWN removed the proposal that required parent consent. Of course, that does not mean the parent agreed with the IEP that was presented, but the law does not require parent agreement with every portion of the IEP. The IEP is developed by the IEP team. The IEP team must give due consideration to the concerns of parents, but is not required to adopt everything that is proposed by parents. The evidence presented supports a finding that this IEP team carefully and fully considered the concerns of the parent, and disagreed with the parent's position that direct services were needed. In the end, the parent exercised her right to refuse to provide the necessary consent to change service delivery from direct to indirect services, and the district provided a PWN withdrawing that proposal.

The Appeal Committee acknowledges that discussions continued after the district provided the January 16, 2025, PWN described in Finding of Fact Nos. 5 & 6. Even so, those additional discussions appear to the Appeal Committee to be an attempt by the district to provide additional participation opportunities to the parent and remains within the "reasonable latitude" we owe districts on this issue.

The Appeal Committee also notes that conducting a timely annual IEP review was not an issue brought by the parent. It was added by the investigator, apparently without notice to the district. When this happens, deference is given to reasonable explanations provided by a district in an appeal, like this one. However, no deference was needed for this decision because the Appeal Committee finds that the district timely began its review of the January 17, 2024 IEP on December 19, 2024, well within the annual review date. The fact that there was disagreement among the parties that led to subsequent meetings to continue the review of the IEP does not negate the fact that this student's IEP review began well within the annual timeline and was extended in order to address continuing concerns of the parent.

For the reasons, cited above, the conclusion in the report on this issue is overturned. There is no violation of law on this issue.

Issue Four

USD #322, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to develop and implement an IEP with appropriate transition services, specifically by failing to conduct appropriate transition assessments, failing to involve external agencies in transition planning with parent consent, and failing to create an appropriate course of study aligned with the student's post-secondary goals during the past 12 months.

The investigator noted that the current IEP being used, dated January 17, 2024, included an appropriate transition plan, that the district did invite external agencies to the student's IEP meetings, with parent consent, and the student received transition assessments both in the general education and special education setting through the use of Xello and Charting Your Life Course (Report, p. 21) Nevertheless, the investigator found a violation, saying:

> However, as noted in Issue Three, noncompliance was identified for the district reviewing and revising the student's IEP at least annually. This delay has impacted the development of an appropriate post-secondary transition plan for the student and the district is found to be OUT of compliance with 34 C.F.R. 300.320(a)(2).

The district appeals this conclusion on the same basis as its appeal of Issue 3: that its review of the IEP was within the annual time period and was extended only because of continuing discussions with the parents and continuing meetings to resolve disagreements.

The Appeal Committee finds that those continuing meetings may, as the investigator noted, have resulted in "a delay in developing an appropriate post-secondary transition plan for the student," but the delay resulted from disagreements between the parent and other members of the IEP team, including disagreements that arise when a parent exercises his/her right to refuse to give consent for proposed IEPs. That refusal, by this parent, to provide consent resulted in subsequent meetings that contributed to the delay in developing this student's IEP. As we noted in the appeal of Issue 3, this is not a situation where the district failed to conduct a timely IEP review, but where an IEP team struggled over time to complete its review because of disagreements about what services were needed by the student. That struggle is consistent with the role each member of an IEP team sometimes faces when trying to develop an IEP designed to meet the unique needs of an individual student.

Unfortunately, these struggles may result in a delay of needed services, but it is part of the legal process in developing an appropriate IEP. In the circumstances presented in this complaint, the Appeal Committee finds that any delay in providing transition services to this student is the result of the IEP team operating in accordance with law (offering multiple meetings and providing multiple PWNs) and the parents exercising the rights provided to them by that same law.

The conclusion of a violation of law on this issue is reversed. There is no violation of law on this issue.

Issue Six

> USD #322, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to provide the parent with the opportunity to participate in the development of the student's IEP and to provide appropriate prior written notice regarding parent requests made during IEP team meetings during the past 12 months.

The Investigator found that: " interviews and documentation show that the parent attended every IEP team meeting held during the past 12 months either in person or virtually and thus had the opportunity to participate in the development of the student's IEP (Emphasis added.)" (Report, p. 27).

However, the investigator concluded that the district's PWNs failed to "clearly explain to the parent what action is being proposed or rejected and the rationale for why the district made that determination (Report, p. 28)."

The reason provided by the investigator for this conclusion is that all of these PWNs were dated December 19, 2024. The investigator said: "The various versions of these PWNs did contain information that was discussed and proposed or rejected in an effort to respond to the parent's listing of concerns dated January 17 and March 14, 2025. However, by having every PWN continue to be dated December 19, 2024, the more recent versions of the PWNs contained information that was unavailable and incongruous with the date of the document This has created a very confusing situation and has led to ongoing misunderstandings between the parent and the district (Report, p. 29)."

The Appeal Committee agrees that using the original date on subsequent PWNs is confusing to the investigator (and to this Appeal Committee), but the report cites no evidence establishing that this process confused the parent. Each PWN in the series of PWNs was in response to specific parent requests and included an explanation of why the district was making each proposal. The Appeal Committee finds no legal requirement on how PWNs are to be dated, except that they must be dated before any proposed action or refusal to act occurs. Apparently, the district wanted to keep track of the original PWN date.

As noted by the investigator, that kind of dating of subsequent documents can result in confusion, at least with regard to those conducting a review of the proceedings, including investigators, Appeal Committees, and, possibly hearing officers and judges. However, keeping the original date on a series of PWNs is not, by itself, a violation of law. The Appeal Committee finds there is insufficient evidence to support the investigator's conclusion that by using this dating method the district, "failed to clearly explain to the parent what action is being proposed or rejected and the rationale for why the district made that determination."

The conclusion that the district failed to provide the parent with "the opportunity to participate in the development of the student's IEP and to provide appropriate prior written notice regarding parent requests made during IEP team meetings during the past 12 months," is factually incorrect, and is overturned.

Clearly these parents were provided the opportunity to participate in the development of the student's IEP, and were provided appropriate prior written notice regarding requests made during IEP team meetings (despite the same date provided on each PWN).

The Parent's Appeal

The first part of the parent's appeal does not identify a particular issue being appealed. Instead, the first part of the parent's appeal contests a finding in issue 1 of the report that: "The report states that the parent and the district identified the last agreed-upon IEP as January 17, 2024." Accordingly, the Appeal Committee will treat this portion of the parent's appeal as an appeal of Issue 1, which is that the district: "failed to implement the student's IEP, specifically the accommodation to allow the use of a stress pass during the past 12 months.

The parent bases the appeal on the following assertions :

- The report states that the parent and the district identified the last agreed-upon IEP as January 17, 2024.
- That statement is incorrect because the parent did not give informed consent for the January 17, 2024 IEP.
- The last IEP for which the parent provided informed consent was developed on March 23, 2023. while the student was in a PRTF.

- The district has never provided the parent with a PWN seeking consent for a material change in services or a substantial change in placement. As such, the student has not received the special education services outlined in the IEP since 2023.

Based on the above, the parent asserts that:

> "It is not an allegation that falls outside the one-year investigation window when the student has not received the services required by the last consented IEP. The district never issued a PWN informing us that they were reducing services by 77% or that there was a change in placement. Since the district never took those steps, the student should have continued to receive the services under the last consented plan. That is not a past violation. It is a continuing failure that persisted through every school day since. We understand that to consider the appeal, the committee must determine which IEP is in effect and how it applies to each issue in the report and the provision of FAPE.

The Appeal Committee notes that the investigator correctly determined that a complaint investigation, such as this one has a "one-year window", but did not cite the applicable regulation. The applicable federal regulation is 34 C.F.R. 300.153(c). That federal regulation states that a special education complaint must allege a violation that occurred not more than one year prior to the date that the complaint is received by the state department of education. Accordingly, the parent may allege a violation going back to one year from the date this complaint was filed, (April 3, 2025), but no further back regardless of whether the current IEP was developed or implemented in accordance with law.

The issue presented by the parent in this appeal is within the one-year timeline. However, the Appeal Committee may only consider issues submitted in an original complaint and addressed in a complaint report. in this complaint, the allegation in Issue 1 is that the district: "failed to implement the student's IEP, specifically the accommodation to allow the use of a stress pass during the past 12 months." That issue is the limit of what is reviewable by this Committee. Because this portion of the parent's appeal raises a separate allegation (that the parent did not give informed consent for the January 17, 2024 IEP), the Appeal Committee cannot consider this issue.

Next, the parent's appeal asserts that corrective actions were inadequately addressed in the report because: "Graduation does not extinguish the district's obligation to remedy violations that occurred while the student was eligible." The Appeal Committee agrees that graduation does not extinguish the district's obligation to remedy violations that occurred while the student was eligible, but finds this has no application to this complaint for two reasons:

1. No violation of a failure to allow the use of a stress pass was substantiated that would merit a remedy; and
2. The only regulation authorizing an appeal of a complaint decision is K.A.R. 91-40-51(f), and that regulation permits appeal of only the "findings or conclusions" of a complaint report. There is no appeal process with regard to corrective actions. Corrective actions may be removed only, as in this case, when an Appeal Committee considers an appeal and overturns a complaint report conclusion that there was a violation of law.

Next, the parent's appeal challenges the complaint investigator's conclusion that there was sufficient evidence, "to support a finding that the current IEP dated January 17, 2024 does include an appropriate transition plan as determined by the IEP team, which included the parent."

In this portion of the appeal, the parent asserts that, a claim that a service is > "not needed" must be supported by timely, individualized data. The district cannot rely on a blanket statement in the IEP while failing to conduct assessments to determine whether services are necessary. Doing so reverses the required process. A determination of need must be based on data gathered and reviewed by the IEP team, not made in its absence.

>
> Although we participated as IEP team members, our repeated concerns about independent living were disregarded, and the district failed to gather or present any data to support its determination. A team cannot make a legally sound decision without data, and parental participation does not imply agreement with an unsupported conclusion from the outset.
>
> The investigation findings appear to excuse that failure by citing absence in the IEP. However, services were not excluded because they were unnecessary. They were omitted because the district failed to gather the data required to make that determination.

The Appeal Committee disagrees with the parent's assertion that the IEP team made its decision on transition services without any supporting data. On page 19 of the report, the investigator makes the following finding regarding the January 17, 2024 IEP:

> This IEP documents that two transition assessments were administered to the student and the results considered in the development of the transition plan. Charting Your Life Course and Xello are both programs designed to allow students to assess and explore interests and strengths for potential vocational paths. Xello is used district-wide to develop each student's Individual Plan of Study (IPS) and the Charting Your Life Course is used by students in the special education program for obtaining data to assist IEP teams in developing post-secondary transition plans.

The Appeal Committee was provided with no information with which it could assess the adequacy of the assessments the district used as transition assessments, but the parent's appeal assertion that transition services were not supported by data is contrary to the evidence provided to the investigator by the district and included in the report. The conclusion of the investigator on this issue is sustained.

The parent also appeals, by contesting the investigator's finding that::

"There is also evidence that the district did invite external agencies to the student's IEP meetings held during the 2024 – 2025 school year with parent consent."

In the appeal, the parent asserts that:

> The investigator's finding that the district obtained parental consent for outside agency participation based on the Notice of Meeting dated November 26, 2024, is inaccurate. The Notice included the statement: "If necessary, and with your consent, staff from other agencies that may be able to provide appropriate transition services/linkages will be invited to our meeting. The agencies they represent are shown below: Voc-Rehab, Pre-ETS." This language does not constitute informed consent. It refers to a possible future action and does not provide a means for the parent to give or withhold actual permission before invitations are made.
>
> Consent must be obtained before inviting an outside agency to an IEP meeting. The requirements cited in the Kansas Special Education Handbook, all KSDE secondary transition training courses, the Indicator 13 checklist, the KSDE website, guidance from the Kansas Disability Rights Center, and resources from Families Together. In this case, the district invited Pre-ETS on December 13, 2024, to a December 19, 2024 meeting. The IEP meeting was 9:00 a.m. - 10:00 a.m. The district sent us the Pre-ETS authorization form after the meeting at 10:19 a.m. We did not sign and return the form until 12:02 p.m.
> A Notice of Meeting—even with a parent's signature—does not constitute consent. The district could have used its agency consent form or the one available from KSDE, but any valid consent must include authorization to disclose education records. The district's Notice of Meeting did not include that condition.

The Appeal Committee agrees with the analysis provided by the parent. However, even relying entirely on the facts as presented by the parent in this appeal, any potential violation is only a procedural violation with no substantive effect because the parent did give consent for the outside agency participation shortly after the meeting.

Accordingly, the Appeal Committee concludes that it will not disturb the conclusion of the investigator on this issue.

Other:

On page eleven of the report, the investigator wrote, "The parent attached a "fixed" copy of the IEP moving the proposed services back to direct because the parent was concerned with this proposed change in placement."

Please note the clerical error. It should state, "The Special Education Teacher attached a "fixed" copy..." (Evidence #23), which is an important distinction.

The Appeal Committee does note that this statement in the report is a clerical error, as it was the Special Education Teacher that changed the proposed indirect IEP services back to direct services, not the parent. Accordingly, the Appeal Committee concludes that this statement in the report is error, and is removed from the report.

Finally, the parent's appeal states that:

> The report omitted key details about the April 10, 2025 IEP meeting circumstances. As stated in the report, the district emailed the draft IEP but omitted a PWN. In addition, they never sent an invitation with a meeting link. Without access to the meeting, meaningful participation was not possible. We asked multiple times for documentation that a meeting link had been sent and did not receive a response. On April 14, 2025 the special education director responded, "Since you had canceled your attendance, you were removed from the invitation, and we did not conduct an IEP meeting." To our knowledge, an IEP meeting did not occur that day, so any reference to such in the report should be removed.

The Appeal Committee declines the parent's request to remove this information from the report. The committee believes this information provides meaningful context to the conclusions of the investigator, and this Committee, regarding the district's on-going attempts to resolve differences and the parents participation concerns.

Conclusion

For the reasons stated herein, the conclusions in Issues 3, 4 and 6 are overruled and the corrective actions ordered in connection with these issues are rescinded. The corrective actions related to Issue 5 in the report, on page 37, remain in force.

This is the final decision on this matter. There is no further appeal. This Appeal Decision is issued this 5th day of June, 2025.

Background Information

This investigation involved a ninth grade student enrolled at the School in USD #231. The Student qualifies for special education or related services under the exceptionality of Autism per the IDEA.

Findings of the Investigation

The following findings are based on a review of documentation and interviews with the Parent and staff in the District.

1. According to the District Response, the Student's accommodation of extended time to complete assignments was "1x the regular class period," which typically amounted to at least one additional day to complete their work compared to non-exceptional peers. The District explained the Student had classes on alternating days, so if other students had an assignment due by the end of the day, the Student would have two days to complete it.
2. In the District Response, the District indicated they had allowed the Student to turn in and receive credit for assignments past their due date, sometimes giving the Student until the end of the quarter to submit work. The District indicated they sent regular updates to the Parent regarding the Student's outstanding assignments. The District explained they had not penalized the Student for turning in late work that was recovered; however, they noted there had been problems with the Student completing the work and submitting it to the wrong place or not turning it in at all.
3. According to the District Response, the Student was given shortened assignments. The District provided an example that if other students had to complete 20 math problems, the Student had to complete 10. The District indicated the Student was provided with breaks, an alternate setting, and Cloze notes. In their Response, the District explained the Student had a Behavioral Intervention Plan (BIP) that mirrored many of the accommodations in the IEP, and that it accounted for periods when adverse behavior escalated, in addition to positive reinforcement strategies to promote desired behavior.

4. The District sent the Parent a Notice of Meeting (NOM) on August 27, 2024 for a meeting to develop the Student's IEP to be held on September 13, 2024. The District sent the Student a "Student Invitation to IEP Meeting" on August 30, 2024.
5. The Student's IEP, dated September 13, 2024, indicated:
    a. The Student required a BIP.
    b. The Student had diagnoses of asthma, Autism Spectrum Disorder, and Attention-Deficity/Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD).
    c. The Parents were concerned the Student's workload at school was too overwhelming.
    d. The Student's difficulty with text comprehension impacted their ability to gain information and access the general education curriculum. The Student's deficits in math fluency and multi-step problem solving impacted their ability to perform grade level mathematics. The Student's difficulties with written expression impacted their ability to demonstrate understanding.
    e. Due to their Autism diagnosis, the Student could become emotionally dysregulated, which impacted their ability to participate in classroom activities.
    f. Three measurable annual goals (with progress monitored quarterly):
        i. By the end of the IEP, when presented with an unfamiliar 8th grade passage, the Student will answer comprehension with 80% accuracy;
        ii. By the end of of the IEP, when presented with two-step algebraic equations, the Student will answer 20% of all presented problems; and
        iii. By the end of the IEP, when given a directive for a non-preferred activity, the Student will be able to comply with the directive at 100% accuracy after one prompt.
    g. A summary of services:
        i. Special Education Direct Services outside of the Regular Classroom for 42 minutes a day, five days a week, for the duration of the IEP; and
        ii. Special Education Direct Services within the Regular Classroom for 170 minutes a day, five days a week, for the duration of the IEP.
    h. Accommodations/Modifications/Supplementary Aids and Services in the general education classroom for the duration of the IEP:
        i. Extended time (1x the regular class period);
        ii. Shortened assignments (assignments reduced by 50%);
        iii. Frequent breaks (daily as needed);

iv. Alternate setting (daily as needed); and

v. Cloze notes (when note-taking is required).

i. A Functional Behavior Assessment (FBA) was completed on December 6, 2023 and indicated:

i. When the Student was frustrated and/or wanted to avoid a task presented to them, they would display the following behaviors:

1. Use of disrespectful tone when speaking to adults, put their head on their desk and close their eyes, fall asleep at their desk, verbally refuse to work, complain of ailments, ask to go to the bathroom, speak off-topic, and attempt to start a conversation or argue with the adult working with them.

ii. A Reactive Plan:

2. Breaks/calm down room, 10-minute breaks in the special education classroom, staff will start the timer and remain with the Student, staff will not give the Student academic expectations, and the Student will return to the general education classroom after a 10-minute break.

6. Meeting Notes dated September 13, 2024 indicated the Parent had concerns the Student did not know what assignments needed to be submitted. The Case Manager explained that in the Student's red folder, there should be ongoing assignments that were due. Notes indicated the IEP team would collaborate on a new way of organizing materials to help the Student.

7. A Prior Written Notice (PWN) dated September 16, 2024 and signed by the Parent on September 18, 2024, indicated the IEP team met on September 13, 2024 and decided:

a. The Student would receive special education services outside of the general education classroom for 85 minutes, for five days, every two weeks.

b. The Student would receive special education services inside the regular education setting for 340 minutes, for five days, every two weeks, in English, Math, Science, and Social Studies.

c. The Student would have access to a District tablet during instructional time, and their personal tablet during breaks.

d. The Student would be on a shortened day from 8 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

8. In an email dated October 10, 2024 to the Case Manager, Paraprofessional 1 wrote, "[The teacher] said [the Student] doesn't have to do the slides, but at least answer the questions for [the Student's] population project."

9. On October 14, 2024, the Case Manager emailed the Student's first quarter IEP Progress Report to the Parent.

10. In an email to the Case Manager dated December 15, 2024, the Parent wrote, "However, there seems to be some confusion on [the Student's] part about which assignments are meant for math and which are for science. To ensure everything is submitted to the correct teacher, could we double-check that all the completed work reaches its intended destination? While I understand this is ultimately [the Student's] responsibility, a little guidance would help clarify things for [the Student]."

11. In an email to the Case Manager dated January 9, 2025, Paraprofessional 1 wrote, "What does [the Student's] IEP stipulate about note taking? … I asked [the Student] which method [they] preferred, and … [the Student] would like to type[,] especially since there are no cloze notes." The Case Manager replied and stated the Student's IEP included an accommodation for cloze notes.
12. In an email to the Attendance Secretary dated January 13, 2025, the Case Manager indicated the Student was in their room because they were having a rough morning. That day, Paraprofessional 2 emailed the Case Manager and indicated the Student was struggling and they gave the Student a ten-minute break.
13. An email exchange between the Parent and the Case Manager between January 13-14, 2025 indicated:
    a. The Parent shared that the Student felt overwhelmed and stressed during science class, had physical symptoms, and the Student indicated they were not allowed to leave the classroom for a break.
    b. The Case Manager said, "We were not aware of the physical symptoms that [the Student] was experiencing until I spoke with you on the phone. We were trying to balance breaks with work/class time … . [The Student] had over an hour break leading up to science, so [the teacher] was encouraging [the Student] to try to get through the note-taking portion at the beginning of class, and then take a break. We were trying to problem solve with [the Student] … but [the Student] … didn't communicate [their] symptoms with us."
14. On January 17, 2025, the Case Manager shared the Student's current agenda and assignments to be completed with the Parent.
15. An email from the Case Manager to the Parent, dated January 22, 2025, stated in part that for a Career and Life Planning Project, "… the class originally brainstormed 20 goals, then selected 4 for their board. [The Student] may list 10 goals, then feature 4 on [their] vision board."

18. The Case Manager emailed the Parent on January 28, 2025 and said in part, "[The Student] started on the day on task … . [The Student] was told that [they] could take a break, and then needed to work on Science. When break was over, [the Student] refused to work, would ignore us when we asked questions, and then was disrespectful."

22. In an email dated March 13, 2025 to the Case Manager, the Parent said in part, "… I realize that [the Student] has completed many of [their] tasks, but … struggles with the final step of uploading and submitting them online. … Could we explore ways to ensure [the Student] is receiving the assistance needed to submit these assignments?"
    a. The Case Manager replied the next day and inquired if there could be a folder designated for completed work.

c. April 7, 2025: The Special Services Coordinator indicated the only accommodation that was removed was the contingency map.

28. On April 4, 2025, the Physical Science Teacher emailed the Case Manager and Paraprofessional 1 and said, "[The Student] still did not finish [their] test, so [they'll] need to finish during Tuesday's seminar. I will grade what [the Student has] completed so far … . I cannot give [the Student] time beyond then because that will be going over [their] accommodated time allotment. … to follow [the Student's] accommodations exactly, [the Student] does get 20 more minutes, so I told [the Student] [they] need to finish it in either Monday or Tuesday's seminar."

29. On April 16, 2025, the Parent emailed the IEP team and said in part, "I also have observed that most of [the Student's] school work has not been modified throughout the year, except for the beginning when [the Student] would alternate between odd and even numbers on some assignments. Some classes have adhered to the guidelines for consistent modification, while others have not." The Parent also requested a meeting.

a. The Associate Principal replied the next day and asked the Parent to share more about which teachers or classes were not following the Student's accommodations.

b. The Parent replied on April 22, 2025 and indicated they had photos of the Student's science assignments that had not been modified, per their IEP. The Parent requested an accommodation be added to the Student's IEP.

An undated written statement from the Math Teacher said, "When [the Student] becomes frustrated or disengaged, [the Student] frequently resumes use of [their] personal tablet to draw. … I generally allow a few minutes of drawing time to help [them] self-regulate, then prompt [them] to put the tablet away and reengage with the lesson or begin homework. The transition back to task is often slow and requires repeated prompts.

37. An observation of the Student in PowerTeacher Pro, dated April 7, 2025, indicated the Student completed half an activity, stopped, and took a ten-minute break. It was decided that the work completed would suffice to demonstrate understanding.
38. In their materials, the Parent indicated on April 4 (no year), the Student sent them a picture of a science test that they did not perceive as altered. The Parent told the Student it had not been altered, and to complete half of the test. On April 7 (no year), the Student texted the Parent and said, "...asked for a break multiple time[s]... ."
39. The Parent indicated some of the Student's assignments were not reduced by 50%, including two science assignments and an assignment to read and annotate "The Raven."

Interview Summaries

The following findings are based on interviews with the District and the Parents and have been compiled as interview summaries.

The Parent

46. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Parent indicated when the Student shuts down, the School staff has told the Student they were being disrespectful. The Parent shared the Student shutting down was a "major struggle" in the Student's science class, due to the workload. The Parent said, "… [the Student] just tends to shut down a lot because they don't really explain it to [the Student] in a way that [their] brain can comprehend it." The Parent indicated this had been communicated to the School multiple times since September 2024.

47. The Parent shared that the majority of the Student's assignments had not been reduced by 50%. They also stated the Student was supposed to have a tablet, but the Student had only started using it recently. The Parent indicated the Student had a re-evaluation done, but none of the behavioral supports that were recommended were listed in the Student's IEP.

48. The Parent described a time on January 13, 2025 when the Student asked to take a break, and was told to complete some work first. They explained the Student communicated again that they needed a break, and started to have physical symptoms. The Parent indicated the Student then asked to go to the nurse and was not allowed to do so.

49. The Parent indicated they contacted the School in December 2024 asking if the Student was up-to-date on their assignments. The Parent stated there was a list of assignments and only a couple were reduced by 50%. The Parent asked the School why the Student had so much homework if they were receiving support at school, and was told by School staff that the Student preferred to do the work at home. According to the Parent, the Student told them they did the work at home because, at school, it was not explained to them in a way they could understand.

    The Parent described a time when the Student was not understanding an assignment, and the Case Manager stated they needed a break and walked away. The Parent explained that upon returning, the Case Manager told the Student they were not going to change their teaching methods.

50. The Parent explained that when the Student brought work home, it was not indicated anywhere to only do odd or even problems. The Parent indicated they mentioned this in a meeting, and the Math Teacher stated sometimes they forgot to write those instructions for the Student. The Parent indicated that at the start of September 2024, they asked the School to reduce the Student's assignments in such a way so it did not appear overwhelming to the Student. The Parent indicated there was never an agreement with the School that the Student would automatically know they only had to complete 50% of an assignment.
51. When asked what type of work the Student was completing at home, the Parent explained most of it was homework because the Student was exempt from in-class assignments, and not given the chance to complete them. The Parent said, "… because they exempt certain assignments to make it look like [the Student] is actually accessing the curriculum and stuff like that."
52. The Parent indicated the Student's IEP had been amended a couple of times, but could not recall the dates of the amendments.
53. The Parent indicated they had a meeting with the IEP team on September 12, 2024, and were asked to sign a PWN so the Student could start shortened days. The Parent explained they were given a sheet of paper to sign that did not denote it was part of the PWN, and then that document was included with the other PWN paperwork. The Parent indicated this removed the modifications for the Student that had been added the previous school year.
54. The Parent explained that prior to September 2024, the Student had assignments they needed to complete, and the teachers indicated they would give the Student credit if the assignments were completed before the break. The Parent shared that they looked through the Student's binder and found completed assignments, and the Student told the Parent they didn't turn them in because they did not know whether they were notes or assignments.

    The Parent explained the Student had two folders for each class; a "to do" folder and a "done" folder. The Parent indicated the Student knew to take assignments out of the "done" folder and give them to the teacher. The Parent indicated the Math Teacher and the Physical Science Teacher stated the Student could scan and send in their assignments via email if they forgot to submit them.
55. The Parent stated the School provided the Student with a tablet at the beginning of the 2024-25 school year, but the Student refused to use it. The Parent indicated the School never signed the Student into Google or set it up so the Student could access the Google classroom. The Parent said, "So this whole year … [the Student] hasn't been accessing [their] curriculum because [the Student] hasn't had a school tablet to access it on until just two weeks ago when they gave it to [them] to use. The Parent stated the Student was not receiving the curriculum when they were in class.

56. The Parent said, "… when you go into a Google classroom setting … the kids open up their Chromebook and follow in. If they do a PowerPoint and the PowerPoints [sic] on the board, they have the PowerPoint in front of 'em [sic] … . And when [the Student] tells them, 'Hey, I don't know where any of this is,' they're just like, 'it's in your Google. It's on your Google classroom.' And [the Student's] like, '… I don't know how to access it. I don't know how to log in.'"

Case Manager

57. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Case Manager explained they focused on specially designed instruction directed towards the Student's IEP goals, specifically reading comprehension and solving algebraic equations. The Case Manager stated the Student also received support in the general education classroom, from either themself or a paraprofessional, to help the Student with work completion and their behavioral goal of compliance. The Case Manager indicated the Student had Cloze notes to help with note-taking, and was given those in classes when note-taking was required. They indicated the Student did not always use Cloze notes. The Case Manager was unaware of any inconsistencies in implementing the Student's accommodations.

58. The Case Manager explained the Student's accommodations varied between classes. They described the Student would be given 10 math problems instead of 20, modified science assignments, and in English, as an example, to write one paragraph instead of three. The Case Manager observed the Student had several missing and incomplete assignments. The Case Manager stated the Student would often say they left their work at home or didn't know where it was. According to the Case Manager, the Parent tried to get the Student caught up at the end of third quarter, and the teachers sent the Parent the assignments. The Case Manager said, "So the original document might've had what would've been marked, do these problem[s], not that problem. But then when [the Parent] got them, [the Parent] didn't know what the original modifications were."

59. The Case Manager explained they regularly sent the Parent an agenda during the first semester and third quarter with the assignments the Student needed to finish, but often did not hear back from the Parent. They indicated the Parent communicated with them more around spring break. The Case Manager said, "And there's a pattern about every couple of months right before the quarter would hit where [the Student and the Parent] would spend a whole weekend getting everything caught up."

60. The Case Manager indicated the Student used their personal tablet during instructional time to draw or message the Parent. They observed the Student would get angry when redirected to put their personal tablet away. The Case Manager explained the Student could use their personal tablet for breaks in the special education classroom. The Case Manager stated the Student did "very little" work on their personal tablet, and that they could access schoolwork through their school-issued tablet. The Case Manager said, "We purchased the same model tablet for

[the Student] to have a school issued tablet … . We were allowing [the Student] to access Google Classroom, access the internet, access digital work using a school issue[d] tablet." The Case Manager stated the Student refused to use the school-issued tablet.

According to the Case Manager, much of the curriculum was on paper, and only a portion required a tablet or Chromebook to access. The Case Manager said, "Math, they don't use anything … digital … . It's a combination in English. [The Student's] science class is a hundred percent on paper. … [the Student's] career and life planning class is digital. But [the Student] gets paper copies of a lot of things as well. So if [the Student] were to walk into class and say, 'I don't have anything,' then the teachers would provide [them] paper copies of anything that was originally digital." The Case Manager recalled it was difficult to get the Student to use their school-issued tablet at the start of the 2024-25 school year.

61. The Case Manager indicated the Student's BIP was carried over from middle school because it seemed appropriate at the time, but they were now observing the Student exhibiting different behaviors. They described these behaviors as a refusal to work, off task behavior, and not complying with directives. They explained these behaviors were addressed by consistent prompting, restating directions, and documenting staff actions.
62. Regarding the incident on January 13, 2025, the Case Manager explained class had just started and it was time to take notes. The Student had taken a break toward the end of their previous class. The Case Manager explained when the Student mentioned a break, they were asked if they wanted to take it then and miss the notes, or if the Student thought they could wait and take a break later.
63. The Case Manager described their interactions with the Student as basic and sticking to the necessities. They observed the Student being short with them and speaking in a way that could be perceived as rude.
64. The Case Manager explained the Student had a minimum of one additional day class period to finish assignments, per the IEP. Because of the School's block scheduling, that tended to be two additional days. The Case Manager stated the Student's teachers often accepted assignments weeks after they were due. The Case Manager indicated the Student would often shove their work into their binder, and not let the Case Manager look for it.
65. When asked how the Student would know it's too late to turn in an assignment, the Case Manager said, "We would be discussing it with the teacher. … the official thing would be if it was due Monday, then it would be due Wednesday for that class."
66. The Case Manager indicated the Student's IEP had not been amended since the last review of the IEP. They explained the Parent at one point provided a list of accommodations they believed were supposed to be in the IEP. The Case Manager explained two accommodations did not transfer from the Student's previous IEP to the current one, which were a contingency map and a daily agenda sheet.

67. The Case Manager stated the Parent created the Student's folder system, but the Case Manager didn't know how it was laid out because the Student would not allow access to it. The Case Manager believed the Student had one folder for each subject that had a "to be completed" and "completed" section. They observed the Student did not put papers where they belong.

Paraprofessional 1

68. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, Paraprofessional 1 indicated they worked with the Student during science class. They explained the Student received a lot of paperwork which, even though it was modified, sometimes overwhelmed the Student and resulted in them shutting down. Paraprofessional 1 observed the Student became more argumentative after spring break. Paraprofessional 1 indicated the Student went to an alternate setting for quizzes and tests and had extended time for assignments.

69. Paraprofessional 1 was unaware of any issues implementing the Student's accommodations. They stated the Physical Science Teacher reduced the Student's assignments by 50%. Paraprofessional 1 indicated they offered the Student breaks, but the Student often refused.

70. Paraprofessional 1 explained the Student would put papers in their folders, but when the Student returned, the papers were gone. Paraprofessional 1 indicated they could not find the assignments in the folders and the Student often said they were at home. Paraprofessional 1 explained they kept a copy of every assignment the Student had so they could track if it was complete, missing, or what had to be done. They indicated the Student sometimes believed they submitted an assignment when they had not.

71. Regarding having extended time, Paraprofessional 1 said, "… [the Student] has … one extra day, but … many of the teachers allowed [them] over a week to make up missing work … ."

72. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, Paraprofessional 2 explained they tried to get the Student to do their work, but the Student often refused or acted negatively toward them. They explained they worked with the Student in the Learning Center and in English class, but the Student often put their head down or refused to engage. Paraprofessional 2 said, "[The Student] would spend all day drawing on [their] tablet. And then if somebody asked [the Student] to do schoolwork, then [they] would start messaging [the Parent] … ." They indicated there were no issues implementing the accommodations.

73. Paraprofessional 2 indicated the Student had several missing assignments because they chose not to do any schoolwork, but would sometimes submit completed assignments that were either done in the Parent's handwriting or that the Parent had typed. Paraprofessional 2 explained assignments were expected to be submitted through Google Classroom, but the Student did not do that. They indicated the Parent would sometimes email assignments to the English Teacher. Paraprofessional 2 stated the Student had a school-issued tablet. They explained the Student would not give them finished assignments or allow them to look in their folders to see if something was completed.

74. Paraprofessional 2 explained for extended time, the Student was supposed to have 1x the amount of time as their peers, but it was usually twice that because of how classes were scheduled. Paraprofessional 2 said, "For English, we were trying to get [the Student] to work on just anything so that we could then learn how to make those 50% accommodations for [them]. But [they] would not give us anything. … any way that we could make those accommodations and help [the Student], we are willing to do."

English Teacher

75. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the English Teacher indicated the Student appeared to pay attention in class, but sometimes was distracted on their personal tablet or "zoned out." They observed the Student act disrespectful toward Paraprofessional 2 and sometimes refuse to work. The English Teacher described "zoned out" as staring straight ahead and not looking focused. The English Teacher described when the Student appeared upset, their legs bounced or shook, had a scrunched face, harsher breathing, putting their head down, or narrowing their eyes. The English Teacher explained they had positive interactions with the Student about 85% of time, and believed the Student had positive interactions with Paraprofessional 2 about 20% of the time.

76. The English Teacher did not have issues implementing the Student's IEP. They explained the only issue was when the Student took work home and brought it back, it appeared it had been completed by the Parent. The English Teacher explained they modified the Student's assignments. The English Teacher said, "… sometimes [the Student] doesn't even want to follow those accommodations when we give it to [them]. And then there's other things [the Student] … refuses to complete."

77. The English Teacher indicated they gave the Student extended time. They described the Student was often unable to find assignments in their folder, but the English Teacher gave them paper copies of assignments and tests. The English Teacher said, "… my policy is if you did it, I'm going to give you the grade for it, especially for [the Student] with the accommodation. … most work is online as far as turning in. So there's a lot of times [the Student will] just forget to hit submit and when it's marked as missing, I will mark that it's missing. And then as I'm going through grading on Google Classroom, I'll see [the Student] just didn't hit submit, so I'll grade it … ." The English Teacher explained they used Google Classroom to know if assignments were late."

Math Teacher

78. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Math Teacher observed the Student had become less compliant and willing to work as the 2024-25 school year progressed. The Math Teacher observed that around March or April 2024, much of the Student's work had the Parent's handwriting on it. They explained the Student would usually comply with the Math Teacher's directives, but it took 2-3 prompts. They observed the Student use aggressive language with the Case Manager, but stated the Student did not use that language with them.
79. Regarding the Student's accommodations, the Math Teacher stated the Student could take assessments in an alternate setting, and they implemented the Student's accommodations of Cloze notes and extended time. They indicated students were allowed to submit assignments up until the test for a particular unit. The Math Teacher allowed the Student's previous paraprofessional to reduce the Student's work by 50%. The Math Teacher said that during the second semester, "… whatever work didn't get done in class, I'd go over to [the Student], I say, 'do these last four problems out of the eight.' Or I'd then say, 'finish the back page and that's all you have to do.'"
80. The Math Teacher explained they offered the Student breaks, and they took more breaks during the first semester than second semester.
81. The Math Teacher explained that during the first semester, the Student's previous paraprofessional would get late assignments to the Math Teacher. They indicated that during the second semester, the Student had more challenges with submitting work. They stated the Student had 6-7 assignments in their binder that they turned in and the Student received credit for. The Math Teacher indicated there was a day when they received four assignments that appeared to have been done by the Parent and turned in about eight days after the assignments were due. The Math Teacher observed the work was done by the Parent because there was a "distinct difference" in the handwriting.
82. The Math Teacher explained they had two clearly labeled baskets in their classroom where students turned in assignments. They explained there were two occasions where the Student's assignments were in the wrong basket, and the Math Teacher gave them credit for the assignments when they found them. The Math Teacher did not use Google Classroom for submitting assignments.

Positions of the Parties, Applicable Regulations, and Conclusions

Issue One

Whether USD #231, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, implemented the Student's IEP including accommodations "such as 50% modifications" and behavior supports. K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(3); 34 § C.F.R. 300.323.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(3) each agency shall ensure an IEP is in effect for each exceptional child at the beginning of each school year.

The Parent alleged the District failed to implement the Student's IEP despite multiple meetings and documented concerns. According to the Parent, the Student's accommodations were not honored and there were several meetings with no resolution. The Parent alleged that staff behavior "provoked" the Student rather than supporting them.

The District stated that they implemented the Student's IEP, their accommodations, and behavior supports.

In the District Response, and corroborated through staff interviews and additional documents, it was demonstrated the Student's accommodation of extended time typically amounted to at least one additional day to complete their work, and the Student had submitted and received credit for assignments past their due date. The District sent the Parent a Notice of Meeting on August 27, 2024 for an IEP meeting on September 13, 2024. The Student's IEP (of the same date), indicated the Student required a BIP, included a summary of accommodations, and contained behavior strategies created from an FBA done in December 2023.

Meeting Notes from September 13, 2024 indicated the Parent was concerned the Student did not know what assignments to submit. The Parent explained the Student had a folder system for each class and knew how to use it; the existence of the system was corroborated by the Case Manager and Paraprofessional 1. The Case Manager and Paraprofessionals 1 and 2 indicated the Student would not let them look in their folder. A PWN from September 16, 2024, and signed by the Parent, indicated the Student would have access to a District tablet during instructional time, and their personal tablet during breaks. The Parent perceived this paperwork removed previous modifications.

The Parent emailed the Case Manager on December 15, 2024 because the Student was confused about their assignments. On January 13, 2025, Paraprofessional 2 emailed the Case Manager and indicated they gave the Student a break. During an email exchange from January 13-14, 2025, the Parent reported the Student experienced physical symptoms in science class and was denied a break. The Case Manager stated they were unaware of the symptoms, tried to balance break time with class instruction, and the Student hadn't communicated their symptoms.

The Parent emailed the Case Manager on February 4, 2025 and asked for a meeting to discuss the Student's behavior. The next day, the Case Manager emailed the Parent the Student's science assignment so they could complete it on their tablet. On March 13, 2025, the Parent explained to the Case Manager the Student's difficulty with uploading and submitting completed assignments online. The Case Manager suggested using a folder for completed work, which the Parent said already existed.

The Parent indicated on April 4 (no year), the Student sent them a picture of a science test they perceived as unaltered. In an email exchange between the Case Manager and Parent on April 4, 2025, the Parent was concerned the Student's accommodations weren't transferred to the Student's current IEP. The Special Services Coordinator explained only a contingency map and daily agenda were removed, which the Case Manager confirmed. On April 7 (no year), the Student texted the Parent saying they asked for a break multiple times, but observation notes in PowerTeacher Pro from the same day indicated the Student took a ten-minute break.

On April 16, 2025, the Parent emailed the IEP team with concerns the Student's assignments weren't being modified. A document titled "Agenda for [the Student]," dated December 12, 2024, provided instructions for the Student's reduced assignments. Documentation about the Student's first and third quarters described some of their reduced assignments, and that the Student took 14 documented breaks. The Parent believed School staff had told the Student they were being disrespectful; the Case Manager, Paraprofessional 2, and the English and Math Teachers indicated the Student had acted disrespectfully. The Parent shared the Student shut down because they didn't understand the work, which they stated was communicated to the School. The Parent stated the Student had a tablet but only started using it recently, and that none of the Student's behavioral supports were listed in their IEP; however, documentation showed behavior strategies.

The Parent indicated the Math Teacher told them they sometimes forgot to write reduction instructions for the Student, but this contradicted the Math Teacher's statements. The Parent indicated there was not an agreement with the School that the Student would automatically know they had to complete 50% of an assignment. The Parent indicated the Student's IEP had been amended, but there was no documentation of amendments.

The Parent stated the School provided the Student with a tablet at the beginning of the 2024-25 school year, but the Student refused to use it, which the Case Manager corroborated. The Parent indicated the School never gave the Student access to Google or Google Classroom, and that the Student did not have access to the curriculum, but this could not be proven with the provided evidence. The Case Manager and English Teacher stated the Student had access to paper copies in addition to anything digital. Also, evidence from interviews indicated most of the Student's work was not in a digital format.

All of the District staff who were interviewed stated they did not have issues implementing the Student's IEP. Several emails between the Case Manager, Paraprofessional 1, the Parent, and the Student's teachers demonstrated the Student's accommodations were implemented. Written statements from the Physical Science Teacher, the Math Teacher, and the English Teacher described how the Student's accommodations were implemented. Screenshots of assignments showed five with no reduction instructions, four that did, and two which did not; however, the last two had reduction instructions on the Student's Agenda. The agenda, ranging from January 2025 through April 2025, showed four assignments without reduction instructions, and eight assignments which had been modified.

While some assignments in the Parent's materials did not appear to be modified, this was only a small portion of assignments, and a sufficient determination could not be made based solely on that evidence that there was a pattern of consistent failure to modify assignments. While the evidence showed some inconsistencies in modifying assignments, interview statements demonstrated the Parent may not have had the modified versions when they requested the assignments later.

Through interviews and emails, patterns emerged that the Student had challenges with keeping track of and submitting their work, interacting with staff, engaging in classwork, and utilizing their accommodations, even though they were made available to the Student. There was evidence to show some assignments appeared unmodified during the complaint period; however, these did not amount to a "material failure." Relevant case law from E.C. v. U.S.D. 385 Andover (2020) held that the district's occasional deviations from a BIP did not amount to a material implementation failure. Using the preponderance of evidence standard, and demonstrated through documented assignments, written statements, and interviews, it is more likely than not that the Student's IEP was implemented. Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the District failed to implement the Student's IEP, including accommodations "such as 50% modifications" and behavior supports, in accordance with 34 § C.F.R. 300.323 and K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(3).

Background Information

The subject of this complaint is a 9 year old student enrolled in the 3rd grade during the 2024-2025 school year. The student lives at home with their parents and one sibling. The student was supported at home from the ages of 3 to 5 by a local early intervention program and found eligible for services in kindergarten with a Speech/Language impairment as the primary exceptionality.

The current IEP is dated September 17, 2024 and states that the student has an articulation goal. The student receives speech/language services in the special education room for 15 minutes, one day per week. There are no modifications, accommodations or supplementary supports noted in the IEP. The student's most recent speech/language assessment report is dated September 17, 2024 and shares that the student scored below the average range in articulation, stating, [the student's] "speech is intelligible with careful listening. The errors are atypical for students and peers his age". The report also shares, "[The student] shows strong skills in [their] expressive and receptive language by using appropriate grammar skills and understanding concepts. [The student] follows classroom directions and participates in classroom activities. There are no concerns regarding [the student's] ability to use language appropriately at this time".

A Neuropsychological evaluation was conducted on March 11, 2025 and summarizes the following, "[The student's] developmental history and clinical profile of deficits in fundamental reading/written expression skills such as sight word reading, timed/untimed phonetic decoding, and spelling skills also supports his diagnosis of dyslexia, which is also known as specific learning disorder with impairments in reading and written expression. [The student's] clinical profile of deficits in aspects of fine motor speed/dexterity, graphomotor coordination, visual-motor integration, and parent-rated motor skills also supports [the student's] diagnosis of dysgraphia, which is also known as specific learning disorder with impairment in written expression".

Issues Investigated

Based on the written complaint and an interview with the complainant, two concerns which fall under IDEA regulations were identified and investigated.

Issue One

Did USD #402 consider and respond to the parent's request for a reevaluation on March 12, 2025?

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.503(a)(2) states that prior written notice needs to be provided to the parents of a child with a disability a reasonable time before the public agency proposes or refuses to initiate or change the identification, evaluation, or educational placement of the child or the provision of FAPE to the child.

K.A.R. 91-40-8 (c)(1)(A-C). Evaluations. (c) As a part of an initial evaluation, if appropriate, and as a part of any reevaluation, each agency shall ensure that members of an appropriate IEP team for the child and other qualified professionals, as appropriate, comply with the following requirements: (1) The evaluation team shall review existing evaluation data on the child, including the following information: (A) Evaluations and information provided by the parent of the child; (B) current classroom-based, local, and state assessments and classroom-based observations; and (C) observations by teachers and related services providers. (2) On the basis of that review and input from the child's parent, the evaluation team shall identify what additional data, if any, is needed to determine the following matters: (D) whether, in the case of a reevaluation of the child, any additions or modifications to the special education and related services currently being provided to the child are needed to enable the child to meet the measurable annual goals set out in the IEP of the child and to participate, as appropriate, in the general education curriculum. (d) The team described in subsection (c) may conduct its review without a meeting.

Parent Position

The parent states that, "On March 12, 2025, I formally requested a reevaluation of my child, [the student] due to concerns about reading and writing difficulties. The school denied this request on April 8, 2025, citing adequate classroom performance with accommodations and FastBridge scores (single data points), without considering the private neuropsychological evaluation diagnosing dyslexia and dysgraphia, and data that shows deficits and weaknesses that hinder his learning and success".

District Position

The district response dated April 24, 2025 states that, "In September 2024, the team conducted a triennial evaluation, completed with new standardized testing and not just a records review. [The student] was determined to still be eligible and in need of speech only services for an articulation error. [The student] currently receives speech services for an articulation delay (15 minutes, once a week). Per the evaluation report and subsequent progress reports, [the student] continues to show progress on their goals. [The student] has mastered many sounds through direct instruction and practice of placement in speech activities. Per the reevaluation report dated 9/17/24, [the student] shows strong skills in their expressive and receptive language with no concerns regarding [the student's] ability to use language appropriately".

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The following finding of facts is based upon a review of the documentation noted previously and interviews with all parties.

1. According to the district response on April 24, 2025, "Per the current IEP (9/17/24) that was agreed upon by the entire team, including the parent, there are no concerns with [the student's] general intelligence, health, social emotional, motor skills, math skills, reading skills, written language skills or adaptive skills. Additionally, both grades and assessments (both formal and informal) reflect grade level skills and appropriate academic and social progress. Data points include overall grades, Fastbridge scores, Accelerated Reading scores and teacher input."
2. An email from the classroom teacher to the parent on September 20, 2024 notes five academic concerns;
    a. Lack of one to one correspondence while counting using models.
    b. Lack of one to one correspondence counting on fingers or without.
    c. Unable to skip count.
    d. Inability to write sentences/phrases the same way they are spoken.
    e. Repeating phrases back to me audibly is also a struggle, as [the student] will mix the order of words into something nonsensical.
3. A neuropsychological evaluation conducted on March 11, 2025 suggested a number of academic recommendations which include:
    a. "[The student's] diagnosis of dyslexia/specific learning disorder with impairments in reading and written expression will significantly hinder [their] reading fluency/comprehension for connected texts, spelling, and written expression. In fact, [the student] performed at the level of most students in first or second grade on current measures of sight word reading, phonetic decoding, and spelling skills. Therefore, [the student's] parents should share a copy of this report along with a written request for an Individualized Education Program (IEP) evaluation with a designated educator.
    b. Since the IDEA as well as Kansas statute (K.S.A. 2022 Supp. 72-3404) and regulations recognize dyslexia as a disability as stated within the definition of Specific Learning Disability (SLD), [the student] should qualify for future IEP services through the SLD exceptionality.
    c. To guide special education services for [the student], his future IEP evaluation should include a comprehensive assessment of [the student's] reading fluency/comprehension for connected texts, written expression, and applied math reasoning, which was beyond the scope of the current evaluation.

   d. [The student's] future IEP services should include dyslexia interventions from a reading intervention specialist at school.
   e. Due to [the student's] diagnosis of dysgraphia, which is also known as a specific learning disorder with impairment in written expression, [the student's] future IEP evaluation should include an occupational therapy assessment to determine [the student's] eligibility for therapeutic interventions at school.
   f. Due to previously documented deficits in speech articulation, [the student] should continue to receive school-based speech therapy through the Speech Impairment exceptionality".

4. Additionally, the evaluation report offered suggestions related to:
   a. Working memory and verbal fluency.
   b. Accommodations and modifications to support the evaluation's diagnosis of dyslexia and dysgraphia as well as suspicions of attention-deficit/hyperactivity disorder (ADHD).
   c. There were additional suggestions related to the student's "clinically significant concerns with [the student's] global independent living skills as well as moderate concerns with [the student's] withdrawal.
5. The parent emailed the school psychologist, principal and classroom teacher requesting a reevaluation on March 12, 2025
6. The school psychologist replied to the parent acknowledging the reevaluation request on March 15, 2025
7. The parent emailed the neuropsychologist's report to the school psychologist, principal and classroom teacher on March 15, 2025
8. The parent and school psychologist had a phone call on April 4, 2025 to discuss the parent's reevaluation request where according to the school psychologist in an email to the investigator, "I initiated the phone call in order to share with [the parent] the information I had collected from the school staff regarding [the student's] academic performance and progress, and to see what special education services [the parent] saw as necessary for [the student]. We talked a bit about what special education services are, and what information the school considers when determining if an evaluation is appropriate. We talked about differing views (between the school and [the parent]) of how [the student] is performing in school and in how much support/interventions [the student] needs to progress academically".
9. The parent emailed the school psychologist, principal and classroom teacher asking about the status of the reevaluation request, dated April 7, 2025
10. The school psychologist replied to the parent with the PWN refusing a reevaluation dated April 8, 2025 at 11:07 a.m. stating, "As we discussed in our phone conversation Friday, I visited with [the classroom teacher] and [principal], as well as [the special education teacher], about [the student's] academic performance and progress. I have attached the school's response to your request for a re-evaluation to this email."

11. The April 8, 2025 PWN refusing the reevaluation included the following justifications:
    a. The [student's] current math grade is 94% (first quarter was 83%, second quarter was 88%);
    b. Current language grade is 91% (first quarter was 94%, second quarter was 88%).
    c. Fall and winter Fastbridge scores (national percentile ranking) for this school year are all within the Average or Above Average range: CBMR-English (fall = 50th, winter = 49th), aReading (fall = 62nd, winter = 84th), AUTO L3 GOM (fall = 67th, winter = 30th), aMath (fall = 59th, winter = 76th).
    d. "In the Accelerated Reading Program, [the student] has read 97 books this school year with an average book reading level of 3.6 with 87% accuracy (class average accuracy is 85%)."
    e. "[The student] has never been referred to the general education Intervention team; [the student] demonstrates grade level achievement skills and adequate progress. According to [the student's] teacher, [the student] receives general education classroom intervention as needed, and [they have] responded to these interventions positively by demonstrating adequate progress."

35. In the district interview with the investigator on May 7, 2025 when asked about why data from the neuropsychological evaluation was not included in the April 8, 2025 PWN refusing a reevaluation, the school psychologist replied, "Our job was to clarify the school's perspective and include the school data, everyone else had the new evaluation report. I used the PWN to clarify our data and our response."
36. In an email exchange with the classroom teacher on May 8, 2025 when asked if he was consulted in the consideration of a reevaluation in light of the neuropsychological's evaluation report he replied that he was part of team meetings regarding the parent's request for a reevaluation. He had received the outside evaluation report and as a school team they discussed the results in full. He shared, "I was asked for my read on [the student] and gave my answers. [The student] is thriving in a regular ed setting, with minor interventions we would give for any kid showing specific struggles. I'm very data driven when we talk about whether a student is growing, focused on growth rather than benchmarks (but there's a place for both). I've never been one to rest on my laurels and say '[their] doing great, no matter what the data says.' I'll share the spreadsheet I put together for [the parent] showing fall-spring growth in all four of our Fastbridge tests. I'm finishing my 20th year, and I'd like to say I can spy kids who need real services, and kids who can thrive with a little extra attention. [The student] is a kid who just needed a little bit of attention."
37. Additionally, in the May 8, 2025 email exchange with the classroom teacher when asked about the academic concerns shared with the parent on September 20, 2024 he replied, "I feel [student] has moved past those specific concerns. [Student] was showing some error patterns I picked up on, and were a bit concerning. I didn't do anything for [the student] I wouldn't do for any kid when I see a pattern; pointed intervention, extra guidance, share info with parents, and specific practice. [The student] responded quickly to any and all intervention". The teacher also shared a table of the student's Fastbridge scores for fall, winter and spring for the 2024-2025 school year, all of which showed steady increases across the school year.

Conclusion

The outside neuropsychological evaluation diagnosed dyslexia and dysgraphia for the student. The evaluation report also stated, "[the student's] parents should share a copy of this report along with a written request for an Individualized Education Program (IEP) evaluation with a designated educator". The parent shared the outside evaluation report with the district and requested a reevaluation based on the recommendations in the report. According to IDEA a parent may request a reevaluation of their child's eligibility at any time.

When a parent initiates an outside evaluation and shares the results with the district that the results must be considered by the district; it does not require that this consideration take place during an IEP meeting. 34 C.F.R. 300.502 (c)(1), states, "c. Parent-initiated evaluations. If the parent obtains an independent educational evaluation at public expense or shares with the public agency an evaluation obtained at private expense, the results of the evaluation—(1) Must be considered by the public agency, if it meets agency criteria, in any decision made with respect to the provision of FAPE to the child;."

In this case, the district produced evidence that the results of the parent initiated outside evaluation were considered by the district team. This consideration included the outside evaluation results, the student's current performance in the classroom and the student's district assessment performance. After considering all of the relevant information, a PWN was issued within the timeframe established by IDEA and included the required information.

It is also noted that the district attempted to meet with the parent to discuss the refusal of the reevaluation and consideration of the new diagnoses as reflected in numerous email exchanges.

During the investigation, it was also noted that the parent requested a IEE on April 11, 2025 to which the district replied with a PWN refusing the IEE on April 14, 2025. The district stated in an April 11, 2025 email to the parent, "The independent education evaluation, or IEE, is only triggered by disagreeing with the evaluation itself, not the [district's] decision to refuse an evaluation".

The district's response of a PWN refusing the IEE was not in accordance with IDEA 34 C.F.R. 300.502(b)(2)(i-ii), "(b)(2) If a parent requests an independent educational evaluation at public expense, the public agency must, without unnecessary delay, either—(i) File a due process complaint to request a hearing to show that its evaluation is appropriate; or (ii) Ensure that an independent educational evaluation is provided at public expense,". Additionally, 34 C.F.R. 300.502(b)(4) states that the district may not require the parent to provide an explanation for the request. Therefore the reason for the requested IEE is not relevant to the manner in which the district is required to respond. The district should have responded to the parent's request for an IEE with the filing of a due process complaint to request a hearing to show that its evaluation is appropriate, or conducted the IEE.

Based on the foregoing, The district is IN compliance for Issue One, however the district is out of compliance for their response to the IEE and corrective actions are required to address the district's response to the parent's request for an IEE.

Issue Two

Did USD #402 amend the student's record to correct the information in a PWN issued on April 8, 2025 upon parent request or notify the parent of the refusal?

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.618. Amendment of records at parent's request. (a) A parent who believes that information in the education records collected, maintained, or used under this part is inaccurate or misleading or violates the privacy or other rights of the child may request the participating agency that maintains the information to amend the information. (b) The agency shall decide whether to amend the information in accordance with the request within a reasonable period of time of receipt of the request. (c) If the agency decides to refuse to amend the information in accordance with the request, it shall inform the parent of the refusal and advise the parent of the right to a hearing under Sec. 300.619.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.619 Opportunity for a hearing. The agency must, on request, provide an opportunity for a hearing to challenge information in education records to ensure that it is not inaccurate, misleading, or otherwise in violation of the privacy or other rights of the child.

Parent Position

The parent complaint states, "The Prior Written Notice dated April 8, 2025, inaccurately stated that I requested para support and services for potential future needs, which I did not. The Prior Written Notice also mentions that data was used from the neuropsychologist evaluation, but there is no data shown to support that. My input and concerns were not heard or taken into account".

District Position

The district response dated April 24, 2025 states, "On April 8, 2025, the parent stated in an email: 'Your PWN is not accurate. I never said nor do I believe [the student] needs para support; I do believe [the student] needs support now and in the future. You misunderstood our phone conversation.' The team did not see this as a request to amend the record.'" Additionally, in reference to the parent's assertion that there was no specific data from the outside evaluation included in the PWN, the school psychologist shared in an interview with the investigator on May 7, 2025 , "I used the PWN to clarify our data and our response."

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The following finding of facts is based upon a review of the documentation noted previously and interviews with all parties. The findings of Issue One are incorporated herein by reference.

1. April 8, 2025 at 12:12 p.m. the parent emailed the school psychologist, principal and classroom teacher stating the PWN refusing the reevaluation sent on April 8, 2025 was not an accurate reflection of the April 4, 2025 phone conversation between the parent and school psychologist. The parent states, "Your PWN is not accurate. I never said nor do I believe [the student] needs para support; I do believe [the student] needs support now and in the future. You have misunderstood our phone conversation".

2. April 8, 2025 at 12:27 p.m. the parent followed up with another email pointing out additional inaccuracies related to the student's early development stated in the PWN dated April 8, 2025.
3. The parent sent an email to the assistant director, assistant superintendent, principal and school psychologist again noting the incorrect information in the April 8, 2025 PWN, including, "And just to reiterate, I did not say [the student] needs para support, nor did I say [they need] an IEP to address needs that may arise later". In this email the parent also confirmed their availability to meet to discuss the PWN and clarify their request to see data from the neuropsychological evaluation in the April 8, 2025 refusal PWN, sent April 11, 2025.
4. The parent replied to an email from the district stating that an in person meeting or mediation may not be the next best step. The parent asked for the criteria for an IEE and how to get concerns about the inaccuracies in the April 8, 2025 PWN resolved, sent April 18, 2025.
5. Reply from the assistant director stating that the IEE question was answered in the PWN issued on April 14, 2025 and asking specifically what the parent would like amended in the April 8, 2025 PWN, sent April 21, 2025.
6. The school psychologist sent an email to the parent stating, "Based on your statement in an email on April 18, 2025, 'How do I get my concerns and input accurately reflected in the PWN as the current PWN is a misrepresentation,' we are considering that a request to amend a record. We did request clarification on what you wanted changed on April 21, 2025. You did not respond to that request but did email stating you had filed a formal complaint. Attached is a Prior Written Notice outlining the district's refusal to change the Prior Written Notice dated April 8, 2025", sent April 24, 2025 at 3:24 p.m.
7. Reply from the parent stating, "Unfortunately, this [the details in the PWN] again is inaccurate according to our one short phone conversation, which was so that you could clarify information with [the student's] teacher before getting back to me, which didn't happen, and our previous emails". Sent April 24, 2025 at 4:11p.m.
8. The assistant director responded to the parent's email with the following, "This is false as we attempted several times to schedule in person meetings in order to address your concerns which you have refused. I offered to sign the Mediation form, but you refused. It is clear that email correspondence isn't working, and you refuse to meet with us in person, so at this point we will no longer be replying to these emails and will await the outcome of the investigation", sent April 24, 2025 at 4:43 p.m.
9. The parent sent and email on April 25, 2025, at 9:31a.m., to the school psychologist to clarify what they would like amended in the April 8, 2025 PWN which included:
    a. "I did not request para support.

b. I did not suggest services be added to address needs that 'might arise later.'
c. My concerns are and continue to be based on the comprehensive neuropsychological evaluation provided by [the outside neuropsychologist] which identifies [the student's] diagnosis of dyslexia and dysgraphia and documents current, ongoing needs, not hypothetical or future ones.
d. My concerns are and continue to be the information provided by communication in person and by email from [the student's] teacher, regarding [the student's] struggles in the classroom and the assistance [they are] being provided.
e. My concerns are that [the student] currently has a Speech IEP, and it states that "[the student's] articulation delay makes [the student] difficult to understand at times in the regular education setting. It is also affecting [their] ability to read and write (spelling is a bit difficult)."
f. My concerns are that my [child] is struggling due to [the student's] disabilities, and they are creating daily challenges to keep up with [their] peers.
g. I request that the PWN be amended to:
    i. Remove any statement suggesting I requested para support or future-focused services.
    ii. Accurately states my actual concerns."

10. The director sent an email to the parent confirming that the parent's requested amendments to the April 8, 2025 PWN have "been uploaded as an educational record in WebKIDSS", sent April 25, 2025 at 12:22 p.m. It is noted that the amendments saved as an educational record was the email sent by the parent on April 25, 2025, at 9:31a.m., thus ensuring that the parent's request was honored, word-for-word.

Conclusion

IDEA requires that when a request to amend their child's education record is issued, the district is responsible to respond to that request with an amendment or refusal to amend and offer a hearing, within a reasonable period of time.

IDEA regulations for amending records at a parent's request (34 C.F.R. 300.618(a)(b)(c)) state, "(a) A parent who believes that information in the education records collected, maintained, or used under this part is inaccurate or misleading or violates the privacy or other rights of the child may request the participating agency that maintains the information to amend the information. (b) The agency shall decide whether to amend the information in accordance with the request within a reasonable period of time of receipt of the request. (c) If the agency decides to refuse to amend the information in accordance with the request, it shall inform the parent of the refusal and advise the parent of the right to a hearing under Sec. 300.619."

In this case, the parent pointed out the misunderstandings reflected in the April 8, 2025 PWN in an email that same day and reiterated her concern about the inaccuracies in the PWN on April 11 and April 18, 2025. The district acknowledged the parent's request to have records amended in an April 18, 20205 email. The district asked for clarification of the parents requested corrections on April 21, 2025 and the parent replied with an email notifying the district that she had filed a formal complaint. The district responded with a PWN on April 24, 2025 refusing to amend the details of the April 8, 2025 PWN. The parent responded with an email on April 25, 2025 clarifying the requested corrections and on April 25, 2025 the director confirmed with the parent that the requested amendments were uploaded as part of the student's educational record.

In this case, the parent notified the district of their request to have the April 8, 2025 PWN details corrected on April 18, 2025 and the district responded with a PWN refusing to amend on April 24, 2025. The district informed the parent of the refusal but did not advise the parent of the right to a hearing.

It is noted that the records were in fact amended by the district on April 25, 2025, exactly as the parent requested. But nonetheless, the district failed to advise the parent of the right to a hearing along with the PWN refusing to amend records on April 24, 2025.

Based on the foregoing, it is found that the district did not follow the process required by IDEA to address requests for amendments of records. The district is NOT in compliance and corrective actions are required.

Summary of Conclusions/Corrective Action

1. ISSUE ONE: A violation of 34 C.F.R. 300.503(a)(2) and K.A.R. 91-40-8 (c)(1)(A-C) was not found based on the district's consideration and appropriate PWN response to the parent's request for a reevaluation. Corrective action is not required.

In the Matter of the Appeal of the Report
Issued in Response to a Complaint Filed
Against Unified School District No. 402
Augusta Public Schools: 25FC402-003

DECISION OF THE APPEAL COMMITTEE

Background

This matter commenced with the filing of a complaint on April 22, 2025, by ------- on behalf of her child, -------. In the remainder of this decision, ------- will be referred to as "the parent," and ------- will be referred to as "the student." An investigation of the complaint was undertaken by a complaint investigator on behalf of the Special Education, and Title Services team at the Kansas State Department of Education. Following the investigation, a Complaint Report, addressing the allegations, was issued on May 22, 2025. That Complaint Report concluded that there were violations of special education statutes and regulations

Thereafter, the district filed an appeal of the Complaint Report. Upon receipt of the appeal, an appeal committee was appointed and it reviewed the original complaint filed by the parent, the Complaint Report, the district's notice of appeal, and the parent's response to the appeal. The Appeal Committee has reviewed the information provided in connection with this matter and now issues this Appeal Decision.

Preliminary Matters

A copy of the regulation regarding the filing of an appeal [K.A.R. 91-40-51(f)] was attached to the Complaint Report. That regulation states, in part, that: "Each notice shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect." Accordingly, the burden for supplying a sufficient basis for appeal is on the party submitting the appeal. When a party submits an appeal and makes statements in the notice of appeal without support, the Committee does not attempt to locate the missing support.

No new issues will be decided by the Appeal Committee. The appeal process is a review of the Complaint Report. The Appeal Committee does not conduct a separate investigation. The appeal committee's function will be to determine whether sufficient evidence exists to support the findings and conclusions in the Complaint Report.

Discussion of Issues on Appeal

From Parents

The report identified two issues, and concluded that the district failed to comply with legal requirements related to each of the two issues.

Issue One

Did USD #402 consider and respond to the parent's request for a reevaluation on March 12, 2025?

The investigator concluded that the district properly responded to the request for a reevaluation, stating that: "After considering all of the relevant information, a PWN was issued within the timeframe established by IDEA and included the required information." However, as the investigator proceeded with the investigation, the evidence presented to her led her to conclude that the district acted contrary to law on a separate matter that was not alleged in the complaint. It is this separate matter that the district appeals.

The Appeal Committee notes that federal regulation 34 C.F.R. 300.600(d) places a "general supervision" responsibility on state departments of education to monitor compliance of their schools with law. Under this general supervision requirement, a state department of education cannot ignore clear indications of a district's failure to comply with law. When an investigator discovers, during an investigation, that the district has failed to comply with law, even when said violation was not alleged in the complaint, the investigator must either address that issue in the report or otherwise notify the state department of education of the violation. When an investigator finds an apparent violation that was not alleged in the complaint, that will be addressed in the investigation, the investigator should notify the school district of the additional issue. That provides the district with the opportunity to respond to the new allegation, as required by 34 C.F.R. 300.152(a)(3).

In this instance, the investigator apparently did not notify the district of the additional issue, which prevented the district from submitting a response to the new allegation during the investigation. The appeal process, however, does provide the district with the opportunity to respond to new allegations discovered, and addressed, in a complaint investigation. With this appeal, the district has exercised that right to respond to the separate allegation and the Appeal Committee will give the district's response a full consideration.

The additional allegation under appeal is whether the district's refusal to conduct an Independent Educational Evaluation (IEE) was a violation of law.

The pertinent facts are presented in the report's findings of fact, as follows:

1. 10. Email from parent to the school psychologist, principal and classroom teacher requesting a reevaluation, dated March 12, 2025 (Report, p. 2)
2. 15. Email from the school psychologist to the parent with the PWN refusing a reevaluation, dated April 8, 2025 at 11:07 a.m. (Report, p. 3).
3. 30. Email from parent to assistant director, assistant superintendent, principal and school psychologist requesting an independent education evaluation at public expense (IEE), sent April 11, 2025 at 2:03 p.m.
4. 36. PWN refusing to conduct an IEE, dated April 14, 2025

In short, the investigator found that the parents requested an IEE and the district responded with a PWN refusing that request. The investigator concluded that this interaction was in violation of federal regulation 34 C.F.R. 300.502(b)(2) that says:

> If a parent requests an independent educational evaluation at public expense*, the public agency* must*, without unnecessary delay,* either*—*
> (i) File a due process complaint to request a hearing to show that its evaluation is appropriate; or > (ii) Ensure that an independent educational evaluation is provided at public expense…

The investigator correctly noted that the district did not do either. Instead, the district chose a third option, to deny the request for an IEE. That option, the investigator concluded, was not legally available to the district.

In its appeal of this issue, the district first asserts that the district had already considered the IEE the parent had obtained privately. With regard to evaluations obtained at parent expense, however, the pertinent regulation (see above) does not apply. The pertinent regulation applies only to requests for an IEE at "public" expense.

Secondly, the district asserts that a parent has a right to an IEE at public expense only when the parent disagrees with the current evaluation and that this parent had no disagreement with the current evaluation. the pertinent regulation is 34 C.F.R. 300.502(b)(1), which says:

> A parent has the right to an independent educational evaluation at public expense if the parent disagrees with an evaluation obtained by the public agency (emphasis added),

The district correctly notes that the parent must disagree with the current evaluation in order to have a right to an IEE. Courts have noted that an IEE is not available when no evaluation has been conducted because then there is nothing to disagree with M.S. v. Hillsborough Township Public School District, 75 IDELR 212 (3rd. Cir. 2019), or, when a district has already provided an IEE and the parent has requested another IEE to contest the same evaluation, because parents are entitled to only one IEE per evaluation Alex W. v. Poudre Sch. Dist., 124 LRP 7692 (10th Cir. 2024).

Neither of these court approved exceptions apply in this situation. Here there is an existing evaluation and the parent is making the first request for an IEE under this evaluation. Moreover, federal regulations, at 34 C.F.R. 300.502(b)(4), say that a district may ask why the parent disagrees with an evaluation, but may not require an explanation. So the fact that the parent did not explain what part of the existing evaluation she disagrees with does not mean she agrees. The parent is not, under this regulation, obligated to provide an explanation of her disagreement.

This parent obtained her own private independent evaluation which indicated a diagnosis of dyslexia and dysgraphia, neither of which were considered in the most recent school evaluation. On the basis of the conclusions in that private evaluation, the parent requested a reevaluation regarding her child's reading difficulties. It is clear to the Appeal Committee that the parent requested a reevaluation because she disagreed with the most recent district evaluation, which according to district personnel indicated "there were no concerns with" the student's reading skills (see, finding of fact 1 on p. 8 of report).

The Appeal Committee finds that the investigator's conclusion that a violation occurred when the district refused the parent's request for an IEE at public expense without initiating a due process hearing should be, and is, sustained.

Issue Two

Did USD #402 amend the student's record to correct the information in a PWN issued on April 8, 2025 upon parent request or notify the parent of the refusal?

The district's appeal on this issue asserts that: (1) the district attempted to meet with the parent, but the parent refused to meet; (2) on April 18, 2025, the district provided a copy of the Parent's Rights with the PWN notifying the parent of its refusal to amend the record; and (3) the district's refusal to amend the record was due to the parent's failing to give sufficient details about what she wanted amended and upon receiving those details the records were amended as requested.

Even accepting all of these district statements in this appeal as true, the district still did not comply with the law. The complaint investigator did not find that the district failed to respond to the parent's request to amend records in a timely or inadequate manner. The conclusion of the investigator was that, on April 24, 2025, the district gave the parent a PWN refusing to make amendments to the students records, but that PWN did not advise the parent of the right to a hearing.

The district's appeal does not address this conclusion.

The relevant regulation is 34 C.F.R. 300.618. The investigator cited this regulation in her conclusion on this issue, on page 20 of the report. The relevant portion of this regulation is section (c), which says:

> (c) If the agency decides to refuse to amend the information in accordance with the request, it shall inform the parent of the refusal and advise the parent of the right to a hearing under Sec. 300.619."

It is not enough to simply give parents a copy of the parent's rights document. This regulation clearly requires a district that refuses a parent's request to amend an education record, to also advise the parent of a specific right, the right to a hearing. The district did not provide that information with its April 24, 2025 PWN refusing to make amendments to the students records.

Subsequent events corrected this error, but the investigator was correct to conclude that the error occurred. This was a procedural error, and the corrective actions ordered in connection with this error reflect the concerns of the investigator regarding the non-compliant procedure the district used to process the parent's request to amend the student's records.

Sufficient evidence exists to support the findings and conclusions in the Complaint Report regarding this issue. Therefore, the conclusion in the report that a violation of law occurred with regard to this issue is sustained.

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #500, KANSAS CITY PUBLIC SCHOOLS
ON APRIL 11, 2025

DATE OF REPORT: MAY 21, 2025

This report is in response to a systemic complaint filed with the Kansas State Department of Education against USD #500 Kansas City Public Schools on behalf of 140 eighth grade students with IEPs transitioning to high school, by a special education teacher in the district, -------. In the remainder of this report, these eighth grade students will be referred to as "the students." ------- will be referred to as "the Complainant."

This complaint is made against the USD #500, Kansas City Public Schools and in the remainder of the report, USD #500 will be referred to as "the district." The Wyandotte Comprehensive Special Education Cooperative provides special education support for the district; however, the USD #500, Kansas City Public Schools, remains the agency responsible for the student's educational services. In the remainder of the report, will be referred to as "the coop."

Mr. Wesley Rush is the High School Special Education Coordinator and in the remainder of the report will be referred to as the "High School Special Education Coordinator." Dr. Ja'Kyta Lawrie is the Executive Director of Special Education of the Wyandotte Comprehensive Special Education Cooperative and in the remainder of this report will be referred to as the "Director of Special Education." According to an excel spread sheet provided by the district 140 eighth graders receiving special education services were transitioning to ninth grade from seven middle schools to four high schools. As these special education documents were reviewed for district practices, the student's identities were not recorded nor were the parents notified as part of the investigation.

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) allows for a 30-day timeline to investigate a complaint from the date in which it was filed. A complaint is considered filed on the date in which it was received by KSDE. In this case, the KSDE initially received the complaint on April 11, 2025 and the 30-day timeline ended on May 11, 2025. The Investigator subsequently requested an extension to gather additional evidence and conduct more interviews, and the end date was revised to May 21.

The Investigator first spoke with the Complainant by phone on April 13, 2025 and later interviewed the Complainant on May 10, 2025. The Investigator interviewed the High School Special Education Coordinator on May 1, 2025 and spoke with the Director of Special Education on May 5, 2025 and May 12, 2025. The Investigator interviewed Karen Dickerson, a retired special educator for the district who is currently serving as a paraeducator on May 10, 2025 and Amy Perry, an 8th grade special education case manager on May 13, 2025. Additional persons were recommended for interview by the Complainant, but did not respond.

Background Information

The district procedures for amending service minutes and settings for the IEPs of 8th grade students transitioning to high school and involving parents in the process was guided by a transition meeting occurring during the spring of 2025. The guidelines provided by the district in writing and verbally during the 2024-2025 school year were perceived to contradict IDEA regulations and differed from those used in past years. Especially of concern was the Complainant's concern that the 8th grade case managers were instructed to discontinue collaborative services in social studies and science by the district rather than through the IEP team.

Issues Investigated

Issue One

Did the district follow IDEA procedures according to 34 C.F.R. §§300.324(a)(4)(i) and 300.324(a)(4)(ii) when directing middle school special education case managers to amend all IEPs for students transitioning to high school in regard to collaborative service minutes?

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §§300.324(a)(4)(i) and 300.324(a)(4)(ii) allow school districts to amend or modify the child's current IEP if the parents and school district agree to not convene the IEP team when making changes to a child's IEP after the annual IEP Team meeting for a school year. Further, if changes are made to the child's IEP with an agreement to amend or modify the child's IEP without an IEP team meeting the school district must ensure that the child's IEP team is informed of those changes.

Further, Kansas state statute, K.S.A. 72-3404(aa) states that a substantial change in placement means the movement of an exceptional child, for more than 25% of the child's school day, from a less restrictive environment to a more restrictive environment or from a more restrictive environment to a less restrictive environment and K.S.A. 72-3404(bb) states a material change in services means an increase or decrease of 25% or more of the duration or frequency of a special education service, a related service, or a supplementary aid or a service specified on the IEP of an exceptional child. K.S.A. 72-3430(b)(6) then states that the parents of exceptional children shall have the right to consent, or refuse to consent to any substantial change in placement of, or a material change in services.

Complainant Position

The Complainant alleged that the district is "directing Middle School Special Education Case Managers to amend all IEPs for students transitioning to high school by removing collaborate service minutes except in Math and English." A transition meeting was held on March 26, 2025 and included all middle school and high school case managers. A handout was provided to the Middle School Case Managers stating what minutes could be given for High School Students. "At this time the High School SPED Coordinator stood up and stated that there is no support in science, social studies, or anything but math and English at the High School level." On April 9, 2025 the [High School Special Education Coordinator] sent an email to all case managers again stating for Science and History, students receive supports through accommodations and modifications. If high school IEP team determines that these accommodations are not sufficient to support the student, they will review academic and behavioral data to consider any necessary changes in placement."

District Position

The district responded that they were not requesting the case managers to eliminate service minutes in exchange for accommodations or modifications. Instead, they were asking the case managers to specify instructional skills such as reading comprehension or written expression for the Special Education service minutes. They state that this was aligned with KSDE guidance as it appeared in TASN training materials. The district further stated that in all cases when these refinements were made an amendment and prior written notice was written and parents offered an IEP meeting. The district stated they were unable to find any specific communications where the district directed any middle school special education case manager to amend all IEPs for students transitioning to high school regarding collaborative minutes. They continue that most IEP transition amendments or services were addressed during the annual IEP meeting and most did not require many amendments for high school and the ones that did require amendments had a slight increase in collaborative services due to adjusting to the high school bell schedule. They state that the Complainant left the meeting prior to listening to the full explanation and that led to the complaint. Although they acknowledge that the emails may have appeared misleading they have followed up with case managers who are responsible for amending the IEPs of these 8th graders and the case managers understand what they are being asked to do.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

1. According to an excel spread sheet titled, Transition IEPs Amendments provided by the district 140 eighth graders receiving special education services were transitioning to ninth grade from seven middle schools to four high schools. Of those 140 students, 66 of their IEPs were amended at the time of the investigation. Forty-six of the IEPs were amended in April after the all-district transition meeting and twenty of the IEPs were amended in March prior to the all-district transition meeting. The remaining IEPs indicated the IEP had been unlocked by administration for an amendment, but the amendment had not been made yet. By way of explanation, the allegation was that the amendments were not made correctly, not that the amendments had not been made so only the 66 IEPs with amendments were considered during this investigation.
2. The 2024-2025 Special Education Case Manager Handbook, page 47 states that IEP Amendments between annual IEP's always require a PWN at transition meetings between 8th and 9th grade.
3. The 2024-2025 Special Education Case Manager Handbook, page 64 explains how case managers write IEP services into the district's IEP program. The case manager select a service such as special education (SE) or transportation (T) services. For special education, the case manager and further specifies the skill from a Drop-Down menu for reading fluency, written expression, reading comprehension, math calculation, etc. The case manager then selects the setting as collaborative (C), or direct instruction (G). The Director of Special Education described that the service page for a student enrolled in a general education class (ELA, math, history, science, etc.) that is co-taught by a general education content teacher and special education teacher in a general education classroom with both special and general education students would select special education (SE) for the service, select the skills based on the student's present levels and needs and the setting would be coded as C for Collaborative. Conversely a student enrolled in an ELA or math class with a special education teacher in a special education classroom with only other special education students would be assigned SE for special education and the setting would be coded G for Direct Instruction. The Director of Special Education, Complainant and 8th grade special education case manager agreed that special education teachers at the middle and high schools do not teach science or history classes only for special education student enrollment.

4. The class schedule for the school where the Complainant is employed showed two co-taught science classes (hours 2 and 8) and two social studies classes (hours 3 and 4).
5. On March 10, 2025, a voice message and subsequent email was sent out to all special education staff regarding the district's internal transition event (held on March 26, 2025) to allow teachers time to discuss students' transitioning to a new building and grade level. On March 25, 2025, the Director of Special Education clarified that the internal transition event did not replace offering to hold an IEP amendment meeting with parents as part of amending the IEP services/placement due to the transition from 8th to 9th grade.
6. The March 25, 2026 email from the Director of Special Education to the attendees of the March 26, 2025 internal transition event stated, "This event does not take place of any IEP amendment transition meeting with parents that may need to take place, however, as always, once you have the information needed for the transition IEP amendment, and you contact the parent to discuss, if they are in agreement with what you plan to propose, you can complete the amendment process and send home PWN for the parents without holding a meeting. If there is not an agreement or if you feel that it is best to hold a formal IEP meeting to discuss transition, you will need to send a notice of meeting home to the parent and schedule an IEP meeting. Rather you as the case manager completes an amendment and send home PWN or hold a formal meeting, all IEP amendments for transitions are [district IEP software] by May 9, 2025"
7. At the district's internal transition event held March 26, 2025 the eighth grade teachers were asked to bring the student transition form and a copy of the current IEP (to review services, goals, accommodations, and placement) to the meeting. The ninth grade teachers were asked to bring the proposed number of special education minutes the student might receive in their new building (according to bell schedules). Ideas about appropriate grade-level accommodations and modifications that are used in some classes for specific needs and appropriate grade-level IEP goals, especially those related to reading, writing, and math, to review to discuss and adjust as needed. The email attached the coop's transition checklist and student transition form. The 8th grade special education case manager stated that this event was a change from past years. In the past these meetings were held via Zoom or Google Meetup and the parents and principals were invited.
8. The coop relied on two written documents to guide the discussion of the student, proposed IEP amendments and procedures of the internal transition event. First, the SPED Transition Express, a transition services checklist is signed by both the sending and receiving case managers. This checklist guides the case managers through a discussion of Fastbridge Assessment, services for skill areas, modifications and accommodations, related services, placement, behavior, goals, transportation, and any other areas, noting if amendments are needed. Also, the district's Parent Script for Building to Building Transition IEP Meetings has an agenda item to discuss "changes to the IEP that current case manager will need to complete (i.e., goals, accommodations/modifications, service minutes? (2-5 minutes)" The 8th grade special education case manager stated that the transition meetings often generated more information about each student as a learner, behaviors, social skills, and information beyond Fastbridge Assessment scores.

9. At the March 26, 2025 transition event the High School Special Education Coordinator reminded the attendees of some high school structures that may trigger an amendment, such as individual bell schedules, block schedules, etc. The special education ELA case manager had stated during the interview with the Investigation that middle schools had begun to adopt some of the high school structures to smooth transition. The High School Special Education Coordinator also reminded the attendees that the high school offered Direct Instruction classes (G setting) in Math and ELA, but not in Science and Social studies. The High School Special Education Coordinator then shared the bell schedule for high schools to guide the case managers to adjust service minutes for students who are in those classes bell to bell.
10. An April 1, 2025 Middle School Meeting was held to clarify teacher generated questions that arose from the March 26, 2026 transition event. This meeting was held for 30 minutes and attended by middle school special education teachers and facilitated by the High School Special Education Coordinator. One question submitted was, "they were told that collab services were not available for science and social studies, the teacher did not disclose who would have told them that, but [High School Special Education Coordinator] only response was about not adding class names (subjects) on the IEP and [High School Special Education Coordinator] would explain more about that at the meeting."
11. The Complainant emailed the Director of Special Education following the April 1, 2025 Middle School Meeting with the following concerns:

    > I wanted to follow up on several concerns from today's middle school SPED meeting, as they are causing confusion and inconsistency in our processes. 1. Prior Written Notice (PWN):]High School Special Education Coordinator] stated that we do not need to write a PWN for every IEP, despite this being part of the compliance checklist and past guidance indicating it is necessary. [High School Special Education Coordinator] mentioned KSDE does not require it and that [they] would address it with compliance if needed. Many of us are concerned, as this contradicts what we have always been told. Can you clarify the correct requirement? 2. Science and Social Studies Collaboration Minutes: We were told that we should not add collaboration minutes for science or social studies and should instead use accommodations. However, we have many students who require more individualized support beyond accommodations. How does this align with legal requirements and best practices? Has there been a policy change in [district] regarding this?

12. On April 1, 2025, the High School Special Education Coordinator clarified to the Director of Special Education that his guidance at the April 1, 2025 meeting included: "1. Prior Written Notice (PWN): I explained in detail when a PWN is required and supported the explanation with both a PowerPoint and the KSDE document. In addition, [district colleague] posted the PWN Guidelines in the chat during the meeting for quick reference. 2. Direct Services for Science and Social Studies: I clarified that at the high school level, we do not provide direct services in science and social studies. Instead, we support students through accommodations and modifications to address their individual needs. I gave an example: if a student struggles with reading, they may use text-to-speech software or receive oral administration of assessments. We have discussed in multiple coordinator meetings that case managers should not enter core content classes (e.g., Algebra or ELA) into the service lines. Instead, they should only list the areas the student qualifies in (e.g., reading comprehension or math problem-solving)." The High School Special Education Coordinator also wrote that the Complainant left the meeting early so may have missed the information.

13. On April 10, 2025, the Director of Special Education responded to the Complainant's concern regarding PWNs and science and social studies collaborative minutes that:

    1)...there is also a page in your case manager handbook that says when you need to have a PWN. 2) it has been discussed and shared that we do not write services minutes for any course/subjects, you must write minutes for there (sic) area the child qualifies for that's connected to a goal: example written expression, reading comprehension. You would not write a student need (sic) 20 minutes of services in any particular subject/class on an IEP. I also believe this is outlined in your case manager handbook as well, around service comments. Also remember, all students can get accommodations, if a student need more to access curriculum, you should also consider adding modifications needed.

14. The Director of Special Education clarified and confirmed in an email to the Investigator that Co-taught also known as Collab services can and are provided in science and social studies if needed for a student in any of our secondary buildings, including high school. The Master Schedule is created by the building administrator (or designee) and case managers of students make sure their students have correct schedules and service providers know what services on the IEP they are serving and which classes. This is a part of the expectations of case managers for the start of the school year, as outlined in the case managers handbook Page 21 – "Student verification process." Further, The document, titled, SPED Transition Express was provided to case managers for the March 26, 2025 internal transition event for the current and receiving case manager to discuss and document what specific classes would the services be provided in for any co-taught/collab based on the student and their needs, it was another resource and tool to make sure they address the needs of students and their services and which courses services are provided in. Case Managers at the high school would then be the ones to create their and the para schedule. That is typically done before students return to school, but after the report date for teachers and paras around the first full week of August.

15. An April 9, 2025 email from the High School Special Education Coordinator to the 8th grade special education case managers stated, "I've noticed that several of you are entering 80 minutes of G minutes, followed by additional C minutes for the same disability category. As explained during the transition meeting, service minutes at the high school level are provided within the student's ELA and Math classes through direct instruction. If a student is already receiving G minutes in those classes, there is no need to add additional C minutes. These extra minutes should be removed, as they will not be delivered once the student transitions to high school. Once the student transitions, if the high school team feels the student requires more intensive services, they will address that through the IEP team at that time. However, at this stage, we must only include minutes that reflect services that will be provided. To answer the most common follow-up in advance: Yes — students will be supported in Science and History through accommodations and modifications, not direct instruction." The 8th grade special education case manager understanding of this statement was that the student who previously was in a co-taught science or history class (general education and special education teacher in a general education) during middle school would not have access to a special education teacher or paraeducator for science or history in high school – only accommodations or modifications.

16. An April 9, 2025 email from the Complainant questioned the High School Special Education Coordinator, "I wanted to clarify whether collaborative services are not available for science and social studies classes at the high school level. If it is correct that, regardless of the level of support the IEP team believes is necessary, student can only receive accommodations and modifications in those subjects?" The High School Special Education Coordinator replied to the email, copying all 8th grade special education case managers stating "We are currently supporting students in all qualifying areas of need, including reading, reading comprehension, math calculation, and math problem solving. These services are provided within the Direct Instruction (DI) ELA and Math classrooms, which are 80-minutes blocks. This extended instructional time allows students the opportunity to receive targeted support not only for those core areas but also indirectly support their success in other classes. Its (sic) important to ensure that all students are receiving accommodations and modifications that support their individual needs. For Science and History, students receive support through accommodations and modifications, such as: Text-to-speech tools, Testing in a small group, Modified assignments, Teacher-provided notes, Tests read aloud. If the high school IEP team determines that these accommodations are not sufficient to support the student, they will review academic and behavioral data to consider any necessary changes in placement. As I previously shared in an email to all middle school case managers, if you feel a student may require Academic Support, I am more than willing to review the student's data to determine need based on objective performance and classroom information. Over the past two years, we have had several students transition to high school with Direct Instruction classes whose academic levels did not warrant that level of support. Many of these students have been successfully placed in collaborative classes and have shown strong academic progress, which raises a concern about the accuracy of middle school placements." The 8th grade special education case manager explained that Direct Instruction classes are 80 minutes blocks designed to work on IEP goals, including behavior, social skills, morphology, missing work, reteaching content, and extra practice.. They do not have a curriculum and are not guided by a lesson plans, but students are assigned a grade.

17. The district response clarified that there was likely a misunderstanding of the High School Special Education Coordinator information that likely contributed to the child complaint.

> This is where I found that what [High School Special Education Coordinator] was saying and what teacher(s) were doing/saying/asking were really two different things. [High School Special Education Coordinator] was coming from the lens of [their] high school and those direct services, academic support classes that is only offered at all the high schools and typically if those student were in those classes they usually did not have C minutes for the same areas of needs because they are getting it in the sped classroom for English and Math. I believe the teacher(s) were talking about something different so when [they] said to be sure to remove those C minutes and how that's written was to align to high school schedules. That's where I believe [they] could have better explained what [they were] thinking the middle school teachers were saying versus what [they] assumed they were saying. There was a level of confusion on both parts. Based on what [they] later responded to about "Yes students will be supported in Science and Social studies through accommodation and modifications", [they] shared that because there is no direct instruction course offered for Science and Social and students do receive support in those subjects through accommodation and modification, but [they] didn't say anything about a para or teacher could not be pushed in physically be in those classes and when the teachers were asking about science and social studies they were clear with about actually staff going into those classes. In my findings, this was miscommunication, misinterpretation and misunderstanding on both sides for assorted reasons.

20. Fifteen of the 140 students (approximately 10%) transitioning from 8th to 9th grade from the four middle schools were reviewed for presence of amendment and PWNs. Of those fifteen, four recorded the service changes between 8th and 9th grade as part of the annual IEP meetings. Each provided a PWN, of which three had signed parent consent and one did not have signed consent, but no material or substantial changes were proposed. The remaining 11 included completed amendments and a PWN documenting the transition decisions. Only one included a material change in service and included signed parent consent. Only one was not signed but did not propose a material or substantial change.
21. Seven additional students who were transitioning from 8th to 9th grade from the Complainant's middle school in co-taught science or social studies classes were selected for review from the school's class rosters for collab service minutes and PWNs for the change in services.

Conclusion

It is found that the district's written documents including the case manager procedural manual and training materials used to orient the special education case managers for transitioning the 8th graders to 9th grade are consistent with IDEA and state regulations for amending IEPs. Specifically, The Kansas State Department of Education Kansas Special Education Process Handbook (page 87) states that when the IEP team proposes to update or change the Statement of Special Education and Related Services and/or educational placement "between annual IEP reviews, if the parent and school representative agree, changes can be made without an IEP team meeting, by amending the IEP rather than by rewriting the entire IEP". "In amending a child's IEP, the parent of a child with an exceptionality and the school representative may agree not to convene an IEP team meeting for the purpose of making those changes, and instead may develop a written document to amend or modify the child's current IEP. There are no restrictions on the types of changes that may be made, so long as the parent and the school representative agree to make the changes without an IEP team meeting. If changes are made to the child's IEP without a meeting, the school must ensure that the child's IEP team is informed of those changes (K.S.A. 72 3429(b)(4)(B); 34 C.F.R. 300.324(a)(4))." Further, "Even when using the IEP amendment process, the school must provide Prior Written Notice of any changes in the IEP. If the changes in the IEP constitute a substantial change in placement or a material change in services, the school must request parent consent to implement the change."

Based on the review of evidence, interviews with all parties there were two factors that contributed to misunderstanding and consequently probably led, in part, to this complaint. First, as the Director of Special Education described in the district response, emails sent out to special education case managers on April 9, 2025 provided confusing and seemingly contradictory information about the process that is included in the case manager's procedural manual, transition checklist and training materials. Some of the emails sent to the case managers included descriptions of traditionally internal decision making that occurs when administrators determine how to meet the IEP needs of all incoming and present students with staff skills and logistics to develop class rosters. Further, the High School Special Education Coordinator stated relying on the aid of artificial intelligence (AI) to develop an email sent out to the special education case managers that proved to be confusing.

Second, it was determined that there was confusion between services, skills within services and setting on behalf of the Complainant as evidenced by the statement written in the systemic complaint dated April 10, 2025, "the district is directing Middle School Special Education Case Managers to amend all IEPs for students transitioning to high school by removing collaborative service minutes except in Math and English." In fact, all of the service minutes were special education (SE) service minutes, further described by a skill area (reading comprehension, etc.) and collaborative/ collaboration is a setting (C). Based on this it is found that the district followed federal and state regulations and their district procedures for amending the 8th grade student's IEP when transitioning to 9th grade in regard to eliminating collaboration minutes.

The next step of the investigation is to then determine if the district followed its practice when amending the 8th grade student IEPs grade in regard to eliminating collaboration minutes when transitioning to 9th grade. This was investigated in two ways. First approximately 10% of the transition amendments/PWNs for 8th graders with collaborative minutes were examined. In all cases the amendments and PWNs were accurately prepared and followed IDEA regulations and district procedures. The district had established a May 5, 2025 deadline for amendments to be completed. As the Investigator established an evidence collection deadline of April 25, 2025 the Investigator examined student documents that were completed after the training occurred, but did not include in the sample all of the records of students transitioning to 9th grade. Several of the schools had not amended any of the 8th grader's IEPs by April 25, 2025 so were not included in the investigation. In all cases it was found that the district had completed an amendment and PWN to record the service/placement changes of the 8th graders transitioning to 9th grade. Further, while changes in service minutes were discovered in the amendments, none showed a discontinuation of service minutes or services in a collab setting.

it is found that the district is IN compliance with following IDEA procedures when directing middle school special education case managers to amend all IEPs for students transitioning to high school in regard to collaborative service minutes.

Summary of Conclusions/Corrective Action

ISSUE ONE: A violation of 34 C.F.R. §§300.324(a)(4)(i) and 300.324(a)(4)(ii) was not found, based on the facts above. Corrective action is not required.

In the Matter of the Appeal of the Report
Issued in Response to a Complaint Filed April 11, 2025
Against Unified School District No. 500
Kansas City Public Schools: 25FC500-007

DECISION OF THE APPEAL COMMITTEE

Background

This matter commenced with the filing of a complaint on April 11, 2025, by -------, a special education teacher in the district, on behalf of eighth grade students receiving special education services and transitioning from middle school to high school. In the remainder of this decision, ------ will be referred to as "the complainant." An investigation of the complaint was undertaken by a complaint investigator on behalf of the Special Education, and Title Services team at the Kansas State Department of Education. Following the investigation, a Complaint Report, addressing the allegations, was issued on May 21, 2025. That Complaint Report concluded that there were no violations of special education statutes and regulations

Thereafter, the complainant filed an appeal of the Complaint Report. Upon receipt of the appeal, an appeal committee was appointed and it reviewed the original complaint filed by the complainant, the Complaint Report, and the complainant's notice of appeal. The district did not send a response to the appeal. The Appeal Committee has reviewed the information provided in connection with this matter and now issues this Appeal Decision.

Preliminary Matters

A copy of the regulation regarding the filing of an appeal [K.A.R. 91-40-51(f)] was attached to the Complaint Report. That regulation states, in part, that: "Each notice shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect." Accordingly, the burden for supplying a sufficient basis for appeal is on the party submitting the appeal. When a party submits an appeal and makes statements in the notice of appeal without support, the Committee does not attempt to locate the missing support.

No new issues will be decided by the Appeal Committee. The appeal process is a review of the Complaint Report. The Appeal Committee does not conduct a separate investigation. The appeal committee's function will be to determine whether sufficient evidence exists to support the findings and conclusions in the Complaint Report.

Discussion of Issues on Appeal

The report identified one issue, as follows:

Did the district follow IDEA procedures according to 34 C.F.R. §§300.324(a)(4)(i) and 300.324(a)(4)(ii) when directing middle school special education case managers to amend all IEPs for students transitioning to high school in regard to collaborative service minutes?

The investigator concluded that the district did properly follow IDEA procedures.

In her appeal, the complainant summarizes her position as follows:

> This complaint centers on whether service changes were made based on a blanket directive, rather than thoughtful, data-based decisions for each student. The implementation of a district-wide policy that effectively removes services, absent data or IEP team input, is a violation of IDEA's mandate to individualize education based on student needs.

Taken by itself, this summary statement is an accurate description of how "district-wide" policies to remove services without data or IEP team input are a violation of IDEA's mandate to individualize education based on student needs.

However, like many of the IDEA provisions, there are exceptions in the law. One such exception is federal regulation 34 C.F.R. 300.324(4), which the investigator cited on pages 5, 17 and 18 of the report. As described by the investigator, this regulation provides an alternative to the typical IEP process for changing IEP provisions after the annual IEP review. The text of this regulation is as follows:

> (4) Agreement. (i) In making changes to a child's IEP after the annual IEP Team meeting for a school year, the parent of a child with a disability and the public agency may agree not to convene an IEP Team meeting for the purposes of making those changes, and instead may develop a written document to amend or modify the child's current IEP. Emphasis added.

This provision involves only the "parent" and the "public agency," not the IEP team. There are no limitations on this provision with regard to a need to use data or IEP team input. The only limitation to using this process is agreement. The parents and district officials need only to agree to use this process to "amend or modify the child's current IEP," without IEP team involvement That can mean a parent and a school administrator may unilaterally modify an IEP without the use of any particular data or involvement of the IEP team. Indeed, one of the purposes of this provision is to enable the parties to settle disputes that arise in the IEP process by making it possible for a parent and a district administrator to make a final decision regarding the content of an IEP. Another purpose of this alternative IEP amendment process is to provide a method to change IEPs without going through the inconvenience to all team members of holding a meeting in situations, such as the one involved here, where the need for a change is not based on changing needs of a student, but based on a natural progression such as this one, where a student is graduating to a new school structure from middle school to high school.

To be sure, when using this process, the district must issue a Prior Written Notice (PWN) and must also obtain written parent consent when the agreed upon amendment constitutes a material change in services or a substantial change in placement (as noted on P. 17 of the report).

The investigator took a sample of the approximately 140 special education students transitioning from 8th to 9th grade (about 10% of total) and an additional 7 students that were co-taught in science or social studies classes (Report, p. 15). The investigator summarized her findings as:

> In all cases it was found that the district had completed an amendment and PWN to record the service/placement changes of the 8th graders transitioning to 9th grade. Further, while changes in service minutes were discovered in the amendments, none showed a discontinuation of service minutes or services in a collab setting (emphasis added). (Report, p. 18).

The Appeal Committee finds that while the district's process may have been confusing (see Report, p. 17), and appeared to the complainant, be a "blanket directive," the investigator documented sufficient evidence to support the findings and conclusions in the Complaint Report that there was no procedural violation. The district did not simply issue a "blanket directive." It communicated with parents, completed an amendment form for the parent's signature that described the proposed changes, and issued a PWN to parents in every one of the samples examined by the investigator.

The district may want to find a better process for adjusting IEPs of students transferring from middle school to high school. One way to do this could start with the drafting of middle school IEPs. When developing middle school IEPs, those IEPs could identify those services that are not appropriate for high school with the provision that those specific services will end with the student's transition to high school. That method would involve up-front conversations, along with explanatory PWNs, with regard to the extent and limitation to which the services are being offered by the middle school IEP team and whether parents are willing to provide consent for any stated limitations in the team's offer. If handled in this manner, these "limited" offers should not be made in a "take it or leave it" manner. Rather, the offer could be used as an invitation to avoid the inevitable difficult discussion later of the differences between the district's middle school structure and the high school structure.

Conclusion

For the reasons stated herein, the Complaint Report is sustained in full.

This is the final decision on this matter. There is no further appeal. This Appeal Decision is issued this 10th day of June, 2025.

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #273, BELOIT PUBLIC SCHOOLS
ON MAY 15, 2025

DATE OF REPORT: MAY 28, 2025

This Findings of Facts report is in response to a complaint filed with the Kansas State Department of Education against USD #273 (Beloit Public Schools) on behalf of ------- by her mother -------. In the remainder of the report, ------- will be referred to as "the student" and ------- as "the parent" or "the complainant".

The complaint is against USD #273 (Beloit Public Schools). In the remainder of the report, USD #273 will be referred to as "the district". The student currently attends St. John's Catholic School which will be referred to as the "private school" in the remainder of the report. The Beloit Special Education Cooperative provides special education support for the district; however, Beloit Public Schools remains the agency responsible for the student's educational services. In the remainder of the report, the Beloit Special Education Cooperative will be referred to as "the coop. " School and district staff will be referred to In the remainder of this report as follows:

- Christie Gerdes, Director of Special Education

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) allows for a 30-day timeline to investigate a complaint from the date in which it was filed. A complaint is considered filed on the date in which it was received by KSDE. In this case, the KSDE initially received the complaint on May 15, 2025.

Evidence Reviewed

The following information was considered in this finding.

- The parent's formal complaint documents
- An interview with the director of special education on May 16, 2025
- An interview with the parent on May 20, 2025
- An email exchange with the director of special education on May 28, 2025

During the fact finding, the Complaint Investigator, Nikki Crawford, reviewed all evidence and documentation provided by the district and the parents.

Finding of Facts

The formal complaint submitted by the parent on May 15, 2025 states,

> "The district has failed to ensure [the student's] right to a Free Appropriate Public Education (FAPE) by creating a hostile environment through retaliation and bullying, and by refusing to provide necessary services in a setting that is safe and appropriate for [the student's] unique needs".

In the parent interview on May 20, 2025 the parent shared their concerns over the student's safety for the 2025-2026 school year at the district school. Up until this time, the student has attended a private school with the district providing occupational and physical therapy consultation as well as speech therapy in the private school setting. According to the parent, the latest IEP meeting in May of 2025 plans for the student's full time attendance at the district school for the 2025-2026 school year.

The complaint and interview with the parent confirmed the parent's concern for the student's safety is related to text interactions between a district staff person and the student's father in May of 2024 as well as contentiousness between the mother and an organization engaged by the school board to pass a bond issue to fund the district in the spring of 2024. The director shared in a May 16, 2025 interview that the district staff person who engaged in text interactions with the father is not on the student's IEP team nor works in the building where the student will attend in the fall of 2025.

PLEASE NOTE: In an email from the director to the investigator on May 28, 2025 the director clarified that the school psychologist, "works in the building but would not have direct contact or work directly with the student".

Conclusion

For a complaint to be investigated the allegations must fall within the protections of IDEA. In the May 20, 2025 interview with the parent they agreed that to date, the student has not experienced denial of FAPE, additionally the investigator lacks the jurisdiction to address the perceived hostile environment and the contentiousness between the family and the district given that it has not negatively impacted the student's IEP services. The parent's concerns do not meet the criteria for a formal investigation of special education laws and regulations and therefore will not be investigated.

PLEASE NOTE: The clarification provided by the director regarding the school psychologist's presence in the building the student may attend in the fall, does not have bearing on the conclusion of this Findings of Facts. The proximity of the school psychologist to the student is related to the parent's concern that the presence of the school psychologist may potentially create a hostile environment for the student, but not relevant to the parent's assertion that FAPE was denied.

8. On August 26, 2024, the Parents sent a direct message to the Principal inquiring when the Student "will begin having all of [their] para[professional] minutes met. It is the third week of school and [the Student] is still not having a para[professional] for the majority of the day including PE and some days [they] lack one at recess as well."
9. On August 27, 2024, the Principal replied to the Parents in a direct message and stated, "Para[professional] schedules and adjustments were put into place starting yesterday, however, we did have two para[professionals] absent. The coverage was a complete oversight on our end, so I do apologize. At this time, [the Student] has para[professional] support and [the] minutes are being covered."
10. On September 18, 2024 at 11:07 a.m., the Parents sent a direct message to the Principal and Special Education Teacher 1 and stated, "[the Student] indicated that [they] didn't have a para[professional] yesterday, Friday, and part of Monday. Yesterday at recess, [the Student] was being encouraged by [their] friends to walk without [their] walker … [the Student] took several steps and then fell to the ground." The message also indicated that the Student was told that the para[professional] that has been assigned to them "is doing MTSS groups now."
11. On September 18, 2024 at 2:49 p.m., Special Education Teacher 1 responded to the Parent's message and stated "[the Student] does have [AC] during recess, and I will continue to communicate with that para[professional] and [the Student's] teacher regarding expectations including ensuring [the Student] is using [their] walker." Special Education Teacher 1 continued, "we have had to make adjustments to the [paraprofessional] schedules. We have also had several illnesses among staff, so we have needed to make adjustments to support all students. There is a para[professional] beginning next week who will be working in [the Teacher's] room, so [the Student] will have support once again."

12. On September 18, 2024 at 3:27 p.m., the Parents responded to Special Education Teacher 1's message asking if the Student had a paraprofessional for the required minutes that day (Wednesday) and if the Student would have one Thursday and Friday (September 19 and 20, 2024).
13. On September 18, 2024 at 8:51 p.m., Special Education Teacher 1 responded to the Parents message and stated, "Due to the shortage of para[professional] subs, [the Teacher's] classroom is not assigned a para[professional] … The para[professional] that is assigned [AC] at recess has other students that they also oversee during recess. [The Student] does not have any time with one-on-one para[professional] support, so anytime that a para[professional] is in [the Student's] classroom, they are supporting multiple students."
14. On September 18, 2024 at 11:11 p.m., the Parents responded to Special Education Teacher 1 and reported the issue of not having a paraprofessional had been going on for over a month and the "approach of having one para[professional] in charge of assisting multiple kids is not effective. This is evident because [the Student] was engaging in dangerous activity without the para[professional] noticing." In addition, the Parents stated, "Up until this year, [the Student] has had 1:1 para[professional] support during recess and PE. Our understanding was that there were no changes made to [their] IEP from last year. It is essential for [the Student's] safety and inclusion to have close support during those times in particular."
15. On September 19, 2024 at 11:22 a.m., the Parents sent an email to the Superintendent and stated, "While attending Back to School Night, we were told by the School Nurse and the Teacher that [the Student] would not have para[professional] support this year. We spoke to the Principal that evening, [they] looked at [the Student's] IEP and reassured us [the Student[would have a para[professional]. [The Student] did not have a para[professional] the majority of the time for the first 10 days of school."
16. On September 19, 2024 at 8:33 p.m., the Principal sent a direct message to the Parents and Special Education Teacher 1 and shared appreciation for the continued communication regarding paraprofessional support for the Student and that "[AC] has been provided for [the Student] consistently. With all para[professionals], they are covering the needs of more than one student in a classroom or during recess/lunch. [Special Education Teacher 1] has already shared concerns with the para[professionals] that are supporting [the Student] and the need to be in closer proximity." The Principal goes on to explain that more paraprofessionals have been hired to provide support and the Student "will have adequate support starting Monday." The Principal also added a link to information that outlined steps that parents can take when addressing concerns.
17. On September 25, 2024, the School Nurse sent a direct message to the Parents and stated, "Today at 11:45 [a.m.] I was on the look out for [the Student] and [they] didn't come to the office. [They] have a brand new para[professional] so I thought perhaps they were late. I waited until nearly 12:00 [p.m.] and then I went looking for [the Student]. When I asked [the Student] where [the] Para[professional] was [they] said [they] didn't know, that '[they] just disappeared.'"

18. On October 29, 2024, the Parents sent a direct message to Special Education Teacher 1 requesting a "team meeting to go over [the Student's] needs and [the] current IEP to clear up any misunderstandings." Special Education Teacher 1 and the Parents scheduled a meeting for November 19, 2024.
19. On November 19, 2024, the Parents sent a direct message to Special Education Teacher 1 and the Principal and stated, "we were disheartened to learn that [the Student] didn't have a para[professional] again today" and "the Nurse had to come get [the Student] to do [their] cath [(catheterization)] because there wasn't a para[professional] to take [the Student] when it was time."

    The Principal replied to this message the same day and stated, "We were short on para[professionals] today, as we had several absent. We had to make adjustments to provide coverage."
20. On November 20, 2024 at 9:22 a.m., the School Nurse sent a direct message to the Parents and stated, "I wanted you to know that there is a balloon parade tomorrow being held by the second grade class. I questioned the balloons, wanting to keep my four latex allergy kiddos safe. Yesterday the Principal had the office professional get latex free balloons for this parade. So, my understanding is that this concern was corrected."
21. On November 20, 2024 at 2:20 p.m., the Parents sent an email to the Superintendent and stated, "We are reaching out to you again because our concerns have not been resolved." The Parents describe a meeting they had the day prior that was supposed to be a discussion of issues surrounding paraprofessional support, safety, and inclusion, and the meeting "turned into a discussion on reducing [the Student's] services, rather than making sure the current IEP is followed." The Parents stated that the Principal "called later in the day to apologize for the nature of the meeting, to retract the IEP, and that we will plan to meet to discuss the IEP in February when it is due." The email goes on to share the Parents' concerns about coverage when paraprofessionals are absent and states that, "[the Student] has gone upwards of 19 days without a para[professional] this year."

(Parental consent required)." This was based on new data for health/motor ability and social emotional status/behavioral status, along with existing data on vision, hearing, and academic performance. The explanation of proposed action is "to gain consent to complete a reevaluation. [The Student's] reevaluation is due in March 2025. Additionally, new data is needed." The data used as the basis for the action included staff input, parent input, observations, and three year reevaluation.

The PT also stated, "[The Student] is showing poor safety awareness, frequently ignoring cues from staff, sitting on the edge of [their] chair, and refusing to maintain a clutter-free workspace despite frequent prompts.     d. "Making progress toward annual goal" in Benchmark 2.1.2 in Period 3 for 2023-24, Period 1 for 2024-25, and "Goal Met" in Period 2 for 2024-25;
    e. "Making progress toward annual goal" in Benchmark 2.1.3 in Period 3 for 2023-24, Period 1 for 2024-25, and "Goal not addressed in this reporting period" in Period 2 for 2024-25;
        i. Benchmark 2.1.3 was not addressed in the reporting period due to "recent weather constraints and recent surgery."
    f. "Making progress toward annual goal" in Benchmark 2.1.1 in Period 3 for 2023-24, Period 1 for 2024-25, and "Not making progress toward annual goal" in Period 2 for 2024-25.
        i. Benchmark 2.1.1 listed the reason the Student was not making progress as "[The Student] continues to require daily reminders for keeping the floor area around [their] desk clean and has not demonstrated safety maintaining [the] environment for one week."
        ii. The progress report was delivered to the Parents through email.
54. On February 21, 2025, the Parents sent a direct message to Special Education Teacher 1 and the Principal and indicated the Principal reached out to the Parents via phone and said the requested draft of the IEP could not be shared until the evaluation was completed. The evaluation was scheduled as the first part of the meeting. The Parents stated, "not having access to this document in advance made it difficult for us to be fully prepared and actively participate in the process." The Parents questioned if this was standard practice, requested information on laws and policy surrounding sharing an IEP prior to the meeting, asked for clarification of the term "adult" in the IEP, and requested "scheduling meetings earlier so we have adequate time to review [the IEP]."
55. On February 22, 2025 at 7:33 a.m., the Principal sent a direct message to the Parents and Special Education Teacher 1 providing Kansas regulations . explaining evaluations. The Principal stated, "that said, we understand the desire to review information in advance, and we are happy to discuss ways to ensure you feel fully prepared for future meetings. We recognize that holding the meeting on the same day as the IEP expiration may have caused undue pressure. While it is not standard practice to schedule meetings on the expiration date, various factors impact scheduling." The Principal then clarified the term "adult" in the IEP and acknowledged concerns "about previous instances where [the Student's] IEP was not fully implemented. Please know that we are committed to ensuring that all supports and services outlined in [the Student's] plan are followed."

56. On February 22, 2025 at 9:37 a.m., the Parents sent a direct message to the Principal and Special Education Teacher 1 thanking the Principal for their response and stating, "in this case, the IEP was already drafted before the reevaluation discussion took place, which seems to contradict that intent [of the regulations]. These legal requirements exist to protect the child and to ensure that parents are equal and well-informed participants in the process – not to limit access to critical information." The Parents then requested that in the future the draft IEP be provided in advance.
57. On February 28, 2025 at 11:50 a.m., the School Nurse sent a direct message to the Parents and stated, "[The Student's] Para[professional] was absent today, I was unaware, my apologies for not getting to [the Student] sooner. [The Student] ended cath about five minutes ago." The Parent responded to this message stating, "I'm fine with [the Student] not having a para[professional] with [them] during [their] cath time as long as it is you in the office."
58. The March 1, 2025 paraprofessional schedule indicated the following:
    a. Paraprofessional 2 as the Teacher's support from approximately 8:45 a.m. to 9:15 a.m.. b. Paraprofessional 2 as the Teacher's support from approximately 10:15 a.m. to 12:00 p.m.. c. Paraprofessional 1 as the Teacher's support from approximately 1:30 p.m. to 3:45 p.m.. d. Paraprofessional 2 had AC listed for the Student first thing in the morning.
    e. AC lunch was listed on 5 different Paraprofessional's schedules ranging from 11:15 a.m. to 12:15 p.m.
59. On April 3, 2025, the Parents sent a direct message to the Principal and reported that the Student did not have a paraprofessional that morning during PE and recess. They also claimed the Student was not taken to do the morning routine with the School Nurse. The Parent indicated that the same thing happened on February 28 [2025]. In addition, the Parents reported that the Student "is having to walk the long way outside to the playground to avoid balloons in the 4th/5th pod." The Parents went on to explain how much energy this takes for the Student and inquired why latex balloons had to be used.
60. On April 3, 2025, there were two entries logged for "Catheretization" in the Health Office Visit Report. The first was at 11:00 a.m. and listed the Student completing "self catheterization" then returning to class. The second was at 1:45 p.m. and listed the Student completing "self catheterization" then returning to class.
61. On April 4, 2025 at 9:24 a.m., the Principal sent an email to the PT asking if there is a reason the Student is not able to walk with their class at recess. The Principal also mentions they were "not tracking that was an accommodation that we had [in] place and fourth and fifth grade decorated for state assessments with balloons."

The PT replied to the Principal at 10:49 a.m. and stated, "[The Student] is able to navigate ramps, though slower than peers. [They] occasionally require cues for safety as [they] begin walking too fast when descending. [They are] slower than peers when ascending ramps. At the beginning of the year, [they were] arriving at the playground a few minutes after peers. [The Teacher] and I discussed options and [discussed] giving the transition time required. So we tried having [the Student] walk indoors and [they were] able to arrive at the playground the same time as peers. Physically, there is no reason [the Student] can't transition with [their] class other than the additional time required to navigate ramps. During winter months the ramps often had slick areas which posed a safety risk. Since Balloons are on the 4/5 pod, [the Student] should be able to transition with [their] class outdoors on the ramps. [The Student] should be either first in line or last in line with [their] para[professional] to allow additional time to navigate the ramps safely."

62. On April 7, 2025 at 2:13 p.m., the Principal sent a direct message to the Parents in response to their inquiry about the Student not being taken to the Nurse (on April 3, 2025) and explained the Student "was seen in the Nurse's office between 11:05 [a.m.] and 11:10 [a.m.], just shortly after [their] scheduled time." The Principal also added a response to the concern about the outdoor transitions due to balloons and stated, "I followed up with the [PT] to better understand the need and utilization of [the Student] using an alternate route. The decision was made after noticing [the Student] was arriving at the playground a few minutes after [their] class. [The Student] is able to navigate ramps, though [they do] so more slowly and may occasionally require verbal cues for safety—especially when descending, as [they] tend to speed up. To support [them] in doing so safely, [they] should either be at the front or end of the line with [their] para[professional], giving [them] the necessary space and time to navigate the ramps comfortably. I will be sure that this is communicated with [the Student's] team."
63. On April 7, 2025 at 8:27 p.m., the Parents sent a direct message to the Principal and inquired which paraprofessional was working with the Student on the morning of February 28 and April 4, 2025. The Parents added that they have "repeatedly asked for [Paraprofessional 1] not to be involved in [the Student's] care" because Paraprofessional 1 "continues to restrict [the Student's] area of play at recess, not to mention the safety concerns [Paraprofessional 1] has presented."
64. On April 8, 2025 at 8:13 p.m., the Parents sent a direct message to the Principal and stated, "last week [the Student] began reporting that [they] often do not have a para[professional] during check-in time in the morning." They also inquired when the balloons would be removed.
65. On April 10, 2025 at 12:06 p.m., the Principal sent a direct message to the Parents and stated, "I wanted to check in on the classroom during [the Student's] morning check-in to see if a para[professional] was present and completing the process. Both yesterday and today, that was in place. I will be sure to follow up with the team in making sure it is consistent and for [Special Education Teacher 2] to step in if needed due to absences or if someone is running late." The Principal also explained that the balloons would be taken down after state assessments, "which will conclude at the end of next week."

66. On April 10, 2025 at 1:57 p.m., the Parents sent a direct message to the Principal and stated, "[The Student] mentioned yesterday specifically that [they] did not have para[professional] assistance at the drop in time. We also witnessed that [the Student] had no one there during drop in time on March 27, [2025] after the donut event." They added, "By refusing to remove the balloons as soon as you recognized the issue, you are not in compliance with [the Student's] IEP."
67. On April 13, 2025, the Parents sent a direct message to the Principal and stated, "I asked [the Student's] doctor for specific guidance concerning [their] latex allergy in the situation that is present at [the School]. Please see attached. Due to the inhalation risk as described in the attached literature, [and the language in the IEP], the balloons need to be removed immediately without being popped inside of the building. This is not only for [the Student's] safety but also for the safety of others in the school with this allergy."
68. On April 14, 2025, the Principal sent a direct message to the Parents and stated, "Thank you for the documentation. The balloons will be removed and disposed of properly." The Parent replied asking when the balloons would be removed and the Principal responded that they were out of the building that day, but had sent a message to the staff.
69. On an April 15, 2025 Classified Staff Evaluation, the Principal rated Paraprofessional 1 as "meets expectations" in the "Safety" category of "Job Skills, Duties, and Professional Responsibilities" and noted, "employee engages in safe work practices and appropriately addresses safety concerns."

Interviews

70. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Parents stated, "The first few months of school [the Student] lacked para[professional] support pretty frequently. [Paraprofessional support] has gotten better throughout the year as we've complained more and more about it … [The School has] fairly consistently been providing a para[professional]."
71. The Parents indicated Paraprofessional 1 "struggles providing support for [the Student] with inclusion and safety." Examples cited were encouraging the Student to sit because Paraprofessional 1 "doesn't want to be very active and encourages [the Student] to be that way" and limiting where the Student can be on the playground due to Paraprofessional 1 "sitting on a bench right outside the door and telling [the Student] to stay where [they] can see [them]." They also stated, "our big concern this year was not watching at all what was going on at recess and [the Student]."
72. The Parents recalled, "the first two or three weeks [of school] they're still trying to figure out [paraprofessional] schedules … it seemed like [the Student] was the last one on [the School's] list to have [the paraprofessional] role filled … Anytime someone was sick, [the Student's] para[professional] would be pulled and go to help whoever was missing and [the Student] would be left without assistance."

73. The Parents indicated the School had "never communicated to us" when a paraprofessional is absent, "unless I actually reach out to them and ask why [the Student] did not have a para[professional] that day."
74. The Parents recalled that earlier in the school year, the Student's friends had to help so often due to not having adult help that they were telling the Student they were tired of helping and that the Student is a "pain."
75. The Parents recalled a recent time at the School during field day activities where one of the Parents was with the Student helping them with activities in the grass and "at the end of the day, Paraprofessional 1 said, 'I am glad you were here because I wouldn't have done any of that.'"
76. The Parents reported that they saw Paraprofessional 1 leaning on the Student's wheelchair. They also found out from another staff member that Paraprofessional 1 let the Student climb up the playground structure and when the Student was ready to go down the slide, another paraprofessional had to "run over" and help them get down safely.
77. The Parents stated, "When we brought up concerns about [the Student] not having a para[professional] on days, then we've gotten new revised IEP's with a reduction of minutes … when you bring a concern and you're trying to work with somebody and ask for help and you get the opposite. You get a reduction of care and service."
78. The Parents recalled they were told they could see a draft of the IEP prior to the February 21, 2025 meeting, but the Principal called them and said they were not able to share a draft until the meeting because a three year evaluation needed to take place before the IEP meeting.
79. The Parents stated, "[the School] ended up reducing some of the para[professional] support. Not significantly, but … [the Student] doesn't have para[professional] support during morning meetings." They went on to express their concern that reducing minutes would make it easier for the school to "meet [the Student's] IEP to a lesser extent."
80. The Parents indicated the evaluation process did not accurately reflect the Student's current level of physical ability due to a recent surgery that impacted the Student's strength and mobility. "the data that [the School] used for the revised IEP indicated that [the Student] had improved, [which] didn't accurately reflect where [the Student] actually was at the point in time relative to where [they] had been previously … it feels like [the School] were trying to justify reducing [the Student's] para[professional] support."
81. The Parents stated, "what they ultimately decided with the IEP … we weren't really on board with that, but we're in a situation where we need to come to some sort of agreement in order to have an IEP or if we didn't sign anything, it's just going to expire. So we feel like due to the pushing off of all this stuff until late, we didn't really have adequate time to be able to push back or to be able to take it and then look for options on what we might be able to do. We just had to kind of agree and move on even though it wasn't ideal."

82. The Parents stated, "the real concern is they had the reevaluation completed and really that reevaluation has to happen [first], and then they're supposed to use that data to write the IEP, but they'd already written this IEP."
83. The Parents recalled they received two revised IEP's in October/November [2024]. The Parents stated, "[the Student's] minutes were greatly reduced at that point. [The School] was trying to pull way back on [the minutes] and it seemed like it was in retaliation for us complaining about [the Student] not having para[professional] support as was indicated in the IEP." The Parents indicated they showed up to a meeting and got "blindsided by a great reduction in [the Student's] IEP … we went to the meeting and we said this is not right. And it got very contentious. And then the Principal called and said we'll just wait to do anything until [the Student's] IEP is due in February.
84. In reference to the two revised IEP's received in October/November 2024, the Parents indicated "They were drafts … We didn't agree to sign them, so they never went into place … The one in October does not say draft. The one that we went to the meeting for in November does say draft on it. We never signed either of them."
85. The Parents stated, they got a letter from the Student's doctor that "specifically talked about the airborne danger of latex in the building and that is when [the Principal] agreed to take [the latex balloons in the School] down. But we had already told [the Principal] that airborne latex is dangerous for [the Student] … there was definite knowledge of the fact that there was a latex allergy and disregard for that."
86. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Principal stated, " Typically the case managers are responsible for assigning para[professional's schedules] … we were in a position we were very short staffed and we had to do more of a building overview … within the first week or two I took over para[professionals] scheduling."
87. The Principal recalled that at the beginning of the school year, they tried to "maximize coverage as much as we could with the para[professionals] I had in the building … I made the determination to use our at-risk aids to support our special education minutes at that time so that they would at least have coverage." The Principal stated, "it was really about trying to hire people, utilize the supports that we [did have] in place, even if it wasn't directly for special education, but trying to manage it that way. And then also continuing to hire and go about filling our staff and being able to provide services and fill all of the minutes that we were needing to cover."
88. The Principal reported they took over scheduling the paraprofessionals because Special Education Teacher 1 "was needing additional support in being able to work [their] own schedule and provide services and pullout minutes that is required by the IEP's … [scheduling] needed to be taken off [the Special Education Teacher 1's] plate, as well as training and communication of expectations with para[professionals]."
89. The Principal stated, "[the schedule for the paraprofessionals began] within the first couple weeks [of school starting], however, as I continued to hire, adjustments were being made … it was an ever-changing document … I did keep track of the minutes that were short that we were not quite covering. And so then I would make adjustments in making sure those minutes were covered."

90. The Principal indicated, “by the end of the first nine weeks we [were] fully staffed … that means that if all the para[professionals] show up, if no one calls in sick or has an appointment or any other things happen outside the building, then we would be fully covered.”
91. The Principal stated, “When we’ve had two or three para[professionals] call in on a day, we look at what is going to be least disruptive to the environment. Are some classrooms able to accommodate and continue to provide those accommodations that are needed? … [the decision is made to accommodate] those with the most significant needs in regards to function. So unfortunately, students that have academic supports honestly may miss some pull out or may miss some minutes at that time because we have to cover the higher needs.”
92. The Principal reported that the PT is responsible for training the paraprofessionals to support the Student.
93. The Principal stated, “my understanding of the latex was that fact that [the Student] was not to have direct exposure. Therefore, with direct exposure, I understood we didn’t want [the Student] to not be able to participate by seeing that. So that was why we made that adjustment [purchasing Mylar balloons] because [the Student] would’ve been in the same vicinity [as the balloons].”
94. The Principal recalled an event with latex balloons and stated, “kindergarten roundup was at 5:00 at night, it wasn’t set up until 5:00 at night and it was taken down by 7:30 that evening.”
95. In regard to the latex allergy and exposure, the Principal stated, "once [the Parents] shared with me the doctor's note, it was then shared [with staff] that there should not be, the balloons can't be in the building. [The balloons] can't be disposed of in the building. [The Parents] shared that we need to take them outside to dispose of them, that we can't pop them because there could be remnants.”
96. The Principal stated, “we had to complete the reevaluation prior to the IEP date … we were up on a tighter timeline because for the reevaluation, we do need to have parents sign and consent … When we complete the evaluation, it is a team decision to determine if services will continue … so typically that is the first part of the meeting. If everyone believes that the services are required and that it's appropriate and necessary, then we would move forward with the draft IEP.” The Principal continued, “if it's not a reevaluation year, the IEP draft is shared with the parents in order for them to look over that and go through it before the meeting. We’re not able to share a draft IEP when we’re doing a reevaluation as then it’s showing that there’s a predetermination. We also want to make sure that we are prepared for moving forward if the determination is made that services will continue.”
97. When asked about the reevaluation and IEP meeting process for the Student, the Principal stated, “nothing was atypical.”
98. In an interview with the Investigator, Special Education Teacher 2 explained that when a paraprofessional is “missing or absent, it is up to [the] Administrators to figure out the scheduling and they schedule it based [on] student needs.”

99. When asked about typical procedures for completing a reevaluation, Special Education Teacher 2 explained "you would do your IEP form with the School Psychologist. Then when you have your meeting with parents, you go over it and the School Psychologist goes over the new evaluation scores. And then once you go over that, you have parents give their input and then from there you give signatures and they ask questions."

Positions of the Parties, Applicable Regulations, and Conclusions

Issue One

Whether USD #383, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, implemented special education and related services as described in the Student's IEP. Specifically alleged was the lack of: paraprofessional support throughout the school year, elimination of the Student's exposure to latex, and appropriate supervision of the Student for their safety, inclusion and independence. K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(3); 34 CFR § 300.323.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(3) and 34 CFR §300.323(a), an IEP must be in effect for each exceptional child at the beginning of each school year.

The Parents alleged that beginning in August 2024, paraprofessional support was absent on numerous days. Furthermore, they alleged that despite the Student's IEP listing a latex allergy, latex balloons were present in the School on multiple instances during the 2024-25 academic year, including a balloon parade, a balloon arch for Kindergarten Round-Up, and balloons used for state testing. The Parents also claimed inadequate supervision by the School to minimize safety risks, referencing incidents on the playground and in the classroom where the Student was allegedly not monitored or supported. Additionally, the Parents alleged that Paraprofessional 1 was incapable of providing assistance to the Student during emergency situations.

The District contended that they have fully implemented the Student's IEP as written and ensured that all required services and supports were provided. They noted paraprofessional schedules and daily nurse logs as evidence paraprofessional minutes were being met. In addition, the District indicated they took extensive and consistent action to meet obligations regarding the Student's safety through ongoing parent communication and supervision measures. In addition, the District claimed that during paraprofessional absences, the special education teachers would assume coverage responsibilities. The District also noted that the Student continued to make meaningful progress on their IEP goals. Last, the District maintained they took timely and appropriate action to eliminate latex exposure by removing balloons from the school environment, creating a safe path for the Student, and collaborating with the Parents to develop a plan.

The Student's IEP, dated February 21, 2025, included specific minutes for "Adult support for mobility in specials, recess, and classroom." The IEP listed the need for this support as 245 minutes one day per week and 270 minutes four days per week.

The Principal stated they took over paraprofessional scheduling at the beginning of the school year due to being “very short-staffed” and tried to “maximize coverage.” They used at-risk aids to support special education minutes and made ongoing adjustments as they hired more staff. They said that by the end of the first nine weeks of school, they were "fully staffed" assuming all staff were present. The paraprofessional schedules demonstrate full coverage for the Student, assuming all staff were present. Special Education Teacher 2 explained that when a paraprofessional was "missing or absent, it is up to [the] Administrators to figure out the scheduling and they schedule it based [on] student needs." The Principal stated that when paraprofessionals called in sick or missed time, they prioritized coverage for "those with the most significant needs in regards to function."

The Parents stated that in the "first few months of school" in the 2024-25 school year (which began in August 2024), the Student lacked paraprofessional support "pretty frequently," although they noted it had improved as they complained more. Initially, the School was described as "fairly consistently providing a paraprofessional," but issues persisted. The Parents recalled the "first two or three weeks" of school (around mid to late August 2024) involved the School trying to figure out paraprofessional schedules. They felt the Student was "the last one on [the School's] list to have [the paraprofessional] role filled." They also stated that if a paraprofessional was sick, the Student's paraprofessional would be pulled to cover for the absent one, leaving the Student without assistance. The Parents recalled that earlier in the school year (likely September or October 2024), the Student's friends had to help so often due to the lack of adult support that the friends told the Student they were "tired of helping" and that the Student was a "pain."

On August 16, 2024, the Parents sent a message to Special Education Teacher 1 inquiring about paraprofessional coverage, specifically noting the Student had a paraprofessional only during recess. Special Education Teacher 1 responded that schedules were still in process. On August 26, 2024, the Parents contacted the Principal to ask when the Student would receive all their paraprofessional minutes, citing a lack of support for most of the day, including PE. On August 27, 2024, the Principal acknowledged an oversight in paraprofessional coverage and stated that adjustments were being made.

On August 16, September 18, November 20, 2024, January 15, February 4, and February 21, 2025, the Parents expressed significant concerns about the Student's safety, inclusion, and independence, emphasizing the need for close support, particularly during recess and PE. The same day, the Parents reported the Student did not have a paraprofessional, which they indicated led to a fall at recess. Staff attendance shows that Paraprofessional 2 was absent on that day, but Paraprofessional 1 was present and scheduled during both recess times. Special Education Teacher 1 explained that schedule adjustments were due to staff illness and a new paraprofessional would start the following week. Special Education Teacher 1 also noted a shortage of substitute paraprofessionals and mentioned that existing paraprofessionals were supporting multiple students. The Principal stated that AC had been provided and more paraprofessionals had been hired. The Principal also provided information to the Parents on September 19, 2024, on steps they could take to address concerns. On September 19, 2024, the Parents emailed the Superintendent to express ongoing concerns about the lack of paraprofessional support. On September 25, 2024, the School Nurse reported the Student's paraprofessional had been absent. Staff attendance records show that both Paraprofessional 1 and Paraprofessional 2 were present on September 25, 2025.

On October 29, 2024, the Parents requested a team meeting with Special Education Teacher 1 to discuss the Student's needs and review the IEP. On November 19, 2024, the Parents reported the Student lacked a paraprofessional again, requiring the nurse to assist with catheterization. The Principal cited a shortage of paraprofessionals due to absences. Staff attendance records show that both Paraprofessional 1 and Paraprofessional 2 were present on November 19, 2025. The Parents continued to express their concerns on November 20, 2024, when they emailed the Superintendent expressing these unresolved concerns.

On January 15, 2025, the Parents wrote to the Physical Therapist (PT) and others regarding paraprofessional support and transfers. On January 15, 2025, the Parents noted the Student's need for extra support for "transfers" due to a surgery the Student recently had. On January 22-24, 2025, there were communications regarding the Student using a wheelchair and walking as tolerated. On January 22, 2025, the PT noted the Student's poor safety awareness, risk of falls, and the need for physical assistance. On February 3, 2025, the Parents reported the Student did not have a paraprofessional except for dismissal assistance. Staff attendance records show that Paraprofessional 1 was present and Paraprofessional 2 had no record of attendance on February 3, 2025.

On February 4, 2025, the Parents requested Paraprofessional 1 not be involved in the Student's care. The Parents specifically indicated that Paraprofessional 1 "struggles providing support for [the Student] with inclusion and safety." They cited examples of Paraprofessional 1 encouraging the Student to sit to avoid being active Limiting the Student's playground area by staying on a bench and telling the Student to remain within sight; not closely watching the Student at recess; and concern about not being capable of assisting in an emergency. The parents mentioned an incident at a recent (undated) field day where Paraprofessional 1 said, "I am glad you were here because I wouldn't have done any of that." They also reported seeing Paraprofessional 1 leaning on the Student's wheelchair and learning that Paraprofessional 1 had allowed the Student to climb playground equipment, requiring another paraprofessional to assist the Student in getting down.

The Student's IHP, dated February 19, 2025, includes assessments and goals related to safety, such as ensuring a safe workspace and safe transfers. The IEP, dated February 21, 2025, includes goals related to practicing safety, such as safe sitting and safely using a walker. On February 28, 2025, the School Nurse apologized for the delay in assisting the Student with catheterization, attributing it to the paraprofessional's absence. Staff attendance records show that Paraprofessional 1 was present and Paraprofessional 2 had no record of attendance on February 28, 2025.

On April 3, 2025, the Parents reported the Student did not have a paraprofessional during PE and recess and was not taken to the School Nurse as scheduled. Staff attendance records show that both Paraprofessional 1 and Paraprofessional 2 were present on April 3, 2025. The Parents then asked which paraprofessional was working with the Student on February 28th and April 4th, reiterating their request regarding Paraprofessional 1. On April 8, 2025, the Parents reported the Student often lacked a paraprofessional for check-in time. On April 10, 2025, the Principal checked on the morning check-in and stated they would ensure consistency. Later on April 10, 2025, the Parents stated they had observed the Student without assistance during check-in on March 27, 2025. Paraprofessional 2 was assigned to assist during check-in time on March 27, 2025, and was present during check-in time.

During the 2023-24 school year, the Student was making progress toward annual Goal 1.1, Goal 2.1, and all Benchmarks. This trend of making progress continued during Period 1 in the 2024-25 school year. In Period 2 of the 2024-25 school year, progress continued for Goal 1.1 and Goal 2.1, and Benchmarks 2.1.1 and 2.1.2 were "Met." Benchmark 2.1.3 was "not addressed in this reporting period" due to "recent weather constraints and recent surgery." Benchmark 2.1.1 showed the Student was "Not making progress toward annual goal" because "[The Student] continues to require daily reminders for keeping the floor area around [their] desk clean and has not demonstrated safety maintaining [the] environment for one week."

The Student has a documented latex allergy requiring specific precautions and considerations in their care plan and school environment. The Student's IHP, dated February 19, 2025, lists "latex allergy" under Medical Diagnosis and includes "avoid latex" in the Prescribed Treatment/Medication section, further noting the availability of an Epi-pen for emergency use. The Nursing Assessment within the IHP outlines an increased risk of injury due to the latex precaution and directs the School Nurse to ensure all products used for care are latex-free and within expiration dates, and to assess the Student for accidental latex exposure and notify the Parents as needed. Furthermore, the Nursing Goals and Plans state that "staff will eliminate latex exposure."

On November 20, 2024, the School Nurse communicated to the Parents about a planned balloon parade by the Student's class, mentioning concerns about potential risks to multiple Students with latex allergies. The Nurse reported that the Principal arranged for latex-free balloons to be obtained for the parade. The Principal's understanding was initially that the student should avoid direct exposure to latex. To allow the Student to participate in events where balloons were present, Mylar balloons were purchased as an adjustment. The Principal also mentioned a kindergarten roundup event where latex balloons were used. This event took place from 5:00 PM to 7:30 PM, during which time the latex balloons were set up and then taken down.

On April 13, 2025, the Parents provided a doctor's note to the Principal, School Nurse, and Special Education Teacher 1, regarding the airborne danger of latex, and requested the immediate removal of all balloons. In response, on April 14, 2025, the Principal informed the Parents that the balloons would be removed and properly disposed of. The Principal communicated to staff that latex balloons were not to be in the building and could not be disposed of inside; the balloons needed to be taken outside for disposal without being popped inside.

The facts in this case indicate the School was aware of the Student's latex allergy, documented it in the IHP, and had procedures in place for managing it. While the balloon parade incident showed awareness, it also highlighted a potential oversight that was addressed by the School Nurse. The Parents' providing the doctor's note emphasized the severity of the allergy and the need for strict avoidance, leading to the requested balloon removal. Overall, the Student's latex allergy was acknowledged, measures were taken by the School to address it, and active communication occurred between the Parents and school staff regarding the Student's safety and well-being in relation to the allergy.

Throughout the complaint period, the School actively communicated with the Parents regarding the Student's safety and inclusion, addressing concerns as they arose and making adjustments to scheduling and staffing as needed. Additionally, the Student demonstrated progress on the majority of their established goals within their IEP. The specific goals that were not met or were not addressed in the reporting period were not directly tied to the Student's immediate safety, inclusion, or the provision of paraprofessional minutes. While there were documented instances where paraprofessional minutes may not have been served as outlined in the IEP, primarily due to staffing shortages and unexpected absences, these instances, viewed within the totality of the situation, did not constitute a material failure to implement the IEP. The School's efforts to secure additional staff, adjust schedules to prioritize the Student’s needs, and directly address the Parents' concerns, as evidenced by the ongoing dialogue and documented actions, demonstrate a commitment to supporting the Student’s needs and implementing the IEP to the best of their ability under the circumstances.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, the District did implement special education and related services as described in the Student's IEP. Specifically, paraprofessional support throughout the school year, elimination of the Student’s exposure to latex, and appropriate supervision of the Student for their safety, inclusion and independence.

Issue Two

Whether USD #383, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, provided the Parents with an opportunity to participate in the IEP and reevaluation process. K.A.R. 91-40-17, K.A.R. 91-40-25; 34 CFR § 300.501.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-17, K.A.R. 91-40-25, and 34 CFR § 300.501, each agency shall take steps to ensure that one or both of the parents of an exceptional child are present at each IEP meeting or are afforded the opportunity to participate. These steps shall include scheduling each meeting at a mutually agreed-upon time and place and informing the parents of the information specified in subsection (b) of this regulation and providing written notice, in conformance with subsection (b) of this regulation, to the parents of any IEP team meeting at least 10 days in advance of the meeting. In addition, each agency shall allow the parents of an exceptional child an opportunity to inspect and review all education records and participate in any meeting concerning their child with respect to the identification, evaluation, or education placement of the child; and the provision of FAPE to the child.

The notice shall meet the following requirements: indicate the purpose, time, and location of the IEP team meeting and the titles or positions of the persons who will attend on behalf of the agency, including, if appropriate, any other agency invited to send a representative to discuss needed transition services; and that the parents have the right to invite to the IEP team meeting individuals whom the parents believe to have knowledge or special expertise about their child.

The Parent alleged they were not given the opportunity to adequately review the proposed IEP prior to the meeting due to the triennial review being conducted directly before the IEP meeting and both happening the day before the IEP was scheduled to expire.

The District responded that it provided the Parents with meaningful opportunities to participate in all aspects of the IEP and reevaluation process. In support of their compliance, the District cites Parental Consent for Reevaluation, documented parent involvement in meetings, parent input in eligibility and planning, and proactive communication from the School Psychologist.

On October 29, 2024, the Parents requested a team meeting to review their child's needs and IEP, which was scheduled for November 19, 2024. The Parents shared their concerns about the Student's lack of paraprofessional coverage during the school year. They stated that when concerns about the absence of paraprofessional support were raised, it resulted in new revised IEPs proposing a reduction in minutes, which they perceived as a retaliatory measure. The Parents recalled receiving two revised IEP drafts in October and November 2024, which significantly reduced the Student's support minutes. They described the November meeting where they were "blindsided by a great reduction" to the IEP which became "very contentious." The Parents clarified that the received documents were drafts that they did not sign and therefore were not implemented. They noted that while the November document was marked as a draft, the October document was not.

On November 20, 2024, the Parents emailed the Superintendent expressing that their concerns remained unresolved. In the email, they described the meeting from the previous day, which they intended to be a discussion about paraprofessional support, safety, and inclusion. However, the meeting reportedly shifted to a discussion about reducing the Student's services rather than ensuring adherence to the current IEP. The Parents noted that the Principal subsequently called to apologize for the nature of the meeting, retract the IEP, and proposed a meeting in February for the regularly scheduled IEP review.

On December 20, 2024, the School Psychologist informed the Parents about the Student's upcoming three-year reevaluation and sent consent forms home, as well as a PWN for Reevaluation. On January 27, 2025, the notice was signed by one of the Parents which indicated the Parents had received their rights and consented to the reevaluation that was specified in the notice. By February 3, 2025, Special Education Teacher 1 requested to schedule the annual IEP meeting. On February 19, 2025, the Principal rescheduled the IEP meeting for February 21, 2025 due to inclement weather on February 19, and confirmed the proposed IEP draft would be shared the next day. The IEP was not shared with the Parents and the Principal explained that when a reevaluation is being conducted, the IEP draft is typically not shared with parents beforehand to avoid showing a predetermination of services. The Principal stated that the team needs to complete the reevaluation first, which includes the parents signing consent and the team deciding if services will continue. Only after this reevaluation process and decision is made, would they then move forward with the IEP draft.

A Reevaluation/Continued Eligibility Report was acknowledged and signed by the Parents on February 21, 2025. On the same day, a Staffing Summary form indicated Parents' rights were reviewed and accepted. The Staffing Summary also noted the Parents' concerns and a request regarding specific support personnel. A Notice of Meeting on February 21, 2025, was signed and indicated the Parents waived their right to the 10-day PWN. The Student's IEP, dated February 21, 2025, was finalized and listed Parent concerns regarding support and emergency assistance. The Parents also signed a Request for Consent for Special Education Action.

The Parents then sent a message on February 21, 2025, expressing concern about not receiving the draft IEP in advance. On February 22, 2025, the Parents thanked the Principal for their response but stated the IEP was drafted prior to the reevaluation, and requested draft IEPs be provided in advance in the future. The Principal acknowledged that holding the meeting on the same day as the IEP expiration might have created pressure and stated they are committed to ensuring all support and services outlined in the Student's plan are followed.

The facts in this case indicate the Parents were provided with a meaningful opportunity to participate and give feedback throughout the IEP process. Records demonstrate numerous instances of communication between the Parents and various school staff members regarding the Student's needs and IEP. The Parents actively voiced their concerns, requests, and input in direct messages, emails, and meetings, and the school acknowledged and documented these contributions. The District scheduled and held IEP meetings, provided PWNs, and obtained parental consent for evaluations and services. Moreover, the IEP document reflects parental input regarding the Student's needs, supports, and concerns, thereby illustrating the consideration of the Parents' perspectives in the development of the IEP. While there were concerns raised by the Parents regarding the timing of receiving the final IEP draft before the meeting, particularly during reevaluation, the District's actions in holding meetings, obtaining consent, documenting parent input, and providing an opportunity to inspect and review the IEP reflect adherence to procedural requirements.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the district failed to provide the Parents with an opportunity to participate in the IEP and reevaluation process.

Issue Three

Whether USD #383, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, conducted an accurate reevaluation that met the requirements. K.S.A. 72-3428; 34 CFR § 300.303.

According to K.S.A. 72-3428 and 34 CFR § 300.303, an agency shall provide notice to the parents of a child that describes any evaluation procedures such agency proposes to conduct. This is pertinent to initial evaluation of children prior to provision of services, parental consent, reevaluation, and notice.

The Parents alleged they were not given the opportunity to adequately review the proposed IEP prior to the meeting due to the triennial review being conducted directly before the IEP meeting and both happening the day before the IEP was scheduled to expire.

The District responded that the reevaluation conducted for the Student adhered to the procedural and substantive requirements outlined in IDEA and K.A.R. They maintained that the parental consent, the timely and ongoing communication, the comprehensive review and data collection, the proper composition and documentation of the multidisciplinary team, the alignment with the IEP and continued provision of FAPE, and the procedural timeliness aligns with the best practices and legal requirements outlined in the Kansas Special Education Process Handbook.

On December 20, 2024, the reevaluation process for the Student was initiated. The School Psychologist informed the Parents via direct message that the Student’s three-year reevaluation was due, and that consent forms would be sent home. On the same day, a PWN for Evaluation or Reevaluation and Request for Consent was delivered to the Parents. This PWN outlined the proposal to conduct a reevaluation, specifying that it was based on new data needed for health/motor ability and social-emotional/behavioral status, alongside existing data on vision, hearing, and academic performance. The notice detailed that the reevaluation was necessary as the Student's three-year review was due in March 2025, and new data was required. The basis for the action included staff input, parent input, observations, and the scheduled three-year reevaluation.

On January 27, 2025, one of the Parents signed the PWN, indicating their receipt of rights and consent for the specified evaluation or reevaluation. On February 20, 2025, a Reevaluation/Continued Eligibility Report was created, which confirmed the reevaluation was due by March 2025 and noted the Parents' consent given on January 27, 2025. This report contained details regarding the Student's health, physical needs, and the Physical Therapist's (PT) recommendations. It also included information based on "parent ratings" as data for the Student's "schoolwork T-score." The following day, on February 21, 2025, the Reevaluation/Continued Eligibility Report was acknowledged, agreed to, and signed by the Parents, the Principal, Special Education Teacher 1, the Teacher, the School Psychologist, the Special Education Coordinator, and the PT. Also on February 21, 2025, the Student's IEP, dated the same day, indicated that evaluation consent was obtained on January 27, 2025, and the evaluation date was February 21, 2025. The IEP meeting participants were listed and included signatures for the Parents, Special Education Teacher 1, the Principal, the Special Education Coordinator, the PT, the School Nurse, the School Psychologist, and the Physical Therapy Assistant.

The timeline and facts in this case show that the District provided notice of the proposed reevaluation, obtained parental consent before conducting the reevaluation, completed the reevaluation, and held an IEP meeting to discuss the results and update the IEP.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the district did not conduct an accurate reevaluation that met the requirements.

In the Matter of the Appeal of the Report
Issued in Response to a Complaint Filed
Against Unified School District No. 383
Manhattan-Ogden Public Schools: 25FC383-004

DECISION OF THE APPEAL COMMITTEE

Background

This matter commenced with the filing of a complaint on April 29, 2025, by ------- on behalf of their daughter, -------. In the remainder of this decision, ------- will be referred to as "the parents," and ------- will be referred to as "the student." An investigation of the complaint was undertaken by a complaint investigator on behalf of the Special Education, and Title Services team at the Kansas State Department of Education. Following the investigation, a Complaint Report, addressing the allegations, was issued on May 29, 2025. That Complaint Report concluded that there were no violations of special education statutes and regulations

Thereafter, the parent filed an appeal of the Complaint Report. Upon receipt of the appeal, an appeal committee was appointed and it reviewed the original complaint filed by the parent, the Complaint Report, the parent's notice of appeal, and the district's response to the appeal. The Appeal Committee has reviewed the information provided in connection with this matter and now issues this Appeal Decision.

Preliminary Matters

A copy of the regulation regarding the filing of an appeal [K.A.R. 91-40-51(f)] was attached to the Complaint Report. That regulation states, in part, that: "Each notice shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect." Accordingly, the burden for supplying a sufficient basis for appeal is on the party submitting the appeal. When a party submits an appeal and makes statements in the notice of appeal without support, the Committee does not attempt to locate the missing support.

No new issues will be decided by the Appeal Committee. The appeal process is a review of the Complaint Report. The Appeal Committee does not conduct a separate investigation. The appeal committee's function will be to determine whether sufficient evidence exists to support the findings and conclusions in the Complaint Report.

Discussion of Issue on Appeal

The report identified two issues. One issue was appealed:

Issue 1

Whether USD #383, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), implemented special education and related services as described in the Student's Individualized Education Program (IEP).

Specifically alleged is the lack of:

- paraprofessional support throughout the school year,
- elimination of the Student's exposure to latex, and
- appropriate supervision of the Student for their safety, inclusion and independence.

I

The investigator found no violation regarding the amount of paraprofessional support provided to the student. That finding was not based on perfect compliance with the student's IEP. The investigator acknowledged that there were documented instances where paraprofessional services were not provided (Report, p. 39).

Mindful that appeal committee's function is to determine whether sufficient evidence exists to support the findings and conclusions in the Complaint Report, the Committee noted, In the findings of fact (FOF) in the complaint report, that the building principal told the investigator:

- The district faced continuing staff shortages (FOF 86).
- The district used at-risk aids to support special education minutes (FOF 87).
- The Principal took over scheduling the paraprofessionals because Special Education Teacher 1 "was needing additional support in being able to work [their] own schedule…" (FOF 88).
- The principal kept track of the minutes that were short and made adjustments "making sure those minutes were covered" (FOF 89).
- When shortages occurred, some students may have missed minutes of services as staff were moved to accommodate students with the highest needs. (FOF 91).

The investigator summarized these statements on page 34 of the report.

On page 39 of the report, the investigator found that the student demonstrated progress on the majority of her established goals within their IEP, and concluded as follows:

> While there were documented instances where paraprofessional minutes may not have been served as outlined in the IEP, primarily due to staffing shortages and unexpected absences, these instances, viewed within the totality of the situation, did not constitute a material failure to implement the IEP. The School's efforts to secure additional staff, adjust schedules to prioritize the Student's needs, and directly address the Parents' concerns, as evidenced by the ongoing dialogue and documented actions, demonstrate a commitment to supporting the Student's needs and implementing the IEP to the best of their ability under the circumstances.

There was significant evidence supporting the parent's position as well as the district's position. The investigator reached her conclusion after a careful and meticulous review of physical documents such as paraeducator schedules, nurse logs, communications, staffing procedures, and after conducting extensive personal interviews with the parents, school administrators, and teachers. Ultimately, resolution of this kind of issue is often determined by both the quantity and credibility of the evidence presented. In concluding that, "the totality of the situation, did not constitute a material failure to implement the IEP," the investigator found that the evidence supporting the district's position was greater in both quantity and credibility.

The Appeal Committee notes that the highest courts considering the issue of missed special education services have uniformly held that IEP implementation failure must be material to be actionable, See: Abigail P. v. Old Forge School District, 124 LRP 21769 (3d. Cir. 2024), joining the 4th, 5th, 8th, 9th, and 11th Circuits.

The Appeal Committee finds that the investigator included sufficient evidence and analysis to support her conclusion that, though there were missed services, those missed services did not constitute a material failure to implement the student's IEP.

This was a difficult set of facts presented for appeal and could have gone either way. The school district should not interpret this decision as authority to remain understaffed. Proper staffing includes anticipating that there will be some level of staff absences throughout a school year and planning for those absences. In this case, the Appeal Committee recognized that the investigator conducted a thorough investigation. That investigation included an extensive review of documents and personal interviews with those who are most closely involved with this student. In this kind of complaint, that alleges a failure to implement an IEP, the investigator must often exercise judgment when considering the credibility of all of the documents and statements presented. Because the judgement of this investigator is based on a personal review of all of the evidence (documents and interviews), and such personal review is not available to an Appeal Committee, the Appeal Committee must give reasonable deference to the conclusions of the investigator, and has done so in this case. The conclusion of the investigator on this portion of Issue 1 is sustained.

II

With regard to the part of Issue 1 that is related to the presence of latex in the student's environment, the report states: "The Student's IHP, dated February 19, 2025, lists "latex allergy" under Medical Diagnosis and includes "avoid latex" in the Prescribed Treatment/Medication section, further noting the availability of an Epi-pen for emergency use." (Report p. 37). There is no mention anywhere in the report indicating that the student's Individual Health Plan (IHP) was a part of this student's IEP. Without that important information, this Appeal Committee has no jurisdiction to conduct an appeal. The authority for hearing these appeals applies only to allegations alleging a violation of a "state or federal special education law or regulation (See K.A.R. 91-40-51(a)). Neither law addresses compliance with an IHP that is not part of an IEP.

Even so, the Appeal Committee finds that even if the IHP is in the student's IEP, there is no violation for failing to implement the IEP. The report cites the IHP as follows:

> The Student's IHP, dated February 19, 2025, lists "latex allergy" under Medical Diagnosis and includes "avoid latex" in the Prescribed Treatment/Medication section, further noting the availability of an Epi-pen for emergency use. The Nursing Assessment within the IHP outlines an increased risk of injury due to the latex precaution and directs the School Nurse to ensure all products used for care are latex-free and within expiration dates, and to assess the Student for accidental latex exposure and notify the Parents as needed. Furthermore, the Nursing Goals and Plans state that "staff will eliminate latex exposure (emphasis added)."

In FOF 93, the principal stated: "my understanding of the latex was the fact that [the Student] was not to have direct exposure." The Appeal Committee finds that the principal's understanding is a reasonable interpretation of this part of the student's IHP. The IHP does not indicate a need for a latex free building. The principal added his comments to the investigator that: "once [the Parents] shared with me the doctor's note, it was then shared [with staff] that there should not be, the balloons can't be in the building (FOF 95)," which demonstrates a willingness to comply with a doctor's note, even when not a part of the IHP.

The appeal Committee finds that this portion of Issue 1 does not allege a failure to implement the student's IEP or a failure of any other provision of special education law.

III

With regard to the part of Issue 1, dealing with appropriate supervision of the Student for her safety, inclusion and independence, the investigator correctly included this allegation with the implementation issue, concluding that any shortcomings did not constitute a material failure to implement the IEP (Report, p. 39). For the same reasons that the Appeal Committee affirmed the conclusion herein regarding implementation allegations related to an alleged lack of para support (not a material failure), the Appeal Committee affirms the investigator's conclusion regarding the issue of appropriate supervision of the Student for her safety, inclusion and independence.

The parents also appeal the investigator's finding, on page 39 of the report, that the student:

> demonstrated progress on the majority of their established goals within their IEP. The specific goals that were not met or were not addressed in the reporting period were not directly tied to the Student's immediate safety, inclusion, or the provision of paraprofessional minutes"

Specifically, the parent's appeal cites Goal 2.1.4 involving the use of crutches, and Goal 2.1.3 a "playground steps" goal.

The report does not address a benchmark or goal for the use of crutches, and the parents do not identify how this was presented to the investigator as an issue in this complaint. There is no finding or conclusion on this issue, as none was made. Because no new issues may be considered in an appeal, the Appeal Committee will not address this allegation.

The report states that Benchmark 2.1.3 was not addressed in the reporting period due to "recent weather constraints and recent surgery." (Report, p. 22). The parent's appeal states that this goal remains in the student's IEP, but the appeal does not contest the finding that there was a valid reason for this benchmark not being addressed in the reporting period. Essentially, there was nothing to report because the student was apparently not accessing the playground equipment during the relevant time period. The Appeal Committee finds that there is no violation of law with regard to this portion of Issue 1.

Again, with regard to the issue of implementation of the IEP, this was a difficult set of facts presented for appeal and could have gone either way. The school district should not interpret this decision as authority to remain understaffed. Proper staffing includes anticipating that there will be some level of staff absences throughout the school year and planning for those absences. In this case, the Appeal Committee recognized that the investigator conducted a very thorough investigation. That investigation included an extensive review of documents and personal interviews with those who are closely involved with this student. In this kind of complaint, one that alleges a failure to implement an IEP, the investigator must often exercise judgment when considering the impact and credibility of all of the documents and statements presented. Because the judgement of this investigator is based on a personal review of all of the evidence, and such personal review is not available to an Appeal Committee, the Appeal Committee must give reasonable deference to the conclusions of an investigator, and has done so in this case.

Conclusion

For the reasons stated herein, the Complaint Report is sustained in full.

This is the final decision on this matter. There is no further appeal. This Appeal Decision is issued this 18th day of June, 2025.

Background Information

The student is a twelve-year-old sixth grader and is eligible for special education and related services under the category of Autism and Other Health Impaired based on the most current re-evaluation dated January 22, 2025. The student has been followed by a Pediatrics, Developmental and Behavior Science clinic since February 2020 and was seen on December 9, 2021 "for concerns about social skills and to rule out the presence of autism spectrum disorder." The findings were recorded as "Based on [Student's history, clinical assessment, and the tests completed today, [Student] meets the Diagnostic Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders-Fifth Edition (DSM-5) criteria for Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD). [Student] has deficits in social communication and social interaction as well as restricted, repetitive patterns of behavior or interests. These symptoms are causing significant impairment in his daily functioning." The following recommendations were included in the report, "1) Consider Autism as an educational exceptionality during the IEP evaluation and assessment process. The team may also consider Other Health Impairment due to his diagnosis of ADHD. 2) [Student] would benefit from school-based environmental accommodations and modifications that have been shown to be effective with children with ADHD (e.g., Frequent breaks, opportunities for movement, chunking assignments into smaller sections)." This report also reported co-occurring medical diagnoses of Attention Deficit and Hyperactivity Disorder- Combined Type and Unspecified Anxiety Disorder from December 2021.The student's IEP dated January 22, 2025 lists 42 minutes of direct special education service, five days every week in a special education setting, 90 minutes of direct special education service in the general education setting five days every week and 20 minutes of special work services one day every month. This IEP lists nine accommodations.

Issues Investigated

ISSUE ONE: Did the district discuss and respond to the parent's request for special transportation at the beginning of the school year meeting? (34 C.F.R. 300.503(a)(2))

ISSUE TWO: Did the district consider extracurricular and after school supports regarding safely transitioning from the school building to the Boys and Girls Club program at the student's IEP meeting during the 2024-2025 school year? (34 C.F.R. 300.42; 34 C.F.R. 300.320(a)(4)(ii); and 34 C.F.R. 300.107(a))

Issue One

Did the district discuss and respond to the parent's request for special transportation at the beginning of the school year meeting?

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.503(a)(2) states that prior written notice needs to be provided to the parents of a child with a disability a reasonable time before the public agency proposes or refuses to initiate or change the identification, evaluation, or educational placement of the child or the provision of FAPE to the child.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The Parent alleged that prior to the beginning of the school year she stated, "I told them my [student] struggles and needs to be kept safe" She stated in her initial interview with the investigator that she was told that her child did not meet the requirements for special transportation.

The district described in their response dated February 21, 2025 that at the beginning of the 2024-2025 school year the student transitioned from elementary to middle school and the parent subsequently requested and was granted a school transfer from the "home middle school" to another middle school. The district stated that the parent met with the middle school on August 1, 2024 to discuss the transition and parent concerns. According to the district response, "One of the parent's concerns was after school programs and it was discussed that [school] did not have any after school programs for sixth graders except for the play/musical. The staff suggested the YMCA which was in walking distance from the school. When the parent mentioned concerns about the cost, staff directed her to the Boys and Girl's federal program which provided transportation from [school] at the end of the school day. The parent also requested transportation, and the administration reviewed the student's elementary IEP from February 5, 2024 and after the question of 'does the student require related service of transportation to access and benefit from their special education services?' the box was checked as 'No.' The district offered that since the IEP did not indicate a need for transportation and they were not yet familiar with the student they would follow the IEP as written as they got to know the student and then revisit the discussion

The IEPs dated January 5, 2024 and January 22, 2025 are both marked as "No" for the question, "Does the student require the related service of transportation to access and benefit from their special education services?" For both IEPs, the parent was in attendance.

In a clarification email from the district's attorney to the investigator on February 27, 2025, it was clarified that the meeting in August was not an IEP meeting as teachers were not on duty yet and this was communicated with the parent.

In an email from the assistant principal to the district attorney dated, February 19, 2025 at 4:38 p.m. it is written that the student had been going to the Girls and Boys Club since the beginning of the school year and there had been no concerns received from the mother or identified by the staff about the student needing after school support to safely transport to the Girls and Boys Club program until the student missed the bus in January and then the mother asked at the IEP meeting.

Conclusion

It is found that on August 1, 2024 the parent and middle school staff met to discuss the student's transition to the middle school and parent concerns once the school transfer was granted. It is found that the parent and school staff discussed transportation related to the afterschool program and determined to follow the IEP as written and discuss if the IEP needed to be amended to add specialized transportation at a later, unspecified date. It is found that the IEP did review specialized transportation during the January 22, 2025 IEP. As the meeting on August 1, 2024 was not an IEP meeting and a formal parent request was not made, the district did not need to provide a prior written notice. Therefore, it is found that the district is IN compliance and did not have an obligation in this instance to provide a prior written notice.

Issue Two

Did the district consider extracurricular and after school supports regarding safely transitioning from the school building to the Boys and Girls Club program at the student's IEP meeting during the 2024-2025 school year?

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.42 defines supplementary aids and services as aids, services, and other supports that are provided in regular education classes, other education-related settings, and in extracurricular and nonacademic settings, to enable children with disabilities to be educated with nondisabled children to the maximum extent appropriate.

Federal regulations at C.F.R. 300.320(a)(4)(ii) describes that the IEP include a statement of the special education and related services and supplementary aids and services, based on peer-reviewed research to the extent practicable, to be provided to the child, or on behalf of the child, and a statement of the program modifications or supports for school personnel that will be provided to enable the child to participate in extracurricular and other nonacademic activities; and Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.107(a)) stipulate that each public agency must take steps, including the provision of supplementary aids and services determined appropriate and necessary by the child's IEP Team, to provide nonacademic and extracurricular services and activities in the manner necessary to afford children with disabilities an equal opportunity for participation in those services and activities and may include transportation.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The findings of Issue One are incorporated herein by reference. The parent alleged in the complaint that on January 21, 2025 she received a call from her child who was confused and didn't know if the bus for Girl's and Boy's Club had left so her child called an hour and a half after school let out and was freezing cold. She stated her child struggles and needs to be kept safe to ensure the student boards the bus after school. She stated that since the beginning of the school year the school did not consider whether the student needed specialized transportation replying that since he was not in a wheelchair or blind the student did not meet the requirements for special transportation.

The district responded that the student is able to get to class independently and follow a daily schedule following verbal directions. They report the student may need directions repeated for multi-step tasks on an assignment, but the student knew the afterschool bus routine.

The IEPs dated January 5, 2024 and January 22, 2025 are marked as "No" for the question, "Does the student require the related service of transportation to access and benefit from their special education services?" The district and parent agree that specialized transportation was brought up at the January 22, 2025 IEP meeting following the January 21, 2025 incident.

The student began attending Girl's and Boy's Club at the beginning of the student's sixth grade school year (2024-2025) and no concerns regarding a need for specialized transportation had been identified with the student in the past nor until the incident occurring on January 21, 2025. During the scheduled annual IEP meeting on January 22, 2025 the IEP team discussed specialized transportation and determined that the student was not in need of specialized transportation.

The mother reported during her interview with the investigator that there were times that the student missed the bus after school, but did not report them to the school until the date of the incident.

The district reported an incident on "January 17th (not the day in question) staff did see [student] outside after school waiting on [student's] ride. [Student] was encouraged to come inside. [Student] said no that [student's] ride was almost there and [student] wanted to sit outside and watch videos on [student's] phone--which is what [student] was doing while eating a snack. [Student] was told if [student] changed [student's] mind [student] could ring the buzzer that was right above [student's] head. By the time office staff left for the day, [student] had been picked up. We do not know why [student] didn't ride the bus. [Student] just said someone else was getting [student] that day. Cameras show parent picked [student] up late at 4:21pm."

The district responded in a clarification email on February 27, 2025 that the staff were not aware of the student missing the bus the day of the incident, nor were they aware that missing the bus had been an issue during the school year. They replied in an email with the investigator that, "On January 21, 2025, at the end of the school day, the student was sitting outside on a bench after school, playing a game on [student's] device. [Principal] saw the student sitting there waiting and asked [student] if [student] wanted to come inside to wait. The student declined. The student had not walked to the bus, and [student] missed the Boys and Girl club van pick up. [Student] did not mention or share that with [principal] and instead called [student's] mother to pick [student] up."

The district described on February 27, 2025 that on January 21, 2025 (day of incident) the school staff were not aware that the student was waiting outside for transportation and that the student did not come into the school to alert anyone, instead using the student's cell phone to contact the mother. The principal reported that she had offered for the student to come inside to wait for a ride, but the student declined. The staff reported that cameras show the student leaving at 3:30 p.m.

The district stated in an email on February 27, 2025 that the procedure for students attending Girl's and Boy's club is that students wait in front of the building for the bus to pull up in front of the school and there is a group of 6-7 students who ride daily and get on together. It is a regular sized bus with "The Girls and Boys Club" written on the side. The number of students varies daily based on who is absent or if a student is doing something different after school. It is reported that two staff supervise in front of the school until 3 p.m. when staff return to the building for afterschool meetings. Student may buzz the front door to return inside to make calls, talk with staff or use the restroom. In this case the student had ridden the bus for several months prior to the event without incident. The procedure is that administration is present until 5 p.m. and do not leave until all students have departed.

The district responded in an email that a transportation request was considered and approved following the parent contacting the district about the January 21, 2025 incident.

A transportation request dated January 24, 2025 documented, "[Student] is a transfer student at [school]. [Student's] mom is requesting transportation due to a medical documentation stating, 'These symptoms are causing significant impairment in [student] daily functioning.' [Student] has missed the Teen Center bus a few times because [student] gets distracted and does not see it arrive. She is requesting door to door transportation."

Conclusion

The student has been a child with special education services in this district since elementary school and the student has not received specialized transportation services during that time. Further, during the 2024-2025 school year the school and parent discussed specialized transportation prior to the start of the school year and determined to discuss this issue at a later time. Documentation and interview did not reveal that concerns occurred and at the IEP team meeting on January 22, 2025 the IEP team discussed the January 21, 2025 incident and continued with not providing specialized transportation with the parent signing the PWN that resulted from this IEP meeting. As such, it is found that the IEP team did consider Federal regulations at C.F.R. 300.320(a)(4)(ii) and 34 C.F.R. 300.107(a)) to discuss specialized transportation as a supplementary aid and support for the student to attend the Girl's and Boy's Club. It is also important to consider the United States Supreme Court, in Endrew F. v. Douglas County School District, 117 LRP 9767, 137 S.Ct. 988 (2017) case that said a Free Appropriate Public Education means an IEP reasonably calculated to enable a child to make progress appropriate in light of the child's circumstances. The court added this statement: "The 'reasonably calculated' qualification reflects a recognition that crafting an appropriate program of education requires a prospective judgment by school officials." This statement means that courts are to continue to refrain from using the benefit of hindsight to judge an IEP; that is, courts are instructed to look at what the IEP team knew at the time it drafted the IEP, and with that knowledge, determine whether the IEP was reasonably calculated at that moment in time to provide an appropriate education. As such, the singular January 21, 2025 incident did not supercede the previous discussions and decisionmaking of IEP teams and result in a decision that specialized transportation should have been deemed necessary. It is acknowledged that since the incident the IEP team received additional outside information from the parent and made a transportation request on behalf of the student based on that information.

Based on the documentation and interviews with the parent and the district is found that the district did consider extracurricular and after school supports regarding safely transitioning from the school building to the Boys and Girls Club program at the student's IEP meeting on January 22, 2025 and is IN compliance with IDEA regulations.

Background Information

This investigation involved a preschool-aged student awaiting enrollment in the District. The Student was previously identified as eligible for Part C early intervention services for infants and toddlers with disabilities, which the Kansas Department of Health and Environment (KDHE) oversees. Part B of IDEA defines the preschool program for children with disabilities ages three through five, which the Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) oversees.

The Student was evaluated to prepare for their transition out of Part C services and to determine eligibility for Part B services. On April 2, 2025, a virtual eligibility and IEP meeting was held, and it was determined that the Student was eligible for Part B services as a student with multiple disabilities and a secondary disability of visual impairment. An IEP was also drafted. The Student's third birthday was on April 3, 2025.

Findings of the Investigation

The following findings are based on a review of documentation and interviews with the Parent and staff in the District.

1. The Student is eligible for Part B (school-based) special education services as a student with multiple disabilities and visual impairment.
2. According to an Individualized Family Service Plan (IFSP) dated September 9, 2024:
    a. The Student's initial eligibility and IFSP date were October 18, 2022.
    b. The Student was referred to the Kansas Part C (infant and toddlers) program on May 1, 2024 by a doctor and was determined to be automatically eligible for services due to an established risk for developmental delay (physical abuse, traumatic brain injury, cortical visual impairment, seizures, G-tube, and hearing impairments).

c. The Student received early intervention services in the areas of occupational therapy, vision services, physical therapy, social work, and family service coordination.

d. A transition conference to discuss the Student's transition from Part C (infant and toddler) services to Part B (school-based) services occurred on December 17, 2024. It was noted that evaluation would occur to determine eligibility for Part B, and if eligible, an IEP would be developed, and all of this needed to be completed by the Student's third birthday.

3. Between March 31, 2025 and April 22, 2025, Service Log Notes from the Infant/Toddler (Part C) Family Service Coordination (FSC) staff indicated the following:

a. March 31, 2025: "FSC received email invitation today for eligibility meeting scheduled virtually for [the Student] on April 2, 2025."

b. April 1, 2025: "Family acknowledged [the Student's] upcoming exit from Part C services due to 3rd birthday and no further questions at this time."

c. April 3, 2025: FSC completed the exit summary for the Student. FSC corresponded with the Parent regarding the IEP meeting the day before. The Parent reported that many services were recommended, but they did not receive any information about transportation or start date for the Student to receive services.

d. April 10, 2025: FSC checked in with the Parent, who stated the Student still had not started preschool, and they had not heard anything regarding the reason for the delay. FSC explored options with the Parent to access support.

e. April 15, 2025: FSC checked in with the Parent again, who stated they still had not received any information about the Student's ability to start services. The Parent asked for assistance with filing a formal complaint.

f. April 15, 2025: FSC contacted the Visual Impairment Teacher and the School for the Blind Teacher, who attended the IEP meeting. They reported that the IEP meeting was "never concluded and that no IEP was signed due to the team feeling like they needed additional information to make a placement decision." They also reported that language interpretation for the Parent was "poor" during the meeting.

g. April 22, 2025: FSC facilitated a meeting within the Parent's home with the Parent, the home nurse, an interpreter, the District Nurse, and the District Special Education Coordinator. The District Nurse requested the Parent's signature on a release of information to obtain medical records. The Special Education Coordinator read the Parent the PWN with proposed services and asked for the Parent's signature, which the Parent provided. The Special Education Coordinator told the Parent they would send them copies of all documents in Spanish following this meeting, but no explanation was reportedly provided for the delay in obtaining the Parent's signature or providing them copies of the IEP for three weeks since the meeting.

The Parent asked what the District plan was for providing the Student with compensatory services. The Special Education Coordinator reported that the District did not believe they were responsible for that since they were not provided with adequate medical information necessary for the Student to attend school. When asked about efforts to obtain needed medical information, the District Nurse stated the Parent declined to sign a release of information for a hospital on March 26, 2025. However, the Parent had signed a different release of information for another medical provider on the same date and said they would have signed anything if they understood what was being asked. The District Nurse reportedly acknowledged miscommunication and apologized to the Parent.

Allegedly, the Parent had been given forms in English to take to the doctor to have completed, which the Parent did. However, the doctor had asked what specific information the school needed and what time of day the Student would be attending school, which was information the Parent did not have, and no one from the District reportedly assisted the Parent in getting the information until this home visit on April 22, 2025.

4. An evaluation and eligibility report completed to determine eligibility for Part B services dated April 2, 2025, indicated the following:
    a. This was an initial evaluation.
    b. "[The Student] was referred for a comprehensive evaluation to determine continued eligibility as [the Student] transitions from Infant-Toddler Services (Part C) to school-based services (Part B). [Their] parent reported that their primary concerns include learning and language delays."
    c. The Student had a comprehensive developmental evaluation on March 26, 2025, that assessed the five key areas of development in young children:
        i. Cognitive/pre-academics (thinking skills);
        ii. Communication (speech/language skills);
        iii. Fine and good motor skills;
        iv. Adaptive (self-help skills); and
        v. Social-emotional (self and social relating and self-management skills).
    d. Parent interview: Spanish is the primary language spoken in the home, and the family is currently participating in an Intensive Family Services (IFS) program. This Student has been diagnosed with a developmental delay and has complex medical needs. The Parent expressed concerns about how well the Student will adapt to a school setting, particularly noting their difficulty with self-soothing. Although the Student does not currently use words in any language, they appear to understand both Spanish and English.

e. Historical information/IFSP review: Prior to state custody, this Student had no known birth or medical history. They were taken into Department for Children and Families (DCF) custody in late June 2022 due to physical abuse, initially hospitalized for lethargy, seizures, and feeding difficulties, and found to have signs of prolonged abuse. Following neonatal intensive care, they were placed with their adoptive family in early August 2022. The Student has multiple medical diagnoses, including dysphagia, cortical visual impairment, and hearing difficulties, and traumatic brain injury. Recently, they began experiencing seizures and are on various medications. The Student also receives nutrition through a G-tube, although they have been approved to trial purees.

f. Separate specialist evaluation reports were included for vision and physical therapy.

g. Based on the results of the evaluation, the Student demonstrated educationally significant delays in the following areas:

   i. Receptive and expressive language skills;
   ii. Fine and visual motor skills;
   iii. Social-emotional development; and
   iv. Adaptive behavior.

h. The IEP Team determined that the Student met the eligibility criteria for Multiple Disabilities (coexisting impairments that do not include deaf-blindness) and Visual Impairment.

5. A draft IEP dated April 2, 2025 outlined the following for the Student:

   a. The Student turned three years old on April 3, 3025.

   b. Meeting attendees:

      i. The Parent, in person;
      ii. The Speech-Language Pathologist (SLP), in person;
      iii. The Special Education Teacher, virtual;
      iv. The District Nurse, in person;
      v. The Physical Therapist (PT), in person;
      vi. The Occupational Therapist (OT), in person;
      vii. The Special Education Coordinator, virtual;
      viii. The Vision Teacher, in person;
      ix. The Infant/Toddler Worker, in person; and
      x. The Psychologist, virtual.

   c. The Student's strengths: "[The Student] enjoys being tickled and loves the rumble ball. If it is not too hot outside, [the Student] enjoys swinging and being spun in the swing."

   d. Impact of disability: The Student's delay in their fine motor skills may impede their ability to participate in fine motor and play activities in the classroom.

This Student's delay in their gross motor skills impacts their ability to access their educational environment and participate in movement-based learning with their peers.

e. Goals, accommodations, or modifications were determined to be needed in the areas of motor skills, communication, social-emotional, pre-academics, and adaptive skills.

f. The parental concerns section of the IEP was blank.

g. Special considerations:

   i. The Student requires assistive technology.

   ii. The Student is blind or visually impaired.

   iii. The Student has communication needs.

   iv. The Student requires an Individual Nursing Care Plan.

   v. The Student has limited English proficiency.

h. Goals:

   i. Goal 1.1: "By 3/31/2026, [the Student] will use [their] preferred method of communication to express two functional messages (i.e., go, like, no) with 70% accuracy given prompting (including but not limited to verbal, tactile, hand under hand, partial physical, etc.)."

   ii. Goal 2.1: "By April 1, 2026, to increase [their] ability to participate in fine motor and play activities, [the Student] will grasp and hold up to 5 small objects or toys for up to 5 seconds on 3 out of 4 trials using either hand and with adult support."

   iii. Goal 3.1: "By April 1, 2026, [the Student] will demonstrate an improvement in gross motor skills by prop sitting for 2 minutes while wearing [their] Benik vest and bearing weight through upper extremities (hands and forearms) in [a] prone position for 30 seconds to improve [their] ability to complete transitions independently.

   iv. Goal 4.1: "When in proximity of peers, [the Student] will participate in play by showing interest in toys or activities that they are engaged in using a variety of methods such as holding the toy or object, making eye contact, observing and/or focusing on the peer's play in 3 out of 4 opportunities."

i. Special education services:

   i. Special education services in the early childhood special education program classroom from April 3, 2025 through April 1, 2026 for:

      1. 210 minutes, one day per week;

      2. 180 minutes, one day per week; and

      3. 190 minutes, two days per week.

j. Related services:
   i. Special education services (speech/language) for 30 minutes weekly in the early childhood special education program classroom from April 3, 2025 through April 1, 2026.
   ii. Occupational therapy (fine motor) for 20 minutes, one day per week via special education direct services outside the regular education classroom.
   iii. Physical therapy (gross motor) for 20 minutes, one day per week via special education direct services outside the regular education classroom.

k. Support for school personnel:
   i. Teacher consultation: The PT will train the classroom team on the use of adaptive seating, mobility equipment, and transfers at the beginning of the school year, as new staff arrive, and as requested.

6. Meeting notes dated April 2, 2025 documented a discussion of things listed in the evaluation report and the draft IEP. They also noted:

a. The Parent stated they had received a copy of their parental rights, understood them, and had no questions.

b. The District had not been able to review the medical records. The Parent stated that their main concern was the Student's transition to a school setting.

c. The District Nurse stated that the Student would need one-to-one nursing while the Student was in school and when the Student was being transported to and from school. The District Nurse also explained that doctor's orders were required in this situation for the Student to attend school with appropriate care, per state and federal law, as well as the requirements for nursing care at school.

d. The team moved forward with the IEP. The Parent confirmed that they had received the draft IEP that had been translated into Spanish. The Parent stated their concerns were that the Student would be in a new environment and questioned if staff would be able to help the Student when they needed it, and also communicate with the Parent.

e. The Parent was interested in looking at the School for the Blind as a possible placement, and the staff from the Infant/Toddler Program had taken the Parent for a tour of the facility and invited the School for the Blind staff to the IEP meeting without the knowledge of the Early Childhood Program team. Because the School for the Blind would be a more restrictive environment, the team decided to revisit the discussion at a later date after data had been gathered and an informed decision could be made.

f. The District Nurse would follow up with the Parent on April 14, 2025 regarding the doctor's orders and information.

7. A Prior Written Notice (PWN) for Identification, Initial Services, Placement, Change in Services, Change of Placement, and Request for Consent dated April 2, 2025 indicated the following:

   a. A meeting was held on April 2, 2025 to determine:

      i. Whether the Student was eligible for special education;

      ii. Special education and related services needed by the Student; and

      iii. The appropriate educational placement to provide special education and related services identified in the Student's IEP.

   b. The Student was found eligible for special education.

   c. The team proposed that the Student receive special education services in the following manner:

      i. 20 minutes weekly of physical therapy services outside the special education classroom;

      ii. ii. 20 minutes weekly of occupational services outside the special education classroom;

      iii. 30 minutes weekly of speech and language therapy inside the special education classroom;

      iv. 30 minutes, 4 days weekly of specialized transportation services;

      v. 30 minutes weekly of indirect vision services;

      vi. 210 minutes, 1 day weekly of special education services inside the special education classroom;

      vii. 180 minutes, 1 day weekly of special education services inside the special education classroom; viii. 190 minutes, 2 days weekly of special education services inside the special education classroom; and

      ix. 20 minutes, 1 day weekly of vision services outside the special education classroom.

   d. A placement at the School for the Blind on Wednesday, when the Early Childhood Program was not in session, was rejected because the District had not had time to gather data to determine if that was an appropriate placement.

   e. The Student would require a 5-point harness, a one-to-one nurse to travel with them to and from school, and trunk space to accommodate their wheelchair. The Student would also need one-to-one nursing throughout each school day from the start of travel to school through drop off from transportation at the end of the day.

f. Other factors: "The medical notes for the 1:1 nurse were not able to be provided to the district on the day of eligibility determination and IEP programming development. The parent stated in the meeting that [they] would be seeing the doctor with [the Student] on April 10, 2025, and hoped to have the necessary medical documentation for the 1:1 nurse to the district as soon as possible after that appointment. At this time, we are not able to implement the IEP until medical documentation is provided for the 1:1 nurse. The school nurse has followed up with the parent, and the parent has indicated [they have] not been able to obtain the information from the doctor. The school nurse offered to support the parent in obtaining appropriate documentation, but the parent has not responded to the nurse for that assistance, nor has [the Parent] turned in the necessary medical orders or information from the doctor. As of this 4/18/2025, attempts have been made to contact Parent, but we haven't heard back regarding any status of the orders or any requests for assistance."

g. It was indicated that the PWN was delivered to the Parent via email by the Case Manager on April 18, 2025.

h. A Request for Consent For Special Education Action that was included as part of the PWN asked for consent to carry out the special education action as indicated. It noted that the proposed actions would begin within 10 school days upon receipt of written consent. It did not indicate whether consent was given or not and did not include an actual signature. The Parent's typed name and date of April 18, 2025 were filled in.

i. It should be noted that only section one of the PWN, indicating identification/eligibility, was checked, which indicates parental consent is not required. None of the other sections were checked, including section two for initial services and placement, for which parental consent is required.

8. On April 16, 2025, the Parent filed a formal complaint.

9. In an email on April 22, 2025 to the Special Education Coordinator, the Infant and Toddler Family Services Coordinator/OT stated that as of April 16, 2025, the Parent reported they did not receive any documents following the IEP meeting and were not aware of any contact from the District Nurse for follow-up. The Parent also did not know when the Student would start school and that it was "very hard" to understand what was going on in the last half of the IEP meeting due to poor connection and poor interpretation."

Special Education Coordinator Interview

10. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Special Education Coordinator confirmed they had attended the April 2, 2025 meeting and explained the agreed-upon next steps. They explained that the expectation was for the Parent to supply the District with the necessary medical documentation to allow the Student to enroll in school. They stated that the Parent received a proposed IEP outlining the Student's program once they could attend. The reason school attendance was contingent on this, they clarified, was the Parent's failure to provide medical authorization for essential health-related tools, equipment, medical devices, and medication for the District. The Special Education Coordinator further noted that the Student had a G-tube, and there was no prescription or doctor's orders available to enable the School to provide feeding, water, or other critical support in an emergency.

11. Regarding the missing medical information, the Special Education Coordinator initially did not know the reason for the delay until later. It was discovered that the Parent initially believed the information was unnecessary and then did not have it available even when convinced of its importance. The Special Education Coordinator later learned that the Infant/Toddler Worker had possessed the records but had allegedly not advised the Parent to share them, nor explained that the School needed them to serve the Student. The Special Education Coordinator also noted that at the IEP meeting, the Parent promised to obtain the information but failed to do so by a subsequent May 10, 2025 meeting. It wasn't until a meeting with the Infant/Toddler Worker that their possession of the medical records was revealed. Following this, with the District Nurse present, the Parent agreed to sign a release, allowing the District to begin obtaining the necessary information and initiate services for the Student.

12. The Special Education Coordinator stated they were unsure how the need for medical records was communicated to the Parent from the Infant/Toddler Worker. However, the Special Education Coordinator explained that they personally communicated to the Parent that services could not be provided without those records. The Special Education Coordinator emphasized the District's readiness to provide services for all students, regardless of medical conditions, as long as it was deemed acceptable by a doctor. However, without essential information for procedures like G-tube feeding and managing seizures (including prescribed medical equipment and medication), the School could not provide those services. The Special Education Coordinator also confirmed that the IEP paperwork and PWN were provided to the Parent in Spanish, and it was explained that their signature was needed to initiate services with an interpreter present. However, the Special Education Coordinator could only verify the copy they gave to the Parent in person on April 18, 2025, following the Parent's signing of the document.

13. Regarding the PWN for the Student's identification and eligibility, which appeared to indicate that parental consent was not required, the Special Education Coordinator expressed uncertainty about why it was written that way. The Coordinator emphasized that this was an initial IEP and that services could not be initiated without parental consent, something they stated they had made very clear to the Parent during their meetings. The Special Education Coordinator also explained the discrepancy between the draft IEP and the PWN regarding transportation as an error and said the PWN "stands as the legal document that the school district has to follow." They also explained the details of the specialized transportation needed by the Student, which aligned with what was written in the PWN dated April 2, 2025.

14. Regarding the draft IEP, which included a service start date of April 3rd, 2025, the Special Education Coordinator explained that the District had proposed homebound services, and the Parent had signed the agreement for these services on May 7, 2025. The Special Education Coordinator stated that a special education early childhood teacher and an occupational therapist had been assigned to the Student's case to provide services until the end of the school year. The Special Education Coordinator clarified that during the home visit in April, the Parent had signed some paperwork allowing the District to obtain some, but not all, of the necessary medical records. This allowed the District to gain a better understanding of the situation. The Special Education Coordinator added that the District Nurse assigned to the case had been following up on all the required medical records as they were received from the doctor's office.
15. The Special Education Coordinator also thought it was important to note that the Parent "seemed very confused" throughout the process and seemed to have received "mixed information." The Special Education Coordinator reportedly attempted to understand why the Parent believed the medical information was unnecessary, but the Parent became unresponsive. The Parent had been more cooperative in signing releases following direct meetings and follow-ups with the Special Education Coordinator, who stressed that the District never intended to deny services due to the Student's medical needs. They simply required the information to provide appropriate support. A concern was raised regarding the lack of medical equipment or medication verification in the home, which was crucial in case the Student needed immediate assistance.
16. Finally, the Special Education Coordinator expressed confusion about the Infant/Toddler Worker's continued presence at meetings with the Parent, because allegedly, after the Student became eligible for Part B services, the regulatory responsibility shifted to the school setting. The Special Education Coordinator recounted a home visit where, after assuring the Parent that programming wasn't being withheld, the Infant/Toddler Worker revealed that the Parent had provided them with the necessary medical records. The Special Education Coordinator expressed being "floored" that the Infant/Toddler (Part C) team had never indicated they had this information, neither to the Parent about Part B's need for it (especially for feeding and water) nor to the Part B team. The Special Education Coordinator was reportedly further surprised at a later meeting when the Parent expressed disappointment that services had not started immediately after signing the IEP, evaluation, and PWN for eligibility, despite the Special Education Coordinator repeatedly explaining the need for medical documents to provide both sustaining and lifesaving care legally. The Special Education Coordinator also mentioned setting up homebound services quickly, but initially requiring a parent to be present during services due to concerns about the necessary medical equipment and medication not being available in the home. Occupational Therapist and Family Service Coordinator (OT), Part C Interview

17. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator on May 13, 2025 the OT indicated that the Part C Team conducted their first meeting with the Part B Team on December 17, 2024. The upcoming transition was discussed, and the Part C Team received a copy of the IFSP. The OT stated, "There's a health history section on the IFSP and I would like to note that on that health history, [the Student's] significant medical needs were all noted. It was noted that [the Student] did currently receive 40 hours of home health nursing care." The OT continued, "That was discussed with the Part B Coordinator and a representative, and we did also cover [their] vasovagal nerve stimulator that was also in the health history, and it was noted in the health history that [the Student] does see a neurologist."

18. The OT from the Part C Program shared that after the transition conference was held, it was the Part B Program's responsibility to gather all records and needed information so that the Student can start before their third birthday. It was noted that the transition conference "should be scheduled no later than March 13th." According to the OT, the Parent had not heard from the Part B team as of March 11, 2025, so the Parent reached out to the Part B Team. The OT stated, "So I sent an email to the Part B team to inquire about the scheduling, see if there had been any crossed wires. The team reported that they had received consent for evaluation from [the Parent] and would schedule with [the Parent] that day." The OT shared that the evaluation was scheduled for March 26, 2025, which was only one week before the Student's third birthday.

    The Vision Teacher was unable to attend the evaluation meeting because they "did not receive sufficient notice." The OT thought there was some confusion regarding the Parent understanding of exactly what was needed from the Release of Information (ROI) from the health care provider. At that time, no ROI was requested for the neurologist who oversaw the vagal nerve stimulator. That ROI was not requested until April 8, 2025, "despite the fact that it is clearly stated in the health section of [the Student's] IFSP, which was released in December." The OT shared that the eligibility IEP meeting was not scheduled at the evaluation. According to the OT, an invitation was sent out to the eligibility IEP team on March 31, 2025.

19. According to the OT, the Parent had not received any follow-up information or support from the Part B Team. The Parent was unsure of the next steps and the Student had not started any services on their third birthday which was "required with C to B transitions." When asked if the Part C Team had the records requested by the Part B Team for the outside medical provider, the OT indicated, "We did not have the script for the vagal nerve stimulator. I did share the medical records we did have … Those records were not requested by Part B from us until April 22 at the meeting at the Parent's house."

20. The OT shared that after the Complaint was made, there was a meeting at the Parent's house with the OT, the Head Nurse, Part B, and the Home Health Nurse. At that meeting, the Parent signed the ROI for the Children's Hospital. "The Nurse reported that was the reason that [the Student] had not received any services yet. Mom reports that [they] thought that the team was going to gather all needed information, and [the Parent] did not understand the earlier request for an ROI on May 6th. … On April 22, the Parent signed a PWN for services."

Parent Interview

21. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Parent shared they believed the Student would start school one to two weeks after the Student turned three years old on April 3, 2025. The Parent indicated the Part B Team didn't give the Parent a specific date that the Student would start school. The date given was a tentative date. The Parent stated, "No, they haven't confirmed the date yet. They told me that in August it will be the date, but they have not given that date yet." The Parent indicated the B Team told the Parent the reason the Student hadn't started school was because of the paperwork. The Parent shared that "there were some papers that the doctor had to sign." The Parent thought they had signed those papers on April 14, 2025. The Parent shared that they did not receive copies of the paper that the Parent signed, either in hard copies or by email.

    The Parent indicated that they had signed an ROI for medical records. The Parent shared they signed via tablet. The Parent shared that the Student had not started school, but the Student was eligible to receive 30 minutes of classes at home. The Parent indicated that the Student should get speech therapy, therapy for the Student's vision, and therapy for mobility. The Parent shared that a teacher had come to their home three times to work with the Student as of May 14, 2025.

Positions of the Parties, Applicable Regulations, and Conclusions

Issue One

Whether USD #500, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, developed an IEP for the Student within 30 days of the Student's initial eligibility for special education. K.A.R. 91-40-8(h); 34 CFR §300.323(c).

According to K.A.R. 91-40-8(h) and 34 CFR §300.323(c), each agency shall ensure that an IEP is developed for each exceptional child within 30 days from the date on which the child is determined to need special education and related services. Additionally, as soon as possible following the development of the IEP, special education and related services must be made available to the child in accordance with the child's IEP.

The Parent alleged that a virtual evaluation and IEP meeting were held on April 2, 2025 and the Student was found eligible for special education services as a student with multiple disabilities and a visual impairment, but the IEP was not completed but was in draft form. The Parent further claimed that as of April 16, 2025, the Student's IEP was not complete, they had not been placed yet, and were not receiving special education services.

During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Parent reported believing the Student would begin services approximately one to two weeks after the Student's third birthday on April 3, 2025. Kansas regulations state that "Each school district must make FAPE available to all eligible children beginning on their third birthday." The Parent indicated the Part B Team did not provide a specific date indicating sometime in August when the Student would receive services. The Parent stated that the delay in services was due to paperwork, specifically papers that the physician needed to sign before the Student could receive services. The Parent indicated the Student was eligible for 30 minutes of at-home class a week until the necessary ROI was received by the B team and the Student had received those services at home three times as of May 14, 2025.

According to the District, the Parent attended the meeting on April 2, 2025, accompanied by outside guests, and did not provide consent to initiate the IEP, which remained in draft form. The Student has significant medical needs, and the Parent had not provided the District with the necessary doctor's orders to address these nursing requirements, despite multiple requests. The District also needed this medical documentation to determine if nursing support was required for special transportation. The District reported having a nurse and placement ready to begin services as soon as the medical documents were provided and the Parent signed the IEP. The District maintained that the delay in services was solely due to the lack of medical records and Parental consent to initiate the IEP.

The District indicated the delay in services was due to not having a prescription from the Student's neurologist in order for the School to properly administer the G-tube, which provided the Student the ability to eat and drink at school. The Special Education Coordinator explained that at the April 2, 2025 evaluation and eligibility meeting, the understanding was for the Parent to provide the District with the required medical documentation for the Student's enrollment. The Special Education Coordinator stated that the Parent received a proposed IEP that would be implemented once the Student could attend school. The Coordinator clarified that the contingency for school attendance was the Parent's lack of ROI for medical authorization for necessary health-related tools, equipment, medical devices, and medication, further noting the Student's G-tube and the absence of a prescription or doctor's orders to allow the School to provide feeding, water, or other essential care. Without essential information for procedures like G-tube feeding and managing seizures (including prescribed medical equipment and medication), the School could not provide those services safely.

The Special Education Coordinator reported that the Infant/Toddler (Part C) team had never indicated they had the medical information, neither to the Parent about Part B's need for it (especially for feeding and water) nor to the Part B team. The Part C team's OT indicated that the Part B team had the medical information noted on the IFSP that the Part B team had access to but did not have a prescription for the G-Tube.

Regarding the draft IEP, which included a service start date of April 3, 2025, the Special Education Coordinator explained that the District had proposed homebound services, and the Parent had signed the agreement for these services on May 7, 2025. The Parent inquired about the District's plan for compensatory services. The Special Education Coordinator stated that the District did not believe they were responsible for providing these services, citing the lack of necessary medical information for the Student to attend school. Regarding efforts to obtain this information, the District Nurse reported that the Parent had declined to sign an ROI for a hospital on March 26, 2025. However, the Parent had signed a release for a different medical provider on the same date and indicated they would have signed any release if they had understood the request. The District Nurse reportedly acknowledged the miscommunication and apologized to the Parent.

On April 15, 2025, FSC contacted the Visual Impairment Teacher and the School for the Blind Teacher who had attended the IEP meeting. These teachers reported that the IEP meeting "never concluded" and that an IEP was not signed because the team felt they needed more information to determine placement. They also indicated that the language interpretation for the Parent during the meeting was "poor."

Once a child is found eligible for special education in Kansas, there does not need to be a redetermination of that which applies to the Student's transition from the Part C Program to the Part B Program.1 The Student received home services for 30 minutes a week for three weeks while waiting for the ROI to be signed and returned by the medical establishment and the Parent.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it was not substantiated that the District did not develop an IEP for the Student within 30 days from the date on which the child was determined to need special education and related services. Additionally, following the development of the draft IEP, special education at home for 30 minutes once a week was made available to the Student in accordance with the child's IEP.

This report is in response to a complaint ------- filed with the Kansas State Department of Education, on behalf of their child, -------. For the remainder of this report ------- will be referred to as "the student." ------- will be referred to as "the parent."

Investigation of Complaint

K.A.R. § 91-40-5(c)(5) requires that the complaint investigation include "[a] discussion with the complainant during which additional information may be gathered and specific allegations of noncompliance identified, verified, and recorded." Laura Jurgensen, complaint investigator, held this discussion with the parent via phone on May 7, gathering additional information and verifying the specific allegations to be investigated. The complaint investigator provided the specific allegations to be investigated to the parent via email on May 7. The parent did not dispute how the complaint investigator framed the issues to be investigated. The parent also provided documentation for the complaint investigator to consider as part of the investigation and the parent and investigator exchanged multiple emails. The district assistant special education director and the investigator had two phone calls and exchanged multiple emails. The investigator interviewed the principal of the student's school, the student's special education teacher, a district special services coordinator, and a district school psychologist and exchanged emails with the district special services coordinator. The district provided the investigator with a response to the issues identified, as well as all documentation and data the investigator requested.

Background Information

The student was a second grader in the 2024–25 school year. The student's 2024–25 IEP included one goal focused on social skills and included 30 minutes of special education services five times per week. The parent described the student in the information submitted for the student's reevaluation as "inquisitive, creative, and loves exploring the world around [the student.]" (Draft Reevaluation Report, Apr. 17, 2025.) The student's teacher described what she loves most about the student as "[the student's] smile [and] joking demeanor." (Draft Reevaluation Report, Apr. 17, 2025.)

Issues

In the written complaint, the complaint investigator's discussion with the complainant, and an issue the parent submitted on May 16, 2025, and the district agreed to add, the parent alleges fifteen issues upon which this investigation will focus:

Issue One: Whether the district provided written notice that meets the requirements of 34 C.F.R. § 300.503(b) to the parent in response to the parent's October 2024 request for accommodations to be added to the student's IEP. 34 C.F.R. § 300.503(a).

Issue Two: Whether the district ensured that a reevaluation of the student was conducted in accordance with 34 C.F.R. §§ 300.304 through 300.11 if the district determines that the educational or related services needs, including improved academic achievement and functional performance, of the student warrant a reevaluation; or if the student's parent or teacher requests a reevaluation and at least once every three years. 34 C.F.R. § 300.303.

Issue Three: Whether the district provided notice to the parent, in accordance with 34 C.F.R. § 300.503, that described the reevaluation procedures the district proposed to conduct prior to conducting the student's 2024–25 school year reevaluation. 34 C.F.R. § 300.304(a).

Issue Four: Whether the district obtained informed parental consent, in accordance with 34 C.F.R. § 300.300(a)(1), prior to conducting the student's 2024–25 school year reevaluation. 34 C.F.R. § 300.300(c).

Issue Five: Whether as part of the student's 2024–25 school year reevaluation, the IEP Team and other qualified professionals, as appropriate, reviewed existing evaluation data on the student including evaluations and information the parents of the student provided; current classroom-based, local, or State assessments, and classroom-based observations; and teachers and related services providers' observations. 34 C.F.R. § 300.305(a)(1), (b); K.S.A. § 72-3428(i)(1).

Issue Six: Whether as part of the student's 2024–25 school year reevaluation, the IEP Team and other qualified professionals, as appropriate, on the basis of the review of existing evaluation data, and input from the student's parents, identified what additional data, if any, were needed to determine whether the student continues to be an exceptional child, and the student's educational needs; the student's present levels of academic achievement and related developmental needs; whether the student continues to need special education and related services; and whether any additions or modifications to the special education and related services were needed to enable the student to meet the measurable annual goals set out in the student's IEP and to participate, as appropriate, in the general education curriculum. 34 C.F.R. § 300.305(a)(2), (b); K.S.A. § 72-3428(i)(2).

Issue Seven: Whether in conducting the student's 2024–25 school year reevaluation the district used a variety of assessment tools and strategies to gather relevant functional, developmental, and academic information about the student, including information provided by the parent, that may assist in determining whether the student continues to be an exceptional child; and the content of the student's IEP, including information related to enabling the student to be involved in and progress in the general education curriculum. 34 C.F.R. § 300.304(b)(1); K.S.A. § 72-3428(b)(1).

Issue Eight: Whether in conducting the student's 2024–25 school year reevaluation the district used technically sound instruments that may assess the relative contribution of cognitive and behavioral factors, in addition to physical or developmental factors. 34 C.F.R. § 300.304(b)(3).

Issue Nine: Whether in conducting the student's 2024–25 school year reevaluation the district ensured the student is assessed in all areas of suspected exceptionality, including, if appropriate, health, vision, hearing, social and emotional status, general intelligence, academic performance, communicative status, and motor abilities. 34 C.F.R. § 300.304(c)(4); K.S.A. § 72-3428(c)(2).

Issue Ten: Whether in conducting the student's 2024–25 school year reevaluation the district ensured the evaluation is sufficiently comprehensive to identify all the student's special education and related services needs, whether commonly linked to the disability category in which the student has been classified. 34 C.F.R. § 300.304(c)(6).

Issue Eleven: Whether the district ensured that the IEP Team revised the student's IEP, as appropriate, to address information about the student provided to, or by, the parents, as described under 34 C.F.R. § 300.305(a)(2); the student's anticipated needs; or other matters. 34 C.F.R. § 300.324(b)(1)(C)–(E).

Issue Twelve: Whether the district provided the student with FAPE during the 2024–25 school year. 34 C.F.R. § 300.101(a); K.S.A. § 72-3410(a)(2); K.A.R. § 91-40-2.

Issue Thirteen: Whether the district afforded the parent, in accordance with the procedures of 34 C.F.R. §§ 300.613 through 300.621, an opportunity to inspect and review all education records with respect to the identification, evaluation, and educational placement of the student; and the provision of a free appropriate public education (FAPE) to the student. 34 C.F.R. § 300.501(a).

Issue Fourteen: Whether the district correctly and within a reasonable time responded to the parent's request for an independent educational evaluation. 34 C.F.R. § 300.502.

Issue Fifteen: Whether the district predetermined the student's disability category prior to the May 2025 IEP Team meeting to discuss the student's reevaluation. 34 C.F.R. § 300.306(a); 34 C.F.R. § 300.501b).

Issue One

Prior Written Notice for Accommodations Request

Applicable Law

Written notice that meets the requirements of 34 C.F.R. § 300.503(b) must be given to the parents of a child with a disability a reasonable time before the public agency proposes to initiate or change the identification, evaluation, or educational placement of the child or the provision of FAPE to the child; or refuses to initiate or change the identification, evaluation, or educational placement of the child or the provision of FAPE to the child. 34 C.F.R. § 300.503(a).

Analysis: Findings of Fact

In the parent's complaint, she indicates that in October 2024 she met with "all required IEP members" and requested "noise-canceling headphones, sensory accommodations, and improved communication" be added to the student's IEP. (Parent's Complaint, May 4, 2025.) When the complaint investigator interviewed the parent, the parent indicated that the special education teacher told the parent at the October 2024 meeting that the requested items would be added to the student's IEP. The parent also voiced concern in the complaint that the district later indicated the October 2024 meeting was not an IEP Team meeting and this characterization denied the parent "formal procedural safeguards, documentation, and follow-up action." (Parent's Complaint, May 4, 2025.) In the interview with the complaint investigator, the parent indicated the procedural safeguards she was denied due to the district's characterization of the meeting was "meaningful participation;" the documentation she was denied was documenting her parent concerns, including her requests for accommodations to be added to the student's IEP; and the follow-up action she was denied was that the requested accommodations were not added to the student's IEP.

In the district's response to the complaint, the district stated that on October 16, 2024, the parent participated in the student's parent-teacher conference and then requested a follow-up discussion. (District's Response to the Complaint, May 20, 2025.) The special education teacher then set up a meeting with the parent, principal, student's general education teacher, and special education teacher for October 23, 2024. (District's Response to the Complaint, May 20, 2025.) The district's response indicated this meeting was not an IEP Team meeting and the participants discussed, among other things, general education interventions available to all students. (District's Response to the Complaint, May 20, 2025.) In the interview with the complaint investigator, the principal and special education teacher both stated they do not recall the parent requesting accommodations be added to the student's IEP. (District's Response to the Complaint, May 20, 2025.) The principal and special education teacher also both stated that if the parent had requested accommodations, their response would have been to set up an IEP Team meeting to discuss the request. (District's Response to the Complaint, May 20, 2025.) The special education teacher further explained that the district's procedure when a parent requests a change to a student's IEP is to schedule an IEP Team meeting to discuss. (District's Response to the Complaint, May 20, 2025.)

Conclusion

The parent stated several items she believed she was denied because the district did not characterize the October meeting as an IEP Team meeting. Whether the October 2024 meeting was characterized as an IEP Team meeting does not impact the district's obligation to respond to a parent's request regarding the provision of FAPE to the child with a Prior Written Notice. The parent indicates she requested accommodations be added to the student's IEP and district staff indicate the parent did not make this request. Neither party has documentation of this request or a lack of a request. The parent submitted all text messages and emails with school staff from the 2024–25 school year. The investigator reviewed all of it and did not find any reference to an accommodations request at the October 2024 meeting.

As there is no documentation of this request, the complaint investigator must then determine whether the information from the parent or from district staff is more credible. This investigator finds that the district staff testimony regarding the meeting discussion is more credible because the district staff were able to explain the district's procedure for this type of request and how district staff would have followed the procedure had the parent requested accommodations be added to the student's IEP. Additionally, had the parent made this request it is reasonable to think that the parent may have referenced it in her regular text messages to the student's special education teacher, but there is no mention of it.

Therefore, this investigation concludes that the district did not violate its obligation to ensure that it provided written notice that meets the requirements of 34 C.F.R. § 300.503(b) to the parent in response to the parent's October 2024 request for accommodations to be added to the student's IEP under 34 C.F.R. § 300.503(a). As there is no violation, no corrective action is needed.

Issue Two

Reevaluation Need

Applicable Law

A public agency must ensure that a reevaluation of each child with a disability is conducted in accordance with 34 C.F.R. §§ 300.304 through 300.311 if the public agency determines that the educational or related services needs, including improved academic achievement and functional performance, of the child warrant a reevaluation; or if the child's parent or teacher requests a reevaluation. A reevaluation conducted under 34 C.F.R. 300.303(a) may occur not more than once a year, unless the parent and the public agency agree otherwise; and must occur at least once every 3 years, unless the parent and the public agency agree that a reevaluation is unnecessary. 34 C.F.R. § 300.303.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

In the parent's complaint she stated that "[a]t the beginning of the 2024–2025 school year, the district discouraged the parent from initiating a triennial evaluation, citing risk of losing services." (Parent's Complaint, May 4, 2025.) In the interview with the complaint investigator, the parent stated that she emailed the school psychologist at the beginning of the 2024–25 school year to discuss the plan for reevaluation. The parent's recollection was that the school psychologist indicated that the student was doing so well the IEP Team would discuss the student "graduating" from special education. The parent stated in the interview with the complaint investigator that she was concerned about the student no longer being eligible for special education as she had new concerns from the summer of 2024. The parent also indicated in the interview with the complaint investigator that the special education teacher "talked her out of" the reevaluation in a phone call because the reevaluation could show the student was no longer eligible for special education.

The parent also forwarded the complaint investigator an email she sent to the student's IEP Team on August 15, 2024, and indicated to the complaint investigator that this email "provides a clear example of something I referenced in my state complaint: that I was discouraged from moving forward with my written request for a reevaluation of" the student. (Email from Parent to Complaint Investigator, May 19, 2024.) The email is not completely clear about why the parent felt she was "discouraged from moving forward" with her request for a reevaluation. The parent may be referencing:

> Please accept my apology for the misunderstanding on my part. This morning, [the special education teacher] reached out and was able to explain what I believe you ([the school psychologist]) was trying to convey, and I now see where I lost track in the conversation. . . . When I heard that [the student] might graduate from [the] IEP, all that came through (jumbled) within my brain, was that [the student] would lose . . . supports. Sadly, I misunderstood the conversation as I was stuck on this couldn't be beneficial for [the student] > at all. So, I dug my heels in and preemptively demanded that [the student] be evaluated. (my fight response is strong when I come from a place of panic). And often when I'm "hearing" information what's processed through my brain isn't always what the message really was.

>
> After further consideration, I've decided that waiving my right to evaluate at this time will allow us more time to work with [the student] and potentially get a more accurate picture at [the] next triennial evaluation. (thank you [to the special education teacher]).

The district's response indicates that that the student's last evaluation was completed in December 2021 and the student's next reevaluation was due to be completed in December 2024. (District's Response to the Complaint, May 20, 2025.) The student's IEP Team met on September 11, 2024, to review the student's IEP and the IEP Team decided that a reevaluation was not needed at that time. (District's Response to the Complaint, May 20, 2025.) The district provided the parent with a Prior Written Notice on September 12, 2024, describing the proposed action as, "[t]he team proposes to waive the 3 year re-evaluation at this time" and the parent signed her consent the same date. (Prior Written Notice Proposing to Waive the Reevaluation and Signed Parent Consent, Sept. 12, 2024.)

In the interview with district staff, the complaint investigator asked the school psychologist for her perspective on her conversation with the parent where the parent indicated the student may "graduate" from an IEP. The school psychologist explained that it is her standard practice to explain that as part of a reevaluation, the IEP Team must determine whether the student continues to have an exceptionality and based on that exceptionality, needs special education and related services. The school psychologist said she always takes care to explain the IEP Team's required discussion on the second prong of eligibility (i.e., need for special education services) to ensure parents understand that is part of a reevaluation. The school psychologist maintained that she had the same conversation with this parent as she does with every parent, explaining the reevaluation process, but did not try to discourage the parent from a reevaluation. The special education teacher reflected that he has heard the school psychologist share this information many times and indicated his conversations with the parent were in the same vein, explaining the process and not trying to persuade the parent in any direction. When the investigator explained that the regulation at focus in this issue requires the district to reevaluate the student if the district determined that the student's improved academic achievement and functional performance warrant a reevaluation and asked why the district did not reevaluate if the student's performance had improved, the school psychologist responded that her comments to the parent were explaining the eligibility process and not necessarily indicating the student had improved to the degree that the student would not be eligible, just that eligibility was part of the discussion.

On January 9, 2025, the parent emailed the special education teacher, general education teacher, and principal and requested a reevaluation. (Email from Parent to District Staff Requesting Reevaluation, Jan. 9, 2025.) The district provided a Prior Written Notice explaining the reevaluation and requesting consent, which the parent signed on January 15, 2025. (Prior Written Notice and Request for Consent to Evaluate and Signed Parent Consent, Jan. 15, 2025.)

Conclusion

The district documented the IEP Team's decision not to reevaluate the student in September 2024 through a Prior Written Notice and requested the parent's consent, which the parent provided. 34 C.F.R. § 300.303(b)(2) only requires agreement that a reevaluation is unnecessary, not the heightened standard of consent, but nothing prevented the district from documenting the parent and district's agreement not to evaluate as it did. The parent provided an email that indicated she waived her "right to evaluate." (Email from Parent to IEP Team, Aug. 15, 2024.) The parent alleges that district staff tried to talk her out of a reevaluation early in the school year, but there is not clear evidence of that. The email the parent provided in support of this assertion does not clearly establish that the parent is responding to district staff trying to talk her out of a reevaluation. It is equally plausible that the parent was responding to district staff explaining the two prongs of eligibility, as district staff indicated. District staff testimony and written documentation also do not show that the district determined that the student's educational or related services needs, including improved academic achievement and functional performance, warranted a reevaluation.

The documentation provided for this issue shows that the parent consented to not evaluate and does not have any indication district staff talked the parent out of evaluating. There is not documentation to show the district determined the student's needs or improvement warranted a reevaluation, which would have compelled the district to reevaluate the student. Therefore, this investigation concludes that the district did not violate its obligation to ensure that a reevaluation of the student was conducted in accordance with 34 C.F.R. §§ 300.304 through 300.11 if the district determines that the educational or related services needs, including improved academic achievement and functional performance, of the student warrant a reevaluation; or if the student's parent or teacher requests a reevaluation and at least once every three years under 34 C.F.R. § 300.303. As there is no violation, no corrective action is needed.

Issue Three

Prior Written Notice for Reevaluation

Applicable Law

The public agency must provide notice to the parents of a child with a disability, in accordance with 34 C.F.R. § 300.503, that describes any evaluation procedures the agency proposes to conduct. 34 C.F.R. § 300.304(a).

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The parent's complaint does not mention a prior written notice leading to the student's 2024–25 reevaluation. Because the parent's complaint included several concerns and facts regarding a reevaluation, in the initial interview with the parent the complaint investigator asked if the district provided the parent with a Prior Written Notice of the reevaluation procedures the district proposed to conduct. The parent indicated she could not find a Prior Written Notice for the reevaluation. She could only find a January 16, 2025, Notice of Meeting for an April 17, 2025, meeting to discuss the reevaluation results.

The district provided the complaint investigator with a copy of the Prior Written Notice it provided to the parent via email on January 15, 2025, as well as the email where the school psychologist sent the Prior Written Notice to the parent. (Prior Written Notice and Request for Consent to Evaluate and Signed Parent Consent, Jan. 15, 2025.) The district also provided emails from the parent responding to the school psychologist asking questions after reading the Prior Written Notice. (Email from Parent to School Psychologist Asking For Further Information on Reevaluation, Jan. 15, 2025.) The Prior Written Notice proposed a reevaluation, gathering new data and reviewing existing data in the areas of Health/Motor Ability, Social/Emotional Status / Behavioral Status, General Intelligence, Academic Performance, and Communication Status and reviewing existing data in Vision and Hearing. (Prior Written Notice and Request for Consent to Evaluate and Signed Parent Consent, Jan. 15, 2025.)

Conclusion

The district provided evidence that showed it sent the parent a Prior Written Notice outlining the parameters for the student's reevaluation on January 15, 2025. Therefore, this investigation concludes that the district did not violate its obligation to provide notice to the parent, in accordance with 34 C.F.R. § 300.503, that describes any evaluation procedures the agency proposes to conduct under 34 C.F.R. § 300.304(a). As there is no violation, no corrective action is needed.

Issue Four

Parent Consent for Reevaluation

Applicable Law

Subject to 34 C.F.R. § 300.300(c)(2), each public agency must obtain informed parental consent, in accordance with 34 C.F.R. § 300.300(a)(1), prior to conducting any reevaluation of a child with a disability. 34 C.F.R. § 300.300(c).

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The parent's complaint does not mention parent consent leading to the student's 2024–25 reevaluation. Because the parent's complaint included several concerns and facts regarding a reevaluation, in the initial interview with the parent the complaint investigator asked if the district requested the parent's consent for the reevaluation procedures the district proposed to conduct. The parent indicated she could not find a copy of the consent for the reevaluation.

The district provided the complaint investigator with a copy of the parent's consent to the Prior Written Notice it provided to the parent via email on January 15, 2025, as well as the email where the school psychologist sent the Prior Written Notice and Request for Consent to the parent. (Prior Written Notice and Request for Consent to Evaluate and Signed Parent Consent, Jan. 15, 2025.) The district also provided an email where the school psychologist responded to the parent's request to confirm she had signed the consent. (Email from Parent to School Psychologist Asking For Further Information on Reevaluation, Jan. 15, 2025.)

Conclusion

The district provided evidence that showed it sent the parent a Prior Written Notice requesting consent for the student's reevaluation on January 15, 2025, and evidence that the parent signed consent the same day. Therefore, this investigation concludes that the district did not violate its obligation to obtain informed parental consent, in accordance with 34 C.F.R. § 300.300(a)(1), prior to conducting any reevaluation of a child with a disability under 34 C.F.R. § 300.300(c). As there is no violation, no corrective action is needed.

Issue Five

Review of Existing Data

Applicable Law

As part of any reevaluation, the IEP Team and other qualified professionals, as appropriate, must review existing evaluation data on the child, including evaluations and information provided by the parents of the child; current classroom-based, local, or State assessments, and classroom-based observations; and observations by teachers and related services providers. 34 C.F.R. § 300.305(a)(1), (b); K.S.A. § 72-3428(i)(1). The IEP Team and other qualified professionals, as appropriate, may conduct its review of existing evaluation data on the child without a meeting. 34 C.F.R. § 300.305(b).

Analysis: Findings of Fact

In in the initial interview with the complaint investigator the parent indicated that the district did not engage her in reviewing existing data, including evaluations and information you provided, current classroom-based, local, or State assessments, and classroom-based observations, and observations by teachers and related services providers prior to the student's reevaluation. In the interview with district staff, the school psychologist indicated that, logistically, the school psychologist is responsible for much of the review of existing data that she then summarizes and brings to the other district IEP team members at regular professional learning community meetings. The school psychologist indicated that she brought the summary of the review of existing data to the district staff IEP team members at a January professional learning community meeting before the district issued the January 15, 2025, Prior Written Notice and request for consent for reevaluation. When asked how the parent participated in the review of existing data, the school psychologist indicated this occurred via email. Upon further request, the district was unable to provide an email documenting the parent's involvement in the review of existing data and the school psychologist thought that the review of existing data with the parent could have occurred via phone call, but the district also did not have documentation of a phone call with the parent to review existing data.

The complaint investigator requested the district's procedure on the review of existing data. (District Process and Procedure for Review of Existing Data, Sept. 18, 2008.) The district's procedure indicates that a review of existing data will take place at a Student Intervention Team meeting that must be scheduled within 15 school days of receiving the parent's written request for an evaluation and that the parent must be invited. (District Process and Procedure for Review of Existing Data, Sept. 18, 2008.) There is no evidence that that the district followed this procedure with this student.

Conclusion

The parent's asserts that she was not involved in the review of existing data. The district indicated that the school psychologist engaged the parent in a review of existing data, but there is no evidence that this occurred. Further, the district's explanation of how it conducted the review of existing data for this student does not match the district's written procedure, which leads the investigator to be unsure of what the district process is and whether it was followed. The regulations implementing the IDEA require that the IEP Team (which must include the parent) and other qualified professionals, as appropriate, must review existing evaluation data on the child as part of a reevaluation and this review can occur without a meeting. There is not evidence to show that this review occurred with or without a meeting. Therefore, this investigation concludes that the district violated its obligation to ensure that as part of any reevaluation, the IEP Team and other qualified professionals, as appropriate, must review existing evaluation data on the student, including evaluations and information provided by the parents; current classroom-based, local, or State assessments, and classroom-based observations; and observations by teachers and related services providers under 34 C.F.R. § 300.305(a)(1).

Issue Six

Additional Data Needed to Reevaluate

Applicable Law

As part of any reevaluation under Part B, the IEP Team and other qualified professionals, as appropriate, must on the basis of the review of existing evaluation data, and input from the child's parents, identify what additional data, if any, are needed to determine whether the child continues to have such a disability, and the educational needs of the child; the present levels of academic achievement and related developmental needs of the child; whether the child continues to need special education and related services; and whether any additions or modifications to the special education and related services are needed to enable the child to meet the measurable annual goals set out in the IEP of the child and to participate, as appropriate, in the general education curriculum. 34 C.F.R. § 300.305(a)(2), (b); K.S.A. § 72-3428(i)(2).

Analysis: Findings of Fact

In in the initial interview with the complaint investigator the parent indicated that the district did not engage her in identifying what additional data were needed as part of the student's reevaluation prior the district issuing the Prior Written Notice requesting her consent for the student's reevaluation. In the interview with district staff, the school psychologist indicated that, logistically, the school psychologist is responsible for proposing what additional data may be needed as part of a reevaluation and bringing this proposal to the other district IEP team members at regular professional learning community meetings. The school psychologist indicated that she brought a proposal for what additional data would be needed as part of this student's reevaluation to the district staff IEP team members at a January professional learning community meeting before the district issued the January 15, 2025, Prior Written Notice and request for consent for reevaluation.

When asked how the parent participated in identifying what additional data were needed as part of the student's reevaluation, the school psychologist indicated the school psychologist requested the parent's input via email. The district pointed to two emails where it indicated that it gathered the parent's input on identifying what additional data were needed. Both emails were from January 16, the day after the district issued the parent a Prior Written Notice requesting consent to reevaluate the student and the parent provided consent. The first is an email the parent sent to the school psychologist after she signed consent to evaluate asking if the student would "be tested in all areas." (Email Exchange Between Parent and School Psychologist on Reevaluation, Jan. 15–16, 2025.) The school psychologist responded the next day saying, "[The student] will have . . . cognitive testing completed. I will look at the core areas, yes." (Email Exchange Between Parent and School Psychologist on Reevaluation, Jan. 15–16, 2025.) The second email is the parent responding to questions from the school psychologist including:

> How would you describe your child?, Strengths (Academic and Life-Based), Interests, Concerns You May Have, How Would You Describe Your Child's Feelings About School?, What Do You Think Helps Your Child Be Successful in School?, What Are Your Goals for Your Child?, and What Do You Love Most About Your Child?
> (Email Exchange Between Parent and School Psychologist on Reevaluation, Jan. 15–16, 2025.) Neither email the district provided includes a discussion based on the review of existing data that identifies what additional data are needed for the reevaluation.

In the district interview, the school psychologist stated that she also considered the input the parent provided in her January 9 email requesting a reevaluation. The parent stated, "I would like to move forward with a triennial evaluation in all areas of learning. [The student's] pediatrician has placed a referral for speech and language. She too, voiced concerns with auditory and visual processing, sensory input and potential Dysgraphia." (Email from Parent to District Staff Requesting Reevaluation, Jan. 9, 2025.) This email provides parent input that the school psychologist says she considered. The regulation at focus requires the IEP Team to identify what additional data are needed.

KSDE provides guidance in the Kansas Special Education Services Process Handbook on the timing of the IEP Team and other qualified professionals, as appropriate, completing the review of existing data and identifying what additional data, if any, are needed for the revaluation. (Kansas Special Education Services Process Handbook, 135.) The Process Handbook indicates the "first activity the reevaluation team is to conduct is a review of existing data." (Kansas Special Education Services Process Handbook, 135.) If the IEP Team determines that additional data are needed, the "procedures to be used to collect the data should be described on the Prior Written Notice for the reevaluation and provided to the parents for their consent." (Kansas Special Education Services Process Handbook, 136.)

Conclusion

The emails the district points to consistently show parent input into the evaluation itself, but the emails do not show the IEP Team identifying what additional data are needed for the reevaluation. The district appears to have a consistent practice of identifying what additional data are needed with the district IEP Team members at professional learning community meetings, but these meetings do not include the parent, a required participant. KSDE provides clear guidance on the sequence districts must follow to ensure the IEP Team reviews existing data and, on the basis of that review, identifies whether and what additional data are needed for the reevaluation prior to issuing a Prior Written Notice requesting consent to evaluate. There is not evidence that the district followed this sequence, particularly because most of the emails the district points to where it indicates the IEP Team identified the additional data needed for the reevaluation occurred after the parent requested consent. Therefore, this investigation concludes that the district violated its obligation to ensure the IEP Team and other qualified professionals, as appropriate, on the basis of the review of existing evaluation data, and input from the parent, identified what additional data, if any, were needed to determine whether the student continues to be an exceptional child, and the student's educational needs; the student's present levels of academic achievement and related developmental needs; whether the student continues to need special education and related services; and whether any additions or modifications to the special education and related services are needed to enable the student to meet the measurable annual goals set out in the student's IEP and to participate, as appropriate, in the general education curriculum under 34 C.F.R. § 300.305(a)(2).

Issue Seven

Variety of Assessment Tools and Strategies in Reevaluation

Applicable Law

In conducting the evaluation, the public agency must use a variety of assessment tools and strategies to gather relevant functional, developmental, and academic information about the child, including information provided by the parent, that may assist in determining whether the child is a child with a disability under 34 C.F.R. § 300.8; and the content of the child's IEP, including information related to enabling the child to be involved in and progress in the general education curriculum. 34 C.F.R. § 300.304(b)(1); K.S.A. § 72-3428(b)(1).

Analysis: Findings of Fact

On this issue, in the interview with the complaint investigator stated her concern that as part of the reevaluation the student was only observed once in one type of setting. The parent also shared this concern with the district in an email following the April 17, 2025, IEP Team meeting, requesting "Observations in multiple settings – especially unstructured times where masking may diminish and more authentic needs may surface." In this same email the parent also requested a "structured parent interview." The parent also states that, "[s]tandardized tools such as the BASC-3 (with Discrepancy Index), BRIEF-2, Sensory Profile 2, or SPM are widely used in school evaluations and were not utilized."

In the district's response it points to the Prior Written Notice requesting consent for reevaluation, proposing to gather new data and review existing data in the areas of Health/Motor Ability, Social/Emotional Status / Behavioral Status, General Intelligence, Academic Performance, and Communication Status and review existing data in Vision and Hearing. (Prior Written Notice and Request for Consent to Evaluate and Signed Parent Consent, Jan. 15, 2025.) The district's Prior Written Notice form appears to be adapted from KSDE's sample Prior Written Notice for evaluation, https://www.ksde.gov/Portals/0/SES/forms/Notice_of_Meeting_English.docx. The KSDE form prepopulates the areas to be evaluated and for this student, the district proposed to include all prepopulated areas except Transition Skills as the student is not yet transition age. Within the reevaluation report the district included existing assessment results (i.e., FastBridge Reading and Math, vision results, and hearing results) and conducted new assessments (i.e., Woodcock-Johnson IV Tests of Achievement, Clinical Evaluation of Language Fundementals-5 (CELF-5), Wechsler Intelligence Scale for Children-Fifth Edition (WISC-V), 2nd grade handwriting screener, Test of Auditory Processing Skills-Fourth Edition (TAPS-4), Beery-Buktenica Developmental Test of Visual-Motor Integration (Beery VMI), Sensory Processing Measure, Second Edition (SPM-2), Behavioral Assessment System for Children, Third Edition (BASC-3), executive functioning screener.)

Conclusion

There is not a requirement that an evaluation include observations of the student in multiple settings or gather parent input in a particular way. This reevaluation included a student observation in the general education classroom. The parent points out assessments that she believes were missing from the reevaluation, but the reevaluation clearly included a variety of assessments to gather functional, developmental, and academic about the student. Therefore, this investigation concludes that the district did not violate its obligation in conducting the student's reevaluation, to use the public agency a variety of assessment tools and strategies to gather relevant functional, developmental, and academic information about the student, including information the parent provided, that may assist in determining whether the student is a child with a disability under 34 C.F.R. § 300.8; and the content of the student's IEP, including information related to enabling the student to be involved in and progress in the general education curriculum under 34 C.F.R. § 300.304(b)(1). As there is no violation, no corrective action is needed.

Issue Eight

Technically Sound Instruments in Reevaluation

Applicable Law

In conducting the evaluation, the public agency must use technically sound instruments that may assess the relative contribution of cognitive and behavioral factors, in addition to physical or developmental factors. 34 C.F.R. § 300.304(b)(3).

Analysis: Findings of Fact

In the complaint the parent alleged that the district "used an informal 2nd grade handwriting screener rather than norm-referenced tools to assess writing skills, sentence organization, spacing, or automaticity." In the interview with the complaint investigator the parent did not provide any additional concerns regarding assessments the district used in the reevaluation.

The district's response on this issue was very thorough, providing a research base for each instrument the district used in the reevaluation. (District Document with Information on Each Reevaluation Instrument, May 20, 2025.) The district indicated that this handwriting screener is "based on the PRINT Tool (from Learning Without Tears), a norm referenced assessment. This screener was created by occupational therapists for occupational therapists in order to determine if further assessment is warranted." (District Document with Information on Each Reevaluation Instrument, May 20, 2025.) The handwriting screener included copying sentences, writing sentences without a model, mazes, drawing a picture and labeling it, speed writing, and shape copying. (Draft Reevaluation Report, Apr. 17, 2025.)

In the 2006 comments to the regulations implementing IDEA, the United States Department of Education indicated that the definition of "technically sound" in 34 C.F.R. § 300.304(b)(3) "generally refers to assessments that have been shown through research to be valid and reliable." (71 Fed. Reg. 46,642 (2006).) A 2018 study found the Print Tool to have "good concurrent validity" and studies with kindergarteners and first graders indicate the tool is reliable. (Donica DK, Holt S. Examining Validity of the Print Tool Compared With Test of Handwriting Skills 2013; Revised. OTJR: Occupational Therapy Journal of Research. 2018; Broussard, M. Reliability of The Print Tool™ in Measuring Handwriting Abilities in Kindergarten Students 2010; Cook W. A Comparison of the Effectiveness of Two Handwriting Programs on Legibility in First Grade Students 2021. Eastern Kentucky University Encompass.)

Conclusion

The parent did not provide any evidence that the handwriting screener the district used in the reevaluation was not technically sound. The district provided information on the research base for each assessment in the reevaluation. There is evidence that the handwriting screener the district used is valid and reliable, meeting the definition of technically sound. Therefore, this investigation concludes that the district did not violate its obligation in conducting the student's reevaluation, to use technically sound instruments that may assess the relative contribution of cognitive and behavioral factors, in addition to physical or developmental factors under 34 C.F.R. § 300.304(b)(3). As there is no violation, no corrective action is needed.

Issue Nine

Reevaluation Assessment in All Areas Related to the Suspected Disability

Applicable Law

Each public agency must ensure that the child is assessed in all areas related to the suspected disability, including, if appropriate, health, vision, hearing, social and emotional status, general intelligence, academic performance, communicative status, and motor abilities. 34 C.F.R. § 300.304(c)(4); K.S.A. § 72-3428(c)(2).

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The parent stated in her complaint that the reevaluation did not include any assessments in "written expression, despite longstanding concerns regarding dysgraphia, refusal to write, and graphomotor difficulties." Additionally, the parent alleged that autism-related "traits were not explored at all, despite documentation from September 2024 onward showing the student was on a waitlist for an autism evaluation."

In the district's response it points to the Prior Written Notice requesting consent for reevaluation, proposing to gather new data and review existing data in the areas of Health/Motor Ability, Social/Emotional Status / Behavioral Status, General Intelligence, Academic Performance, and Communication Status and review existing data in Vision and Hearing. (Prior Written Notice and Request for Consent to Evaluate and Signed Parent Consent, Jan. 15, 2025.) The reevaluation report indicates the district assessed the student using the Beery-Buktenica Developmental Test of Visual-Motor Integration (Beery VMI), which showed that the student has a relative weakness in motor coordination with may affect the student's performance in written expression. (Draft Reevaluation Report, Apr. 17, 2025.) The district also assessed the student using the Woodcock-Johnson IV Tests of Achievement, which includes assessment in written expression and fluency. (Draft Reevaluation Report, Apr. 17, 2025.) The reevaluation also includes a statement from the general education teacher regarding the student's writing refusal, often during phonics. (Draft Reevaluation Report, Apr. 17, 2025.) When the general education teacher asks the student to slow down and try the student can successfully write. (Draft Reevaluation Report, Apr. 17, 2025.) The reevaluation report also indicates that to complete parts of the handwriting screeners and the Woodcock-Johnson IV Tests of Achievement the student was required to write. The reevaluation report indicates that either the student completed the required writing or is silent about whether the student completed it and reporting the results, which indicates the student completed the required writing. (Draft Reevaluation Report, Apr. 17, 2025.)

In the interview with the complaint investigator, district staff indicated the suspected disability, going into the reevaluation, was Other Health Impairment. During the interview, district staff explained the district process for all eligibility conversations, which they stated the May 16 IEP Team meeting followed. The district has an internal eligibility document based on KSDE's Eligibility Indicators document, https://www.ksde.gov/Portals/0/SES/misc/iep/EligibilityIndicators.pdf. District staff stated that district practice is to use this document as a guide to discuss categories of suspected exceptionality and whether there is data to support each prompt.

District staff indicated in the interview that the IEP Team first discussed Other Health Impairment, determining that data supported that the student exhibited this exceptionality. District staff also stated that the team discussed the data from the four categories to determine whether the student exhibited the Autism exceptionality category, using reevaluation data. The district recorded this discussion in the May 16, 2025, IEP Team meeting notes stating, "Autism exceptionality vs. OHI. Reviewed both-OHI better fits [the student's] needs. Autism exceptionality has 4 components to which [the student] does not best fit." (IEP Team District Meeting Notes, May 16, 2025.) The district also recorded this discussion as an option considered and rejected in the May 20, 2025, Prior Written Notice it issued to the parent with the proposed changes to the student's IEP based on the IEP Team's discussion of the reevaluation report stating, "The team considered finding [the student] eligible under the Autism exceptionality category. This option was rejected, as [the student] does not meet eligibility criteria for this exceptionality as outlined by re-evaluation data collected within this re-evaluation period." (Prior Written Notice Proposing Changes to Student's IEP Based on Reevaluation Report IEP Team Discussion, May 20, 2025.)

Conclusion

The district's Prior Written Notice requesting consent for reevaluation is clear that the student would be reevaluated in all areas. The reevaluation report recounts all the assessments in which the student participated and the results of those assessments. The reevaluation report includes multiple assessments for the student in the areas of written expression and references how the general education teacher supports the student through writing refusal and does not include information that the student exhibited writing refusal during the reevaluation process. The parent expressed her concern about dysgraphia in the parent input section of the reevaluation report, but there is not any information about dysgraphia concerns in the documentation the district submitted. The results of the writing portions of the reevaluation did not show a concern with dysgraphia. Additionally, even though the district did not go into the reevaluation considering autism, the reevaluation contained sufficient data for the IEP Team to review autism as a potential exceptionality category and reject it. Therefore, this investigation concludes that the district did not violate its obligation to ensure that the student is assessed in all areas related to the suspected disability, including, if appropriate, health, vision, hearing, social and emotional status, general intelligence, academic performance, communicative status, and motor abilities under 34 C.F.R. § 300.304(c)(4). As there is no violation, no corrective action is needed.

Issue Ten

Comprehensive Reevaluation

Applicable Law

Each public agency must ensure that in evaluating each child with a disability under 34 C.F.R. §§ 300.304 through 300.306, the evaluation is sufficiently comprehensive to identify all of the child's special education and related services needs, whether or not commonly linked to the disability category in which the child has been classified. 34 C.F.R. § 300.304(c)(6).

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The parent's complaint indicates that the district did not adequately assess the student's executive functioning and sensory regulation until after the parent objected. The parent went on to state that the "SPM-2 was only administered after the parent objected post-eligibility meeting." In the interview with the complaint investigator, the parent stated that she received a draft copy of the evaluation report on April 11 and that her impression was that the reevaluation was not sufficiently comprehensive given the student's needs. The parent indicated that after she emailed her concerns the district sent a new draft on April 14.

The district indicates it designed the reevaluation to be more comprehensive than is typical for a student with an IEP with one goal in social skills to be responsive to the parent's requests. (District's Response to the Complaint, May 20, 2025.) The district's response indicated that on April 11, 2025, the school psychologist emailed the parent a draft copy of the reevaluation report with a reminder that the report is a draft "and may be edited to and through the evaluation meeting." (District Timeline, May 20, 2025.) In a follow-up email with the district special services coordinator he indicated that it is district practice to send the parent a draft reevaluation report even if not all assessments are yet fully interpreted, written up, and included in the draft reevaluation report. The district special services coordinator indicated that is what occurred here, the school psychologist sent the parent a draft reevaluation report stating that it would continue to be edited "to and through the evaluation meeting." (District Timeline, May 20, 2025.) The district special services coordinator stated in an email to the complaint investigator that one such assessment the parent referenced, the parent requested in an April 14, 2025, email to district staff and so the district conducted the assessment, providing the results in the April 17, 2025, draft reevaluation report. The district special services coordinator confirmed that district practice is to include all assessments in a reevaluation report and all conducted assessments were included in the April 17, 2025, draft reevaluation report.

Following the April 17, 2025, IEP Team meeting the parent sent an email with additional requests for assessments to be included in the reevaluation. (Parent Emails to IEP Team Regarding Comprehensiveness of Reevaluation, Apr. 14 and 22, 2025.) The parent requested additional testing in sensory processing, visual/motor skills, executive functioning, working memory, processing speed, phonological processing, decoding, and fluency. (Parent Emails to IEP Team Regarding Comprehensiveness of Reevaluation, Apr. 14 and 22, 2025.) The district responded in an April 25, 2025, Prior Written Notice proposing to extend the evaluation timeline to include testing in the areas of sensory processing and visual/motor skills. (Prior Written Notice and Request for Consent to Extend Evaluation Timeline to Include Additional Testing in Reevaluation and Refusal to Conduct Certain Testing, Apr. 25, 2025.) The district declined to do additional testing in executive functioning, working memory, processing speed, phonological processing, decoding, and fluency and explained where each area was covered within the existing reevaluation data. (Prior Written Notice and Request for Consent to Extend Evaluation Timeline to Include Additional Testing in Reevaluation and Refusal to Conduct Certain Testing, Apr. 25, 2025.) The parent declined to extend the timeline and so the district completed the additional assessments it proposed in the Prior Written Notice within the existing reevaluation timeline. (District Timeline, May 20, 2025.)

Conclusion

The district's response indicates that when it sent the parent the draft reevaluation report on April 14, 2025, that the school psychologist explained that the draft reevaluation would be added to until and through the April 17, 2025, IEP Team meeting. This explains the additions to the draft reevaluation report after the district sent a first draft to the parent. After the parent voiced concerns on the comprehensiveness of the evaluation, the district completed additional assessments within the reevaluation timeline and issued the parent a Prior Written Notice explaining where her additional requests were already taken care of within the reevaluation. Therefore, this investigation concludes that the district did not violate its obligation to ensure that in evaluating the student under 34 C.F.R. §§ 300.304 through 300.306, the evaluation is sufficiently comprehensive to identify all of the student's special education and related services needs, whether or not commonly linked to the disability category in which the child has been classified under 34 C.F.R. § 300.304(c)(6). As there is no violation, no corrective action is needed.

Issue Eleven

Appropriate IEP Revision

Applicable Law

Each public agency must ensure that, subject to 34 C.F.R. 300.324(b)(2) and (b)(3), the IEP Team revises the IEP, as appropriate, to address information about the child provided to, or by, the parents, as described under 34 C.F.R. § 300.305(a)(2); the child's anticipated needs; or other matters. 34 C.F.R. § 300.324(b)(1)(C)–(E).

Analysis: Findings of Fact

In the parent's complaint she indicated that she "raised concerns about sensory overwhelm, academic regression, masking, and PTSD as early as September 2024." In the initial interview with the complaint investigator, the parent indicated that when she participated in the student's parent-teacher conference in October the classroom seats were arranged in a circle with one desk in the center of the circle, the student's. The parent indicated the general education teacher referred to this as "island seating" and that the student enjoyed sitting in the center. The parent stated that she voiced her concern to the student's teacher that this seating model put the student on display and would likely result in sensory overwhelm to the student and asked that the student not be seated in this arrangement any longer. The parent stated that at the October meeting, held after the parent teacher conference, that she requested a reading goal, but district staff indicated that was not permitted as the student's identified needs were social emotional. The parent indicated that the student would regularly come home with work not completed, but when the parent asked the general education teacher about the work, the general education teacher was unconcerned. The parent also stated that in February an outside provider identified the student with post-traumatic stress disorder and the parent believed this was due to the student masking at school (e.g., working hard to perform well when actually struggling). The parent reported that most of the school year the student was suffering from extreme exhaustion at home and regular meltdowns, which the parent believed resulted from masking at school and being able to relax at home.

As support for these concerns, the investigator asked the parent for any written requests she made for additions to the student's IEP (e.g., academic goals, etc.), whether she asked for "island seating" to be recorded in the student's IEP as prohibited, and documentation of what the parent believed the district should have understood about [the student's] needs that should have caused the district to revise [the student's] IEP to respond to those needs. The parent indicated she did not made requests for additions to the student's IEP in writing and had not asked for her request for the general education teacher to stop using "island seating" to be added to the student's IEP. In terms of documentation of what the parent believed the district should have understood about the student's needs that should have caused the district to revise the student's IEP to respond to those needs, the parent provided many dates worth of a daily communication log exchanged between the parent and the general education teacher. The parent regularly communicated about challenges at home and, generally speaking, the general education teacher's reflections on the day did not mirror similar challenges at school. (Daily Reports Between Teacher and Parent and Parent Summaries of Daily Reports, Jan.–Apr. 2025.) The daily report provides prompts for the parent to report on the student's night and morning at home, where the parent frequently commented on concerns regarding sensory overwhelm at home. The daily report provides prompts for the teacher to report on the student's morning and afternoon at school, three things the student did today, things the student did not complete, activities the student had, a highlight from the day, a drawback from the day, and something the student can work on at home. The general education teacher often responded to the parent's reports of sensory overwhelm at home, reflecting that the student did not exhibit that at school. The general education teacher sometimes focused on the student's behavior at school, which is consistent with the student's IEP goal focused on the target behaviors of staying focused, putting away distracting items, speaking in the appropriate tone of voice, remaining quiet during direct instruction, and listening and responding appropriately. The general education teacher did not provide any consistent information in the daily reports showing there were concerns with academic regression or sensory overwhelm at school.

In the interview with district staff, the investigator asked district staff whether there are any exceptionality categories where the district does not permit an academic goal. District staff answered there are none, that all goals are based on need and not on exceptionality category. The school psychologist went on to say that she has worked with the special education teacher and principal in countless meetings regarding students and their needs and that neither of them would say that to a parent as it is not true. The special education teacher and principal agreed. The evidence the district provided regarding the student's 2024–25 progress on the IEP goal and in the general education curriculum, which will be explored more fully in Issue Twelve, do not show evidence of student need that should have led the district to revise the student's IEP.

Conclusion

In the initial interview with the complaint investigator the parent raised several concerns that she believed should have led the district to revise the student's IEP during the 2024–25 school year. After further inquiry, the parent did not have documentation that showed the district was aware of the parent's concerns and should have acted (i.e., no documentation of request for academic goal, prohibiting "island seating" in the student's IEP). Regarding the parent's concerns on "sensory overwhelm" and "masking," from review of the daily reports exchanged between the general education teacher and the parent, these items do not appear to be of concern at school, although they are of great concern to the parent at home. As there is not sufficient evidence to show that the district should have been aware of changes in the student's needs that would warrant an IEP revision, therefore, this investigation concludes that the district did not violate its obligation to revise the student's IEP, as appropriate, to address information about the student provided to, or by, the parents, as described under 34 C.F.R. § 300.305(a)(2); the student's anticipated needs; or other matters under 34 C.F.R. § 300.324(b)(1)(C)–(E). As there is no violation, no corrective action is needed.

Issue Twelve

FAPE

Applicable Law

A free appropriate public education must be available to all children residing in the State between the ages of 3 and 21, inclusive. 34 C.F.R. § 300.101(a). Each board shall provide a free appropriate public education for exceptional children enrolled in the school district. K.S.A. § 72-3410(a)(2). Each agency shall provide special education and related services based upon the child's unique needs and not upon the child's area of exceptionality. K.A.R. § 91-40-2(e).

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The parent's complaint alleges that the district denied the student FAPE as the student's IEP did not include an academic goal for writing, a behavior goal, isolating the student in "island seating" after parent objection, the district did not provide follow up supports after the student wet himself, and the general education classroom provided an inconsistent behavior system that led to the student's emotional dysregulation.

The findings from Issue Eleven that are also relevant here are that the district has no record and district staff do not recall the parent requesting an academic goal for writing for the student, the parent did not request that her objection to the student participating in "island seating" be recorded in the student's IEP, and the district and parent documentation submitted for this investigation showed the student was often emotionally dysregulated at home, but that was not noted at school. On the remaining facts, the parent indicated in the interview with the complaint investigator that the parent has not requested a behavior goal for the student. Also, in the interview with the complaint investigator, the parent described that the student attempted to signal the need to go to the bathroom, but the teacher did not notice, and the student wet themselves in class. The parent voiced concern about this indicating the student has been potty trained from two years old. The parent stated in the interview with the complaint investigator she did not request additions to the student's IEP when she learned of the incident or in subsequent IEP Team meetings. The parent provided an email from the general education teacher to the parent explaining the incident. The general education teacher explained the incident in the same way as the parent and indicated that after the incident, the teacher asked the student to show her how the student signaled to use the restroom. The teacher realized that the student's arm was too low, and she could not have seen it and encouraged the student to make the signal differently in the future and reminded the student they are able to run to the restroom if needed. The daily communication logs the parent submitted as part of the investigation do not show an impact to the student other than the day the incident occurred.

The student's reevaluation report indicates the student is in the 55th percentile for sentence writing fluency. On motor coordination the student scored in the 25th percentile, the low average range, indicating that this could impact the student's written work, particularly in terms of legibility, writing speed, and endurance during written tasks. The handwriting screener showed that the student demonstrated functional handwriting skills appropriate for a second-grade level. The district proposed to meet these needs through accommodations in revisions to the student's IEP. (Prior Written Notice Proposing Changes to Student's IEP Based on Reevaluation Report IEP Team Discussion, May 20, 2025.)

During the reevaluation, the district assessed the student's sensory issues to determine whether those sensory issues may be contributing to the student's behavior. The assessment results suggested several sensory accommodations for the IEP Team to consider and the district proposed including several in the student's revised IEP. (Prior Written Notice Proposing Changes to Student's IEP Based on Reevaluation Report IEP Team Discussion, May 20, 2025.) The district also assessed the student using the Behavioral Assessment System for Children,

Third Edition (BASC-3) which showed that the student "is experiencing difficulties in the areas of Atypicality, Functional Communication, Hyperactivity, Aggression, Anxiety, Depression, Attention Problems, and Study Skills. Of these, Atypicality was the only area that was marked as Clinically Significant. The others were At Risk. These difficulties span across [the student's] school day and at home." The district proposed meeting these needs through accommodations in the student's revised IEP. (Prior Written Notice Proposing Changes to Student's IEP Based on Reevaluation Report IEP Team Discussion, May 20, 2025.)

The investigation does not show, for any of the parents listed concerns, that the district either knew about the concerns or had sufficient data prior to the student's reevaluation that should have led the district to revise the student's IEP to ensure that the student received FAPE. Although there is not a connection to potential impact on the student's right to FAPE, this investigation also reviewed information on the student's progress this school year in the general education curriculum and on the student's IEP goal. The student's 2024–25 IEP included one goal in social skills. (Student's IEP, Sept. 12, 2024.) The goal was designed for the student to work toward improvement on identified social skills throughout the school year evaluated using a social rubric attached to the student's IEP, resulting in a goal of 12/15 demonstrated social skills by the end of the school year. (Student IEP Progress Report – Annual Goal, Sept. 11 and Dec. 19, 2024, Mar. 14 and May 22, 2025.) The student's baseline data was 5/15 demonstrated social skills. (Student IEP Progress Report – Annual Goal, Sept. 11 and Dec. 19, 2024, Mar. 14 and May 22, 2025.) In Quarter 1 the student progressed to 6/15 demonstrated social skills, in Quarter 2 8/15, in Quarter 3 9/15, and in Quarter 4 12/15, completing the student's goal. (Student IEP Progress Report – Annual Goal, Sept. 11 and Dec. 19, 2024, Mar. 14 and May 22, 2025.)

On the student's 2024–25 progress report, the district uses a Grading Scale with four levels with Requires Support as the lowest level, then Developing, followed by Progressing, and finally Proficient. (Student's 2024–25 Elementary Progress Report, May 22, 2025.) The student's Reading and Writing grades for Quarter 4 are Developing, an improvement from Quarter 1 and consistent since Quarter 2. (Student's 2024–25 Elementary Progress Report, May 22, 2025.) The student's Spelling grade in Quarter 4 is Requires Support, down from a Developing grade in Quarters 2 and 3 and the same grade as in Quarter 1. (Student's 2024–25 Elementary Progress Report, May 22, 2025.) The student's Speaking and Listening, Math, Science, and Social Studies grades are Progressing. (Student's 2024–25 Elementary Progress Report, May 22, 2025.)

Conclusion

The reevaluation showed that the student needs additional support in behavior and writing, but there is not documentation submitted as part of this investigation from the parent or the district prior to the April reevaluation that should have led the district to include support for writing or behavior in the student's IEP. On the remaining concerns the parent raises in this issue, there is no evidence to show that any of those concerns impacted the student's right to FAPE. Despite that, this investigation reviewed the student's 2024–25 progress on the student's IEP goal, which was met, and the student's progress in the general education curriculum. The only area of potential concern in the student's 2024–25 progress is spelling. The student's reevaluation assessed the student in spelling and the IEP Team did not determine the student needed additional support in spelling. A low grade does not automatically mean the student needs additional support from an IEP in that area and there is not data outside of the student's progress report that indicates this is a need that should be addressed in the student's IEP. As there is no evidence to show that the parent's concerns on this issue impacted the student's FAPE, this investigation concludes that the district did not violate its obligation to provide a free appropriate public education for exceptional children enrolled in the school district under K.S.A. § 72-3410(a)(2) and provide special education and related services based upon the student's unique needs and not upon the student's area of exceptionality under K.A.R. § 91-40-2(e).). As there is no violation, no corrective action is needed.

Issue Thirteen

Review Education Records

Applicable Law

The parents of a child with a disability must be afforded, in accordance with the procedures of 34 C.F.R. §§ 300.613 through 300.621, an opportunity to inspect and review all education records with respect to the identification, evaluation, and educational placement of the child; and the provision of FAPE to the child. 34 C.F.R. § 300.501(a).

Analysis: Findings of Fact

In the parent's complaint, she indicates a violation of 34 C.F.R. § 300.501. In the initial interview with the parent, the complaint investigator asked the parent, which portion(s) of the regulation she was alleging a violation(s), the right to examine records, participate in meetings, or be involved in placement decisions. The parent stated she was alleging a violation of the right to examine records. She indicated she emailed an August 14, 2024, request for records to the special education teacher, an October 16, 2024, request to the special education teacher and the principal, and an April 25, 2025, request to the special education teacher, principal, and school psychologist. (Email from Parent to Principal Requesting Records, Apr. 25, 2025; Email from Parent to Principal Requesting Records, Oct. 16, 2024; Email from Parent to Special Education Teacher Requesting Records, Aug. 14, 2024.) She indicated the district never responded to any of the three requests.

Regarding the August 14 request, the special education teacher believed the parent subsequently withdrew the request in a text message, email, or phone call. The special education teacher could not locate the parent's withdrawal of this request. The text messages between the special education teacher and parent did not reference the August 14 records request.

For the October 16 request, the district provided an email from the district assistant special education director to the principal explaining the process to provide the parent with access to the student's education records and that there were district staff working on coordinating this and the principal's response that the special education teacher spoke with the parent and did not "believe [the parent] will still be requesting that information." (Emails Between District Staff Regarding Parent's October 16, 2024, Record Request, Oct. 17, 2024.) On October 23, the principal emailed the district assistant special education teacher and stated, "We just met with [the parent], and she is no longer requesting any of these documents." (Email from Principal to District Staff Regarding Parent's Withdrawal of Oct. 16, 2024, Record Request, Oct. 23, 2024.)

For the April 25, 2025, request the parent emailed the complaint investigator regarding her opportunity to review the student's records on May 30.

Conclusion

There is no evidence that the district responded to the parent's August 14, 2024, request to access the student's records and no evidence the parent withdrew the request. On the October 16, 2024, request, the parent believes the district did not respond and the district provided evidence that the parent withdrew the request. While the clearest approach would have been for the district to document the parent's withdrawal in an email to the parent, the district documented its understanding of the withdrawal, which this investigator finds sufficient as the law does not require a particular method of documenting a parent's withdrawal of a request to access records. On the April 25, 2025, request, the district provided the parent the opportunity to review the student's records within 45 days, as 34 C.F.R. § 300.613(a) requires. Therefore, this investigation concludes that the district violated its obligation to afford the parents of a child with a disability, in accordance with the procedures of 34 C.F.R. §§ 300.613 through 300.621, an opportunity to inspect and review all education records with respect to the identification, evaluation, and educational placement of the student; and the provision of FAPE to the child under 34 C.F.R. § 300.501(a) regarding the August 14, 2024, request, but not the October 16, 2024, or April 25, 2025, requests.

Issue Fourteen

Independent Educational Evaluation

Applicable Law

If a parent requests an independent educational evaluation at public expense, the public agency must, without unnecessary delay, either file a due process complaint to request a hearing to show that its evaluation is appropriate; or ensure that an independent educational evaluation is provided at public expense, unless the agency demonstrates in a hearing pursuant to 34 C.F.R. §§ 300.507 through 300.513 that the evaluation obtained by the parent did not meet agency criteria. 34 C.F.R. § 300.502(b)(2). A parent is entitled to only one independent educational evaluation at public expense each time the public agency conducts an evaluation with which the parent disagrees. 34 C.F.R. § 300.502(b)(5).

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The parent's complaint indicated that the parent requested an independent educational evaluation (IEE) on April 15, 2025, and "the district improperly deferred the request until after the eligibility meeting . . . [and] did not issue a new PWN until April 30, exceeding a reasonable timeframe."

The district's response indicated that on April 11, 2025, the school psychologist emailed the parent a draft copy of the reevaluation report with a reminder that the report is a draft "and may be edited to and through the evaluation meeting." (District Timeline, May 20, 2025.) On April 14, 2025, the parent emailed the special education teacher, school psychologist, and principal and requested "a comprehensive IEE." (Parent Emails to District Staff with Independent Educational Evaluation Request, Apr. 14, 15, and 29, 2025.) On April 15, 2025, the district sent the parent a Prior Written Notice denying the parent's IEE request "because the team has not had the opportunity to hold the reevaluation meeting with parent to review and discuss the Reevaluation Report." (Prior Written Notice Refusing Parent Request for Independent Educational Evaluation, Apr. 15, 2025.) On April 15, 2025, the parent emailed the special education teacher, school psychologist, and principal and requested an IEE and stated the basis for her request as, "[t]he district has now completed and presented its evaluation report, which I received and reviewed. While I understand the reevaluation meeting is scheduled for April 17, 2025, my disagreement is not contingent upon the team's eligibility determination, but rather on the evaluation itself." (Parent Emails to District Staff with Independent Educational Evaluation Request, Apr. 14, 15, 22, and 29, 2025.)

On April 17, 2025, the student's IEP Team meet to discuss the reevaluation report. (District's Response to the Complaint, May 20, 2025.) At this meeting, the parent requested additional testing, which led the district to conclude in its response that "the evaluation was not completed on April 17, 2025." Later that day, the parent emailed district staff, which she characterized in an April 22, 2025, email as a "request that [the student's] evaluation be extended to fully assess all areas of suspected need."

The district provided the parent with a Prior Written Notice on April 25, 2025, agreeing to complete two of the parent's requested assessments, refusing several other assessments and explained how the district's assessments included testing in the areas the parent identified, and proposing to extend the reevaluation timeline by 15 school days for the additional testing. The parent refused to extend the evaluation timeline, and the district proceeded with the two assessments as it believed this was included in the parent's January consent to reevaluation.

(District's Response to the Complaint, May 20, 2025.) On April 29, 2025, the parent again requested an IEE. (District's Response to the Complaint, May 20, 2025.) Although the district still maintained the evaluation was not yet complete as it was finishing the two additional assessments, the district sent the parent a Prior Written Notice on April 30, 2025, granting the parent's request for an IEE. (Prior Written Notice of the District's Decision to Grant an Independent Educational Evaluation, Apr. 30, 2025.)

Longstanding KSDE guidance indicates that "unless there is an unusual circumstance, districts must provide parents with a Prior Written Notice within 15 school days in response to any parent request regarding identification, evaluation, placement or the provision of a FAPE." (Kansas Special Education Services Process Handbook 6.)

Conclusion

The district maintains that the parent's right to an IEE does not vest until the district has completed its evaluation. This assertion is grounded in the language in 34 C.F.R. § 300.502(b)(5), that a parent is entitled to an IEE "each time the public agency conducts an evaluation with which the parent disagrees." The district's reasoning is that the evaluation is not complete until after the eligibility meeting and the parent's reasoning is that the evaluation was complete once the district sent the parent a draft of the evaluation report.

The district is not required to provide a parent with draft reevaluation reports prior to the IEP Team meeting to discuss the reevaluation but did so to allow the parent to review in advance and was clear that the report was a draft and could be changed during the meeting. Additionally, on April 25 the district agreed to add assessments the parent requested, which were not yet completed and included in the reevaluation report at the time of the parents' IEE requests. A reevaluation report clearly labeled as a draft, especially with an accompanying explanation that the report can change until and during the reevaluation meeting that is scheduled within the reevaluation timeline, is not a completed reevaluation. Particularly when the IEP Team has agreed to conduct and add assessments, the reevaluation certainly is not complete. The district's reasoning for its April 15 denial of the parent's IEE request is supported by the language in 34 C.F.R. § 300.502(b)(5) that the parent is only entitled to an IEE once the district conducts an evaluation with which the parent disagrees. The district changing course and agreeing to the IEE on April 30 is reasonable, even though the district was still working to add assessments and complete the reevaluation, because the ensuing two weeks of discussions with the parent had likely shown the district that the parent was dissatisfied with the reevaluation, even when completed. Even taken from its longest point, the parent's initial IEE request on April 15, to the district's second response on April 30, the district responded to all the parent's IEE requests within the 15-school day KSDE guidance. Therefore, this investigation concludes that the district did not violate its obligation to provide an IEE under 34 C.F.R. § 300.502(b)(2). As there is no violation, no corrective action is needed.

Issue Fifteen

Predetermination

Applicable Law

Upon completion of the administration of assessments and other evaluation measures—

(1) A group of qualified professionals and the parent of the child determines whether the child is a child with a disability, as defined in §300.8, in accordance with paragraph (c) of this section and the educational needs of the child; and
(2) The public agency provides a copy of the evaluation report and the documentation of determination of eligibility at no cost to the parent. 34 C.F.R. § 300.306(a).

The parents of a child with a disability must be afforded an opportunity to participate in meetings with respect to—

(i) The identification, evaluation, and educational placement of the child; and
(ii) The provision of FAPE to the child.
34 C.F.R. § 300.501(b)(1).

Analysis: Findings of Fact

After the May 16, 2025, IEP Team meeting to discuss the student's reevaluation, the parent emailed the complaint investigator and asked to add this issue. The complaint investigator drafted an issue statement for the parent to consider and the parent did not have any suggested changes. The complaint investigator asked the district if there was sufficient time for the district to respond to the added issue within the current complaint investigation or whether the district would prefer that the parent file a new complaint on this issue. The district agreed to add this issue to the current investigation. The complaint investigator provided the district with the issue statement and the email from the parent to the complaint investigator with the facts on which the parent based her concern. The complaint investigator provided the district with the opportunity to respond to the concern, which it did, as well as propose a resolution to KSDE on this issue and consider mediating this issue with the parent.

The parent's email to the complaint investigator after the May 16, 2025, IEP Team meeting indicated that she had concerns about "predetermination, lack of meaningful parental participation, and the failure to consider key areas of suspected disability." The parent indicated that the school psychologist started the eligibility discussion by stating "her personal opinion that if it were solely up to her, she would not find [the student] eligible for an IEP, because in her view, [the student] does not require specially designed instruction." The parent went on to state that the school psychologist's statement:

> was never discussed or challenged by the team, and no one offered an explanation of how the team reached eligibility under Other Health Impairment (OHI) despite this open objection from the psychologist. . . . Despite being present, I do not believe I was meaningfully included in the eligibility decision. At no point did the team ask for my input on whether I agreed with > the proposed eligibility category, nor did they seek to address the repeated concerns I raised about sensory processing, writing difficulties, regression, and masking.

The parent pointed to information she believed showed potential eligibility for Specific Learning Disability and stated the district did not follow up on that information with specific assessments. The parent stated that she additionally raised concerns about autism and district staff indicated that the student did not meet the criteria for autism. The parent was concerned that the evaluation did not include any autism-specific assessments on which this statement could have been based.

The parent emailed the complaint investigator and indicated she reviewed the student's education record on May 30 and believed she came across information that showed the district predetermined the outcome of the student's eligibility conversation. The parent indicated that in the records she reviewed there were several assessments that the district completed and did not include in the initial drafts of the reevaluation report. The parent asserted that this shows the district selected which assessments to include in the reevaluation report to point the team in the direction of a particular decision. The parent's thought is that then once the parent reviewed initial drafts of the reevaluation report and pushed back on the comprehensiveness of the report, the district then added the assessments they had previously completed and not included.

When interviewed, district staff explained the district process for all eligibility conversations, which they stated the May 16 IEP Team meeting followed. The district has an internal eligibility document based on KSDE's Eligibility Indicators document, https://www.ksde.gov/Portals/0/SES/misc/iep/EligibilityIndicators.pdf. District staff stated that district practice is to use this document as a guide to discuss categories of suspected exceptionality and whether there is data to support each prompt. District staff also stated that it is district practice for the exceptionality category on the reevaluation report is not filled in prior to the IEP Team meeting discussing the reevaluation and the district followed this practice with this student.

Prior to this reevaluation, the student was identified under the Developmental Delay exceptionality category. (Student's IEP, Sept. 12, 2024.) District staff stated due to the student's age (eight) and that this was the last scheduled reevaluation before the student turned ten, that the IEP Team first discussed Other Health Impairment, determining that data supported that the student exhibited this exceptionality. District staff also stated that the team discussed the data from the four categories to determine whether the student exhibited the Autism exceptionality category. The district recorded this discussion in the May 16, 2025, IEP Team meeting notes stating, "Autism exceptionality vs. OHI. Reviewed both-OHI better fits [the student's] needs. Autism exceptionality has 4 components to which [the student] does not best fit." (IEP Team District Meeting Notes, May 16, 2025.) The district also recorded this discussion as an option considered and rejected in the May 20, 2025, Prior Written Notice it issued to the parent with the proposed changes to the student's IEP based on the IEP Team's discussion of the reevaluation report stating, "The team considered finding [the student] eligible under the Autism exceptionality category. This option was rejected, as [the student] does not meet eligibility criteria for this exceptionality as outlined by re-evaluation data collected within this re-evaluation period." (Prior Written Notice Proposing Changes to Student's IEP Based on Reevaluation Report IEP Team Discussion, May 20, 2025.) The school psychologist and special services coordinator indicated in the district interview the parent did not voice any disagreement during the IEP Team's discussion of whether reevaluation data support an Autism identification. The school psychologist stated that it is not district practice to ask whether the parent agrees at each step of reviewing data because identifying a student with a particular exceptionality category does not require parent consent.

District staff stated in the interview that the district's practice is to use the indicators listed in Prong 2 for each exceptionality category the team determined the student exhibits to determine whether the student needs special education and that the district followed this practice during this student's May 16 IEP Team meeting. After the IEP Team discussed the Prong 2 indicators for Other Health Impairment and it was time to make a decision, the school psychologist indicated in the district interview that she started the conversation by stating that there seemed to be no disagreement on the IEP Team that the student has an exceptionality (Prong 1) and that the team then needed to discuss whether the student needed special education (Prong 2). The school psychologist indicated she started this part of the conversation as she does most conversations to determine eligibility, by providing her personal opinion that she did not believe the data indicated the student needed special education, stating she is one member of the team and not the sole decisionmaker, and then inviting others to share their opinion. District staff indicated the conversation continued, with other team members sharing their opinions, and the IEP Team determining the student continued to be eligible for special education.

The special services coordinator recalled in the district interview that the parent briefly mentioned reading concerns. The special services coordinator also stated the district's data showed the student was in the average range in reading and that the district did not have any data to show concerns that would have led the IEP Team to consider the Learning Disability exceptionality category as this is not a category where the district staff saw any need, based on the reevaluation data. The special services coordinator indicated this discussion is not mentioned in the IEP Team meeting notes or the May 20 Prior Written Notice as he recalled the mention being very brief and there really being no discussion on the topic.

The district's response indicated that on April 11, 2025, the school psychologist emailed the parent a draft copy of the reevaluation report with a reminder that the report is a draft "and may be edited to and through the evaluation meeting." (District Timeline, May 20, 2025.) In a follow-up email between the district special services coordinator and complaint investigator he indicated that it is district practice to send the parent a draft reevaluation report even if not all assessments are yet fully interpreted, written up, and included in the draft reevaluation report. The district special services coordinator indicated that is what occurred here, the school psychologist sent the parent a draft reevaluation report stating that it would continue to be edited "to and through the evaluation meeting." (District Timeline, May 20, 2025.) The district special services coordinator stated that one such assessment the parent referenced, the parent requested in an April 14, 2025, email to district staff and so the district conducted the assessment, providing the results in the April 17, 2025, draft reevaluation report. The district special services coordinator confirmed that district practice is to include all assessments in a reevaluation report and all conducted assessments were included in the April 17, 2025, draft reevaluation report.

District staff provided all communication between IEP Team members between the April 17 and May 16 IEP Team meetings and all communication included the parent. (Emails Between IEP Team Members Regarding Reevaluation, Apr. and May 2025.) Neither party provided evidence that showed that district staff had any discussion about the student's eligibility prior to the May 16 IEP Team meeting where district staff could have made an eligibility determination without the parent. The May 20, 2025, Prior Written Notice details many parent requests from the May 16, 2025, and the district's response to each, accepting some and explaining how the request would be implemented within the student's IEP and rejecting others, providing a basis for the decision, typically that data did not support implementing the request. (Prior Written Notice Proposing Changes to Student's IEP Based on Reevaluation Report IEP Team Discussion, May 20, 2025.)

Conclusion

District staff clearly articulated the district's process for the IEP Team discussion of a student's eligibility and explained how the district followed its process with this student. The district documented the IEP Team's discussions in the May 16, 2025, IEP Team meeting notes and May 20, 2025, Prior Written Notice. The clearest evidence that the district did not engage in predetermination is that the IEP Team disagreed with the school psychologist's opinion on Prong 2, finding that the student needed special education. Additionally, there is no evidence to show that district team members had any discussion about the student's eligibility without the parent or made a decision without the parent. All district staff interviewed provided information regarding the parent's participation in the IEP Team's discussion and documented the parent's participation in the IEP Team meeting notes and Prior Written Notice. Therefore, this investigation concludes that the district did not violate its obligation to ensure a group of qualified professionals, and the parent determined whether the student continued to be an exceptional child and the student's educational needs under 34 C.F.R. § 300.306(a) and afforded the parent an opportunity to participate in the May 16, 2025, IEP Team meeting under 34 C.F.R. § 300.501(b)(1). As there is no violation, no corrective action is needed.

2. If the district does not have a procedure explaining to staff what they must do when they receive a request from a parent to examine their child's records, then the district must create a procedure on this. The procedure must also include how the district will document when a staff member receives a request from a parent to examine their child's records if it does not already. In this case, the KSDE initially received the complaint on May 7, 2025, and the 30-day timeline ended on June 6, 2025.

Allegations

Background Information

This investigation involved a 6th-grade student enrolled at Augusta Middle School in USD #402. The Student is currently receiving special education or related services as a child with a disability per IDEA. The Student, who attended 6th-grade classes at the Middle School, was reportedly achieving A's in all subjects except Social Studies. The Complaint alleged that the Student's IEP accommodations, including extended time and separate testing environments, were not consistently provided. Additionally, the Student purportedly did not receive modified assignments when necessary and was often reported to have submitted work that was either missed or late. The Student was to receive test accommodations in an alternate setting in the resource room.

Findings of the Investigation

The following findings are based on a review of documentation and interviews with the Parents and staff in the District.

1. The Student is eleven years old and attends 6th grade at a Middle School.
2. The Student qualifies for special education services under the exceptionality category of Other Health Impaired.
3. The Student's semester 1 grade report, which included assignments from August 21, 2024, through December 18, 2024, indicated that the Student had earned a 69% in 6th-grade Social Studies.
4. On September 3, 2025, the Parent and the Teacher exchanged emails regarding homework, notes from a PowerPoint, and the Student's Google Classroom login code. The Teacher offered to help the Student the next morning before first period.
5. Relevant items from the IEP dated October 28, 2024, indicated the following:
    a. Student strengths: "[The Student] is very polite to [their] peers and teacher [at] any given time. [The Student] is shy and quiet when meeting new people but does come out of [their] shell once [the Student] gets to know them."
    b. Student needs: "Teacher observation and report indicate [the Student] has difficulty attending for age-appropriate lengths of time, difficulty with listening, following oral and written directions, working independently, and with self-direction. [The Student] does not disrupt others, talk out of turn, appear restless, or demonstrate attention-seeking behavior."
    c. The following Accommodations/Modifications/Supplementary Support were listed:

i. Read aloud in ELA, math, and for tests, in the general education and special education classrooms for the length of the test or assignment from October 28, 2024, through October 27, 2025.

1. ii. Modified tests/assignments in all core classes, in the general education and special education classrooms for the length of the test or assignment from October 28, 2024, through October 27, 2025.
2. iii. Quiet, separate location whenever tests were given in the MTSS room or the special education classroom for the length of the test from October 28, 2024, through October 27, 2025.
3. iv. Notes provided in all core classes, general education classroom, and special education classroom for the length of note taking from October 28, 2024, through October 27, 2025.

4. v. Extended time for assignments was not an IEP accommodation.
5. vi. According to the meeting notes, "[The Parent] was ok with the wording, accommodations and goals set for [the Student]. No other changes at this time." This was documented with a checked box on the meeting notes.
6. According to an Appendix: Documentation Document, the Parent shared on October 28, 2025, during the IEP meeting, the Student's strong academic performance was highlighted along with teachers universally commending the Student and reporting A's in all subjects except Social Studies. The primary concern identified was the high volume of assignments in Social Studies; a proposed solution involved an assignment sheet to be managed with the assistance of [the Student's] Skills class teacher. However, this support did not materialize as the Skills teacher went on leave shortly after the meeting.
7. Between August 30, 2024, and May 1, 2025, the Teacher documented that the Student took 22 quizzes and tests in a separate testing environment.
8. Between September 16, 2024, through April 21, 2025, Progress Reports documented that the Student received the following grades in Social Studies:
    a. September: A-
    b. October: C+
    c. November: D+
    d. December: D+
    e. February: F
    f. March: C
    g. April: C+
9. On November 4, 2024, the Teacher alerted the Student and the Parent that the Student had missing assignments and needed to study for a quiz.
10. In a table listing the test date, topics, and location, the notation for the November 11, 2024, "WMQ 2.3" indicated that the Student was absent and exempted from the assignment.
11. On December 15, 2025, the Teacher alerted the Resource Teacher that the Student needed to retake a test with them.
12. On February 3, 2025, the Parent emailed the Resource Teacher with concerns, "I am pretty frustrated with [the Student's] social studies class. It was an issue in the first semester, and I just let it go and moved on. It's pretty obvious that there are issues with only this class - [the Student] has straight A's in all other classes. [The Student] hasn't been given the accommodations in this class - notes, going to [the Resource Teacher's] room for tests, etc. [The Student] took a test at the end of the year in [their] class, which shouldn't have happened, and then got to retake it in [the Resource Teacher's] room and got a better grade. [Their] grade in PowerSchool never changed from the initial grade. I emailed the teacher with no response. This year is off to the same start. Some Ed puzzle that was on Google [C]lassroom that it's due by Feb 7 [sic]. I have followed up with [the Student] a multitude of times on this about getting it done by then. Apparently, that date was incorrect on [G]oogle [C]lassroom, and it was due today. So [the Student] got a card mark for it. At this point, I want [the Student] moved out of this class to the other social studies teacher. We have had a great experience at [the Middle School] besides this issue. But this is not a positive learning environment for [the Student]. I don't feel like this class makes [the Student] motivated, resilient, curious … . [The Student] coming home upset from school every day shouldn't be happening." The Principal responded with possible resolutions to consider prior to changing the Student's schedule. The Parent agreed to a meeting with the Teacher, and the Principal confirmed that the goal was to make sure "…[the Student] receives the support outlined in [their] IEP and has a learning environment that allows [the Student] to perform at [their] best."

13. On February 5, 2025, the Parent attended a meeting during which a prepared document outlining their concerns was shared. The proposed solution from this meeting was for the Social Studies Teacher to daily record assignments in the Student's agenda for parental review. However, according to the Parent, it proved ineffective due to the Student's documented ADHD, which contributed to disorganization, inconsistent agenda use, and the Student's discomfort in engaging directly with the Social Studies Teacher.
14. On February 21, 2025, the Teacher emailed the Parent describing that they moved Monday's test to Wednesday due to school closings, and that the Student was overheard expressing concern about their Parent's reaction to the original test date. The Teacher also requested help reminding the Student to turn in their agenda daily for signatures.
15. On February 26, 2025, the Parent and the Resource Teacher exchanged emails regarding the Student's struggle with getting the agenda signed daily by the Teacher.
16. According to the Parent on March 23, 2025, the Student's argumentative paper was marked as late and missing on Powerschool, despite having been submitted a week prior to the revised due date. It was discovered that the Social Studies Teacher had altered the submission method, requiring the students to email the paper directly rather than submitting through Google Classroom, where parents access assignment information. This necessitated an additional email to rectify the situation, after which the paper was marked, turned in, and subsequently graded.
17. On May 7, 2025, the Resource Teacher emailed the Parent, "[The Student] was asked for [their] notebook yesterday and did not turn it in. The manner and notebook were given to [the Teacher] today, and the manner assignment is due this week, and it will be updated in the grade book soon. We are close to the end of the year and [the Student] has a test tomorrow in Social Studies [sic]."

    According to the Parent, on May 7, 2025, the Student received a zero on a Social Studies assignment, despite it being completed and present in the Student's notebook upon the Student's return from vacation. The Social Studies Teacher had previously indicated that they had reviewed the Student's work together; however, when questioned via email, the Resource Teacher stated the Student was supposed to submit their binder, even though the assignment was found in the Student's notebook on May 1, 2025, the date the Social Studies Teacher claimed to have gone through all of the Student's work.

18. On May 8, 2025 according to a Formal Complaint regarding the Social Studies Teacher, the Parent indicated, "Our most serious concern is that [the Student's] Individual Education Program (IEP), which is in place to ensure [they receive] the accommodations legally entitled to [the Student] as a student with disabilities, has not been followed consistently in [the Social Studies Teacher's] classroom. The accommodations in [the Student's] IEP stem from [their] diagnosis of ADHD (inattentive type), Dyslexia, and Dyscaluculia [sic], which were formally identified by a licensed psychologist in 2021. [The Student's] educational evaluations clearly outline the need for modified assignments, extended time on tests, opportunities to take assessments in distraction-free environments, and the breaking down of large tasks into manageable parts with appropriate support. However, these supports have been inconsistently provided in this class, and, at times, entirely ignored. … not regularly offered extended time or separate testing environments."

19. According to a District Response Formal Complaint Document with no date, "Upon interview, the Inter Special Education Teacher stated, '[The Student] has always been given a separate testing environment and most often [the Student] comes to my room for [their] test. The only time [they] did not come to my room was for this last test and [the Social Studies Teacher] created a separate space in [their] room to administer the test because [the Student] had been gone on a vacation and [the Social Studies Teacher] wanted to help [them] with the test to make sure [they] understood the material and the questions. [The Social Studies Teacher] had come to talk to me about this prior to the test, and we agreed it was a good thing." Between August 30, 2024, and May 19, 2025, the Student took tests with the Special Education Teacher thirty-one times.

    During interviews with the District, "Both [Ms. the Social Studies Teacher and the Inter Special Education Teacher] refuted allegations that [the Student] was not offered or given class notes. [The Social Studies Teacher] stated that [the Student] consistently received PowerPoints in print or via Google Classroom, and for each unit, [the Social Studies Teacher] provided students with a packet of necessary papers, a practice implemented during COVID-19 to keep students on track. [The Social Studies Teacher] specifically recalled giving [the Student] a prepared packet for an upcoming unit the week before [their] vacation, walking [them] through it, and gluing it into [their] notebook page by page to match [their] own. [The Social Studies Teacher] explained that later materials would be available on Google Classroom and that the packet included modified Clozed notes for accessibility, with only the final Crusades page withheld for in-class completion after the Student's return. [The Inter Special Education Teacher] corroborated this, stating that [the Social Studies Teacher] consistently provided [the Student] with modified notes, either printed or available on Google Classroom, and [the Inter Special Education Teacher] had no concerns about the provision of support in [the Student's] class.

20. According to non-dated assignment work samples from the Parent, the Student had to handwrite notes on several Essential Question Handouts. The Student also answered comprehension questions and character analysis descriptions regarding Gilgamesh, which were all handwritten responses. There was one worksheet on the Byzantine Civilization, which had a subject web with handwritten responses that were not written by the Student. Copies of the Student's notebook showed several cut-out and pasted pictures with handwritten notes by the Student. Several of the handwritten assignments had "late" noted at the top with numerical scores. One work sample titled Early Greek had prewritten sentence starters with fill-in-the-blank questions and pasted character depictions on it.

District Interview:

21. On May 23, 2025, during an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Social Studies Teacher shared, "Any time [the Student] has assignments that [the Student] needed to work on, [the Student] was allowed to leave with our para and to work on those assignments. And then when [the Student] was done, [the Student] came back into the classroom." The Social Studies Teacher indicated that the amount of time the Student left the classroom to work on assignments depended on how many assignments were in each unit of study. The Social Studies Teacher indicated that if the Student owed work, the Student went out with the Para to work on whatever was missing, and when the work was completed, the Student came back into the classroom. The Student had the Para's notebook to look off of for any dates or on Google Classroom, or their own agenda. According to the Social Studies Teacher, the Student was never denied access to come back into the classroom. The Social Studies Teacher shared that it took the Student a few minutes to complete the dates on the Table of Contents.

When asked about changing the way to submit the Student's argumentative paper without posting a new way of submitting it on Google Classroom, the Social Studies Teacher responded, "It was sent through [a Classroom Teacher's account]. Google Classroom only allowed that one teacher to access it. So, because it was a duo assignment, I had requested they send it to me by email. ... I was locked out of it." The Social Studies Teacher indicated the Student's assignment was sent through Google Classroom around March 4, 2024, according to the Parent. The Social Studies Teacher felt that was "probably around that time."

The Social Studies Teacher shared that there was a verbal agreement after a Parent meeting with the Principal, the Social Studies Teacher, and the Parent to have the Student's agenda signed each day to show that there was constant communication between the Social Studies Teacher and the Parent if there was any homework. When asked if that worked, the Social Studies Teacher stated, "I didn't know. I would ask [the Student] for it. [The Student] would forget to give it to me on multiple occasions."

The Social Studies Teacher indicated the Parent only signed the agenda "once or twice that I can recall." The Social Studies Teacher stated the agenda was passed on to the Resource Teacher, who would then send notices home. The Social Studies Teacher said that the Parent and the Social Studies Teacher were the only two people who were supposed to sign the agenda.

The Assistant Director of Special Education shared, "I'm just looking back through the issue that in accordance with State and Federal Guidelines, specifically in Social Studies class, the [S]tudent was not regularly offered extended time, which was not even an accommodation … ."

The Assistant Director of Special Education shared regarding the Complaint, "One of the things that was listed was extended time. That's not even on the IEP, and all of the other accommodations, [the Social Studies Teacher] was able to show that [the Social Studies Teacher] absolutely provided those."

Parents Interview:

During a Parent Interview with the Complaint Investigator on May 26, 2025, the Parents shared that at the October IEP meeting each core teacher reported that the Student was succeeding and had all A's, except for a D or F in social studies. The Social Studies Teacher didn't acknowledge the possibility of their own teaching methods contributing to the Student's issues, according to the Parents. Consequently, no changes were deemed necessary for the IEP itself, and it was suggested that the Social Studies Teacher adhere more closely to the existing IEP to aid the Student's success according to the Parents.

The Parents shared that the Student's D/F in social studies stemmed from a high volume of assignments compared to other classes. The Student's two social studies notebooks, totaling 215 pages of handwritten notes, indicated the extensive workload. Despite an IEP provision for notes to accommodate the Student's dyslexia, the Student was still required to handwrite everything, which was challenging given their condition and ADHD. This led to the Student feeling overwhelmed, and messages about assignments often failed to translate clearly from school to home.

The Parents' shared attempts to seek clarification from the Social Studies Teacher were met with dismissiveness, with the Social Studies Teacher directing inquiries to Google Classroom and stating the Student, "should know what's going on." This lack of support from the Social Studies Teacher contributed to assignments not being turned in according to the Parents..

Additionally, the Student often lacked paraprofessional support in class, leading the Student to set aside tasks that they didn't understand. Tests were also not administered in a separate environment with questions read aloud, as mandated by the Student's IEP, due to alleged para shortages or the perceived brevity of the tests. The Parents indicated that tests were typically posted on Google Classroom as a Google form. The Parents were not sure "how that was a modified test."

The Parents indicated the Student's social studies notebook was filled with handwritten notes, despite the expectation that on the IEP, the Student would be provided with pre-written notes. Although the Social Studies Teacher claimed to provide notes via Google Classroom, this still required the Student to copy them, which was particularly challenging for a student with dyslexia and ADHD. A significant concern was that the Student was not consistently given the opportunity to take tests in a separate room, a crucial accommodation in their IEP. The Student grew increasingly hesitant to advocate for themselves with the Social Studies Teacher, who was perceived as loud, outspoken, and blunt, leading the Student to take tests in the regular classroom to avoid conflict. A critical concern for the Parents was the inconsistent provision of a separate testing environment, which was an IEP accommodation. The Student was reluctant to self-advocate to utilize a separate testing environment, according to the Parents.

The Parents stated that following a Complaint from the Student's Parents to the Principal about the Student's struggles in social studies class, a meeting was arranged, during which the Social Studies Teacher became defensive when confronted about the Student's intimidation regarding the Social Studies Teacher. Shortly after this meeting, the Social Studies Teacher reportedly singled out the Student in class, loudly offering help in a manner that the Student perceived as bullying and humiliating. Despite the Student's actual need for assistance, the Student refused it to avoid further attention.

When asked about the schedule change for the Student, which flipped math and social studies to resolve the para support issue, the Parents said that by doing the switch, it would allow the Student to have more para support. The Parents indicated that they didn't notice a big change in how things were going. The Special Education Teacher, who was also the coordinator of the paras, was expected to ensure IEPs were followed and facilitate testing in a separate room. Yet, the Special Education Teacher rarely communicated with the Student's Parents. It was later discovered through the Social Studies Teacher Complaint response that, following a February meeting, the Principal instructed the Social Studies Teacher to cease direct communication with the Student's Parents. Consequently, the Special Education Teacher or the Principal became the intermediaries for all communication regarding assignments, leaving the Student's Parents feeling "ghosted" by the Social Studies Teacher, as this change in communication protocol was never directly conveyed to them.

Positions of the Parties, Applicable Regulations, and Conclusions

Issue One

Whether USD #402, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, implemented the Student's IEP. Specifically in the Student's Social Studies class, "[The Student] was not regularly offered extended time or separate testing environments. [The Student] was not given class notes or modified assignments when needed, and [they were] frequently penalized for missed or late work without any effort made to determine whether those issues were tied to [their] learning needs." K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(3); 34 C.F.R. § 300.323.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(3), an IEP must be in effect for each exceptional child at the beginning of each school year.

The Parent alleged that the accommodations of extended time and separate testing sessions were not consistently followed in the Student's social studies class.

The District acknowledged that the Parents' Complaint focused on concerns regarding the Student's Social Studies class with the Social Studies Teacher, specifically alleging that accommodations for extended time, a separate testing environment, access to class notes, and modified assignments were not implemented. However, the investigation narrowed the scope to issues relevant to IDEA. It was noted that the Student's IEP, dated October 28, 2024, listed accommodations for read-aloud support, modified tests/assignments, a quiet testing location, and provided notes. Crucially, "extended time" was not an accommodation on the Student's current IEP or previous IEPs, and the Parent had previously agreed to the IEP's wording. Despite "extended time" not being a listed accommodation, the Social Studies Teacher stated that all students were permitted to submit late or missing assignments until the unit test, a policy outlined in their syllabus, and to which the Parent had seemingly agreed.

The Social Studies Teacher detailed several modifications they consistently implemented for assignments and tests. These included the use of cloze notes and graphic organizers, incorporating diverse learning styles (hands-on, auditory, visual), and frequently repeating directions while also providing access to Google Classroom materials. Furthermore, [the Student] was permitted to use notes on certain tests, such as the Middle Ages and End of the Year notebook tests. Tests were often modified to have fewer answer choices, and assignments like GRAPES were shortened. Vocabulary and other notes were presented as fill-in-the-blank rather than open response. For complex maps, the Social Studies Teacher led the class through labeling locations together, and the Student frequently utilized the online textbook with headphones, which provided a read-aloud function.

The IEP dated October 28, 2024, highlighted the Student's politeness and initial shyness that dissipated once comfortable with others. However, the Student demonstrated needs in areas such as sustained attention, following directions (both oral and written), and independent work, though these difficulties did not manifest as disruptive behaviors. To address these needs, the IEP prescribed accommodations including read-aloud support for ELA, math, and tests in the general education and special education classrooms; modified tests and assignments across all core classes; a quiet, separate testing location; and provided notes in all core subject classes. These supports were implemented from October 28, 2024, through October 27, 2025.

Between August 30, 2024, and May 1, 2025, the Student completed 22 quizzes and tests in a separate testing environment. During this period, the Student's Social Studies grades fluctuated, starting with an A in September 2024, dropping to an F by February 2025, and then improving to a C+ by April 2025. The Social Studies Teacher noted on November 4, 2024, that the Student had missing assignments and needed to prepare for an upcoming quiz. Additionally, the Student was absent and exempted from the "WMQ 2.3" on November 11, 2024. On December 15, 2024, the Social Studies Teacher requested that the Student retake a test with the Resource Teacher as indicated on the IEP accommodations section. Extended time for assignments was not an accommodation listed on the IEP.

On February 25, 2025, the Parent attended a meeting where concerns were raised and a solution was proposed: the Social Studies Teacher would daily record assignments in the Student's agenda for parental review. However, this proved ineffective, due to the Student's disorganization, inconsistent agenda use, and discomfort in directly engaging with the Social Studies Teacher. On February 21, 2025, the Social Studies Teacher emailed the Parent, explaining that a test had been moved due to school closings and noting the Student's expressed concern about the Parent's reaction to the original test date. The Social Studies Teacher also sought assistance in reminding the Student to submit their agenda daily for signatures. By February 26, 2025, the Parent and Resource Teacher were exchanging emails regarding the Student's difficulties in getting the agenda signed daily. This was not a listed accommodation on the current IEP.

Work samples provided by the Parent showed eight pages of handwritten notes along with pasted cutouts of historic pictures on the note pages. The work samples also showed three fill-in-the-blank questions and note pages, as well as notes copied by another person, not the Student. The IEP accommodation involving note taking states, "Notes provided in all core classes, general education classroom, and special education classroom for the length of note taking from October 28, 2024, through October 27, 2025." Because of the high volume of the Student handwritten notes in their Social Studies notebook, the indication is that notes were not provided on all assignments in social studies, just a few.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is substantiated that the district failed to implement the Student's IEP, specifically, providing notes to the Student in their social studies class.

Corrective Action

Information gathered in the course of this investigation has substantiated noncompliance with special education statutes and regulations. A violation occurred in the following area:

A. Federal regulations at K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(3); 34 C.F.R. § 300.323. specifies that an IEP must be in effect for each exceptional child at the beginning of each school year.

   In this case, the evidence supports the finding that USD #402 to implement the Student's IEP, specifically, providing notes to the Student in their social studies class.

   Documentation, Interviews, and the Parties Responses document this.

   Based on the foregoing, USD # 402 is directed to take the following actions:

   1. Within 15 calendar days of the date of this report, USD # 402 shall submit a written statement of assurance to Special Education and Title Services (SETS) stating that it will comply with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) at K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(3); 34 C.F.R. § 300.323. specifies that an IEP must be in effect for each exceptional child at the beginning of each school year.
   2. Implement the IEP accommodation of "notes provided in all core classes."
   3. Further, by September 6, 2025 USD #402 will complete the following:
      a. Submit a written statement of assurance to Special Education and Title Services (SETS) that the district's practices and procedures for IEP implementation have been reviewed and revised as appropriate to be responsive and compliant with IEP implementation procedures of the IDEA and the Kansas Special Education for Exceptional Children Act.
      b. Provide verification that all staff who implement and supervise the implementation of IEPs have been trained in IEP implementation.

DECISION OF THE APPEAL COMMITTEE

Background

This matter commenced with the filing of a complaint on May 7, 2025, by ------- on behalf of their daughter, -------. In the remainder of this decision, ------- will be referred to as "the parents," and ------ will be referred to as "the student." An investigation of the complaint was undertaken by a complaint investigator on behalf of the Special Education, and Title Services team at the Kansas State Department of Education. Following the investigation, a Complaint Report, addressing the allegations, was issued on June 6, 2025. That Complaint Report concluded that there was a violation of special education statutes and regulations

Thereafter, the district filed an appeal of the Complaint Report. Upon receipt of the appeal, an appeal committee was appointed and it reviewed the original complaint filed by the parent, the Complaint Report, the district's notice of appeal, and the parent's response to the appeal. The Appeal Committee has reviewed the information provided in connection with this matter and now issues this Appeal Decision.

Preliminary Matters

A copy of the regulation regarding the filing of an appeal [K.A.R. 91-40-51(f)] was attached to the Complaint Report. That regulation states, in part, that: "Each notice shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect." Accordingly, the burden for supplying a sufficient basis for appeal is on the party submitting the appeal. When a party submits an appeal and makes statements in the notice of appeal without support, the Committee does not attempt to locate the missing support.

No new issues will be decided by the Appeal Committee. The appeal process is a review of the Complaint Report. The Appeal Committee does not conduct a separate investigation. The appeal committee's function will be to determine whether sufficient evidence exists to support the findings and conclusions in the Complaint Report.

Discussion of Issues on Appeal

The report identified one issue:

Issue One

> Whether USD #402, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), implemented the Student's IEP. Specifically in the Student's Social Studies class, "[The Student] was not regularly offered extended time or separate testing environments. [The Student] was not given class notes or modified assignments when needed, and [they were] frequently penalized for missed or late work without any effort made to determine whether those issues were tied to [their] learning needs." K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(3); 34 C.F.R. § 300.323.

The investigator concluded that a "separate testing location" was implemented, at least from October 28, 2024 until October 27, 2025 and that "extended time" for completion of assignments was not an accommodation in the student's IEP (Report, p. 15). These conclusions were not contested upon appeal.

The investigator also concluded that: "it is substantiated that the district failed to implement the Student's IEP, specifically, providing notes to the Student in their social studies class." The investigator described the reason for this conclusion as:

Work samples provided by the Parent showed eight pages of handwritten notes along with pasted cutouts of historic pictures on the note pages. The work samples also showed three fill-in-the-blank questions and note pages, as well as notes copied by another person, not the Student. The IEP accommodation involving note taking states, "Notes provided in all core classes, general education classroom, and special education classrooms for the length of note taking from October 28, 2024, through October 27, 2025." Because of the high volume of the Student handwritten notes in their Social Studies notebook, the indication is that notes were not provided on all assignments in social studies, just a few (emphasis added).

The applicable provision in this student's IEP is: "Notes provided in all core classes, general education classroom, and special education classroom for the length of note taking…(emphasis added)"

The district appeals this decision, noting that the investigator based her decision entirely on the following reasoning: "Because of the high volume of the Student handwritten notes in their Social Studies notebook…"

The district's appeal based on the following assertions:

- The IEP does not define what constitutes "notes" nor does it restrict the method of delivery. The district gives many examples of "notes" in various modalities and/or formats (i.e. Cloze Notes, Graphic Organizers, PowerPoint slides, fill in the blank notes, etc.) and how they were provided (i.e. via Google Classroom and printed and given to the student in person). Evidence that supports includes that notes are found, printed, and in the student's Social Studies notebook which was verified by both the district and the parent. Additionally, the digital notes can be seen in the Google Classroom folder.

- The IEP does not state the student will have a scribe or be excused from handwriting answers to questions or fill in the blank options in the notes provided.
- The IEP does not restrict whether the student may take her own notes in addition to receiving them.
- The student choosing to take her own notes in class should not be interpreted as evidence of the absence of the required accommodation.

The appeal Committee agrees with the district's assertion. The investigator does state that her conclusion is based solely on "the high volume of the Student handwritten notes in their Social Studies notebook…" and cites no other basis.

The district's appeal challenges the definitions of terms commonly used in an IEP, specifically the meaning of the word "notes" and whether the word "provide" has flexibility in how a service or accommodation is provided.

IEPs uniformly do not come with a "definition of terms" section. Thus, we turn to the Kansas rules for statutory construction in K.S.A. 77-201. That statute says: "Words and phrases shall be construed according to the context and the approved usage of the language." The usual method for ascertaining the "approved usage" of a word is to find a dictionary description of the word.

The primary definition of the word "note" is: "a brief written record of something to assist the memory for future reference." (See, Wester's College Dictionary, 1999). Likewise, we turn to the same dictionary to provide us with an understanding of the term "provide." The primary definition for the word "provide" is: "to make available." (Wester's College Dictionary, 1999).

With regard to this dictionary definition of the word "provide," in the context of a special education complaint to a state department of education like this one, the Minnesota Court of Appeals considered this very question in In re: Special Education Complaint 22-027C, 82 IDELR 11 (Minn. Ct. of Appeals 2022). In that case, the facts were very different from the facts in this complaint. in the Minnesota complaint, the parents refused services offered in the IEP and then filed a state complaint alleging the district failed to deliver the services. The Minnesota State Department of Education's complaint investigator concluded that the school district was in violation of law because it had not "provided" the services in the IEP. This decision was appealed to a state district court, according to Minnesota law. The Minnesota Court of Appeals overturned the Department of Education's complaint investigator, saying:

> the meaning of the term "are provided" is unambiguous, and because the pertinent regulations did not define the term "are provided," the court may look to dictionary definition to find its common meaning. In doing so, the court said:
>
> "One dictionary defines "provide" as: "[t]o make available (something needed or desired)," "[t]o supply something needed or desired," and "[t]o make ready ahead of time; prepare." The American Heritage Dictionary of the English Language 1418 (5th ed. 2018)). Another dictionary defines "provide" as: "to supply or make available (something wanted or needed)" and "to make preparation to meet a need." Merriam-Webster's Collegiate Dictionary 1001 (11th ed. 2014)."

The court added that to interpret the regulation "to require that a district not only offer or make available special-educational services, but also ensure that those services are received--even when refused--would result in liability and corrective action for school districts based on circumstances completely beyond their control."

We are not bound by decisions of Minnesota courts, but we may look at them for guidance. In addition we note that while the facts are completely different in this complaint than the Minnesota complaint, the meaning of the term "provide" does not change. Using both the Minnesota Court of Appeals decision as a guide and the cited provision in the Kansas statute on statutory construction, the Appeal Committee finds that to successfully "provide" services specified in an IEP does not require that those services be received, unless so specified in the IEP. Otherwise, it is sufficient to "provide" services by making them available. The facts presented in this complaint verify that notes were available to this student in various forms, including through written teacher notes, Cloze Notes, Graphic Organizers, PowerPoint Slides, and fill in the blank notes. Of course, there are situations where such formats for notes may be of little or no help to the student. When that occurs, the IEP team has a duty to identify the specific format of notes the student needs to be successful and to specify that format in the IEP.

In its appeal, as previously acknowledged above, the district adds: : "The student choosing to take her own notes in class is not evidence of a denial of services... (and) The student's use of personal note-taking should not be interpreted as a substitute for or indication of the absence of the required accommodation." The Appeal Committee agrees. Under the circumstances of this case, where the IEP did not require a specified delivery method for notes, the evidence presented verifies that notes were provided to the student (as the word "provide" is commonly defined) in all core classes, general education classroom, and special education classroom, as specified in this student's IEP.

The Appeal Committee is not unsympathetic to this student's experience, and recommends that this student's IEP team meet to discuss whether the student needs notes delivered in a specific format, and if so, to specify that format in the student's IEP.

Conclusion

For the reasons stated herein, the Complaint Report is reversed, and corrective action deleted.

This is the final decision on this matter. There is no further appeal. This Appeal Decision is issued this 23rd day of June, 2025.

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #287, WEST FRANKLIN PUBLIC SCHOOLS
ON MARCH 31, 2025

DATE OF REPORT: JUNE 20, 2025

This report is in response to a complaint filed with the Kansas State Department of Education against USD #287 West Franklin Public Schools on behalf of -------, by her mother, -------. In the remainder of the report, ------- will be referred to as "the student." ------- is the student's mother and in the remainder of the report she will be referred to as "the complainant," or "the mother.

The complaint is against USD #287 West Franklin Public Schools. In the remainder of the report, USD #287 will be referred to as "the district." The District utilizes Three Lakes Educational Cooperative (TLEC) for some special education services. In the remainder of this report TLEC will be referred to as "the coop." It is recognized that while TLEC provides special education services to the West Franklin Public Schools the district is ultimately responsible for the special education services for the student.

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) allows for a 30-day timeline to investigate a complaint from the date in which it was filed. A complaint is considered filed on the date in which it was received by KSDE. In this case, the KSDE initially received the complaint on March 31, 2025. On April 10, 2025, the district and complainant signed an agreement to engage in mediation. On May 14, 2025 mediation occurred and was unsuccessful for any of the ten issues, so the investigation was resumed. The revised timeline for completion of this investigation is revised to end on June 12, 2025. Subsequently the investigator requested and was provided an extension to June 20, 2025.

The Investigator first spoke with the Mother by phone on April 2, 2025 and again on June 15, 2025. The Investigator spoke with the Special Education Director by phone on April 2, 2025 to clarify the issues and discuss requested evidence. The Investigator interviewed Caroline Green, the Coop Special Education Director, Amy Redmon, the School Psychologist, and Matt Brenzikofer, the District Superintendent, on June 11, 2025 by phone conference.

Background Information

The student is a nine-year-old third grader who is not currently eligible for special education and related services. The student has a medical diagnosis of ADHD and anxiety, and documentation was provided on February 26, 2025. The Mother requested a gifted evaluation for the student on November 13, 2024. The district responded with a Prior Written Notice on November 26, 2024 consenting to the gifted evaluation and discussed GEI. On December 6, 2024, the student's learning discussed at a SIT meeting with the mother present. At this time, the Mother described the ADHD and anxiety diagnosis and evaluation implications. The mother consented to the evaluation and a meeting was held on February 26, 2025 to discuss the evaluation findings. The findings from the February 26, 2025 evaluation was that additional testing and consideration would be given to the student's medical diagnoses of anxiety and ADHD. Consent for this additional evaluation was not provided by the mother. A second Prior Written Notice was provided to the Mother on March 6, 2025 to gain consent to conduct the parent-requested evaluation but was not signed. A planned March 26, 2025 evaluation meeting was held but the mother did not attend. This Child complaint was filed during this time and paused for Mediation. The Mediation was unsuccessful so the investigation continued following May 15, 2025.

A new initial evaluation to consider eligibility for gifted services is currently underway after the Mother signed consent on May 15, 2025. The actions on behalf the student regarding the May 14, 2025 Prior Written Notice will not be investigated as they constitute a new evaluation and timeline.

Issues Investigated

It is noted that the IDEA has no application to children who are being evaluated only for gifted eligibility and therefore Kansas statutes and regulations will be used throughout when referring to only evaluation issues.

ISSUE ONE: Did the district follow IDEA (Kansas) regulations when providing procedural safeguards in response to a parent's written request for a gifted evaluation?

ISSUE TWO: Did the district follow IDEA (Kansas) regulations when responding to a parent request for a gifted evaluation? (It is recognized that Issue One is considered part of following IDEA regulations and for the sake of understanding these two issues are reported together.)

ISSUE THREE: Did the district follow IDEA regulations when responding to a parent request to correct student records?

ISSUE FOUR: Did the student's gifted evaluation report include all of the evaluation collected as part of the comprehensive evaluation according to IDEA (Kansas) regulations? (Issues Four and Nine were investigated individually, but reported together since they both address the completeness of the evaluation report)

ISSUE FIVE: Did the district follow IDEA (Kansas) regulations when providing notice for the February 26, 2025 meeting on February 23, 2025 and for the March 26, 2025 meeting sent on February 26, 2025?

ISSUE SIX: Did the district follow IDEA (Kansas) regulations to conduct a comprehensive gifted evaluation for the student?

ISSUE SEVEN: Did the district conduct the comprehensive gifted evaluation for the student within timeline?

ISSUE EIGHT: Did the March 3, 2025 (corrected to March 6, 2025) Prior Written Notice follow IDEA (Kansas) regulations?

ISSUE NINE: Did the second draft of the Student's evaluation report (sent and dated March 24, 2025) contain agree-upon additional information discussed during the February 26, 2025 team meeting according to the IDEA (Kansas) regulations? (The findings of Issue Nine are included within Issue Four since they both address the Evaluation report).

ISSUE TEN: Did the district follow IDEA (Kansas) regulations in maintaining and providing adequate meeting records?

Issues One and Two

Did the district follow IDEA (Kansas) regulations when providing procedural safeguards in response to a parent's written request for a gifted evaluation? (Issue 1)

Did the district follow IDEA (Kansas) regulations when responding to a parent request for a gifted evaluation? (Issue 2)

Applicable Law

Kansas state statute at K.S.A. 72-3430(e) require that a copy of the procedural safeguards/rights must be given to the parents only one time a school year, except that a copy also must be given to the parents upon initial referral or parent request for evaluation.

Kansas State Statute at 72-3428(a)(2) states that an initial evaluation may be initiated either by the parent of a child or by an agency. In Kansas, when a parent requests an initial special education evaluation, the school district is required to respond without unnecessary delay—typically within 15 school days—by either obtaining written parental consent to begin the evaluation or providing a written notice explaining why it is refusing the request (p 56, Kansas State Department of Education Kansas Special Education Process Handbook)

Parent Position

The Mother alleged that after submitting a written referral for a gifted evaluation on November 13, 2024 the Mother and School Psychologist engaged in a back and forth conversation and during this time the Mother was not provided with a copy of the Procedural Safeguards. The Mother further alleged that instead of following the IDEA procedures for responding to a written parent request for an initial evaluation with a Prior Written Notice, the School Psychologist instead responded, "I have reviewed [Student's] latest FastBridge scores done in September of this year. [Student] scores need to be at least at the 95th percentile and above in one subject area to be considered for gifted services. [Student] did not score at that percentile in the Fall."

District Position

The district responded that on November 13, 2024, the Mother submitted a written request via email for a gifted evaluation on November 13, 2024. On November 26, 2024 the Special Education Director, sent a letter to the Mother acknowledging the request for evaluation and included a copy of the Parent Rights (procedural safeguards) for Special Education. On December 1, 2024, the Mother confirmed receipt of these documents in an email to the Director of Special Education. On December 6, 2024, the district convened a Student Intervention Team (SIT) meeting with the Mother present. During this meeting, the GEI process was initiated, collecting input from Mother. On the same day, the district provided the Mother a Prior Written Notice indicating its intent to conduct an initial evaluation and obtain informed consent, which was electronically signed by the mother on December 6, 2024.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The district acknowledged in their response that it received the parent's written request for a gifted evaluation on November 13, 2024.

The [Coop] Special Education Policies, Practices & Procedures 2024-2025 states on page 4, "A copy of the Parent Rights in Special Education Notice must be provided to both parents and in the native language of the parents/adult student or other mode of communication used by the parents/adult student: a referral or parent request for initial evaluation". Further, on page 17, listed in the Steps to follow for an Initial Evaluation following Step 1, Referral, Step 2 states, "Parent Rights-provided at time of referral in the parent's native language."

The school psychologist reported during the June 12, 2025 interview with the investigator that the school psychologist had not worked with the student previously so reviewed existing current classroom-based, local, or state assessments, talked with the student's classroom teacher and did not find anything to indicate a gifted evaluation. Following this, the school psychologist called the Mother sharing her initial findings and requesting information from the Mother about the gifted evaluation. The school psychologist further stated that her describing that the student test scores was not an attempt to thwart the evaluation process, but an attempt to describe to the Mother the existing data in regard to a gifted evaluation and the call was to gather parent input for consideration of the evaluation.

A letter addressed to the student's parents from the Director of Special education dated November 26, 2024 acknowledged the parent request for an initial evaluation. The letter further acknowledged the district's responsibilities as "Provide parents with a copy of the Parent Rights document" The letter further stated, "I have enclosed a copy of the Parent Rights document in your native language. Staff are available to further explain your parental rights should you request additional information. " Finally, the letter documents, "Enclosure: Parental Rights Document"

The SIT meeting on December 6, 2024 discussed the role of GEI and the District provided a Prior Written Notice to evaluate the student for gifted services.

The elementary school calendar documents that November 27-29 were school holidays.

Conclusion

Written document and both parties acknowledge that the request was made on November 13, 2024 and the district provided the procedural safeguards on November 26, 2024. November 13, 2024 – November 26, 2024 is within the fifteen school day timeline in which to respond to a parent's request for an evaluation. The Notice of Procedural Safeguards is part of that response. The requirement that the Notice of Procedural Safeguards be provided "upon request" means only that the "request" triggers the response requirement but does not require that the response be immediate. Whenever the special education law requires the district to do something, but does not specify a specific time in which to do it, it should be done within a reasonable time (which Special Education and Titel Services (SETS) has described in the Kansas Special Education Process Handbook, to be within 15 school days, unless there are unusual circumstances justifying a longer time. In this instance, the district provided the Notice of Procedural Safeguards well within the "reasonable time" period described by SETS.

Further, it is found that the District acted properly in reviewing existing data and reaching out to the Mother to discuss the evaluation request. Finally, the District responded to the Mother requested gifted evaluation within a reasonable timeframe – 14 days.

No violation of law has occurred with regard to this issue.

Issue Three

Did the district follow IDEA regulations when responding to a parent request to correct student records?

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.618 states that a parent who believes that information in education records collected, maintained, or used is inaccurate or misleading or violates the privacy or other rights of the child may request the participating agency that maintains the information to amend the information. The agency shall decide whether to amend the information in accordance with the request within a reasonable period of time of receipt of the request. If the agency decides to refuse to amend the information in accordance with the request, it shall inform the parent of the refusal and advise the parent of the right to a hearing under Sec. 300.619.

If the school does not agree that the education records should be changed, staff must provide an opportunity for a hearing, following FERPA requirements. The hearing officer would be the school's hearing officer, not a special education due process hearing officer (34 C.F.R. 300.618).

NOTE: Federal Regulation 300.618 is incorporated by reference into Kansas regulations pursuant to K.A.R. 91-40-50(b).

Parent Position

The Mother alleged that on March 4, 2025, she requested the Prior Written Notice dated December 6, 2024 be amended to reflect that the document was emailed, not hand-delivered. She further requested that if the correction was not made that the Mother's request be added to the student records. The Mother stated that the correction was not made and the letter requesting the change was added to the student record.

District Position

The District responded that on March 4, 2025, the Mother requested the December 6, 2024 Prior Written Notice, signed by the Mother on the same day be corrected to reflect that the document was emailed, not hand-delivered, and that the email delivery date of March 4, 2025 be updated. The District also stated that the Mother requested, that if the PWN is not correct, that the Mother's statement regarding the discrepancy be included in the record. The Special Education Director, sent an email acknowledging the Mother's correction request and explained that the Prior Written Notice was reviewed and electronically signed in person using an electronic device on December 6, 2024 so would not change the delivery date to March 4, 2025. The Director of Special Education also stated that the Mother's request for correction and the district's response would be uploaded to the student's record, thereby documenting the concern and the clarification.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The findings of Issues One and Two are incorporated herein by reference.

Email and in person conversations following the December 6, 2024 SIT meeting through March 3, 2025 document that the Mother disputed the December 6, 2024 Prior Written Notice that stated that the Prior Written Notice was hand-delivered as she did not receive a paper or electronic copy until March 3, 2025.

On February 27, 2025 at 7:45 p.m. the Mother emailed the Director of Special Education, " formally requesting access to all of the records that [the Coop] has for the evaluation of [Student] at [School], including but not limited to Notice of Meetings and Prior Written Notices." Upon receiving the December 6, 2024 Prior Written Notice, the Mother emailed the Special Education Director, "I am writing in reference to the Prior Written Notice dated 12/6/24, which states that the document was "hand delivered" to me on that date. I would like to formally request that the record be amended to accurately reflect the circumstances and date under which I received this document."

On March 5, 2025 at 1:34 p.m. the Special Education Director replied in an email to the Mother, "We have included your correspondence regarding the Prior Written Notice dated December 6, 2024 in [Student's] special education records. The Prior Written Notice was reviewed with you December 6, 2024 and you signed the Prior Written Notice electronically at the SIT meeting. An electronic copy of the Prior Written Notice for consent to complete an initial gifted evaluation was provided to you via email Monday, March 3, 2025. The Prior Written Notice dated December 6, 2024 will not be amended."

On March 5, 2025 at 2:00 p.m. the Mother replied, "I would like to clarify. Will the delivery statement on the Prior Written Notice that reads "I, [School Psychologist], hand delivered...on December 6th" be removed from the previous copy of the Prior Written Notice? If so, will it be replaced with a corrected statement about how it was emailed and the date? If not, can you please explain why? Lastly, I would like an updated copy of the fixed Prior Written Notice as well as the attachments for my records." To this request, the Special Education Director replied, "We have included your correspondence regarding the Prior Written Notice dated December 6, 2024 in [student's] special education records. The Prior Written Notice was reviewed with you December 6, 2024 and you signed the Prior Written Notice electronically at the SIT meeting. An electronic copy of the Prior Written Notice for consent to complete an initial gifted evaluation was provided to you via email Monday, March 3, 2025. The Prior Written Notice dated December 6, 2024 will not be amended."

The District stated during their June 12, 2025 interview that their general practice is to provide the Prior Written Notice at the meeting after the report is finalized, in this case it was planned at February 26, 2025. They further stated that since this eligibility meeting did not result in a finalized report the Prior Written Notice was not provided.

Conclusion

It is found that the Mother requested that the December 6, 2024 Prior Written Notice be revised on March 4, 2025.The Prior Written Notice is an educational document and as such when the District refused the Mother's request, which is their prerogative, the district should have advised the Mother of her right to a hearing under Sec. 300.619.

Therefore, it is found that the District committed a procedural error. A substantive error is not found.

Issues Four and Nine

Did the student's gifted evaluation report include all of the evaluation collected as part of the comprehensive evaluation according to IDEA (Kansas) regulations? (Issue 4)

Did the second draft of the Student's evaluation report (sent and dated March 24, 2025) contain agreed-upon additional information discussed during the February 26, 2025 team meeting according to the IDEA (Kansas) regulations? (Issue 9)

Applicable Law

Kansas state statute at K.S.A. 72-3428(a) states that as part of an initial evaluation, the IEP team and other qualified professionals, as appropriate, shall: (1) Review existing evaluation data on the child, including evaluations and information provided by the parents of the child, current classroom-based assessments and observations, and teacher and related services providers' observations; and (2) on the basis of that review, and input from the child's parents, identify what additional data, if any, are needed to determine:

Kansas State Statute at 72-3428(e)(2) requires the evaluation/eligibility team provide the parents with the Evaluation/Eligibility Report within a reasonable period of time.

Parent Position

The Mother alleged that observation data was not included in the February 26, 2025 draft of the gifted evaluation report undermining the integrity of the evaluation process and further, that the March 26, 2025 draft of the evaluation report omitted information that was explicitly discussed and agreed upon during the February 26, 2025 evaluation meeting. The information that was omitted included interviews with and observations from the general education teachers, as well as the PE and music teachers and parental input.

District Position

The district responded that the February 26, 2025 Evaluation Report addressed the data collected for the student's cognitive abilities (Wechsler Intelligence Scale for Children: 5th Edition), academic achievement (Woodcock-Johnson Tests of Achievement: 4th Edition and FastBridge District assessment scores). Further, the report included the status of relevant areas (including health, vision, hearing, social and emotional status, communicative status, and motor abilities) and General Education Intervention (GEI) Documentation Dated 12/6/2025 which provided data on the student's response to interventions, which is essential for determining the need for gifted services.

The district further responded that during the February 26, 2025 initial evaluation meeting, the Mother requested the evaluation report be revised to include the historical FastBridge assessment data, additional interviews with parents and teachers and for the evaluation finding account for how the student's anxiety and ADHD may have impacted test performance. The school team stated they updated the evaluation report to include those areas, but the Mother's concern is that the report is not updated to include the additional evaluation which they state were not conducted because the Mother did not consent to it being conducted..

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The findings of Issues One through Three are incorporated herein by reference.

The SIT Team Request dated November 14, 2024 and minutes collected during the December 6, 2024 meeting document that the team considered FastBridge Scores, Happy Numbers, input from teachers, mother, medical information describe by the mother, behavioral information described by teachers. It is noted that an observation by a gifted facilitator was completed later the same day and discussed during the February 26, 2025 eligibility meeting.

The Prior Written Notice dated December 6, 2024, with signed consent by the Mother on December 6, 2024 shows new evaluation data will be collected in the areas of intelligence and academics. Existing data will be used to examine the student's health and motor ability, vision, hearing, social/emotional and behavioral status, intelligence, academic, communicative and transition skills.

The February 26, 2025 Draft Evaluation report documented that all areas identified in the December 6, 2024 evaluation plan were completed. The draft evaluation report did not include observation data, nor input from the parent or general education teachers although the Prior Written Notice dated February 26, 2025 documents that the evaluation data from the evaluation plan were reviewed along with observation and general education intervention data.

The district stated during the June 12, 2025 interview that the February 26, 2025 evaluation report was a draft and not considered a final document, as demonstrated by writing in the Prior Written Notice changes the Mother requested and the revisions made to the March 26, 2025 version. They stated that while the observation and general education information was not in the report it was discussed and used in the eligibility decision.

The February 26, 2025 meeting notes and Prior Written Notice document the following changes be made to the existing draft evaluation report: 1) add general education information (GEI), 2) FastBridge history, 3) classroom observation occurring on December 6, 2024, and 4) input from the Mother dated December 6, 2024.

The March 26, 2026 draft of the Evaluation Report shows that the 1) GEI information was added on page 5; 2) the FastBridge history was added on pages 8-9, 3) the December 6, 2024 observation was added on page 5, and 4) input from Mother from December 6, 2024 was added on page 1.

Conclusion

Kansas State Statutes do not provide guidance as to what a report must contain, only that the report must be provided within a reasonable timeframe. A review of the December 6, 2024 Prior Written Notice and the February 26, 2025 Evaluation Report show that the plan was followed, and all of the areas outlined in the Kansas Statutes were followed. Although the report was not finalized it was provided to the parent in a reasonable timeframe. As a result, it is found that the District is in Compliance.

Issue Five

Did the district follow IDEA (Kansas) regulations when providing notice for the February 26, 2025 meeting on February 23, 2025 and for the March 26, 2025 meeting sent on February 26, 2025?

Applicable Law

Kansas regulations at K.A.R. 91-40-17(a)(2) state that schools must take steps to ensure that one or both parents are present at each IEP meeting or otherwise afforded the opportunity to participate in the IEP meeting. The school must provide notice of an IEP meeting to the parents for the initial IEP meeting and any subsequent IEP meetings. The notice must be provided in writing at least 10 days prior to the meeting (and inform the parents that their child is invited to attend the meeting.

Parent Position

The Mother alleged that the NOM dated February 23, 2025 proposed a meeting to take place on February 26, 2025 and the Mother did not waive their right to the 10-day notification. Additionally, 10-days were not provided in regard to who would attend the March 26, 2025 meeting when a revised Prior Written Notice was issued on March 11, 2025.

District Position

The district responded that proper notice was provided for both meetings. In regard to the February 26, 2025 Meeting, they state that on February 3, 2025 at 8:03 a.m., the school psychologist proposed the meeting date and time to the mother via email who responded on the same day at 8:14 a.m., stating, "Yes, I am currently available at that day and time." Subsequently, the formal Notice of Meeting was sent via SpedTrack on February 23, 2025 at 8:28 p.m.

In regard to the March 26, 2025 Meeting, a Notice of Meeting was emailed and mailed to the mother on February 26, 2025. On March 11, 2025, a corrected NOM was issued to include the Special Education Director, as an invited participant. This corrected NOM was also emailed and mailed to the student's mother.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The findings of Issues One through Four are incorporated herein by reference.

February 26, 2025 Proposed Meeting

An email from the school psychologist to the Mother on February 3, 2025 at 8:03 a.m. documents that February 26, 2025 was proposed as a time and the Mother responded with availability on that day and time. Documentation shows that the Notice of Meeting was sent via SpedTrack on February 23, 2025 at 8:28 p.m.

The meeting notes show that the Mother attended and participated in the February 26, 2025 meeting.

March 26, 2025 Proposed Meeting

The Notice of Meeting dated February 26, 2025 proposed a meeting for March 26, 2025 at 3:30 p.m. and the names and roles of participants from the district were listed. The list did not include the Director of Special Education. The revised NOM dated March 24, 2025 included the Director of Special Education and was distributed to the Mother on March 11, 2025 (according to the District Response dated May 28, 2025.

Interview with the District staff on June 12, 2025 with the Investigator describe that the Special Education Director was inadvertently left off the February 25, 2025 and. concerns that the father's contact information may not have been current. As a result, a new Notice of Meeting was distributed on March 11, 2025 with current father contact and inclusion of the Special Education Director as an attendee.

The District and Mother agree that the Mother did not attend the March 26, 2025 meeting.

Conclusion

In regard to the February 26, 2025 meeting the email shows that the Mother was notified and attended the meeting, but the notice was not provided with a 10 day notice and the Mother did not waive consent during the meeting. In regard to the March 26, 2025 meeting, The Kansas State Department of Education Kansas Special Education Process Handbook (page14) directs that the Notice of Meeting must include the titles or positions of the persons who will attend on behalf of the schools but does not have to identify the participants by name. In this case the District realized it had neglected to include the Director of Special Education who is routinely included on the Notice of Meeting and the NOM was updated on March 24, 2025.

It is found that the District committed a procedural error by not providing the two NOMs following the regulations with 10-day notice or securing a waiver of the 10-day requirement from the parent. The 10-day notice requirement starts over when adding or removing an invited meeting participant. There is no substantive error in either case as the Mother was aware of the meeting and attended and in the case of the second meeting know that an additional member was invited and did not attend.

Issue Six

Did the district follow IDEA (Kansas) regulations to conduct a comprehensive gifted evaluation for the student?

Applicable Law

State Statute at K.S.A. 72-3428(b)(1-3) require that when conducting the evaluation, the agency shall: (1) Use a variety of assessment tools and strategies to gather relevant functional, developmental and academic information, including information provided by the parent, that may assist in determining whether the child is an exceptional child and the content of the child's individualized education program, including information related to enabling the child to be involved, and progress, in the general education curriculum or, for preschool children, to participate in appropriate activities; (2) not use any single measure or assessment as the sole criterion for determining whether a child is an exceptional child or determining an appropriate educational program for the child; (3) use technically sound instruments that may assess the relative contribution of cognitive and behavioral factors, in addition to physical or developmental factors.

Parent Position

The Mother alleged that the evaluation was not comprehensive because the report did not include "substantive general education teacher information" only reported the student is "kind-hearted and helps those that need it. "

District Position

The district responded that on February 26, 2025, an initial evaluation meeting was held to review the draft evaluation report. During the meeting, the student's mother expressed concerns that the evaluation was not comprehensive, citing factors such as: 1) addressing the impact of the student's anxiety and ADHD diagnoses on performance; 2) a desire to include historical FastBridge assessment data in the report; 3) requests for additional parent and teacher interviews; and 4) a need for further assessment to fully understand the student's abilities. During this meeting, a follow-up meeting was scheduled for March 26, 2025, to collect additional parent-requested data and revisit the evaluation.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The findings of Issues One through Five are incorporated herein by reference.

As previously investigated it is found that the evaluation plan was developed and consented to by Mother on December 6, 2024. The plan includes multiple measures and ways to collect the information.

The February 26, 2025 and March 26, 2025 evaluation reports draft reports show that the planned evaluation from December 6, 2024 were completed and reported.

The Prior Written Notices dated February 26, 2025 and March 6, 2025 document that the District agreed to conducting the evaluation that the Mother requested, but did not sign consent for the District to conduct.

Conclusion

The agreed upon evaluation plan from December 6, 2024 was the last plan agreed and consented to and was completed in the February 26, 2025 evaluation report.

In this case, the Mother's complaint is that not including data and a summary of such data in the report constitutes not conducting a comprehensive evaluation. The Prior Written Notice from the February 26, 2025 meeting demonstrates that the data were collected and considered when discussing the evaluation findings. Further, the District agreed to update the report to summarize the information. As such it is found that the District is in Compliance with conducting a comprehensive gifted evaluation.

Issue Seven

Did the district conduct the comprehensive gifted evaluation for the student within timeline?

Applicable Law

Kansas regulations at 91-40-8(f) state that the 60-school-day timeline begins when the agency receives written parent consent to conduct the initial evaluation.

Parent Position

The Mother alleged that due to the mishandling of the evaluation process the Mother did not understand that additional consent was necessary to conduct the additional evaluation discussed at the February 26, 2025 meeting. Had the coop not failed to conduct a complete initial evaluation and attempted to predetermine the outcome the additional evaluation would not be needed.

District Position

The District responded that the Mother's signed consent for initial evaluation was received on December 6, 2024 with an initial evaluation meeting occurring on February 26, 2024 (38 school days). At the February 26, 2025 meeting the district presented a draft evaluation report prepared by the School Psychologist and a determination was made that the student did not meet eligibility criteria for gifted services, based on Kansas Gifted Eligibility Indicators and the coop guidelines (Policies Handbook, pp. 26–28). During the meeting, the Mother raised concerns regarding the comprehensiveness of the evaluation and requested additional testing and inclusion of data not previously reviewed, such as: Historical FastBridge data, additional teacher/parent input and consideration of anxiety and ADHD diagnose. Subsequently, a follow-up meeting was scheduled for March 26, 2025 to address those concerns, however the student's mother canceled the meeting. A third meeting was scheduled for April 22, 2025; however, the parents filed a formal complaint and mediation request, postponing this meeting.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The findings of Issues One through Seven are incorporated herein by reference.

The December 6, 2024 Prior Written Notice agreeing to conduct an initial gifted evaluation for the student was signed by the Mother on December 6, 2024.

The Kansas State Department of Education Kansas Special Education Process Handbook pages 41 and 42 proposes the following guidelines for timelines:

1. The 60-school-day timeline begins when the agency receives written parent consent to conduct the initial evaluation (K.A.R. 91-40-8(f)).
2. The initial evaluation is started within a reasonable time.
3. The initial evaluation is completed, and, on the basis of the evaluation data, the team determines eligibility for special education and related services.
4. The evaluation/eligibility team provides the parents with the Evaluation/Eligibility Report within a reasonable period of time (K.S.A. 72-3428(e)(2); 34 C.F.R. 300.306(a)(2); 34 C.F.R. 99.10(b)).
5. The school provides the parents with Prior Written Notice for proposed identification (can be combined with notice for initial services).
6. The school provides the parents with the Notice of the IEP meeting at least 10 calendar days before the meeting (K.A.R. 91-40-17(a)(2)). (NOTE: If the team believes that eligibility and IEP development may be discussed at the same meeting, the IEP Meeting Notice must describe all proposed special education decisions to be addressed at the meeting.)

7. The IEP Team meets and develops an IEP within 30 calendar days of determination of eligibility but not later than 60 school days from the receipt of written parent consent to conduct the initial evaluation (K.A.R. 91-40-8(h) and 34 C.F.R. 300.323(c)(1)).
8. The school provides the parents with Prior Written Notice and request for consent for the initial provision of special education and related services to the child.
9. Services on the IEP are implemented not later than 10 school days after written parent consent for provision of special education services is granted unless reasonable justification for a delay can be shown (K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(2)).
10. The 60-school-day timeline ends when the IEP is implemented.

The Draft Evaluation Report dated February 26, 2025 provided the following summary and conclusions: The student has high average cognitive abilities and academic skills are similar to cognitive abilities. Further, the student has very good mathematics problem solving skills and reading and writing skills are in the average range. The Prior Written Notice dated February 26, 2025 documented that the eligibility meeting needed to be adjourned and continued on March 26, 2025.

The District reported during their June 12, 2025 interview that the evaluation data did not support finding the student eligible for gifted services. They further stated that they did not observe any concerns with the student's ADHD or anxiety impacting the evaluation results.

The February 26, 2025 and March 6, 2026 Prior Written Notices show that the Parent did not provide consent to complete the additional evaluation for the March 26, 2025 Eligibility meeting.

An email was sent from the Director of Special Education to the Mother on March 27, 2025 at 12:56 p.m. updating the Mother on the status and next steps for completing the initial evaluation, "The initial gifted evaluation was completed and feedback provided February 26th which meets procedural guidelines. The additional assessments discussed February 26th are above and beyond what was originally planned with the consent Prior Written Notice was signed December 6th which is the reason for requesting a new consent Prior Written Notice …The initial gifted evaluation can be updated with existing information. The intent of the meeting that was scheduled yesterday [March 26, 2025] was for the team to continue discussion from February 26th which includes reviewing and updating the evaluation report if needed."

The Notice of Meeting dated March 26, 2025 proposed a meeting on April 22, 2025 was to review the evaluation and determine eligibility.

The Prior Written Notice for Evaluation or Reevaluation and Request for Consent dated May 14, 2025 proposed a new evaluation plan and was signed by the Parent on May 15, 2025. The explanation was that an initial evaluation is warranted to determine the student's current educational needs due to general education information to reflect current academic strengths.

Conclusion

A final decision on the student's eligibility was not made within the 60 day timeframe, in spite of the District stating that they determined the student did not meet eligibility criteria at the February 26, 2025 eligibility meeting. Instead, they agreed to pause the decision meeting and conduct additional evaluation requested by the Mother. However, the parent never signed consent for the district to complete the evaluation on February 26, 2026 nor March 6, 2025. At that point, the District did not have consent to complete any of the additional evaluation requested by the Mother and should have documented the eligibility decision based on the data that had been collected. It is noted that the District attempted to collect the parent-requested evaluation, but the Parent did not consent for it to be collected. Therefore, the district is found out of compliance for a committing a procedural error by not providing a final Prior Written Notice documenting the eligibility decision with the data that was collected with consent. The district did not commit a substantive error affecting the child since the evaluation requested to further evaluate the student was not consented to by the Mother.

Issue Eight

Did the March 3, 2025 (corrected to March 6, 2025) Prior Written Notice follow IDEA (Kansas) regulations?

Applicable Law

Kansas State Statute at 72-3432(A) and 72-3432(B) require written notice must be given to the parent of a child with a disability whenever an agency: (A) Proposes to initiate or change; or (B) refuses to initiate or change evaluation, of the child.

Parent Position

The Mother alleged that the District failed to provide a clear and adequate explanation for issuing a new Prior Written Notice dated March 6, 2025 and attempting to impose a new 60-day evaluation timeline. At the February 26, 2025 meeting no district staff indicated that a new Prior Written Notice would be required to finalize the report. The conversation centered on improving the draft to ensure sufficient information for an eligibility decision. The Mother alleged that the Director disclosed that the March 6, 2025 Prior Written Notice would initiate a new 60 day evaluation timeline.

District Position

The district responded that on February 26, 2025, the district held an initial evaluation meeting during which the School Psychologist, verbally shared that the student did not meet the eligibility criteria for gifted exceptionality. At that same meeting, the team agreed to pursue additional evaluation, as requested by the Mother and a Consent for Additional Evaluation was prepared. Additionally, a Prior Written Notice was generated and dated March 6, 2025. (Please note March 6th is the date of the Prior Written Notice not March 3rd.) The Prior Written Notice was created to document the district's proposal to conduct additional evaluation based on new areas of concern, in accordance with IDEA procedural requirements. A copy of the Prior Written Notice was provided to the Mother, and the content included a description of the proposed action (further evaluation), the rationale for doing so, and the parent's procedural safeguards.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The findings of Issues One through Seven are incorporated herein by reference.

The February 26, 2025 Prior Written Notice recorded that, "The eligibility team determined after discussion that the eligibility meeting needed to be adjourned and continued on March 26, 2025 at 3:30 pm...[Mother] requested additional testing be completed. The multidisciplinary team determined that another achievement test and cognitive test would be completed due to [student] now having an understanding of who the evaluators are and what is expected." The Mother did not sign consent with this Prior Written Notice.

The Director of Special Education sent an email to the Mother on March 6, 2025 at 5:40 p.m. stating, "The eligibility team considered your input regarding what you consider an incomplete initial evaluation and agreed to obtain additional information and meet again on March 25th at 3:30 pm. A Prior Written Notice for consent to complete the additional assessments, observations, and interviews that you requested was emailed to you today, mailed, and is attached to this email for your review."

The March 6, 2025 Prior Written Notice for Evaluation or Reevaluation and Request for Consent proposed to conduct new evaluation in the areas of social/emotional status, general intelligence, academic performance, and observations completed by gifted facilitator, teacher and parent interviews completed by gifted facilitator with the explanation of "the Mother requested that additional data be collected to determine gifted eligibility. The team agreed to complete additional interviews, observations, and testing to include cognitive and achievement. Given mom's concerns of anxiety and ADHD potentially impacting [student's] performance on assessments and within the classroom more data is needed in the area of social emotional." The parent did not sign consent in response to this Prior Written Notice. Interview with the Parent on June 15, 2025 the Parent stated she received the request, but did not sign it as her understanding of this Prior Written Notice was to extend the 60 day evaluation window.

Conclusion

At the February 26, 2025 Evaluation meeting the evaluation team determined to pause the evaluation meeting until March 26, 2025 and conduct additional academic and cognitive testing along with Mother requested evaluation, however the Mother did not sign this Prior Written Notice, and the additional evaluation could not be conducted. The March 6, 2025 email and attached Prior Written Notice indicated that the Mother needed to sign consent for the additional evaluation, but the Mother did not sign the consent to conduct the additional testing. It is noted that the March 6, 2025 Prior Written Notice included the Mother-requested evaluation which would necessitate a new Prior Written Notice to obtain consent. It is found previously in the investigation that the Mother had received procedural safeguards/rights prior to this date. Therefore, It is found that the district is in compliance with following IDEA/Kansas guidelines by issuing the March 6, 2026 Prior Written Notice.

Issue Nine (Reported with Issue Four)

Issue Ten

Did the district follow IDEA (Kansas) regulations in maintaining and providing adequate meeting records?

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 72-3429 requires that parents and the school receive a copy of the student's IEP at no cost.

Parent Position

The Mother alleged that the District failed to maintain complete and accurate meeting notes from the March 26, 2025 meeting. For example, the Mother alleged that the Director of Special education was not initially included as a participant in the March 26, 2025 meeting but later was included. Further, the meeting's purpose was described on the document as to review evaluation and determine eligibility" while neglecting to mention that a discussion of the parental concerns would also be included.

District Position

The district responded that the coop uses the Prior Written Notice as the official record of meeting proceedings and team decisions. A Prior Written Notice dated February 28, 2025 documented the outcomes of the February 26, 2025 evaluation meeting. The February 28, 2025 Prior Written Notice included the proposal to conduct further evaluation; a description of the reasons for additional assessment; consideration of parent concerns regarding the student's performance and diagnoses; a summary of the data discussed, and decisions made during the meeting; and a record of the planned follow-up actions and the requirement for parental consent for further testing. This documentation was shared with the Mother, fulfilling the requirement that parents be informed of proposed actions and their procedural safeguards.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The findings of Issues One through Nine are incorporated herein by reference.

The district provided Prior Written Notices following meetings occurring during the 2024-2025 school year describing the meeting and decisions.

The District described during the June 12, 2025 interview that they use the Prior Written Notice to summarize each meeting and record the decisions.

The District Policy Manual does not mention the use of meeting minutes during an IEP meeting.

Conclusion

Kansas regulations do not require school districts to collect and maintain meeting notes. As there is no state obligation to maintain meeting notes from an IEP or team meeting the Investigator interviewed the district to determine their district practices. The district reported it is their practice to memorialize the meeting decisions on the Prior Written Notice and the District manual does not mention that IEP meeting minutes should be recorded. The Investigator reviewed the Prior Written Notice s and found that the district followed its practice. Therefore, it is found that the District is in compliance in maintaining and providing adequate meeting records

A complaint is considered to be filed on the date it is delivered to both the KSDE and the school district. In this case, the KSDE initially received the complaint on May 21, 2025, and the 30-day timeline ended on June 20, 2025.

Background Information

This investigation involved an eight-year-old student who attends second grade at an elementary school.

Findings of the Investigation

The following findings are based on a review of documentation and interviews with the Parent and staff in the District.

1. According to a letter from a Pediatric Clinic dated January 31, 2023, the Student was thoroughly evaluated at the University Medical Center Child Development Clinic. At that time, the Student's working diagnosis included Autism Spectrum Disorder, Level 2, and Chromosome 2q.13 Deletion Syndrome.
2. A Pediatric Specialist Report dated April 25, 2023, indicated the following assessments:
    a. Encounter for therapeutic drug level monitoring.
    b. Other long-term (current) drug therapy.
    c. Attention deficit hyperactivity disorder (ADHD), combined type.
    d. Chromosomal abnormality-Q99.9, 2q13 deletion.
    e. Mixed receptive-expressive language disorder.
    f. Behavior problems in childhood.
    g. Autism Spectrum Disorder requiring substantial support.
    h. Anxious mood.
3. According to a Checklist for an IEP Annual Review, with a meeting date of October 3, 2023, the "Documents given to [the] Parent [were] in Spanish."
4. Relevant items from the IEP dated October 3, 2023, indicated:
    a. The Parent and an Interpreter/Translator attended the meeting.
    b. The Student's motor goal was, "By the end of the IEP year, the Student will demonstrate the ability to print 4 self-generated sentences about a picture or drawing using [a] three-finger grip with 80% accuracy for sizing and letter placement within 1/8" of the bottom line on three lined paper in 7/9 tasks."
    c. Based on the most recent evaluations and ongoing data collection, the Student had needs in the area of reading that included the following:
        i. The Student's reading goal was, "By October 2023, given guided reading text to read at guided reading level G (or higher), the Student will use taught strategies to read with 75% comprehension and 94% accuracy or better. The Student will also use taught strategies to retell narrative stories independently, specifying 4/5 story details (characters, setting, problem, solution, theme).
    d. In the area of written language, based upon the most recent evaluations and ongoing data collection, the Student did not have a need in this area that requires special education or related services.
    e. In the area of communication, based upon the most recent evaluations and ongoing data collection, the Student did have needs that required special education or related services that include:

i. The Student's first goal in communication was, "In one instructional year, October 2024, [the Student] will respond to/answer who, what, when, where questions following a narrative story and/or picture description task with 80% accuracy, when provided with visuals as needed during structured speech/language therapy sessions as judged by the clinician."

ii. The Student's second goal in communication was, "In one instructional year, October 2024, the Student will follow a 1-2 step direction with embedded spatial/linguistic concepts independently scoring 80% accuracy during speech/language therapy sessions as judged by the clinician."

f. Special Education and Related Services starting October 3, 2023, and ending October 2, 2024, included:

i. Special education services in the general education/inclusion setting for ELA 50 (guided reading), reading 20, writing 20, morning packet). Math 20's all-inclusive time to facilitate on-task behavior and independence for 70 minutes, 5 days a week, every week.

ii. Special education services for pull-out instruction for 20 minutes for reading comprehension for 4 days a week, every week.

iii. Speech services for pull-out for speech-language therapy for 15 minutes, 3 days a week, every week.

iv. OT services for occupational therapy for 20 minutes, one day a week, every week.

v. The Student continues to require support in the general education classroom to support attention to task and independence.

vi. The Student continues to require specially designed instruction in the special education setting to improve reading comprehension skills.

g. The Least Restrictive Environment section indicated the Student continued to require specially designed instruction for reading comprehension in a resource setting due to deficits with the Student's oral expression and listening comprehension. The Student continued to qualify for pull-out services in Speech-Language and Occupational Therapy.

i. The potential harmful effects, which could potentially include social stigma and/or absence of the general education classroom activities during implementation of the proposed services, have been considered and outweighed by the benefits of the proposed actions.

h. Accommodations included:

i. Record 1: Access to visuals, when presented with a topic above the Student's listening comprehension instructional level across all settings, through completion of the assignment, with a start date of October 3, 2023, and an end date of October 2, 2024.

ii. The rationale included, "Due to [the Student's] deficits in receptive and expressive communication, the accommodation of visuals will assist in [the Student's] comprehension and understanding of the lecture."

iii. The Student does not need any modifications or any supplementary aids and services.

i. Supports for School Personnel included:

i. Record 1: The review of the current IEP will be conducted with all staff involved with the Student's education, at the beginning of each school year, after all IEP updates & amendments when staff begin working with the Student. It will occur across all settings through completion of the IEP review with a start date of October 3, 2023, and an end date of October 2, 2024.

ii. The rationale was "Due to the potential of amendments throughout [the Student's] IEP year, regular communication is necessary on those potential changes to ensure success of [the Student] through [their] IEP."

5. According to a Therapy Data Document with a date range of April 1, 2024, through May 16, 2025, using Speech to Text & Read and Write technology, the Student was able to score 80% accuracy or above during 15 therapy sessions out of 43 therapy sessions attended. The Student did not attend 22 sessions due to Student absences, Therapist absences, field trips, school closures, school parties, school assemblies, and assessment sessions. The Student's IEP goal for the therapy sessions were, "In one instructional year (February 2026), [the Student] will show increasing independence of vocabulary supports via assistive technology (e.g. Read & Write; Snap and Read) in the classroom setting requiring minimal supports (25% or less) as judged by speech/language pathologist. [min.25%, mod.50%, max. 75%]."
6. According to a Timeline of Communication regarding the Student with a date range of April 26, 2024, through May 27, 2025, there were 45 different communication contacts. Some contacts included:
    i. Six in-person contacts.
    ii. Four texts from the Special Education Teacher.
    iii. One IEP meeting.
    iv. Thirteen texts with the Translator.
    v. Six phone calls.
    vi. Six emails.
    vii. Three seesaw messages from the Classroom Teacher.
    viii. One letter delivered in person.
    ix. Two Staff and Student contacts.
7. Communication records in English and Spanish to the Parent from the Special Education Teacher with a date range of August 30, 2024, through February 11, 2025, indicated information regarding the Parent being informed about situations with the Student that took place at school, such as the Student not following directions in the cafeteria at lunch, which was caught on camera.
8. On September 16, 2024, the Parent was sent a Notice of Meeting for reevaluation in Spanish. The Notice of Meeting indicated the need to conduct an annual review of the Student's IEP.

9. A Progress Report dated September 30, 2024, was sent to the Parent in Spanish. The Progress Report indicated:
    i. The motor goal of "By the end of the IEP year, [the Student] will demonstrate the ability to print 4 self-generated sentences about a picture or drawing using 3 finger grip with 80% accuracy for sizing and letter placement within 1/8" of the bottom line on three-lined paper in 7/9 trials." Progress status indicated a score of 7, indicating moderate improvement.
    j. The communication goal was "In one instructional year, October 2024, [the Student] will respond to/answer who, what, when, and where questions following a narrative story and/or picture description task with 80% accuracy, on average, when provided with visuals as needed during structured speech/language therapy sessions as judged by the clinician." Progress status recorded a score of 5, indicating maintained performance.
    k. The communication goal of "In one instructional year, October 2024, [the Student] will follow a 1-2 step direction with embedded spatial/linguistic concepts independently, scoring 80% accuracy during speech/language therapy sessions as judged by the clinician." Progress status recorded a score of 5, indicating maintained performance.
    l. The reading goal was "By October 2023 [sic], given guided reading text to read at guided reading level G (or higher), [the Student] will use taught strategies to read with 75% comprehension and 94% or better. [The Student] will also use taught strategies to retell narrative stories independently, specifying 4/5 story details (characters, setting, problem solution, theme)." Progress status recorded a score of 5, indicating maintained performance.
10. According to a Team Meeting Record dated September 30, 2024, the purpose of the meeting was to conduct an annual IEP. The Parent noted that the Student's therapist recommended a break throughout the school day to help with focus. The Parent requested more support for the Student because the Parent was not seeing the Student progress. The Parent stated the Student doesn't show interest in things, and the Student shuts down when the Parent tries to help the Student with homework. The Parent requested push-in support during the school day to help with the Student's focus and attention.

    In the area of occupational therapy, the Student met their IEP goal. The Classroom Teacher shared that the Student's spelling was a strength. School staff indicated the Student was very distractible, even in a 1:1 setting. The Special Education Teacher shared that there was support referenced and proposed in the Student's IEP for check-ins to ensure the Student was remaining on task, 80 minutes in and 60 minutes out of class. The Special Education Teacher stated, "An increase push-in support would be to support the Student's focus and attention versus an academic skill deficit."
11. A draft IEP dated September 30, 2024, was given to the Parent in Spanish. Relevant items from the draft IEP indicated the following:
    a. The Parent and an Interpreter/Translator attended the meeting.

b. According to recent evaluations and ongoing data, the Student required special education services in the area of Motor Skills.
    i. The previous goal of "By the end of the IEP year, [the Student] will demonstrate the ability to print 4 self-generated sentences about a picture or drawing using 3 finger grip with 80% accuracy for sizing and letter placement within 1/8" of the bottom line on three lined paper in 7/9 trials." Goals 1.1, 1.2, and 1.3 were met. Goal 1.4 was partially met due to "distractibility and hyperfixation of topics."
c. According to recent evaluations and ongoing data, the Student required special education services in the area of Social Emotional Skills, which include:
    i. The Student did not have a social/emotional goal on their previous IEP. It was recommended that the Student continue to receive individualized instruction in the special education classroom for reading and attention to tasks.
d. According to recent evaluations and ongoing data, the Student required special education services in the area of Reading.
    i. The Student continued to require specially designed instruction in a resource setting due "to deficits with [their] oral expression and listening comprehension, which are impacting [the Student's] ability to comprehend information [they are] reading. A lack of vocabulary knowledge also affects [their] ability to understand and draw meaning from words."
    ii. The Student was able to meet the goal in reading fluency, but the Student was not able to meet the goal of reading comprehension.
    iii. The Student's goal in reading was, "By the end of the IEP year, when given a FastBridge CompEfficiency Screener, [the Student] will be able to score a 70 in the overall comprehension efficiency."
e. According to recent evaluations and ongoing data, the Student had needs that required special education in the area of written language that include:
    i. The Student did not previously have written language as a service on their IEP. The Student was showing a need for written language services, and a written language goal was written.
    ii. The written language goal was, "By the end of the IEP year, when given a four-minute writing CBM (Curriculum Based Measure), in which [the Student] will have one minute to think and three minutes to write, [the Student] will increase [their] total words written to 16."
f. According to recent evaluations and ongoing data, the Student had needs that required special education services in the area of communication that include:
    i. Needs and Parent concerns indicated that for the Student to become an independent learner, it was proposed that the Student learn to use assistive technology in the form of Read & Write, along with Snap & Read apps. These apps helped the Student to determine unfamiliar word meanings, read text out loud, research assignments, translate English into other languages, and proofread written work.
    ii. The goal for communication was, "In one instructional year (October 2025), [the Student] will show increasing independence of vocabulary supports via assistive technology (i.e. Read & Write; Snap and Read) in the classroom setting requiring minimal supports (25% or less) as judged by speech/language pathologist, (min. 25%, mod. 50%, max 75%)."

g. Special Education and Related Services included:
    i. Occupational therapy indirect services, 10 minutes, one day every 9th week starting September 30, 2024, and ending on September 29, 2025.
    ii. Speech therapy pull-out services, assistive technology for 15 minutes, 2 days a week, starting September 30, 2024, and ending May 23, 2024.
    iii. Special education pull-out services for written language, 30 minutes, 5 days a week, starting September 29, 2024, and ending on September 28, 2025.
    iv. Special education pull-out services for supplemental reading (comprehension/vocabulary), 30 minutes, 5 days a week, every week, starting September 29, 2024, and ending September 28, 2025.
    v. Special education in the general education setting/inclusion, for attention to task/following directions, (Reading/Mathematics) for 80 minutes, five days a week, starting September 29, 2024, and ending September 28, 2025.
    vi. Speech services for speech/language therapy, 15 minutes, one day a week, starting August 20, 2025, through September 29, 2025.
    vii. Speech services for general education/inclusion for speech/language therapy (assistive technology), 15 minutes 1 day a week, starting August 20, 2024, and ending September 29, 2025.
h. The IEP team reviewed the educational placement and services and considered it reasonably designed to deliver FAPE in the Student's least restrictive environment.
i. The Least Restrictive Environment section included the Student would:
    i. Continue to receive individualized instruction in the resource room for reading and written language for 60 minutes a day, five days a week.
    ii. Continue to receive supplemental, inclusive instruction to increase their awareness of the activity at hand for support as needed, for 80 minutes a day, 5 days a week.
    iii. Continue to receive speech/language therapy in the form of technology for 15 minutes, 2 days each week, pulled out of the general education setting.
    iv. Participate in extracurricular activities. The Student would be out of the classroom and away from their general education peers while receiving specially designed instruction in reading and written language, along with communication skills. The IEP team determined the Student needed specially designed instruction.
j. Accommodations with a start date of September 30, 2024, and an end date of September 29, 2025, included:
    i. Record 1: Access visuals, given when the Student was redirected or given a direction to ensure comprehension, in all core classes, lasting through the completion of the task. The rationale was that the Student had deficits in receptive and expressive communication, and the accommodation of visuals would assist the Student's comprehension and understanding of the lesson.

ii. Record 2: Close monitoring for directions, frequent prompts, frequent reminders of tasks to clarify tasks to complete, and directions may be repeated or paraphrased. Accommodations, as well as monitoring by classroom teachers, should take place whenever classroom assessments and assignments are given in all core classrooms. Clarifications of accommodations, as well as monitoring by the classroom teacher, should continue throughout the length of classroom assessments and assignments. The rationale was due to the Student's distractibility, and the Student missing instructions and directions that are given. The Student needed clarification on accommodations to continue with their tasks and follow through with what was being asked of them.

iii. Record 3: Provided with several illustrations/prompts during instruction, and teacher modeling for new tasks, by prompts and teacher modeling should take place during all new classroom instruction in all core classes. Prompts and teacher modeling should last the entire length of the new instruction. The rationale for the accommodation for illustrations, prompts, and modeling was due to the Student's deficits in receptive language, and would assist in the Student's comprehension and understanding of the lesson.

k. Supplementary Aids and Services included:

i. Record 1: Para support in the general education classroom for Tasks at Hands activities. The Para would be available 80 minutes a day, 5 days a week, during mathematics and reading instruction in the general education classroom. The rationale was that the Student needs support from a Para to ensure the Student was actively listening to instruction because of the Student's current ability to attend to task.

l. Supports for School Personnel included:

i. Record 1: The review of the current IEP would be conducted with all staff involved with the Student's education. A review of the Student's IEP would happen at the beginning of each school year, after all IEP updates and amendments, and when new staff begin working with the Student. The rationale for the support was due to the potential of amendments throughout the Student's IEP year. Regular communication was necessary on those potential changes to ensure success for the Student through their IEP.

m. Assistive Technology included:

i. Record 1: Read & Write and Snap & Read as needed for vocabulary meaning throughout the day in the classroom and speech and language therapy sessions. The rationale was due to the Student's great need for support regarding [their] language comprehension. The use of assistive technology was proposed to allow the Student to become more independent in determining word meanings throughout the Student's academic day.

12. On September 30, 2024, the Parent was sent a Prior Written Notice (PWN) in Spanish. The PWN indicated the meeting to review special education and related services, the appropriate education placement identified in the IEP, and any additional changes or modifications needed. A Material Change in Services indicated a proposed change in placement that resulted in the movement of more than 25% of the Student's school day. A Description of the Action Proposed or Refused indicated:

a. The Student was continuing to demonstrate a need for specifically designed instruction in the areas of reading, written language, and attention to tasks.
b. The Student will receive direct, pull-out reading and written language instruction for 60 minutes a day, 5 days a week in the special education classroom.
c. The Student will receive inclusive services in the general education classroom for 80 minutes a day, 5 days a week, to assist the Student with attention to task.
d. OT services were recommended to receive 10 minutes of consult/indirect occupational services once every nine weeks. The Student currently receives direct OT services for 20 minutes once a week.
e. Speech/Language services proposed to have the Student pulled out of their classroom for 15 minutes, two days each week, in a small group or individualized setting from the beginning of their IEP until May 23, 2025. Beginning in the fall of 2025, the Student would receive pull-out for one day for 15 minutes, instruction and inclusion for one day for 15 minutes a week.
f. The actions were proposed due to:
    i. The Student demonstrated increased fine and visual motor skills and no longer required direct instruction.
    ii. The Student had low language comprehension. The use of assistive technology would allow the Student to become more independent.
    iii. In order to meet the Student's needs more effectively and as quickly as possible, the above proposed services are highly recommended. The benefits of this plan should outweigh any potential harmful effects."

13. On October 21, 2024, a PWN For Evaluation or Reevaluation and Request For Consent indicated the LEA proposed to conduct a reevaluation. The IEP team considered the following relevant information to assist the Team in determining:
    a. "Whether your child continues to be a child with an exceptionality and the educational needs of your child."
    b. "The present levels of academic achievement and related developmental needs of your child."
    c. "Whether your child continues to need special education and related services."
    d. "Whether any additions or modifications to the special education and related services are needed to enable your child to meet measurable annual goals set out in the IEP of your child and to participate as appropriate, in the general education curriculum."
    e. The team considered maintaining the current level of support without conducting a reevaluation, but the option was rejected due to the Parent concerns regarding the Student's overall performance.
    f. The data used for the proposed action included:
        i. Existing data.
        ii. Classroom observations.

iii. Assessments, records, and reports.

g. The Parent signed consent for the reevaluation. Documents presented were in both English and Spanish.

14. According to a Physician Letter dated January 2, 2025, a history of Autism Spectrum Disorder, hyperactivity disorder, mixed receptive-expressive language disorder, Chromosome 2 q13 deletion with developmental delays was noted. The following actions were recommended:
    a. The Student needs accommodations to help with developmental delays.
    b. The Student's IQ should be assessed.
    c. A Functional Behavioral Analysis through school counseling to make sure the Student's needs were being met emotionally, physically, and academically.
    d. Because the Parent speaks only Spanish, there is a need for an advocate to help with communication.
    e. Recommended further an IEP or 504 plan to make sure the Student's needs were being met.
15. On January 24, 2025, the Parent was interviewed as part of the Functional Behavioral Assessment (FBA) process, which included the following areas of the Student's behaviors that the Parent explained:
    a. The Student had been diagnosed with Autism, hyperactivity, and a chromosome defect. The Parent noticed the Student's behaviors were more pronounced when the Student became overwhelmed by busy environments.
    b. Mornings for the Student were particularly difficult. The Student struggled with routine changes. The Parent ate lunch with the Student at school to encourage the Student to eat. The Student felt too embarrassed to use headphones in the lunchroom.
    c. To help the Student regulate their emotions, the Parent typically spoke to the Student and calmed them by rubbing their back. Fatigue and hunger could trigger the Student.
    d. The Parent was seeking assistance with creating a structured routine for mornings at home and at school to help the Student with transitions. The Parent would like someone to monitor the Student's eating at lunch so they do not need go to school to eat with the Student.
16. A Team Meeting Record dated February 7, 2025, indicated the Parent felt that the Student didn't have the correct structure or support to help them be successful at school. The Parent reported that the Student didn't feel safe at school, and every day, the Parent had to fight with the Student to go to school. The team considered anxiety to be the driving force of the Student's inattention. The therapist suggested the same. Because of this, the team suggested changing the exceptionality from developmental delay, and "proceed with the exceptionality of autism for the current IEP."

    The Parent wanted to take home the Evaluation and Eligibility Report to add parental concerns and then would sign at a later date. The Parent was given the opportunity to choose between a progress report or spend more time on the proposed plan. The Parent chose to move towards the proposed plan. The team offered an opportunity to meet the next week after the Parent had a chance to review the documents. The Parent preferred to read through the amended documents and schedule a meeting for the following week.

17. According to Team Meeting Notes, the Parent provided the team with a letter listing their disagreements on February 13, 2025. "The School then took [their] letter and added [their] input to the evaluation/eligibility report." Additional accommodations and supplementary aids were added to the draft IEP. A new draft of the evaluation/eligibility report, along with a new draft of the IEP, was sent home with the Student.
18. A Notice of Meeting with an initial contact date of February 21, 2025, indicated a proposed meeting dated March 6, 2025, to discuss possible changes in the Student's IEP. The notice was sent to the Parent in Spanish.
19. A PWN dated February 21, 2025, indicated the Student was eligible for special education, and special education is needed to enable the Student to receive educational benefits in accordance with their abilities. A change in services was proposed as follows: "Beginning March 6, 2025, … the District proposed to change the primary exceptionality from Developmental Delay (DD) to Autism (AM), as supported by the evaluation results and aligned with the Parent's request." The action revised the FBA wording based on the Parent's concerns, and confirmed the Student's behavior was a manifestation of their disability, rather than a conduct issue.

    The Student would receive direct pull-out reading and written language instruction for 60 minutes a day, 5 days a week in the special education classroom. The Student would receive inclusive services in the general education classroom for 80 minutes a day, 5 days a week. The Student would receive 20 minutes a week of special education supports in the general education classroom for social skills. The OT proposed that the Student would be dismissed from all school-based occupational therapy services. It was proposed that the Student would receive speech/language therapy pulled out of their classroom for 15 minutes, 2 days a week, in a small group or an individual setting from the beginning of their IEP until May 23, 2025. Beginning in the fall of 2025, it was proposed that the Student would receive pull-out one day for fifteen minutes, and inclusion one day for 15 minutes each week.

    The team considered eligibility under Other Health Impairment (OHI) due to concerns with focus and attention. However, the team determined AM, which encompassed the Student's profile. The team considered alternative accommodations but determined that the selected strategies best supported the Student in "minimizing distractions, managing routine changes, and addressing emotional regulation." The team considered keeping the original FBA wording but determined that revisions were necessary to ensure accuracy and alignment with the team's perspective. The team decided to remove the Student's academic, specialized services, which would not meet the Student's needs. Continued OT services were rejected by the team since the Student was on track with fine and visual motor skills.

    Other factors considered were:

- The District agreed with the Parent to update the exceptionality from DD to AM.
- The IEP included preferential seating, access to noise-cancelling headphones, and visual supports to help reduce distractions in response to the Parent's request for specific strategies to reduce distraction in the classroom.
- The IEP included frontloading for schedule changes, use of visual schedules, and check-ins with a trusted staff member to support transitions in response to the Parent requesting strategies to help the Student adjust to changes in routine.
- The IEP included regular check-ins, additional processing time, and checks for understanding to support emotional regulation in response to the Parent's request for additional emotional support strategies.
- The District reviewed the FBA and revised sections to better reflect the Student's needs and behaviors in a way that aligned with the Parent and team input.
- Behavior as a Manifestation of a Disability was reviewed by the team. The Parent emphasized that the Student's behaviors were related to their disability rather than a conduct issue. The team agreed and acknowledged the Student's behavior was a direct result of their disability.
- The Parent signed the consent on March 6, 2025.

20. The Student averaged 84.1% for overall school attendance according to meeting notes dated March 4, 2025.
21. Team Meeting Notes for an Evaluation/Eligibility Team Report dated March 6, 2025, indicated that another copy of parental rights was given to the Parent. The team went through the Parent's concerns in the Parent's response "bullet by bullet," showing where the team addressed the concerns in the IEP. The team shared that the counseling services were not included in the IEP under services because it is not considered special education. The team showed the Parent where the Parent could find those services within the IEP. The Parent asked about occupational therapy and why the Student wasn't receiving those services anymore.

    The Parent completed a Parental Input Form as part of the Student's comprehensive reevaluation. The Parent expressed concerns about the Student's ability to follow rules, understand instructions, concentrate, and memorize information. The Parent noted "… [the Student] frequently repeats phrases and benefits from structured support to navigate challenges related to [their] disability." Socially, the Student generally got along well with peers and adults but could be fearful of some individuals. The Student's hobbies included drawing, coloring, and playing with trains. The Student disliked rules, sharing belongings, and attending school. The Parent noted the Student had a diagnosis of 2q13 chromosome deletion syndrome, Level 2 Autism Spectrum Disorder, and ADHD, which should be considered in the IEP development.

    The Team Meeting Notes indicated the Parent stated, "I am writing to express my disagreement regarding [the Student's] reevaluation. I disagree with the disability listed in [their] record as developmental delay. Please correct this to reflect the disability that [the Student] actually has. Additionally, I would like to address the proper structure that [the Student] requires due to [their] disability."

The Total Score on the CARS-2 HF was 28, which placed the Student in the Severity Group, Mid to Moderate Symptoms of Autism Spectrum Disorder. According to the Vineland Adaptive Behavior Scales, the Parent's ratings on the Student's communication skills were within the Low range. In the area of Socialization, the Parent rated the Student's overall socialization skills within the Low range. The Parent rated the Student's overall Daily Living Skills as within the Adequate range.

Regarding Health and Motor, the School Nurse completed hearing and vision screenings, which the Student passed. The Parent shared that the Student hadn't had any major illnesses. The Student was evaluated at a Pediatric Clinic on January 2, 2025, indicating "a diagnosis-Autism Spectrum Disorder, Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder, Mixed Receptive-Expressive Language Disorder, and deletion of chromosome 2 q. With developmental delays." The Parent completed the Behavior Assessment System for Children, Third Edition (BASC-3). The Parent's ratings were considered acceptable for appropriate response patterns and consistency. The F-index scale indicated some responses were in the Extreme Caution range. The Parent rated the Student's overall level of the following subtests:

- Externalizing Problems: Clinically Significant range.
- Hyperactivity: Clinically Significant range.
- Aggression: Clinically Significant range.
- Conduct Problems: Significant range.
- Behavioral Symptoms: Clinically Significant range.
- Atypically scale: Clinically Significant range.

The Evaluation Report had been updated to include additional input from the Parent. The Parent wished to provide further thoughts and concerns regarding additional information. The Parent indicated, "I disagree with parts of the Student's reevaluation, particularly on page 15 where it is stated that [the Special Education Teacher] believes that [the Student's] behaviors are caused or motivated by [their] family teaching [the Student] not to do things on [their] own. … I do not agree with [the Special Education Teacher's] assessment. … I also disagree with [the Special Education Teacher's] statement that there are no observable events indicating behaviors of concern regarding [the Student]. I disagree because [the Student] comes home from school frustrated, sad, embarrassed, and stressed. … Lastly, the reevaluation states that the teachers believe [the Student's] actions are due to [their] behavior (conduct). … It is not due to behavior; it is due to [the Students'] autism, not [their] conduct."

The Student was found eligible for special education services under the exceptionality of Autism. The entire reevaluation team agreed, except the Parent. The Parent signed the participation form, and it was not noted if the Parent agreed or disagreed.

22. Relevant items from the IEP dated March 6, 2025, indicated the following:
    a. The Parent and an Interpreter/Translator attended the meeting.

b. The Student's Social-Emotional Behavior goal was, "By the end of the IEP year, when given a structured work system, movement breaks, and self-regulation strategies. [The Student] will improve [their] ability to remain engaged in academic tasks by demonstrating on-task behavior (e.g., staying seated, attending to the task, and completing work) for at least 75% of observed opportunities, as measured by teacher observations."
c. The Student's goal for reading was, "By the end of the IEP year, when given a comprehensive efficiency assessment, such as the FastBridge CompEfficiency screener, [the Student] will be able to score 70% accuracy in the overall comprehension efficiency."
d. The Student's goal for written language was, "By the end of the IEP year, when given a four-minute writing CBM (Curriculum Based Measure), in which [the Student] will have one minute to think and three minutes to write, [the Student] will increase [their] total words written to 24."
e. In the area of communication, the Student has limited English proficiency. The Student's goal for communication was, "In one instructional year (February 2026), [the Student] will show increasing independence of vocabulary supports via assistive technology (e.g. Read & Write, Snap and Read) in the classroom setting requiring minimal supports (25% or less) as judged by speech/language pathologist. (min. 25%, mod 50%, max. 75%)."
f. Special Education and Related Services included:
    i. Speech pull-out services, speech/language therapy (assistive technology),15 minutes for 2 days a week, every week, starting March 6, 2025, and ending May 23, 2025.
    ii. Speech pull-out services, 15 minutes one day every week, starting August 20, 2025, and ending March 5, 2026.
    iii. Speech, general education/inclusion services, speech/language therapy (assistive technology), 15 minutes one day a week, starting August 20, 2025, and ending March 5, 2026.
    iv. Special education services, supplemental reading (comprehension/vocabulary), 30 minutes, 5 days a week, every week, starting March 6, 2025, and ending March 5, 2026.
    v. Special education services, in the general education setting/inclusion, for attention to task/following directions, reading/math, 80 minutes, 5 days every week, starting on March 6, 2025, and ending on March 5, 2026.
    vi. Special education pull-out, for written language, 30 minutes, 5 days every week, starting March 6, 2025, and ending March 5, 2026.
    vii. The IEP team reviewed the educational placement and/or services and considered it reasonably designed to deliver FAPE in the Student's least restrictive environment. The School was unable to provide regularly scheduled special education and/or related services when the following occurs:
        1. Inclement weather closures.
        2. Scheduled school closures.

3. Early release days.
4. Unforeseen emergencies.
5. Student absences.
6. School field trips.
7. Emergency drills.
8. Summer breaks.

g. Least Restrictive Environment/Justification for non-participation in, and/or removal from, the general education class with students without exceptionalities, (both academic and nonacademic): "[The Student] requires removal from the general education settings for specific academic and nonacademic activities due to challenges related to focus and attention, anxiety, difficulties with transitions, and deficits in receptive and expressive communication. These factors, in addition to [the Student's] 2q13 chromosomal microdeletion, autism spectrum disorder, and ADHD, impact [their] ability to fully engage with peers and access the general education curriculum in an inclusive setting. [The Student's] communication difficulties and developmental delays require targeted support through speech and language therapy to address deficits and facilitate participation in both academic and social settings. Supportive environments provide the structure and individualized support needed to address these challenges, allowing [the Student] to participate at [their] level of ability, while reducing anxiety and increasing focus."

h. Accommodations with a start date of March 6, 2025, and an end date of March 5, 2026, included:
   i. Record 1: Access visuals to be given when the Student was redirected or given a direction to ensure comprehension in all core classes, lasting through the completion of the task. The rationale was to give the Student access to visual supports, including manipulatives such as number lines and a 100's chart. Visuals to help the Student stay on task, follow directions more effectively, and reduce cognitive load, enhancing overall engagement and task completion.
   ii. Record 2: Implement a daily check-in system, throughout the day, specifically each morning and right before lunch, in the general education setting, through completion of the check-in, not to exceed 5 minutes. Implementation of a daily check-in system with a trusted staff member (e.g., special education teacher, general education teacher, paraprofessional, counselor, or student support specialist) to provide predictable structure, reassurance, and schedule reassurance opportunities as needed, before transitions or challenging tasks, to support emotional regulation.
   iii. Record 3: Provide frequent checks for understanding of directions and expectations when assigned independent work, across all settings, through completion of the assignment. Due to weak short-term working memory and a diagnosis of ADHD and Autism, the Student struggled with sustaining attention, processing verbal information, and following multi-step directions. "The accommodation will help reduce cognitive overload, increase engagement, and improve task completion."

iv. Record 4: Provide extra processing time for verbal and written responses when asked to provide a verbal or written response, across all settings, through completion of the assignment. The Student experienced difficulties with processing verbal and written information quickly. "Extra processing time will allow [the Student] to better organize thoughts, reduce cognitive overload, and to fully engage in tasks without feeling rushed, thereby improving [the Student's] ability to demonstrate [their] understanding and complete work to the best of [their] ability."

v. Record 5: Preferential seating, throughout the day, across all settings, specifically at lunch, through the duration of instruction, and work completion. The Student had a clinical diagnosis of autism and presents with anxiety, which can lead to struggles with unstructured environments like the cafeteria due to sensory sensitivities, social demands, and unpredictability. Allowing preferential seating near a preferred peer reduces anxiety, supports social engagement, and fosters emotional regulation by providing a familiar and predictable social setting.

vi. Record 6: Frontload for changes in routine, when presented a change to the Student's structured day, across all settings, through completion of the task. "Unexpected changes in routine can lead to increased anxiety, difficulty transitioning, and problem behaviors due to challenges with flexibility and processing new information."

vii. Record 7: Access to noise-cancelling headphones, available daily as needed, during tests in the classroom or a designated testing environment, during lunch, in the cafeteria or an alternate quiet space, as appropriate, for the full duration of tests and lunch. "Providing access to headphones minimizes distractions during testing and helps regulate sensory input in the cafeteria, promoting a more successful and comfortable experience."

i. Supplementary Aids and Services with a start date of March 6, 2025, through March 5, 2026, included:

i. Record 1: Para support in the general education classroom for task-at-hand activities. The Para to be available 80 minutes a day, 5 days a week, during mathematics and reading instruction in the general education classroom. "While the reason for attending the classroom is to learn the instruction and to keep [the Student] engaged, the [P]araprofessional should appear to be helping everybody and to be actively involved in the lesson."

ii. Record 2: A check-in with a designated staff member to provide emotional support, review expectations, and assist with problem-solving during lunch, daily, in the cafeteria or when eating lunch, for 5 minutes. "A brief check-in provides predictability, reassurance, and regulation strategies, allowing [the Student] to manage anxiety, receive social support, and successfully engage with peers."

j. Supports for School Personnel starting March 6, 2025, and ending March 5, 2026, indicated:

i. Record 1: Review of the current IEP will be conducted with all staff involved with the Student's education. Review of the Student's IEP would occur at the beginning of each school year, after all IEP updates & amendments, and when new staff begin working with the Student during all core classes. A review of the current IEP would be done long enough to ensure adequate understanding of the core components of the IEP. "Due to the potential of amendments throughout the Student's IEP year, regular communication is necessary on those potential changes to ensure success for [the Student] through [their] IEP."

k. Assistive Technology starting March 6, 2025, and ending March 5, 2026, indicated:
    i. Record 1: Access to applications such as Read & Write and/or Snap & Read, as needed for vocabulary meaning throughout the day, in the classroom, and during Speech & Language Therapy sessions. "Due to [the Student's] great need of support regarding [their] language comprehension, the use of assistive technology is proposed to allow [the Student] to become more independent with determining word meanings throughout [their] academic day."

23. A Counseling Services Summary Report dated May 29, 2025, stated that the Student began weekly counseling services on January 10, 2025, as part of the Student's support plan. The service delivery and schedule section indicated the Student had regular sessions taking place on Friday afternoons. Recognizing the Student's ongoing needs and responding to the Parent's request for additional support, Tuesday sessions were also incorporated into the Student's schedule on a tentative basis. Intervention Focus areas included:
    a. Social skills development.
    b. Frustration management and coping strategies.
    c. Cognitive flexibility training.
24. According to a Progress Report dated May 29, 2025, the following progress occurred:
    a. Communication: "[The Student] continues to implement the application Read & Write well in speech/language therapy sessions with near 75% independence. … If given opportunities in the classroom setting, [the Student] has shown to be successful with operating technology to determine word meaning."
        i. Status-6, Slight Improvement.
    b. Written Language: "On May 6, 2025, when given a four-minute writing CBM, in which [the Student] will have one minute to think and three minutes to write, [the Student] was able to write 20 words. [The Student] met this goal!"
        i. Status-6, Slight Improvement.
    c. Reading: "For the spring assessment window, when given a comprehensive efficiency assessment, such as FastBridge CompEfficency screener, [the Student] was able to score a 65% accuracy. [The Student] met this goal."
        i. Status-7, Moderate Improvement.
    d. Social Emotional: "[The Student] was observed for 15 minutes, at 30-second intervals. … was on task 22 out of 31 times observed. [The Student] was on task 71% of the time."
        i. Status-7, Moderate Improvement.

25. According to a Second Grade Progress Report for 2024-2025, the Student received the following scores for the 4th quarter:
    a. Go Math Average-90%.
    b. FastBridge aMath-16%.
    c. FastBridge CBM Automaticity-42%.
    d. Fact Fluency-100%.
    e. Go Math Chapter Tests ranged from 70% to 100% accuracy.
    f. FastBridge aReading-10%.
    g. FastBridge CBM Fluency-20%.
    h. Lexia Level-7.
    i. Spelling-98%.
    j. End of the Year Goals:
        i. Fact Fluency-100%.
        ii. CBM Fluency-131 words per minute.
26. The Parent filed the Complaint on April 21, 2025.

Interview Summaries

The Director of Special Education

27. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Director of Special Education explained the support the Student was offered during lunch was documented in the IEP as a supplementary agent support, which meant the School provided guidance to staff that would be working with the Student. They explained it was decided that assigning a specific paraeducator to sit with the Student at lunch was not in the Student's best interest because the Student was "more independent." The Director of Special Education shared there were always staff in the lunchroom providing supervision. They said, "… we use the supplementary agent support to educate all of the staff that may be in that scenario … . We do have increased monitoring where they're keeping an eye on [the Student] a little bit more frequently than the rest of the students. … They interact [with] [the Student] a little bit more, provide a little more positive interactions, and then they will provide the prompts … ."
28. The Director of Special Education indicated the IEP and evaluation teams received a note from the Student's doctor, which had been provided to the Parent on January 2, 2025. The note documented formal diagnoses and that the Student should be provided with accommodations. The Director of Special Education indicated the note also mentioned school counseling for the Student, which the School added. The Director of Special Education explained the counseling services were not documented as an IEP service because all students have access to it, but it was being documented that the Student was meeting with the school counselor. The Director of Special Education explained that around the time the reevaluation was near completion, the Parent expressed confusion if the Student's eligibility category would change from Developmental Delay to Autism. The Director of Special Education indicated they clarified to the Parent about changing the Student's eligibility category, and that the doctor's note from January 2, 2025 was the only documentation the School received.

29. The Director of Special Education said, "We have an experienced translator. [The Parent] is Spanish speaking. [The Parent] does understand English a little bit, but we always use [sic] translator … to make sure that documentation's [sic] happening or that communication is happening."
30. The Director of Special Education explained the IEP team was initially considering keeping the Student's eligibility category at Developmental Delay because of the Student's age, but decided because they were in the process of a reevaluation, to change it. The Director of Special Education explained there was a discussion of different options, and they perceived the Parent believed the team was not going to change the Student's eligibility category to Autism, even though they were. The Director of Special Education indicated this was clarified through additional communication with the Parent.
31. The Director of Special Education stated the Parent did not share the specific documentation they felt was not utilized during the reevaluation process or considered for the IEP. They indicated the only documentation they were aware of was the doctor's note from January 2, 2025.
32. The Director of Special Education, when shown a document which referenced a visit to a children's clinic in 2020 and the Student being diagnosed with autism, said, "That doesn't say that a report was provided to the [S]chool specifically, doesn't mean it wasn't, and I don't see anything attached to the IEP that would've indicated it was given at that time. … I'm not seeing it in the files that have been uploaded for [the Student] … but it does at least get referenced in the IEP that the team considered the input from [sic] parent, but I don't know if this specifically was given."
33. The Director of Special Education indicated the Student's attendance had been a concern in the past, and the Parent believed it stemmed from anxiety. The Director of Special Education indicated the counselor had been working with the Student on helping change their perception of attending school, to help with their anxiety. The Director of Special Education indicated the Student had a pattern of being chronically absent, but did not know if it all related to anxiety.
34. The Director of Special Education explained the IEP team had addressed the issue of the Student's attendance, but there were not IEP meetings held to address it because the Student was making progress and the team felt it was not impeding the Student's performance on their IEP goals in the classroom.
35. The Director of Special Education confirmed from the Student's IEP, dated March 20, 2025, that the Student received speech services. They indicated this was implemented through pull-out service from the speech language pathologist, and also push-in services. They said, "We use a blended model of speech language pathology where we pull out for some services, and then when they're ready to start to generalize some of those skills, then our speech pathologist will push into the classroom … ."
36. The Director of Special Education explained the Student received supplemental reading support, pulled out of the general education classroom, three to five times per week for 30-minute sessions in a special education classroom. The focus of this support was comprehension and vocabulary, aligning with the Student's English Language Learner (ELL) goals. The Student also received 30 minutes of writing support five days a week in a special education classroom, and had push-in support during direct reading instruction in the general education classroom. For math, the Student received support to address attention concerns and help with following directions. This support included prompting, and restating directions or instruction.

37. The Director of Special Education explained the Student had access to visuals, the type of which depended on the class. They explained the visuals ranged from graphic organizers to charts and number lines. They stated these would have been made available to the Student.
38. When asked about implementing daily check-ins, the Director of Special Education explained a staff member would check in with the Student periodically. They believed the counselor was the main person implementing the accommodation, but it was designated that it could be other staff. The Director of Special Education indicated this would also be implemented before lunch, with the goal of checking in about the Student's anxiety before they transitioned to places which the Parent had been concerned about. The Director of Special Education explained that when staff gave the Student directions, they would give the Student time to process it before the Student had to respond.
39. The Director of Special Education acknowledged one of the Parent's concerns was having a peer sit with the Student during lunch. They indicated sitting beside a preferred peer was to help the Student's anxiety. They explained it had been explained to the Parent that a paraprofessional was not with the Student during lunch because the Student performed better when "… there wasn't somebody hovering over [the Student]." The Director of Special Education said, "… we've provide[d] the IEP services and we have addressed the concern at lunch. It may not be exactly how [the Parent] thought we would, but there's support there. [The Parent] may not always recognize it because somebody's not standing right beside [the Student] [sic] whole time."
40. The Director of Special Education indicated the Student had access to noise cancelling headphones but was unsure if the Student used them. The Director of Special Education indicated the Student received support from a paraprofessional in the general education classroom to help the Student with focusing, giving them prompts, and responding to their needs. They explained providing brief check-ins with the Student provided predictability and reassurance, and staff gave the Student prompts to eat their lunch if they were not doing so. The Director of Special Education indicated the Student received assistive technology, and indicated that the staff ensured this was available on the Student's devices and the staff knew how to prompt and encourage the Student to use it.
41. The Director of Special Education explained the Student's occupational therapy services were provided as a check-in with the occupational therapist, and that the indirect services were consultation services.
42. The Director of Special Education was asked about letter designations on the Student's progress report, specifically the letters "K" and "L." They explained it was a system where

"… 'L' is a little bit more complex than 'K.' 'K' is a little bit more complex than 'J.'" They confirmed it meant the Student was progressing.

43. When asked about a goal that was denoted as had been "met," but also noted the Student had made "slight improvement," the Director of Special Education explained the staff member was trying to indicate the Student had met their objectives goal, even though the Student had not yet met the full goal.

The Parent

44. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Parent was asked which medical documentation was not considered during the reevaluation process. The Parent indicated they gave the School the Student's diagnosis of their disability and a note from the doctor that the Student needed help. The Parent believed that information was not used because the Student's autism diagnosis was not included in the IEP.
45. The Parent indicated they believed the Student needed psychological support. The Parent indicated the Student had been struggling at lunch because they were sitting with a peer who did not want to sit with the Student. The Parent also perceived the Student was struggling with reading comprehension and believed the Student had not received enough support. The Parent perceived the staff did not address the Student properly when giving instructions. The Parent believed this negatively impacted the Student and their desire to attend school.
46. The Parent explained they participated in the reevaluation process by being interviewed about the Student's behavior and completing questionnaires.
47. The Parent explained it was difficult to get the Student to attend school during the 2024-25 school year. The Parent indicated the Student told them they did not want to attend school because a teacher was angry with them and there were quarrels with peers. The Parent shared the Student started attending therapy three or four months prior, provided outside of the School, which helped the Student's attendance.
48. The Parent perceived they were ignored when they brought their concerns to the District, and told they had to get an evaluation done. The Parent indicated the Director of Special Education told them they would help the Student, but then the Parent perceived the District would not do anything, so the Parent went to an outside agency to ask for a reevaluation.
49. The Parent stated they sent a doctor's note about the Student's autism diagnosis to the School in 2022, and then in 2023, sent a doctor's note stating the Student required "extensive help." When asked about a letter dated January 31, 2023, the Parent said, "That was the first letter I sent to [the School] from the doctor with the diagnosis." They indicated they sent it to the School in 2023.

Positions of the Parties, Applicable Regulations, and Conclusions

Issue One

Whether USD #489, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, implemented special education and related services as described in the Student's IEP. K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(3); 34 C.F.R. § 300.323.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(3), an IEP must be in effect for each exceptional child at the beginning of each school year.

The Parent alleged the School did not provide the Student with the appropriate support outlined in the Student's IEP, which contributed to the Student's poor performance. The Parent requested a reevaluation on September 16, 2024, and has not observed improvement in the support the Student received. For example, a peer was assigned to help the Student at lunch instead of a staff member to assist the Student when they get upset.

The District stated the School provided appropriate support for the Student and the IEP was followed consistently. According to the District, the Student had an improvement on all IEP goals and in their academics, as demonstrated by their progress reports and grades.

The Parent was sent a Notice of Meeting for reevaluation on September 16, 2024 to conduct an annual review of the Student's IEP. On September 30, 2024, the Parent was sent a PWN which indicated the meeting was to review special education and related services, placement, and any additional changes. A description of the action proposed or refused described the services the Student would receive. The PWN indicated the proposed services were highly recommended to help meet the Student's needs effectively and efficiently. A Progress Report dated September 30, 2024 was sent to the Parent and indicated the Student made moderate improvement on their motor goal, and maintained performance on their two communication goals and their reading goal. On October 25, 2024, a PWN For Evaluation or Reevaluation and Request For Consent indicated the LEA proposed to conduct a reevaluation. The Parent signed consent for the reevaluation.

A Counseling Services Summary Report, dated May 29, 2025, stated the Student began weekly counseling services on January 10, 2025 as part of their support plan. The Student had regular sessions, and additional sessions were incorporated in response to the Parent's request for more support. According to a Progress Report dated May 29, 2025, the Student made slight improvement on their communication and written language goals, and moderate improvement on their reading and social-emotional goals. A Second Grade Progress Report for 2024-2025 detailed the Student's scores for the fourth quarter.

The Director of Special Education stated the Student's IEP outlined a "supplementary agent support" for lunch, which involved guiding staff who would interact with the Student rather than assigning a dedicated paraeducator. The Director of Special Education acknowledged the Parent's concern about having a peer sit with the Student during lunch, but said their reasoning was explained to the Parent. The Parent perceived the peer did not want to sit with the Student.

Through their interview, the Director of Special Education addressed the Student's services and accommodations, and detailed their implementation. The Parent perceived the Student was not receiving the proper support from the School and that their concerns were ignored by the District. The Director of Special Education indicated the Student's attendance had been a concern in the past, but explained the counselor had been working on the issue with the Student. They explained the IEP team addressed the Student's attendance, but there were not IEP meetings held about it specifically because the Student was progressing. The Parent explained it was difficult to get the Student to attend school during the 2024-25 school year, but that once the Student started attending therapy outside of the School, the Student's attendance improved. The Student averaged 84.1% for overall school attendance, according to meeting notes dated March 4, 2025.

The District had an IEP in place for the Student, and also conducted a reevaluation of the Student. Progress reports indicated the Student progressed on their goals. Documentation showed the Student received services, such as counseling. The type of support the Student received during lunch was a point of contention, but documentation and the interview with the Director of Special Education indicated there was adult supervision in the lunchroom. After reviewing documentation and interviews, there was not sufficient evidence to prove the Student's IEP was implemented incorrectly or the Student was denied proper support and services. Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the District failed to implement special education and related services as described in the Student's IEP.

Issue Two

> Whether USD #489, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, offered an IEP that met the needs of the Student and considered Parent information, including from the Student's physician, when developing the Student's IEP. K.S.A. 72-3429; 34 C.F.R. § 300.320.

According to K.S.A. 72-3429, when developing each child's IEP, the IEP team shall consider several factors: the child's strengths and parental concerns for enhancing education, the results of the initial or most recent evaluation, the child's academic, developmental, and functional needs, and for a child whose behavior impedes learning, the use of positive behavioral interventions and supports. Additionally, the following factors should be considered: for a child with limited English proficiency, their language needs related to the IEP; and whether the child requires assistive technology devices and services.

Additionally, Districts must ensure the IEP team reviews the child's IEP at least annually to determine if annual goals are being achieved and revise the IEP as appropriate to address any lack of expected progress, results of reevaluations, information provided by parents, the child's anticipated needs, or other matters.

The Parent alleged that despite receiving documentation from the Student's physician and discussing the physician's advice, the School did not incorporate these recommendations into the Student's IEP.

The District stated the recommendations from the Student's doctor were considered during the most recent reevaluation, and the recommendations were being provided before and were documented in the IEP following the reevaluation. The District stated the IEP team considered the Parent's concerns by adjusting plans, changing how details of the plan were documented, and by sharing data that supported their recommendations that were different than what the Parent had requested.

A letter from a Pediatric Clinic, dated January 31, 2023, indicated the Student was evaluated and had a working diagnosis of Autism Spectrum Disorder, Level 2, and Chromosome 2q.13 Deletion Syndrome. A Pediatric Specialist Report, dated April 25, 2023, detailed several disorders, including ADHD, combined type, chromosomal abnormality-Q99.9, 2q13 deletion, mixed receptive-expressive language disorder, and Autism Spectrum Disorder requiring substantial support.

The Student's IEP, dated October 3, 2023, indicated the Student had a motor goal, a reading goal, and two communication goals, but no written language goal. The IEP included special education services in the general education setting for ELA, reading, writing, and math, and pull-out instruction for reading comprehension. It also included speech services, speech-language therapy, and OT services. The IEP indicated the Student continued to require support in the general education classroom to support attention to task and independence, and specially designed instruction in the special education setting to improve reading comprehension skills. Accommodations included access to visuals.

A Therapy Data document from April 1, 2024 through May 16, 2025, indicated that using Speech to Text & Read and Write technology, the Student scored 80% accuracy or above during their therapy sessions. According to a Timeline of Communication, with a date range of April 26, 2024 through May 27, 2025, there were 45 communication contacts regarding the Student. There were Communication records between the Special Education Teacher to the Parent, ranging from August 30, 2024 to February 11, 2025.

An annual IEP meeting was held on September 30, 2024. The Parent noted the Student's therapist recommended a break during the day to help with focus, and the Parent requested more support for the Student. A draft IEP, dated September 30, 2024, was given to the Parent in Spanish, and indicated the Student required special education services in the area of motor skills, social emotional skills, reading, written language, and communication, and it was proposed the Student would learn to use assistive technology. The Student did not have a social/emotional goal on their previous IEP, and it was recommended they continue to receive individualized instruction in the special education classroom for reading and attention to tasks. It was decided the Student would begin a written language goal. The draft IEP also detailed special education and related services the Student would continue to receive. Supplementary Aids and Services included paraprofessional support in the general education classroom. Assistive Technology included Read & Write and Snap & Read as needed.

A Physician Letter, dated January 2, 2025, noted the Student's history of Autism Spectrum Disorder and other medical information, and stated the Student needed accommodations and recommended a Functional Behavioral Analysis. On January 24, 2025, the Parent was interviewed as part of the FBA process.

A Team Meeting Record, dated February 7, 2025, indicated the Parent believed the Student did not have the correct structure or support. The team suggested changing the Student's exceptionality from Developmental Delay to Autism. According to Team Meeting Notes, the Parent provided the team with a letter listing their disagreements on February 13, 2025, and the School added that input to the evaluation/eligibility report. Additional accommodations and supplementary aids were added to the draft IEP. A new draft of the evaluation/eligibility report and the IEP were sent home with the Student. A Notice of Meeting, with a contact date of February 21, 2025, indicated a proposed meeting for March 6, 2025 to discuss possible changes to the IEP.

A PWN from February 21, 2025 indicated that beginning on March 6, 2025, the District would change the Student's primary exceptionality from Developmental Delay to Autism. The PWN reaffirmed and detailed the services the Student would receive. The team determined that the selected strategies best supported the Student in "minimizing distractions, managing routine changes, and addressing emotional regulation." It was decided the IEP would include strategies in response to the Parent's request to help the Student. The District reviewed and revised the FBA to reflect input from the Parent and team. The Parent signed the consent form on March 6, 2025.

Team Meeting Notes for an Evaluation/Eligibility Team Report, dated March 6, 2025, indicated the team reviewed the Parent's concerns. The Parent completed a Parental Input Form as part of the Student's reevaluation, which they confirmed in their interview, and expressed concerns about the Student. The Parent noted the Student's diagnosis should be considered in the IEP development. Team Meeting Notes indicated the Parent disagreed with the Student's disability being listed as Developmental Delay, and the doctor's note from January 2, 2025 was reviewed. The Evaluation Report was updated to include Parent input, and the Student was found eligible for special education services under the exceptionality of autism. The entire reevaluation team agreed, except the Parent. The Parent signed the participation form, and it was not noted if the Parent agreed or disagreed.

The Director of Special Education indicated the doctor's note from January 2, 2025 was the only documentation the School received. They explained the Parent expressed confusion about the Student's eligibility category, but they clarified to the Parent it would be changed to reflect the Student's autism diagnosis. The Parent stated they sent a doctor's note about the Student's autism diagnosis to the School in 2022 and 2023, but the Director of Special Education explained they did not have any record of the Student's autism diagnosis from that time.

The Student's updated IEP, dated March 6, 2025, had a new social-emotional behavior goal, and continued to have goals in reading, written language, and communication. The IEP also detailed the special education services the Student would receive. The IEP addressed the Student's autism diagnosis and that the Student required targeted support through speech and language therapy to address deficits and facilitate participation. The IEP included five new accommodations which reflected the Student's needs, specifically in regards to their autism diagnosis, and a new Supplementary Service was added.

While the Parent indicated they provided the District with the Student's autism diagnosis in 2023, there was not sufficient evidence to confirm or refute the Parent's claim. When the District received medical documentation about the Student's autism diagnosis in January 2025, they documented the information and changed the Student's eligibility category and services accordingly. Documentation demonstrated the District responded to the Parent's concerns and made changes to the Student's IEP. Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the District failed to offer an IEP that met the needs of the Student and considered Parent information, including from the Student's physician, when developing the Student's IEP.

"[The Student] will participate in all general education program activities with the exception of when [they are] receiving direct special education services in a hybrid-designed program, including center-based and interrelated resource programs at a neighborhood school in the School District in the special education setting. [The Student] will participate with [their] general education class to the fullest extent appropriate, including recess, lunch, morning routines, morning meeting, limited reading and/or math small group time, phonics, and specials. During assemblies, field trips, counselor lessons, and other special times within the school building, [the Student] will not be pulled out of the general education setting. Time in the general education setting will focus on continued academic learning, observational learning, and appropriate social interactions with same-age peers."

ii. Areas of Non-participation included: "[The Student] will participate in all areas of the general education program with the exception of when [the Student] is receiving direct special education services in the resource setting and related services."

iii. Full participation is not possible due to the following: "Full participation in a general education classroom is difficult due to [the Student's] needs in the areas of communication, attention/focus, academics, and social skills. [The Student] requires individualized and/or small instruction in order to make progress and address [their] needs to make adequate progress toward [their] individualized goals and objectives. The hybrid approach being used between the intensive resource classroom setting and the pullout service of the interrelated resource program is the most appropriate place to address these needs."

iv. Potential harmful effects included: "[The Student] will miss time with [their] same-aged peers to receive individualized instruction in the center-based classroom. The team has determined that the benefits of the current placement outweigh any potential harmful effects."

5. A Prior Written Notice (PWN) dated November 4, 2024, indicated the identification/ eligibility determined the Student had an exceptionality and needed specially designed instruction and was eligible for special education with a change in services. It was proposed that the Student's special education services in the general education setting increase from 450 minutes per week to 510 minutes per week. It was proposed that the Student's special education services within the special education setting decrease from 1060 minutes per week to 775 minutes per week. The Student's speech language services would increase from 40 minutes to 60 minutes per week. Direct OT services would be added for 30 minutes per week. The Parent signed the PWN.
6. Meeting Notes regarding the move-in Student from the Previous School, dated May 2, 2025, indicated the Student attended a center-based program at the Previous School, which was an intensive resource classroom. The Student received a hybrid model of instruction with intensive resources for pullout for 60 minutes. The Student spent the majority of their time in class. The Student needed more support in a self-contained hybrid classroom. The Student has ADHD and takes medication, but not at school. It was indicated that the Student will need a self-contained placement in middle school. The Student steals at times, is not always truthful, and was academically low.

7. On May 13, 2025, the Principal emailed Special Education Coordinator 2 requesting a meeting to review the Student's IEP from the previous district. "The previous school principal shared additional information today regarding their placements based on their evaluation and current services that were in place at their prior school. Please let us know when you can meet so next steps can take place to get them in the appropriate placement."

   The Principal again reached out to Special Education Coordinator 2 a second time, indicating, "After the principal from the previous school provided information about the Student [which included the Student's sibling] in combination with the current IEP and services, it doesn't appear that any Student should be attending our BSC program. Neither were in a behavior program before. They have significant trauma. … [The Student] is a (lower)-current life skills student. [The Student] is in a hybrid model-Life Skills and [the Structured Learning Classroom] SLC."

   On May 14, 2025, the Principal emailed the Executive Director of Special Education, reiterating the fact that the Student was not previously placed in a BSC Program and that the Current School is the farthest from the Student's home school. The Principal stated, "Most importantly, placing a student with trauma in a BSC setting–when that's not indicated–could be harmful and inappropriate."
8. Relevant items from the transfer IEP dated May 14, 2025, indicated:
   a. The Placement selected was outside the regular class more than 60% of the time.
   b. Related Services from May 14, 2025, to September 17, 2025 included:
      i. Occupational Therapy for 30 minutes, one day a week, outside the regular ed classroom.
      ii. Speech and Language Services, 60 minutes weekly, outside the regular ed classroom.
      iii. Occupational Therapy 15 minutes, one day, 1 out of 4 weeks, outside the regular ed classroom.
   c. Special Education Services May 14, 2025, to September 17, 2025, included:
      i. Special Education Services, 155 minutes, 5 days weekly, special education direct services outside the regular classrooms, programs, and other locations.
      ii. Special Education Services, 90 minutes, 3 days weekly, special education direct services outside the regular classrooms, in an elementary or secondary building.

iii. Special Education Services, 120 minutes, 2 days weekly, special education direct services outside the regular classrooms, in an elementary or secondary building.

9. On May 14, 2025, the Assistant Principal emailed the previous school administrator to ask if the Student was in an "IR setting", which was equivalent to the Current School's Life Skills Program. In a forwarded email to the Complainant from an Additional School Administrator, the Complainant was told that the Student was in Life Skills class.
10. A PWN dated May 14, 2025, indicated the team met to review the evaluation/assessment of the Student. The action proposed indicated:
    a. "The Student will receive the following comparable services until the move-in IEP meeting is held."
    b. "Special Education Services, 155 minutes X 5 days a week in the Special Education Setting."
    c. "Special Education Services, 120 minutes X 2 days a week in the General Education Setting."
    d. "Special Education Services 90 minutes X 3 days a week in the General Education Setting."
    e. "Related Service-Speech and Language 60 minutes weekly in the Special Education Setting."
    f. "Related Service-Occupational Therapy 30 minutes 1 day weekly in the Special Education Setting."
    g. "Related Service-Occupational Therapy of indirect services 15 minutes X 1 day every 4 weeks."
    h. "Related Service-Transportation 30 minutes X 5 days a week."
    i. The PWN was emailed to the Parent.
11. In an email exchange between the Complainant and the Special Education Coordinator dated May 16, 2025, the Complainant asked if there was a signed PWN from the Student's Parent for the current placement. Special Education Coordinator 2 stated, "There won't be one. When we do a transfer IEP, we write a PWN for comparable services and send it to the Parent. No signature is needed. There is a PWN in there, though."
12. On May 19, 2025, the Complainant filed a Complaint regarding their concerns, which included, "[The Student] has been placed in a BSC as an incoming student from out of district without an IEP meeting, parental consent, or adherence to [the] existing IEP (LRE violation)." The Complainant indicated that questions were raised to the Director of Special Education and Special Education Coordinator 2. Changes were then made, but only the Student, not the Student's sibling, was placed in the BSC. The Student's IEP showed no Functional Behavioral Assessment (FBA) or a Behavior Intervention Plan (BIP). The IEP indicated that an FBA "was not warranted." According to the IEP, the Student "consistently following behavior expectations."

According to the Complainant, the BSC was not the correct placement because the sending District did not have the equivalent placement for the Student. The Complainant indicated that Parental consent was not given to the current District.

13. According to the District Response, the Student transferred to the School on May 14, 2025. It was reported that a PWN was written and provided to the Parent about accepting the move-in evaluation, and the rejection of the IEP because it could not be fully implemented as written. The District indicated the same PWN contained a provision of comparable services until a move-in IEP meeting was to be held.
14. In their Response, the District indicated the Student was supposed to receive 775 minutes a week of services in the special education setting, and had access to the special education setting in the behavior support classroom for those minutes.
15. In an email from Special Education Coordinator 1 to the Executive Director of Special Education, dated May 6, 2025, Special Education Coordinator 1 shared information about the Student, who was transferring to the District. They indicated the Student and their sibling received specialized programming. Special Education Coordinator 1 wrote, "[The Student] was enrolled in a center-based classroom designed for students who require more intensive instruction in all academic/adaptive functioning areas. [The Student] did have access to a less restrictive special education environment setting for portions of [their] day. … [The Student] was participating in a hybrid design between an intensive special education program and the interrelated resource program. … My recommendation is a BSC program with access to the general education classroom … . Where would you like to place this student?" The email also contained the following information about the Student:
    a. An eligibility category of OHI.
    b. Medical diagnoses of ADHD and fetal alcohol syndrome.
    c. Minutes from their current IEP:
        i. Special education services in the general education setting, 90 minutes for three days a week;
        ii. Special education services in the general education setting, 120 minutes for two days a week;
        iii. Special education services in the special education classroom, 155 minutes for five days a week;
        iv. Speech and Language Therapy in the special education classroom, 60 minutes for one day a week;
        v. Occupational Therapy in the special education classroom, 30 minutes for one day; and
        vi. Occupational Therapy in direct services, 15 minutes every once per month.
    d. Types of goals: reading, written expression, math, speech and language, and occupational therapy.
    e. BIP: Targeted Behaviors

i. Refusals;
ii. Elopement; and
iii. Property Destruction.

f. Behavior Supports:
i. Reinforcing and Prompting;
ii. Support during transitions;
iii. Sensory breaks;
iv. Environmental Modifications; and
v. Instructional Support.

g. Full Scale: 77.

h. Adaptive Scores within the school setting
i. Overall: 88;
ii. Communication: 86;
iii. Daily living skills: 87; and
iv. Socialization: 100.

16. The Executive Director of Special Education replied to Special Education Coordinator 1 on May 6, 2025 and said the Student was placed in BSC at the Current School.
17. According to The Cooperative's Special Education Coordinator Process and Procedures Handbook, for the process of a student transfer, when the coordinator was notified a new student was in the building, they were to request records from the previous school. Then when the student's evaluation was received, the school psychologist had five days or less to accept or reject the evaluation. The handbook indicated a special education coordinator would then review the IEP and determine whether to accept or reject it. If the transfer IEP was rejected, the special education coordinator would consult with the parent and discuss what the comparable services would be until the IEP meeting could be held, complete the Parent Consultation/Interview Form, and write a Prior Written Notice to the parent.

    According to the handbook, if a student needed a placement in a Specialized Program (SAILS, BSC, STEPS or Bridges), an email would be sent to the Executive Director of Special Education, who would respond with the final place and location decision. The handbook also indicated, "[The Cooperative] provides special education services in the least restrictive environment (LRE). The process for determining the least restrictive environment (LRE) must be individualized for each student with a disability … ." The handbook indicated that supports, resources, and interventions were provided before the team began consideration of a District program classroom or outside placement. It indicated the main reason for increasing support, resources, and interventions was to allow the student to be successful in their neighborhood school in order to maintain the least restrictive environment. "However, for a few students, more intensive services and programming may be required to progress on IEP goals. District programs are considered for these students."

Interview Summaries

The Complainant

18. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Complainant explained the Student was placed in their behavior support classroom at the end of May 2025.
19. According to the Complainant, when they reviewed the Student's IEP, it indicated the Student followed behavior expectations and that a FBA was not warranted, which indicated to the Complainant that it was possible their classroom was not an appropriate placement for the Student. The Complainant explained the Principal from the previous school indicated the Student did not come from a behavior support classroom, and that that placement was not available at the previous school. After further review, the Complainant perceived the Student had come from a life skills setting with a structured learning classroom or resource room.
20. The Complainant stated they were not provided a reason as to why the Student was placed in their classroom. They indicated the only communication they received was from Special Education Coordinator 2, who stated there would not be a signed PWN. The Complainant explained they spoke with Special Education Coordinator 2 virtually asking if the Student's placement was correct. They stated Special Education Coordinator 2 told them the Executive Director of Special Education had determined the Student's placement. The Complainant explained it was not standard practice to hold IEP meetings for move-in students, and that the Executive Director of Special Education was the one who determined placement.
21. The Complainant explained there were between 6-11 students with them in their classroom, in addition to 1-4 paraprofessionals. They indicated their students often had an FBA or a Behavior Intervention Plan before they came to their classroom. The Complainant indicated the School had a resource program. The Complainant explained the Student performed well in their classroom, interacted well with peers, and did not exhibit any negative behaviors.
22. When asked what they perceived would have been the better placement for the Student, the Complainant explained they believed it would have been better for the Student to be in a structured learning classroom with more collaborative minutes in the general education environment. The Complainant indicated they did not ask the Parent if they agreed with the Student's placement. The Complainant believed the Parent had been notified through the PWN that the Student had been placed in their behavior support classroom.
23. When asked about the comparable services they provided, the Complainant explained the Student was able to go to a general education environment and was provided materials at grade or ability level. When asked about any services they provided which were not comparable, the Complainant explained there were not enough personnel available to maintain safety, and that the Student had limited access to peers because they were removed from the general education classroom to be in the behavior support classroom. The Complainant also indicated the Student might not have gone to the general education classroom as much as they could have, because there was not enough support staff to accompany the Student, but they did assign a staff member to do so when someone was available.

24. The Complainant expressed concern the PWN was not signed by the Parent.
25. The Complainant indicated the Student's Positive Behavior Support Plan was implemented when they came to the Complainant's program.
26. The Complainant explained that in the building where they had worked at the School, there was a structured learning center and a life skills program, but not an intensive resource program. They recalled the previous school called their life skills program an intensive resource program, which helped students with lower cognition.

Special Education Administrators

27. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Executive Director of Special Education explained the transfer IEP process was when a student transferred into the District from any school outside of the District or in a different state. A student's IEP and evaluation information was requested and reviewed by the special education coordinator, who emailed the Executive Director of Special Education asking about proper placement. The Executive Director of Special Education would review the information, look at which programs could best serve a student's needs, send a response with their recommendation, and then write a PWN. If an IEP was rejected because it could not be fully implemented, that information was shared with the parent and comparable services were then outlined. An email was sent to the new school regarding the comparable services so the new school was prepared to receive the student and what services to provide.
28. The Executive Director of Special Education indicated the Parent wanted all three siblings, including the Student, to be at the same location. Thus, a location where all three students could be together and get their individual needs met was selected. A PWN was written aligning to the Student's minutes that they had from their previous district, and the Student was able to go to the School with their siblings.
29. According to Special Education Coordinator 2, the Student was enrolled in the School with structured learning classroom and behavior support classroom access because their IEP from the previous district had very high minutes. They indicated the Student was to receive their structured learning classroom minutes working with a general resource teacher, and their resource minutes in the behavior support classroom because of the low number of students in that classroom. The Student had some behavior supports at their previous school, so those minutes were going to be provided in the behavior support classroom. Special Education Coordinator 2 did not have any concerns with the Student being placed in the behavior support classroom because of the model that was used.

30. According to the Executive Director of Special Education, the behavior support program typically supported students with behavior needs who had a behavior intervention plan. There was also the SAILS program, also known as a life skills program, which was for students who had lower cognitive abilities and had a high number of minutes. Students in the behavior support classroom did not typically have low cognitive abilities, but had access to the general education classroom, whereas students in the SAILS program did not have as much access to general education.
31. The Executive Director of Special Education explained they learned from Special Education Coordinator 2 that the Principal was concerned about the Student receiving services in the behavior support classroom. The Executive Director of Special Education stated they explained their reasoning, that because the Student had a behavior support plan, the Student might need access to some of the behavior supports in that classroom, and they needed a staff member with a low caseload to support the service minutes the Student required when they were removed from general education. The Student was still in the structured learning classroom, but with access to the behavior support classroom to get their behavior needs met.
32. The Executive Director of Special Education indicated the Student's IEP was not accepted "as is," but the evaluation report was accepted. They explained the PWN included an offering of comparable services aligned to the IEP. Because the Student transferred to the School shortly before the school year ended, an IEP meeting was not held, but they were provided with comparable services which aligned with the transfer IEP. They indicated if the Student returned to the School in the fall of 2025, the School would hold an IEP meeting to develop the new IEP.
33. Special Education Coordinator 2 indicated the Parent was notified about the process through the PWN, and they also spoke with the Parent over the phone about what the programming looked like. They indicated the Parent's major concern was keeping the three siblings together in the same building, which was met.
34. The Executive Director of Special Education said, "Parents typically would not need to sign the PWN. We are required that we give them the notice, but there was no significant change. And with us it's 25% or more. There was no changes. It was just communicated that this is what the comparable service would be. And we were able to show that these are exactly the same services that was [sic] they were receiving. … So there was no change. So there was no required consent from [the Parent] for the PWN to be signed."
35. Special Education Coordinator 2 indicated their only communication with the Complainant was to explain the PWN did not require a signature because it was a transfer IEP.

Positions of the Parties, Applicable Regulations, and Conclusions

Issue One

Whether USD #500, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, implemented the Student's IEP from their previous District or provided comparable services pending the development of a new IEP. K.S.A. 72-3429(g)(1), K.A.R 91-40-16(a)(b)(1)(2); 34 C.F.R. § 300.323(e)

According to K.A.R 91-40-16(a)(b)(1)(2), each agency shall be responsible for initiating and conducting meetings to develop, review, and revise the IEP of each exceptional child served by the agency. Except as otherwise provided in subsection (c), each agency shall ensure that the following conditions are met: an IEP is in effect before special education and related services are provided to an exceptional child; and those services for which written consent has been granted as specified by law are implemented not later than 10 school days after parental consent is granted unless reasonable justification for a delay can be shown. K.S.A. 72-3429(g)(1) indicates that if an exceptional child with a current IEP transfers from one Kansas school district to another during the academic year, the new school district, in consultation with the child's parent, shall provide the child a FAPE, including services comparable to those described in the transferred IEP, until the new school district either adopts the transferred IEP, or develops and implements a new IEP for the child.

The Complainant alleged the Student was placed in a Behavior Support Classroom, as an incoming student from another district, without an IEP meeting, parental consent, or adherence to an existing IEP.

The District stated they provided comparable services for the Student during the remainder of the 2024-25 school year.

The documentation demonstrated that the transfer IEP, created by the District on May 14, 2025, had comparable services which aligned with the supports and service minutes outlined in the Student's IEP and a PWN from November 4, 2024. Important items to note from the original IEP included that the Student would participate with their general education peers in a combination of direct special education services in the general education classroom and in specials classes, and the Student was participating in a hybrid design between the intensive resource program and the interrelated resource program.

The services from the transfer IEP were also reflected in the PWN, which the Executive Director of Special Education confirmed. The PWN was emailed to the Parent on May 14, 2025. It should be noted the services listed as taking place in the "general education setting" in the PWN, were described in the transfer IEP as being held "in an elementary or secondary building."

The Complainant learned from the previous school that the Student had been in a life skills class. The Complainant explained the School had a structured learning center and a life skills program, but not an intensive resource program. They recalled the previous school called their life skills program an intensive resource program. In regards to comparable services provided, the Complainant explained the Student accessed the general education environment and provided materials at grade or ability level. However, the Complainant noted there were not enough personnel available to maintain safety, and the Student had limited access to peers when they were in the behavior support classroom. The Complainant indicated they implemented the Student's Positive Behavior Support Plan.

The District indicated the Student had access to the special education setting in the behavior support classroom for the minutes they were supposed to receive in the special education setting. The Cooperative's Special Education Coordinator Process and Procedures Handbook outlined the process of a student transfer, which the Executive Director of Special Education reiterated during their interview. It was determined through email documentation and interviews this process was followed for the Student. The Executive Director of Special Education indicated the Parent wanted all three siblings, including the Student, to be at the same location, which the District was able to do. Special Education Coordinator 2 corroborated this.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the District failed to implement the Student's IEP from their previous District or provide comparable services pending the development of a new IEP.

Issue Two

Whether USD #500, in accordance with state and federal regulations, convened an IEP team meeting, including the Parent, to make decisions regarding the Student's appropriate educational placement in the least restrictive environment prior to implementing such placement. Additionally, whether the District obtained Parental consent prior to changing the Student's placement to the behavior support classroom. K.S.A 72-3420 (a), K.A.R. 91-40-21(a-c)(d)(1-5); 34 C.F.R. §§ 300.114, 300.116, 300.327, 300.501(c)

According to K.A.R. 91-40-21(a-c)(d)(1-5), each agency shall ensure that the children with disabilities served by the agency are educated in the LRE. Each agency shall ensure that a continuum of alternative educational placements is available to meet the needs of children with disabilities. These alternative educational placements shall meet the following criteria: include instruction in regular classes, special classes, and special schools; instruction in a child's home; and instruction in hospitals and other institutions; and make provision for supplementary services, including resource room and itinerant services, to be provided in conjunction with regular class placement. In determining the educational placement of a child with a disability, including a preschool child with a disability, each agency shall ensure that the placement decision meets the following requirements: the decision shall be made by a group of persons, including the child's parent or parents and other persons who are knowledgeable about the child, the meaning of the evaluation data, and the placement options; and the decision shall be made in conformity with the requirement of providing services in the LRE.

Each agency shall give notice to the parents of any meeting to discuss the educational placement of their child. The notice shall meet the requirements of K.A.R. 91-40-17. If a parent cannot participate in person at a meeting relating to the educational placement of the child, the agency shall offer to use other methods to allow the parent to participate, including conference calls and video conferencing. An agency may conduct a meeting to determine the appropriate educational placement of a child with a disability without participation of a parent if the agency, despite repeated attempts, has been unable to contact the parent or to convince the parent to participate. If an agency conducts a meeting to determine the appropriate educational placement of a child without the participation of a parent, the agency shall have a record, as prescribed in K.A.R. 91-40-17(e)(2), of the attempts that the agency made to contact the parent. An agency shall take action to ensure that parents understand, and are able to participate in, any discussions concerning the educational placement of their children, including arranging for an interpreter for parents who are deaf or whose native language is other than English.

According to K.S.A 72-3420 (a), each school district shall be required, to the maximum extent appropriate, to educate children with disabilities with children who are not disabled, and to provide special classes, separate schooling or for the removal of children with disabilities from the regular education environment only when the nature or severity of the disability of the child is such that education in regular classes with supplementary aids and services cannot be achieved satisfactorily.

The Complainant alleged the Behavior Support Classroom was not the correct placement for the Student, and that the decision was made without parental consent.

The District responded that the Student having access to the special education setting in a behavior support classroom did not mean the Student was assigned to receive all services in that program, but the Student had to have access to the special education teacher to provide the necessary amount of weekly services. The District indicated that once the Student returned for the 2025-26 school year, the School team would hold an IEP meeting, and the Student would continue to receive comparable services until the IEP meeting was held with all required participants, including the Parent.

A Positive Behavior Support Plan, dated January 12, 2024, indicated the Student's targeted behaviors included refusals and elopements, and also described prevention procedures. According to an Evaluation Report dated October 21, 2024, it was determined the Student needed intensive, individualized instruction within a center-based program to address their needs. A hybrid approach combining an intensive resource classroom and a pull-out interrelated resource program was being used at the time. The Student's IEP from November 4, 2024 indicated the Student was enrolled in a center-based classroom designed for students who required more intensive individualized instruction, and the Student received instruction in a less restrictive special education setting for portions of their day. The IEP also detailed the type and amount of services the Student received.

Meeting Notes regarding the Student's transfer, dated May 2, 2025, indicated the Student attended a center-based program at the previous school, which was an intensive resource classroom, and received a hybrid model of instruction. In an email from Special Education Coordinator 1 to the Executive Director of Special Education, dated May 6, 2025, Special Education Coordinator 1 shared information about the Student, their current placement, IEP minutes, their recommendation for placement, and asked where the Student should be placed. The Executive Director of Special Education replied that day and stated the Student would be placed in the behavior support classroom.

On May 13, 2025, the Principal emailed Special Education Coordinator 2 and requested a meeting to review the Student's IEP. The Principal contacted Special Education Coordinator 2 again, with concerns about the Student being in the behavior support classroom. The Principal emailed the Executive Director of Special Education the next day, reiterating their concerns.

After reviewing the Student's IEP, the Complainant perceived the behavior support classroom was not the appropriate placement, and stated they were not provided a reason as to why the Student was placed in their classroom. The Complainant indicated they asked Special Education Coordinator 2 if the Student's placement was correct, and were told the Executive Director of Special Education had determined the Student's placement. The Complainant explained it was not standard practice to hold IEP meetings for move-in students, and that the Executive Director of Special Education determined placement.

The Complainant indicated the Student performed well in the behavior support classroom, but perceived it would have been better for the Student to be in a structured learning classroom with more minutes in the general education environment. The Complainant did not ask the Parent if they agreed with the Student's placement.

An IEP meeting was not held when the Student transferred to the School. However, statements from the Complainant indicated it was not standard procedure to do so. Additionally, the District indicated the lack of a meeting was because the Student was only in school for six days before the 2024-25 school year ended, and the Student's educational placement was not changed.

A letter from the United States Department of Education stated in part, "Historically, we have referred to 'placement' as points along the continuum of placement options available for a child with a disability and 'location' as the physical surrounding, such as the classroom, in which a child with a disability receives special education and related services."

As seen in Issue #1, the District provided comparable services to the Student. According to Special Education Coordinator 2, the Student had access to the structured learning and behavior support classrooms. The Executive Director of Special Education indicated the behavior support program typically supported students with behavior needs who had a behavior intervention plan. They explained the Student was still in the structured learning classroom, but with access to the behavior support classroom to get their behavior needs met. In this instance, the District utilized different classrooms as a way to provide services, but an educational placement, as defined above, was not made.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the District failed to convene an IEP team meeting, including the Parent, to make decisions regarding the Student's appropriate educational placement in the least restrictive environment prior to implementing such placement, or that the District failed to obtain Parental consent prior to changing the Student's placement to the behavior support classroom.

Issue Three

Whether USD #500, in accordance with state and federal regulations, appropriately informed the Parent of changes to the Student's IEP in a Prior Written Notice. K.S.A. 72-3430(2), K.S.A 72-3432, K.A.R. 91-40-26; C.F.R § 300.503

According to K.A.R. 91-40-26, K.S.A. 72-3430(2), and K.S.A 72-3432, in providing any notice to the parent or parents of an exceptional child in accordance with K.S.A. 72-990 and amendments thereto regarding any action proposed or refused by an agency, each agency shall ensure that the notice includes the following information: a description of other options that the agency considered and the reasons why those options were rejected; and a description of other factors that are relevant to the agency's proposal or refusal. The notice shall be written in language understandable to the general public and provided in the native language of the parent or other mode of communication used by the parent, unless it is clearly not feasible to do so. If the native language or other mode of communication of a parent is not a written language, the agency shall take steps to ensure all of the following: the notice is translated orally or by other means to the parent in the parent's native language or other mode of communication; the parent understands the content of the notice; and there is written evidence that the requirements of paragraphs (1) and (2) of this subsection have been met. The agency shall be required to provide a parent with a copy of the procedural safeguards available to parents only one time during each school year, except that a copy shall also be provided to the parent in the following circumstances: upon initial referral of the child for an evaluation or upon parental request for an evaluation; upon receipt by the state department of education of the first complaint filed with it by the parent; upon receipt by an agency of the first due process complaint filed against it by the parent; upon the parent's child being subjected to disciplinary removal from the child's current placement; and at any time, upon request of the parent. The agency shall inform the parent of any free or low-cost legal or other relevant services available in the agency's area if the parent requests the information or the parent or agency initiates a due process complaint involving the parent's child.

The Complainant alleged the Parent was not involved in, or gave consent to, the Student being placed in a Behavior Support Classroom.

The District stated that by reviewing the Student's transfer IEP and evaluation reports, and providing the Parent a PWN about comparable services that aligned with the services the Student was receiving in the previous district, was in accordance with state and federal regulations, and the District appropriately informed the Parent of any changes.

In an email exchange between the Complainant and Special Education Coordinator 2 on May 16, 2025, the Complainant asked if there was a signed PWN from the Parent, and was told no signature was required for a transfer IEP. The Executive Director of Special Education explained a PWN was written to align the Student's service minutes to their new school. Special Education Coordinator 2 indicated the Parent was notified about the process through the PWN, which was emailed to the Parent, and they also spoke with the Parent over the phone about the Student's programming. The Executive Director of Special Education indicated the Parent did not need to sign the PWN because a significant change was not made. While the Parent was not interviewed for this investigation, there was no documentation or testimony to demonstrate the Parent was not informed of, or concerned about, the services the Student was receiving at the School.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the District failed to appropriately inform the Parent of changes to the Student's IEP in a Prior Written Notice.

This report is in response to a complaint filed with the Kansas State Department of Education on behalf of ---------- by ----------, Educational Advocate. In the remainder of the report ---------- will be referred to as the "student" and ---------- will be referred to as the "complainant" or the "advocate". Background Information

The student is a six-year-old boy who lives at home with his mother and sibling in USD #512. During the 2024-25 school year, the student was enrolled at Shawanoe Elementary School where he repeated kindergarten. The parent reported the student attended Benninghoven Elementary School for extended school year services during June 2025 and will be attending Rosehill Elementary School for first grade during the 2025-26 school year.

The student was initially evaluated and determined eligible for early childhood special education (ECSE) services at age three while enrolled in preschool in USD #231. The student transferred into USD #512 and attended pre-kindergarten with ECSE services at Apache Elementary School during the 2022-23 school year. The next school year he attended kindergarten and received special education and related services at Shawanoe Elementary until March 1, 2024 when he transferred to USD #367. He transferred back to USD #512 on May 10, 2024 and finished the rest of his kindergarten year at Shawanoe Elementary School. For the 2024-2025 school year, the student continued to be enrolled at Shawanoe Elementary School for a repeat of kindergarten and to receive his special education and related services.

According to the January 21, 2025 evaluation report from Children's Mercy Hospital, the student has medical diagnoses of Autism and Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder. His most recent special education reevaluation was conducted on April 10, 2025. At that time, the IEP team determined the student was a child with an exceptionality under the category of Other Health Impairment and continued to be in need of special education and related services.

Issues Investigated

Based on the written complaint, one issue was identified and investigated.

Issue One

USD #512, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to follow appropriate disciplinary procedures during the 2024-25 school year when the student was suspended for greater than ten days.

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.530 require specific procedures to be followed when a student with a disability or suspected of having a disability are subject to a disciplinary removal because of a violation of the student code of conduct.

Disciplinary removals are considered to be "short-term" when a student is removed from their educational placement for no more than 10 consecutive school days or no more than 10 cumulative school days during a school year. In these situations, federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.530(b)(1) allow for a public agency to remove a student with a disability who violates a code of student conduct from the student's educational placement to another setting, including suspension, without providing any services.

However, when a student with a disability who has violated a code of student conduct has been removed from the student's educational placement for more than 10 cumulative days during a school year, federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.536(a) require the public agency to determine if a pattern of suspensions exists. The public agency must consider the length of each removal, the total amount of time removed, the proximity of removals to one another, and the similarity of the behaviors resulting in the removals when determining if a pattern exists. If the public agency determines that a pattern does not exist, a manifestation determination meeting is not required to be held but the public agency must provide services to enable the student to participate in the general education curriculum (although in another setting) and to progress toward meeting the goals in the IEP according to 34 C.F.R. 300.530(d)(4).

Disciplinary removals are considered to be "long-term" when a disciplinary change of placement occurs. Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.536(a) define a disciplinary change of placement as occurring when a student's educational placement has been changed because of disciplinary action resulting from a violation of the student code of conduct for more than 10 consecutive school days or for more than 10 cumulative school days when a pattern exists. When a long-term suspension occurs, the public agency is required to conduct a manifestation determination meeting to determine if the behavior resulting in the disciplinary action is related to the student's disability as described in federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.530(c,d,e,f). In this situation, the public agency is also required to provide services to enable the student to participate in the general education curriculum (although in another setting) and to progress toward meeting the goals in the IEP.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The following findings of fact are based upon interviews and record review.

During the 2024-25 school year, the student had two IEPs in effect. The first IEP is dated April 19, 2024 and requires special education and related services be provided in the school setting. This IEP was amended on May 14, 2024 to include transportation as a related service. The Prior Written Notice provided to and signed by the parent on May 14, 2024 states, "The team proposes to add special transportation to the student's IEP because he needs transportation services in order to access his special education services and general education instruction".

The second IEP is dated April 10, 2025 and amended on May 19, 2025. This IEP also requires special education and related service be provided to the student in the school setting and includes transportation as a related service. The IEP states, "Transportation will be provided from the time the student gets on/off the bus from home to school, school to home, and/or school to school in a special education vehicle".

Based on a review of documentation provided by both parties, the following chart summarizes the dates the student did not receive the services required by the IEPs as a result of behaviors which resulted in disciplinary action by the district.

It is noted that the investigator considered any instance where the district denied the student the special education and related services required by the IEP as a disciplinary action resulting in a disciplinary removal of the student as the provided documentation did not always "match" across all of the documentation sources. Discrepancies are described in the notes following the chart.

Note[1]: The Screenshot shows a text message stating, "I am leaving work now the school called me to get the student"

Note2: There are two versions of the OSS Letter dated 11/20/24. The first version assigns one day of OSS and shows the student can return to school on 11/21/24. The second version also assigns one day of OSS and shows the student can return to school on 11/22/24. The district reports 11/21/24 was the correct date of the OSS assigned to the student since the incident resulting in the OSS happened after school hours on the bus.

Note[3]: The JCMH Call Report states the student eloped from the school building at dismissal time and that police and JCMH staff were called to assist. The parent provided transportation after the student was located and returned back to school.

Note[4]: Screenshots show a phone message left by the school secretary at 1:43 PM requesting the parent "come for the student" and stating that both the Shawnee Mission Police and the District Resource Office had been called. Subsequent screenshots of phone messages from the Shawnee Police at 1:51 PM and the District Resource Office at 2:28 PM requested that parent come to the school. The JCMH Call Report documents the behavioral issue was physical aggression towards adults.

Note[5]: The Screenshot shows a text message stating, "Another bus issue i have to leave and get the student . . ."

Note[6]: The Screenshot shows a text message stating, "Leaving again to get the student . . ."

Note[7]: The Shawnee Mission Police Report states, "I spoke to staff and they reported the student was being driven by assisted transport to day care. The student unbuckled his 5 point harness and grabbed the driver's face and broke her glasses. The student was taken back to school and his mother. The mother was contacted and was in route to the location from Olathe, KS.".

Note[8]: This appears to be the same incident based on the description in both the police report which was completed after school hours in the law enforcement system and the discipline report which was entered into the school system the next morning.

Note[9]: No description of the incident resulting in the disciplinary action was provided by the district

The chart shows the student did not receive the special education and related services required to be provided in the school setting for a total of 11 cumulative school days during the 2024-25 school year as follows: August 30, October 7 and 8, October 29, November 21, December 5 and 6, February 28, April 11, May 2 and May 16.

The district acknowledged the student was suspended for the following 10 school days: August 30, October 7 and 8, October 29, November 21, December 5 and 6, February 28, May 2 and May 16 based on an internal review. The investigator notes that the discrepancy is from district not including the incident on April 11 as no building level documentation was made in the school system despite the documentation provided by the parent indicating district staff and police involvement on that date.

The chart shows the student did not receive the transportation as a related service as required by the student's IEP for a total of nine cumulative school days during the 2024-25 school year as follows: September 26, November 20, December 3 and 4, March 28, April 8, April 15, April 22, and May 13.

The chart shows physical aggression towards others as the behavior resulting in 15 of the 20 days of missed services during the 2024-25 school year.

Conclusion

Based upon the information summarized in the chart, the student was never removed from his educational placement for greater than 10 consecutive school days during the 2024-25 school year. However, the documentation shows the student was removed from his educational placement for greater than 10 cumulative school days during the 2024-25 school year due to disciplinary removals.

A disciplinary removal occurs when the district refuses to provide the special education and related services required by a student's IEP due to behavior that violates the student code of conduct. The student's IEP in effect during the 2024-25 school year requires special education and related services in the school setting as well as transportation as a related service. Transportation as a related service is required to be provided for the student both to and from school.

In this case, the documentation in the chart shows the student did not receive the required special education and related services, including transportation as a related service, for a total of 20 cumulative school days during the 2024-25 school year due to behavior which resulted in a disciplinary action taken by the district. This situation required USD #512 to follow specific procedures.

Beginning on December 6, 2024, which was the eleventh cumulative school day the student did not receive his required special education and related services, including transportation as a related service, the district was required to determine if a pattern existed with the disciplinary removals. And following each subsequent disciplinary removal, the district was also required to determine if a pattern existed. The district acknowledged that no special procedures were followed because the district believed the student was only suspended for 10 cumulative school days during the 2024-25 school year.

In addition, IDEA required that the district to provide services to the student beginning on the eleventh day of the cumulative suspension during the school year regardless if a pattern was determined to have existed. Again, the district acknowledged this did not occur because the district believed the student was only suspended for 10 cumulative school days during the 2024-25 school year.

Based on the foregoing, the district is found to be out of compliance with the requirements of federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.530 which require specific procedures to be followed when a student with a disability or suspected of having a disability is subject to a disciplinary removal because of a violation of the student code of conduct. In this case, USD #512 failed to determine if a pattern of suspensions existed and failed to provide the student with services to enable the student to participate in the general education curriculum (although in another setting) and to progress toward meeting the goals in the IEP.

Summary of Conclusions/Corrective Action

ISSUE ONE: Interviews and documentation support a finding that the district did not follow the specific procedures required by the IDEA when the student was removed from his educational placement due to disciplinary action taken by the district for greater than 10 cumulative school days during the 2024-25 school year. Specifically, USD #512 failed to determine if a pattern of suspensions existed beginning on day 11 of the suspensions and did not provide services to enable the student to participate in the general education curriculum and progress toward meeting the goals in the IEP for a total of nine days during the 2024-25 school year. Based on the foregoing, the district is determined to be OUT of compliance with the requirements of the IDEA and corrective action is required.

Corrective Action:

1. The LEA will review all of the documentation included in the chart and will make a determination if a pattern of suspensions occurred during the 2024-25 school year. If a pattern does not exist, no further action will be taken. However, if a pattern is determined to exist, the LEA will follow the specific procedures required by conducting a manifestation determination meeting. The LEA will provide KSDE with a summary of the factors considered when determining if a pattern exists with the disciplinary removals during the 2024-25 school year along with documentation from the manifestation determination meeting (if one is required) no later than August 20, 2025.
2. Beginning on the eleventh day of the cumulative removals from the student's educational placement, services in the school setting were not provided on four dates (February 28, April 11, May 2, and May 16). The LEA will develop a plan to provide four days of compensatory services to the student and offer these services to the parent. The parent may accept all, some, or none of these services. The LEA will provide KSDE with a copy of the PWN offering these services to the parent no later August 30, 2025. If the parent accepts all or some of the services, the LEA will provide KSDE with documentation showing the services were provided within one week from the date of the final service.
3. Beginning on the eleventh day of the cumulative removals from the student's educational placement, transportation as a related service was not provided on eight dates (February 28, March 28, April 8, April 11, April 15, April 22, May 2, and May 13). The LEA will determine the round trip mileage between the parent's home during the 2024-25 school year and the Shawanoe Elementary School and provide the parent with mileage reimbursement based on the district's rates in effect for the eight dates that the parent provided the required transportation for the student. The LEA will provide KSDE with a copy of the cashed check no later than 30 days from the date the check was cashed but not later than September 30, 2025.
4. The LEA will review procedures and practices for recording and monitoring when students with disabilities are subject to disciplinary action in the school information systems at Shawanoe Elementary School. These procedures and practices should be designed to ensure more accurate records are kept at the building level so that monitoring can be triggered when a student's discipline history approaches either the 10 consecutive school days or the 10 cumulative school days in a school year. In addition, these procedures should ensure more accurate communication with parents regarding disciplinary actions. A copy of the procedures will be provided to KSDE no later than the first day of the 2025-26 school year along with documentation showing that all relevant building level staff including, but not limited to, the administrators and secretaries, have been trained in these procedural expectations.

5. USD #512 shall develop and maintain a central tracking system beginning with the 2025-26 school year to which all qualifying suspensions of special education students are reported so that district level special education staff are aware of the suspension status of these children and know when a child has reached the 11th day of suspension and so is entitled to services during any subsequent suspension. USD #512 shall provide KSDE of documentation showing administrators in all school buildings have been informed of the updated procedures related to the implementation of this central tracking system beginning with the 2025-26 school year.
6. No later than November 15, 2025, USD #512 shall provide KSDE with a list of all students from the central tracking system receiving any discipline/suspensions in excess of 10 days between the dates of September 1 and November 1, 2025. From that list, KSDE will randomly chose up to five students for USD #512 to provide KSDE with documentation indicating the appropriate IDEA requirements related to discipline have been met for these identified students.

Background Information

This investigation involved a third grade student enrolled at a school in USD #232. The Student enjoys recess, riding bikes, and working outside with their parent. The Student is currently receiving special education or related services as a child with a disability per the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA).

Findings of the Investigation

The following findings are based on a review of documentation and interviews with the Complainant, the Parent, and staff in the District.

1. The Student's IEP was initiated on March 25, 2025 and amended on May 9, 2025, which was also the most recent evaluation/reevaluation date.
2. On April 11, 2025, there was a "Level 1 [Placement Review Process] PRP" meeting held, as documented on the "IEP Considerations-Level 1" form. In attendance were the School Improvement Specialist, the School Psychologist, the Teacher, the Case Manager, the Behavior Specialist, and the Special Services Coordinator.
3. On an undated chart (part of the Level 1 meeting), the details regarding the Student's "current programming and placement" were as follows: there were seven "academic," five "behavior," one "behavior/academics," three "program," and two "social" areas of concern. Out of the 18 areas of concern identified, 12 were rated as "Severe Impact and/or Concern," one was rated as "Moderate Impact and/or Concern," one was rated as "Mild Impact and/or Concern," and four were rated as "Minimal Impact and/or Concern."

4. April 23, 2025 meeting notes reflected the following:
    a. The Teacher noted a change in the Student's behavior after winter break, where cussing and threatening had escalated, sexual talk was observed, and there were issues "in all areas with multiple students." They also noted that until the week of the meeting, the Student had been escalating more quickly and this was happening more frequently. They also added that the "triggers aren't consistent" and "[The Student] doesn't want to take part in supports such as breaks."
    b. The Case Manager updated the team on the Student's behavior the week of the meeting and noted changes in the support person, the Student was working better and participating more with the Case Manager when they worked with them one-on-one, a change of location for reading pull out, and the goal to get the Student back into a reading group.
    c. The Complainant questioned if the Student needed more one-on-one support, citing difficulty bonding to adults in the building.
    d. In regard to the behavior chart, the Complainant recommended removing recess as a choice for the Student and sending a picture of the chart home with the Student.
    e. It was noted that "going forward" the Student would continue one-on-one with the Case Manager, the team would "update music on looking for triggers," and the team needs "a month of good data."
5. On April 24, 2025, the Case Manager received an email from the Complainant with questions regarding the March 25, 2025 IEP. They specifically asked to add the following information to parent concerns: "retention of sight words and phonics; constant fight or flight; anxiety from academic delay in reading and writing; concern with executive functioning, hides, delays time, screams, throws items when overstimulated; mental shutdowns during unpreferred tasks; and inappropriate language during lunch."
6. An April 24, 2025 Notice of Meeting listed a proposed meeting on May 9, 2025 to "Discuss possible changes to your child's IEP." On April 24, 2025, one of the Parents signed the acknowledgement and marked "I plan to attend the meeting as scheduled."
7. In an April 27, 2025 email to the Special Services Coordinator, the School Improvement Specialist, the Teacher, the Case Manager, the Principal, the Occupational Therapist (OT), the Social Worker, and the Behavior Specialist, the School Psychologist stated that they were able to "connect with" one of the Parents and "touch base in the PRP … that we opened [during a meeting on Wednesday]. I know that [the Parent] is hesitant about the process so here is how I explained it to [them] … [The Parent] shared [their] concerns with [the Student] being a part of

[the] Connections [B] program. [The Parent] used to be a paraprofessional at Connections C, so we talked about the differences between the two programs, some of the demographic differences, etc."

8. In an IEP Amendment dated May 9, 2025, the proposed changes were:
   a. Goal changes to the "sight word goal to adjust to [the Student's] progress."
   b. Goal changes to the "behavioral social work goal" to add benchmarks.
   c. Clarifications and examples added to modifications and accommodations including flexible seating, frequent academic breaks, preferential seating with proximity to teacher, cloze notes, sentence stems, quiet/separate setting with familiar staff for testing, close monitoring of assessment completion, and communication log/behavior chart sent home daily.
   d. Exceptionality changed from "Developmental Delay" to "Emotional Disability."
   e. Behavior Intervention Plan (BIP) edited to reflect new information from the Functional Behavior Assessment (FBA).
   f. "The IEP team recommended that [the Student] transition to the Connections B program in August 2025. The Connections B classroom is designed to meet student needs by creating a supportive and flexible learning environment where students receive explicit instruction in the area of social-emotional skills and behavioral regulation in order to build independence for success in school and throughout life."

      Under the proposed changes was the following statement, "At this time, [the Student's] parents have declined the IEP team's above recommendation." The date the proposed changes would take effect was May 9, 2025. The box was checked to "agree" to the IEP amendments proposed and the box was checked that they "do not" wish to convene an IEP meeting. The form was electronically signed by the Parent on June 2, 2025 and by an authorized district representative on June 21, 2025.
9. On the May 9, 2025 IEP, two parents were listed under "IEP Participants," with one listed as "did not attend" and both showing electronic signatures on May 9, 2025. Additionally, the Complainant was listed as an "IEP Participant" and also electronically signed the document on May 9, 2025.
10. On the May 9, 2025 IEP, under "Parent/Guardian Concerns," the amendment IEP meeting concerns noted one of the Parents wanted the Student to complete reading goals at a quicker pace and for writing to be added. It was also noted that they hoped for the Student to have "less accommodations and shortened assignments to be able to complete tasks within a reasonable time." They went on to share concern that the Student is not at grade-level for reading and that "Self-confidence among peers [is] lacking due to lack of skill set or knowledge."

    It was noted on the IEP that the Parent/Guardian concerns were addressed by sharing the Student's increase in "Fastbridge" scores since small group reading instruction was changed to one-on-one; the Student had been participating more since a change in paraprofessional and "more flexible teaching style"; and the Student's parent "reported that [they] will be working with [the Student] on writing over the summer to help [them] gain some confidence."

11. On the May 9, 2025 IEP, the Social Work Updates between March and May 2025 outlined the Student's social work session attendance and participation. "[The Student] has responded positively to the opportunities of increased physical activity, and has been providing thought-out responses to social scenario questions." The update went on to describe the Student exhibiting refusal behaviors and their struggle to reflect on behavioral choices, along with increased agitation and shutting down when the Student was asked to discuss incidents. "[The Student] has been given the opportunity for morning breaks with another student on three opportunities and each time this has occurred the break has not served its purpose of being regulating for [the Student] or the peer … The Student is less responsive to behavior reminders from the social worker than when [they are] not with the peer." Staff members reported the Student consistently performed better during morning meetings and the Student expressed enjoying morning meetings and wanting to stay there. "[The Social Worker] has scaled back on offering sensory breaks with that peer in the morning so as to keep [the Student] in a regulated state."
12. On the May 9, 2025 IEP, the relevant accommodations and modifications, to take place from May 9, 2025 to March 24, 2026, included were:
    a. Flexible seating when the Student was expected to sit in the classroom for the duration of instruction in both General Education and Special Education settings.
    b. Frequent academic breaks when the Student requested for the duration of the academic task in both General Education and Special Education settings.
    c. Preferential seating/proximity control near the teacher daily for the duration of the instruction in both General Education and Special Education settings.
    d. Cloze Notes when class note taking was occurring through the duration of the lesson/assignment in both General Education and Special Education settings.
    e. Sentence Stems as requested by the Student for the duration of the assessment in both General Education and Special Education settings.
    f. Close monitoring of assessment completion whenever the Student completed standardized assessments for the duration of the assessment in both General Education and Special Education settings.
    g. Communication log/behavior chart daily at the completion of each school day in the General Education setting.
13. On the May 9, 2025 IEP, the BIP indicated an FBA was completed on May 9, 2025 and indicated a need for a BIP, which was outlined in the document.

14. On the May 9, 2025 IEP, under "Placement Considerations and Decision," the following placement options were considered and selected for March 25, 2025 through May 22, 2025 and August 13, 2025 through March 24, 2026:
    a. "Inside Regular Class 80% or more of the day."
    2. For the same date range, the following placement options were considered:
    b. "Inside Regular Class less than 79% but more than 40% of the day."
15. On a May 9, 2025 Prior Written Notice (PWN), the decision noted was "Material Change in Services (Parental Consent Required)." "Description of the Actions proposed" listed the following:
    a. Goal changes to "sight word goal to adjust to [the Student's] progress."
    b. Goal changes to "behavioral social work goal" to add benchmarks.
    c. Clarifications and examples added to modifications and accommodations including flexible seating, frequent academic breaks, preferential seating with proximity to teacher, cloze notes, sentence stems, quiet/separate setting with familiar staff for testing, close monitoring of assessment completion, and communication log/behavior chart sent home daily.
    d. Exceptionality changed from "Developmental Delay" to "Emotional Disability."
    e. BIP edited to reflect new information from the FBA.
    3. "Other Relevant Factors Considered" noted that "the team discussed [the Student's] least restrictive environment (LRE) and the pros and cons of [them] attending the Connections B Program versus [the School]. At this time, a decision has not been made by the family either way and the team will wait for any further questions or discussion points."

    This PWN was signed by one of the Parents on May 30, 2025 and the box for "give consent" was marked to provide consent for the special education placement and services actions in this notice. It was noted that the consent was voluntary and may be revoked at any time.
16. A May 9, 2025 PWN stated there was a meeting to review "Special education and related services needed by your child" and "[t]he appropriate educational placement to provide special education and related services identified in your child's IEP." The decision was a "substantial change in placement (parental consent required)." The "Description of the Action Proposed" was, "It is the recommendation of the IEP team that [the Student] finish the [20]24-25 school year at [the School] and [then] transition to the Connections B program at [a different school] to begin in August 2025." The "Explanation of Why the Action is Proposed" was due to the Student's current behaviors, plan, and support and noted the Connections B program having more knowledge and support to accommodate the Student's needs. The "Options Considered and Why the Options were Rejected" was, "At this time, [the Student's parent] reported hesitancy with [the Student] attending the Connections B program. The team encouraged [the Parent] to observe the program before making any final decisions."

This PWN was signed by one of the Parents on May 30, 2025 and the box for "Do Not Give Consent - I do not give consent for the special education placement and services actions in this notice for my child" was marked.

17. On May 20, 2025, the Principal emailed the Parent to describe the Student's behaviors, the behavior tracking sheet, and the sustainability of the Student's accommodations. The Principal wrote, "These are the services that are not sustainable in this environment here at [the School]. The amount of support [the Student] has received at this level will not be continued next school year. In order for [the Student] to continue the academic and behavioral progress that we have seen recently we believe that [the Student] needs additional support that can be provided at the Connections B program at [another location]." (C23) The Principal sent a clarification email less than an hour later on the same date, "Let me address services for next year here at [the School]. We will continue to follow the IEP as it is written[,] however the sustainability puts a lot of stress on the resources and we are not as equipped for all of the different behaviors as a staff would be in the [C]onnections program."
18. In a May 21, 2025 email to one of the Parents and the Complainant, the Special Services Coordinator stated, "I am reaching out to see if you have any additional questions after our IEP meeting and the visit to [the Connections B program]. I know there has been a lot to process at the end of the school year. Please reach out with questions. In regard to the PWN, it will require a parent signature with consent given or not given in order to implement the proposed changes."
19. On June 9, 2025, the Director of Special Education emailed unidentified recipient(s), and referenced a chart used for the Student. They explained it was noted why the information was added, which was because "… 'the team felt that [the Student] needed consistency and had outlined consequences for different behaviors so that it was clear (and consistent between staff).'" The Director of Special Education indicated their recommendation was to review the information in the fall as an IEP to discuss concerns, and add more information in the same section about the rights/procedures for students in special education regarding suspension. An unidentified person replied on June 11, 2025 and wrote, "Yes that is the chart. I agree that [the Student] needed consistent consequence[s] for behaviors but the chart was not used fairly."
20. In an emailed dated June 30, 2025, the Director of Special Education indicated the IEP team recommended a reevaluation in March due to the Student's behaviors, and that the reevaluation would include an FBA. They explained that around the same time, the team started to look at their PRP because they were struggling with the Student's behaviors. The PRP was used to consider a student's strengths and needs, as well as to bring in District experts in a particular area to support the IEP team. They indicated both processes occurred from March to May 2025, until the reevaluation meeting in May, where final recommendations were made using the data and information gathered.

21. This Complaint was filed on June 5, 2025.

Interview Summaries

The Principal

22. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Principal described having a long-standing relationship with the Student, who had attended the School since kindergarten and was entering fourth grade. The Principal's involvement typically escalated when safety issues arose due to the Student's behavior, which included sexual comments, foul language, threats, destroying property, eloping, and general disrespect. The Principal noted that the Parent, who was a staff member in the building until recently, was "very close to the situation" and privy to daily incidents. The Principal stated that communication with the Parent was "pretty much constant," and believed that nothing was ever put into place without the Parent and the Complainant being a part of the discussion.

23. The Principal expressed surprise regarding the allegation that parental consent was not obtained for material changes to the Student's IEP or placement, referencing numerous meetings with the Parent and the Complainant. While staff held regular student collaboration team meetings as standard practice to discuss student needs, including the Student's, the Principal maintained that no significant changes were implemented without prior discussion with the Parent. The Principal acknowledged the Parent might have misconstrued these internal meetings as formal IEP discussions from which the Parent was excluded. However, the Principal reiterated that the School always followed up with parents on significant matters.

24. The Principal explained that discussions about a potential placement change for the Student had been ongoing with the Parent for several years, intensifying recently due to the Student's escalating behavior. However, the Parent consistently voiced opposition to a placement change. Before a formal meeting where the new placement was proposed, the School scheduled a courtesy meeting with the Parent and the Complainant, allowing them to hear and process the information so they could prepare any questions or concerns for the formal meeting. This courtesy meeting also included reevaluation information and a potential change in the Student's exceptionality, which the School thought might be "pretty heavy and emotionally provoking content" for the Parent. Although the Parent remained quiet during the formal placement proposal meeting, they agreed to visit the proposed placement site. Ultimately, parental consent for the placement change was not provided, leading to the Student remaining at the School, with all other consented IEP changes implemented.

25. The Principal discussed an email sent to the Parent on May 20, 2025, which aimed to clarify the Student's behavior tracking. In the email, the Principal explained the Student's behavior chart only accounted for work completion and appropriate language, not other common misbehaviors, such as whining or yelling, which were not typical for peers. The Principal noted that observed successes might be linked to recent medication changes, but historically, the Student's issues had persisted since kindergarten. The email also stated the current level of support for the Student at the School was unsustainable and would not continue into the next school year, a statement the Principal quickly reconsidered. Realizing the wording could be misinterpreted as an unwillingness to support the Student, the Principal sent a follow-up email within an hour to clarify the School's intent was to ensure the Student received appropriate and dignified support, acknowledging the Student's behaviors often fluctuated, seemingly influenced by medication.

26. The Principal understood the Parent's primary frustration with the IEP centered on a behavior chart within the IEP, designed to ensure consistent expectations and consequences. While the Parent desired consistency, they reportedly disagreed with certain consequences or perceived inconsistencies in their application to other students. It appeared the Parent's objections to the chart became more pronounced when consequences, such as out-of-school suspensions for threats, conflicted with their work schedule. The Principal emphasized the chart's consequences were standard for any student exhibiting similar behaviors, expressing ongoing concern for the Student's dignity, and the safety of the entire student body at the School.

The Director of Special Education

27. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Director of Special Education confirmed that during a formal IEP meeting, the Student was identified as having an emotional disturbance following a reevaluation and functional behavior assessment, which then led to the IEP discussion. During this meeting, a change in the Student's placement was recommended. However, parental consent, which was required for material changes in placement, was not obtained for this specific recommendation. The Complainant requested the proposed changes be split into two PWNs. The Parent consented to all other recommended changes outlined in the first PWN but declined consent for the center-based program placement change in the second PWN. Consequently, the Student remained at the School in their current placement, while the other consented changes were implemented.

28. The Director of Special Education explained that upon receiving the formal complaint, they met with the Parent and the Complainant to understand the specific concerns regarding providing consent. It was determined the Parent's frustration largely stemmed from a behavior chart included in the IEP, as referenced by the Principal. While the Parent desired consistency in expectations and consequences for behaviors, they reportedly disagreed with certain consequences or felt other students were not subject to the same consequences. The Director of Special Education engaged in an email exchange with the Parent to clarify these points and ensure the Parent understood their rights, emphasizing the Student had the same rights as all other students. To the Director of Special Education's knowledge, no examples of implementations without consent were found; instead, the issues appeared to be frustrations with the IEP's content or wording, as well as staff actions following the Student's behaviors or consequences.

The Complainant

29. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Complainant said, "I disagreed with the placement to move [the Student] to a different school into a specified program versus where [the Student] currently [was] receiving special education minutes." The Complainant explained they and the Parent toured the new school and program that was being proposed, and compared it to the Student's current school to determine the difference between the two programs. The Complainant expressed they did not agree with moving the Student to the new program because they perceived there were no benefits for the Student in doing so.
30. The Complainant indicated the Principal responded to their concerns via email, stating the Student would not be at the School next year because it put stress on the staff, and the School could not provide the types of services and amount of staff the Student required. The Complainant explained the Principal then sent a follow-up email, which indicated the School would continue to follow the Student's IEP as written, but that it put stress on the staff and they were not able to handle the Student's behaviors.

    The Complainant perceived the data used to complete the Student's FBA, and to show why they should move to a different program, only came from the Student's "most trying times." They perceived there was not any data to show what, if anything, happened after more accommodations, modifications, and service minutes were put into place. The Complainant indicated the Student's behavior improved at the end of the school year, but the School stated it was only due to the Student's medication.
31. The Complainant's understanding of the Student's current placement was, "… at [the School] and general education with support and service minutes."
32. The Complainant said, "… there was a prior written notice signed by [the Parent] that states we do not consent to a different placement or the placement they recommended … ." They stated that currently, the Student would attend the School in the fall.
33. The Complainant indicated one of the amendments from May 2025 they were concerned about was regarding the behavior chart. The Complainant explained they were informed the Student engaged in negative behaviors, but stated the behavior sheet would show the Student had good days. They advocated that a behavior sheet should be sent home daily, and have that included in the IEP amendment. The Complainant explained they did not observe the Student engaging in negative behaviors.

34. The Parent indicated they signed an IEP amendment on June 2, 2025 and a PWN for initial services placement and request for consent, dated May 9, 2025. The Parent confirmed the document was marked that they did not give consent for special education placement and services actions for the Student. The Complainant explained the document demonstrated the Parent disagreed with placing the Student at the other school and program. The Complainant perceived the other program would not be a good fit for the Student because it only focused on behavior and they believed it would not meet the Student's needs.
35. The Complainant said, "While being in the meeting, [it] was very clear to me and to my understanding that they were not going to continue to have [the Student] in the school, that [the Student] needed to leave to get more support as they would put it, and they'd be more trained in the other school to handle [the Student's] behaviors. But it almost seemed like it was a predetermined [sic] with the IEP team."
36. The Parent perceived there were times when people wanted to arrange private meetings with them prior to the IEP meeting. The Parent explained they received a text message to meet the day before an IEP meeting to "go over things," and there was already a team of people there. The Parent said, "And so that meeting wouldn't come into existence without that team of people talking and gathering their thoughts together."

Positions of the Parties, Applicable Regulations, and Conclusions

Issue One

Whether USD #232, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), obtained parental consent when making material changes to the Student's IEP and special education placement. K.A.R. 91-40-21(c)(1)(A)(B), K.A.R. 91-40-27(3); 34 C.F.R. § 300.116.

According to Per K.A.R. 91-40-27(3), each agency shall obtain parental consent before taking any action, of any exceptional child, shall make a material change in services to, or a substantial change in the placement of an exceptional child. Unless the change is based upon the child's graduation from high school or exceeding the age of eligibility for special education services.

The Complainant alleged the District did not obtain parental consent when making material changes to the Student's IEP and special education placement. The Complainant also purported the District urged the Parent to relocate the Student to a different program.

The District indicated they obtained parental consent each time material changes in services and placement were recommended by the IEP team, via PWNs. The District reported consent for reevaluation was also sought and obtained, and that no changes to the IEP were implemented without parental consent.

The Student's IEP was initiated on March 25, 2025 and amended on May 9, 2025. A Level 1 PRP meeting was held on April 11, 2025, as shown on the "IEP Considerations-Level 1" form. The Parent was not listed as attending. On April 27, 2025, the School Psychologist emailed the Parent and explained the PRP to them, that the Parent would be involved in determining next steps, and the differences between the programs being considered for the Student.

April 23, 2025 meeting notes reflected a change in the Student's behavior after winter break. The Complainant questioned if the Student required more one-on-one support and made recommendations about the behavior chart. On April 24, 2025 the Case Manager received an email from the Complainant with questions regarding the March 25, 2025 IEP and requests to add information. A Notice of Meeting from the same day proposed a meeting for May 9, 2025, and one of the Parents signed that they planned to attend. The Student's IEP from May 9, 2025 addressed social work updates between March and May 2025, and showed an FBA was completed on the same date. The IEP indicated the Student's placement as "Inside Regular Class 80% or more of the day."

On May 20, 2025, the Principal emailed the Parent and indicated the Student's current level of support was unsustainable at the School, would not continue into the next school year, and suggested the other program for continued progress.

Less than an hour later, the Principal emailed again and clarified the School would still follow the Student's IEP, but reiterated that the current level of support was straining resources. The Principal and the Complainant confirmed the content of the emails, but the Principal maintained they sent the second email to clarify the Student would still receive support. In an emailed dated June 30, 2025, the Director of Special Education indicated the IEP team recommended a reevaluation in March 2025, which included an FBA. Around the same time, the team started to look at the PRP. Both processes occurred from March to May 2025, until the reevaluation meeting in May, when final recommendations were made.

In their interview, the Principal stated nothing was done without the Parent's participation. The Principal indicated staff held regular student collaboration team meetings as standard practice to discuss student needs, but maintained no significant changes were implemented without prior discussion with the Parent.

The Principal acknowledged the Parent might have perceived these internal meetings as formal IEP discussions from which they were excluded, but reiterated that did not happen. The Parent indicated they did perceive the internal meetings as inappropriate. The Principal explained that discussions about a potential placement change had been ongoing with the Parent, but the Parent consistently opposed it. The Complainant perceived the Student's current placement was at the School, and the Student would attend the School again in the fall.

On May 9, 2025, two PWNs were issued. One PWN detailed goal changes, modifications, an exceptionality change, and BIP edits from the IEP amendment. The IEP team also recommended the Student transition to the other program in August 2025. The Parent declined the transition recommendation, but agreed to the proposed amendments. The PWN was signed by one of the Parent on May 30, 2025 and the box for "give consent" was marked to provide consent for the special education placement and services actions in that notice. It was noted the Parent had not decided on whether the Student would attend the new program, and the team would wait, pending any further discussion.

The second PWN from May 9, 2025 indicated there was a meeting to review the Student's educational placement and the decision was considered a "substantial change in placement". It was proposed the Student would attend the new school and program. This PWN was signed by one of the Parents on May 30, 2025, and the box for "Do Not Give Consent" was marked. Interview summaries corroborated the content of these documents.

Based on the documentation and interviews, the District obtained parental consent for material changes to the Student's IEP as outlined in the May 9, 2025 amendment. However, the Parent did not consent to the change in placement, and as a result, the Student remained in their current placement at the School. While the Principal made some concerning statements in their email from May 20, 2025, the Student's placement was not altered. Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the District failed to obtain parental consent when making materials changes to the Student's IEP and special education placement.

Background Information

This investigation involves a 7-year old boy who has completed the first grade in a district elementary school. He has received special education services since the preschool level and has been determined eligible to receive these services under the categorical designation of Developmental Disability.

The student's parents are divorced, and the student lives with his paternal grandparents. The parent is the educational decision-maker for the student and a sister who, according to the parent, also has been determined eligible for and in need of special education.

The student has been diagnosed with a seizure disorder, ADHD, attachment disorder, and an acute stress disorder. He has an Individual Health Plan (IHP) and until April 2025 also had a Mental Health IHP with a safety plan due to expressions of suicidal ideation. In a telephone call with the investigator on June 12, 2025, the student's father stated that while the student has not recently expressed suicidal thoughts, the father stated that he believes that a safety plan should continue to be in place.

The student's IEP team has determined that he displays unsafe behavior which impedes his learning or the learning of others. He has been provided accommodations including a visual schedule, visual cues, wait time, sensory supports, and social stories. The student has a Behavior Intervention Plan (BIP).

The student is provided with Attendant Care during lunch and recess. He is supported in the general education classroom for specials, math, science, and social studies. He also receives support in a special education classroom setting for core content and social skills. His IEP team determined that he should also receive social work services, but the student declined to participate in activities with the social worker for much of the 2024-25 school year.

Issues

In his complaint, the parent raised 6 issues.

Issue One

The district failed to provide the parent with copies of the daily behavior charts on dates specified in the complaint.

Position of the Parent

The parent asserts that, pending a change in communication strategies between himself and the special education teacher, the district failed to provide the parent with the student's behavior charts on the eight school days between April 17 and May 23, 2025.

Position of the District

The district stipulates that there have been occasions when behavior data was not provided to the parent on a daily basis. However, it is the position of the district that the student's April 30, 2024 IEP does not require the daily provision of data sheets to the parent. According to the district, the April 2024 IEP states that while behavior data will be taken daily for the purpose of determining the student's progress toward attaining an IEP goal, progress on that goal was to be reported to the parent on a quarterly basis.

The district acknowledges that, based on a request from the parent, daily behavior sheets were being sent to the parent. According to the executive director of special education, the district – at the April 25, 2025 annual review meeting - proposed sending data to the parent on a weekly basis, but the parent objected. It was subsequently determined that the data would be transmitted via email rather than through the "Class Dojo" communication system in order to better maintain a record of the transmission of the data to the parent.

Applicable Statutes and Regulations

At K.A.R. 91-40-51, Kansas regulations state that, when filing a formal complaint, the complainant must allege that a violation of federal or state special education laws or regulations has occurred during the 12-month period preceding the date the complaint is received and filed with the commissioner of education.

Federal regulations, at 34 C.F.R. 300.101, require states to ensure that a free appropriate public education (FAPE) is made available to all children with disabilities residing within the state. Accordingly, Kansas regulations at K.A.R. 91-40-2(b)(1) require that each school district makes FAPE available to each child with a disability residing in its jurisdiction. Federal regulations, at 34 C.F.R. 300.17, define FAPE, in part, as special education and related services provided in conformity with an Individualized Education Program (IEP). However, special education statutes and regulations do not require that every action taken by a school district with regard to a student who has been determined to be a student with an exceptionality be specifically addressed in a student's IEP.

Investigative Finding

The parent participated in the development of the student's April 30, 2024 IEP. That IEP included a Behavior Intervention Plan (BIP). According to a portion of the "Present Level of Academic Achievement and Functional Performance (PLAAFPs)" section of the student's April 2024 IEP entitled "Emotions/Self-Regulation,"

> "Due to the intensity of [the student's] physical aggression a daily data collection of compliant/non-compliant and physically aggressive behaviors will be used. When [the student] is able to display behaviors of following directions for 80% of his school day and no > physical aggressions for 4 consecutive days the team will look at proposing a change to increase the amount of time he is within the general education setting."

The student's April 2024 IEP states that his needs in the area of Emotion/Self-Regulation would be met through an accommodation/modification, an annual goal, and a Behavior Intervention Plan. The annual goal established to address the student's needs was as follows:

> "Within the IEP year, when given a direction that [the student] perceives is aversive, displayed by eloping, engaging in physical aggression, or using profanity, he will communicate through a visual cue or verbally that he needs help on 70% of opportunities throughout his school day, as documented by observation and data collection."

The student's April 2024 IEP established four times at which time the student's progress toward attainment of the above annual goal would be monitored and reported – October and December 2024 and March and April 2025.

According to the BIP included in the student's April 2024 IEP, data regarding compliant/non-compliant and physically aggressive behaviors was to be collected on a daily basis and reviewed monthly by a team which included the student's case manager, the school psychologist, the social worker, the behavior consultant, the student's general education teacher, and the principal. While the parent and the district both report that the parent was provided with copies of the daily charts regarding the student's behavior, the student's 2024 IEP does not require that these daily reports be provided to the parent or that the parent be a part of the monthly data review process.

The annual review/revision of the student's IEP began on April 25, 2025. The district's proposed IEP again included a BIP. The proposed plan did not require the daily provision of behavior reports to the parent. The parties were unable to come to agreement regarding revisions to the student's IEP on April 25, 2025. Though numerous attempts were made to reconvene the IEP team to complete the annual review, none were successful. The student's April 2024 IEP remained in effect until the end of the last day of the 2024-25 school year on May 23, 2025 at which time the parent agreed to the implementation of a revised IEP proposed by the district.

Summary and Conclusions

The student's April 2024 IEP – which remained in effect throughout the 2024-25 school year – did not require the district to provide the parent with copies of the daily behavior data collected on the student. The parent asserts and the district stipulates that the parent was nonetheless being provided with that data during April and May 2025. The district provided the investigator with copies of data sheets for two of the dates specified by the parent in his complaint – April 17 and 28, 2025.

Because the student's April 2024 IEP did not specify that the parent was to receive copies of daily data sheets, a violation of special education statutes and regulations is not substantiated on this issue. However, the district is strongly encouraged to provide the parent with copies of data sheets for the dates identified by the parent (if they are extant) in a good faith effort to comply with the parties' mutually agreed-upon decision to share this information with the parent.

Issue Two

The district failed to timely provide the parent with a draft copy of the proposed IEP prior to the April 25, 2025 IEP meeting.

Position of the Parent

The parent contends that the district did not provide him with a copy of its proposed IEP for the student until 7:24 AM on the day the student's annual IEP review was scheduled for 1:15 PM. It is the parent's position that this late delivery of the document did not give him sufficient time to review the document and participate meaningfully when making decisions regarding the student's IEP.

Position of the District

The district stipulates that, on the morning of the April 25, 2025 annual review, the district provided the parent with a draft IEP which included revisions proposed by the district.

Applicable Statutes and Regulations

IDEA (the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act) 2004 has been cautious about encouraging the use of "draft" IEPs fearing that they may send a message that parental concerns and parental participation are not valued.

Commentary published in the Federal Register, Volume 71, pages 46540-46845 notes that if a draft is developed, a copy of that draft should be provided to parents, and the team must ensure that the parents understand that the document is a draft and is not set in stone. While it is reasonable for a district to provide drafts to parents sufficiently in advance of the meeting to give parents enough time to allow the careful consideration of the recommendations outlined in the draft, statutes and regulations do not specify precise timelines for the delivery of a draft document to the parents.

Investigative Findings, Summary, and Conclusions

In his complaint, the parent confirms that the district did provide him with a draft of the proposed IEP. The district and the parent agree that the draft was not sent to the parent until approximately six hours prior to the scheduled IEP team meeting.

There is no requirement in special education law for districts to provide parents with a draft of a proposed IEP prior to the meeting. In fact, the development of drafts is not encouraged. If a district decides to develop a draft document and to provide parents with a copy of the draft IEP for their review prior to the team meeting, it would not, in the opinion of the investigator, be unreasonable for the parent to expect to receive the draft with enough time for a careful review – perhaps at least 24 hours prior to the IEP meeting. Many parents would not have the time for sufficient review if they did not receive the draft document until the morning of the day the meeting is to be held.

If the district decides that it wants to continue to provide parents with drafts of proposed IEPs, the investigator suggests that staff be given guidance on the timely delivery of these documents. However, because special education laws do not require districts to provide parents with draft copies of proposed IEPs, a violation of special education statutes and regulations is not substantiated on this issue.

Issue Three

The district failed to provide the parent with revisions to proposed IEP goals.

Position of the Parent

The parent contends that he did not feel that the goals proposed by the district in the draft IEP for the student were "S.M.A.R.T." goals, not specific, measurable, achievable, relevant, and time-bound. According to the parent, the district had agreed to revise the goals to which he objected and would provide those revised goals for the parent to review and approve. The parent asserts that he was never provided with revised goals.

Position of the District

The district asserts that – in response to feedback provided by the parent at the April 25, 2025 annual IEP review meeting – revisions were made to the district's proposed IEP goals for the 2025-26 school year. The district contends that attempts were made to reconvene the IEP team to review these revisions, but the parties could not reach mutual agreement on a time for such a meeting. Additionally, it is the position of the district that the parent refused to discuss proposed IEP revisions at one mutually agreed upon meeting time (May 19, 2025) stating in an email to the executive director of special education that he would "shut down" the meeting if the district attempted to talk about anything other than the student's lack of progress on the goals established in the student's April 2024 IEP.

Applicable Statutes and Regulations

The Individualized Education Program (IEP) team is a group of people, knowledgeable about the child, who come together at an IEP meeting in order to develop or review and revise a child's IEP. Collaboration among IEP team members is essential to ensure that each child's educational experience is appropriate and meaningful. All members of the IEP team are equal partners in IEP discussions. Because of their long-term perspective and unique relationship, parents bring a valuable understanding of their child to the table.

Educators, on the other hand, bring an educational focus to the meeting: an understanding of the curriculum, the challenging educational standards for the child, and the relationship to the general education environment. The IEP team should work toward consensus, however, if an IEP team is unable to come to consensus the school has the ultimate responsibility to ensure that the IEP includes the services that the child needs in order to receive a free appropriate public education (FAPE). Following the IEP team meeting, the school must provide the parents Prior Written Notice of the school's proposal for services as identified in the child's IEP. If, after all options have been exhausted, the parents and the school cannot come to agreement, either party may ultimately utilize mediation or due process proceedings to resolve the differences.

Investigative Findings

The parent was provided with a copy of a draft revision to the student's April 2024 IEP on the morning of April 25, 2025 – prior to an annual review meeting held later that same day. The staffing summary of the April 25th meeting reflects extensive discussion of many elements of the district's proposed IEP including the student's BIP and annual goals for the student. According to the summary, the executive director of special education told the parent that > "…we have taken notes on [the parent's] concerns, and we will adjust based on…input…Since we have not come to a consensus on the annual, we will draft something new. Dad asked if he will receive another draft, and [the executive director] said we will send home another ROI and PWN. The team shared that everything will remain the same until the team comes to a consensus. Dad asked what happens if it is not signed by 4/30 and the team said things will remain the same as parents wish to have a new proposal."

In an email to the student's special education teacher on April 26, 2025, the parent wrote

> "I should be available May 19, 2025. I'm available via zoom between 12p-1p Monday-Friday. It should be a rather quick meeting. Before signing a proposed BIP and IEP, we should review his current IEP and goals/benchmarks."

On April 28, 2025, the parent sent an email to the executive director of special education writing

> "Zoom time would have to be between 1115am-1200pm. In person, would be May 19th, 2025."

The executive director responded on April 28, 2025 writing

> "Thank you for your follow-up email. In order to guide our team forward, I want to be sure that I am understanding. Are you asking that an IEP team meeting be scheduled for May 19th in person or that we could meet sooner any day of the week, but it would need to be via Zoom at 12:00 PM?"

On May 5, 2025, the executive director sent an email to the parent and the student's mother writing

> "It is my understanding that based on the availability shared by [the parent] that May 14th and May 15t at 11:15 am via Zoom was proposed to hold the continuation of [the student's] IEP meeting from 4/25/25. We could also do May 19th in person as originally suggested, too. What option can we tentatively schedule for to allow us to provide 10 day written notice? Should the date need to change later and you consent to waiving your 10 day notice, that will be fine.
>
> The IEP team will also be prepared to share a draft of the updated IEP, behavior intervention plan, and data chart proposals prior to the meeting."

The parent sent an email to the executive director on May 5, 2025 stating

> "I waive the 10 day notice, however the meeting is just to go over this CURRENT IEP, Goals/Benchmarks. I don't think you can develop a new or draft a new IEP plan if you have no idea of his current goals/benchmarks were even met. If they weren't, I am expecting a very thorough explanation why not. Please do not have or present any proposal. I will shut it down immediately. I only care if his goals/benchmarks were met in accordance to his current IEP. If not, why not? I'll have more information regarding my availability by Friday, May 9th."

On May 14, 2025, the parent sent an email to the executive director and the student's special education teacher stating

> "Hello, sorry for the extremely late notice. Is May 19th still a good date to meet? If not, I can do a zoom at 1115 am tomorrow, May 15th. Please let me know if that works."

The executive director responded to the parent via email on May 15, 2025 writing

> "Thank you for getting back to us. In following up with the team, we were not able to get the minimally required team members to be present for today on short notice. However, we could do Monday, May 19th at 8:30 AM at [the student's school] if that would work. If so, [the special education teacher will get a Notice of Meeting together sometime today and send it to both parents/guardians."

The parent responded that same date

> "Could we possibly do the afternoon?"

The executive director responded promptly writing

> "Yes, we can offer 2:25 on Monday, May 19th at [the student's school]. We will wait to hear from you and then [the special education teacher] will follow up as previously mentioned."

The parent wrote back stating that the proposed time would work.

On May 19, 2025, the parent sent an email to the executive director and the special education teacher stating

> "I won't be able to make today's meeting, it'll have to go on without [the student's mother] or me present, if possible."

The executive director wrote back to the parent stating

> "Thank you for the notice regarding your inability to attend today's meeting. The IEP team did not convene an IEP meeting as the specific topic requested by parents/guardians was looking at the IEP goals from this past year and the data updates. This meeting was specifically set to address your concerns and questions regarding this information. I did talk with the school, though, about how we'd like to proceed.
>
> With this being the final week of school for the 2024-25 year, it is our desire to have a resolution to enable us to start the next school year from day one with a plan that supports [the student's] needs and allows the school-based team to move forward. At our April 25th meeting, we proposed a new IEP. You shared concerns regarding the proposed adjustments with the behavior intervention plan specifically the reinforcement system, changing of the communication/data sheet, and the ability for [the student] to spend more time in the general education environment. The meeting ended with documents left unsigned and unsettled at that time for which we were seeking a continuance meeting to resolve. The April 25th documents have been updated according to the comments shared at that meeting. Likely tomorrow, you can anticipate receiving a copy of those items for review from [the special education teacher] including the previous goals and data updates. You can opt to sign them or we can have the continuance meeting to review and finalize. However, after this Friday, May 23rd, staff will be off contract until next school year. Our goal is to work collaboratively as a team and have us all in agreement. Please be advised, though, that changes to services or placements that are not considered material or substantial (less than a 25% change) do not require parent/guardian consent in order to be implemented…
> As always, please reach out with questions. I appreciate your time and attention to this information. We look forward to hearing from you soon and tying up these loose ends."

The parent responded on May 20, 2025 saying that he would be back in town the next day.

On May 20, 2025, the special education teacher sent the parent the updated IEP noting

> "I included the goal that is in place now, the two goals that we want to add, and the BIP."

The revised IEP included a number of changes including a minor revision to one of the two proposed IEP annual goals. The goal as proposed on April 25, 2025 read as follows:

> "When given a non-preferred instruction or direction (i.e. It's time to stop playing and get out your Wonders Book for ELA), by the end of the IEP period, [the student] will demonstrate control by using a learned strategy (i.e. counting to 5, taking a deep breath, 'Stop. Think. Act > Strategy') and making a safe choice (remaining in the designated area, remaining seated at his desk, using kind words) 80% of the time during 5 data collection days, as measured by teacher observation and behavior tracking."

The goal included in the document provided to the parent on May 20, 2025 read as follows:

> "When given a non-preferred instruction or direction (i.e. It's time to stop playing and get out your book), by the end of the IEP period, [the student] will demonstrate control by using a learned strategy (i.e. counting to 5, taking a deep breath, 'Stop. Think. Act Strategy') and making a safe choice (remaining in the designated area, remaining seated at his desk, using kind words) 80% of the time during 5 data collection days, as measured by teacher observation and behavior tracking."

In the district's May 20, 2025 IEP proposal, the second annual goal remained unchanged from the district's original proposal on April 25, 2025.

The parent was provided with prior written notice regarding proposed changes to the student's IEP including the minor change to the annual goal outlined above. Both annual goals were listed on the prior written notice form.

The parent responded to the case manager's email with a question about the BIP (see Issue Four) which the teacher answered on May 22, 2025. The parent replied that same date writing

> "Okay I'll be back in town between tonight and the morning, I should have everything signed and dropped off at the school tomorrow."

No evidence was provided to show that the parent raised any additional questions about the annual goals proposed by the district. On May 23, 2025, the parent provided his written consent for all of the district's proposed actions – including both annual goals.

In a telephone call with the investigator on June 12, 2025, the parent stated that he decided to go ahead and sign the documents thinking that the team could meet in the Fall if necessary.

Summary and Conclusions

Prior to the annual IEP review meeting for the student on April 25, 2025, the district provided a draft document which included two proposed IEP annual goals for the student. The staffing summary of the April 25th meeting shows that during the IEP meeting, the parent and other members of the team engaged in extensive discussion of the district's proposed IEP. When consensus could not be reached, the decision was made to reconvene for further discussion. However, the parties were unable to agree on a time to reconvene the IEP team meeting. The district made changes to the originally proposed IEP based on feedback from the parent during the April 25, 2025 meeting and provided the parent with a revised proposal on May 20, 2025. The parent provided his written consent for the district's proposed changes, including the minor change to one annual goal, on May 23, 2025.

In his complaint, the parent alleges that the district failed to provide revisions to proposed annual goals. However, minor changes were made to at least one of the annual goals originally proposed to the parent on April 25, 2025. There is clear evidence of the district's attempt to reconvene the IEP team for further discussion of the parent's concerns regarding the student's goals, but the parent ultimately opted to consent to the two goals proposed by the district as well as other changes outlined in the district's prior written notice form. Under these circumstances, a violation of special education statutes and regulations is not substantiated on this issue.

Issue Four

The district removed a safety plan from the student's IEP without the parent's agreement.

Position of the Parent

The parent asserts that he did not agree to the removal of a safety plan from the student's IEP. It is the opinion of the parent that while the plan might have needed modification to remove aspects related to self-injury associated with suicidal ideation, a safety plan should remain in place to ensure the safety of other students.

Position of the District

It is the position of the district that while the parent did, on May 20, 2025, send an email to the student's special education teacher (case manager) asking why the safety plan had been removed from the student's proposed BIP, the parent did not make any specific request either at the April 25, 2025 annual IEP team meeting or during the remainder of the 2024-25 school year that the district continue to include a safety plan in the student's IEP.

The district asserts that the BIP included in the IEP initially proposed by the IEP team on April 25, 2025 and agreed to by the parent on May 23, 2025 includes strategies specifically designed to address the parent's concerns regarding the prevention of injury to other students by the student.

The district contends that had the parent made a specific request to include such a safety plan in the student's revised IEP, that request would have been given due consideration.

Applicable Statutes and Regulations

At K.S.A. 72-3430(b)6, special education statutes require that a district obtain the informed written consent of the parent before making a substantial change in placement (more than 25% of the child's school day) or a material change in services (25% or more of the frequency or duration of any one service). Adding or deleting a service is a material change in services because it is a 100% change of both the frequency and the duration of that service. If the parent refuses to consent to add or delete a service, the school may, but is not required to, pursue the action by using mediation or due process procedures.

At K.S.A. 72-3430(b)(2), special education statutes also require that parents be given prior written notice when the district proposes to make a change to the provision of special education and related services or placement that is not substantial or material even though parental consent is not required for these changes.

When parents make a request for an evaluation, KSDE (the Kansas State Department of Education) has determined that, unless there is an unusual circumstance, 15 school days is a reasonable time for providing parents with a Prior Written Notice of the district's proposal to conduct the evaluation or the district's refusal to conduct the evaluation (See KSDE Memo, "Reasonable Time" to respond to parent request for evaluation, January 8, 2002, at https://www.ksde.gov/Default.aspx?tabid=614). KSDE also applies this same standard with regard to any parent request related to identification, evaluation, placement, or the provision of FAPE.

It is important to note that a change in the instructional methodology used to provide a service, even if the methodology is specified in an IEP, is not a material change in services. For example, a change to a strategy within a behavior intervention plan is a change in the instructional methodology, not a material change in services.

Investigative Findings

The BIP in the student's April 2024 IEP contains the heading entitled "Safety Plan" with an option to check "Yes" or "No." As of April 30, 2024, the "Yes" option had been selected. According to the parent and the district, the student was at that time expressing suicidal ideations which the IEP team (made up of staff at the student attended during his Kindergarten year) addressed.

The district provided a copy of a document entitled "Safety Plan: Self Harm" written by the school social worker on September 26, 2024. According to that document, the student should use his safety plan "when I feel increasingly agitated, when I feel like I'm a bad person, when I feel like I want to go to Heaven as an escape." During those times, the student could use coping strategies like "hold my stuffie 'Puppy,' take deep breaths, wrapy [sic] myself up securely in a blanket, color." For support, the student could "check in with [the special education teacher or the school social worker] or any other staff I feel safe with." The parent was listed as someone the student trusted who could "help me during a crisis."

Both the district and the parent (in a telephone call with the investigator on June 12, 2025) agreed that the student had not expressed suicidal ideation since his transfer to his current school for the 2024-25 school year.

When a draft revision to the student's IEP was proposed to the parents on April 25, 2025, the Safety Plan section of the proposed BIP was checked "No." That box was also checked in the revised document sent to the parent via email on May 20, 2025 by the student's special education teacher.

The staffing summary from the April 25, 2025 annual IEP team review meeting does not reflect any discussion of the discontinuation of a safety plan for the student.

At 1:12 PM on May 20, 2025, the student's special education teacher sent an email to the parent which included

> "...the IEP that we updated from our last [April 25, 2025] meeting. I included the goal that is in place now, the two goals that we want to add, and the BIP. Please let me know if you have any questions."

The parent responded via email at 1:16 PM that same date writing

> "Why does [the student] currently have a safety plan on his BIP, but not on his new proposed BIP?"

The special education teacher responded at 6:28 AM on May 22, 2025 writing

> "Good morning! There is no safety plan for the current BIP as [the student] is not displaying the behavior that it was written for. The safety plan that he had was due to statements of suicidal ideation. Those statements are not being made so a safety plan for that is no longer deemed necessary. I hope that this explains the reasoning for not having a safety plan..."

The parent responded via email at 8:18 AM on May 22, 2025 writing

> "Okay I'll be back in town between tonight and the morning, I should have everything signed and dropped off at the school tomorrow."

On May 23, 2025 the parent sent an email to the executive director of special education and the student's special education teacher stating

> "I signed the IEP forms through blue ink. Thank you ladies! Have a wonderful summer!"

No evidence was provided to show that the parent objected to the change in the student's BIP.

It is important to note that, aside from the change to the use of a safety plan, the district made other changes to the student's BIP when revising the student's IEP. These revisions included changes related to target behavior, strengths of the student, replacement behaviors, reinforcement strategies, reactive planning, data collection, and follow-up. None of these changes, however, constitute a material change in services (25% or more change in the frequency or duration of a service) because these changes were merely changes to the methods to be used in the BIP, but they made no change to either the frequency or duration of the BIP itself.

No reference to these changes was included in the prior written notice form provided to the parent on May 20, 2025.

Summary and Conclusions

The district is allowed to make changes to the structure and content of the behavior plan for the student without first obtaining the written consent of the parent. As noted above under the "Applicable Statutes and Regulations" section of this issue, a change to a strategy within a behavior intervention plan is a change in the instructional methodology, not a material change in services.

The parent should nonetheless be provided with prior written notice that this non-material change has been made.

Because when providing the parent with prior notice of proposed changes to the student's IEP the district failed to call out the non-material changes to the student's BIP, a violation of special education statutes and regulations is identified with regard to this issue.

Additional Comments

The staffing summary shows that at the April 25, 2025 annual IEP review meeting, the team engaged in discussion about one of the Supplementary Aids and Services/Accommodations included in the student's April 2024 IEP – the use of a "Token Board/Tracking System." The district proposed that the provision of this token system be continued under the new IEP. However, the parent strongly opposed the continued use of a token system, stating that he didn't "want [the student] to earn a reward for the behavior he should be doing [and didn't] want it used anymore [sic]."

The district removed the accommodation from the student's IEP when presenting its proposed revision to the IEP to the parent on May 20, 2023. However, the prior written notice form provided to the parent on that same date did not call out the removal of the accommodation and did not request written parental consent for the discontinuation of this service.

Because the district did not obtain the written consent of the parent for the removal of this accommodation, a violation of special education statutes and regulations is identified.

Additionally, the prior written notice form provided to the parent on May 20, 2025 specified a change in social work services. Specifically, the social work services which were to be provided in a special education setting were to be reduced from 20 minutes twice weekly to 15 minutes twice weekly – a reduction of 25% in services. While the form recognized that this represented a change in services, the district checked the box to indicate that this change did not require the consent of the parent. However, because this change would result in a decrease of 25% in services, parental consent was required.

The parent signed the prior notice form on May 23, 2025 giving his written "consent for the special education placement and services action(s) in this notice for my child." Nonetheless, because the district failed to properly notify the parent that the change in social work services represented a material change in services, a procedural violation of special education statutes and regulations is identified.

Issue Five

By removing the student for special education services beyond the level of services specified in the student's IEP, the district failed to follow the student's IEP

Position of the Parent

The parent asserts that reports provided by the district regarding ESI incidents show that the student has been removed from the general education environment and placed in a special education setting for greater portions of the school day than required by the IEP.

The parent contends that an April 29, 2025 ESI report provided to him by the district showed that the student was in the resource room at the time the intervention was initiated. According to the parent, the student should have been in a general education classroom at that time.

The parent asserts that when he came to school on May 23, 2025 to pick the student up for the day at 2:40 PM, the student was not in the general education setting participating in science or social studies instruction as his daily schedule showed he should have been. Rather, the student was in a separate setting being monitored by two of the three staff members who had been involved in an ESI with the student (per an ESI form for that date). The ESI Documentation Form shows that the student's seclusion for that ESI incident ended at 1:43 PM.

Position of the District

It is the position of the district that the BIP included in the student's April 2024 IEP outlined interventions for target behaviors which could result in the student's removal from his scheduled class activities in order to address inappropriate behavior. These interventions could result in the removal of the student from a general education classroom setting, thereby resulting in a reduction in the amount of time the student spent in the general education setting on a given day. The district asserts that the parent was aware of and agreed to the district's BIP.

Applicable Statutes and Regulations

As stated above under Issue One, federal regulations, at 34 C.F.R. 300.101, require states to ensure that a free appropriate public education (FAPE) is made available to all children with disabilities residing within the state. Accordingly, Kansas regulations at K.A.R. 91-40-2(b)(1) require that each school district makes FAPE available to each child with a disability residing in its jurisdiction. Federal regulations, at 34 C.F.R. 300.17, define FAPE, in part, as special education and related services provided in conformity with an Individualized Education Program (IEP).

Investigative Findings

As noted in a letter from the building principal to the parent dated April 22, 2025, emergency safety interventions (ESIs) are utilized with students in the district when the student exhibits "behavior that presented a reasonable and immediate danger of physical harm to [the student] or others." ESI interventions involve the use of seclusion or physical restraint. These interventions can be used in situations involving students who have been determined eligible for special education services and those who have not. Specific rules have been developed regarding the application of an ESI; these rules are not governed by special education statutes and regulations.

Behavior Intervention Plans (BIPs) can also be utilized for both general education students and special education students. If a special education student has a behavior plan, that plan becomes a part of the student's IEP.

The parent participated in the development of the student's April 2024 IEP. According to that IEP, the student was – for the 2024-25 school year – to receive 275 minutes of special education services in a special education setting for 3 days each week and 255 minutes of special education services in a special education setting for 2 days each week.

The BIP included in the student's April 2024 IEP notes that > "[The student] requires an alternate quiet setting with limited stimuli in order to remain regulated."

According to the BIP, if the student is in a general education setting at the time he displays physical aggression, staff will > "…evacuate the classroom of other students or if possible safely escort [the student] to a safe location."

On April 29, 2025, an ESI was initiated at 2:22 PM. According to schedules presented to the investigator by both the parent and the district, the student was in a special education setting at that time, having left the general education setting at 2:10 PM. The ESI intervention ended at 2:43 PM. No evidence was presented by the parent to show that the student was kept from returning to a general education classroom setting for 7 minutes before going to the resource room as scheduled at 3:00 PM to end his school day.

On May 23, 2025, the last day of the 2024-25 school year, an ESI was initiated at 1:22 PM. The intervention ended at 1:43 PM. No evidence was provided to the investigator by either party to show whether the student did or did not leave the ESI setting for the general education setting. According to the schedules for the student provided by the parties, the student would have been in a special education setting between 2:10 and 2:30 PM and in a general education classroom setting between 2:30 and 3:00 PM at which time the student would have returned to the special education classroom. The parent states that he arrived at school "around 2:40 pm" and found that the student wasn't in the general education classroom.

According to the executive director of special education, the building principal states that the student follows his daily schedule unless his behavior has prompted the use of interventions specified in the BIP contained in the student's IEP.

Summary and Conclusions

The parent asserts that the district has violated special education statutes and regulations by failing to provide the student with opportunities to participate in the general education environment in the manner specified in his IEP. To support this contention, the parent points to two occasions surrounding ESIs when the parent alleges that the student was not in the general education environment as his daily schedule suggests he should have been.

On April 29, 2025, the student was in the special education setting at the time an ESI was initiated. Schedules provided by the parent and the district both show that the student should have been in a special education setting at that time. No evidence was provided to show that the student was not allowed to exit the special education setting and enter the general education setting following the ESI.

On May 23, 2025, the parent alleges that the student was still being secluded at 2:40 PM when the parent arrived to pick the student up from school. That day's 14-minute ESI had concluded at 1:43 PM at which time the student would – per his schedule -- have been in a special education setting. Based on the schedules provided to the investigator by the parties, the student would have entered a general education classroom at 2:30 PM. It is, therefore, possible that the student could have missed up to 10 minutes of general education opportunity by the time the parent arrived to take the student home.

The application of an ESI is not controlled by special education statutes and regulations. An investigation of general education time missed because of the use of such an intervention falls outside the purview of this investigator.

The BIP contained in the student's April 2024 IEP states that should the student display physical aggression, the student may be removed from a general education setting and escorted to a safe location.

While this investigator cannot rule out the possibility that the student did – on one occasion specified by the parent – miss out on up to 10 minutes of general education opportunities, no evidence was presented to suggest that the continued removal of the student to a special education setting was not the result of the application of the student's behavior plan.

This investigation found no evidence to support the parent's contention that the district is systematically removing the student from the general education setting by failing to follow the student's established daily schedule. Under these circumstances, a violation of special education statutes and regulations is not substantiated on this issue.

Issue Six

The district failed to provide the parent with proper prior written notice of proposed changes to the student's IEP.

Position of the Parent

The parent asserts that he has not yet been provided with a summary of or minutes from the student's April 25, 2025 IEP meeting or any documents reflecting his refusal of proposed services or proposed revisions to the student's IEP.

Position of the District

The district asserts prior written notice of changes to the student's IEP was not provided to the parent following the April 25, 2025 meeting because the IEP team did not reach any final decisions on that date. Rather, the team had agreed to reconvene for further discussion wherein concerns expressed by the parent during the April 25th meeting could be addressed. The district contends that it did not finalize a proposed IEP until May 25, 2025 at which time the parent was provided with prior written notice of the district's proposed changes to the IEP.

Applicable Statutes and Regulations

As stated above under Issue Four, parents must within a reasonable time be provided with prior written notice of a substantial change in placement or a material change in services.

Investigative Findings

As outlined in previous issues above, the district convened an annual review of the student's IEP on April 25, 2025. The IEP team had not reached consensus on a number of issues by the time the meeting concluded, and the decision was made to reconvene for further discussion.

As outlined above under Issue Four, the team considered May 14, 15, and 19, 2025 as possible dates to reconvene, but none of these dates proved workable.

After the parent contacted the district on May 19, 2025 to say he would not be available for the proposed meeting that day, the executive director of special education responded to the parent explaining that they had reached the last week of school for the year and staff would no longer be under contract and available after May 23, 2025. She stated that the IEP that had been proposed on April 25, 2025 had been revised and told the parent he would receive revised copies of the IEP the following day, May 20, 2025. In the email, the executive director told the parent he could "opt to sign them or we can have [a] continuance meeting to review and finalize."

The case manager (special education teacher) sent an email to the parent on May 20, 2025 attaching the revised IEP which included staffing summaries from meetings on April 22 and 25, 2025. The parent responded with an email on May 22, 2025 asking a question about the BIP which was contained in the proposed IEP. After receiving the case manager's answer, the parent wrote back stating that he would "have everything signed and dropped off at the school tomorrow [May 23, 2025, the last day of the 2024-25 school year]."

On May 23, 2025 the parent sent an email to the executive director of special education and the student's special education teacher stating

"I signed the IEP forms through blue ink. Thank you ladies! Have a wonderful summer!"

In a telephone call with the investigator on June 12, 2025, the parent stated that he decided to go ahead and sign the documents thinking that the team could meet in the Fall if necessary.

The district provided the investigator with a copy of the initial draft IEP presented to the parent on April 25, 2025 and a copy of the revised proposed IEP sent to the parent on May 20, 2025. A comparison of these two documents shows that the district removed an accommodation at the request of the parent (the use of a token board tracking system). The revised IEP reflected parental input not outlined in the original proposed document as well as a BIP.

The district provided the investigator with copies of the documents dated April 25, 2025, signed in blue ink by the parent and returned to the district on May 23, 2025. Those documents included a revised IEP (including the staffing summaries) and a prior written notice form which outlined proposed changes to the student's IEP including a 4% increase in special education support in the special education setting for "resource core instructions and social skills" and a 25% reduction (10 minutes) in social work services in a special education setting. The prior notice also detailed the two goals the student would be working on during the upcoming school year.

Summary and Conclusions

No final decisions regarding the student's IEP were made during the April 25, 2025 team meeting. The district proposed multiple dates for a follow up meeting for further discussion of the parent's concerns. After the parent notified the district that he was unavailable for a scheduled meeting on May 19, 2025, the district – on May 20, 2025 – sent an email to the parent containing a copy of the IEP which contained staffing reports of previous meetings as well as revisions made in response to feedback provided by the parent at the April 25, 2025 meeting. On that same date, the district also provided the parent with prior written notice of proposed changes to the IEP. The executive director of special education had explained to the parent in an email the previous day that he could opt to accept the IEP or the team could hold a future meeting for further discussion. The parent signed off on the prior notice form, opting to consent to the proposed changes.

The annual review and revision of the student's IEP was not completed at the April 25, 2025 team meeting. The district was under no obligation to provide the parent with prior written notice of proposed changes at that time since no decisions had been made. It was only after the parent became unavailable for a schedule follow up meeting that it became clear to the district that another meeting could not be scheduled before the end of the 2024-25 school year. At that point, the district made the decision to provide the parent with a revised proposal for the student's IEP as well as prior written notice of proposed changes to the IEP. These documents were timely sent to the parent, one day after the May 19, 2025 meeting had been cancelled.

Under these circumstances, a violation of special education statutes and regulations is not substantiated on this issue.

Corrective Action

Information gathered in the course of this investigation has substantiated noncompliance with special education statutes and regulations on issues presented in this complaint or identified through the course of this investigation. Violation were identified with regard to

- K.S.A. 72-3430(b)6, which requires that a district obtain the informed written consent of the parent before making a material change in services (25% or more of the frequency or duration of any one service). In this case, the district failed to inform the parent that it was making a material change by reducing social work services by 25% and failed to obtain the written consent of the parent before discontinuing an accommodation.
- K.S.A. 72-3430(b)(2), which requires that parents be given prior written notice when the district proposes to make a change to the provision of special education and related services or placement that is not substantial or material even though parental consent is not required for these changes. Here, the district failed to provide the parent with notice of changes to the student's BIP.

Therefore, USD #475 is directed to take the following actions:

1. Submit to Special Education and Title Services (SETS) by no later than August 1, 2025, a written statement of assurance stating that it will comply with a. K.S.A. 72-3430(b)6 by obtaining the informed written consent of parents by clearly notifying them when a proposed change represents a material change in services or before removing an accommodation from a student's IEP; and
    b. K.S.A. 72-3430(b)(2) by giving parents prior written notice before making a change to the provision of special education services such as a BIP even if the consent of the parent is not required for that change.
2. By no later than August 1, 2025, USD #475 shall
    a. Provide the parent with a revised prior written notice of proposed changes to the student's IEP including changes to the BIP, social work services, and the discontinuation of the token-related accommodation. The parent shall be informed that the proposed accommodation and social work service change represent a material change in services, and the written consent of the parent shall be obtained before these changes are implemented.

b. The district shall provide SETS a copy of the revised prior written notice form no later than August 5, 2025.

3. By no later than August 1, 2025, USD #475 shall submit to SETS a plan for training staff at the student's building regarding prior notice requirements associated with the findings of this complaint.

Further, USD #475 shall, within 20 calendar days of the date of this report, submit to SETS one of the following:

a) A statement verifying acceptance of the corrective action or actions specified in this report;

b) a written request for an extension of time within which to complete one or more of the corrective actions specified in the report together with justification for the request; or

c) a written notice of appeal. Any such appeal shall be in accordance with K.A.R. 91-40-51(f).

Background Information

The subject of this complaint is a 5 year old student who recently completed preschool and will enroll in kindergarten for the 2025-2026 school year. The student's parents do not live in the same home but share legal custody and the student spends time in each parent's home. The student qualified for special education services in March 2024 under the exceptionality of Developmental Delay. Since the student initially qualified for services there have been two additional evaluations; an independent evaluation on October 11, 2024 resulting in additional diagnoses of Autism Spectrum Disorder (AHD) and Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD), combined presentation and a district reevaluation, report dated May 14, 2025.

The current IEP amendment dated May 14, 2025 includes four goals; speech/language, transitioning, number identification, and letter identification including upper and lower case.

- The special education services for the 2024-2025 IEP year included:
    - 180 minutes in the special education classroom, 2 days per week for social/emotional, math and literacy goals
    - 160 minutes in the special education classroom, 2 days per week for social/emotional, math and literacy goals
- Special education services for the 2025-2026 IEP year include:
    - 30 minutes of direct services in a regular education classroom, 5 days per week for social/emotional, math and literacy goals
    - 60 minutes of direct services outside of a regular education classroom, 5 days per week for social/emotional, math and literacy goals
- Related services for the 2024-2025 IEP year included:

  - 20 minutes in the special education classroom, 1 day per week for speech/language goals
  - 20 minutes of direct services outside of a regular education classroom, 1 day per week for speech/language goals
- Related services for the 2025-2026 IEP year include:
  - 20 minutes of direct services outside of a regular education classroom, 2 days per week for speech/language goals
- Amended related services for the 2024-2025 and 2025-2026 IEP years:
  - 20 minutes of direct services outside of a regular education classroom, 1 day per week

Program Modifications, Accommodations, and Supplementary Aids and Services listed in the May 14, 2025 IEP include:

1. Access to headphones
2. Access to a choice of learned calm-down strategies
3. Access to first/then statements and/or visuals
4. Access to social stories and visuals for new and un-preferred activities
5. Use of verbal praise paired with reinforcement
6. Use of verbal redirections during classroom and therapy activities
7. Use of visual/picture supports to aide in the understanding and expression of language skills

Issues Investigated

Based on the written complaint and an interview with the complainant, four concerns which fall under IDEA regulations were identified and investigated.

Issue One

Did USD #204 deny the father his rights to be a member of any decision making team for his child, including eligibility, initial evaluation, reevaluation, development and amendment of an individualized education program (IEP) for the provision of a free appropriate public education (FAPE)?

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at CFR 300.300 Parental Consent. (a) Parental consent for initial evaluation; (b) Parental consent for services; and (c) Parental consent for reevaluations address the specific requirements to engage parents fully in the IEP process. Additionally, K.A.R. 91-40-25 states that parents have an opportunity to examine records and participate in meetings. (a) Each agency shall allow the parents of an exceptional child an opportunity to inspect and review all education records and participate in any meeting concerning their child with respect to the following: (1) The identification, evaluation, or education placement of the child; and (2) the provision of FAPE to the child.

Parent Position

The father's formal complaint alleges a number of ways the district excluded him from contributing to educational decision making for his child which included the lack of notification for IEP meetings, lack of PWNs, lack of notification for changes in services, lack of progress reports, and apparent revocation of his parent portal access. He states, "…the IEP paperwork suggests that the district treated [the student] as having only one educational decision-maker…"

District Position

The district response dated June 25, 2025 states, "Upon reviewing information for this complaint, it was discovered that in the student's enrollment file with [the district], the birth certificate does not list [the father] as a parent. The district is not aware of, or [has] access to any other legal document indicating [the father] as a legal guardian for the student".

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The following finding of facts is based upon a review of the documentation noted previously and interviews with all parties.

1. The court ordered Joint Parenting Plan states the student's parents have, "Joint Legal Custody [which] means that both parents have equal rights to participate in, contribute to, and have responsibility for their child's health, education, and general welfare in their child's best interests".
2. The father's name is listed as an educational decision maker on the initial IEP dated March 26, 2024, but his contact information is not included.
3. The teacher sent a message via the parent portal to the father on September 11, 2024 to schedule the spring 2025 IEP which was seen by the father, but not replied to
4. The May 14, 2025 reevaluation report mentions the father, "[The student] goes to [their] dad's house on Friday nights and alternates every other weekend".
5. The father sent a message to the special education teacher via the parent portal about the student's upcoming absences and included his email address and phone number on April 17, 2025.
6. The father sent an email to the special education coordinator noting difficulty accessing the parent portal and requesting IEP documents, dated June 6, 2025.
7. The special education coordinator responded to the father with the requested IEP documents, sent June 9, 2025 at 11:46 a.m.
8. The father sent an email to the special education coordinator, noting for the first time his status as a joint legal custodian, sent June 9, 2025 at 12:06 p.m.

9. Email from the father to the cooperative director noting the lack of communication from the school related to his child's IEP and his inability to log into the parent portal, send June 10, 2025
10. Email from the father to the special education teacher sharing his difficulty accessing the parent portal and lack of inclusion in IEP related meetings, sent June 10, 2025
11. The special education coordinator responded asking the father to contact the school office in August to gain access to the parent portal and the coordinator's commitment to ensure the student's case manager is aware that communications and meeting invites should also be sent to the father, sent June 11, 2025 at 9:15 a.m.
12. Email from the principal to the father on June 16, 2025 at 11:16 a.m. offering an explanation for his lack of parent portal access (due to a change in portal versions) and directions on how to regain access when school begins in the fall.
13. In a June 16, 2025 interview with the father he shared that he was notified of the initial IEP meeting (March 26, 2024) but couldn't attend due to work.
14. An email from father to the investigator on June 17, 2025 lists several of his concerns related to lack of representation at the IEP meetings including notes reflecting the student's emotional difficulty transitioning into his care and the IEP team's suggestion that the student experienced academic and behavioral regression due to the student's absence while in the father's care.
15. In a phone conversation with the special education coordinator on June 23, 2025 she reported that the although the father's name was included in the student's district preschool registration his contact information was not included, his name did not appear on the student's birth certificate and the district had no legal documentation that the father was one of the student's legal guardians.
16. The district's June 25, 2025 response stated, "The teacher did send a message in September 2024 via district app regarding scheduling of the annual IEP meeting. Records show that [the father] did see the message but did not reply. [The father's] first and only contact with the teacher was the April 2025 message which is also when we learned of his contact information".
17. In an email exchange between the father and the investigator on June 27, 2025, the father wrote, "I did not personally deliver the Joint Parenting Plan to the school. However, I am listed as [the student's] father on her IEP, and the district included behavioral analysis describing difficulties [they] experienced during transitions to my home."
18. In the special education teacher interview on June 30, 2025 the teacher noted that she shared a QR code with the mother on back to school night that gave parents access to the parent portal. The mother offered to share the code with the father. When the teacher noticed the father had gained access to the parent portal the teacher assumed there had been communication between the parents. Additionally the teacher stated, "mom provided dad's name and said that she would pass information on to him."

19. The teacher also shared that through the parent portal dad was asked about an early spring IEP (2/20/25) meeting date, viewed the message, but didn't reply. When asked why the father hadn't been invited to the March 2025 IEP meeting the teacher replied, "I hadn't received any communication from him and I had gotten great communication from mom and only needed one parent to agree to the meeting".
20. In the principal interview on June 30, 2025 she shared, "In Skyward [the student information system] there was not a different phone number or address listed for the father, typically when information is listed like that it is assumed people live at the same address".

Conclusion

There seems to be confusion on the district's part between their obligation to provide notice to each parent and their obligation to gain consent from one parent. IDEA 34 C.F.R. § 300.300 requires informed consent from one parent for evaluation, initial services, and reevaluation. However, the Kansas Special Education Handbook states, "If parents are divorced, regardless of which parent has primary custody, the school must provide Prior Written Notice of any special education action to both parents, even if only one parent has the right to consent, unless a court order precludes this from happening. This applies to all special education notice requirements including notice of an IEP meeting. If the school is only aware of one parent's address, the school must make reasonable efforts to locate the other parent in order to provide notice. However, consent from one parent is sufficient. In the event that the school receives consent forms from both parents, with one parent providing consent for the action and the other denying consent, the school is deemed to have received consent and must fulfill its obligation to provide FAPE to the student. The parent who denies consent has the right to request mediation or file for due process." (p. 3).

Although the student's parents were never married and thus not divorced, the father meets the definition of a parent as noted in K.S.A. 72-3404. Definitions. (m) "Parent" means: (1) A natural parent; (2) an adoptive parent; (3) a person acting as parent; (4) a legal guardian; (5) an education advocate; or (6) a foster parent, if the foster parent has been appointed the education advocate of an exceptional child. Additionally the father was treated as a parent by the district on a number of occasions as evidenced by:

- the father's name is listed as a parent on the initial March 2024 IEP,
- an IEP scheduling question sent through the parent portal,
- mentions of him in IEP team minutes, and
- the sharing of IEP information upon the father's request in June 2025.

It is noted that the district quickly shared the IEP related information when the father sent a request. It is also noted that the district had an easy working relationship with the mother who offered to share information with the father and also that the father read, but did not respond to, a parent portal message, nonetheless, the district had an obligation to notify the father about IDEA related issues and actions.

Parent participation is foundational to IDEA and the district has the power to set the tone for parent partnerships which can be a powerful influence on a student's educational success. Research supports early intervention for students who have disabilities and the role of the family as partners in this work, should not be taken lightly. The investigator strongly suggests a policy and procedure review of student intake and registration in regards to gathering information about the family structure to ensure all parents are listed, including full contact information for each. The investigator also encourages the father to consider that he may well have a relationship with this district for many years to come and that focusing on building positive relationships with teachers and administrators can help clarify the sometimes confusing and overwhelming IDEA landscape.

In this case, the district failed to notify the father of all IEP related actions and issues as required by K.A.R. 91-40-25 which denied him of his right to be an active member of the IEP team.

Based on the foregoing, The district is OUT of compliance for Issue One, and corrective actions are required.

Issue Two

Did USD #204 fail to amend the student's most recent IEP considering the student's ASD and ADHD diagnoses?

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 300.324(b)(ii)(B) state that in the public agency must (ii) Revise the IEP, as appropriate, to address (B) The results of any reevaluation conducted under §300.303;

Parent Position

In a June 16, 2025 email, the parent stated, "[the student] was formally diagnosed in October 2024 with Autism Spectrum Disorder and ADHD – Combined Presentation, as confirmed in [the student's] reevaluation on 05/14/2025. Despite this, the IEP continues to classify [the student] only as Developmentally Delayed, with no autism-specific or ADHD-specific goals, accommodations, or service models. There is no documented IEP team discussion or reevaluation consideration regarding eligibility under Autism…"

District Position

The district response dated June 25, 2025 states, "It should be noted that upon knowledge of the ADHD and ASD diagnoses and ongoing observed behavior concerns, the IEP team conducted a re-evaluation in the area of social/emotional and subsequently completed an amendment to the IEP in May 2025. The amendment acknowledges the diagnoses, and added additional services in the area of social work. A social/emotional goal was added during the annual IEP in March 2025".

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The following finding of facts is based upon a review of the documentation noted previously and interviews with all parties. The findings of previous issues are incorporated herein by reference.

1. An October 11, 2024 independent social/emotional evaluation report for the student reflects new diagnoses of ASD and ADHD, combined presentation.
2. The independent social/emotional evaluation was initiated by the mother.
3. The March 14, 2025 IEP includes evidence that the team responded to the student's difficulties in transitioning between activities by including a new IEP goal, "By March 13, 2026, when given a verbal prompt to initiate a familiar routine activity, [the student] will get the correct supplies (e.g. paper, pencil, markers) and begin the activity within (30) seconds for (4 out of 5) activities".
4. The March 14, 2025 IEP includes two new accommodations (in italics) for social/emotional needs:
    a. access to a choice of learned calm-down strategies
    b. FIRST/THEN statements and/or visuals
    c. social stories and visuals for new and un-preferred activities
    d. verbal praise paired with reinforcement
    e. verbal redirections during classroom and therapy activities
5. The March 14, 2025 IEP also notes that the student was currently under evaluation for possible social work services and on a waitlist for ABA therapy.
6. The March 14, 2025 PWN does not include the independent evaluation results as a consideration for a change in services. There is no evidence in the March 14, 2025 IEP that the independent evaluation results were reviewed or considered.
7. The May 14, 2025 district's reevaluation report notes the new diagnoses of ASD and ADHD from the October 11, 2024 independent evaluation as well as the addition of a social work support to develop self-regulation skills and strategies when [the student] feels overwhelmed or frustrated.
8. The May 14, 2025 amended IEP present levels section notes, "[The student] is diagnosed with Autism Spectrum Disorder and Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD), combined presentation, from independent evaluation in October 2024. [The student] is currently on a waiting list for ABA therapy services with [outside evaluator] and [outside service provider]".
9. In the June 23, 2025 phone call with the special education coordinator she said, "the district isn't aware of the October, 2024 independent evaluation, nor is the classroom teacher". She also shared that the report was not in their IEP documents management system.

10. In the June 30, 2025 interview with the special education teacher, she reported hearing that an independent evaluation had been conducted but could not specifically remember if the mother shared this news directly, or through the school secretary. The teacher stated, "Our parent/teacher conferences happened October 16 and 17, [2024], [the mother] may have told me then or may have told the secretary who relayed the message. The mother told us it had happened but I didn't see the report until the May [2025] IEP amendment meeting." During the interview the special education teacher checked her emails to see if perhaps the mother had emailed the report but found no correspondence related to the independent evaluation. The special education teacher added that if the mother would have handed her the evaluation report she would have immediately uploaded it into the IEP document management system.
11. In the June 30, 2025 interview with the special education teacher, when asked about the new diagnoses found by the October 11, 2024 independent evaluation, "What we were doing in the special education classroom was addressing ASD and ADHD behaviors. The diagnosis wouldn't have changed what I had in place for [the student]. The needs are displayed without the diagnosis".
12. In the June 30, 2025 interview with the special education teacher, when asked why the district reevaluation was initiated in the spring of 2025 she replied, "I had concerns about [the student] transitioning into the building. We had handled it, but worried that there would be a backslide in kindergarten".
13. When the special education coordinator was asked in the June 30, 2025 interview why the district conducted a reevaluation she shared that the team was, "seeing some behaviors and social emotional concerns".
14. In an email exchange with the special education coordinator on July 1, 2025 when asked when the district received the independent evaluation report she shared, "I spoke with [the social worker]. She recalls having received the report from [the special education teacher] sometime around December/January. This occurred in person and we do not have an email record of it. [The social worker] then included [the independent evaluation] in her re-evaluation conducted in the Spring". When the special education coordinator was asked if the social worker had any documentation of sharing the report results with the IEP team anytime prior to the May IEP amendment meeting, she replied, "[The social worker] said she received it from [the special education teacher] so the case manager already had it. [The social worker] does not have an email record of anything about the report. It may have been discussed in person between team members".

Conclusion

Federal regulations at 300.324(b)(ii)(B) state that in the public agency must (ii) Revise the IEP, as appropriate, to address (B) The results of any reevaluation conducted under §300.303;

Additionally, 34 CFR § 300.502(c)(1) addresses how districts should consider Independent educational evaluation. "(c) Parent-initiated evaluations. If the parent obtains an independent educational evaluation at public expense or shares with the public agency an evaluation obtained at private expense, the results of the evaluation—(1) Must be considered by the public agency, if it meets agency criteria, in any decision made with respect to the provision of FAPE to the child;"

In this case, the independent evaluation report is dated October 11, 2024 and notes two new diagnoses. There is no evidence that the report results were acknowledged or considered by the IEP team prior to, or at, the student's March 26, 2024 IEP meeting as evidenced by a PWN or comment in the IEP minutes. IDEA requires that independent evaluations at least be considered by the IEP team. As noted in the district's response, they did acknowledge the independent evaluation in the May 14, 2025 IEP amendment however, this was months after they received the report in December, 2024 or January, 2025.

There is evidence that the district responded to the student's difficulty in transitioning from one activity or location to another, however, there is no evidence that the IEP team reviewed the results of the independent evaluation until the May 14, 2025 reevaluation/IEP amendment meeting. Additionally, neither the special education coordinator nor special education teacher cite the new diagnoses as impetus for the district's reevaluation in the spring of 2025.

The district is not clear as to when the report was received or even who received it, and has no evidence that anyone other than the social worker was aware of the report's new diagnoses prior to the May 14, 2025 meeting.

Based on the foregoing, it is found that the IEP team did not acknowledge or consider the results of the October 2024 evaluation prior to, or at, the March 14, 2025 IEP team meeting. The district is OUT of compliance and corrective actions are required.

Issue Three

Did USD #204 fail to include a description of the child's progress towards the annual IEP goals in progress reports or the report card?

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 300.320(a)(2)(i) and (3)(i) state that the IEP must include measurable goals and descriptions of the child's progress toward meeting these annual goals. Additionally, the Kansas Special Education Process Handbook states, "Once the IEP team has developed measurable annual goals for a child, the team must include a description of how the child's progress toward meeting the annual goals will be measured. This measure of progress will enable parents, children, and educators to monitor progress during the year, and, if appropriate, to revise the IEP to be consistent with the child's instructional needs. (p. 79)

Parent Position

The parent complaint states, June 16, 2025 email, "Several progress benchmarks are marked simply as "MPG" ("Making Progress") without quantifiable data. For example, behavior regulation benchmarks are tracked with no baseline measures or objective metrics, making true progress impossible to validate".

District Position

The district response dated June 25, 2025 states, "[The district] denies this allegation. Student's progress towards IEP goals were included in the quarterly progress reports…"

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The following finding of facts is based upon a review of the documentation noted previously and interviews with all parties. The findings of previous issues are incorporated herein by reference.

1. Baseline for the IEP goals are included in the IEP document. For example, the baseline for the social/emotional goal in the May 14, 2025 IEP amendment reads, "Currently, [the student] can take up to 5 minutes to both enter the classroom upon arrival, and before beginning [their] daily work routines."
2. The quarterly progress reports include acronyms such as NMP (not making progress) and MPG (making progress) as quarterly data.
3. A review of all progress reports since the first quarter of the 2024-2025 school year reflect the use of quantifiable data in the goals, benchmarks and description of progress. For example:
    a. The social/emotional goal for the fourth quarter of 2025 states, "By March 13, 2026, when given a verbal prompt to initiate a familiar routine activity, [the student] will get the correct supplies (e.g. paper, pencil, markers) and begin the activity within (30) seconds for (4 out of 5) activities.
    b. The benchmark for that same quarter states, "By the end of quarter 4, May 2025, when given a verbal prompt to initiate a familiar routine activity, [the student] will get the correct supplies (e.g. paper, pencil, markers) and begin the activity within 3 minutes for (1 out of 5) activities.
    c. The description of progress states, "[The student] is able to initiate a familiar routine activity within 3 minutes, at least one time, in the 5 observed data collection days once [they are] in the classroom. [The student] still struggles to enter the classroom approximately once per week".

Conclusion

IDEA requires that the IEP must include measurable goals and descriptions of the child's progress toward meeting these annual goals.

The parent's concern was that there were no baseline measures nor quantifiable data and that the use of acronyms to report progress were not specific enough to understand how the student was progressing.

In this case, there is quantifiable data in the baselines stated in the IEP, and the goals, benchmarks and description of progress, also include quantifiable data in addition to the use of acronyms.

Based on the foregoing, it is found that the district did include quantifiable data in the baseline, goals and description of progress for the IEP goals. The district is IN compliance and corrective actions are not required.

Issue Four

Did USD #204 fail to implement the student's IEP specifically related to the student's behavioral supports?

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.323(c)(2) requires school districts to ensure that as soon as possible following the development of the IEP, special education and related services are made available to the child in accordance with the child's IEP. K.A.R. §91-40-16(b)(2) further specifies those services for which written consent has been granted as specified by law are implemented not later than 10 school days after parental consent is granted unless reasonable justification for a delay can be shown.

Parent Position

The father cites concerns that the student was not provided with the required social/emotional support as evidenced by information included in the May 14, 2025 reevaluation report. The report shares that, "[The student] was observed one morning in February, struggling to come into the school from parent drop off. [The student began hiding [their] face and crying in the corner of the school entrance indoors. When [the student] was greeted by a Preschool teacher, [the student] ignored. Teachers were trying multiple ways creatively to help [the student] transition to the classroom. After 7-10 minutes, [the student] was able to transition into the classroom and put [their] bookbag and belongings away".

District Position

The district response dated April 24, 2025 states, "[The district] denies this allegation. In the March 2025 annual IEP, a social/emotional/behavioral goal was added into the IEP. [The student] has several accommodations as well that address this area. In May 2025, the social/emotional re-evaluation was conducted and the IEP was amended to add social work as a related service".

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The following finding of facts is based upon a review of the documentation noted previously and interviews with all parties. The findings of previous issues are incorporated herein by reference.

1. The May 15, 2025 reevaluation notes an incident of the student struggling to transition to the classroom in February 2025.
2. The March 2024 IEP was the plan in place when the February 2025 noted incident occurred. The March 2024 IEP does not include a social/emotional goal but does include accommodations including:
    a. FIRST/THEN statements and/or visuals
    b. social stories and visuals for new and un-preferred activities
    c. verbal praise paired with reinforcement
3. There is no evidence in the description of the incident in February 2025 that accommodations were not followed.
4. The March 14, 2025 IEP team added a social/emotional goal to support the student's transition skills: "By March 13, 2026, when given a verbal prompt to initiate a familiar routine activity, [the student] will get the correct supplies (e.g. paper, pencil, markers) and begin the activity within (30) seconds for (4 out of 5) activities".
5. In the June 30, 2025 teacher interview, the teacher shared multiple examples of how she regularly implemented the student's accommodations noted in the March 26, 2024 IEP, some of which are also noted in the teacher's lesson plans.
6. The special education coordinator shared in a July 2, 2025 email that consent for the district's reevaluation was obtained from the mother on March 13, 2025.
7. The March 14, 2025 IEP team also noted that, [the student] is currently under evaluation for possible Social Work services.
8. The March 14, 2025 IEP includes two new accommodations (in italics) for social/emotional needs:

1. f. access to a choice of learned calm-down strategies
2. g. FIRST/THEN statements and/or visuals
3. h. social stories and visuals for new and un-preferred activities
    i. verbal praise paired with reinforcement
4. j. verbal redirections during classroom and therapy activities

9. The May 14, 2025 IEP team amended the IEP to include social work services of 20 minutes, 1 day per week to support the March 14, 2024 IEP social/emotional goal: "Social Worker will help support this goal to develop self-regulation skills and strategies when [the student] feels overwhelmed or frustrated".

Conclusion

In February 2025 when teachers observed the student's struggle to transition to the classroom, there were only three social/emotional related accommodations in the IEP, and no social/emotional IEP goals. Soon after, the district obtained consent from the mother on March 13, 2025 for the reevaluation and during the March 14, 2025 IEP meeting, the team added two new accommodations to support the student's social/emotional behavior, a social/emotional goal and noted that, [the student] was currently under evaluation for possible Social Work services. The May 2025 IEP amendment includes social work services to support the student's social/emotional needs

The father's concerns that his child's social/emotional needs be met are certainly understandable and it can be distressing to read about one's child struggling. It is suggested that both the district and parents should monitor the student's behaviors as the student adjusts to kindergarten in the fall. If the student continues to find transitioning from one activity to the next difficult, it is appropriate for the father to request further information in the form of a Functional Behavioral Assessment (FBA) to specifically determine what is maintaining the student's behaviors and how to best address these behaviors in light of the student's ASD and ADHD diagnoses.

In this case, there is evidence that the district implemented the social/emotional accommodations during the 2024-2025 IEP year as well as responded appropriately to meet the student's needs with the addition of accommodations, a social/emotional IEP goal and social work services throughout the spring of 2025.

Based on the foregoing, it is found that the district is IN compliance and corrective actions are not required.

Summary of Conclusions/Corrective Action

1. ISSUE ONE: A violation of K.A.R. 91-40-25 was found based on the lack of parent notification for IEP related actions. Corrective actions are required.
    a. The district shall immediately, within 21 school days, by August 11, 2025, submit a written statement of assurance to Special Education and Title Services (SETS) stating that it will comply with state statutes and regulations at K.A.R. 91-40-25 which dictate parent notification and participation in the IEP process.
    b. A district administrator shall immediately, by August 21, 2025 contact the father to ensure he has all of his child's IEP related documents as well as the Parent's Rights Notice, Procedural Safeguards and missed PWNs.
    c. The district shall engage an outside provider and training materials, both approved by SETS to conduct training for all preschool staff and administrators on the school/district obligation to contact parents for IEP related issues. This training shall include:

i. distinctions between parent notification and parent consent

ii. parent participation that addresses non-traditional families such as parents who don't live in the same home.

This training shall be completed by October 1, 2025.

d. The district shall submit documentation of all IEP related documents shared with the father and required staff training to Special Education and Title Services (SETS), by October 15, 2025.

2. ISSUE TWO: A violation of 34 C.F.R.300.324(b)(ii)(B) and 34 C.F.R.300.502(c)(1) was found based on the lack of district review of independent evaluation results prior to, or, at the March 14, 2025 IEP.

a. The district shall immediately, within 21 school days, by August 11, 2025 submit a written statement of assurance to Special Education and Title Services (SETS) stating that it will comply with state and federal regulations and statutes at 34 C.F.R. 300.324(b)(ii)(B) and 34 C.F.R.300.502(c)(1) which requires the district to consider the results of independent evaluations.

b. The district shall review any policies and procedures for the handling of independent IEP evaluation to determine if the issue in this case was due to the lack of written guidance or human error. If the issue is found to be policy or procedural related, corrections will be made to these by September 30, 2025.

Background Information

This investigation involved an eighth-grade student enrolled in the District. The Student was receiving services as a child with a Specific Learning Disability per the IDEA.

In Investigative Report 25FC501-001, completed by the Complaint Investigator and dated November 15, 2024, Corrective Action #2 was written as, "Further, within 15 calendar days of the date of this report, USD #501 will convene an IEP meeting to determine how to implement and schedule up to 30 hours of compensatory services to be delivered within one calendar year. The Parent may accept all, a portion of, or none of the offered compensatory services, by notifying the [D]istrict in writing within 15 school days of the date the offer is delivered to the [P]arents. The District shall provide copies of the amended IEP and a schedule of when the compensatory services will be provided to SETS."

According to the District Response, neither party appealed the Complaint Investigator's decision in 25FC501-001.

Findings of the Investigation

The following findings are based on a review of documentation and interviews with the Parent and staff in the District.

1. In the District Response, the District explained that staff members made 17 attempts to find an instructor to tutor the Student, and the specific timeline and due date for the tutoring services were to be completed "within the current school year." These attempts were documented on the "Tutoring Contacts" Google Sheet, with dates ranging from December 30, 2024 to January 17, 2025. The District stated that since the Parent agreed to the proposal on December 2, 2024, the District only had 32 work/school days to find a tutor before the second complaint was filed on February 6, 2025. The District noted that USD #501 schools were closed for seven days in January and February 2025 due to snow.

2. On November 25, 2024, the General Director of Special Education and Special Services stated in an email to the Virtual School Special Education Consultant Teacher and the Special Education Consulting Teacher that they asked for an extension until December 3, 2024 for the IEP review and any necessary amendments.
3. On December 2, 2024, the Virtual School Special Education Consultant Teacher called the Parent to discuss a plan for the Student's compensatory services of up to 30 hours.
    a. Options discussed included:
        i. "Continuing with current tutoring for 20 minutes, two times per week, and add 100 minutes weekly through home school"; and
        ii. "Continuing with current tutoring for 20 minutes, two times per week, and adding 30 minutes, two times per week, through home school."
    b. The Parent decided for tutoring to remain at 20 minutes, two times per week, with the Teacher, and added 30 minutes, two times per week, through home school.
    c. A "Services Provided" section indicated the Teacher offered tutoring for 20 minutes for 19 days (totaling 380 minutes) on December 3, 5, 9, 10, 12, 17 and 19, 2024; and on January 14, 16, 21, 23, 28 and 30, 2025; and on February 4, 6, 11 and 13, 2025. December 17 and 19 were both listed twice.
4. The District stated that their proposal, which was discussed with and approved by the Parent, was for 30 minutes of tutoring twice a week from January to the end of the school year.
    a. The Parent emailed the Virtual School Special Education Consultant Teacher on December 2, 2024, with an acceptance of the proposal.
    b. On December 2, 2024, the Parent signed a Prior Written Notice (PWN) for Identification Initial Services, Placement, Change in Services, Change of Placement, and Request for Consent.
    c. A copy of the Student's IEP, originally dated September 16, 2024, was signed and accepted by the Parent on December 2, 2024.
5. An email from the Parent dated December 23, 2024 said, "… due to the findings in the complaint I did go over some additional things … that I think should be starting in January, such as additional tutoring to take place at [the School] two times a week on top of the times [the Student] meets with [the Teacher]. When will that begin?"
    a. The Special Education ELA Teacher replied to the Parent's email on January 16, 2025, but did not address the tutoring question.

b. The Parent replied to the Special Education ELA Teacher on January 16, 2025 and stated they had not received information about tutoring.

c. On January 17, 2025, the Parent indicated via email they were concerned their question about tutoring hours had not been answered. The same day, the General Director of Special Education and Special Services replied to the Parent and stated they would follow up about tutoring when staff returned. Also, the same day, the Special Education Consulting Teacher replied to the Parent's email and stated there was a staff member who could start tutoring in February but that they were actively looking for a tutor to start earlier.

6. The District Response stated, "On February 4, 2025, [the Dispute Resolution Coordinator] of the Kansas Department of Education emailed the District and stated, 'We have received verification that all corrective actions have been completed. Thank you. The file is now closed.'" An attachment of the letter was included in the email.

a. The same day, the Parent replied to the Dispute Resolution Coordinator and stated they disagreed because they had signed an agreement with the District to start compensatory services in January, and those services had not started yet.

b. On February 5, 2025, the General Director of Special Education and Special Services replied to the Parent and stated there was a challenge in finding a staff member who would tutor after their school day and apologized that staff had not been secured yet.

c. On February 6, 2025, the General Director of Special Education and Special Services replied to the Parent that they would work to find someone who could start tutoring the next week and make any necessary adjustments to ensure the Student received the proper services.

7. On February 14, 2025, the Virtual School Special Education Consultant Teacher called the Parent to discuss current opportunities at the School. The Parent stated the Student liked the Teacher and that their services had been helpful. The Parent asked if it was possible for the Teacher to provide any of the weekly 60 minutes of tutoring services. The Virtual School Special Education Consultant Teacher spoke with the Teacher the same day, who stated they would be happy to extend their time with the Student.

a. On February 18, 2025, the Virtual School Special Education Consultant Teacher spoke with the Parent about fulfilling the remaining 1,420 minutes of compensatory services. The Parent agreed the Student would meet with the Teacher for 60 minutes two times per week, outside of the school day, through the end of the school year on the following dates: February 18, 20, 25 and 27, 2025; March 6, 11, 25 and 27, 2025; April 1, 3, 8, 10, 15, 17, 22, 24 and 29, 2025; and May 1, 6, 8, 13, 15 and 20, 2025.

8. An IEP amendment dated February 18, 2025 indicated:

a. On February 14, 2025, the Virtual School Special Education Consultant Teacher spoke with the Parent about making up missed compensatory services.
b. On February 18, 2025, the Virtual School Special Education Consultant Teacher spoke with the Parent to finalize the tutoring schedule to make up compensatory services.
c. It was signed by the Parent on February 18, 2025.

9. A PWN for Identification Initial Services, Placement, Change in Services, Change of Placement, and Request for Consent dated February 18, 2025, detailed the plan for the Student to receive the remaining 1,420 minutes of compensatory services from February 18, 2025 through May 20, 2025. The form was signed by the Parent on February 18, 2025.

10. During interviews with the Complaint Investigator, the Parent indicated they perceived the Student's tutoring services were supposed to start in January 2025. The Parent stated they met with the Virtual School Special Education Consultant Teacher who shared with them that, "... it was 30 hours that was ... needed. ... We're gonna set this up for the second half of the school year like twice a week from January ... to the end of the school year. Is that okay with you? You know, do you accept these terms? And I said, yes ... ."

11. The Parent indicated they asked for a timeframe when the services would start and did not receive an answer. The Parent shared they were later told the District did not have any staff available to start tutoring the Student until February and were having a hard time fulfilling the request. The Parent explained that nobody addressed their email questions regarding the tutoring services, and it took several times for someone to respond.

12. The Parent said, "... somebody else that said, oh, the first complaint was completed and closed out. They satisfied all the requirements. And I said, 'no, they have not ... we're still missing this piece of that first complaint.' And I was told I had to file another complaint."

13. When asked by the Complaint Investigator about documentation for the compensatory service agreement, the Parent described receiving a Word document proposal for 30-minute tutoring sessions twice weekly at the School, supplementing the Student's existing virtual math tutoring and homework help. The Parent stated they signed a revised proposal which extended the Student's virtual sessions with the same tutor. The Parent explained the tutor had worked with the Student before, and they had a good rapport. The Parent confirmed the extra time was supposed to cover the Corrective Action but also stated it had not officially started yet.

14. During interviews with the Complaint Investigator, the General Director of Special Education and Special Services explained that the dates listed on the Corrective Action/Options/Services Provided document were dates that tutoring was provided before the Complaint Investigator issuing their findings from the investigation in November 2024. The District made arrangements with the Parent to start tutoring immediately because the District recognized that there were services missing. The General Director of Special Education and Special Services stated it was set up so the tutoring would go through the end of the year regardless of the investigative findings.

15. The General Director of Special Education and Special Services explained that tutoring for the Student was already in place with the Teacher. The Virtual School Special Education Consultant Teacher reached out in early December to set up the tutoring from the Corrective Action and indicated to the Parent that it would start in January. Additionally, they stated it came to their attention that the District had not been able to find anyone to stay after school and tutor the Student. The General Director of Special Education and Special Services explained they learned that the District had a staff member who could tutor the Student but could not start until the end of February. "My understanding from [the Virtual School Special Education Consultant Teacher] was that [their] first plan did not necessarily have specific start and end dates, but when [they] visited with [the Parent] on [the] phone, [they] did mention it starting in January."
16. The General Director of Special Education and Special Services indicated their understanding of the Corrective Action was that the District had a year to ensure the tutoring was done, and had to make arrangements with the Parent within 15 days of how that would be done.

    The General Director of Special Education and Special Services indicated that the Virtual School Special Education Consultant Teacher came up with the idea to continue the tutoring with the Teacher because the Teacher was the special education teacher at the virtual school. The General Director of Special Education and Special Services believed the Student received 20 minutes of tutoring twice per week starting in early November.
17. The General Director of Special Education and Special Services stated that from December 2, 2024 to the date of the interview, the Student continued to receive tutoring services from the Teacher, but had not received any additional time that had been agreed to on December 2, 2024 because there was no staff member available to provide the services at that time. The General Director of Special Education and Special Services indicated the Student's time with the Teacher, which was 40 minutes per week, had been uninterrupted other than snow days and holidays.
18. When asked what the District's current plan was to provide the corrective action minutes, the General Director of Special Education and Special Services said that on February 18, 2025, the Virtual School Special Education Consultant Teacher and the Parent agreed the Student would meet with the Teacher for 60 minutes two times per week outside of the school day through the end of the school year, which would equal 24 sessions. The General Director of Special Education and Special Services said, "And it looks like in the agreement they went ahead and added the 380 [minutes] that [the Teacher] had already done as part of the 1800. [The Parent] agreed to that."

Positions of the Parties, Applicable Regulations, and Conclusions

Issue One

According to K.A.R. 91-40-51(e)(f)(2), if a report requires corrective action by an agency, that agency, within 10 days of the date of the report, shall submit to the state director of special education one of the following: documentation to verify acceptance of the corrective action or actions specified in the report; a written request for an extension of time within which to complete one or more of the corrective actions specified in the report, together with justification for the request; oral written notice of appeal. Each appeal shall be made in accordance with subsection (f). If an agency files a request for an extension of time within which to complete one or more corrective actions required in a report, a review committee of at least three department of education members shall be appointed by the commissioner to review the request and the offered justification for the extension of time. A decision on the request shall be made by the committee within five business days of the date the request was received. The decision of the review committee shall be final. If a local education agency fails to respond to a report within the time allowed, the sanctions listed in paragraph (f) (2) may be invoked.

K.A.R. 91-40-51(e)(f)(2) also states that if an appeal committee affirms a compliance report that requires corrective action by an agency, that agency shall initiate the required corrective action immediately. If, after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the agency shall be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following: the issuance of an accreditation deficiency advisement; the withholding of state or federal funds otherwise available to the agency; the award of monetary reimbursement to the complainant; or any combination of the actions specified in paragraph (f)(2).

The Parent alleged that Corrective Action #2 from complaint 25FC501-001 had not yet been implemented, and should have started in January 2025. The Parent stated they signed the proposal for Corrective Action on December 2, 2024. The Corrective Action listed, in part, in the 25FC501-001 report stated, “Further, within 15 calendar days of the date of this report, USD #501 will convene an IEP meeting to determine how to implement and schedule up to 30 hours of compensatory services to be delivered within one calendar year. The Parent may accept all, a portion of, or none of the offered compensatory services … .”

The District stated they were complying with the Corrective Action requirement and were in the process of obtaining a tutor for the Student. The District indicated the specific timeline and due date for the tutoring services to be provided to the Student, was to be completed within a calendar year. The General Director of Special Education and Special Services asked for an extension until December 3, 2024 for the IEP review and any amendments. The District indicated they demonstrated a good faith effort to find a tutor to provide the Student with 30 hours of tutoring as agreed to in the IEP meeting.

The Parent accepted and agreed to the District's proposal of 30 minutes of twice-weekly tutoring, which they were told would start in January 2025. The District made 17 documented attempts to find a tutor for the Student from December 30, 2024 to January 17, 2025. A tutor was available to begin in February, with efforts being made to find someone to start earlier. The District offered 30 hours of compensatory tutoring for the current school year. The District's proposal detailed 100 minutes of tutoring weekly for 18 weeks.

On February 18, 2025, the Parent and the Virtual School Special Education Consultant Teacher agreed that the Teacher would provide 60 minutes of tutoring twice weekly to fulfill the remaining 1,420 compensatory minutes, with specific dates scheduled through May 20, 2025. The Parent confirmed the extra time was supposed to cover the corrective action. A PWN dated February 18, 2025 detailed the plan for the Student to receive the remaining 1,420 minutes of compensatory services from February 18, 2025 through May 20, 2025. An IEP amendment dated February 18, 2025 summarized discussions with the Parent about finalizing the tutoring schedule to make up compensatory services. The Parent signed both documents on February 18, 2025.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, i*t is not substantiated* that the District failed to implement the agreed-upon compensatory education as part of the corrective action in Complaint 25FC501-00. The District's obligation to provide the agreed upon compensatory education is due to be completed within one calendar year from issuing the Report of Complaint for investigation 25FC501-001.

Background Information

The Student is 8 years old, and receives special education under the category of Developmentally Delayed, with additional medical diagnoses of Down's Syndrome, Macrophage Activation Syndrome, Juvenile Idiopathic Arthritis and Interstitial Lung Disease. The Student has arthritis "flare ups" which impede mobility and stamina. The Student's vision is limited by scarring in the left eye and by neurotrophic keratitis, and the Student has not consistently passed hearing screenings, even as a newborn. The Student's medical care is actively followed by the Division of Rheumatology at Children's Mercy Hospital and Fry Eye Associates for vision.

The Student's last special education evaluation was at the age of 2 years 11 months in 2020; the triennial evaluation due in 2023 was waived by Parent and IEP team. The Student's initial Evaluation Data Summary (2020) provided to the investigator included no assessment information, except to note progress in AEPS score during the birth to three program; external OT, PT, and Speech Language reports were referenced. The Student was found eligible for special education services. The Evaluation Data Summary disputed the Student's low birthweight asserted by IEPs in 2023 and 2024.

The Student received education in a resource room and second grade classroom with special education services in the District elementary school. The Student received related services of OT, PT, Vision and Speech/language therapy. The Student spoke with one to five word utterances, needed adult support for basic needs including toileting, traveled from class to class by walking or riding an Amtryk or a wagon, required blended or cut up food, and needed supervision during lunch to ensure he does not eat something he could not swallow.

Issues Investigated

1. ISSUE ONE: Did the District afford Parent participation in the IEP, specifically including information about medical concerns and the inclusion of services, accommodations or modifications to address these concerns?
2. ISSUE TWO: Did the District hold IEP meetings needed to respond to new information provided by the Parent or to address the Student's lack of progress or other issues in compliance with state and federal regulations?

3. ISSUE THREE: Did the District provide accurate present levels of performance in the Student's IEP?
4. ISSUE FOUR: Did the District provide the Parent with copies of the IEP?
5. ISSUE FIVE: Did the District USD#227 implement the Student's IEP by providing the special education and related services required by the IEP and in compliance with state and federal regulations?
6. ISSUE SIX: Did the District provide copies of the IEP to the school staff tasked with implementing or administering the IEP and in compliance with state and federal regulations?
7. ISSUE SEVEN: Did the District provide accurate and proper Prior Written Notice to the Parent as required by state and federal regulations?

Issue One

Did the District afford Parent participation in the IEP, specifically including information about medical concerns and the inclusion of services, accommodations or modifications to address these concerns?

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. § 300.321(a)(1) require that each public agency must ensure that the IEP Team includes the parents of the child. Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. § 300.322(a) and state regulations at K.A.R. § 91-40-17(a)(1) require that each public agency must take steps to ensure that one or both parents of a child with a disability are present at each IEP Team meeting or are afforded the opportunity to participate, including notifying the parents of the meeting early enough they have the opportunity to attend and scheduling the meeting at a mutually agreed upon time and place.

According to 34 C.F.R. 300.503 (a) and (b), written notice must be given to the parent of a child with a disability a reasonable time before the public agency proposes or refuses to initiate or change the identification, evaluation, placement, or the provision of FAPE to a child, and that the notice must include a description of the action, and explanation of why, a description of the evaluation, assessment, record or report the agency used as a basis for the proposed or refused action, description of other options considered and reasons they were rejected, and a description of other factors relevant to the agency's proposal or refusal.

According to K.S.A. 72-3430: (a) The rights of parents of exceptional children shall include, but not be limited to, the rights specified in this section. (b) The parents of exceptional children shall have the right to: (1) Examine all records relating to such child and to participate in meetings with respect to the identification, evaluation, and educational placement of the child, and the provision of a free appropriate public education to such child, and to obtain an independent educational evaluation of the child; (2) written prior notice in accordance with K.S.A. 72-3432, and amendments thereto, whenever an agency: (A) proposes to initiate or change; or (B) refuses to initiate or change, the identification, evaluation, or educational placement of the child or the provision of a free appropriate public education to the child.

State regulations at K.A.R. § 91-40-25(a)(2) require prior written notice of any meeting to the parents of the child, to include the purpose, time, and location of the meeting and the titles or positions of persons who will attend on behalf of the agency. K.A.R. § 91-40-25(e) clarifies that a meeting does not include informal conversations on teaching methods, lesson plans, or coordination of services, or preparatory activities to develop a proposal that will be discussed at a later meeting.

Further, the Kansas Special Education Process Handbook states: "Accordingly, unless there is an unusual circumstance, districts must provide parents with a Prior Written Notice within 15 school days in response to any parent request regarding identification, evaluation, placement or the provision of a FAPE."

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The Parent, in the written complaint, alleged that on October 11, 2024, the Parent met with and informed the Principal that the medical records and medication guide referred to in the IEP were not present in the school's medical file. The Parent further alleged that the IEP stated that the Healthcare Plan would be added to the IEP dated December 8, 2023 upon receipt of medical records from the doctor, and that those records were provided to the school on or about February 15, 2024.

The Parent alleged that she contacted the School Board President on October 14, 2024 to discuss her concerns, including the doctor's recommendation to have consistent paraprofessionals to provide services throughout the day. Subsequently, the Parent met with the Special Education Director on October 21, 2024 to discuss the IEP, the paraprofessionals, and the absence of the Health Plan, the doctor's recommendations, and the medication guides provided to the school at the time of the IEP. The Parent alleged that she was contacted by the SAKCD Nurse on November 5, 2025, who told the Parent that the Student did not need an Individual Healthcare Plan and that health could be addressed in the IEP. The Parent reported this to the Special Education Director and Special Education Teacher and was told that an IHP would be written.

The Parent alleged that she was contacted by the School Psychologist on November 19, 2024, to discuss the proposed IEP after the IEP team met on November 11, 2024 . When the Parent received the IEP on November 21, 2024, she expressed disagreements with the proposed IEP including IHP and requested time to allow the doctor to review it. The Parent alleged that she was not further contacted regarding her disagreements with the IEP, the Emergency Evacuation Plan (EEP) or the IHP.

The Parent alleged that she contacted the Special Education Teacher to complete the IEP on March 25, 2025 and received a return call from the Special Education Director on March 26, 2025, with whom she discussed her concerns, including with the wheelchair aspect of the Healthcare Plan and offered an alternative. The Parent alleged that the Special Education Director was to call her back the following Friday but that the Special Education Director did not return the call.

The Parent alleged that when the School began using the wheelchair, she contacted the Special Education Teacher regarding her disagreement with it, her concerns with its suitability for the Student, and that the Student's IEP stated that he should be given a choice between walking or using the Amtryke, or to use the wagon during a flare up of arthritis, with no mention of wheelchair use. The Parent alleged that the school did not contact her about meeting to make changes to the IEP, the IHP, or the EEP.

District Response

The District responded: "[The Parent] reached out to the Hodgeman County Health Department on October 11, 2024 in regards to Liam's health file with Jetmore Elementary. The Health Department then forwarded the same doctor's note and accommodations that [the Parent] had previously sent and were added into his previous IEP. [The Student's] annual IEP was held on November 11, 2024. Prior to the annual IEP meeting, the Director, Trina Schmidt visited with [the Parent] on October 21, 2024 to hear her concerns and note items she wanted to address in the upcoming IEP meeting.

When [the Special Education Director] met with [the Parent], she was not happy that there was not a medical file at Jetmore Elementary. I explained that that is a general education file. For IEPs we can write a Health Care Plan that is with his IEP file, but not a part of the IEP. She agreed to that and I then spoke to our SKACD nurse for her to reach out to [the Parent] and begin a Health Care Plan.. [The SKACD Nurse] reached out to [the Parent] as well as reviewed the report that was given by Liam's doctor.. [The SKACD Nurse] met with [the Parent] on November 5, 2024. At that time,[the Parent] informed her that there was nothing new with [the student's] health..

On November 7, 2024, [the Special Education Director] received an email from Children's Mercy Hospital in Kansas City. The social worker was sending the new information from the doctor in terms of accommodations for [the Student] at school. [The Special Education Director] reviewed the information with [the Parent] as well as it was reviewed at Liam's IEP meeting. This is the same doctor's note that was received on February 15, 2024 and then again November 6, 2024. The only difference was the accommodation recommendation that [the Student] have the same para throughout the day. It was explained to [the Parent] multiple times that [the Student's] IEP states that he will have support for his entire school day. It is not in his best interest to have one adult assigned to him. If that adult were to be absent, then we would be out of compliance with the IEP.. It is better for students to have support from several staff members to ensure that they do not become too independent upon one adult. I also explained to [the Parent] that doctor's can make recommendations for IEPs but it is our job to ensure FAPE and that the student's needs are being met. [The Parent] was given time to share her concerns during the IEP meeting.. Attached [is] a copy of the draft IEP with hand written notes where [the Parent]'s input was noted and then added to the final IEP."

Findings of Fact

The following findings are based upon a review of documentation and interviews with the parent and staff in USD #227.

Two IEPs fall within the 12 month investigation period, the first dated December 8, 2023 and the second dated November 11, 2024.

As recorded in the IEP dated December 8, 2023, the Parent's input into the IEP included the following. The Parent wanted the Student to increase communication of basic wants, needs, and feelings, and for the Student's occupational therapy to focus on life skills like tying shoes, buttoning, and zippers. The Parent asked the staff to use the Amtryke for transportation between classes and continue to use the wagon. The Parent stated that the Student had increased problems with "stemming" that she associated with many changes of paraprofessionals through the day. With regard to the Student's health, the Parent asked for staff to be alert to flare ups, to avoid sun when topical steroids were in use, to avoid sick people, and to provide lots of fluids using a cup with straw to facilitate the Student's fluid intake. The Parent noted that the Student's hearing was affected by small ear canals and that follow up with the eye doctor was in place.

The IEP dated December 8, 2023 noted 'YES" to the question, "Does this child require a Health Care Plan?" The IEP stated "need explicit doctor's orders stating restrictions and medical reasons for needed accommodations." Under "Parent Input" the IEP stated that the Student's "arthritis doctor would be sending orders to assist with our healthcare plan. Once orders are received, the healthcare plan will be added to the IEP."

Attached to the IEP was a letter from the Student's doctor at Children's Mercy, dated February 15, 2024, which detailed the student's diagnoses, treatment, treatment effects, anticipated needs, symptoms, and suggested accommodations, including a single paraprofessional through the day, rest or nap, and reduce intensity of PE after occupational or physical therapy. When asked in an interview, the SAKCD Nurse indicated that the letter was not deficient in any way and it contained typical information, but that she was not aware of the letter before her addition to the Student's IEP team in November, 2024.

The Parent reported and the Special Education Teacher agreed in an interview that the letter was provided to the Special Education Teacher near the time of its date in mid-February, 2024. The Parent reported that the District did not contact her to complete the Health Plan, which the Parent assumed was made part of the IEP upon receipt of the doctor's letter.

When asked in an interview, the Special Education Teacher reported sharing the letter with a School Psychologist (no longer with the District), and that they reviewed the letter. The Special Education Teacher reported that, finding no new accommodations in the letter, it was placed in a classroom file and no further action was taken.

Emails dated September 11, 2024, show that the Parent contacted the Assistant Special Education Director to discuss the Parent's concern that the Student have a single paraprofessional during the day. In turn, the Assistant Special Education Director contacted the Special Education Director and the Special Education Teacher of this concern.

The Parent reported that she learned that there was no information since 2020 (at the time of the student's transition from preschool) in the Student's medical file from the Public Health Nurse, who contacted her in October, 2024, with questions regarding the Student's immunization requirements (no live vaccines due to autoimmunity status).

According to documentation, on October 10, 2024, the Parent and the Public Health Nurse contacted the District for a copy of the IEP, which the parent reported that she obtained later the following afternoon.

In the morning of October 11, 2024, the Parent met with the Principal to report her concerns with the lack of health plan, vaccine forms, and medication guides in the Student's file or attached to the Student's IEP.

The Parent reported and documents showed that she communicated with the Board President on October 14, 2024, who in turn directed her to expect a contact from the Special Education Director. The Special Education Director reported that she returned a call to the parent on October 15, 2024.

The Parent and the District agreed that the Parent and the Special Education Director met on October 21, 2024. The Special Education Director reported and her email summary of the meeting dated October 21, 2024 showed that the discussion included the following topics: (a) the Special Education Teacher received the doctor's letter after the prior IEP meeting and "didn't want to amend the IEP since there had just been a meeting," (b) the IEP that the parent had and the District's IEP did not match, (c) updating the health plan, (d) accommodations, (e) updating the planner, (f) crowded rooms [infectious disease risk], (g) para consistency, and (h) the need to meet soon. In an email reply to the Special Education Director dated October 21, 2024, the Special Education Teacher denied the Director's statement that she didn't want to amend the IEP, added information on the communication with the parent, and included that Parent was concerned about increased toileting accidents. In that email, the Special Education Teacher asserted that toileting accidents were because of a change in the staff's process, from directing the Student to use the toilet to requiring the Student to ask for the toilet. In an interview, the Special Education teacher denied that there were any regressive toileting problems associated with the change of paraprofessional support and stated that the staff took the student to the toilet during second grade breaks and transitions from class to class. In an interview with the Special Education Paraprofessional, the Paraprofessional stated that the Special Education Teacher asked the Student to use the toilet rather than directing the Student to do so.

On November 5, 2024, the SAKCD Nurse contacted the parent to discuss the Health Plan to be included in the upcoming IEP. The SAKCD Nurse, when interviewed, stated that the Student's needs did not necessarily require a separate health plan, but it was added at the request of the parent.

The Parent and the District agree that the Parent received Notice of Meetings dated October 31, 2024 and November 10, 2024 for an IEP meeting on November 11, 2024.

On November 11, 2024, the Student's IEP team met and the Student's annual IEP was written. Related to health care, the IEP dated November 11, 2024 noted 'YES" to the question, "Does this child require a Health Care Plan?"

In addition, new information was added to the parent input section regarding health, including the parental questions regarding the lack of information in the medical file or on the prior IEP, why the Children's Mercy recommendations for accommodations and services including a single paraprofessional were not enacted, and why the student was playing dodgeball given his disabilities. The Parent shared toileting regression noted at home along with new aggression toward siblings. Also included was information regarding hearing (ear tubes), vision care, and the Parent's reiteration of the use of the Amtryke or wagon, with the wagon only to be used during a flare up. In an interview and in the written complaint, the Parent reported that the questions were never answered.

Under Health Conditions, further parental information added the need for close monitoring of arthritis at school, the Student's medical team, that medications were taken at home, and urging consideration of the Children's Mercy letter provisions. The IEP stated that the doctor's letter and the IHP would be attached to the IEP in images. In an interview, the Special Education Director stated that the Children's Mercy letter was discussed at the IEP Team meeting, but no notes were taken.

The Parent and the District agree and the WebKIDSS email document log shows that the Parent received PWN regarding the IEP dated November 11, 2024 on October 31, 2024 and November 10, 2024, and November 21, 2024.

The Parent signed the PWN dated November 11, 2024 at the IEP meeting. Documentation on the PWN stated that the PWN was hand delivered on November 11, 2024 by the School Psychologist, who later met with the Parent on November 19, 2024. The Parent reported she received the PWN from the School Psychologist on November 19, 2024.

Prior Written Notice (PWN) dated November 11, 2024 stated that it was for a meeting on November 11, 2024 for the purposes of eligibility, special education and related services, placement, non-material changes to the IEP and other changes to the IEP, signed by the Parent giving consent on November 11, 2024. The PWN dated November 11, 2024 agreed with the totals in the IEP for related services: direct pull-out speech language therapy (20 minutes 3 times a week), physical therapy (25 minutes one time a week), occupational therapy (25 minutes one time a week), direct vision services (25 minutes one time weekly) along with indirect vision services (15 minutes every other week).

The PWN dated November 11, 2024 stated that the student would not be with nonidentified peers (in special education) for180 minutes 2 days, 175 minutes 2 days, and 185 one day per week for language arts, math and functional living. The associated IEP required: special education in the special education classroom for functional and social skills (30 minutes twice weekly; 25 minutes twice weekly and 35 minutes, one time weekly), math (75 minutes five times weekly), and language arts (75 minutes five times weekly.

The PWN dated November 11, 2024 stated that the student would be with nonidentified peers for 235 minutes for 4 days and 205 minutes for one day per week for science, social studies, read aloud, and specials. The IEP required: Special education in the general education classroom included physical education (30 minutes four times weekly), lunch (25 minutes five times weekly), recess (40 minutes five times a week), music (30 minutes five times weekly), computers (30 minutes five times weekly), science and social studies (30 minutes five times weekly), morning routine (40 minutes five times weekly), and end of the day routine (10 minutes, 5 times a week). The IEP and the PWN dated November 11, 2024 added training for staff by the SKACD Nurse on arthritis flare up, 30 minutes annually.

The PWN dated November 11, 2024 does not mention special education support for the time spent in general education: specials (physical education, music, computers), recess, lunch, beginning/end of day routines, or the academic periods of science/social studies and read aloud. Additionally the PWN does not address the parent's concerns, enumerated in the parental input portion of the IEP (above) and the content of the Special Education Director's October 21, 2024 meeting with the parent: (a) toileting regression, (b) paraprofessional consistency or single para through the day, (c) walking or using the Amtryke for in school transportation with the wagon reserved only for flare ups, (d) dodgeball being inappropriate given the Student's disabilities, (e) further consideration of the Children's Mercy Letter recommendations, and (f) health considerations, including a health plan, monitoring the Student's arthritis and avoiding ill persons. Finally, the PWN does not mention the elimination of ESY services.

The District reported providing a copy of the IEP to the parent on November 11, 2024 at the time of the IEP meeting. According to the District's practice, this was a draft IEP (see explanation below).

The Parent and the District agree that the School Psychologist met with the Parent to deliver a copy and discuss the IEP (without the Health Plan) on November 19, 2024. At that time, the Parent reported asking for more time to review the PWN and IEP and to have the doctor review the IEP, and emails showed that she asked for a copy of the Health Plan that was to be included in the IEP and a digital copy of the IEP, which were provided on November 21, 2024. Emails further document that the Parent stated that there were errors in the IEP and Health Plan which needed to be corrected. The School Psychologist, in an email reply to the Parent, stated that he would ask the Director to contact the Parent for her signature on the PWN. The Parent reported that she wanted to see the IEP in its entirety and inquired of the Special Education Teacher about revoking her signatures at or around the same time, between November 11 to November 21, 2025. In an interview and in documentation, the Parent did not perceive the IEP to be final at that time, because she asked the School Psychologist for time to have the doctor review the IEP and Health Plan and received the reply that the Special Education would follow up with her to get her signature.

The Special Education Director, in an interview, stated that the District practice before an IEP is considered final, is to add input from the meeting, have the IEP reviewed and errors corrected when it is sent to the MIS clerk. In this case, the review occurred on November 13, 2024. Although the Special Education Teacher reported that she sent the IEP home in the Student's backpack on November 14, 2025, and the Parent denies receiving it and documentation on the IEP or WebKIDSS email record did not show that the Special Education Teacher provided a copy on November 14, 2024. Documents show that the Special Education Teacher emailed a copy of the IEP dated November 11, 2024 to the Parent on November 21, 2024 and the Parent confirmed receiving it then.

The Parent reported that she contacted the Special Education Teacher on March 25, 2025 and provided a text message as evidence. The Parent reported asking "where we stand on [the Student's] IEP" and that the Special Education Teacher stated that the message would be forwarded to the Special Education Director.

A portable wheelchair was purchased by the District for the Student March 27, 2025. Emails dated March 26-27, 2025 showed that the Special Education Teacher, Special Education Director, SKACD Nurse, and PT discussed in detail the health and safety needs of the Student, due to the instability of the wagon and the perceived unsuitability of the Amtryke during times of arthritis flare ups. The PT questioned the use of a wheelchair and stated that she did not agree with its use at this time for the Student. The Parent reported and emails dated March 26, 2025 showed that the Parent during a call with the Special Education Director, expressed concern about using a wheelchair at school, asked who was qualified to prescribe a wheelchair when the Student's doctor did not, and asked to be involved in any purchase of a transportation device. To address this, the Special Education Teacher suggested calling the wheelchair a "manual chair" and the SKACD Nurse added the word, "etc" to the health plan's description of needed transportation at school.

According to the Parent, the wheelchair was in use by April 4, 2025. On April 8, the parent stated that she contacted the Special Education Teacher by text to report her concerns about the safety of the wheelchair. In the text, the Parent stated: "I've been doing some looking on the internet about that chair and I do not think it is right for him. All it is gonna take is him stepping on the footrest one time to flip it over plus not once have I even been consulted on this and I never agreed to a wheel chair in the first place when I spoke with Trina about it, she said she would get in contact with you and would call me back on Friday. Still as of today nothing. The IEP states he gets to pick between the trike or the wagon but during a flare up wagon only. [The Special Education Director] mentioned the wagon is getting too small and said maybe if we got one with bigger rubber tires and sidebars that would work. I told her I had two of them and I would bring one of them up to the school for him to use. I just don't understand if [Children's Mercy doctor] does not prescribe him a wheelchair why are you guys. And yes that is a wheelchair. The IEP says nothing about a wheelchair. Only a trike or wagon and that is what I want. I can have that other wagon here by the middle of the week. This all could have been avoided if when I told Thomas there were too many things that I disagreed with on the Healthcare and the IEP I wasn't going to sign he told me he would let the director know and she would reach out to obtain signatures. Until I text you about where do we stand on [the Student's] IEP there has been nothing. Now I am getting to the point I am starting to believe it does not matter what a Dr or a parent recommends or would like done, you guys are still gonna do what you want. It is wrong. There was nothing even brought up at the IEP meeting about a wheelchair."

The Parent reported that the Special Education Teacher said she would forward her concern to the Special Education Director, who did not reply.

The Parent and the District agree that the wheelchair was in use during April, 2025 and that on at least one occasion, the wheelchair was used when the Student refused to leave an outdoor Easter activity (on or about April 17, 2025) to return inside. The District and the Parent agree and emails showed that the Parent contacted the Special Education Teacher to express her concern with the use of the wheelchair and other issues.

The Parent and the District agree that no IEP meeting was held to discuss the student's changing mobility needs, the purchase of the wheelchair, or the Parent's disagreement with use of a wheelchair for either mobility or for compliance at school

Analysis

In this case, the Parent attended and participated in the development of two IEPs dated December 8, 2023 and November 11, 2024. Further, it is noted that many District personnel talked with or met with the Parent to hear her concerns and that follow up communication occurred at points.

The Parent's overarching concern in this issue is that the District did not honor the information she provided or requests made especially about the student's accommodations, health, mobility, or the use of multiple paraprofessionals throughout the day, which the Parent saw as related to the accommodations, health, and mobility. While the District is not obligated to agree to the Parent's requests or provision of new information, it is obligated to provide prior written notice when it will refuse to do so.

Following the IEP dated December 8 2023, in February 2024 the Parent provided information requested by the District as directed in the IEP Team. The District did not distribute the Children's Mercy letter to the IEP team, involve the SKADC Nurse to review the letter or develop a Health Plan, or provide PWN to state their refusal to add the Health Plan. It is found that this event precedes the 12 month investigation period for this issue. However, it sets the context for subsequent communication between the Parent and the District.

On September 11, 2024, the Parent contacted the Assistant Special Education Director regarding multiple changes of staff throughout the day, who forwarded the concern to the Special Education Director, who emailed and received a response from the Special Education Teacher. The District did not initiate a meeting or provide PWN refusing the Parent's request for a single paraprofessional throughout the day.

Beginning October 11, 2024, the Parent contacted more than one school official and staff to again request a single paraprofessional through the day and to complain about the failure to add a Health Plan and update the Student's medical information, in light of the Children's Mercy letter. The District convened an IEP meeting for the Student's annual IEP on November 11, 2024 and Health Plan was discussed and subsequently added to the Student's IEP on November 11, 2024.

However, when the Parent received the Health Plan and the IEP, November 19 and 21, 2024, the Parent alerted the District that she found errors in the Health Plan and asked for additional time to review the IEP. The District did not respond with a PWN refusing this request, but continued as if the conversation did not occur, giving the Parent the impression that the IEP process was not complete. The Parent contacted the Special Education Teacher on March 25, 2025 and asked, "where do we stand on the IEP?" This indicates the Parent's assumption that the IEP process was not complete, having previously expressed that she wanted to correct elements of the Health Plan; this was reiterated in her April 8, 2025 communication with the District.

Instead, on March 26 and 27, 2025, the District staff discussed a wheelchair as necessary for the student's anticipated needs. The District did not convene an IEP meeting despite its awareness of the Student's changing anticipated mobility and safety needs and the Parent's concerns, which she continued to report to the District after the purchase of the wheelchair. Particularly of note is the disagreement of the PT, who clearly stated she was not in agreement with using a wheelchair for the student at this time. Further, when the District began using a wheelchair to transport the Student, it changed the student's IEP without parental involvement, IEP team involvement, and without prior written notice.

For these reasons, the District failed to afford Parent participation in the IEP, specifically including information about medical concerns and the inclusion of services, accommodations or modifications to address these concerns.

Conclusion

Based on the foregoing, it is substantiated that USD 227 is out of compliance on this issue.

Issue Two

Did the District hold IEP meetings needed to respond to new information provided by the Parent or to address the Student's lack of progress or other issues in compliance with state and federal regulations?

Applicable Law

Federal and state statutes and regulations at 34 CFR § 300.324(b)(1)(ii)(c) and KSA 72-3429(f) require that the IEP team meets at least annually and that it revises the IEP as appropriate to respond to a parent's request for an IEP meeting to address a lack of progress, evaluation, the child's anticipated needs, information provided to or by the parents, or other matters. In Kansas, a reasonable time to respond to parental requests such as the request for an evaluation or for an IEP meeting is three weeks, or 15 school days.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The Parent alleged that she contacted the school in several ways to express her disagreements with the Student's IEP, IHP, EEP, and related issues of the Student's education. The Parent alleged that from October 11, 2024 through April 22, 2025, she contacted the Principal, the Special Education Director, the School Board President, the Special Education Teacher, and the School Psychologist to express concerns with the IEP, the IHP, and the Student's program. The Parent alleged that she did not "sign off" on the IEP after being contacted with the draft on November 19 and 21, 2024 due to her expressed concerns with the IEP's content. The Parent alleged that she had numerous concerns with the IEP and that she was not given the opportunity to discuss them with the School.

District Response

The District replied: "[The Parent] shared the doctor's information with [STAT] in February 2024 which was addressed in [the] 23-24 school year IEP. Then Children's Mercy sent another letter on November 7, 2024 with information regarding his condition and recommended accommodations. When [the Parent] met with the SKACD nurse on November 5 2024, [the Parent] indicated that there was nothing new with his health. The doctor's note from November 2024 was the same information as the previous note from February 2024. The current Doctor's information was addressed during the IEP meeting on November 11, 2024.

[The Parent] never mentioned concerns regarding [student] progress on IEP goals. When looking at [the Student's] IEP goals from 23-24 and 24-25, [the Student] is making progress on all goals.

[The Parent]'s concern was having a full time para, which was addressed during the annual IEP and when [the Special Education Director] met with [the Parent]. [The Student] has full time support from either a special education teacher or a para for 100% of his day. He does not have the same person throughout the day, but has support throughout the day."

Findings of Fact

The findings of Issue One are incorporated herein by reference.

The following findings are based upon a review of documentation and interviews with the parent and staff in USD #227.

As in Issue One, the Parent, in the complaint and in interviews, reported that she contacted the District (School Board Member, Special Education Director, Principal) to make them aware of her concerns. The District, in its response, interviews, and documents, reported that District personnel (Special Education Director and Nurse) explained to the Parent that the Student would have a para with him during the school day, but it would not be the same individual.

As stated in Issue One, PWN dated November 11, 2024 does not mention ESY, a single paraprofessional or special education services in the general classroom, the addition of the Health Plan to the IEP, or the elimination of ESY services.

The Parent in the written complaint stated that she "would not sign off" on the IEP and Health Plan provided to her during the period between November 11, 2024 and November 21, 2024. The District, in its response and in interviews, reported that the Parent stated she wished to withdraw her signatures as participating in the IEP and on the PWN dated November 11, 2024. The District stated that the Special Education Director asked for that withdrawal in writing and that the Parent reported that she did not want to withdraw her signatures and deprive the Student of special education and related services. When asked about withdrawing her signatures, the Parent did not recall the conversation related by the Special Education Director.

When asked in an interview, the Special Education Teacher stated that she understood the Parent's wish to withdraw signatures to show disagreement with the IEP rather than a wish to withdraw consent for services.

The Parent reported, and documentation showed, that the Parent wanted to review the IEP and Health Care plan in its entirety and communicated that to the District on or before November 21, 2025.

As stated in Issue One, the Parent notified the District of her concerns regarding the use of the wheelchair at school in late March, and again by text April 8, 2025. The Parent provided text messages dated April 22 and 23, 2025 reiterating her protest of the use of the wheelchair, particularly as used in the "Easter party" incident April 17, 2025.

Incident

In interviews, the Parent, the Special Education Teacher, and the Special Education Paraprofessional each mentioned an incident using the wheelchair when the Student refused to return into the school building following an outside activity described as an Easter celebration. According to the Special Education Teacher, when the Student refused adult requests to go into the building, the Special Education Teacher directed two paraprofessionals to get the wheelchair. According to the Special Education Teacher, the Student got into the wheelchair when directed to do so, and a brief time out was used following the incident because of the student's disobedience.

The District provided an email from the Special Education Teacher to the Parent dated April 23, 2025 at 8:07 p.m. which stated that she would only communicate with the parent using the District email, with a note at the bottom stating that the reason was due to parental texts at night. The Parent and the District agree that the Parent's texts were asking for information about the Easter incident.

The Parent provided the texts to the Special Education Teacher that preceded and the email chain that followed the April 23, 2025 8:07 p.m. email from the Special Education Teacher to the Parent, that included responses from the Principal and the Special Education Director. Texts and emails dated April 22, 2025 to April 30, 2025 show that the Parent again stressed that she had not given her consent to use the wheelchair, her direction that it should not be used to make the student comply with a direction, her denial that the student was unable to walk from the outside shelter if he walked to it at the start of the outdoor activity, that she wanted to "do away with the wagon and the wheelchair" due to the Student's improvement, and her disagreement with the use of the wheelchair as described by the Special Education Teacher: "Yes, Liam was placed in time-out following the outside Easter Party activity. As he was hesitant to come back inside after the outdoor fun, I offered him a choice; he could get up and walk in school to rejoin the party or stay seated, go to time out then join the party after time out. He chose to remain seated under the outdoor shelter. At that moment I arranged for the chair to help him return back into the school so he could enjoy the remainder of the party after completing his timeout."

Principal: "He went out with the class for the activity. He chose to go to the covered area. He sat down and refused to walk in when the class was done with the activity. The paras got the chair and he climbed in the chair himself. The chair was not used as a restraint, it was used to transport him inside. The staff does not need to be carrying him."

In the email exchange, the Parent protested this use of the wheelchair which was not for the purposes of aiding the Student to walk but to deal with a refusal to come indoors when directed.

In the interview with the Special Education Paraprofessional, time out was frequently used in the resource room when the student was returned from general education or would not comply with adult directions. The Special Education Teacher estimated that timeout was used three times during the school year. In an interview, the Parent expressed a concern that the use of timeout was not included in the daily communication log provided to her and that the use of timeout was more frequent than reported.

Analysis

In this case, the Parent repeatedly expressed that the IEP resulting from the November 11, 2024 IEP meeting was inaccurate and needed to be changed, including at the time of the home meeting on November 19, 2024, scheduled by the District to deliver the IEP and PWN after the IEP was considered to be final by the District.

Additionally, the District did not provide an IEP meeting at the time of the wheelchair purchase and use, which the District determined necessary for the Student's anticipated needs. The District was aware of the Parent's concerns at the time of the purchase and afterward when she expressed her concern and protest in numerous ways and to at least three members of the IEP team from April 8, 2025 through April 30, 2025. Further, the District was aware that another IEP Team member with special expertise in mobility (the PT) had stated her disagreement with the use of a wheelchair for the student in the internal discussion among School staff prior to its purchase.

In this case, the Parent repeated concerns and provided new information about the Student's needs, including a review of the wheelchair's suitability and use. In situations like this, the District should convene an IEP meeting or otherwise address through amendment or PWN the new information and other matters being asserted by the Parent. Additionally, the District was aware that at least one of the IEP team members with expertise in motor development, stated disagreement with the purchase of a wheelchair for the purposes of mobility. Further, it is found that a secondary use of the wheelchair to promote compliance was observed in this case.

Conclusion

Based on the foregoing, it is substantiated that the District is out of compliance on this issue.

Issue Three

Did the District provide accurate present levels of performance in the Student's IEP?

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 CFR § 300.320(a)(1)(i) state: "(a) General. As used in this part, the term individualized education program or IEP means a written statement for each child with a disability that is developed, reviewed, and revised in a meeting in accordance with §§300.320 through 300.324, and that must include (1) A statement of the child's present levels of academic achievement and functional performance, including—(i) How the child's disability affects the child's involvement and progress in the general education curriculum (i.e., the same curriculum as for nondisabled children)."

According to KS Stat 72-987(c) "The IEP for each exceptional child shall include:(1) A statement of the child's present levels of academic achievement and functional performance, including: (A) How the child's disability or giftedness affects the child's involvement and progress in the general education curriculum; (B) for preschool children, as appropriate, how the disability affects the child's participation in appropriate activities; and (C) for those children with disabilities who take alternate assessments aligned to alternate achievement standards, a description of benchmarks or short-term objections."

The Kansas Special Education Process Handbook explains, "The Academic, Developmental and Functional Needs of the Child In developing each child's IEP, the IEP team is required to consider the academic, developmental, and functional needs of the child. A child's performance on state or district assessments would logically be included in the IEP team's consideration of the child's academic needs. . . The consideration of state and district-wide assessment programs is consistent with the emphasis on the importance of ensuring that children with disabilities participate in the general curriculum and are expected to meet high achievement standards." (page 71).

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The Parent alleged that there were numerous inaccuracies and inconsistencies with the present levels of performance and other aspects of the IEP including parental concerns, health, vision, math, OT and PT needs, mobility, accommodations, reading and communication. Health examples include that the student passed a vision screening when vision in one eye is documented to be extremely limited by scarring, lack of clarity whether the student could or could not track smoothly from left to right, inaccurate medications with past medications listed as current without the updates provided by the parent, medical concerns added that were not provided by the parent or doctor, such as sensitivity to the sun only being a problem with certain medications. Inaccuracies on parent input included that the parent wanted the Student to walk or use the Amtryke, with the wagon used only during an arthritis flare up, mixing juice with water rather than water alone, the parent's input into PT and OT including response to lack of energy and need for emphasis on daily living skill, and failure to add the contents of the Children's Mercy letter to the "other" section of the IEP. The Parent alleged that the IEP was inconsistent in describing the student's communication of feelings and needs, and that the math measures contradicted each other (counting with manipulatives to 39, recognizing numbers to 41, counting by 10s to 100, but understanding numbers only to 10). The Parent alleged that the Student's reading of nonsense words could not be replicated at home. The Parent alleged inaccuracies in accommodations, including providing a water bottle when the student cannot drink from a water bottle.

District Response

The District responded: "Present levels of performance are updated annually at each annual IEP meeting. Liam's present levels were updated to be accurate as of his performance at the end of October beginning of November 2024. When reviewing the last two years, there was significant progress in his academic performance and it was detailed in the current performance in the November 2024 IEP."

Findings of Fact

The findings of Issue One and Issue Two are incorporated herein by reference.

The following findings are based upon a review of documentation and interviews with the parent and staff in USD #227.

The Parent reported in an interview that passing the vision screening seemed impossible given that the Student had extremely limited vision in his left eye, that it was unclear if the student could or could not express his feelings, that she could not replicate the reading of nonsense words at home, and she questioned how it was possible for a student who could only count to 29 with manipulatives or recognize numbers to 30 could also count by 10s to 100.

The SKACD Nurse stated in an interview that the nature of the screening did not preclude passing the screening under the conditions.

The IEP dated November 11, 2024, stated that the Student would participate in the standard assessment.

The Student's grade card for the second grade, 2024-25 showed that reading/phonics, English/writing, handwriting, spelling, math, science/social studies, computer lab, music, physical education, and art were coded as "W, Works on level of ability." Reading, math, computer lab, music and physical education added letter grades to the W code.

The District provided progress reports for the IEP dated December 8, 2023 with entries as follows. IEP goals are abbreviated.

1. Goal 1 (Motor) to improve visual motor skills by copying a line and square with appropriate pencil grasp, measured by OT Rubrics and Checklists

Present Levels of Performance on the IEP

This IEP dated November 11, 2024, was organized to report strengths, needs, current performance, and impact of the disability in each of the following: Health (including vision), Motor, Communication, Cognition, Adaptive Behavior, Social Emotional, Reading, Written Language, and Math. No general education assessments, standardized, norm referenced, or standardized curriculum-based measures were reported in any area on the IEP. Classroom or related service provider observations were used to provide present levels of performance, below.

Hearing and Vision screenings dated November 11, 2024 indicated a passed vision screening. Vision record review included the Student's limited vision in the left eye and did not change from the prior IEP, but vision assessment was updated and discussed the student's identification of 9 colors and continued lack of tracking across the midline. This section of the IEP included a 2023 and a 2024 summary of Vision. Health parent input is dated November 5, 2024 referring to the Children's Mercy Letter and recommendations. A Health Plan is required, and accommodations but no goal for Vision services is included in the IEP.

Motor performance summarized progress in OT and PT sessions, noted limitations to participate in school activities including PE, and recommended continued services with goals. The OT goal did not change from the prior year, except to delete copying a line but continuing copying a square with appropriate pencil grasp. A new PT goal for balance was added.

Communication section notes that the student met his goal of verbally requesting or refusing items and can answer some WHAT questions. It noted continued difficulty to answer WH questions accurately (answers Yes to both, are you happy? And are you sad?). Limited speech and language affect his ability to initiate and maintain communication and to express or recognize emotions and participate in class. Continued services recommended with goals.

No cognitive update.

Adaptive Behavior repeats information from the prior year (answering yes no questions; verbal requests; knowing body parts, locations, and people; following directions, handwashing, feeding self and drinking from a cup) and adds some elaboration (errors in answering yes/no questions; getting on and off the toilet; and dislike of paper straws). The IEP dated November 11, 2024, stated, as did the previous one, that the Student needed adult support for basic needs including toileting, used a wagon to travel from class to class, and supervision during lunch. The IEP stated that the Student's adaptive behavior and daily living skills were "currently not age appropriate and require intervention and accommodations." This section of the IEP stated that the need for special education in this area will be met by accommodations, with no IEP goal written.

No needs were recorded in Social Emotional Behavior stating: "[The Student's] academic progress is not impacted by his ability to understand, experience, express, and/or manage emotions."

Reading: The IEP dated November 11, 2024 stated that the Student could read his first and last name, the letters of the alphabet and their sounds, two high frequency words (a, I) segment and read CVC words at 6/10 correct. The Student read 32 letters, 16 letter sounds, and 11 nonsense CVC words per minute and "these are K-2 grade level skills". The IEP stated that the Student had needs in comprehension, phonics, and phonological awareness that the IEP would provide.

Written Language - Writing: The IEP dated November 11, 2024 stated that the Student could write his first name and the numbers 0, 1, 7, and 10. The IEP stated that the Student's inability to write fluently (meaning to write by hand) "impedes his progress and interferes with completion of work" and the IEP would provide special education "to assist with fine motor skills needed to improve writing." The Written Language section does not refer to writing to tell a story or write answers to questions, but rather the physical act of handwriting.

Math: The IEP dated November 11, 2024 stated that the Student could count by 10s with 70% accuracy, and was unable to recognize numbers over 31. The Student could count manipulatives to 29 and knew the relationship of numbers to their quantities, to 10, with 60% accuracy. The Student could count backwards from 10, recognize shapes, tell time to the hour and add sums to 9. The IEP stated: "Due to [the Student's] significant delay in math concepts he will be provided special education to teach and assist with the writing of numbers, understand size, shape and patterns, the relationship between numbers and quantities, identifying more or less of a quantity, and understanding one to one correspondence."

Analysis

The Parent's complaint in this case was that the performance statements on the IEP contradicted themselves within the document. One example is that, in the Social Emotional present level of performance, it was determined that the student had no needs and could express and manage his emotions, while in the Communication section, it states the Student has "difficulty identifying, expressing and responding to various emotions" and a goal related to identifying emotions was written. A second example is the practical understanding of the math present levels, whether a student could skip count by 10s to 100 with 60% accuracy, and at the same time recognize numbers to 31 or count with manipulatives to 29 or understand number quantities to 10.

In this case, the present levels of academic and functional performance included on the IEP and considered by the IEP team contained only one type of information, teacher observation, as no other assessments were conducted to allow consideration of the student's academic standing or functional performance. The IEP does, however, point toward the Student's accountability for learning when it states that the student will be assessed by state and district general education assessments.

The Student's grade card indicated that the Student was not working on second grade curriculum ("working at own level") in every academic subject. The IEP's present level statement in reading briefly mentions the Kansas Standards (K-2), the general education curriculum, but does not identify which standards are being used for the Student's IEP to show his access and progress. The Student's performances as described in the IEP approach, but do not indicate mastery of Kindergarten academic standards in reading. No other Language Arts Standards were included. Writing in the Student's IEP focuses on the physical act of writing and Kansas Standards in ELA for Kindergarten, First and Second grade refer to writing as producing written work while using correct grammar and conventions. Neither Kansas Math Standards nor a developmental sequence of skills are referenced in the IEP to produce a logical curricular scope and sequence against which a present level of performance can be presented. No general education or special education assessments other than classroom observations are provided in the Student's IEP.

Without reference to the Kansas Standards or specific academic curricula or functional developmental skill sequences, it is found that the student's IEP does not identify how the child's disability affects the child's involvement and progress in the general education curriculum (i.e., the same curriculum as for nondisabled children).

Conclusion

Based on the foregoing, it is found that the District is out of compliance on this issue.

Issue Four

Did the District provide the Parent with copies of the IEP?

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. § 300.322(f) state that the public agency must give the parent a copy of the child's IEP at no cost to the parent."

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The Parent alleged that the District did not provide easy access to the Student's IEP when she requested a copy of it October 11, 2024. The Parent stated that when she did receive a copy of the IEP, it was incomplete and did not include the IHP.

The District responded, "[The Parent] was given a draft copy of the new IEP at the November 11, 2024 meeting. [The Parent] had copies of prior IEP's when [the Special Education Director] went to her house to visit with her and hear her concerns. During the IEP meeting on November 11, 2024, [The Parent] had copies of prior IEP's that she kept referring back to. SKACD's practice is to provide the parent a copy of the draft IEP at the meeting and then send home the final copy after the IEP has been finalized and reviewed.

The one time when [the Parent] asked for a copy of [the Student]'s IEP from [the Principal], the new school principal, he was not able to get her a copy at that time. He was new to Jetmore and SKACD and did not have all of the login information to be able to print an IEP. He did have a copy of IEP 2 for each of the students in his building."

Findings of Fact

The findings of Issue One, Issue Two and Issue Three are incorporated herein by reference.

The following findings are based upon a review of documentation and interviews with the parent and staff in USD #227.

As stated in Issue One, October 10, 2024 while meeting with the County Health Nurse the Parent requested copies of the IEP dated December 8, 2023. When the Parent met with the Principal on October 11, 2024, she asked if he had a copy of the IEP, which he did not. On October 11, 2024, when the Parent went to the District Office, she was at first refused, then provided a copy of the Student's IEP dated December 8, 2023.

The Parent was provided a copy of the Student's IEP dated November 11, 2024 on November 21, 2024, along with its associated Health Plan.

Analysis

While it was inefficient for the Parent to get a copy of the Student's IEP dated December 8, 2023 when she asked for a copy of it in October, the District did provide it. The District also provided a copy of the IEP dated November 11, 2024 on November 21, 2024 at no cost to the parent.

Conclusion

Based on the foregoing, it is found that the District is not out of compliance on this issue.

Issue Five

Did the district USD#227 implement the Student's IEP by providing the special education and related services required by the IEP and in compliance with state and federal regulations?

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. § 300.39 defines special education as specially designed instruction at no cost to the parent to meet the unique needs of a child with a disability. Further 34 C.F.R. § 300.320(a)(4) requires that the IEP include "a statement of the special education and related services and supplementary aids and services, based on peer-reviewed research to the extent practicable, to be provided to the child, or on behalf of the child, and a statement of the program modifications or supports for school personnel that will be provided to enable the child: (i) To advance appropriately toward attaining the annual goals; (ii) To be involved in and make progress in the general education curriculum. . . and to participate in extracurricular and other nonacademic activities; and (iii) To be educated and participate with other children with disabilities and nondisabled children. "

Federal and state regulations (34 C.F.R. § 300.39(a)(1), (b)(3); K.A.R. § 91-40-1(lll).) state that special education service is required to be accompanied by the projected date for the beginning of the service and the anticipated frequency, location, and duration of the service. (34 C.F.R. § 300.320(a)(7).) Further, "the amount of services to be provided must be stated in the IEP so that the level of the school's commitment of resources will be clear to parents and other IEP team members. The amount of time to be committed to each of the various services to be provided must be (1) appropriate to the specific service, and (2) stated in the IEP in a manner that is clear to all who are involved in both the development and implementation of the IEP (Federal Register, August 14, 2006, p. 46667)" (Kansas Special Education Process Handbook, p. 105).

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. § 300.323(c)(2) require school districts to ensure that as soon as possible following the development of the IEP, special education and related services are made available to the child in accordance with the child's IEP.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The Parent alleged that the Student's IEP was not implemented in several ways. First, no paraprofessional was present during related services, when she had been assured that the student had 100% paraprofessional coverage. Second, the Student was injured in a dodgeball game, which was contraindicated by the student's blindness in one eye and mobility limitations as indicated by the IEP's accommodations and services. Third, the PT therapy being provided was not in the special education setting, but in the PE classroom. Fourth, the District failed to provide the choice of walking or Amtryke, with a wagon during flare ups, when the Student transitions between activities or places in the school. Fifth, the District added the use of a wheelchair which was not in the IEP, opposed by the Parent and contraindicated by the medical provider's recommendation provided to the District. Finally, the District failed to implement all the Student's accommodations.

District Response

The District responded: "As you can see by the attached Related Service Providers logs and the daily communication log from the Special Education Teacher, [the Student] has been provided the services and minutes as outlined [in the] IEP. There were days when the service providers came to see [the Student] and [the Student] was absent.

There are monthly calendars attached which show the days [the Student] was absent and which days the related service providers were scheduled to come see [the Student]. In the margins you will find a note regarding how many sessions he attended that month as well as for the year. Attached you will also find [the Student]'s official attendance record from the School office. "

Findings of Fact

The findings of Issue One, Issue Two, Issue Three and Issue Four are incorporated herein by reference.

The following findings are based upon a review of documentation and interviews with the parent and staff in USD #227.

Two IEPs are within the investigation period, as found previously.

The IEP dated November 11, 2024 called for no ESY services.

Special Education and Related Services, Location and Duration

According to the student's IEP dated December 8, 2023, the student's time in general education totaled 165 (two days weekly), 195 (one day weekly) or (210 two days weekly). Special education in the general education classroom included physical education (30 minutes four times weekly), lunch (25 minutes five times weekly), recess (45 minutes five times a week), music (30 minutes five times weekly), computers (30 minutes five times weekly), science and social studies (30 minutes five times weekly), morning routine (20 minutes five times weekly), and end of the day routine (10 minutes, 5 times a week). These total 220 minutes 4 days and 200 minutes one day per week.

Special education in the special education classroom included functional and social skills (10 minutes twice weekly), functional and social skills (55 minutes twice weekly), functional and social skills (40 minutes, one time weekly), math (80 minutes five times weekly), and language arts (75 minutes five times weekly. These total 165 2 days, 195 one day and 210 2 days per week.

Special education and related services included direct pull-out speech language therapy (20 minutes 3 times a week), physical therapy (25 minutes one time a week), occupational therapy (25 minutes one time a week), vision (25 minutes one time weekly), along with indirect vision services (15 minutes every other week).

The Student's IEP called for ESY services, as follows: (a) PT for 25 minutes weekly, (b) Vision 25 minutes three of four weeks, and (c) Speech/language for 20 minutes weekly, with one goal, to ride the Amtryke.

The PWN dated December 8, 2023 listed each individual service with frequency, duration and location, with no summary of the amount of time the student would or would not be with nonidentified peers.

Special education and related services recorded on the IEP dated November 11, 2024 included direct pull-out speech language therapy (20 minutes 3 times a week), physical therapy (25 minutes one time a week), occupational therapy (25 minutes one time a week), direct vision services (25 minutes one time weekly) along with indirect vision services (15 minutes every other week). T*he PWN dated November 11, 2024 agreed with the totals in the IEP for related services.*

Special education in the special education classroom included functional and social skills (30 minutes twice weekly), functional and social skills (25 minutes twice weekly), functional and social skills (35 minutes, one time weekly), math (75 minutes five times weekly), and language arts (75 minutes five times weekly. The PWN dated November 11, 2024 stated that the student would not be with nonidentified peers (in special education) for180 minutes 2 days, 175 minutes 2 days, and 185 one day per week for language arts, math and functional living.

Special education in the general education classroom included physical education (30 minutes four times weekly), lunch (25 minutes five times weekly), recess (45 minutes five times a week), music (30 minutes five times weekly), computers (30 minutes five times weekly), science and social studies (30 minutes five times weekly), morning routine (40 minutes five times weekly), and end of the day routine (10 minutes, 5 times a week). These total 240 minutes for 4 days and 210 minutes for one day per week. The IEP added training for staff by the SKACD Nurse on arthritis flare up, 30 minutes annually.

The PWN dated November 11, 2024 stated that the student would be with nonidentified peers for 235 minutes for 4 days and 205 minutes for one day per week for science, social studies, read aloud, and specials. The PWN dated November 11, 2024 does not mention special education support in the general education classroom for recess, lunch, morning routine, or end of the day closing.

Indirect or staff support services included vision 15 minutes every other week (both IEPs) and training on arthritis by nurse 30 minutes annually on the November 11, 2024 IEP. Documentation showed that the SKACD Nurse provided this training on December 17, 2024.

The District provided a schedule for the Student's second grade school year, beginning in August, 2024 through May, 2025.

Table 1 compares the Student's second grade schedule to the requirements in the IEPs. The Student's schedule shows the code "2nd/RR" for the location for 7 activities throughout the day. When asked in an interview to explain the 2nd/RR code used on the student's schedule, the Special Education Teacher stated that if the activities of the classroom were too difficult for the Student, the Student was taken to the Resource Room to work on a similar but adapted activity. An interview with a Special Education Paraprofessional corroborated this statement. According to interviews with the Special Education Teacher and the Paraprofessional, the student was taken to the second grade classroom but removed based on his tolerance for the activities (according to the Special Education Paraprofessional) or removed because of his level (according to the Special Education Teacher). Both agreed that the student did not stay for the scheduled period in general education classroom activities. The Special Education Teacher did not record and declined to estimate how many times the student left the general education classroom when scheduled to be in second grade. The interview with the Special Education Paraprofessional agreed that no data were recorded regarding the removals from general education classroom.

The interview with the Special Education Para was used to attempt to clarify the schedule as it was implemented. The Special Education Para stated that the Student was scheduled into the second grade through lunch, from 8 am till 12:05 pm, except for the pull out therapies or computer class 20 minutes each day, for a total of 220 minutes each day. According to the schedule, an additional 25 minutes (afternoon recess) and an unclear amount of time for end of the day closing were scheduled in 2nd grade, for a total of at least 245 minutes of special education support in general education for four of five days a week.

According to the Special Education Paraprofessional, the student was generally scheduled to be in the special education classroom in the afternoon following lunch recess at 12:05, which would be approximately 225 minutes, or 200 minutes if afternoon recess occurred with general education peers.

According to the Special Education Teacher, the student generally napped through the scheduled computer class "special" (1:25-1:55 p.m.), and so on Thursdays from 10:40-11:10 a.m., he was taken for an individualized lesson when the computer teacher had a break in her class schedule.

The schedule indicates that the Student was not scheduled for functional activities or social skills, as required by his IEPs.

The schedule indicated, and a follow up question to the District affirmed, that math and reading were scheduled for 80 minutes at the same time, and the Special Education Teacher varied between math and reading activities, with no specific time assigned to either. The schedule period for social studies and science overlapped with closing day routine by 30 minutes and is scheduled in both "2nd/RR" and 2nd. The schedule adds Library (15 minutes, once weekly) and Art 30 minutes, once weekly to time in 2nd, and during the same afternoon period as math fact fluency 25 minutes, 3 times weekly in "2nd/RR".

Related services

Using Table 1, the student was scheduled for Speech Language services as in his IEP. The student's vision services were scheduled for only 20 of the required 25 minutes, and the PT session scheduled for the required 25 minutes overlapped with PE class one time per week. Interviews and documents showed that the student was taken to PT and then, if time and energy allowed, he was taken to the PE class to join in the activities there, indicating that he did not receive 25 minutes of PT services in the special education setting. On Friday, November 1, 2024, documentation showed that the student arrived late to school, participated in PT, and then was taken to PE class, where he was injured during the PE dodgeball activity at approximately 10:00 a.m. According to the schedule, PT is from 9:50 to 10:10 a.m., and according to the IEP, PT is in the special education setting.

The District provided a service log that showed the following times related services were provided:

SP/L: 44 entries, 18 student absences, November 1, 2024 to April 30, 2025
PT: 14 entries, no student absences, November 1, 2024 to May 5, 2025
OT: 26 entries, 6 student absences, September 9, 2024 to March 13, 2025
No contact logs were provided for direct vision services.

The District provided a calendar of services and student absences, kept by the Special Education Teacher. In August, 2024, the Student was Present for 7/7 service days, with no related services recorded. In September, 2024, the Student was present for 20/21 service days, with SP/L 12/12, Vision 3/4 , PT and OT 4/4 sessions. These totals match what is expected according to the IEP dated December 8, 2023.

In October, the Student was present 20/22 days, with Sp/L 24/24, Vision 8/9, OT 8/8, and PT 8/8. These totals show a mismatch with the IEP, as SP/L had only 12 possibilities (3 days a week, 4 weeks), with some student absences noted for half days on Speech days. Similarly, there were only 5 possible occurrences for OT and Vision with absences noted on vision days and 4 opportunities for PT, as scheduled.

The calendar of services report gave the following: In November, 2024, the Student was present 11.5 of 13 days, with Sp/L 6/8, Vision not given, OT 2/3, and PT not given. In December, the Student was present for 12.5 of 15 days, with Sp/L 1/9, Vision 2/3 , OT and PT not given. In January, 2025, the Student was present for 8/18 days, with SP/L 6/9, Vision 1 /4, and OT 1 /4, and PT not given. In February, the Student was present 10/16 days, with Sp/L 4/8, Vision 1/3, PT 3/4, and OT not given. In March, the student was present 5/15 days, with Sp/L 4/9, Vision 1/3, OT 1/3, and PT not given. In April, the Student was present for 10/16 service days, with SP/L 9/10 Vision 3/5, PT 3/3, and OT 3/4.

At the end of April, totals for services written on the calendar of services are: Speech language, 60/77, Vision 19/30, OT 20/28, and PT 26/27. However, adding the monthly individual services as given on the calendar, total 66 sessions for Sp/L, 19 for vision, 19 for OT and 18 for PT services, and these totals include the doubled frequencies reported for October, 2025 and do not include monthly that were omitted from the calendar of service.

Analysis

It is noted that the related services contact logs provided were incomplete, and the classroom records difficult to interpret, having at least one month where all related services would have needed to be provided twice as often as in the IEP to be accurate If accurate, other IEP service requirements would necessarily be in arrears. While the Student's absences affected the frequency with which related services could be provided, records precluded accurately ascertaining the frequency of service delivery when the student was present at school.

In this case, the classroom schedule lacked clarity and congruence with the services required by the Student's IEPs, and it did not change when the Student's IEP changed November 11, 2024. The classroom practice was to withdraw the student from the second grade classroom whenever the staff determined necessary. Also, the Student's schedule obfuscated when the student was solely in special education services in special education settings and which services were being provided. Thus, the schedule does not accurately portray either the student's academic activities in the general classroom or the special education classroom.

It is found that the Student's written or implemented schedule do not align to requirements in the IEP and therefore the District failed to implement the Student's IEP.

Speech language and OT services were scheduled in alignment with IEP requirements. Vision services were scheduled 5 minutes less than the IEPs required. Based on the classroom practice of taking the student to PE on the same day as PT in the special education setting, when both were scheduled at the same time, it is unclear how much PT the student received during his second grade year, especially in light of the description of the November 1, 2024 incident and interview descriptions of the schedule's implementation. It is found that the contact logs for related services and the calendar of services were incomplete.

From the evidence in this case, the Student likely participated more readily in second grade lunch, recess, and specials (except for PE) than in the second grade classroom for academic subjects. The IEP goals are not linked to the general education curriculum for kindergarten, first or second grade standards, and the second grade report card said the student was "working at his level" in all academic subjects. It is noted that the Student made slight improvement on progress reports associated with the IEPs. However, special education services are by definition specially designed instruction, and it is found that the District has failed to schedule and implement the special education, specially designed instruction, required by the IEP.

Conclusion

Based on the foregoing, it is substantiated that the District is out of compliance on this issue.

Issue Six

Did the District provide copies of the IEP to the school staff tasked with implementing or administering the IEP and in compliance with state and federal regulations?

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. § 300.323 (d) and state regulations at K.A.R. § 91-40-16(b)(4) and (5) require that the child's IEP is accessible to each regular education teacher, special education teacher, related services provider, and any other service provider who is responsible for its implementation; and they are informed of their specific responsibilities related to implementing the child's IEP; and the specific accommodations, modifications, and supports that must be provided for the child in accordance with the IEP.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The Parent alleged that the Principal did not have a copy of the IEP when he met with her October 11, 2024 and that he reported to her that he could not access a copy. The Parent alleged that the Principal stated that teachers do not have a copy of the Student's IEP or if they do it is "watered down."

The District responded: "[The Special Education Teacher] at Jetmore Elementary, gives each staff member a copy of IEP 2 before school begins each year. [The Special Education Teacher] also visits with each staff member and goes over accommodations and modifications for each student. [The Special Education Teacher] keeps a notebook of just IEP 2 snapshots for her paras to refer to as they work with students and to be able to quickly answer any questions that teachers may have."

Findings of Fact

The findings of Issue One, Issue Two, Issue Three, Issue Four and Issue Five are incorporated herein by reference.

The following findings are based upon a review of documentation and interviews with the parent and staff in USD #227.

Participation signatures on the IEP dated November 11, 2024 included in person or virtual participation by the Student's occupational and physical therapists, the vision specialist, speech language pathologist, second grade teacher, school counselor, school psychologist, the Parent, the father, SKACD Nurse, the Special Education Teacher, and the Special Education Director as LEA.

The District reported that the Special Education Teacher gave each staff member a copy of the IEP2 (IEP in brief) at the beginning of the year and reviewed accommodations for each student. In an interview, the Special Education Paraprofessional affirmed that the Special Education Teacher provided a beginning of the year orientation to the paraprofessionals, but denied having a copy of the IEP2, instead affirming that the IEPs were kept in a book in the classroom that could be accessed by request to the Special Education Teacher. When asked if the Special Education Teacher shared the new IEP dated November 11, 2024 after the IEP meeting, the Special Education Paraprofessional stated that IEPs were only reviewed at the beginning of the year during orientation.

Analysis

From the evidence and district response, it is found that the District provided orientation to classroom staff and kept copies of IEPs available upon request in the Special Education classroom. It is found that the participants in the IEP team meeting on November 11, 2024 had the information needed to carry out their responsibilities to implement the IEP. It is noted that the classroom practices to share the IEPs with classroom staff following updates could be improved.

Conclusion

Based on the foregoing, the District is not out of compliance on this issue.

Issue Seven

Did the District provide accurate and proper Prior Written Notice to the Parent as required by state and federal regulations?

Applicable Law

According to 34 C.F.R. § 300.503 (a) and (b), written notice must be given to the parent so of a child with a disability a reasonable time before the public agency proposes or refuses to initiate or change the identification, evaluation, placement, or the provision of FAPE to a child, and that the notice must include a description of the action, and explanation of why, a description of the evaluation, assessment, record or report the agency used as a basis for the proposed or refused action, description of other options considered and reasons they were rejected, and a description of other factors relevant to the agency's proposal or refusal.

Notice requirements at K.A.R. § 91-40-26 state in providing notice to parents of any action proposed or refused by an agency, the notice must include a description of other options that the agency considered and why they were rejected, and a description of other factors relevant to the agency's proposal or refusal. K.A.R. § 91-40-17 requires notice of IEP team meetings at least 10 days in advance of the meeting. State regulations at K.A.R. § 91-40-27(a)(3) require school districts to obtain parent consent before making a material change in services or a substantial change in placement.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The Parent alleged that the District had provided differing versions of the Notice of Meeting (NOM) and the Prior Written Notice (PWN) associated with the IEP meeting on November 11, 2024. The Parent alleged that NOM inaccuracies included the participants at the meeting on the two NOMs provided, dated October 31, 2024 and November 10, 2024. The Parent alleged that the District gave her three versions of the Prior Written Notice associated with the November 11, 2024 IEP meeting, dated October 31, November 10, and November 11, 2024, and that she received a copy of the PWN dated November 11, 2024 on November 19, 2024, when the School Psychologist delivered it during a home visit.

The District responded: "[The Parent] was provided a PWN on November 11, 2024 outlining the services for [the Student] for the next IEP school year. Attached you will also find the PWN for the November 2023 IEP meeting. After the November 11, 2024 IEP meeting, [the Parent] called [the Special Education Teacher] to rescind her IEP signature. [The Parent] had signed the IEP which is for attendance as well as the PWN. [The Special Education Teacher] as well as [the Special Education Director] informed her to put it in writing and we would honor her request. During a phone call with [the Parent], she explained that she didn't want to rescind because [the Student] needed the services."

Findings of Fact

The findings of Issue One, Issue Two, Issue Three, Issue Four, Issue Five and Issue Six are incorporated herein by reference.

The following findings are based upon a review of documentation and interviews with the parent and staff in USD #227.

The email documents log provided by the District showed that the Special Education Teacher sent a Notice of Meeting on October 31 and November 10, 2024, Prior Written Notice on October 31, November 11, and November 21, 2024.

The Parent and the District agreed that there were two different versions of the Notice of Meeting and three versions of the PWN associated with the November 11, 2024 meeting, and that two versions of the PWN were sent to the Parent before the IEP meeting was held. When asked in an interview, the Special Education Teacher stated it was a mistake on her part to provide the PWN in advance of the meeting, and that she changed the Notice of meeting and PWN that she sent based on the information in the draft IEP at the time.

The Parent reported that she wanted to see the IEP dated November 11, 2024 in its entirety when she discussed signature withdrawal with the Special Education Teacher. The Parent did not recall the Special Education Director asking her to withdraw her signatures in writing. In an interview the Parent was aware that her consent was not needed to implement the IEP if services or placement did not change 25%.

According to the Special Education Director, it is the practice to complete a regression checklist to determine ESY eligibility, and the Student did not qualify for ESY services (Summer, 2025) because he did not regress during periods of absence, using the District's ESY assessment. According to texts dated April 7-8, 2024, the Parent questioned the elimination of ESY services and the Special Education Teacher replied that the student did not demonstrate regression during winter and spring breaks from school. The Parent questioned which breaks had been used to determine the Student's regression at the time of the November 11, 2024 IEP, before either winter or spring break, and noted that summer break was quite a bit longer.

The PWN dated November 11, 2024 does not include withdrawing ESY services.

Analysis

The District made errors in providing Prior Written Notice, documented throughout the report. Included are: providing PWN before the IEP team met November 11, 2024; failing to communicate refusal of the Parent's proposals (Issue One and Two), failing to ensure the PWN accurately portrays the services as described in the IEP (Issue 5), failing to provide notice for the removal of a service (ESY) which requires consent (Issue Seven), and failing to provide PWN when changing the IEP without a meeting (Issue One). Further the PWNs provided in this case failed to allow time before service implementation to communicate the changes in the IEP to parents or staff implementing the IEP. The District's practice of IEP review and MIS entry should be taken into account when providing PWNs, showing when the services as determined by the IEP will begin to be implemented.

As found in Issue Five, the Prior Written Notice dated November 11, 2024 did not include the removal of ESY therapy services provided in summer 2024 as per the IEP dated December 8, 2023. Therefore, the Student's ESY services continue to be in place for the current IEP.

Conclusion

Based on the foregoing, it is substantiated that USD#227 is out of compliance on this issue.

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST
UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #287
ON JUNE 23, 2025

DATE OF REPORT: JULY 23, 2025

This report is in response to a complaint filed with the Kansas State Department of Education on behalf of students with disabilities taught by Tristan Lee and Kandace Nellessen, special education teachers employed by the Three Lakes Educational Cooperative who worked in USD #287 during the 2024-25 school year. The complaint was made by -------, a parent of children enrolled in USD #287; however, it is noted that the complainant is not the parent of any of the students taught by either Mr. Lee or Ms. Nellessen. In the remainder of the report ------- will be referred to as the "complainant".

This is a systemic complaint since it involves multiple students. Because the complainant is not the parent or legal guardian of any of these students, written parental consent will be required to release a copy of this investigation report to the complainant if any personally identifiable information regarding the students taught by either of these teachers is contained in this investigation report.

The complaint is against USD #287 (West Franklin Public Schools) who contracts with the Three Lakes Educational Cooperative (TLEC) to provide special education and related services to students with disabilities enrolled in the district. In the remainder of the report, both of these responsible public agencies will be referred to as "the local education agency (LEA)".

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) allows for a 60-day timeline to investigate a complaint and allow for an appeal process from the date on which it was filed. A complaint is considered filed on the date on which it was received by KSDE. In this case, the KSDE initially received the complaint on June 23, 2025 and assigned the case for investigation on June 26, 2025.

Evidence Reviewed

Both parties were contacted via telephone during the investigation to gather and clarify information. The complainant was interviewed by phone on June 30, 2025. The LEA made the following staff available for a phone interview on July 18, 2025:

- Michelle Heiman, Interim Director of the TLEC
- Alissa Smith, Special Education Facilitator for Ms. Nellessen

Background Information

The two teachers who are the subject of this complaint were employed by the TLEC to provide special education services for students with IEPs enrolled in USD #287 during the 2024-25 school year. Mr. Lee provided direct specialized instruction to 15 students who had IEPs in an early childhood special education setting while Ms. Nellessen provided direct specialized instruction to five students with IEPs at West Franklin Elementary School at Appanoose and 11 students with IEPs at West Franklin Elementary School at Williamsburg.

Issues Investigated

Based on the written complaint, one issue was identified and investigated.

Issue One

USD 287 and Three Lakes Educational Cooperative (TLEC), in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to provide special education services to the students by appropriately trained and qualified teachers during the 2024-25 school year.

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.256(A) require that each state education authority (SEA) must establish and maintain qualifications to ensure that personnel necessary to provide special education services are appropriately and adequately prepared and trained, including that those personnel have the content knowledge and skills to serve children with disabilities.

State regulations at K.A.R. 91-31-34 describe the requirements for LEAs to follow in order to provide appropriately qualified staff for teaching assignments in Kansas school districts as follows:

1. Each education system shall employ persons who hold licenses or certificates with specific endorsements for the positions held
2. If a teacher holding an appropriate license or certificate is not available, the education system shall use a teacher holding a valid Kansas teacher license or certificate at any level or in any field or subject for not more than 140 days in the same assignment.
3. If a teacher holding a valid Kansas teacher license or certificate is not available, the education system will use a substitute teacher holding a valid Kansas substitute teacher license or certificate for no more than 90 days in the same assignment.
4. If a substitute teacher holding a valid Kansas substitute teacher license is not available, the education system will use a person who holds a baccalaureate degree and an emergency substitute teaching license or certificate for no more than 45 days in the same assignment.

5. If a person holding a baccalaureate degree and an emergency substitute teaching license is not available, the education system shall use a person who has been licensed or certified by the state board as an emergency substitute teacher for no more than 25 days in the same assignment or more than 75 days in semester.
6. If an education system documents that there is an insufficient supply of substitute teachers, the education system may appeal to the commissioner of education for authority to allow individuals holding an emergency substitute teaching license or certificate to continue to teach for an additional length of time. (Please refer to K.A.R. 91-31-34(b)(5)(B) and the explanation below in the Special Education Reimbursement Guide).

The 2024-25 Special Education Reimbursement Guide for State Categorical Aid describes the requirements for school districts to receive reimbursement for providing special education services to students with disabilities. This document uses the following definitions for "qualified personnel" and "special education teacher":

- Personnel: "personnel who have met SEA-approved or SEA-recognized certification, licensing, registration, or other comparable requirements that apply to the area in which the individuals are providing special education or related services" (based on C.F.R. 34 CFR 300.23).
- Qualified: "qualified means being certified, licensed, registered or otherwise authorized by the state to render services in a particular profession or occupation" (based on KAR 91-40-1(zz))
- Special teacher: "a person, employed by or under contract with a school district or a state institution to provide special education or related services, who is: (1) Qualified to provide special education or related services to exceptional children as determined pursuant to standards established by the state board (based on K.S.A. 72-3404(j))

The Special Education Reimbursement Guide correctly explains the exception allowed in K.A.R. 91-31-34(b)(5)(B), on page 23, as follows:

> Exceptions to KSDE Licensure requirements (including Substitutes)
>
> Waivers
>
> LEAs may claim reimbursement for teachers providing services for duties performed in areas/fields or instructional levels for which they are not endorsed under licensure waivers that have been approved by the Kansas State Board of Education.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The following findings of fact are based upon interviews and record review.

The complainant reported that in September 2024 she made the Principal of West Franklin Elementary School at Appanoose aware that multiple staff members lacked the licensure required for the special education roles they were performing; however, to her knowledge, no action was taken to employ appropriately trained and licensed special education teachers.

She indicated that Tristan Lee acted as an early childhood special education teacher and Kandace Nellessen acted as a special education teacher for the entire 2024-25 school year providing direct specialized instruction to disabled students with IEPs enrolled in USD #287 despite only holding emergency substitute teacher licenses and working in these teaching positions beyond the limits set in the state requirements. For these reasons, she believes the LEA has failed to provide a free appropriate public education (FAPE) to all students with IEPs who received direct special education instruction from these two teachers during the 2024-25 school year.

The complainant reported she learned that both of these unlicensed staff would be returning to those same assignments for the 2025-26 school year along with two other staff taking over administrative assignments related to learning and instruction without administrative credentials and licensure. The complainant noted that she shared her concerns regarding the use of unlicensed personnel in special education and administrative roles within USD #287 with the School Board President on June 24, 2025. When the complainant asked why individuals were hired for positions requiring credentials they do not hold, she was told, "It happens all the time".

The complainant believes all these hiring decisions reflect a pattern of noncompliance for both the 2024-25 and the 2025-26 school years. It must be noted that the IDEA does not allow for the investigation of noncompliance that has not yet occurred and, as such, this investigation will focus solely on the allegations of noncompliance during the 2024-25 school year.

The LEA reported that efforts were made to recruit and hire staff with Kansas certification as special education teachers for all open special education positions during the 2024-25 school year. These efforts included posting for open positions on both the USD #287 and TLEC websites and Facebook pages as well as on TalentEd, and Educate Kansas; however, not enough qualified candidates applied.

The staff at TLEC reported collaborating with the staff at USD #287 regarding finding staff who would be the "best fit" for the open elementary special education teacher and the ECSE teacher positions in USD #287.

The LEA staff indicated Mr. Lee was chosen because he holds a Master's degree and had previously worked as a paraprofessional in an early childhood special education setting in another Kansas school district.

The LEA staff indicated Ms. Nellessen was chosen because she was currently enrolled in a program to earn her baccalaureate degree and teacher certification in both elementary and special education. In addition, Ms. Nellessen had worked as a paraprofessional in USD #287 and was familiar with the district staff and routine, had participated in the 2023-24 professional development activities, and had some exposure to the curriculum and educational programs used for teaching reading and math.

The LEA reported and documentation shows that Mr. Lee and Ms. Nellessen were both issued emergency substitute teaching licenses for grades preschool through 12th grade by the Kansas State Board of Education prior to the beginning of the 2024-25 school year.

The LEA reported that, despite continued recruitment efforts, no appropriately credentialed candidates were found. Interviews and documentation show that TLEC requested and was granted waivers to extend the number of days allowed on a substitute license for Mr. Lee and Ms. Nellessen to teach High Incidence Special Education during the 2024-25 school year.

The LEA also reported that both Mr. Lee and Ms. Nellessen were provided with training and support to ensure they were prepared to teach students with disabilities. Both teachers were assigned veteran special education staff as mentors for weekly supervision and collaboration.

Mr. Lee was mentored by Jordyn Schwinn who holds a Kansas teaching license with endorsements for Early Childhood Unified and Elementary Education. Ms. Nellessen was mentored by Alissa Smith who holds a Kansas teaching license with endorsements for Adaptive Special Education and Early-Late Childhood Generalist.

During an interview, Ms. Schwinn and Ms. Smith reported they met with each teacher on a weekly basis, modeled teaching in the classroom, attended all IEP team meetings; assisted with developing data collection methods; monitored IEP goal progress; assisted in IEP development; and were available for questions as needed. They reported that every student taught by Mr. Lee and Ms. Nellessen made progress towards IEP goals during the school year.

In addition, USD #287 staff reported that both Mr. Lee and Ms. Nellessen participated in the professional development which was provided to all USD #287 staff during the 2024-25 school year. Mr. Lee and Ms. Nellessen attended before-school orientation, back-to-school workshops, and five days of professional development opportunities focusing on teaching strategies throughout the school year.

Conclusion

In this case, the LEA was unable to recruit and hire staff holding a valid Kansas teacher license or certificate with appropriate endorsements to teach the open early childhood special education and elementary special education positions available at the beginning of the 2024-25 school year. The LEA was also unable to hire staff holding a valid Kansas teacher license or certificate at any level or in any field or subject, or to hire a substitute teacher holding a valid Kansas substitute teacher license or certificate for the open positions.

Following the guidelines in state regulations at K.A.R. 91-31-34, the TLEC hired Mr. Lee who holds a baccalaureate degree and an emergency substitute teacher license for the early childhood special education teacher position in USD #287. The LEA believed Mr. Lee was the best available choice for the position based on his education and past work experience. The LEA provided ongoing training and support for duties related to ECSE and, when no acceptable candidates for the open position were located, TLEC requested and was granted a waiver to extend the number of days allowed on a substitute license for Mr. Lee to teach High Incidence Special Education during the 2024-25 school year.

Again, following the guidelines in state regulations at K.A.R. 91-31-34, the TLEC hired Ms. Nellessen who holds an emergency substitute teacher license for the open elementary special education teacher position in USD #287. The LEA believed Ms. Nellessen was the best available choice for the position based on her past work experience and her enrollment in a degree seeking program leading to teacher certification in special education. The LEA provided ongoing training and support for duties related to elementary special education and, when no acceptable candidates for the open position were located, TLEC requested and was granted a waiver to extend the number of days allowed on a substitute license for Ms. Nellessen to teach High Incidence Special Education during the 2024-25 school year.

Based on the foregoing, there is evidence to support a finding that the LEA provided special education services to the students with IEPs during the 2024-25 school year by employing appropriately trained and qualified teachers as required by the Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) guidelines and requirements. As such, the LEA is found to be in compliance with the requirements of 34 C.F.R. 300.256(A) and K.A.R. 91-31-34.

It is noted that no personally identifiable information of students is included in this investigation report and, as such, no written parental consent is required in order to release this report to the complainant.
