50. Attendance records indicated the Student had 83 absences during the 2024-25 school year and three absences during the 2025-26 school year.
51. Relevant information from an undated letter written by the Parent, requesting the Student be evaluated for an IEP, included:
    a. The Student has a diagnoses of autism, SPD, pediatric insomnia, obstructive sleep apnea, IBS and gastrointestinal, speech articulation and phonological disorder, sensory seeking and avoiding through proprioceptive and vestibular dysfunction, and PTSD. They stated these disabilities and medical needs affected the Student's sleep and wake time, behaviors, social skills, emotional regulation, nervous system regulation, ability to meet demands, and executive processing.
    b. The Parent included information about the Student's needs, techniques to help the Student, collaboration with goal building, techniques the Parent had used, and things the Student was used to.
    c. The Parent requested to have a paraprofessional assigned to the Student to allow them to participate in their LRE and have an adult that was "always available to meet [their] needs within a couple of minutes." The Parent requested the Student's primary classroom be a resource room, and a slow transition from the Student's current school in a reverse chaining process.
    d. The Parent stated the Student struggled with demand avoidance and needed trauma-informed approaches. They indicated the focus should be on lowering demands, reducing workload, adapting to individual needs, reducing anxiety triggers, not forcing compliance, offering flexibility, and increasing co-regulation.
    e. Staff should chunk the Student's work into small requests, use low demand options, using priming to help the Student prepare for a change before it happens, give short and flexible warnings to transitions, remind the Student about what is coming, have a visual schedule of the day but allow the Student input in some choices, and provide a predictable but flexible routine.

f. The Parent also requested staff should not force homework unless the team and the Student agreed it would be a success, give extended time to complete work, allow the Student to opt in and out of group projects, reduce the Student's workload, provide check-ins during class, allow preferential seating and changes in seating, allow assistive technology, allow the Student to write in capital letters, use tactiles and manipulatives, use dry erase boards, and remind the Student of instructions and repeat as necessary.

g. The Parent provided techniques to help calm the Student's nervous system, such as reducing demands and sensory inputs, limiting instructions, offering quiet time and space, collaborating with the Student to discover strategies and solutions, listening to the Student, and supporting them. They stated dysregulation could look like threats, hitting, throwing, trying to escape, pinching, kicking, and using objects to control. The Parent advised emotional check-ins, expressing feelings, and using positive affirmations could help the Student. The Parent advised staff should schedule movement breaks for the Student, incorporate mindfulness techniques, and offer breaks.

h. The Parent indicated items that could help the Student were a fidget stool or wobble chair, a sensory sack, dimming sheets over light fixtures, LED black lights in calming space, a calming room, sensory sand, fidgets and sensory toys, stuffed animals, a sensory tent, a crash pad, a swing, a trampoline, a weighted blanket, beanbags, and a support dog.

i. If the Student experienced a "meltdown," the Parent indicated staff should remove demands, make the space safe, offer reassuring words, offer visual support, and offer the Student a favorite place to go.

j. The Parent included a list of school activities the Student was used to.

52. Relevant information from handwritten notes taken by School staff for different meetings showed:

a. August 12, 2025 - In a meeting with the Parent, the Parent stated the Student was most successful in the afternoon. The Parent wanted to prioritize social activities and online learning. A separate meeting with the Other Parent was held the same day.

b. October 3, 2025 - During a staff meeting, reasonable expectations for the Student were noted as making choices within given parameters and slowly increasing soft academic demands.

c. November 18, 2025 - During a staff planning meeting, it was noted a BIP was in process and included possible dates for an evaluation meeting. It was noted the Special Education Director's recommendations were to add the number of school days before extending the Student's time.

d. December 12, 2025 - It was noted the Parent stated the Student had to have multiple options and not request them. The notes stated the Parent was emailing about visiting the TLC and had not signed the IEP.

e. December 18, 2025 - During a staff meeting, the notes indicated a joint discussion legal document must be in place for both parents to sign. Notes indicated if the Other Parent did not feel comfortable signing without the Parent, then "it becomes a 'stay put' situation."

f. January 13, 2026 - During an IEP meeting, the Parent suggested "staff go into [the] home."

g. January 27, 2026 - During an IEP meeting, the Parent proposed backward chaining to get to 11 a.m. through February 2026.

53. Relevant information from the LEA's timeline included:

a. August 12, 2025 - The LEA held separate parent meetings to discuss the Student's needs and schedule. The Parent shared the Student's tolerance level was about 30-45 minutes and requested they attend school on Tuesdays and Thursdays for 30 minutes. The LEA proposed the Student attend five days a week, which was rejected by the parents. The Student would attend school in the resource room from 1:00-1:30 p.m. The Parent signed and returned the PWN.

b. August 6, 2025 - The Parent signed the PWN and amendment form to amend speech services.

c. December 15, 2025 - During the reevaluation meeting, both parents asked to tour the TLC before agreeing to or rejecting the proposed placement. The LEA agreed and set up separate meetings with the parents.

d. December 18, 2025 - Since the signed extension deadline would expire on January 14, 2026, the School selected a meeting date and time during the second week of January which aligned with the extension deadline and the Parent's request, and sent a NOM to the parents 27 days prior to the meeting scheduled for January 13, 2026.

e. February 13, 2026 - The Parent requested a team meeting without certain members, including the Other Parent, citing not being able to share certain information with the Other Parent present. The Parent shared their disagreements with the January 15, 2026 and February 3, 2026 PWNs.

f. February 17, 2026 - The LEA provided PWN to both Parents, denying the Parent's request from February 13, 2026 to a team meeting without certain members, including the Other Parent.

54. Relevant information from a timeline provided by the Parent included:

a. On August 8, 2025, the Principal asked if the Parent was available on August 12, 2025 to meet and discuss a plan for the Student returning to school. The Parent agreed and asked for the Advocate and the Therapist to be invited. The Principal agreed and asked for their email addresses.

b. A reevaluation and planning meeting took place on August 12, 2025. The purpose of the meeting was to discuss a reevaluation for special education services. At the time of the meeting, the Student had no IEP outside of speech services. The Parent stated the Student had a 30-45 minute tolerance range. The Parent requested consideration of moving the Student's speech services to an indirect service temporarily during the reevaluation, and targeting speech goals through play-based interactions outside of speech time rather than table-based tasks. The Parent requested consideration of an online curriculum, and the School stated they would look into curriculum and device options. The Advocate asked if existing behavioral data collected by the School the year prior would be incorporated into the reevaluation process, and the Principal indicated it would be provided for consideration.

c. During an IEP meeting on December 15, 2025, the team reviewed the evaluation and determined the Student was eligible for special education services. The Parent wrote the LEA presented a completed draft IEP at the meeting, and the Advocate stated they were concerned the document reflected predetermination. The Parent wrote that the draft IEP appeared to be fully developed prior to the meeting and parent input had not been incorporated. The Parent wrote they expressed disagreement with portions of the proposed IEP and attempted to suggest revisions, and requested collaborative discussion. During a review of the IEP, the LEA staff referenced a potential change of placement to an off-site facility, and the Parent requested the IEP be reviewed in its entirety before further discussion. Due to time constraints, the meeting ended before a full review was completed. The Parent wrote the Special Education Director "repeatedly" stated only one parent signature was required for implementation and indicated the IEP had to be signed by the following day. A 30-day extension was issued and no finalized IEP was agreed upon or signed at the meeting. Over the following month, the LEA sent multiple electronic documents to be signed, including the IEP draft, but the Parent refused to sign.

d. On December 16, 2025, the Special Education Director provided eleven proposed meeting times across three days, a majority of which were scheduled in the afternoon. The Parent wrote they had previously indicated afternoon meetings were not workable. The Parent requested more options.

e. The Parent wrote that on December 18, 2025, the IEP team had been previously informed the Parent was unavailable on Wednesdays due to standing medical appointments for the Student, and that every other Thursday afternoon did not work due to court-ordered visitation.

f. On January 6, 2026, the Parent visited the proposed TLC placement, which was a separate building and classroom setting in another town. The Parent wrote they were informed the classroom may include students of varying grade levels, and at times, the Student could be the only student in the classroom. The Parent observed a seclusion/padded room in the facility, and had concerns the building had asbestos. The Parent was concerned the Student's behaviors, such as kicking, licking, or throwing items, could potentially disrupt the asbestos. The Parent wrote the Special Education Director contacted the Advocate after the TLC meeting and stated they did not understand why the Parent was dissatisfied "after being offered an IEP." It was written the Advocate responded that the Parent had anticipated an IEP in the Student's current special education setting.

g. During a January 13, 2026 IEP meeting the Parent gave a presentation about the Student's disability profile, tolerance level, unmet access needs, and provided a packet of supporting documentation. The notes indicated the Parent stated the Student required access to breaks as needed, staff prompting to request breaks, and a dedicated break space for regulation. The Parent indicated fixed, 10-minute break limits resulted in repeated escalation when the Student was dysregulated. The notes indicated the Parent stated the Student had not been provided access to necessary accommodations prior to consideration of a more restrictive LREA, provider information was being disregarded, and the proposed plan reflected predetermination. The Parent's notes showed the LEA stated the TLC remained their proposed plan and they did not have another, that the LEA only required one parent signature for implementation, and the LEA stated outside provider information would not determine services and LEA professionals were sufficient to make programming decisions. The Parent wrote an LEA staff member said, "We are not only listening to [the Parent's] opinions." A revised IEP was presented which included expanded programming and a BIP. The Parent stated the revised IEP, including the BIP, had not been collaboratively developed or reviewed prior. The Parent wrote LEA staff stated if an agreement was not reached, the LEA could make the decision unilaterally.

h. During a January 27, 2026 IEP meeting, the Parent's notes indicated LEA staff provided a revised document at the start of the meeting that had not been shared in advance, and the Parent had not reviewed prior to the meeting. The Parent consulted with the Advocate on how to respond. The Parent disputed how a PWN characterized their exchange with the Advocate as a request to cancel the meeting. The notes indicated the revised document removed the out-of-LEA placement language, the Student's placement remained at the School, a designated break space was included, and a schedule increase was proposed. The notes showed the LEA proposed increasing the Student's attendance to five days a week, one hour per day. The Parent stated this represented a rapid change instead of a gradual one, larger schedule shifts corresponded with increased dysregulation, and the Parent supported increased attendance if the Student tolerated it without negative mental health impacts. The Parent wrote they wanted an afternoon time, but the LEA wanted the morning due to staff schedules.
   The Parent requested a pause clause if the Student's dysregulation continued for multiple consecutive days, and stated the Special Education Director declined this and offered to hold a meeting if this happened and TLC placement would be reconsidered. The Parent wrote they requested data on frequency of break request, staff- prompted versus Student-initiated breaks, duration required for regulation, and time to return to baseline, and wrote the LEA declined to add this. The Parent requested "clearer written language" regarding writing accommodations, vision-related needs, movement needs, and seating supports. The Parent requested a 1:1 paraprofessional and declarative language as support, and were later listed as refused in the amendment. The notes indicated the Special Education Director stated the LEA's decisions were necessary because the Student needed to adapt to real-world expectations. The Advocate requested behavior data supporting a schedule increase and intervention decisions, and no data was provided during the meeting. The Parent's notes indicated not all components of the proposed plan were reviewed in full and no collaboratively finalized IEP was agreed upon.

i. The Parent wrote that through the 2024-26 timeline, they consistently requested gradual schedule increases, access to the special education classroom, a dedicated break space, and consideration of outsider provider input. The Parent wrote the LEA staff responses "repeatedly" involved an accelerated schedule increase, a limitation of break access, delayed or denied eligibility determinations, and placement discussions prior to a finalized and collaborative IEP.

55. Relevant information from an undated document titled, "Collaborative Team Meeting Agenda," included:
    a. A review of the Student's current performance and relevant classroom/behavioral/engagement data collected by School staff.
    b. A review of outside provider information.
    c. A review of the Student's FBA and the Positive Behavior Intervention Plan (PBIP) proposed by the School on December 15, 2026.
    d. Reviewing the Student's schedule and any proposed schedule considerations.
    e. Next steps and follow up to schedule any additional meetings.
56. Relevant information from undated meeting notes indicated:
    a. The attendees included the Superintendent, the Principal, Teacher 1, Teacher 2, the Autism and Behavior Coach, the SLP, the Special Education Director, and the Other Parent.
    b. The Student's school transition plan included starting small by attending school for 30 minutes on Tuesdays and Thursdays, and gradually increasing the time at the request of the Parent. There would be an exploration of an online program to support engagement. In the past, the Student struggled with lasting an hour and sometimes refused to start tasks.
    c. The Parent requested a reevaluation during a 504 meeting. The School Psychologist would send the paperwork and protocols.

Interview Summaries

Special Education Teacher 1

57. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, Special Education Teacher 1 indicated there were not any delays in implementing the Student's IEP services or accommodations. The initially proposed timeline was followed. "We had to implement the stay-put process because [both of the Parents] were not in agreement with our proposal, so we remained with the services that were initially proposed at the start of [the Student's] IEP." The stay-put process was put into effect in December, 2025.
58. Special Education Teacher 1 explained when they first began working with the Student, they spent much of their time one-on-one in the resource room, focusing on getting to know the Student through preferred activities and play to understand their interests and tolerance for different tasks. They often went to the playground, where they built rapport by engaging in conversations driven by what the Student noticed or enjoyed, such as bugs, space, Minecraft, or Pokémon, and relied heavily on observing the Student's reactions since they rarely stated dislikes verbally. As the relationship developed, academic tasks were introduced to gauge the Student's reading and math abilities following their prior homeschooling, paying close attention to their body language and behaviors—like turning away or discarding materials—to understand their comfort level. Throughout their work together, interactions with the Student took place primarily in the resource room and on the playground, aside from brief moments during morning drop-off.
    Both of the Parents participated actively throughout the IEP process, consistently sharing their thoughts and concerns about the Student's learning and needs. They responded to questions openly, with the Parent regularly providing updates about how the Student's day or morning had begun, and the Other Parent offering insight into the Student's routines and behaviors during visits or weekends at their home. Together, they supplied ample information that helped the team better understand how to support the Student and approach their learning effectively.

59. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, Special Education Teacher 2 explained there were no reported delays or lapses in implementing the Student's IEP services or accommodations; the team followed the previous IEP under stay-put requirements until the new plan was finalized, and all services continued as each updated IEP was signed. Staff described taking a flexible, responsive approach to the Student's daily needs, giving the Student time and breaks when they arrived, adjusting activities based on their engagement, and offering multiple options to support their participation. Most of the work with the Student took place in the resource room, where Special Education Teacher 2 gradually became their consistent daily support after December, 2025, ensuring continuity in their services and interactions.
    Both of the Parents participated actively throughout the IEP process, consistently offering input and sharing information that helped the team support the Student. The Parent frequently communicated updates during drop-off, especially when the Student was having a difficult morning, and the Parent provided comfort items from home—such as the fabric "kangaroo hut" burrow and a fanny pack of tools—to help the Student regulate at school. Both of the Parents contributed during meetings and responded to documentation, offering insight into the Student's needs and routines. The team used the items and information they provided to create supportive break spaces and incorporate familiar materials that helped the Student engage more successfully.

Special Education Director

60. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Special Education Director explained the School team reported that there had been no mistakes or errors in the PWNs sent to both of the Parents during the Complaint period, explaining that the notices were intended to document proposed or refused actions rather than serve as transcripts of meetings. They stated that all notices accurately reflected the decision-making process. They also described working closely with both of the Parents, offering multiple meeting dates, scheduling well in advance, and primarily accommodating the Parent's availability while ensuring the Other Parent received required notice. The only scheduling challenge occurred when the Parent provided availability outside the previously discussed timeframe, but the team still arranged the meeting within required timelines and provided proper notice through mail, email, and DocuSign.

    Both of the Parents' input was consistently incorporated into the Student's IEP, as both were always invited to meetings and their comments were documented directly in the IEP sections noting "[the Parent] stated" or "[the Other Parent] stated." Their perspectives were included in discussions about accommodations and modifications, and their differing observations were considered while the team focused on the Student needs within the School environment. Decisions were never made without the Parents present, and meetings regularly included their chosen advocates, the Crisis Center, and the Therapist, whose participation further reflected both of the Parents' input. Through multiple meetings over the past year, the team used both of the Parents' contributions to help shape informed decisions aimed at providing the Student with appropriate support in the least restrictive environment.

61. The Special Education Director explained the team relied on multiple sources of data to determine that the TLC was the Student's least restrictive environment. An outside provider, conducted an FBA using five BCBAs (Board Certified Behavior Analysts) who observed the Student without prior information to ensure impartiality, producing data on safety concerns, antecedents, behaviors, and consequences. Staff also collected daily qualitative and quantitative logs, including ABC data, and the LEA's Autism and Behavior Coach conducted extensive observations. During a January 2026 meeting, the Parent presented information about the Student's triggers, trauma history, and behavioral patterns, which aligned with the behaviors observed at school. All of these data points—outside evaluations, internal documentation, professional observations, and parental input—consistently indicated the Student's behaviors in the School setting interfered with learning, supporting the conclusion that the TLC was the most appropriate and least restrictive placement and is 10 minutes away from the Student's current School.

62. The Special Education Director indicated the Parent believed the December 15, 2025 IEP draft was predetermined, but the School team recalled that they had brought a draft as a starting point, which was their standard practice for all IEP meetings. They noted that the Parent had not requested the documents in advance, though they would have provided them if asked. During the meeting, they explained that the draft was only a proposal and that decisions would be made collaboratively with the Parents' input. They emphasized that nothing was presented as final, and the team even arranged follow-up steps—such as parent observations and a tour of the TLC program—to ensure the process remained open and flexible rather than predetermined.
    To determine the Student's eligibility, the team used a wide range of internal and external data, including qualitative and quantitative daily logs, ABC data, and both the school-based FBA and the FBA conducted by the Outside Provider. They also considered parent input, therapist observations, and information from previous evaluations. Although some Outside Provider reports—such as an autism evaluation and an ophthalmology report—were not received until after the reevaluation meeting, the team reviewed them once they were made available and expressed willingness to meet again to discuss their relevance. All available data at the time of the evaluation were incorporated into the eligibility determination, and the team held lengthy, detailed meetings to ensure the Student's services were appropriately aligned with their needs. The IEP team reviewed the Optometrist's January 8, 2026 report after receiving it at the January 13, 2026 meeting, noting that some of the attached documents were not new and had already been considered in a previous evaluation. Because the information arrived after the reevaluation process, the team did not discuss it in depth during that meeting but expressed willingness to revisit the recommendations once they had time to review them fully and obtain a release to speak directly with the provider. Several of the Optometrist's suggestions—such as frequent breaks, use of a slant board, and certain visual supports—were already in place or available in the classroom, while others, like larger print materials or high-contrast adjustments, had not been identified as necessary based on the Student's school performance. The team emphasized that they were open to further discussion with the Vision Specialist but needed adequate time and opportunity within scheduled meetings to address the recommendations alongside the broader needs of the Student's educational program.
63. The Special Education Director explained the School confirmed that it had received the Parent's letter in August 2024, and that the information it contained was considered during the December 2024 evaluation. When asked about delays in implementing the Student's IEP services, the team explained that the Student's services had been provided consistently throughout the school year. The Student initially received 30 minutes of resource room support twice a week as an intervention, and when the December 15, 2025 reevaluation meeting occurred, the team discussed services and the proposed TLC placement. Because the family wished to observe the TLC program first, the team remained in a stay-put situation, continuing only speech services in the IEP while extending the evaluation timeline with the Parent's consent.

As meetings continued into January, 2026 the team amended the IEP to formally include the 30 minutes of resource room support twice a week the Student had already been receiving. Only one Parent signed the amendment, but because neither Parent had sole educational decision-making rights, one signature was sufficient. The team then met again on January 27, 2026 to consider a unified plan the Parents hoped to develop, but no joint proposal was presented. The School instead proposed increasing the Student's time at school by extending their daily minutes and adding more days per week, a plan that aligned with suggestions from the Educational Advocate. Each change was documented through PWNs and amendment forms, and services were implemented as soon as signed consent was received. Based on this timeline, the School reported that there had been no delays in implementing the Student's IEP services.

64. When asked about undated meeting notes in the LEA Materials, the Special Education Director explained the meeting notes were recalled as coming from a team meeting early in the school year attended by the Other Parent, held after they requested that all parties meet together rather than separately. At that time, both of the Parents had already provided consent for the evaluation process, and the team discussed what the Student's school schedule would look like at the start of the year while confirming that a full evaluation would move forward. Additional notes shown later were not from a team meeting at all but were part of LEA's proposed resolution agenda prepared by the School Psychologist. When asked about date discrepancies on a separate document, the Special Education Director explained that the page reflected anticipated services tied to the proposed TLC placement, and because it was only a proposal, the dates had not been finalized or aligned with active IEP timelines.
The stay-put provision referenced in the January 13, 2026 PWN referred to the IEP in place from the December 15, 2025 meeting, during which the team proposed the TLC placement but both of the Parents requested time to tour and observe the program. Because both of the Parents did not agree to the proposed change, the Student's placement and services remained exactly as they had been—speech-only services at the School—while the team awaited further discussion at the next meeting. The Student never attended the TLC, and their placement remained at the School throughout the process, with stay-put ensuring continuity of their existing services until the IEP could be amended with Parental consent.

Parent Interview

65. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Parent explained the transition from four years of homeschooling to public school began with a collaborative and highly structured plan. Following the Parent's warnings regarding the Student's pediatric insomnia, asynchronous development, and potential for trauma-based meltdowns, the School Principal initially implemented a "slow-fade" approach. This included shortened schedules starting in the afternoon, the presence of an emotional support dog, and the development of a strong rapport with a Special Education Teacher. During the evaluation phase, the Student thrived under the one-on-one attention and the School's willingness to monitor their signals rather than force compliance. This supportive environment allowed for the successful completion of the WISC and Woodcock-Johnson testing, which documented significant deficits despite the Student's high-functioning "splinter skills."

66. The Parent further explained they felt that the information documented in the PWNs was inaccurate because it did not reflect what actually occurred during the meetings. The Parent believed the School portrayed them as having provided extensive input when, from their perspective, very little meaningful discussion had taken place. The Parent recalled that the December 15, 2025 meeting was scheduled at the last minute, leaving no time to adequately review or discuss the proposed IEP, and the Parent felt the team rushed through the process while insisting the document had to be completed that day. The Parent also believed the School entered the meeting with a fully written IEP and a predetermined plan to remove the Student from the School, despite the fact that they had never had an IEP before and the evaluation process had not yet been completed.
    The Parent also expressed concern that the School dismissed or minimized information from outside providers, often attributing those statements to the Parent rather than acknowledging them as professional input. The Parent felt that the team focused on issues like truancy and logistics rather than discussing the Student's actual needs, despite the Parent having provided detailed information about the Student's autism, PTSD, sensory challenges, and the support they required. The Parent believed the co-op staff who joined during the evaluation process escalated the Student's difficulties, and the Parent felt the proposed IEP failed to address foundational needs such as teaching the Student how to take breaks and establishing a sense of safety. Overall, the Parent viewed the PWNs as misrepresenting the discussions, the level of collaboration, and the true nature of the Parent's concerns.
67. According to the Parent, the situation with the LEA deteriorated when leadership ignored the successful "slow-fade" strategy and insisted on a more rigid, morning-heavy schedule. Despite the Parent's explicit concerns about truancy and the Student's writing aversion, the Special Education Director increased the school hours and pushed the Student toward "failure" as a prerequisite for services. Ultimately, the LEA denied an IEP for anything other than speech, with the Special Education Director reportedly stating they would not "waste" special education funds on a child who shredded paper or hid under desks. Consequently, the Student was moved to a regular education classroom without the Student's established support or social story preparation. This lack of specialized training led to a significant incident where the Student felt "attacked" during a game, resulting in a physical altercation and a subsequent cycle of dysregulation. While the Principal and the Counselor attempted to implement an Outside Expert's methods, the absence of formal special education placement caused the Student to spend the majority of the year in the office, failing to make academic or emotional progress. The lack of formal special education resources meant the Student lacked a consistent, specialized environment. When scheduling conflicts or substitute shortages forced changes to their routine, such as moving the Student from the meeting room or swapping dodgeball for kickball, the Student's stability rapidly declined.

WISC scores showed verbal intelligence in the 97th to 98th percentile, the Student suffered from convergence insufficiency, a vision condition that made worksheets blurry and physically exhausting. Without formal accommodations, the pressure of state testing and standard worksheets triggered "trauma-based" responses, including an incident where the Student barricaded themself with a broom and another where they threw plates in a state of "terror." The Parent provided the School with specialized OT reports and visual "break cards" to preempt these meltdowns, but the staff lacked the special education training to implement them effectively. Ultimately, the Student's asynchronous development meant that while the Student was intellectually gifted, they were developmentally unable to meet the physical and emotional demands of a standard classroom, leading to a cycle of reduced hours and eventual academic failure.

68. The Parent indicated the conflict between the Parent and the LEA intensified during the subsequent school year as the Special Education Director shifted the focus away from the Student's clinical needs toward rigid attendance and scheduling enforcement. Despite the Parent's warnings of school avoidance, pediatric insomnia, and the physical toll of "dragging" a dysregulated child to school, the Special Education Director insisted that the Student's behaviors were intentional and required "boundaries" to prepare them for the "real world." While the school-level staff initially attempted to maintain a low-demand environment (e.g., reading a favorite book), the introduction of outside BCBA evaluators and a more demanding schedule led to a breakdown in the Student's allostatic load. The LEA's insistence on a "forced choice" model and the denial of sensory breaks—despite the Parent's offer to provide equipment and the School OT's recommendation for sensory support—resulted in a series of severe meltdowns. These incidents eventually escalated to the point of staff calling the police, which the Parent attributed to the LEA's refusal to honor the Student's need for regulation over compliance.
69. The Parent indicated they opposed the proposed TLC placement due to the 40-minute commute to a peer-isolated environment that lacked safety from environmental hazards like asbestos and relied heavily on seclusion and physical restraints. Despite professional testimony from a therapist regarding the psychological damage of punitive measures and an optometrist's confirmation that the Student's academic refusal stemmed from medical convergence insufficiency rather than intentional defiance, the LEA prioritized a "behavioral" narrative over trauma-informed care. Procedural failures further stalled the Student's support, as the LEA reportedly omitted a 50-page behavior log and clinical autism evaluations from the FBA, ultimately failing to produce a finalized, written IEP nearly a year and a half after the initial request while continuing to ignore the Student's documented writing aversion and asynchronous development.

70. The Parent indicated the Student succeeded when the Student "… had accommodations, so let's take [them] away to make sure [the Student] fails so we can prove [the Student] needs them. That's what I was told by the Director [of Special Education]."

Positions of the Parties, Applicable Regulations, and Conclusions

Issue One

Whether USD #431, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, provided the Parent with PWN that accurately reflected the Parent's actions, proposals, and opinions, and key data related to the Student. K.A.R. 91-40-26(a-c); 34 CFR § 303.421.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-26(a-c) and 34 CFR § 303.421, in providing any notice to the parent or parents of an exceptional child in accordance with K.S.A. 72-990 and amendments thereto regarding any action proposed or refused by an agency, each agency shall ensure that the notice includes a description of other options that the agency considered and the reasons why those options were rejected; and a description of other factors that are relevant to the agency's proposal or refusal. The notice shall be written in language understandable to the general public and provided in the native language of the parent or other mode of communication used by the parent, unless it is clearly not feasible to do so.

The Parent alleged the PWN misstated the Parent's actions and proposals, attributed provider statements to the Parent's opinion, and included incorrect key data.

The LEA responded, "The District provided complete, accurate PWN on all occasions it needed to do so. The provided PWNs reflect the notes from the meetings, and in the case of the [January 27, 2026] meeting, the audio recording of that meeting." The LEA indicated, "The PWN should not be a transcript of the meeting, and should not include extraneous information, to focus on compliance with IDEA requirements."

The PWN for the review of assessment data meeting on December 15, 2024 stated , "Multiple sources of information was [sic] used to determine eligibility and placement for [the Student], including previous evaluations, classroom performance data (observations and teacher input), Functional Behavioral Assessment (FBA) results, behavior rating scales, medical and health records, and parent input." The Other Parent attended the meeting and signed consent. The PWN for eligibility and related services needed by the Student for the meeting on January 13, 2026 indicated the Student was eligible for special education services for OH and Speech/Language Impairment.

The school team proposed to amend the Student's special education minutes "to the following special education services: SE-G-30 minutes, 2X a week." The services are effective the date the PWN was signed. The PWN noted the Student's health and behavioral challenges significantly impact the Student's disability to access curriculum and demonstrate classroom skills. The IEP team considered the Student's diagnoses. According to the PWN the "IEP team engaged in an extensive, ongoing problem-solving and evaluation process regarding the Student's needs. Both of the Parents were present at the meeting." Evaluation data was reviewed. Both of the Parents requested additional time to review the proposed IEP and services prior to providing consent. The team agreed to reconvene to finalize the IEP and discuss placement and service delivery.

It was noted the Parent expressed opposition to the proposed TLC placement and indicated concerns regarding the Student ability to attend school for extended periods, sharing the Student can tolerate only 35-40 minutes of activity and couldn't handle five days a week. The Parent also requested special education services be provided at home. The Other Parent did not want to remove the TLC placement option entirely but wanted to work jointly with the Parent. Due to lack of parental agreement the LEA implemented a stay-put at the December 15, 2025 IEP meeting and continued the Student's current services.

The LEA conducted assessment procedures using the Functional Analysis Screening Tool (FAST) and extensive Antecedent-Behavior-Consequence (ABC) data collected by school staff between August 25 and October 28, 2025. To ensure objectivity, three separate clinical supervisors and Board Certified Behavior Analysts (BCBAs) performed observations and assessments without reviewing any pre-existing background information. This approach was intended to determine the specific function of the Student's behavior within the School setting through an unbiased lens; however, some of the historical data and clinical diagnoses previously provided by the Parent and the School Principal were not included. The team felt the assessments given were sufficient to support the appropriate FBA for the Student.

The PWN for the meeting on January 27, 2026, indicated the IEP team amended the Student's special education minutes "through a gradual increase in length of day and frequency of attendance, with the intent of supporting the Student's continued access to instruction and social and emotional needs." The LEA considered and refused the Parent's request of an 1:1 paraeducator and the addition of a Declarative Language accommodation. All PWN's had all of the required components contained in K.A.R. 91-40-26(a-c); 34 CFR § 303.421.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations it is not substantiated that the LEA did not provide the Parent with PWN (PWN) that accurately reflected the Parent's actions, proposals, and opinions, and key data related to the Student.

Issue Two

Whether USD #431, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, provided the Parent and their Advocate with an opportunity to participate in special education meetings, including receiving draft documents in advance of meetings, meetings being scheduled at a mutually agreed date and time, and whether the Parent's input was included in the Student's IEP. K.A.R. 91-40-26; 34 CFR 303.322; K.S.A. 72-987(d)(1), 34 CFR § 300.324(a)(1)(ii).

According to K.A.R. 91-40-26 and 34 CFR 303.322, the agency shall be required to provide a parent with a copy of the procedural safeguards available to parents only one time during each school year, except that a copy shall also be provided to the parent upon initial referral of the child for an evaluation or upon parental request for an evaluation; upon receipt by the State department of education of the first complaint filed with it by the parent; upon receipt by an agency of the first due process complaint filed against it by the parent; upon the parent's child being subjected to disciplinary removal from the child's current placement; and at any time, upon request of the parent.

The agency shall inform the parent of any free or low-cost legal or other relevant services available in the agency's area if the parent requests the information or the parent or agency initiates a due process complaint involving the parent's child.

According to K.S.A. 72-987(d)(1) and 34 CFR § 300.324(a)(1)(ii), in developing each child's IEP, the IEP team shall consider the strengths of the child and the concerns of the parents for enhancing the education of their child.

The Parent alleged the LEA limited the meaningful participation of the Parent and the Parent Advocate at special education meetings, did not provide a draft of documents, the IEP did not reflect the Parent's proposals, and the LEA did not schedule IEP meetings at a mutually agreed date and time.

The LEA responded stating both of the Parents were provided with meaningful parental participation in the IEP process. The team collaboratively scheduled meetings for the Student. On one occasion, the School “put forth [ten] various meeting dates, which did not work for everyone.” When the signed extension deadline approached, the School scheduled the meeting to ensure compliance with the IDEA deadlines and sent notice to both of the Parents, 27 days prior to the scheduled meeting. Both of the Parents and the Advocate attended the meeting. Both of the Parents were notified of all meetings “10+ days in advance and were provided with a 10-day Notice of Meeting for each meeting.” Parent input was obtained by meeting discussions, parent input forms, rating scales, parent presentation/demonstration, email communications and documented parent requests.

The Parent did not make a request to review the IEPs in advance of the IEP meetings. The LEA indicated they would have provided them if the Parent had requested them. The IEP team

"strives for consensus." Both of the Parents and the Advocate provided input, which was documented in meeting records. The team provided ample notice for each IEP meeting with a properly constructed NOM, and sent calendar invitations for each meeting.

Both of the Parents' comments were documented directly in the IEP sections noting "[the Parent] stated" or "[the Other Parent] stated." Their perspectives were included in discussions about accommodations and modifications, and their differing observations were considered while the team focused on the Student needs within the School environment. The team provided both the Parents and the Advocate time to present their views and concerns according to K.S.A. 72-987(d)(1) and 34 CFR § 300.324(a)(1)(ii).

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations it is not substantiated that the LEA limited the meaningful participation of the Parent and the Parent Advocate at special education meetings, did not provide a draft of documents, the IEP did not reflect the Parent's proposals, and the LEA did not schedule IEP meetings at a mutually agreed date and time.

Issue Three

Whether USD #431, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, made a special education placement decision by the Student's IEP team, including the Parent. Further, whether the LEA considered a continuum of placement options and, based on the Student's needs, determined the least restrictive environment for the Student. K.A.R. 91-40-21; 34 CFR §§ 300.114-116, 300.327.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-21; 34 CFR §§ 300.114-116, and 300.327, each agency shall ensure that the children with disabilities served by the agency are educated in the LRE. Each agency shall ensure that a continuum of alternative educational placements are available to meet the needs of children with disabilities. These alternative educational placements shall include instruction in regular classes, special classes, and special schools; instruction in a child's home; and instruction in hospitals and other institutions; and make provision for supplementary services, including resource room and itinerant services, to be provided in conjunction with regular class placement.

In determining the educational placement of a child with a disability, including a preschool child with a disability, each agency shall ensure that the placement decision shall be made by a group of persons, including the child's parent or parents and other persons who are knowledgeable about the child, the meaning of the evaluation data, and the placement options. The decision shall be made in conformity with the requirement of providing services in the LRE.

Each agency shall give notice to the parents of any meeting to discuss the educational placement of their child. The notice shall comply with K.A.R. 91-40-17. If a parent cannot attend a meeting regarding the child's educational placement in person, the agency shall offer alternative methods for the parent to participate, including conference calls and video conferencing. An agency may conduct a meeting to determine the appropriate educational placement of a child with a disability without the participation of a parent if the agency, despite repeated attempts, has been unable to contact the parent or to convince the parent to participate.

If an agency conducts a meeting to determine the appropriate educational placement of a child without the participation of a parent, the agency shall have a record of the attempts that the agency made to contact the parent. An agency shall take action to ensure that parents understand, and are able to participate in, any discussions concerning the educational placement of their children, including arranging for an interpreter for parents who are deaf or whose native language is other than English.

Each agency shall ensure that each exceptional child's placement is determined at least annually, is based on the child's IEP, and, for a child with a disability, is as close as possible to the child's home. Unless the IEP of a child with a disability requires some other arrangement, the agency shall ensure that the child is educated in the school that the child would attend if nondisabled. In selecting the LRE for a child with a disability, the persons making the educational placement decision shall give consideration to any potential harmful effect on the child or on the quality of services that the child needs. An agency shall not remove a child with a disability from education in age-appropriate regular classrooms solely because of needed modifications in the general curriculum.

In providing, or arranging for the provision of, nonacademic and extracurricular services and activities, including meals, recess periods, and other nonacademic services and activities, each agency shall ensure that each child with a disability participates with nondisabled children in those services and activities to the maximum extent appropriate to the needs of that child. Each agency shall ensure that each child with a disability receives the supplementary aids and services specified in the child's IEP as being appropriate and necessary for the child to participate in nonacademic settings.

If it is determined that the placement in a specialized public or private school or facility is necessary to provide a FAPE to a child with a disability in accordance with the child's IEP, the agency shall provide for the placement, including nonmedical care and room and board, at no cost to the parent or parents of the child. Each agency that operates any separate facility for the education of children with disabilities shall ensure that the facility is comparable to those operated for nonexceptional children, and each facility shall be appropriate to the chronological ages of the students and the instructional program being provided.

The Parent alleged the LEA predetermined the Student’s placement and failed to document a discussion of LRE and alternatives before recommending more restrictive options.

The LEA responded they had consistently included least restrictive environment considerations in every IEP that would assign the Student to a placement outside the general education environment, whether the resource room or the TLC program.

The IEP team considered the continuum of alternative placements and the supports/services needed for the Student to access the general education setting and make progress, which was documented. The Parent felt the placement was predetermined but documentation provided evidence the LEA did consider a continuum of alternative placements which were decided at the meeting, not prior. The School consistently offered and encouraged the Student to attend school more each day and proposed different schedule options to support the Student's educational needs. Decisions were made through team consensus or a LEA decision. The Parent requested services be provided in the Student's home. The LEA denied the request and provided PWN, indicating the home services were more restrictive than the LEA's proposal of the Student's placement in the TLC as required by K.A.R. 91-40-21; 34 CFR §§ 300.114-116, 300.327.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations it is not substantiated that the LEA, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, made a special education placement decision by the Student's IEP team, not including the Parent. It is also not substantiated that the LEA did not consider a continuum of placement options nor that they did not determine the least restrictive environment for the Student.

Issue Four

Whether USD #431, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, utilized a variety of sources, including information from the Parent, when making decisions about the Student's eligibility for special education services. K.A.R. 91-40-10(d); 34 CFR § 300.306.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-10(d) and 34 CFR § 300. 306, each evaluation team, in determining whether a child is an exceptional child and what the educational needs of the child are, shall draw upon information from a variety of sources, including aptitude and achievement tests, parent input, teacher recommendations, physical condition, social or cultural background, and adaptive behavior. The evaluation team shall ensure that the information obtained from all of the sources is documented and considered.

The Parent alleged the LEA did not consider the outside provider's diagnoses and input when determining eligibility of the Student.

The LEA response indicated the team had considered the information from both of the Parents and outside providers that was available at the time of the meeting. According to the LEA, two of the reports discussed in the Complaint were not provided until after the Student's eligibility meeting and that none of the outside providers had observed the Student in the school setting or contacted school employees for input into their reports. The LEA felt the outside providers were "working off limited data."

According to documentation, the LEA considered all outside information and data regarding the Student that was available at the time of each meeting. Some of the outside provider information the Parent referred to was given to the team after the eligibility meeting. The team indicated many of the vision-related needs documented were already being implemented under the accommodation provision of the IEP. To determine the Student's eligibility, the team used a wide range of internal and external data, including qualitative and quantitative daily logs, ABC data, and both the school-based FBA and the FBA conducted by the Outside Provider.

The team considered additional outside data when they developed a plan for the Student. When developing the FBA, the team, in addition to LEA evaluators, used outside provider data that was reflected in the FBA. The IEP team reviewed the Optometrist's January 8, 2026 report after receiving it at the January 13, 2026 meeting, noting that some of the attached documents were not new and had already been considered in a previous evaluation according to the Special Education Director. The Parent frequently communicated updates during drop-off, especially when the Student was having a difficult morning, and the Parent provided comfort items from home—such as the fabric "kangaroo hut" burrow and a fanny pack of tools—to help the Student regulate at school. The IEP team considered all outside data if available during the time of each meeting according to K.A.R. 91-40-10(d); 34 CFR § 300.306.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations it is not substantiated that the LEA, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, did not utilize a variety of sources, including information from the Parent, when making decisions about the Student's eligibility for special education services.

Issue Five

Whether USD #431, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, implemented the Student's IEP in accordance with the starting dates included in the IEP. K.A.R. 91-40-16; 34 CFR § 300.323.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-16 and 34 CFR § 300.323, each agency shall be responsible for initiating and conducting meetings to develop, review, and revise the IEP of each exceptional child served by the agency. Each agency shall ensure that an IEP is in effect before special education and related services are provided to an exceptional child, those services for which written consent has been granted as specified by law are implemented not later than 10 school days after parental consent is granted unless a reasonable justification for a delay can be shown, an IEP is in effect for each exceptional child at the beginning of each school year, the child's IEP is accessible to each regular education teacher, special education teacher, related service provider, and other service provider who is responsible for its implementation. Each teacher and provider is informed of that individual's specific responsibilities related to implementing the child's IEP, and the specific accommodations, modifications, and supports that must be provided for the child in accordance with the IEP.

The Parent alleged that the LEA failed to provide special education services per the dates in the Student's IEP.

The LEA responded that they have "always fully implemented the [S]tudent's IEP services in accordance with the IEP start dates and promptly implemented changes following IEP team decisions and required parental consent." When extensions were granted or amendments were made, the LEA initiated services consistent with the agreed plan while maintaining documentation of consent, implementation dates, and service delivery.

According to records provided, the December 15, 2025 IEP aligned with the PWN of January 19, 2026. Regarding the February 3, 2026 IEP, the team proposed a structured amendment to the Student's special education minutes, centered on a gradual reintegration plan designed to build the Student's stamina and support their social emotional needs. This transition was scheduled to occur in phases throughout February and March 2026, starting with only two days a week for one hour and progressively increasing in frequency, which was requested by the Parent. By the beginning of March of 2026, the proposed schedule shifted to a full five-day week, with the start times incrementally moving earlier—from 12:45 p.m. to 11:30 a.m.—to slowly extend the Student's presence on campus while keeping the daily duration of instruction consistent. When the Parent and the Other Parent wanted more time to discuss placement in the TLC, a stay-put option was put into place so the Student would still receive services.

Throughout this process, the Student was slated to receive 60 minutes of special education services outside of the regular classroom during each scheduled visit. In addition to these core instructional supports, the plan included specific speech-language services to be delivered every other week. These consisted of five minutes of direct services outside of the regular classroom and an additional five minutes of indirect services. This comprehensive schedule was intended to remain in effect through the duration of the IEP, or until the team determined that further updates to the Student's minutes were necessary based on their progress and access to instruction. According to past and present IEP dates the Student's IEP's were implemented in accordance with the starting dates included in the IEP. K.A.R. 91-40-16; 34 CFR § 300.323.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations it is not substantiated that the LEA did not implement the Student's IEP in accordance with the starting dates included in the IEP.

Issue Six

Whether USD #431, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, violated FERPA regulations when another student's personally identifiable information was provided to the Parent. 34 CFR § 303.401(a)(b).

According to 34 CFR § 303.401(a)(b), each State must ensure that the parents of a child referred under this part are afforded the right to confidentiality of personally identifiable information, including the right to written notice of, and written consent to, the exchange of that information among agencies, consistent with Federal and State laws. As required under sections 617(c) and 642 of the Act, the regulations in 34 CFR §§ 303.401 through 303.417 ensure the protection of the confidentiality of any personally identifiable data, information, and records collected or maintained pursuant to this part by the Secretary and by participating agencies, including the State lead agency and EIS providers, in accordance with the protections under the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA) in 20 U.S.C. 1232g and 34 CFR part 99. Each State must have procedures in effect to ensure that participating agencies (including the lead agency and EIS providers) comply with the part C confidentiality procedures in 34 CFR §§ 303.401 through 303.417.

The Parent alleged that the LEA emailed the Parent, including another student's personally identifiable information.

The LEA responded they understood their obligation to protect student information. Human error happened in this case, where another student's personally identifiable information was inadvertently disclosed via email to the Parent.

Upon notification, the LEA issued a corrective communication requesting the deletion of disclosed email and provided the correct documents. The LEA notified the parents affected about the disclosure. The LEA maintains standard confidentiality language in email ("The content of this email is confidential and intended for the recipient specified in this message only. It is strictly forbidden to share any part of this message with any third party, without a written consent of the sender. If you received this message by mistake, please reply to this message and follow with its deletion, so that we can ensure such a mistake does not occur in the future.") The LEA did not contest this allegation. 34 CFR § 303.401(a)(b).

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations it is substantiated that the LEA violated FERPA regulations when another student's personally identifiable information was provided to the Parent.

Issue Seven

Whether USD #431, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, provided the Student with a FAPE when IEP services were not implemented, procedural violations occurred, and the Parent did not have an opportunity to participate in the special education process. K.A.R. 91-40-2, 91-40-3; 34 CFR § 300.101.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-2, each agency shall provide a FAPE in accordance with K.S.A. 72-966 and amendments thereto, and with this article. Each agency's obligation to provide a FAPE shall extend to exceptional children residing on Indian reservations, unless these children are provided a FAPE by the Secretary of the Interior under federal law. Each agency shall make a FAPE available to each child with a disability residing in its jurisdiction beginning not later than the child's third birthday.

Each agency shall make a FAPE available to any child with a disability, even though the child has not failed or been retained in a course or grade and is advancing from grade to grade. The determination of whether a child advancing from grade to grade is a child with a disability shall be made on an individual basis in accordance with the child find activities and evaluation procedures required by this article. Each agency shall provide special education and related services based on the child's unique needs, not on the child's area of exceptionality.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-3 and 34 CFR § 300.101, each agency shall ensure that children with disabilities have available to them the same variety of educational programs and services that are available to nondisabled children served by the agency, including art, music, industrial arts, consumer and homemaking education, and vocational education. Each agency shall provide nonacademic and extracurricular services and activities in the manner necessary to afford children with disabilities an equal opportunity for participation in those services and activities, including the provision of supplementary aids and services as determined to be necessary by the child's IEP team.

Nonacademic and extracurricular services and activities shall include counseling services, athletics, transportation, health services, recreational activities, special interest groups or clubs sponsored by the agency, referrals to agencies that provide assistance to individuals with disabilities, and employment of students, including both employment by the agency and assistance in making outside employment available.

The Parent alleged that the cumulative procedural violations materially interfered with the Parent’s opportunity to participate in educational decision-making and resulted in substantive harm to the Student through delayed and inconsistent access to appropriate supports.

The LEA responded they have always fully implemented the Student’s IEP, as reflected in the service logs and supporting records provided. The LEA provided both of the Parents with meaningful opportunities to participate in the special education process through timely meeting notices, multiple scheduling attempts, in-person and virtual participation options, and documentation of parent input and requests.

According to 34 CFR 300.513, to the extent any procedural concerns are substantiated, a procedural violation constitutes a denial of FAPE only if it: 1) impeded the child's right to a FAPE, 2) significantly impeded the parent's opportunity to participate in the decision-making process regarding provisions of FAPE, or 3) caused a deprivation of educational benefits. The LEA provided service logs for fiscal year 2025 detailing the Student received speech-language services from the SLP from 1:00 p.m. to 1:15 p.m. Each session contained a progress code of 3, which meant the Student "maintained performance." Behavior Logs for the Student from February 19, 2025 through February 18, 2026 described the Student's behaviors, classroom activities, levels of engagement, and moments of regulation and dysregulation.

Eight PWN's were sent to both of the Parents via email ranging from December 16, 2024 through February 17, 2026. Documentation of Notice of Special Education Meetings were for December 4, 2025, and February 12, 2026. Both of the Parents were notified of all meetings "10+ days in advance and were provided with a 10-day Notice of Meeting for each meeting." Parent input was obtained by meeting discussions, parent input forms, rating scales, parent presentation/demonstration, email communications and documented parent requests.

The LEA maintained the Student's placement when both of the Parents wanted to take time to think about TLC placement at a December 15, 2025 meeting, confirming Parent consideration and input. Both of the Parents participated in the educational process throughout the Student's years on an IEP.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations it is not substantiated that the LEA did not provide the Student with a FAPE when IEP services were not implemented, procedural violations occurred, and the Parent did not have an opportunity to participate in the special education process. K.A.R. 91-40-2, 91-40-3; 34 CFR § 300.101.

Corrective Action

Information gathered in the course of this investigation has substantiated noncompliance with special education statutes and regulations. A violation occurred in the following area:

A. The LEA violated FERPA regulations when another student's personally identifiable information was provided to the Parent. 34 CFR § 303.401(a)(b).

In this case, the evidence supports the finding that USD #431 did violate FERPA regulations by sending another student's information to the Parent. The Parent was asked to delete the other student's personal information and the parents of the student whose records were sent to the wrong parent was notified.

A. Federal regulations at 34 CFR § 303.401(a)(b). specify the LEA must ensure that the parents of a child referred under this part are afforded the right to confidentiality of personally identifiable information, including the right to written notice of, and written consent to, the exchange of that information among agencies, consistent with Federal and State laws.

In this case, the evidence supports the finding that USD #431 sent another student's information to the Parent therefore violating FERPA requirements.

Based on the foregoing, USD #431 is directed to take the following actions:

1. Within 15 calendar days of the date of this report, USD #431 shall submit a written statement of assurance to Special Education and Title Services (SETS) stating that it will comply with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA)at 34 CFR § 303.401(a)(b). by completing staff training on FERPA requirements.
2. Within 45 calendar days after the staff trainings to discuss FERPA requirements USD #431 shall submit the associated signed documentation showing staff participation in this training.

Right to Appeal

Either party may appeal the findings or conclusions in this report by filing a written notice of appeal with the State Commissioner of Education, ATTN: Special Education and Title Services, Landon State Office Building, 900 SW Jackson Street, Suite 620, Topeka, KS 66612-1212. The notice of appeal may also be filed by email to formalcomplaints@ksde.gov The notice of appeal must be delivered within 10 calendar days from the date of this report.

Upon receiving an appeal, an appeal committee of at least three department of education members shall be appointed by the commissioner to review the report and to consider the information provided by the local education agency, the complainant, or others. The appeal process, including any hearing conducted by the appeal committee, shall be completed within 15 days from the date of receipt of the notice of appeal, and a decision shall be rendered within five days after the appeal process is completed unless the appeal committee determines that exceptional circumstances exist with respect to the particular complaint. In this event, the decision shall be rendered as soon as possible by the appeal committee.

(2) If an appeal committee affirms a compliance report that requires corrective action by an agency, that agency shall initiate the required corrective action immediately. If, after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the agency shall be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following:

(A) The issuance of an accreditation deficiency advisement;
(B) the withholding of state or federal funds otherwise available to the agency;
(C) the award of monetary reimbursement to the complainant; or
(D) any combination of the actions specified in paragraph (f)(2)

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST
UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #200
ON FEBRUARY 11, 2026

DATE OF REPORT: MARCH 26, 2026

This report is in response to a Complaint filed with our office on behalf of a student, ----------, by their parent, ----------. In the remainder of the report, the student will be referred to as "the Student" and the parent as "the Parent."

The Complaint is against USD # 200, Greeley County Public Schools. In the remainder of the report, "the School" and the "local education agency (LEA)" shall refer to USD #200.

When a special education complaint is filed against a school district that is a member of a special education cooperative or interlocal, or that uses any other state recognized public agency to serve children with disabilities, the term "local education agency (LEA)" in this report will include the school district, the special education cooperative or interlocal, and any other agency that is recognized by the state as an administrative agency for public elementary or secondary schools and is serving the educational needs of this student.

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) allows for a 30-day timeline to investigate a child complaint. A complaint is considered to be filed on the date it is delivered to both the KSDE and the LEA. In this case, the KSDE initially received the complaint on February 11, 2026 and the 30-day timeline ended on March 13, 2026.

Allegations

The following issues will be investigated:

ISSUE ONE: Whether USD #200, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), provided the Parent a properly formed Prior Written Notice (PWN) within a reasonable time before proposing or refusing to change the eligibility of the Student for special education and related services. Further, whether the LEA issued a PWN to indicate whether they were refusing the IEE or initiating due process. K.A.R. 91-40-26, K.S.A. 72-3430(b)(2); 34 CFR § 300.503(a)(b).

ISSUE TWO: Whether USD #200, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, ensured that a group of qualified professionals and the Parent determined whether the Student was a student with a disability. K.A.R. 91-40-10(a)(1)(2)(d)(1); 34 CFR § 300.306(b)(1)(i).

ISSUE THREE: Whether USD #200, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, ensured the Parent had the opportunity to inspect and review all educational records and participate in any meeting concerning the Student with respect to the identification, evaluation, or education placement of the child; and the provision of a Free Appropriate Public Education (FAPE) to the child, and whether the LEA provided a PWN to the Parent. K.A.R. 91-40-21, 91-40-17, 91-40-25; 34 CFR §§ 300.322, 300.501(b)(c).

Investigation of Complaint

The Parent did not respond to a request for information. The following LEA staff were interviewed on March 2, 2026: the Special Education Director, the School Psychologist and the Superintendent.

In completing this investigation, the Complaint Investigator reviewed documentation provided by the Parent and the LEA. Although additional documentation was provided and reviewed, the following materials were used as the basis of the findings and conclusions of the investigation:

1. Prior Written Notice, 11/03/25
2. Notice of Special Education Meeting, 12/16/25
3. IEP Meeting Participants Signatures, 12/16/25
4. Evaluation/Eligibility Team Report, 12/16/25

Background Information

This investigation involved a first-grade student enrolled at an elementary school in USD #200. The Student is not currently receiving special education or related services as a child with a disability per the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA). The Student has a diagnosis of Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD), Adjustment Disorder, and Dysgraphia. The Student is creative and kind, loves sharing stories, and is empathetic towards peers.

Findings of the Investigation

The following findings are based on a review of documentation and interviews with staff in the LEA.

1. A Phonological Awareness Skills Test administered in May 2025, and again in July 2025, scored the Student at 39/84 points and 64/84 points respectively.
2. The following were the Student's iReady Reading Diagnostic results:
    a. August 14, 2025: Emerging K
    b. December 8, 2025: Mid 1
    c. January 26, 2026: Grade K
3. Letter Names and Sounds assessment data gathered between August 21, 2025 and January 26, 2026 indicated general proficiency with the following significant anomalies:
    a. 26/41 sounds on August 21, 2025 versus 36/41 sounds on October 21, 2025.
    b. 35/41 sounds on both November 19, 2025 and January 8, 2026 versus 21/41 sounds on December 11, 2025.
4. Letter Writing worksheets dated from August 21, 2025 to January 26, 2026 demonstrated the Student's struggles with handwriting and showed growth in writing both uppercase and lowercase letters.
5. Work samples spanning the 2025-26 school year indicated the Student was able to successfully complete work in class, with assistance occasionally.
6. An undated Phonemic Awareness assessment indicated the Student was proficient in six of eight categories, and developing in two of eight categories.
7. The Student's beginning and middle of the year benchmark for phonics skills showed the Student was proficient or developing in the skills taught.
8. Behavior "Check-in, Check-out" sheets recorded between October 20, 2025 and January 22, 2026 indicated overall positive behavior. Notable incidents included sleeping in class on the following dates:

a. November 4 thru November 6, 2025.
b. January 14, January 19, and January 21, 2026.

9. In an email on October 29, 2025, the Special Education Director informed the School Psychologist the Parent would be contacting them to request an evaluation for the Student.
10. On October 30, 2025, the Parent emailed the School Psychologist to officially request a special education evaluation for the Student. The School Psychologist responded the same day, and set up a meeting with the Parent for the next week.
11. The Parent emailed the report from the Outside Evaluator to the School Psychologist on November 3, 2025. On the same day, the Parent emailed the Student's diagnosis from the Outside Therapist to the School Psychologist.
12. A PWN for an initial evaluation and request for consent was signed by the Parent on November 3, 2025.
13. A Tricky Word assessment administered on November 17, 2025 indicated the Student scored 23/46 words correct. A second assessment administered January 15, 2026 reported the Student was able to correctly identify 31/46 tricky words.
14. A Notice of Special Education Meeting proposed a meeting on December 16, 2025 to review the results of the Student's evaluation. The Notice included information about developing an IEP. Documentation of delivery reported the Notice was sent via email on November 17 and December 15, 2025 to the Parent and the Other Parent, and via text to the Parent on December 11, 2025. The Parent signed the Notice on December 16, 2025.
15. On December 5, 2025, the Parent emailed the School Psychologist an "updated report" for the Student.
16. On December 11, 2025, the School Psychologist emailed a draft of the Eligibility/Evaluation report to the Parent, the Other Parent, the Superintendent, the School Counselor, the General Education Teacher, the Speech Language Pathologist, the Occupational Therapist, and the Special Education Provider. The email read "Attached is [the Student's] DRAFT [sic] evaluation/eligibility report for you all to review before [their] meeting on 12/16[/25]. More information may be added prior to or at the meeting. No decisions have been made. At the meeting, we will review the report and determine eligibility for special education. If [the Student] is found eligible then we will write an IEP, if not then we will consider next steps including supports or accommodations."
17. An IEP Meeting Participants page dated December 16, 2025 included signatures from the Parent, the Special Education Provider, the General Education Teacher, the Superintendent, the School Psychologist, the School Counselor, and the Outside Therapist.
18. An Evaluation/Eligibility Team Report for an initial evaluation dated December 16, 2025 included the following relevant information:

a. The Parent requested an evaluation due to the Student's academic and behavioral struggles.
b. The LEA acknowledged the Student experienced ADHD, Adjustment Disorder, and Dysgraphia, as diagnosed by the Outside Evaluator.
c. The Student demonstrated work avoidance by doodling or fidgeting. Observations specifically remarked on the Student practicing tying their shoes instead of working.
d. Classroom observations by the School Psychologist reported the Student's "behavior was similar to peers". The General Education Teacher was observed checking on the Student five times, as opposed to three times for peers, and the Student asked for help two times, as compared to once by peers.
e. Behavior Data recorded positive behavior 80% of the time.
f. Motor Skills testing indicated no gross motor issues, and highlighted fine motor concerns about grip and handwriting.
g. Concerns from the IEP team recorded learning and social/emotional difficulties including outbursts and refusals, as well as concerns with sensory sensitivity and visual-motor difficulty.
h. The Student was able to write their name independently and accurately, and numbers 1-10 without a model. When asked to write uppercase letters A-Z without a model, the Student was able to write the letter "P" and reported they weren't sure what came next. Reversals and mixed casing were present. The Student presented as left-handed when writing, and was able to cut with scissors with either hand, more successfully with their left hand.
i. The Student's sensory processing ability was evaluated by the School Psychologist as below average across all categories. Evaluations indicated "over-responsivity" for vision and touch inputs, and "under-responsivity" for hearing, taste/smell, body awareness, and balance. Recommendations were included for supports for sensory processing and visual-motor skills.
j. The Parent reported the Student did not like coming to school. It was noted the Student "experiences clinginess or separation anxiety at drop-off time." They shared the Student had a good memory, however often needed directions repeated. The Parent stated the Student was a good communicator.
k. The General Education Teacher stated the Student did not have significant social issues. They reported the Student followed school rules 80% of the time. The General Education Teacher reported the Student "can always follow single-step directions. Sometimes [they need] 2-3 step directions repeated and sometimes more than once." However, the Student had "frequent tantrums, beyond what is typical for [their] age." The General Education Teacher shared the Student displayed "some aggression or refusal to follow rules," especially when tired from mental focus. They shared the Student "can experience notable emotional distress, including symptoms of anxiety and depression, especially after a change in routine or weekend." The General Education Teacher "noted challenges with learning, attention, and executive functioning skills, such as planning, organization, and task initiation." All areas of concern were noted as "typical" of an ADHD diagnosis. Areas of potential growth were identified as emotional regulation, positive growth mindset, relationship building, resilience, routines and adapting to change, and practicing SEL tools.

l. Outside evaluations indicated the following:
    i. "[C]linically significant social-communication difficulties that may interfere with everyday interactions."
    ii. Supported ADHD and Adjustment disorder diagnoses, with risk indicated for anxiety, depression, somatization, and difficulties with self-regulation.
    iii. Supported sensory sensitivities and below-average processing speed.
    iv. Found the Student's language, communication, and social-emotional skills to be age-appropriate.

m. Overall evaluations indicated the Student performed at a low average capacity compared to peers. While they were making steady progress academically, concerns existed around self-regulation, fine motor skills, sensory processing, adaptive skills, and writing.

n. Recommendations included ongoing interventions and reducing sensory overload and distractions, frequent check-ins, and possible occupational therapy or OT consultation.

o. The document indicated "The Student is not eligible for special education because: Special education services are not necessary to enable this student to receive educational benefits in accordance with [their] abilities or capabilities."

p. Under "Assurances":
    i. The statement "Upon completing the most recent evaluation or reevaluation of the [S]tudent, did a team of qualified professionals AND the parent determine whether the [S]tudent is a student with an exceptionality" was marked "Yes."
    ii. The statement "Was the [S]tudent assessed in ALL areas related to the suspected exceptionality, including, if appropriate, health, vision, hearing, social and emotional status, general intelligence, academic performance, communicative status, and motor abilities? Explain: All areas of concern that were reported by the parent and teachers were evaluated including social/emotional, reading, math, fine motor, and sensory, among others" was marked "Yes."

q. A Statement above the signatures included "Legal education decision-maker(s) may indicate if they agree/disagree. However, consent is not necessary in order to determine eligibility."

r. The Parent and IEP team signed the document on December 16, 2025.

19. Team Meeting Notes dated December 16, 2025 indicated the Parent, the School Psychologist, the General Education Teacher, the Special Education Provider, the School Counselor, the Superintendent, and the Outside Therapist attended the meeting. The Parent raised concerns that evaluations were not done in a typical classroom setting, therefore "the testing doesn't necessarily reflect [the Student's] performance in class." They shared the Student was often tired and had been sleeping in class. The School Psychologist reported the Student "does not meet necessary criteria for some of the exceptionality considerations on prong 1 and based on progress monitoring and performance did not meet criteria for prong 2." They stated the Student "may need some accommodations, but not specially designed instruction at this time." The General Education Teacher reported they were currently offering accommodations to the Student. An addendum to the document indicated the Parent emailed further concerns on December 19, 2025.
20. A PWN dated December 16, 2025 stated the team met to determine "[w]hether this [S]tudent was eligible for special education." The Identification/Eligibility section box was checked. The PWN informed the Parent the Student was not eligible for special education services at that time. The PWN stated the Student "does not need specially designed instruction at this time as evidenced by progress monitoring data." The documentation of delivery indicated the School Psychologist emailed the PWN to the Parent on December 16 and 19, 2025, and the Special Education Provider "hand-delivered" the notice on December 16, 2025. The PWN indicated "Consent NOT Required" on the Identification/Eligibility section. The PWN was not signed by the Parent.
21. In a letter titled "Formal Cooperative Complaint - Section 504 Process, IDEA Eligibility, and Denial of [a] FAPE" dated December 19, 2025, the Parent shared concerns arising from the December 16, 2025 eligibility meeting, and requested corrective action from the LEA. Concerns included:
    a. Consideration of retention, impact of private tutoring, and access to instruction.
    b. Lack of communication around progress monitoring.
    c. "Denial of meaningful parent participation" due to no written record of the Parent's disagreement with the eligibility determination.
    d. Concerns the strong iReady data came from adult support during assessment.
    e. Disagreement around what is considered "normal" for the Student's age range, and concerns about the Student sleeping during instruction.
    f. Lack of documented accommodations, and recognizing the need for adult support.
    g. Disagreement occupational therapy (OT) cannot be provided as a stand-alone service rather than a related service.
    h. The Parent emailed the letter to the Other Parent, the School Psychologist, the General Education Teacher, and the Superintendent on December 19, 2025.

22. On December 19, 2025, the School Psychologist emailed the Occupational Therapist and the Special Education Director to ask if stand-alone OT services were an option for the Student. The Occupational Therapist replied on January 6, 2026. They stated while the State does allow OT as a stand-alone service, the Student "falls just below the average range but remains within two standard deviations of the mean and is not considered clinically significant." The Occupational Therapist added they supported the team's exploration of the least restrictive environment for the Student, including consultation with the General Education Teacher to implement accommodations. They stated they would be willing to provide pull-out OT services if that was determined necessary for the Student to access their education. The Special Education Director responded on January 7, 2026 the team would "stand behind the evaluation determination". They indicated they would reach out to the Occupational Therapist for support. The Occupational Therapist agreed.
23. In an email on January 6, 2026, the Special Education Director asked the School Psychologist to review a proposed PWN. The Superintendent was copied on the email. The School Psychologist responded the information looked correct, and they would enter it into the proper form. They asked for clarification on "what boxes to check … ." The Special Education Director responded on January 7, 2026 with an edited PWN for review. The School Psychologist emailed a final copy to the Superintendent and Special Education Director the same day.
24. An updated PWN dated December 16, 2025 included the following additional information:
    a. "Special education and related services needed by this student" and "The appropriate educational placement to provide special education and related services identified in this student's Individualized Education Program (IEP)" were added as reasons for the team meeting.
    b. The "Identification, Educational Placement, or Provision of Special Education and Related Services" section box was checked.
    c. The notice indicated "Consent NOT Required" on the Identification, Educational Placement, or Provision of Special Education and Related Services section.
    d. Indicated the LEA refused specially designed instruction and proposed a 504 plan.
    e. Stated "The [S]tudent's reported sleeping behaviors were limited in duration, increased in occurrence just recently, and did not demonstrate an ongoing pattern impacting educational performance. … Parent participation in the Student Intervention Team (SIT) process is not required when a student is making progress within the initial tiered interventions. General education supports and consultative services remain appropriate to address the [S]tudent's needs."
    f. The Documentation of Delivery reported the Superintendent emailed the PWN to the Parent on January 7, 2026.

25. Emails dated January 5 thru January 14, 2026 indicated the Superintendent, the School Psychologist, and the Special Education Director planned to meet with the Parent on January 22, 2026. On January 21, 2026, the Superintendent emailed a draft of a 504 plan for the Student to the Parent, the Other Parent, the School Psychologist, the General Education Teacher, the Special Education Director, and the Special Education Provider. In the same email, the Superintendent indicated the General Education Teacher was ill. The Parent asked to postpone the meeting so the General Education Teacher could attend. The meeting was rescheduled for January 26, 2026.
26. In an email chain beginning on January 22, 2026, the Parent requested the full educational records for the Student. They sent a follow up email on January 26, 2026. The Superintendent responded the same day that the LEA was in the process of digitizing the Student's records. The School Psychologist sent several evaluation documents on January 26, 2026. On January 27, 2026 the Special Education Director responded they would collect the records as soon as possible, and informed the Parent the LEA legally had 45 days to respond to the request. They stated they were "finishing up" a PWN for the Parent, and hoped to send it that night or the next morning. The Superintendent emailed a draft of the Student's 504 plan on January 28, 2026.
27. On January 26, 2026, the Parent emailed the Superintendent, the Special Education Director, the General Education Teacher, the Special Education Provider, the School Psychologist, and the Other Parent indicating they wanted to proceed with a 504 plan for the Student and the Parent requested an IEE.
28. An second addendum to the Team Meeting Notes for December 16, 2025 dated January 26, 2026 stated "[The] Parent wanted it documented in the staffing team report that [they] did not agree with the team's initial determination since [they were] not able to mark disagree on the eligibility report."
29. Meeting Notes dated January 26, 2026 indicated the Parent, the Special Education Director, the Superintendent, the School Psychologist, the Family Advocate, the General Education Teacher, and the School Counselor participated. It was noted a virtual meeting invitation was sent to the Other Parent.
    The purpose of the meeting was to discuss the Parent's concerns and a 504 plan. The Parent asserted their request for an IEE. The Superintendent stated the LEA would go to due process on the IEE. The Family Advocate asked for a PWN including all the information discussed at the meeting. The Special Education Director stated they would provide one. The Parent agreed to continue with a 504 plan at a future meeting.
30. A PWN dated January 26, 2026 included the following relevant information:
    a. The team met on January 26, 2026 to determine "[w]hether this [S]tudent was eligible for special education; [s]pecial education and related services needed by this student; [and] the appropriate educational placement to provide special education and related services identified in this student's Individualized Education Program (IEP)."
    b. Under the Identification/Eligibility section, the Student was found not eligible for special education services because the Student "does not meet the criteria as a child with an exceptionality, [and] [s]pecial education services are not necessary to enable this student to receive educational benefits in accordance with [their] abilities or capabilities."

c. The box was checked for "The [LEA] refuses to initiate or change the identification, educational placement, or provision of special education services."

d. Notes in the PWN reported on January 22, 2026, the Parent emailed "a second dispute for the [LEA's] refusal of finding [the Student] eligible for an IEP. [The Parent's] complaint and disagreement with the team's determination will be included in [the Student's] evaluation record."

e. Parent requests recorded in the PWN included an IEE, reconsideration of eligibility, and implementation of an IEP. The LEA proposed a 504 plan. The Parent also requested "[r]econvening of the eligibility team within the required legal timelines [and] [i]ssuance of a Prior Written Notice (PWN) addressing each component of this request."

f. An Explanation of Actions reiterated the Student's age appropriate school performance, and the implementation of interventions and accommodations. This section asserted "The Student requires the implementation of accommodations, which can be implemented through a 504 plan which was requested by the Parent on December 19th, 2025." The LEA again offered a 504 plan. Regarding the IEE, the LEA acknowledged the outside testing and stated "[t]he outside report was considered and included in the [LEA's] evaluation due to its thoroughness with testing. The [LEA] understands that by refusing to pay for an IEE that they will be filing for due process." The LEA acknowledged the Parent's first complaint email and stated they responded with the updated PWN that was sent on January 7, 2026. The LEA stated the original purpose of the January 26, 2026 meeting was to discuss the first complaint and draft a 504 plan. They acknowledged the second complaint sent just prior to the meeting, and indicated the PWN for January 26, 2026 addressed the requests presented by the Parent.

g. An Options Considered and Rejected section acknowledged the Parent's disagreement and stated "the team stands behind the evaluation determination that intervention data and assessment results from [the Student's] evaluation do not support placement in special education." The notes reported the General Education Teacher did not modify curriculum for the Student, and was already implementing accommodations successfully. Regarding the IEE, this section explained "[T]he team does not feel a third evaluation in the span of six months is warranted and questions the validity of results if duplicate assessments are given."

h. The PWN included a detailed list of evaluations, and an acknowledgment of the Parent's disagreement with the LEA's decision.

i. Documentation of Delivery indicated the Director of Special Education mailed and emailed the PWN to the Parent on January 29, 2026.

31. A Notice to Parents of Special Education Due Process Hearing was signed by the Special Education Director on January 29, 2026.
32. In an email dated January 30, 2026, the Special Education Director told the School Psychologist they had mailed the evaluation reports, all PWNs, and the Due Process Hearing notice to the Parent,
33. A document dated February 11, 2026 indicated the due process complaint was withdrawn because the Student was unenrolled from the LEA. On this same date, the Parent notified the KSDE and the Complaint Investigator that they wanted to proceed with the Investigation.

Special Education Director Interview:

34. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Special Education Director explained that they spoke with the Parent on October 29, 2025, regarding the Parent's concerns over the Student. They recalled Parents' concerns included behavior, the Student being dyslexic, and the Student Intervention Team (SIT) process.
35. Regarding PWNs, the Special Education Director shared that the Student was found ineligible for special education services during a meeting on December 16, 2025. Following this determination, a PWN was sent to the Parent on the same day, and again on December 19, 2025, due to the Parent asking the team to "reconsider" eligibility. Additionally, the Special Education Director indicated the team "fully considered the outside evaluation" in the eligibility process.
    Additionally, the Special Education Director confirmed the Parent requested an IEE via email on January 22, 2026. In response to this request and a subsequent meeting on January 26, 2026, the LEA issued a PWN and a Due Process Hearing Notice. While the Due Process Notice contained a typographical error listing the year as "2027," the Special Education Director confirmed it was sent on January 29, 2026, and was intended to cover the Due Process Hearing.
36. When asked about a delay in the delivery of PWN, the Special Education Director shared that was "not the intent at all". They explained the delay was actually due to their attendance at a "professional development" event. The Special Education Director clarified that they sought the Other Parent's updated address to ensure both active guardians remained involved. To document the Parent's disagreement with the eligibility decision, the LEA added notes to the staffing team report and included the Parent's dissatisfaction in the PWN.

School Psychologist Interview:

37. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the School Psychologist stated they received the outside evaluation report for the Student on December 5, 2025. They shared that testing started as soon as the LEA received Parent consent, and some testing occurred after receiving the outside report. The LEA's results were consistent with the outside data, showing the Student's scores in the average to low-average range.

38. The School Psychologist recalled that during the December 16, 2025 meeting, the team reached a consensus that the Student was ineligible for an IEP because the Student was making progress through general education interventions. The team did not dispute the existence of a disability but determined that SDI was not required at that time.
39. When asked about providing the Parent with a copy of the report, the School Psychologist shared they provided multiple versions of the evaluation eligibility team report to the Parent. A draft copy was sent on December 11, 2025, prior to the eligibility meeting. A second draft followed on December 19, 2025, as the team was still compiling information. The final evaluation report was not provided until January 26, 2026, shortly before a subsequent meeting.
40. The School Psychologist explained the second PWN regarding the December 16, 2025, meeting was prompted by the need to address concerns raised by the Parent in an email and a formal complaint. They defined accurate documentation of parental disagreement as ensuring those views are included in the meeting notes or the evaluation report.

Superintendent Interview:

41. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Superintendent noted that the second PWN was delayed approximately one day, 36 hours, to ensure all information regarding next steps and due process was accurate. Additionally, the Special Education Director clarified that the specific email exchange regarding the Other Parent's address verification was between them and the Parent only.
42. The Superintendent explained the LEA maintains a policy of communicating with both parents if they retain guardianship or custodial rights, regardless of their marital status. Regarding meaningful parent participation, they defined "accurate documentation" as reflecting the parent's disagreement in the meeting notes and the subsequent notice. They noted that during the December 2025 meeting, the Parent participated and expressed their views but ended the meeting early for another appointment, which led the District to attempt scheduling future meetings to discuss a 504 plan.

Issue One

Whether USD #200, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), provided the Parent a properly formed Prior Written Notice (PWN) within a reasonable time before proposing or refusing to change the eligibility of the Student for special education and related services. Further, whether the LEA issued a PWN to indicate whether they were refusing the IEE or initiating due process. K.A.R. 91-40-26, K.S.A. 72-3430(b)(2); 34 CFR § 300.503(a)(b).

According to K.A.R. 91-40-26 and 34 CFR § 300.503(a)(b), in providing any notice to the parent or parents of an exceptional child regarding any action proposed or refused by an agency, each agency shall ensure that the notice includes a description of other options that the agency considered and the reasons why those options were rejected; and a description of other factors that are relevant to the agency's proposal or refusal. The parent understands the content of the notice.

According to K.S.A. 72-3430(b)(2), the parents of exceptional children shall have the right to a written prior notice in accordance with K.S.A. 72-3432, and amendments thereto, whenever an agency proposes to initiate or change; or refuses to initiate or change, the identification, evaluation, or educational placement of the child or the provision of a free appropriate public education to the child.

The Parent alleged the LEA failed to provide a PWN after the LEA found the Student ineligible for special education. Additionally, the Parent requested an IEE, and the LEA did not issue a PWN to indicate whether they were refusing the IEE or initiating due process.

The LEA responded, stating on December 11, 2025, the Parent and IEP team received a draft Evaluation/Eligibility Report for review, with the clarification that the report remained open for additional information prior to the December 16, 2025, determination meeting. The team's objective was to review the report to determine eligibility; if they were found eligible, an IEP would be developed, and if not, the team would consider alternative supports or accommodations. The Parent received the draft and attended the meeting, during which the team evaluated eligibility for Other Health Impairment (OHI), Specific Learning Disability (SLD), and Emotional Disturbance (ED). After reviewing multiple assessments against KSDE Prong 1 and Prong 2 criteria, the team concluded that while they met Prong 1 indicators for disability (ADHD, Adjustment Disorder, and SLD Dysgraphia), they did not meet Prong 2, as evidence showed they were making sufficient progress in the general education setting with appropriate accommodations.

The record indicates the LEA issued three documents identified as PWNs related to the December 16, 2025, eligibility meeting and subsequent parental complaints. The Initial PWN, dated December 16, 2025 informed the Parent that the Student was not eligible for special education services, citing that the Student "does not need specially designed instruction at this time". This PWN was updated on December 16, 2025 and sent January 7, 2026. The update formally added that the LEA refused special education eligibility for the Student and proposed a 504 plan. It included an explanation for the refusal, noting that general education supports and consultative services were appropriate and that parent participation in the SIT process was not required for a student making progress in initial tiered interventions. The first PWN was properly formed and detailed the outcomes of the eligibility meeting. The subsequent PWN issued in January 2026, provided additional information, but this information did not make the first PWN deficient.

Following a meeting on January 26, 2026, the LEA issued a PWN that refused to reconsider eligibility, again offered a 504 plan, addressed the Parent's second dispute, and included the LEA's acknowledgment that by refusing to pay for an IEE they would be filing for due process. The Notice also included a full explanation of actions and options considered and rejected, which is critical for a properly formed PWN. This PWN appears to be properly formed and directly addressed the Parent's requests and the LEA's final determination on eligibility and the IEE.

The primary area of concern for compliance is the timeliness of the PWN following the December 16, 2025, eligibility meeting. The initial PWN was provided on December 16, 2025, and the updated PWN was not sent until January 7, 2026, 22 days from the meeting. IDEA regulations require the PWN be provided "within a reasonable time." In this case, the PWN was provided the same day the decision was made. The delay in the second PWN was a result of the LEA wanting to provide more clarity, seek contact information for the Other Parent, and the LEA's winter break. The first PWN contained all the required elements and was properly formed.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to provide properly formed PWNs to the Parent within a reasonable time.

Issue Two

Whether USD #200, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, ensured that a group of qualified professionals and the Parent determined whether the Student was a student with a disability. K.A.R. 91-40-10(a)(1)(2)(d)(1); 34 CFR § 300.306(b)(1)(i).

According to K.A.R. 91-40-10(a)(1)(2)(d)(1) and 34 CFR § 300.306(b)(1)(i), after completion of appropriate evaluation procedures, a team of qualified professionals and the parent of the child who has been evaluated shall prepare a written evaluation report that includes a statement regarding the determination of whether the child has an exceptionality; the basis for making the determination; the relevant behavior noted during the observation of the child; the relationship of that behavior to the child's academic functioning; educationally relevant medical findings, if any; and if the child was evaluated for a specific learning disability, the additional information specified in subsection (e). Each team member shall certify in writing whether the report reflects the member's conclusion. If the report does not reflect that member's conclusion, the team member shall submit a separate statement presenting the member's conclusion. Each evaluation team, in determining whether a child is an exceptional child and what the educational needs of the child are, shall meet the following requirements: the evaluation team shall draw upon information from a variety of sources, including aptitude and achievement tests; parent input; teacher recommendations; physical condition; social or cultural background; and adaptive behavior.

The Parent alleged the LEA predetermined the Student's eligibility when they provided documentation that showed significant disability-related needs but denied special education eligibility.

The LEA responded, the eligibility determination was made by a group of qualified professionals and the Parent in accordance with K.A.R. 91-40-10 and 34 CFR § 300.306. The group included individuals qualified to interpret evaluation data, the Student's general education teacher, the Student's special education teacher, a licensed school psychologist, an LEA representative, and the Parent.

The IEP team reviewed and considered multiple sources of evaluation data, including standardized assessments, observations, intervention progress-monitoring data, parent input, and outside evaluation results, to determine whether the Student met eligibility criteria for special education. Based on the comprehensive evaluation information and team discussion, the group determined the Student did not meet eligibility criteria for special education services. Accordingly, USD #200 ensured that a group of qualified professionals and the Parent determined whether the Student was a child with a disability in compliance with K.A.R. 91-40-10 and 34 CFR § 300.306.

The IDEA requires that a team of qualified professionals and the Parent determine whether a student is a student with a disability. The Parent attended the December 16, 2025 eligibility meeting and "participated and expressed their views." The Eligibility Report was marked "Yes" that the determination was made by a team that included the Parent. The Parent specifically alleged a "denial of meaningful parent participation" due to the lack of a written record of their disagreement with the eligibility determination. The LEA updated the records after the Parent noted their disagreement on December 19, 2026.

On December 16, 2025, the LEA convened a properly formed team of qualified professionals and the Parent. The special education eligibility decision was that the Student was not eligible for special education because the Student was "making progress through general education interventions" and that "special education services are not necessary to enable this student to receive educational benefits." The LEA acknowledged outside diagnoses, and the General Education Teacher reported they were currently offering accommodations to the Student. Evaluations also identified concerns around sensory processing, fine motor skills, and executive functioning. The Parent was concerned that the testing was not reflective of the Student's performance in a typical classroom. The LEA agreed the Student had a disability, but the Student's disability did not require SDI.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to make a special education eligibility decision for the Student without qualified personnel and the Parent.

Issue Three

Whether USD #200, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, ensured the Parent had the opportunity to inspect and review all educational records and participate in any meeting concerning the Student with respect to the identification, evaluation, or education placement of the child; and the provision of a FAPE to the child, and whether the LEA provided a prior written notice to the Parent. K.A.R. 91-40-21, 91-40-17, 91-40-25; 34 CFR §§ 300.322, 300.501(b)(c).

According to K.A.R. 91-40-21, each agency shall give notice to the parents of any meeting to discuss the educational placement of their child. The notice shall meet the requirements of K.A.R. 91-40-17. If a parent cannot participate in person at a meeting relating to the educational placement of the child, the agency shall offer to use other methods to allow the parent to participate, including conference calls and video conferencing. An agency shall take action to ensure that parents understand, and are able to participate in, any discussions concerning the educational placement of their children

According to K.A.R 91-40-17 and 34 CFR § 300.322, each agency shall take steps to ensure that one or both of the parents of an exceptional child are present at each IEP team meeting or are afforded the opportunity to participate. These steps shall include scheduling each meeting at a mutually agreed-upon time and place, informing the parents of the information specified in subsection (b) of this regulation, and providing written notice to the parents of any IEP team meeting at least 10 days in advance of the meeting.

According to 91-40-25 and 34 CFR § 300.501(b)(c), each agency shall allow the parents of an exceptional child an opportunity to inspect and review all education records and participate in any meeting concerning their child with respect to the identification, evaluation, or education placement of the child; and the provision of a FAPE to the child. The notice shall indicate the purpose, time, and location of the meeting and the titles or positions of the persons who will attend on behalf of the agency or at the agency's request. If neither parent of an exceptional child can be physically present for a meeting concerning the child, the agency shall attempt other measures to ensure parental participation, including individual or conference telephone calls. A meeting shall not include the following informal or unscheduled conversations involving agency personnel and conversations on issues including teaching methodology, lesson plans, or coordination of service provision if those issues are not addressed in the child's IEP; and preparatory activities that agency personnel engage in to develop a proposal or response to a parent's proposal that will be discussed at a later meeting.

The Parent alleged they were unable to meaningfully participate because the LEA did not provide information in a timely manner after determining the Student did not qualify, citing the need to verify the Other Parent's contact information before providing the notice.

The LEA responded it ensured the Parent had the opportunity to inspect and review educational records, participate in meetings concerning identification and placement, and receive prior written notice in accordance with K.A.R. 91-40-21, 91-40-17, 91-40-25, and 34 CFR §§ 300.322 and 300.501. A draft Evaluation/Eligibility Report was emailed to the Parent and all IEP team members on December 11, 2025, prior to the December 16, 2025, determination meeting. The Parent attended the determination meeting and participated in the discussion regarding eligibility. The team considered the evaluation data and the Parent's input prior to making its determination. Any alleged procedural delay did not impede the Parent's opportunity to participate in decision-making or deprive the Student of educational benefit. Accordingly, USD #200 complied with IDEA requirements regarding parent participation, access to educational records, prior written notice, and the provision of a FAPE.

In late October 2025, the Parent requested the LEA conduct a special education evaluation of the Student. The LEA immediately responded and scheduled a meeting with the Parent for the following week. The Parent provided the LEA with a report from an Outside Therapist, and this information along with assessment data from the LEA was reviewed at the December 16, 2025 eligibility meeting in which the Parent attended. The LEA provided the Parent with a draft evaluation report and eligibility statement prior to the December 16, 2025 meeting, in which this information was reviewed with the Parent. After the Student was found to not be eligible for special education services, the LEA continued to work with the Parent to schedule another meeting to consider a 504 plan for the Student.

On January 22, 2026, the Parent made a written request for the "full education records" for the Student. The evaluation report was sent to the Parent in various stages of completion, with the final report and other evaluation documents provided to the Parent on January 26, 2026. On January 27, 2026, the LEA sent the Parent several evaluation documents, and informed the Parent the LEA had 45-days to respond to the request for records. The LEA's deadline for responding to the Parent's request for records was March 8, 2026, which is outside the Complaint Investigation look back period.

The facts demonstrate that the LEA fulfilled its obligation to ensure the Parent had the opportunity to participate in meetings, and review information that would be reviewed at the eligibility meeting. The Parent attended the key eligibility meeting and actively requested a postponement of a subsequent meeting to ensure the presence of all necessary personnel. The LEA's accommodation of this request supports a finding that the Parent's participation was facilitated.

The analysis of issue 1 determined that the LEA did provide the Parent with PWNs regarding the Student eligibility status and the LEA's decision about the Parent's request for an IEE.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to provide the Parent with an opportunity to participate in special education meetings and review records about the Student.

Right to Appeal

Either party may appeal the findings or conclusions in this report by filing a written notice of appeal with the State Commissioner of Education, ATTN: Special Education and Title Services, Landon State Office Building, 900 SW Jackson Street, Suite 620, Topeka, KS 66612-1212. The notice of appeal may also be filed by email to formalcomplaints@ksde.gov The notice of appeal must be delivered within 10 calendar days from the date of this report.

For further description of the appeals process, see Kansas Administrative Regulations 91-40-51(f).

(2) If an appeal committee affirms a compliance report that requires corrective action by an agency, that agency shall initiate the required corrective action immediately. If, after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the agency shall be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following:

(A) The issuance of an accreditation deficiency advisement;
(B) the withholding of state or federal funds otherwise available to the agency;
(C) the award of monetary reimbursement to the complainant; or
(D) any combination of the actions specified in paragraph (f)(2)

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST
UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #204
ON FEBRUARY 23, 2026

DATE OF REPORT: MARCH 26, 2026

This report is in response to a complaint filed with our office on behalf of a student, ----------, by their educational advocate, ----------. In the remainder of the report, the student will be referred to as "the Student" and the advocate as "the Complainant."

The Complaint is against USD #204, Bonner Springs Edwardsville Public Schools. In the remainder of the report, "the School" and the "local education agency (LEA)" shall refer to USD #204.

When a special education complaint is filed against a school district that is a member of a special education cooperative or interlocal, or that uses any other state recognized public agency to serve children with disabilities, the term "local education agency (LEA)" in this report will include the school district, the special education cooperative or interlocal, and any other agency that is recognized by the state as an administrative agency for public elementary or secondary schools and is serving the educational needs of this student.

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) allows for a 30-day timeline to investigate a child complaint. A complaint is considered to be filed on the date it is delivered to both the KSDE and the LEA. In this case, the KSDE initially received the complaint on February 23, 2026 and the 30-day timeline ended on March 25, 2026.

Allegations

The following issues will be investigated:

ISSUE ONE: Whether USD #204, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), correctly implemented the Student's Individualized Education Program (IEP) accommodation for the use of headphones on February 4, 2026. Further, whether the Student's IEP was implemented as written from November 19, 2025, through February 4, 2026. K.A.R. 91-40-16; 34 CFR § 300.323.

ISSUE TWO: Whether USD #204, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, was required to provide IEP service logs when requested by the Parent and the Complainant, an Educational Advocate. Further, whether or not failing to provide IEP service logs hindered parent participation. K.A.R. 91-40-25; 34 CFR § 300.501(a).

ISSUE THREE: Whether USD #204, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, utilized compliant Independent Educational Evaluation (IEE) criteria after the November 19, 2025 Report of Complaint was issued. K.A.R. 91-40-12(b)(2)(A)(g)(1)(2); 34 CFR § 300.502(a)(2)(e).

ISSUE FOUR: Whether USD #204, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, issued a timely Notice of Team Meeting when inviting the Parent to the February 4, 2026 IEP meeting. K.A.R. 91-40-17(a); 34 § C.F.R. 300.322(a).

ISSUE FIVE: Whether USD #204, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, provided the Student with a free appropriate public education (FAPE) from November 19, 2025 to the filing of the Complaint when the Student's IEP was not implemented, and the LEA had procedural deficiencies. K.A.R.

91-40-2, K.A.R. 91-40-1(z); 34 CFR §§ 300.17, 300.101.

ISSUE SIX: Whether the KSDE, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, provided compliant State monitoring and oversight of the LEA's corrective action described in the November 19, 2025 Report of Complaint. K.A.R. 91-40-51(e); 34 § C.F.R. 300.600(e).

Investigation of Complaint

The Complaint Investigator interviewed the Parent and the Complainant on March 13, 2026. The following LEA staff were interviewed on March 13, 2026: the Special Education Director and the Cooperative Designee. The Dispute Resolution Coordinator was interviewed on March 17, 2026.

In completing this investigation, the Complaint Investigator reviewed documentation provided by the Complainant and the LEA. Although additional documentation was provided and reviewed, the following materials were used as the basis of the findings and conclusions of the investigation:

Background Information

This investigation involved a first-grade student enrolled at Delaware Ridge Elementary School in USD #204. The Student is currently receiving special education or related services as a child with a disability per the IDEA under the category of Developmental Delay. This investigation includes an allegation related to complaint case number 26FC204-001, as detailed in the November 19, 2025 Report of Complaint and required corrective action.

Findings of the Investigation

The following findings are based on a review of documentation and interviews with the Complainant, the Parent and staff in the LEA.

1. An IEP dated March 25, 2025 indicated:
    a. The Student met the eligibility criteria for Developmental Delay under the IDEA.
    b. A re-evaluation date of May 8, 2025.
    c. The Student did a notable job participating in whole-class instruction and can communicate their needs.
    d. The Student's disability affects the Social-Emotional and Sensory domains.
    e. Special considerations stated the Student needed assistive technology.
    f. Special education transportation services were provided five days per week for 20 minutes per day, effective March 25, 2025 through March 24, 2026, as a related service.
    g. From March 25, 2025 through March 24, 2026, Special Education Services were provided five days per week for 50 minutes to support the social-emotional goal.
    h. Program modifications, accommodations, and supports effective March 25, 2025 through March 24, 2026, stated:
        i. "Access to a calm[-]down corner or other reduced sensory input space and/or headphones when [the Student] is around overstimulating environments and if [the Student] is accessing a sensory room for a calming break, an adult will guide [them] to appropriate proprioceptive activities (heavy work/low and rhythmic swinging) vs. vestibular (spinning/jumping) activities[.]" Provided in general education settings and school areas for "Whenever [the Student] is showing a need for reduced sensory input or requests a break[.] When [the Student] is over-stimulate[d] [they] may indicate this by hiding under things, putting hands over [their] ears, being more impulsive, have difficulty concentrating[.] [F]or 3-5 minutes or until [the Student] shows [the Student] is ready to return to activities for the break, access to headphones for the duration of the activity or until [the Student] takes them off";

ii. "[A]ccess to visual of daily schedule";

iii. "[A]dult/peer proximity in hallway (not alone to transition to other locations in the school building[,] such as from class to nurse's office)";

iv. "The Student will have access to preferential seating";

v. "The [S]tudent will have access to social stories / problem[-]solving boards[,] such as what to do when [the Student] feels frustrated or how to identify and react to the size of a problem"; and

vi. "The [S]tudent will have access to visual and oral examples and/or visuals of directions."

2. PWN dated March 25, 2025, the LEA proposed a change in service minutes for the Student, specifically setting special education transportation to 20 minutes and services supporting their social-emotional goal to 50 minutes, both occurring five days per week. The explanation for this proposal stated, "This action is proposed based on the significant growth that [the Student] has made during [their] Kindergarten year as described in the present levels."
3. A May 8, 2025 Evaluation/Eligibility report stated:
    a. The Student had an "outside medical diagnosis of Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD)."
    b. The summary indicated the Student was performing at or above the average range across all developmental and academic areas. "[The Student] is able to participate and make progress in the general education classroom without support through special education services. … [the Student] no longer meets eligibility criteria for developmental delay and is no longer eligible for special education services."
    c. The Parent did not indicate agreement or disagreement, and any members who dissented were required to submit a report of dissent.
4. PWN dated May 8, 2025, indicated that the Student no longer qualified for special education services because they no longer met the eligibility criteria, and support was no longer necessary.
5. A Report of Complaint dated November 19, 2025 stated:

a. An allegation that the LEA violated the IDEA when they failed to respond to the Parent's request for an IEE in a timely manner, and imposed cost limits.
b. Following the LEA's proposal to dismiss the Student from special education, the Parent hired the Complainant. After the Complainant requested an IEE on May 13, 2025, the LEA waited four months to respond. Their September 9, 2025 response "illegally imposed an $800 cost cap on the IEE."
c. The conclusion indicated, based on relevant information, the LEA was "found OUT of compliance … for limiting the [P]arent's options for obtaining an IEE at public expense due to the cost limitations included in the LEA's IEE Notification Letter."
d. Corrective action included:
    i. For the first issue:
        1. "Within 15 days of the date of this report, the LEA will provide SETS with an assurance statement that it will comply with federal regulations … ."
        2. "Within 15 days, the LEA will provide the [P]arent with PWN proposing to conduct a reevaluation of the [S]tudent with additional assessment to include, at a minimum, the [P]arent surveys … ."
        3. "Within 30 days of receiving [P]arent consent, the LEA will reconvene the [S]tudent's IEP team to review the results of the additional assessments and consider the results of the IEE (if available) to make an eligibility determination of the [S]tudent. The LEA will provide the [P]arent with appropriate [PWN] of the eligibility determination and any changes or revisions made to the IEP, as appropriate, as well as a copy of the Evaluation/Eligibility Report following the IEP team meeting. Within [five] days of the date of the IEP team meeting, the LEA will provide SETS with a copy of the [S]tudent's Evaluation/Eligibility Report and the PWN provided to the [P]arent."
    ii. For the fourth issue:
        1. "The LEA will approve the [P]arent's choice for providing the [S]tudent's IEE at [the Center] and pay for the full cost of this comprehensive IEE. The LEA will provide a copy of the paid invoice to SETS no later than 45 days from the completed evaluation by the agency."
        2. "Within 30 days from the date of this investigation report, the LEA will update the IEE Notification Letter with cost limitations that are commensurate with the current rates of the three agencies listed in the IEE Notification Letter. The LEA will provide SETS with a copy of the updated IEE Notification Letter no more than 45 days from the date of this investigation report."

6. In an email exchange from November 21 through December 5, 2025, between the Complainant and the Superintendent, the following was discussed:

a. On November 21, 2025, the Complainant requested Student records pertinent to the IEE, all invoices completed by the LEA, and all documents related to the $800.00 "cap."
b. The Superintendent responded and explained the LEA had started the process of gathering the records requested and shared any records related to the IEE invoices and payments would be redacted before the release and the documents and emails that pertain to the $800.00 cap were "already known to you" and offered to provide additional copies of those emails.
c. On December 5, 2025, the Superintendent emailed regarding the IEE invoice/payment and confirmed the LEA had yet to receive any invoices related to IEEs.

7. In nine documents titled "Evaluate Social Interactions with Peers," five items were rated on a point system with handwritten comments regarding the Student and their interactions. The documents were dated as follows: "11/21/26," "12/2/26," "12/3/26," "12/12/26," "1/8/26," "1/14/26," "1/22/26," "1/28/26," and "2/2[/26]." In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Cooperative Designee explained these documents to be a "rubric" that was "addressing processing social interactions," which is the Student's IEP goal. They indicated the documents were "previously" provided to the Parents and/or the Complainant, and "we've also just shared a summary of how the total or averages in [the Student's] progress reports each quarter." They indicated email was the typical way these would be shared.
8. In an email on December 3, 2025, to the Dispute Resolution Coordinator, the Cooperative Designee indicated a "Statement of Assurance RE: 26GC204-001" and that the LEA would "comply" with the following regulations:
    a. 34 C.F.R.300.303(b)(2)
    b. 34 C.F.R.300.304(b)(1)(i)
    c. 34 C.F.R.300.306(c)
    d. 34 C.F.R.300.502(b)(1)
    e. Additionally, the Dispute Resolution Coordinator responded and declared, "This statement of assurance is received and will be added to the case file."
9. In an email on December 5, 2025, to the Complainant, the Cooperative Designee confirmed the initiation of the IEE process and requested that the selected IEE provider send the invoice to the Cooperative, with attention to the Special Education Director. The Cooperative Designee added, "Upon receipt of the completed evaluation, the IEP team will reconvene to review the results and determine any next steps." The Complainant subsequently acknowledged and thanked the Coordinator for the approval. Additionally, the Cooperative Designee clarified the IEE is "separate" from the in-house LEA re-evaluation process mandated by the corrective action. They confirmed the Complainant was "free to move forward with the IEE."

10. In a December 16, 2025, email to the Dispute Resolution Coordinator, the Cooperative Designee indicated an attachment with the "updated IEE notification letter per the corrective action."
11. In a December 17 and 18, 2025, email exchange between the Complainant and the School Psychologist, the following was discussed:
    a. On December 17, 2025, the School Psychologist confirmed receipt of the signed consent form and noted the signature date of December 12, 2025. They proposed a meeting date of February 4, 2026.
    b. The Complainant responded the same day, acknowledged the meeting date, and inquired about the 30-day timeline and corrective action requirements.
    c. Later in the day, the School Psychologist responded, stating that they obtained the 30-day timeline from the November 19, 2025 Corrective Action report.
    d. The Complainant replied and questioned why the role and responsibility of the School Psychologist was "limited by the corrective action that KSDE set forth." They stated IDEA set a 60-day limit from signature to complete an IEE and stated, "To limit the scope of your ability to perform a proper IEE is violating that."
    e. On December 18, 2025, the School Psychologist responded, clarified their role, and quoted the corrective action plan, "Within 30 days of receiving parent consent, the LEA will reconvene the [S]tudent's IEP team to review the results of the additional assessments and consider the results of the IEE (if available) to make an eligibility determination of the [S]tudent]. This means that we need to reconvene by February 10, 2026[,] to keep us within that timeline of 30 days."
    f. Later that day, the Complainant replied, requesting confirmation of payment of the IEE and documentation confirming the individual who would submit the documentation and the IEE Notification Letter, along with the date.
12. In a December 19, 2025 email to the Parent, the Cooperative Designee confirmed that payment information for the IEE had previously been provided via email on December 5, 2025. Additionally, they stated that the LEA would complete each requirement detailed in the November 19, 2025 Corrective Action report and stated, "Compliance with these requirements is monitored by KSDE officials." Furthermore, they inquired about the proposed meeting date of February 4, 2026, at 1 p.m. The Parent replied and confirmed the meeting time "works for us."
13. Meeting notes dated February 4, 2026 stated:
    a. The Parent, the Complainant, the Special Education Director, the Special Education Teacher, the School Psychologist, the Principal, and the First Grade Teacher were all present at the meeting.
    b. The purpose of the meeting was to share the results of the evaluation that was "conducted at the school level."
    c. The Complainant requested "information" regarding when the Student received services. The Special Education Teacher "offered a planning matrix" to which the Complainant requested service logs. The Special Education Director shared that service logs were not a "requirement."

d. The Complainant requested to view progress reports. The Special Education Teacher showed the progress report forms, along with data, and then explained how they were used to report progress. The Complainant requested more information on progress, and the Special Education Teacher would provide "additional information about how and when skills have been assessed."

e. The Complainant stated they did not receive a meeting notice and requested one. The School Psychologist created and provided a notice of meeting.

f. The meeting did not include an eligibility determination or the creation of an IEP.

14. In an email exchange on February 4, 2026, The Parent informed staff that the Student was experiencing sensory overload but was afraid to use noise-reducing headphones, stating, "I don't cover my ears because I'll get in trouble for not listening." The First Grade Teacher and the Special Education Teacher responded by providing the Student with direct verbal reassurance that the headphones were permissible to use at any time during the day. Staff noted that while the Student appeared "cheery" at school, they would work to encourage their self-advocacy to overcome the "risky" feeling the Student associated with speaking up about their needs.
15. In an email exchange on February 5 through February 17, 2026, the following was discussed:
    a. On February 5, 2026, the Complainant provided formal legal notice to the LEA alleging that a staff member had removed the Student's headphones during a school activity, which the Complainant characterized as a failure to implement a documented IEP accommodation and a denial of a FAPE. During an IEP meeting on February 4, 2026, the Cooperative Designee stated that "a service log is not a KSDE requirement," a claim the Complainant contested as factually incorrect and a hindrance to meaningful parental participation.
    b. On February 11, 2026, the Special Education Director responded, clarifying that the LEA verified service delivery through schedules and staff assignments rather than individual logs, and noted that staff had not reported any issues regarding headphone use. Additionally, the LEA acknowledged that while the Parent participated in the February 4 meeting, a formal written Notice of Meeting "should have been generated in advance" to ensure procedural compliance.
    c. On February 17, 2026, the Special Education Director answered the Complainant's February 12, 2026, requests and indicated:
        i. Confirmation that service delivery in the LEA was implemented and verified through schedules, staffing assignments, and student attendance records. "Based on these records, [the Student's] IEP service minutes in the general education setting are being implemented consistently and as written."

ii. They again acknowledged that the meeting notice should have been created prior to the meeting, and confirmed the Parent participated in the meeting.

iii. Regarding the headphone accommodation, they confirmed " … no one reported any concern or issue involving [the Student's] use of headphones on February 4, 2026," in addition to verifying the LEA would address issues as they arise.

16. In a February 11, 2025 email to the Dispute Resolution Coordinator, the Cooperative Designee indicated an attachment of the evaluation report, which was reviewed at the February 4, 2026 meeting. They shared that no eligibility was determined due to the IEE not being completed. The Dispute Resolution Coordinator replied, confirmed receipt, and confirmed that the file was being added to the case file.
17. In a February 12, 2026 email to the Cooperative Designee, the Dispute Resolution Coordinator indicated documents were received with the "exception" of:
    a. "Completed eligibility report-I have a copy of the eligibility report, however it is incomplete as it relates to whether or not the child is eligible."
    b. "PWN … as it relates to whether or not the child is eligible for special education services."
    c. "Paid Invoice for IEE … I have documentation that two options were provided to the [P]arent with cost limitation."

    The Dispute Resolution Coordinator detailed, "Since the required corrective action is already late according to the investigator's final report orders, KSDE is requesting the missing components be submitted no later than Friday, February 20, 2026." The Cooperative Designee responded and clarified that the IEE process with an outside provider had yet to be completed by the family, and the LEA had not received an invoice. They stated the family expected completion in "mid-to-late March [2026]." Because of this timeline, at the February 4, 2026 meeting, the results of the IEE were not available.
18. In an undated IEE document provided to the Parent prior to Complaint , the LEA presented a list of three providers that met the LEA's requirements to conduct an IEE. If the Parent found another provided they wanted to use, they were to contact the LEA so this could be considered further. The LEA requirements for a provider indicated:
    a. Evaluation to be conducted in-person in the city area.
    b. The qualifications of the examiner must be "similar" to those of the LEA's school psychologists.
    c. Cost not to exceed $800.00.
    d. "Once you have selected an agency to conduct the evaluation, at the conclusion of testing, please provide a copy of the evaluation report to the [Cooperative] and have the agency send their invoice to: [the Cooperative] with attention to [the Special Education Director]."

19. In an additional IEE Document to the Parent, that was undated, by revised on December 15, 2025, the LEA requirements stated the cost not to exceed $3,500.00.
20. A Student [IEP] Progress Report document for the IEP year of March 25, 2025 through March 24, 2026, indicated a summary statement of "Making progress toward annual goal" for structured and unstructured play.
21. First Grade Attendance records for the Student detailed:
    a. 18 excused absences.
    b. Two unexcused absences.
    c. 20 total absences.
    d. One tardy.

Complainant and Parent Interview

22. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Complainant claimed the Student's accommodation of headphones for regulation in the classroom or school setting was not met. The Parent, who was present in the interview with the Complainant and the Complaint Investigator, explained a situation where a staff member denied the Student's use of their headphones. The Student shared with the Parent the staff member "took them away," said the Student did not need them, and then put them on a table out of the Student's reach. This came after the Parent "emailed [special education] and gen[eral] ed[ucation] teachers that morning, and I explained the situation, and they both responded with, 'Yes, we will reinforce that [the Student] can have [the headphones]. We don't know why [they are] worried about it.'"
    The Parent described the impact on the Student of not having access to their headphones. "It was another two hours that evening of reassurance. [The Student] was crying. [They were] upset. [They were] all over the place." The Parent had to reassure the Student multiple times they could talk with other teachers about what they needed.
23. The Parent shared after the February 4, 2026 incident, where the Student was denied use of their headphones, they were unsure if anyone talked to the staff member. "They said they talked to the teachers … but that was all that I ever heard of them even looking into it. So nobody has had a conversation with me. And I have asked [the Student], 'Has anybody talked to you about the headphones? And [they] said, 'No.'" The Parent stated, "It's frustrating because it took [the Student's] voice away. It's been hard to get [the Student] to be able to advocate for [them]self, and [they] finally did after reassurance that [they are] going to be okay," and then a staff member "took them away in the middle of practicing for a program."
24. The Complainant reported they requested the LEA "get verification of [IEP] minutes served," and the LEA provided them with a school schedule. Additionally, the Complainant claimed the LEA relayed they were "not required to keep any type of data logs" and were "not required to report to [the Department] how their minutes are being provided and when they are." Therefore, the Complainant never received a document to confirm whether the Student was receiving their special education minutes for their social-emotional goal. "Part of our issue is that we can't verify whether or not and how

[the Student] is being accommodated and provided [their] minutes. … Denying us the ability to verify [minutes and service] is denying [the Parent] the ability to participate fully in [the Student's] IEP because we're only given very limited information."

25. The Complainant stated the purpose of the February 4, 2026 meeting "was to go over the evaluation that the [LEA] had to perform to make up for what they didn't do." They explained the LEA had denied their request for an IEE "due to a supposed district board policy approved IEE policy cap of $800.00."
26. The Complainant stated they later learned the alleged policy cap on IEE was not board policy, and they have asked for documentation of "where they came up with that number, … how this cap was designed, because it didn't match the current market value for current running of IEEs to be performed." The Complainant explained their original complaint (now concluded with corrective action ordered by the Department) was that the $800.00 cap was "being used as a reason to deny a request for an IEE, even though [the LEA] agreed that the assessment that they performed was insufficient and that they agreed that we needed to have an IEE." The Complainant indicated when the Department ordered the corrective action for the LEA to pay for the IEE, they also ordered the board policy to be updated, but the Complainant then discovered there was no policy that clarified a particular cap.
27. The Complainant shared they have received the requested IEE, "and it is complete." They also shared that an IEP meeting was set for March 25, 2026 "to finish up the IEE evaluation from May of 2025."
28. When the Complaint Investigator presented the Complainant and the Parent the IEE indicating "district requirements" of a cost "not to exceed $3500.00," both replied they had never seen the letter. When presented with the IEE indicating "district requirements" of a cost "not to exceed $800.00", the Complainant replied they received that letter on September 8, 2025.
29. The Complainant indicated their belief the Student was not being provided a FAPE because, due to the delayed IEE, the Student "has not been able to have an updated IEP or have any goals modified. [They have] not been able to have access to any further accommodations. … [They have] been denied services." the Parent added, "We wouldn't have even had to waste time on filing complaints if they would have just done what they were supposed to do and given [the Student] an IEE. By doing that, we had to pause and file a formal complaint, which is taking time. [The Student's] not getting the education that [they] need. … This started almost a year ago; [the Student] is a year behind. [Their] testing is kindergarten level, and we're at the end of first grade. And in this whole time, we could have had [the Student] with … I mean, after seeing the results of the testing, I'm telling you, [the Student] has missed so much in this time that we have wasted, and it's not fair to [the Student]."
30. The Complainant shared the Student "is falling behind socially, [and] falling behind academically. [They are] now further behind [than their] peer group. We're having to seek out OT and speech services on a private level because the [LEA] is not stepping up and doing their own interventions."

31. When asked about their concerns the Department was not monitoring the ordered corrective action, the Complainant explained the LEA had "misrepresented themselves and denied our request" to obtain an IEE, and to "have an ability to have updated goals, and an [updated] IEP, and [updated] accommodations for nearly over a year." They explained their understanding that the Department has to "identify the non-compliance, and they have to ensure that the violations are corrected as soon as possible. They can't do that if the information that's being provided by the [LEA] is false, are not policies, are not presented to … They're falsified to parents." The Complainant further explained this takes away a parent's right to access resources and supports needed to "make sure their children are getting up-to-date assessments and provisions."
32. The Complainant reported they did not receive a Notice of Meeting for the February 4, 2026 meeting "that was mandated by [the Department]." When they notified the Special Education Director, they said the Parents should have received a notice of meeting, but they did not feel the Parents or the Complainant were unable to participate in the meeting due to not receiving the notice.

Special Education Director Interview

33. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Special Education Director stated they did not know when the IEE that indicated "district requirements" of a cost "not to exceed $3500.00", was sent to the Parent or the Complainant. They indicated the Cooperative Designee would have sent it, but they confirmed they "updated" it on December 15, 2025. "After we got the corrective action plan, I looked at the portion that I needed to update as I created the IEE letter. I updated the amount of money commensurate to the market values in this area. Once I updated that, I sent that to [the Cooperative Designee] to then follow up with the corrective action plan, which was to get that to the family. And that initiated them starting their evaluation based on that amount. I have not been invoiced or have not received anything back from that."

Cooperative Designee Interview

34. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Cooperative Designee indicated the Complainant "didn't use the term service log" when they were "asking about documentation for when [the Student] gets [their] services." The Cooperative Designee responded to the Complainant by sharing the times someone was scheduled to go into the Student's classroom (general education setting) via email.
35. The Cooperative Designee recalled the February 4, 2026 meeting was "to review the [LEA] additional evaluation data," and "we did not have the independent evaluation data yet, but the previous corrective action asked that we meet within 30 days of parent consent, so we wanted to meet that deadline." They shared there was LEA data to review during that meeting, but they did not discuss eligibility because they did not have the independent evaluation results yet.
36. The Cooperative Designee indicated after they received the corrective action from the previous investigation, "We told the family to proceed with their selected provider for the IEE," and they planned to schedule a follow-up meeting once they received the results. They clarified, "We were asked to submit a new IEE letter as a cooperative, which we did provide to [the Department]. And the main component that needed to be adjusted was the cost that was listed."

Dispute Resolution Coordinator Interview

37. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Dispute Resolution Coordinator explained their role in ensuring compliance with corrective action was scheduling, calendarizing, and familiarizing themself with the final report. They also enter dates on the calendar for "general supervision and to supervise the corrective action process."
38. In reference to the corrective action for the previous case, the Dispute Resolution Coordinator reported they reached out to the LEA's special education director or an administrator, and notified them on [February 12, 2026] that they were missing three different pieces of corrective action. And then I gave them a date requesting the missing components be submitted by Friday, February 20th." They added, "while dates are outlined in the final report, [the LEA has] a year from that date to come into compliance." They indicated they review all of the Department's cases that still have pending corrective action in the summer and they "reach out to districts again."

Issue One

Whether USD #204, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, correctly implemented the Student's IEP accommodation for the use of headphones on February 4, 2026. Further, whether the Student's IEP was implemented as written from November 19, 2025 through February 4, 2026. K.A.R. 91-40-16; 34 CFR § 300.323.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-16, each agency must ensure services are implemented no later than 10 school days after parental consent is granted, unless there is a reasonable justification for a delay. The child's IEP must be accessible to every regular education teacher, special education teacher, and related service providers responsible for its implementation. Every teacher and provider must be informed of their specific responsibilities and the specific accommodations, modifications, and supports that must be provided for the child.

The Complainant alleged on February 4, 2026, the headphone accommodation was not implemented correctly. Additionally, further IEP implementation during corrective action through February 4, 2026 is being questioned.

On March 3, 2026, the LEA indicated after consulting with relevant school staff, the LEA has no evidence pointing to any incident involving the use of headphones on February 4th, 2026, or any other date. When the concern was initially raised via email to the Superintendent on February 5, 2026, the LEA requested additional information details (e.g., location, time, staff involved) to allow a thorough review; the Parent did not provide further information. The LEA contends the Student's IEP, which was effective March 25, 2025, has been implemented as written. Documentation of services, accommodations, and supports demonstrates consistent delivery of all IEP requirements throughout the period in question.

The evidence regarding the implementation of the Student's IEP accommodation for headphones on February 4, 2026, presents a clear conflict between the Parent's account and the LEA records. The Student's IEP specifically mandates access to headphones when the Student is in overstimulating environments or demonstrates a need for reduced sensory input. During an interview, the Parent alleged a staff member denied the Student use of these headphones on February 4, 2026, during a program practice, reportedly telling the Student they were not needed and placing them out of reach. The Parent noted this caused significant emotional distress for the Student, requiring hours of reassurance that evening. This concern was raised in a formal legal notice by the Complainant on February 5, 2026, characterizing the incident as a failure to implement a documented accommodation. However, the LEA contends, after consulting with staff, there is no evidence of such an incident occurring on that date or any other. The Special Education Director further stated that staff reported no issues regarding headphone use, and the LEA had requested specific details from the Parent that were never provided.

Regarding the broader implementation of the IEP from November 19, 2025, through February 4, 2026, the LEA maintains that all services, accommodations, and supports were delivered consistently and as written. The Special Education Director indicated that service delivery was verified through schedules, staff assignments, and attendance records, rather than individual service logs. The LEA further supported this claim of progress by citing the Student's Progress Report, which noted the Student was "making progress toward annual goals." Conversely, the Complainant argued that the lack of specific service logs prevented the Parent from verifying whether the Student actually received the required 50 minutes of social-emotional support five days per week. The Complainant alleged that this lack of transparency hindered meaningful parental participation and that the Student has fallen behind both socially and academically because the IEP was not being properly updated or fully implemented during the lengthy delay surrounding the IEE process.

While the specific allegation regarding the denial of headphones on February 4, 2026 remains a matter of conflicting testimony between the Parent and the LEA, the overall record indicates that the LEA maintained baseline legal compliance and met the fundamental requirements for implementation under the IDEA.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to correctly implement the Student's IEP accommodation for the use of headphones on February 4, 2026 and failed to implement the Student's IEP as written from November 19, 2025 through February 4, 2026.

Issue Two

Whether USD #204, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, was required to provide IEP service logs when requested by the Parent and the Complainant, an Educational Advocate. Further, whether or not failing to provide IEP service logs hindered parent participation. K.A.R. 91-40-25; 34 CFR § 300.501(a).

According to K.A.R. 91-40-25 and 34 CFR § 300.501(a), each agency shall allow the parents of an exceptional child an opportunity to inspect and review all education records and participate in any meeting concerning their child with respect to the identification, evaluation, or education placement of the child and the provision of a FAPE to the child.

The Complainant alleged the LEA did not provide service logs to the Parents upon request.

The LEA responded that during the February 4, 2026 team meeting, the LEA provided information regarding scheduled service delivery times and documentation of goal progress monitoring. While daily service logs were not shared, the LEA offered alternative documentation to ensure the Parent had meaningful access to information about the Student's services. Based on this, the LEA believes parent participation was not impeded. The LEA remains committed to working with the Parent to provide access to information in accordance with state and federal requirements.

The Special Education Director and school staff clarified service delivery is verified through a combination of school schedules, staff assignments, and student attendance records. The LEA asserts these records confirm the Student's 50 minutes of daily special education services for social-emotional goals were implemented consistently and as written in the March 25, 2025, IEP.

Regarding the allegation that the lack of logs hindered the Parent's participation, the evidence indicates the LEA provided alternative documentation to the Parent and the Complainant during the February 4, 2026 meeting. This information included a "planning matrix," which detailed scheduled service times, progress report forms, and specific skill assessment data. Furthermore, the LEA utilized a "rubric" titled "Evaluate Social Interactions with Peers" to track the Student's specific social-emotional goals, with summaries of this data shared with the Parent via email, and quarterly progress reports. Though the dates on these were slightly misrepresented, they indicated compliance.

Because the LEA provided evidence of service delivery through these alternative means and shared progress data to facilitate discussion, the investigation does not find that the absence of a specific "service log" document constituted a procedural violation that impeded the Parent's right to participate in the educational process.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the LEA hindered parent participation by failing to provide IEP service logs, and instead provided alternative documentation to demonstrate the Student was receiving special education services.

Issue Three

Whether USD #204, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, utilized compliant IEE criteria after the November 19, 2025 Report of Complaint was issued. K.A.R. 91-40-12(b)(2)(A)(g)(1)(2); 34 CFR § 300.502(a)(2)(e).

According to K.A.R. 91-40-12(b)(2)(A)(g)(1)(2) and 34 CFR § 300.502(a)(2)(e), if an agency decides to provide an IEE at public expense, the agency shall provide to the parents, upon request for an IEE, information about where an IEE may be obtained and the agency criteria applicable for IEEs. If an IEE is at public expense, the criteria under which the evaluation is obtained, including the location of the evaluation and the qualifications of the examiner, shall be the same as the criteria that the agency uses when it initiates an evaluation, to the extent those criteria are consistent with the parent's right to an IEE. Except for the criteria described in paragraph (1) of this subsection, an agency shall not impose conditions or timelines related to obtaining an IEE at public expense.

The Complainant alleged the IEE criteria remain out of compliance, even after the Report of Complaint, which was issued on November 19, 2025.

The LEA stated all corrective actions required by Complaint 26FC204-001 were implemented, including providing the Department with an updated IEE information letter. The Parent was informed of their right to obtain an IEE from a qualified provider and was provided guidance regarding invoicing and payment. The LEA followed the Department-approved procedures to ensure compliance with IEE requirements.

As part of the mandated corrective action in the November 19, 2025 Report of Complaint, the LEA was required to update its IEE Notification Letter with cost limitations commensurate with current market rates and approve the Parent's choice of center for a comprehensive IEE at public expense. The Special Education Director confirmed the cost limitation was updated to $3,500.00 on December 15, 2025, and sent to the KSDE on December 16, 2025. The document was also sent to the Cooperative Designee for distribution, both the Parent and the Complainant explained during interviews that they had never seen this updated document. Neither LEA Director was able to confirm that the updated IEE notification letter had been provided to the Parent once updated. The LEAs responsibility to communicate with the Parent about the revised IEE criteria was limited to, "The LEA will approve the [P]arent's choice for providing the [S]tudent's IEE at [the Center] and pay for the full cost of this comprehensive IEE." The evidence shows the LEA compiled with the corrective actions ordered for revising the IEE criteria, and notifying the Parent.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to utilize compliant IEE criteria after the November 19, 2025 Report of Complaint was issued.

Issue Four

Whether USD #204, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, issued a timely Notice of Team Meeting when inviting the Parent to the February 4, 2026 IEP meeting. K.A.R. 91-40-17(a); 34 § C.F.R. 300.322(a).

According to K.A.R. 91-40-17(a) and 34 § C.F.R. 300.322(a), each public agency must take steps to ensure that one or both of the parents of a child with a disability are present at each IEP Team meeting or are afforded the opportunity to participate, including notifying parents of the meeting early enough to ensure that they will have an opportunity to attend and scheduling the meeting at a mutually agreed on time and place. Each agency shall take steps to ensure that one or both of the parents of an exceptional child are present at each IEP meeting or are afforded the opportunity to participate. These steps shall include notifying the parents of the meeting early enough to ensure that they will have an opportunity to attend and scheduling the meeting at a mutually agreed-upon time and place.

The Complainant alleged timely notice was not provided for the February 4, 2026 IEP meeting.

The LEA responded that the meeting date and time were agreed upon via email and confirmed by the Parent on December 19, 2025, which was well in advance of the required ten-day notice period. While the formal Notice of Meeting was provided at the meeting itself, the Parent and the Complainant had prior knowledge of the scheduled meeting and were in attendance, which allowed for full participation. The LEA recognizes the formal notice should have been generated prior to the meeting, and has taken steps to ensure timely formal notices are provided in the future.

On December 17, 2025, the School Psychologist proposed the February 4, 2026, meeting date to the Complainant via email. The Parent subsequently confirmed on December 19, 2025, that this meeting time was acceptable. However, the Complainant later reported that a formal Notice of Meeting was never received prior to the actual date of the meeting. While the LEA argued that the email confirmation on December 19, 2025 occurred well in advance of the required ten-day notice period, they conceded that the formal, written Notice of Meeting was not generated or provided until the meeting was already in progress. The LEA acknowledged this error, stating the formal notice should have been generated in advance to ensure full procedural compliance with state and federal regulations.

Despite the lack of timely formal notice, parental participation was not impeded because the Parent and the Complainant were aware of the schedule and were both in attendance at the February 4, 2026 meeting. However, the School Psychologist's creation and delivery of the notice at the time the meeting had convened, and upon the Complainant's request, confirmed the LEA did not meet the technical requirement to issue a timely notice.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is substantiated that the LEA failed to issue a timely Notice of Team Meeting for the February 4, 2026 IEP meeting.

Issue Five

Whether USD #204, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, provided the Student with a FAPE from November 19, 2025 to the filing of the Complaint when the Student's IEP was not implemented, and the LEA had procedural deficiencies. K.A.R. 91-40-2, K.A.R. 91-40-1(z); 34 CFR §§ 300.17, 300.101.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-2, K.A.R. 91-40-1(z) and 34 CFR §§ 300.17, 300.101, each agency shall provide a FAPE in accordance with K.S.A. 72-966 and amendments thereto, and with this article. Each agency shall make a FAPE available to each child with a disability residing in its jurisdiction beginning no later than the child's third birthday. Each agency shall provide special education and related services based upon the child's unique needs and not upon the child's area of exceptionality. A FAPE means special education and related services that are provided at public expense, under public supervision and direction, and without charge; meet the standards of the state board and the requirements of these regulations; include an appropriate preschool, elementary, or secondary school education; and are provided in conformity with an IEP.

The Complainant alleged that by failing to provide the headphone accommodation on February 4, 2026, the LEA failed to meet its obligation to provide the Student with a FAPE.

The LEA responded that the March 25, 2025 IEP had been implemented consistently and in full. Documentation demonstrates that IEP services, accommodations, and supports have been provided without interruption. While minor procedural issues occurred (e.g., timing of formal notice of meeting), there has been no lapse in services, and the Student has had full access to a FAPE.

Based on the evidence provided, the District fulfilled its obligations under the IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, resulting in no denial of a FAPE. Although there was a dispute regarding the use of headphones on February 4, 2026, the District's records and staff reports indicate that accommodations were available and provided. Furthermore, despite the lack of specific service logs, the District verified delivery of all IEP services and supports through staff schedules and progress reports showing the Student's continued progress.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to provide the Student with a FAPE from November 19, 2025, through the date of this Complaint.

Issue Six

Whether the KSDE, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, provided compliant State monitoring and oversight of the LEA's corrective action described in the November 19, 2025 Report of Complaint. K.A.R. 91-40-51(e); 34 § C.F.R. 300.600(e).

According to K.A.R. 91-40-51(e), If a report requires corrective action by an agency, that agency, within 10 days of the date of the report, shall submit to the state director of special education one of the following: (A) Documentation to verify acceptance of the corrective action or actions specified in the report; (B) a written request for an extension of time within which to complete one or more of the corrective actions specified in the report, together with justification for the request; or (C) a written notice of appeal. Each appeal shall be made in accordance with subsection (f).

According to C.F.R. 300.600(e), in exercising its monitoring responsibilities, the State must ensure that when it identifies noncompliance with the requirements of this part by LEAs, the noncompliance is corrected as soon as possible, and in no case later than one year after the State's identification of the noncompliance.

The LEA responded they have communicated all required corrective action measures to the Department in accordance with the previous complaint report. Documentation of these communications and follow-up actions demonstrates ongoing cooperation with the Department and adherence to state oversight requirements.

The Department's monitoring and oversight of the required corrective action followed established state and federal procedures for general supervision of an LEA's compliance with the IDEA. In this instance, the Dispute Resolution Coordinator actively monitored the timelines and reached out to the LEA on February 12, 2026 to notify them that three specific pieces of corrective action were missing. The Department subsequently requested that these missing components, including the completed eligibility report, the corresponding PWN, and the paid invoice for the IEE, be submitted no later than February 20, 2026, noting the corrective action was already late according to the original investigator's orders.

While the Complainant alleged the Department failed to ensure violations were corrected because the LEA provided false information or non-existent policies, the Dispute Resolution Coordinator clarified that while dates are outlined in the final report, LEAs technically have up to one year from the report date to fully come into compliance. This is in alignment with the IDEA provision that corrective action be completed within one year of finding non-compliance. Furthermore, the Department maintains an ongoing oversight cycle where officials review all cases with pending corrective action during the summer and re-engage with districts to ensure final resolution. Evidence indicates the Department received the required statement of assurance on December 3, 2025, and the updated IEE notification letter on December 16, 2025, demonstrating an active exchange of documentation between the LEA and state officials to meet the specific requirements of the November 19, 2025 Report of Complaint.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the KSDE failed to provide compliant State monitoring and oversight of the LEA's corrective action described in the November 19, 2025 Report of Complaint.

Corrective Action

Information gathered in the course of this investigation has substantiated noncompliance with special education statutes and regulations. A violation occurred in the following area:

A. Federal regulations at K.A.R. 91-40-17(a) and 34 § C.F.R. 300.322(a) specify there must be a formal Notice of Meeting to officially summon the team and protect their rights.

In this case, the evidence supports the finding that USD # 204 failed to issue a timely Notice of Team Meeting for the February 4, 2026 IEP meeting.

Based on the foregoing, USD #204 is directed to take the following actions:

1. Within 15 calendar days of the date of this report, USD #204 shall submit a written statement of assurance to Special Education and Title Services (SETS) stating that it will comply with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) at 34 § C.F.R. 300.322(a) and K.A.R. 91-40-17(a) by appropriately issuing Notice of Team Meetings prior to IEP team meetings.
2. Further, by April 30, 2026, USD #204 will complete the following: (1) Create a standardized IEP Meeting Compliance Checklist that must be uploaded to a student's digital file at least seven days before any scheduled meeting. (2) The checklist must include a line item confirming the date the formal Notice of Meeting was sent and the method of delivery (e.g., USPS, hand-delivered, or encrypted email). (3) USD #204 will provide a randomized 10% sample of IEP files over the next semester, and the Department will perform an audit to ensure the formal notice precedes the meeting date.
3. Additionally, by April 30, 2026, USD #204 will conduct a mandatory training session for all USD #204 special education staff (specifically School Psychologists and IEP Coordinators) regarding the requirements of K.A.R. 91-40-17(a) and 34 C.F.R. § 300.322. USD #204 will provide the Department with the contents (slides, notes, etc.) of the mandatory training, along with a sign-in sheet verifying attendance, no later than May 15, 2026.

Right to Appeal

Either party may appeal the findings or conclusions in this report by filing a written notice of appeal with the State Commissioner of Education, ATTN: Special Education and Title Services, Landon State Office Building, 900 SW Jackson Street, Suite 620, Topeka, KS 66612-1212. The notice of appeal may also be filed by email to formalcomplaints@ksde.gov The notice of appeal must be delivered within 10 calendar days from the date of this report.

For further description of the appeals process, see Kansas Administrative Regulations 91-40-51(f).

(2) If an appeal committee affirms a compliance report that requires corrective action by an agency, that agency shall initiate the required corrective action immediately. If, after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the agency shall be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following:

(A) The issuance of an accreditation deficiency advisement;
(B) the withholding of state or federal funds otherwise available to the agency;
(C) the award of monetary reimbursement to the complainant; or
(D) any combination of the actions specified in paragraph (f)(2)

In the Matter of the Appeal of the Report
Issued in Response to a Complaint Filed
Against Unified School District No. 204
Bonner Springs - Edwardsville Public Schools: 26FC204-002

DECISION OF THE APPEAL COMMITTEE

Background

This matter commenced with the filing of a complaint on February 23, 2026, by -------, a person hired by the student's parents to act as an advocate of the student, -------. ------- is not an "education advocate" as that term is defined in K.S.A. 72-3404(o). In the remainder of this decision, ------- will be referred to as "the complainant," and ------- will be referred to as "the student." ------- parent will be referred to as the parent. An investigation of the complaint was undertaken by a complaint investigator on behalf of the Special Education, and Title Services team at the Kansas State Department of Education. Following the investigation, a Complaint Report, addressing the allegations, was issued on March, 2026. That Complaint Report concluded that there was a violation of special education statutes and regulations

Thereafter, the Education Advocate filed an appeal of the Complaint Report. Upon receipt of the appeal, an appeal committee was appointed and it reviewed the original complaint filed by the Education Advocate, the Complaint Report, the Education Advocate's notice of appeal, and the district's response to the appeal. The Appeal Committee has reviewed the information provided in connection with this matter and now issues this final Appeal Decision.

Preliminary Matters

A copy of the regulation regarding the filing of an appeal [K.A.R. 91-40-51(f)] was attached to the Complaint Report. That regulation states, in part, that: "Each notice shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect." Accordingly, the burden for supplying a sufficient basis for appeal is on the party submitting the appeal. When a party submits an appeal and makes statements in the notice of appeal without support, the Committee does not attempt to locate the missing support.

No new issues will be decided by the Appeal Committee. The appeal process is a review of the Complaint Report. The Appeal Committee does not conduct a separate investigation. The appeal committee's function will be to determine whether sufficient evidence exists to support the findings and conclusions in the Complaint Report.

Discussion of Issues on Appeal

Issue One

Whether USD #204, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), correctly implemented the Student's Individualized Education Program (IEP) accommodation for the use of headphones on February 4, 2026. Further, whether the Student's IEP was implemented as written from November 19, 2025, through February 4, 2026. K.A.R. 91-40-16; 34 CFR § 300.323.

The student is in the first grade (Report, finding of fact 29, p. 16). It is uncontested that this student's IEP "mandates access to headphones when the Student is in overstimulating environments or demonstrates a need for reduced sensory input" (Finding 1(h)(i) Report p. 5).

The Complainant alleged that on February 4, 2026, the parent sent an email to staff saying that a staff member denied the Student use of these headphones on February 4, 2026, during a program practice, reportedly telling the Student they were not needed and placing them out of reach (Report, p 20).

On March 3, 2026, the LEA indicated after consulting with relevant school staff, that the LEA has no evidence pointing to any incident involving the use of headphones on February 4th, 2026, or any other date (Report p. 19).

When the concern was initially raised via email to the Superintendent on February 5, 2026, the LEA requested additional information details (e.g., location, time, staff involved) to allow a thorough review, but the Parent did not provide further information (Report p. 20). The LEA, after consulting with staff, told the investigator that it found no evidence of such an incident occurring on that date or any other. The Special Education Director further stated to the investigator that staff reported no issues regarding headphone use, and the LEA had requested specific details from the Parent that were never provided (Report, p. 20).

The investigator commented that this evidence presents a clear conflict between the Parent's account and the LEA's account (Report, p. 20). In the conclusion section of the report on this issue, the investigator concluded that "While the specific allegation regarding the denial of headphones on February 4, 2026 remains a matter of conflicting testimony between the Parent and the LEA, the overall record indicates that the LEA maintained baseline legal compliance and met the fundamental requirements for implementation under the IDEA (Report, p. 21)."

The Appeal Committee agrees with the investigator's conclusion on this issue. An allegation has been made and denied, with little evidence supporting either version. The Office of Special Education Programs (OSEP) has provided guidance to states in conducting special education complaints where the evidence is evenly balanced creating a classic "he said-she said" situation. OSEP said that a state may use a "preponderance of the evidence" standard in making determinations as to whether a public agency violated a requirement of Special Education law Letter to Reilly, 64 IDELR 219, (OSEP 2014).

A "preponderance of the evidence" standard means making a decision based on whichever side appears to be "more likely than not" correct, even if the "more likely than not" is only at 51%.

In this issue, the complainant made an allegation that was denied by school staff. The district said, "that service delivery in the LEA was implemented and verified through schedules, staffing assignments, and student attendance records." (Finding of Fact 15(c)(i)). Further, when the concern was initially raised via email to the Superintendent on February 5, 2026, the LEA requested additional information and details from the parent (e.g., location, time, staff involved) to allow a thorough review; the Parent did not provide further information (Report, p. 20).

The investigator correctly described this issue as "a matter of conflicting testimony between the Parent and the LEA", and then added, "the overall record indicates that the LEA maintained baseline legal compliance and met the fundamental requirements for implementation under the IDEA" (Report, p. 21). That assessment was based on schedules, staffing assignments, student attendance records and statements made by staff members during interviews. That "overall record" does not prove that services were provided but it is the best evidence presented on this issue and is substantial (not merely preponderance) evidence that IEP services were provided to the student.

The Appeal Committee affirms the conclusion of the investigator on this issue.

Issue Two

Whether USD #204 was required to provide IEP service logs when requested, and whether failing to provide them hindered parent participation.

The Complainant alleged that the LEA did not provide service logs to the Parents upon request. The report did not say whether such logs existed. However, it appears that the LEA did not have specific service logs, as the report says, "The Special Education Director and school staff clarified service delivery is verified through a combination of school schedules, staff assignments, and student attendance records" (Report p. 22). The LEA provided the documentation of service delivery that it did have, including "a 'planning matrix,' which detailed scheduled service times, progress report forms, and specific skill assessment data (Report, p. 22)." The report also notes that the LEA "utilized a "rubric" titled "Evaluate Social Interactions with Peers" to track the Student's specific social-emotional goals, with summaries of this data shared with the Parent via email, and quarterly progress reports (Report, p. 22).

The investigator summarized the reasoning for her conclusion as follows: "Because the LEA provided evidence of service delivery through these alternative means and shared progress data to facilitate discussion, the investigation does not find that the absence of a specific "service log" document constituted a procedural violation that impeded the Parent's right to participate in the educational process."

The applicable federal regulation is 34 C.F.R. 300.613(a), which says that an LEA "must permit parents to inspect and review any education records relating to their children that are collected, maintained, or used by the agency under this part (emphasis added)." When a parent requests information that the LEA does not have, the LEA has no obligation to create a new document that contains the requested information. It is only required to allow parents to inspect information that it has already "collected, maintained, or used." In this instance the district responded to the parent's request by producing the relevant information that it "collected, maintained, or used" to verify service delivery. The parent may believe that the documentation provided by the LEA is insufficient to verify service delivery, but the evidence supports the conclusion that the district was not in violation of the requirement to allow the parent to inspect and review the records that it does collect, maintain or use for special education purposes.

The Appeal Committee affirms the conclusion of the investigator on this issue.

Whether USD #204 utilized compliant IEE criteria after the November 19, 2025 Report of Complaint was issued.

This part of the complaint refers to a previous complaint, with a file number of 26FC204-001. The November 19, 2025 report in complaint number 26FC204-001, required the corrective action, specifically including:

Issue Four

Violation of 34 C.F.R. §300.502(b)(1) and (2) were found. Corrective action is required as noted below:

1. Within 15 days of the date of this report, the LEA will provide SETS with an assurance statement that it will comply with federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.502(b)(1) which require the LEA to respond to a parent request for an IEE in a timely manner.
2. The LEA will approve the parent's choice for providing the student's IEE at Meadowlark Psychology and Developmental Center and pay for the full cost of this comprehensive IEE. The LEA will provide a copy of the paid invoice to SETS no later than 45 days from the completed evaluation by the agency.
3. Within 30 days from the date of this investigation report, the LEA will update the IEE Notification Letter with cost limitations that are commensurate with the current rates of the three agencies listed in the IEE Notification Letter. The LEA will provide SETS with a copy of the updated IEE Notification Letter no more than 45 days from the date of this investigation report.

In this issue, the complainant asserts that corrective action 3 has not been completed because:

> The current report states that the Special Education Director updated the cost limitation to $3,500 on December 15, 2025 and sent that revised letter to KSDE on December 16, 2025. But the report also expressly states that both the Parent and the Complainant said they had never seen the updated document, and neither LEA representative could confirm that the updated letter had actually been provided to the parent. Despite that, the report concluded the district complied with corrective action and used compliant criteria.

The complainant further argues that "Compliance with IDEA cannot rest solely on sending a revised letter to KSDE while the parent continues operating without the corrected criteria."

First, the Appeal Committee notes that the LEA has agreed to pay the full cost of the student's IEE.

Second, the Appeal Committee reviewed all of the corrective actions submitted by the LEA in 26FC204-001 and determined that all requirements were completed and notified the LEA of that determination. With regard to the contested corrective action 3 (see above), the Appeal Committee notes that corrective action 3 requires that "The LEA will provide SETS with a copy of the updated IEE Notification Letter…" The corrective action does not require the LEA to provide a copy of the revised Notification Letter to the parent. Thus, the fact that the revised Notification Letter was not sent to the parent does not constitute a failure to implement the corrective action in the 26FC204-001 complaint report.

Sufficient evidence exists to support the findings and conclusions in the Complaint Report on this issue.

Issue Four

Whether USD #204 issued a timely Notice of Team Meeting for the February 4, 2026 IEP meeting.

The investigator determined that the district did not provide timely notice of a February 4, 2026 IEP meeting and required corrective action. The investigator noted that "Despite the lack of timely formal notice, parental participation was not impeded because the Parent and the Complainant were aware of the schedule and were both in attendance at the February 4, 2026 meeting (Report p. 25)."

The complainant does not appeal this conclusion, but asserts instead that the investigator viewed this notice incident "as systemic enough to require structural remediation, not merely a one-off clerical error," and so that substantiated violation should have informed the analysis of Issues One, Two, Five, and Six rather than being compartmentalized.

The Appeal Committee disagrees with the complainant's analysis because: (1) the violation in this issue was a procedural violation, not found to be "systematic", (2) the violation was specifically found to have not impeded the parent from participating in the decision making process, and (3) there was no finding of even a procedural violation in Issues One, Two, Five, and Six, much less a "systemic" violation.

Sufficient evidence exists to support the findings and conclusions in the Complaint Report on this issue.

Issue Five

Whether USD #204 provided the student with FAPE from November 19, 2025 to the filing of this complaint when the IEP was not implemented and the LEA had procedural deficiencies.

Here the complainant asserts that a long list of procedural violations addressed in the report were treated as "isolated defects," that nullified their cumulative harm, resulting in a denial of a free appropriate public education (FAPE) to the student. The problem with this assertion is that the investigator substantiated only one procedural violation among the six issues presented in the complaint, and that violation was found to be merely procedural because it did not impede the parents opportunity to participate at the February 4, 2026 IEP meeting.

Sufficient evidence exists to support the findings and conclusions in the Complaint Report on this issue.

Whether KSDE provided compliant state monitoring and oversight of the LEA's corrective action described in the November 19, 2025 Report of Complaint.

The complainant asserts that the provision in 34 C.F.R. 300.600(e) requires corrective action to be taken "as soon as possible" and the acceptance by the Kansas State Department of Education(KSDE) of corrective actions after their due date violates the requirements of this regulation.

34 C.F.R. 300.600 refers to state monitoring reports, using the categories in 34 C.F.R. 300.603(b)(1), and submitted in a state's performance report to the United States Department of Education. The obligation of a state department of education to monitor the completion of corrective action in a formal complaint report is in 34 C.F.R. 300.151(b), which states in relevant part that:

> In resolving a complaint in which the SEA has found a failure to provide appropriate services, an SEA, pursuant to its general supervisory authority under Part B of the Act, must address--
> (1) The failure to provide appropriate services, including corrective action appropriate to address the needs of the child (such as compensatory services or monetary reimbursement);

While the outside limitation of completing corrective actions within one-year likely applies to corrective actions in a formal complaint, as part of a state educational agency (SEA) supervisory authority, this regulation does not require that corrective actions in a complaint report be completed "as soon as possible." States are permitted to take into account unique circumstances when describing reasonable timelines for corrective actions. When a state education agency (SEA) determines that an LEA has not met the timeline for completing a corrective action required by a complaint report, the (SEA) is required to resolve that situation. The manner in which such situations are resolved is not specified in law. Typically, such situations require only a reminder to the LEA that the corrective action specified in a complaint report is over-due. That was the process used by KSDE in 26FC204-001.

> In this instance, the Dispute Resolution Coordinator actively monitored the timelines and reached out to the LEA on February 12, 2026 to notify them that three specific pieces of corrective action were missing. The Department subsequently requested that these missing components, including the completed eligibility report, the corresponding PWN, and the paid invoice for the IEE, be submitted no later than February 20, 2026, noting the corrective action was already late according to the original investigator's orders. (Report, p. 27)

The LEA responded by providing all of the requested information. The investigator also found that a revised IEE notification letter was provided to KSDE in an email dated 12/16/25. The file at KSDE verifies the date of delivery and the content of the notification letter. The revised IEE notification letter was revised to raise the reimbursement cost of an IEE to "Not exceed $3,500.00."

Sufficient evidence exists to support the findings and conclusions in the Complaint Report on this issue.

Conclusion

For the reasons stated herein, the Complaint Report is sustained in full.

This is the final decision on this matter. There is no further appeal. This Appeal Decision is issued this 8th day of April, 2026.

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST
UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #394
ON FEBRUARY 16, 2026

DATE OF REPORT: MARCH 26, 2026

This report is in response to a complaint filed with our office on behalf of a student, -------- by their parents, --------. In the remainder of the report, the student will be referred to as "the Student" and the parents as "the Parents."

The Complaint is against USD #394, Rosehill Public Schools. In the remainder of the report, "the School" and the "local education agency (LEA)" shall refer to USD #394.

When a special education complaint is filed against a school district that is a member of a special education cooperative or interlocal, or that uses any other state recognized public agency to serve children with disabilities, the term "local education agency (LEA)" in this report will include the school district, the special education cooperative or interlocal, and any other agency that is recognized by the state as an administrative agency for public elementary or secondary schools and is serving the educational needs of this student.

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) allows for a 30-day timeline to investigate a child complaint. A complaint is considered to be filed on the date it is delivered to both the KSDE and the LEA. In this case, the KSDE initially received the complaint on February 16, 2026, and the 30-day timeline ended on March 18, 2026.

Allegations

The following issues will be investigated:

ISSUE ONE: Whether USD #394, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), followed the requirements for suspensions of students with disabilities, including providing educational services when required. K.A.R. 91-40-33, 91-40-34(a)(b), 91-40-35 91-40-36; 34 CFR § 300.530.

ISSUE TWO: Whether USD #394, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, conducted a manifestation determination review (MDR) within the required timelines. K.S.A. 72-991a, K.A.R. 91-40-38; 34 CFR § 300.530(e).

ISSUE THREE: Whether USD #394, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, implemented behavior supports for the Student as described in their IEP. K.A.R. 91-40-16(a)(b); 34 CFR § 300.323.

ISSUE FOUR: Whether USD #394, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, developed an IEP that met the Student's behavioral needs. K.A.R. 91-40-18(a)(b); 34 CFR § 300.324.

ISSUE FIVE: Whether USD #394, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, failed to provide the Student with a free appropriate public education (FAPE) when education services were not provided during suspensions, the Student missed "large amounts of instruction," and the Student is not making meaningful progress. K.A.R. 91-40-2; 34 CFR § 300.101(a)(c).

Investigation of Complaint

The Complaint Investigator interviewed the Parent on March 9, 2026. The following LEA staff were interviewed on March 9, 2026: The School Psychologist, The Principal, the SEL Coordinator, two Special Education Teachers, and the General Education Teacher.

In completing this investigation, the Complaint Investigator reviewed documentation provided by the Parent and the LEA. Although additional documentation was provided and reviewed, the following materials were used as the basis of the findings and conclusions of the investigation:

1. Individualized Education Program DRAFT, 02/11/25
2. Medical Note, 01/30/26
3. Communication Log, 10/31/25-01/20/26

Background Information

This investigation involved a third-grade student enrolled at an elementary school in USD #394. The Student is currently receiving special education or related services as a child with a disability under the category of Emotional Disability (ED) per the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA).

Findings of the Investigation

The following findings are based on a review of documentation and interviews with the Parent and staff in the LEA.

1. On February 11, 2025, an IEP was developed for the Student and contained the following relevant information:
    a. The Student's ED impacted their ability to fully participate in social time with their peers and instruction on regulating their emotional responses.
    b. The Student's behavior impacted the learning of others or themself and required general education supports, accommodations, modifications, and positive behavioral supports.
        i. Goal:
            1. "The Student will demonstrate and improve emotional regulation by identifying and expressing their feelings and understanding the consequences of their actions with an accuracy of 80%."
            2. Baseline was 15% accuracy.
    c. The IEP included academic goals for reading, writing, and math.
    d. Services provided included:
        i. Special education services for 30 minutes, five days per week, each week in the special education room during reading.
        ii. Special education services for 90 minutes, five days per week, each week in the regular education classroom with special education support during academics.
    e. Relevant accommodations included:
        i. Positive behavioral support anytime throughout the day when the Student needs positive encouragement.
        ii. Separate quiet location for tests.
2. A Progress Report dated May 19, 2025 reported:

   a. For "Goal 2: By February 10th, 2026, with the use of conversations with a trusted adult and given choices, [the Student] will demonstrate and improve emotional regulation by identifying and expressing [their] feelings and understanding the consequences of [their] actions appropriately with an accuracy of 80%.
   b. Baseline: 15% accuracy.
   c. Statement of Progress Data: "[The Student] is at 50% accuracy when it comes to [their] emotional regulation by identifying [their] expressions, [their] feelings, and understanding the consequences of [their] actions."

3. Parent Communication Logs dated between September 11, 2025 and January 20, 2026 detail behavior incidents for the Student. Notable items reported:
   a. A "positive office referral" on September 11, 2025 for "participating and completing work."
   b. The Student threw their shoes at staff, other students, or across school property, including kicking a shoe into the General Education Teacher's face, on September 29 and October 2, 2025.
   c. School property abuse or destruction on October 3 and October 28, 2025.
   d. Out of School Suspensions on October 24, 2025 and January 20, 2026.
   e. Class disruption, eloping, and disrespectful behavior during music class on October 15, October 16, and October 28, 2025.
   f. Kicking playground balls, including while other students are handling them, and other physically aggressive behavior on September 29, October 2, October 13, and October 16, 2025.
   g. A note from the General Education Teacher on September 29, 2025 read "We want [the Student] to be a part of our classroom, but there has been a dramatic shift this past week in [their] behaviors."
   h. A note from staff on October 13, 2025 stated "Lining up from recess is a constant issue with [the Student] not following instructions and defying and disrespecting teachers."
4. On October 6, 2026, the Parent was called to pick up the Student due to behavior. The Other Parent picked up the Student. The Student's Attendance Profile did not document it as an OSS for that day. (P1)(D131)
5. On October 20, 2025, the Student became frustrated after being told they would have lunch and recess detention for referrals the Student received the previous week. The Parent was called about the frustration, and was called a second time to pick up the Student after the Student threw a chair at their teacher. The Other Parent picked up the Student, however the School noted the Student left after the end of the school day. The Student's Attendance Profile did not document OSS for that day. (P1)(D131, D316)
6. On October 20, 2025, a Notice To Student of Short-Term Suspension After Informal Hearing was issued, indicating the Student had been suspended from school for one day beginning on October 21, 2025, and ending on October 22, 2025. The reason for the suspension was listed as, "Conduct that endangers the safety of others or which substantially impinges upon or invades the rights of others at school, on school property, or at a school-supervised activity."

7. The Student's Attendance Profile documented the Student as absent on October 21, 2026 and did not indicate the Student had OSS. (D131)
8. On October 23, 2025, a Notice To Student of Short-Term Suspension After Informal Hearing was issued, indicating the Student had been suspended from school for two days beginning on October 24, 2025 and ending on October 28, 2025. The reason for the suspension was listed as, "Conduct that endangers the safety of others or which substantially impinges upon or invades the rights of others at school, on school property, or at a school-supervised activity."
9. The Student's Attendance Profile documented the Student as absent on October 24, and October 27, 2025, and did not indicate the Student had OSS. (D131)
10. An undated Trauma-Informed Functional Behavior Assessment (FBA) for the Student reported the following relevant information:
    a. The FBA was recommended due to unsafe behavior.
    b. Interventions implemented beginning October 23, 2025 included:
        i. Alternate Seating Options.
        ii. Visual timer.
        iii. Visual schedule.
        iv. Task Analysis.
        v. Fidgets Provided.
        vi. Token system.
        vii. Feelings Meter (I feel, I need).
        viii. Alternate schedule.
    c. Behavior data reported during two time periods, October 23 to November 20, 2025 and December 1, 2025 to January 6, 2025. It was noted the Student's behavior was tracked in a more restrictive environment during the second time period.
    d. The assessment noted "[The Student] currently receives all core instruction (math, reading, and writing) in the special education resource room and participates with non-identified peers during specials, lunch, and recess with paraprofessional support. Throughout the school day, staff document the occurrence of target behaviors."
    e. Observed behaviors included:
        i. Extreme aggression.
        ii. Property destruction.
        iii. Disrespect towards staff.
        iv. Refusal/noncompliance.

v. Unsafe behaviors (i.e. attempting to touch an electric outlet, tie strings around [their] neck, etc.)

f. Data from October 23, 2025 to November 20, 2025 reported:
    i. 27 occurrences of extreme aggression.
    ii. 15 occurrences of property destruction.
    iii. 9 occurrences of disrespect toward staff.
    iv. 36 occurrences of refusal/non-compliance.
    v. 8 occurrences of unsafe behavior.
g. Data from December 1, 2025 to January 6, 2026 reported:
    i. 5 occurrences of extreme aggression.
    ii. 4 occurrences of property destruction.
    iii. 3 occurrences of disrespect toward staff.
    iv. 12 occurrences of refusal/non-compliance.
    v. 2 occurrences of unsafe behavior.
    vi. 4 occurrences of disruptive behavior.
h. A "Collaborative Problem Solving - Assessment and Planning Tool (CPS-APT)" for "Lagging Skills" indicated the following:
    i. Strengths:
        1. Understanding what others are saying.
        2. Following the flow of conversations.
        3. Quickly understanding people who are talking.
        4. Keeping track of time.
        5. Thinking about more than one thing at a time.
        6. Being energetic at the time time [sic]; getting energy up when expected to.
        7. Changing their mind if offered a different idea or solution.
        8. Paying attention to what others are saying or doing.
    ii. Difficulties:
        1. Handling feelings when angry, frustrated or annoyed.
        2. Handling feelings when disappointed or sad.
        3. Handling feelings when nervous, worried or anxious.
        4. Pausing before they respond.
i. Triggers were described as restricted access to preferred activities/items, losing in game, and transition to specials.
j. The FBA recommended universal precautions and a proactive regulation plan.
k. Strategies suggested included:
    i. Calm and neutral tone.

ii. One person at a time talks to the Student.
iii. Do not engage in power struggles.
iv. Give personal space at all times.
v. Allow break from instruction if appropriate.
vi. Restate expectations for tasks.
vii. Allow the Student to access a personal calm down space.
viii. Concise verbal communication.
ix. Call/text support staff for assistance with behavior escalations.
x. If the Student refuses help from support staff, the administrative staff will be called to assist.
xi. If the Student refuses administrative staff support, SRO will be called to assist and the Student will be escorted to the office.

11. According to a behavior log dated October 23, 2025 to November 20, 2025, the Student showed the following behaviors during this time range:
    a. 27 incidents of extreme aggression (head banging, shoving desks, throwing objects/furniture, punching a computer).
    b. 15 incidents of property destruction (breaking materials, ripping paper, writing on desks, damaging furniture).
    c. Nine incidents of disrespect toward staff (arguing, refusing, talking back, telling staff to "shut up").
    d. 36 incidents of refusals or non-compliance (refusing work, not transitioning, refusing lunch, talking back).
    e. Eight incidents of unsafe behavior (tying a sweatshirt around the neck, removing/ripping clothing, and dangerous or unsafe actions).
12. Antecedent-Behavior Consequence Data tracking sheets dated from October 23, 2025 to January 6, 2026 documented the setting in which the behavior occurred, the antecedent events, the behavior, and the consequence(s) given to the Student. Details of behavior incidents were documented in a "other comments" section. The data tracking sheets corresponded to parent communication and behavior logs.
13. On October 26, 2025, the Parent emailed the Principal regarding disruptive behavior during the week of October 13, 2025, and out of school suspensions for the Student on October 21and October 24, 2025. The Parent stated the Student was suspended for "[c]onduct that endangers the safety of others or which substantially impinges upon or invades the rights of others at school, on school property, or at a school-supervised activity." They expressed "I would like clarification on what [the Student's] first suspension was for and what educational codes were broken, what was done per [their] IEP before the behavior and after." They recounted an incident with a notebook which led to a second suspension on October 24, 2025. The Parent asserted the reason for the second suspension was listed identically to the first. They again requested clarification on codes broken and interventions implemented.

In a reply on October 27, 2025, the Principal indicated the second suspension was in regard to violent drawings within the Student's notebook. They stated this violated an LEA conduct code. Therefore the Principal followed LEA protocol and suspended the Student. They asserted they consulted the Student's IEP before making a decision. The Principal reported "staff provided support during and after the situation to help [the Student] process what occurred and to plan for [their] safe and successful return to school. At that time, [the Student] was not receptive to our attempts to engage, but we remain committed to supporting [the Student] as [they] continue to adjust and grow." The Principal did not address the first suspension.

14. On October 26, 2025, the Parent sent a letter to the Superintendent to file a formal complaint against staff working with the Student, including the Principal. The Parent requested two suspensions be expunged. They indicated the reasoning for the suspensions was listed as "Conduct that endangers the safety of others or which substantially impinges upon or invades the rights of others at school, on school property, or at a school-supervised activity."
    The Parent provided written summaries of the accounts in question and indicated the Student's IEP protocol was not being followed or reviewed. They also noted proper corrective actions were not taken to prevent emotional distress in the classroom setting. They stated both suspensions contained the same statement and provided no "information or elaboration" of what happened.
15. IEP meeting notes dated October 28, 2025 indicated the Principal, the LEA Coach; the Superintendent, the Parent, the School Psychologist, Special Education Teacher 1, the Assistant Director, the Educational Advocate, the SEL Coordinator, and the General Education Teacher were in attendance. The team discussed the Student's school year to date. They noted new behaviors and increased self-selection of the special education classroom. The Parent asked why the Student was doing work in the special education classroom, and Special Education Teacher 1 replied the Student was allowed to use the space to regulate and complete work before returning to the general education classroom. The team discussed existing interventions and accommodation for the Student, as well as behavior data. It was noted the Student "went from 10% ability to regulate emotions to about 50%." Staff shared the strategies they were using with the Student, such as choices, reminders, timers, visual schedules and tools, and breaks. The Parent raised concerns the Student purposefully dysregulated to gain access to the resource room. They asked that staff remove the resource room as a consequence for the Student's behavior. The Parent suggested "having a conversation in the moment." The team stated they would continue to collect data on the Student's behavior and attempt to identify time periods when the Student was most likely to escalate. A functional behavior assessment (FBA) was proposed, as well as a change in placement to increase special education minutes. The team discussed outside therapy services in tandem with in-school options. They agreed to meet in 4-6 weeks.
16. Prior written notice (PWN) indicating a "material change in services" was "hand delivered" to the Parent by the Special Education Teacher on October 28, 2025. The description stated "Due to an increase in unsafe behaviors the team is proposing that [the Student's] special education minutes be adjusted to meet [their] current needs." The team proposed 205 minutes in the general education setting and 240 minutes of specially designed instruction (SDI) in the special education setting. The consent section was marked as "I give consent" and signed by the Parent on October 28, 2025. An IEP Amendment Between Annual IEP Meetings notice attached to the PWN showed a box was checked indicating the team and the Parent agreed to the amendment. Additionally, a box was checked indicating the team and the Parent did not "wish to convene an IEP meeting." The second form was signed by the Parent and the Principal on October 29, 2025.

17. The SEL Coordinator emailed the Parent on October 31, 2025 with information about outside wraparound mental health services. They stated they inquired if the agency they contacted could provide in-school services and had not yet received an answer. On November 7, 2025, the SEL Coordinator updated the Parent that the agency could not provide in-school services and they would reach out to another agency.
18. According to a communication log dated November 4, 2025, the Student was disrespectful and disruptive during music by saying no to everything the Music Teacher said. The Student refused to participate and "turned around the entire time."
    The Student was defiant at the beginning and at the end of physical education (PE) class. The Student said no to instructions, did not get off the stairs when asked, refused to sit down and "huddle up" with other students, and used "disrespectful words and actions."
    The Student packed their backpack and left the resource room without permission at the end of the day. The Special Education Teacher called the SEL Coordinator, who could see the Student leave the lunchroom and run out to get on the bus.
19. According to a communication log dated November 5, 2025, the Student threw cups and kicked a classmate during class.
20. According to a communication log dated November 7, 2025, the Student refused to sit at their table group in the library. The Librarian indicated after the Student said no three times, they told the Student they would have to call someone to pick them up. The Student said, "OK." The Librarian again asked the Student if they wanted them to call someone, and the Student replied, "Yes." The Librarian indicated they chose to ignore the behavior while the Student sat banging their head on the concrete wall. The Student was not forced to join the activity, and a paraeducator stood near the Student.
21. According to a communication log dated November 11, 2025, the Student became frustrated with a game on their computer and "slammed their fist" on it. The Student was given a warning the computer would be removed if the Student hit it again. The Student hit the computer again and it was removed by the Special Education Teacher. The Special Education Teacher discussed what could happen to the Student, and the Student expressed understanding and rejoined the group.
    The Student did not participate in the reading class and wrapped their hoodie sleeves around their neck. The Student was asked not to do that because it was unsafe. The Student chose not to eat lunch, stating they were not hungry.

The Student got upset during a schoolwide practice for a music concert. The Student ran from the line and hid in the corner of the gym. The Student tried to "rip out" a large electrical cord. They banged their head on and kicked the side of the bleachers. The Student was given the choice to cool down in the resource room or in the office. The Student chose the resource room and was able to communicate how they were feeling and why they became upset. They returned to the gym.

22. According to a communication log dated November 12, 2025, the Student refused to go through the lunch line. A tray of food was offered to the Student. Notes indicated if the Student refused to go through the line, they would be required to spend lunch recess in the office. The Student was told the expectation.
    The Student destroyed the materials in their break box during class. The Student returned to their seat when the timer went off, but shoved their desk. The Student was offered breathing exercise [cards] and threw them. They continued to destroy materials, rip up papers, and shove and hit their desk. They were removed from the classroom. The Special Education Teacher offered restorative questions, but the Student did not engage.
23. According to a communication log dated November 13, 2025, the Student shoved their table, and after being told to fix it, complied and went to the resource room.
    In the resource room, the Student ripped papers and destroyed items in their desk. The Student's desk was removed from the area. The Student threw a chair which almost hit another student. The classroom was evacuated. The Student continued to break items in the classroom. They threw the prize box, unplugged the printer, and tried to knock it off a shelf.
    When the SEL Coordinator arrived, the SRO was standing near the Student who was sitting on the floor. The Special Education Teacher left the room, and the SRO told the Student they needed to move to the office. The Student did not respond to the SRO, so the SRO said again they needed to go to the office so the Student would not have to go home. The Student yelled, "No," and hit the SRO's hand. The Student then kicked the SRO in the shin repeatedly. The SRO said they were going to escort the Student out of the room and the SEL Coordinator followed.
    The Student entered the SRO's room, knocked a chair over, kicked it, and ripped material off it. The Student pulled on a printer cart. The Student was told to stop and was told they could sit. The Student eventually sat on the floor. The Student touched an electrical outlet, and the SRO and SEL Coordinator ignored the behavior. The SEL Coordinator asked the Student if they were ready to talk, a couple of times with pauses in between. After the Student continued to ignore the SEL Coordinator, the SEL Coordinator stopped engaging with the Student.
    After the SEL Coordinator left the room, the Student escalated and threw small objects, materials, and blinds. When the Principal arrived, the Student threw one of their shoes at the Principal and the other at the SRO. The Student broke blinds, a shelf, and damaged an electrical outlet. The Student kicked the walls, shelves, door, and furniture, and then threw a binder at the Principal. The Principal offered a paper to tear as a strategy, and the Student did not respond. The Student vomited and also cut their finger while ripping down the blinds.

The SRO directed the Student to stop destroying property. The SRO "positioned" the Student in a chair and blocked them from throwing additional items. The Other Parent arrived and left with the Student. The Principal indicated they would call the Parent and send home the In-School Suspension (ISS) documentation.

24. On November 12, 2025, the Principal called the Parent to pick up the Student. According to the Student's Attendance Profile, the Student was not marked as absent or OSS. (P1)(D131)
25. On November 13, 2025, a Notice To Student of Short-Term Suspension After Informal Hearing was issued, indicating the Student had been suspended from school for one day beginning on November 13, 2025, and ending on November 13, 2025. The reason for the suspension was listed as, "Conduct that endangers the safety of others or which substantially impinges upon or invades the rights of others at school, on school property, or at a school-supervised activity."
26. A Placement Review Request documented the process for placing the Student in the Special Day School. The documented noted the following process:
    a. The request was initiated on November 13, 2025.
    b. Staff from the Special Day School observed the Student on November 14 and 19, 2025.
    c. The Special Day School met with the LEA to make recommendations on November 21, 2025.
    d. The LEA and Parent observational visits and an IEP meeting to discuss the transition were scheduled on January 21, 2026.
    e. No decision or transition information was reported on the document.
27. According to a communication log dated November 14, 2025, the Student became frustrated with a game on their computer and punched it several times. They were verbally redirected and reminded not to treat school property that way.

    The Student refused to transition to reading even after multiple countdown warnings and a visual timer. The Student left and slammed the classroom door. The Special Education Teacher asked the Student to come back, and they did, but hid under their desk. The Special Education Teacher gave the Student time to calm down before engaging again. The Special Education Teacher reminded the Student to transition without disruption to earn tokens.

    The Student was upset their "break box" was not in the general education classroom when it was their break time. The Student threw papers, hit their head on their desk, and attempted to throw their desk, but their behavior was stopped. The Student chose to leave to calm down in the resource room and slammed the classroom door on the way out.

    In the Library, the Student shoved another student's book across the table, disrupting the activity they were working on. The Student hid under the furniture. The Librarian watched the Student without engaging with the Student. The Student threw their toy and shoved a bean bag. The Student walked out of the library while another staff member monitored, and eventually came back and sat in a chair until class was over.

28. According to a communication log dated November 17, 2025, the Student left the line in the cafeteria and sat down at a table. When asked to rejoin the line, the Student threw their shoe across the room, ran from the cafeteria, returned, and sat back at the table. The Student hit their head on the lunch table and increased the force until the Principal calmly asked them to stop.
29. According to a communication log dated November 20, 2025, the Student refused to join class after two verbal countdown warnings. They were given the option to stay in the resource room and complete make-up work or go to science and social studies. The Student chose to go to the resource room.
30. On November 21, 2025, an IEP Amendment Between Annual IEP Meetings form stated the team proposed increasing the Student's special education minutes due to an increase in unsafe behaviors.
    The PWN accompanying the amendment indicated that the Student's minutes would increase to 60 minutes per day, five days per week, for science and social studies, and 30 minutes per day, five days per week, for "Rocket Reading." The proposal noted the Student would receive 330 minutes of support in the special education classroom for ELA, math, "Rocket Reading," science, social studies, and social-emotional learning.
31. According to a communications log dated December 2-8, 2025, the Student's behaviors included aggression, property destruction, and frequent non-compliance across multiple school settings. Incidents included kicking objects, punching a computer screen, destroying materials, and culminated in the student hitting the SEL Coordinator twice with a shoe on December 8, 2025. Following this last behavior, the Parent was informed that the Student would receive an Out-of-School Suspension. The Parent asked about an FBA and when the IEP team would meet again.
32. On December 5, 2025, the Parent noted the Student was sent home by the Assistant Superintendent via a text message. The LEA noted the Assistant Superintendent called the Parent at 2:30 [p.m.] and the Student stayed at school until the end of the day. The Student's Attendance Profile shows no absence for that day. (P1)(D131, D317)
33. On December 8, 2025, a Notice To Student of Short-Term Suspension After Informal Hearing was issued, indicating the Student had been suspended from school for one day beginning on December 9, 2025, and ending on December 10, 2025. The reason for the suspension was listed as, "Conduct that endangers the safety of others or which substantially impinges upon or invades the rights of others at school, on school property, or at a school-supervised activity."
34. On December 12, 2025, the Superintendent sent a letter to the Parent stating an investigation was conducted and determined "the recommendation the [the Student] be suspended (two times for a total of three days) was not supported by LEA policy, special education procedures, or the provision of [the Student's] IEP (referenced in your complaint and reviewed in the investigation)." They agreed to have the Student's suspensions expunged.

35. A Progress Report dated December 17, 2025 reported:
    a. For "Goal 2: By February 10th, 2026, with the use of conversations with a trusted adult and given choices, [the Student] will demonstrate and improve emotional regulation by identifying and expressing [their] feelings and understanding the consequences of [their] actions appropriately with an accuracy of 80%.
    b. Baseline: 15% accuracy.
    c. Progress as of December 15, 2025: Anticipate Meeting Goal
    d. Statement of Progress Data: "With the use of conversations with a trusted adult and given choices, [the Student] is able to demonstrate and improve emotional regulation by identifying and expressing [their] feelings and understanding the consequences of [their] actions appropriately with an accuracy of 30%. Behavior in the last few weeks has impacted [the Student's] ability to reach [their] goals."
36. According to communication logs dated December 18, 2025-January 6, 2026, the Student displayed behaviors including physical aggression toward peers and staff, along with property destruction. These incidents included throwing a ball at another student's face, ripping papers, throwing a chair, and being consistently non-compliant with staff directions and choices to transition. The most serious escalation involved the Student pinning a paraeducator against the wall in an attempt to get a ball back during Physical Education class.
37. On January 6, 2026, the Student's IEP was updated and contained the following relevant information:
    a. Participants were listed as the Parent, the Special Education Teacher, General Education Teacher 1, the Principal, the School Psychologist, the Special Education Coach, and the Assistant Director.
    b. The Student's behaviors of throwing and non-compliance were "motivated by tangible results. [The Student] is not demonstrating a significant sensory seeking or avoidance behavior when these behaviors are observed."
    c. The IEP noted the Student "may miss time in the general education classroom due to difficulties managing and regulating [their] emotions."
    d. Social Emotional Goals:
        i. Goal 1: "By January 5th 2027 [the Student] will improve behavior during routine tasks and transitions by following adult directions and using appropriate coping skills, reducing defiant or aggressive behaviors to no more than 2 occurrences per week, as measured by teacher observations and behavior logs." Baseline was "currently displaying defiant or aggressive behavior more than 5 times a week."
        ii. Goal 2: By January 5th 2027, [the Student] will use an appropriate coping strategy (such as taking a break, using a calm-down card, or requesting help) to manage frustration or anger in 4 out of 5 observed opportunities, resulting in a reduction of defiant or aggressive behaviors during nonpreferred tasks, as measured by teacher observations and behavior tracking data." Baseline was the Student "experiences difficulty managing [their] emotions and maintaining regulation during certain tasks and transitions. These moments can impact [the Student's] ability to follow directions and fully engage in learning activities. [The Student] is able to manage frustration or anger in 0 out of 5 observed opportunities."

e. The Student maintained one goal each in the areas of reading and math, and removed their writing goal.

f. The IEP noted "At times, [the Student] can become dysregulated when asked to complete a simple task, for example writing [their] name on [their] paper. When [the Student] is dysregulated [they] often times becomes [sic] violent and aggressive towards peers and staff."

g. Accommodations included:
    i. Separate setting for assessments.
    ii. Math manipulatives.
    iii. Visual schedule on desk or in line of sight.
    iv. Single step directions.
    v. Extended time on assignments and assessments.
    vi. Speech to text for writing assignments more than five sentences long.

h. A Behavior Plan included:
    i. Behaviors of concern were "Repeated disruptive and unsafe behaviors (i.e., extreme aggression, property destruction, disrespect towards staff, refusal/noncompliance, and/or other unsafe behaviors)."
    ii. Triggers were noted as "Restricted access to preferred activity/item, being asked to complete work, being asked to get off technology, losing in a game, and transitions to specials."
    iii. "Hypothesis" was listed as "Seeking Control, Inability to Regulate Emotions [sic], and connection seeking."
    iv. Strategies to address the behavior included "The use of a Proactive Regulation Plan, visual schedule, [s]cheduled breaks, [a]lternate schedule, [a]lternative seating options, [p]ersonal calm down space."
    v. Targeted Behaviors included:
        1. Extreme Aggression
            a. Baseline 27 Occurrences
        2. Refusal/Noncompliance
            a. Baseline 36 Occurrences
        3. Property Destruction

a. Baseline 15 Occurrences

vi. Implementation Steps/De-escalation Strategies included:

1. "Staff with verbalize that they will be available when [S]tudent is ready to talk[.]"
2. "Allow [the] [S]tudent to re-regulate on [their] own[.]"
3. "Offer time to rest after reaching peak dysregulation[.]"
4. "Offer [the Student] feelings meter once [they are] calm enough to communicate[.]"

i. Services provided included:

i. Special education services five days each week outside the general education classroom for:

1. SEL, 10 minutes.
2. ELA, 120 minutes.
3. Rocket Reading, 30 minutes.
4. Math, 60 minutes.
5. Science/Social Studies, 60 Minutes.

ii. Special education services five days per week in the regular education classroom with special education support for:

1. Specials, 60 minutes.
2. Lunch/Recess, 55 minutes.

38. IEP meeting notes dated January 6, 2026 stated the participants were Special Education Teacher 1, the Assistant Director, the Principal, the Occupational Therapist, the General Education Teacher, the School Psychologist, the County Coach, the Speech Language Pathologist, the Assistant Superintendent, the SEL Coordinator, and the Parent. The results from the Student triennial assessments were shared. The Student was reported as low average across assessments. The Parent shared concerns about academic success in regards to the assessments and believed the Student was "farther behind than staff may think." They asked "How can we say [the Student] is doing well academically when [their] academic scores … show [the Student] is low[?]" The Parent noted the team did not know if the Student's work refusal was "because [the Student] does not want to or because [they] can't or does not know how to do it." Special Education Teacher 1 expressed the Student wanted to do well academically and was doing the same work as their peers. The team noted that while the Student typically enjoyed specials, the transition between the classroom and specials was difficult. The School Psychologist presented strategies for handling the Student's behavior. The Assistant Director recommended sensory headphones for the Student.
39. A PWN dated January 6, 2026 indicated the team would meet on January 23, 2026. The detail sections indicated a "material change in services" and a "substantial change in placement" were proposed, each requiring parental consent. The description stated "Per parent agreement, [the Student] will receive virtual special education services at [their] home for a total of 60 minutes (30 minutes in the morning and 30 minutes in the afternoon), 5 days per week between the dates of 01/26/2026 - 02/09/2026. A meeting will be held prior to [the Student's] return to school." The PWN acknowledged the proposed placement was restrictive, and reported "[The Student] is currently receiving outside inpatient therapy at [Mental Health Hospital], if and when [they are] able, [the LEA] is ready, willing, and able to provide the outlined services between the dates of 01/26/2026-02/09/2026." The delivery section indicated PWN was emailed to the Parent by the School Psychologist on January 23, 2026. An IEP Amendment Between Annual IEP Meetings notice accompanied the PWN. Neither document was signed.

40. Communication logs documented that on January 7, 2026 the Student destroyed materials, used pens to stab their own legs, knocked over a shelf, and ripped down lights, followed by kicking the Assistant Superintendent and attempting to put objects in electrical outlets. Due to the high level of dysregulation and danger, the School Resource Officer (SRO) was called to assist, and a family member was eventually called to pick up the Student. LEA Staff initially attempted non-responsive, non-confrontational strategies such as removing the Student's desk, offering a choice of completing work or going to the office, allowing the Student time to calm down, and providing reminders about earning a break. As the student's behavior escalated to property destruction, the SRO was called to assist. Staff used clear directives (telling the student to stop), offered choices (let go of the lights or SRO called), and ultimately backed away when the Student became physically aggressive toward the Assistant Superintendent.
41. Communication logs documented that on January 20, 2026, the Student's frustration led to throwing a bookshelf, hitting the Principal, and physically striking the SRO in the face, knocking off their glasses. The SRO was forced to place the Student in handcuffs to gain control of the situation, resulting in a one-and-a-half-day out-of-school suspension. The LEA Staff's initial responses involved offering choices (e.g., hot lunch, where to eat lunch), setting a timer to talk, and engaging the Student in cleaning up the mess with the Principal. When the Student's aggression escalated to hitting the Principal and SRO, the SRO was forced to place the Student in handcuffs to contain the dangerous behavior. The handcuffs were removed once the student complied with directions to sit and calm down. Following the incident, the SRO provided the Student's lunch, the Parents were contacted for an immediate pick-up, the Principal discussed the use of handcuffs with the Parent, and the Student was issued a one-and-a-half-day Out-of-School Suspension (OSS).
42. On January 23, 2026, an IEP Amendment Between Annual Meetings indicated the Student would receive virtual special education services for 60 minutes, five days per week, at their home from January 26, 2026, through February 9, 2026. A meeting would be held prior to the Student's return to discuss further special education services and placement that would best meet the Student's needs.
    The PWN that accompanied the amendment stated the Student's placement had changed while they were receiving inpatient therapy at the Mental Health Hospital, and when the Student was able, the School was ready, willing, and able to provide the outlined services.

43. Notes dated January 23, 2026 indicated the Principal, the Superintendent, the General Education Teacher, the Parent, the School Psychologist, the Assistant Director, the Special Day School Principal, Special Education Teacher 1, and Special Education Teacher 2 met to discuss the Student's educational and behavioral needs. The Parent requested the Student remain at home for two weeks. The team strategized options for supporting the Student during that time. They decided on twice daily check-ins for half an hour each. The Assistant Director acknowledged the Special Day School Principal was in attendance and the Parent indicated they planned to visit the next week. The Parent had questions regarding in-school counseling and one-on-one paraeducator support. They had concerns the Student was being instructed with younger peers. Special Education Teacher 1 assured the Parent they were preparing grade-level specially designed instruction for the Student, however the special education classroom was physically located in a lower grade level building. The team agreed to meet again in two weeks.
44. On January 26, 2026, the Parent emailed the LEA to inform them the Student had been checked into inpatient care at the Mental Health Hospital.
45. On January 27, 2026, the School Psychologist emailed the Parent a copy of the IEP amendment from January 23, 2026. The Parent informed the School Psychologist the Student was hospitalized. The School Psychologist reached out to the Assistant Superintendent for advice in handling the new information. The Assistant Superintendent suggested changing the dates of the amended services to after the Student was discharged. The School Psychologist updated the amendment and resent it to the Parent on January 30, 2026.
46. On January 30, 2026, the Mental Health Hospital provided a note excusing the Student from school due to being admitted to the Mental Health Hospital on January 26, 2026 and being discharged that day. An additional note requested the Student be excused from school from January 26, 2026, through February 6, 2026 for inpatient mental health treatment and continued recovery following discharge.
47. On January 30, 2026, the Parent emailed the Superintendent to summarize what was discussed at their meeting the previous week. The Parent noted two Emergency Safety Interventions (ESI) incidents: one in which manual restraints were reportedly used for five to nine minutes, and another in which the Student was carried to the car by school staff. The Parent confirmed they wanted documentation of the incidents, who authorized the restraints, what de-escalation methods were used, and the steps the LEA was taking to prevent recurrence. Additionally, the Parent requested information on how the events were documented in the Student's cumulative record. The Parent asked if all suspensions had been reviewed and whether an MDR should have been held.
48. The Parent emailed the IEP Team and mentioned the need for a safe space for the Student at the IEP meeting "a month before," and as of January 23, 2026, they were "still working on space." The Parent indicated the IEP Team identified the need for a one-to-one support, but it was not implemented or added to the IEP. The Student was moved from the third-grade pod to the second-grade pod with a different special education teacher.

49. A PWN dated February 5, 2026 indicated the team met to consider "[a]ny additions, changes or modifications to the special education and related services or educational placement that are needed to enable your child to meet the measurable annual goals set in the IEP and to participate, as appropriate, in the general curriculum." The detail sections indicated a "material change in services" and a "substantial change in placement" were proposed. The description stated "Per parent decision and team agreement, [the Student] will receive virtual special education services at [their] home for a total of 60 minutes (30 minutes in the morning and 30 minutes in the afternoon), 5 days per week between the dates of 02/09/2026 - 02/20/2026. A meeting will be held prior to [the Student's] return to school." Further, the PWN reported "The team had previously discussed that [the Student] receive virtual special education services between the dates of 01/26/2026-02/09/2026; however, [they] began receiving inpatient therapy at [Mental Health Hospital]. [The Student's] therapist noted [they] should remain at home for the week of 2/2/26 through 2/6/26, to get adjusted and start aftercare and begin receiving virtual special education services during 02/09/2026 - 02/20/2026." The PWN acknowledged the proposed placement was restrictive. The delivery section indicated the PWN was emailed to the Parent by the School Psychologist on February 5, 2026. An IEP Amendment Between Annual IEP Meetings notice accompanied the PWN. Neither document was signed.
50. Meeting notes dated February 5, 2026 documented a virtual meeting. The notes stated the meeting was a "formality" to "clarify" the change of services documented in the recent amendment to the Student's IEP. The change of services included online instruction twice a day for one half hour each session. The sessions would provide specially designed instruction in ELA and math.
51. An attendance profile printed on February 23, 2026 for the dates August 6, 2025 through March 15, 2026 indicated the Student was enrolled 131 days, present 99 days, absent 32 days, and tardy one day. Five days for out-of-school suspension were recorded.
52. On February 15, 2026, in a document to the Superintendent, the Principal, the "IEP Team/ and Staff," the Parent formally requested an MDR for "immediate consideration of interim services" and discussion on an appropriate out-of-district placement for the Student. Their request was based on repeated suspensions, use of restraints, and removals from school which resulted in the Student missing "significant instructional time."

    The Parent indicated the LEA was unable to provide a FAPE to the Student because of the use of restraints, more than 10 suspensions and absences due to the Student's disability, the behavior intervention plan (BIP) not preventing recurring behaviors, the IEP being implemented inconsistently, disability-related behaviors being disciplined rather than supported, escalations staff were unable to manage, and not making meaningful progress in current setting.

The Parent requested an immediate IEP meeting to review placement, an updated FBA and BIP, compensatory education for missed instructional time due to suspensions or removals, interim "district-funded services," and consideration of an out-of-district non-public or therapeutic day school placement.

53. The Student's third grade report card documented the Student had received 3 As and a B for second quarter. No first quarter grades were recorded. The Student's first and second quarter "Approaches to Learning" ratings were all in the emerging or developing ranges.

Parent Interview

54. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Parent stated they sent a document to the LEA on January 21, 2026 about an incident where the Student was restrained in handcuffs on January 20, 2026. The Parent stated they sent a document to the LEA on February 15, 2026 requesting a formal MDR.
55. The Parent explained the Student started having issues at school in September 2025. They indicated the Student had had minor transition issues, but nothing violent. The Parent started receiving calls from the Principal and a teacher on September 29, 2025 stating the Student kicked off their shoe and hit a teacher with it when it was kicked off. They also stated they were made aware of incidents which happened on September 30, 2025 and October 30, 2025.
56. The Parent stated the Student's behaviors were documented in an FBA. According to the Parent, whenever a behavior incident occurred with the Student, they received a call from the School to pick up the Student, or sometimes the Student was suspended.
57. The Parent stated they were told "no" by the LEA when they asked, "Can we not use restraints? Can we not use suspension because of [the Student's] disability?" The Parent explained the School Psychologist conducted an FBA in October 2025 to determine possible changes to the Student's IEP. The Parent perceived School staff were not following the Student's IEP because they were not providing the Student with breaks, timers, and shortened or preferred assignments. The Parent stated the School moved the Student from the general education classroom to the special education classroom, and then at one point, the Student had no general education time. The Parent stated School staff never provided the Student with a chance to regulate and return to class, never provided the Student access to a calm room, and there would always be "four or five people" standing around when the Student had an "outburst." The Parent stated they asked several times to only have one person try to calm the Student down.
58. The Parent stated they knew of at least two instances when School staff used restraints or "put hands" on the Student. They indicated the School did not provide one-on-one support. The Parent stated they had to keep picking up the Student from school "more and more and more." The Parent stated they picked the Student up from school on September 29 and 30, 2025, and October 6, 20, 23, and 30, 2025.

59. The Parent stated they were provided a copy of the October 28, 2025 IEP amendment in person. The Parent indicated the November 21, 2025 IEP amendment included the Student receiving direct pull-out services for science, social studies, and rocket reading, and it would increase the Student's special education from 240 minutes to 330 minutes per day. They stated the School wanted to make adjustments to "support safety, regulation, and access to learning."
60. The Parent believed that anytime the Student had to leave school due to their disability, the School should still provide services. They said, "… because [the Student] had missed so much school due to [their] disability … I was trying to prevent how to keep [them] from getting so far behind because now [the Student] [is] so far behind from missing so much school this year." The Parent recalled the Student had been sent home 15 times during the 2025-26 school year and suspended nine times. They stated they did not receive formal paperwork for the suspensions on January 7 and 8, 2026. They said, "… even though they called me and told me to pick [the Student] up, they had [the Student] marked as present when [they] should have been marked as absent. And some of them, [the LEA] said [the Student] was suspended, but they just marked [them] as absent or tardy." The Parent described some suspensions were half days, and some were one, two, and three days.
61. The Parent explained on December 8, 2025 they asked the Principal if the School could utilize something other than suspensions because those did not appear to be working. They stated the Principal said, "okay," but there was never any follow-up.
62. The Parent perceived scheduling an MDR should have come from the School. The Parent stated they did some research, discovered there should have been an MDR, and requested one.
63. The Parent stated they emailed the Superintendent on January 26, 2026 and explained the Student could not participate in online school that week because they had been checked into a mental hospital. They explained the Superintendent emailed them on February 2, 2026 and requested a meeting on February 5, 2026 to discuss their request for the two-week online home study.

Principal Interview

64. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Principal explained the following abbreviations: "E" stood for excused, "A" for absent, "O" for out-of-school suspension, and "U" was for unexcused.
65. The Principal stated they had records of the Student being suspended for nine days: October 21, 24, and 27, 2025, November 13, 2025, December 9, 2025, and January 7, 8, 20, and 21, 2026. When asked if they noticed a pattern to the Student's suspensions, the Principal indicated the Student had engaged in violent behaviors such as throwing items, taking items apart, and hitting staff members.
66. The Principal pointed out that the Student's attendance profile showed they were absent on October 24, 2025, and asked why that was not marked with an "O" if they had been suspended. The Principal indicated it was because the Student's behavior had occurred at the end of the school day on October 24, 2025. They explained it was connected to a previous incident which had happened on October 23, 2025. The Principal shared that staff had shown them a sketchbook the Student had brought to school which included drawings depicting violence, including guns and "illustrations of harming and killing classmates." The Principal confirmed the Student had been suspended for a full day on October 24, 2025 and the attendance sheet should have been marked with an "O."

67. When asked to describe the Student's escalating behaviors, the Principal stated there was an FBA in place and staff "go through that process, but it's like a flip of a switch sometimes." The Principal explained staff used the strategies in the FBA, but time could be "very short in terms of when [the Student] becomes violent." The Principal defined "violent" as the Student throwing items, hitting people, destroying classrooms, damaging property, accidentally harming themselves, and causing self-inflicted harm such as hitting their head. The Principal indicated there were times when staff was able to de-escalate the situation, and other times when strategies were not successful in the moment.
68. The Principal stated they measured the success of interventions by the Student's response "in the moment." They explained staff had tried different strategies based on the Student's interests and different observations. The Principal stated the Student did not like interacting with multiple people when they escalated, so there was a plan to only have one person talk to the Student and engage with them. If the Student did not like that, staff would "back off" and give the Student space. They shared the staff had tried symbolisms so the Student did not have to speak and only had to point to things, if they were able to.
69. The Principal stated they met with the Parent on October 14, 2025 during parent-teacher conferences about the Student, but it was not an IEP meeting. They discussed the Student's IEP and received permission from the parents to perform an FBA. The Principal stated during that meeting, the Parent wanted them to enforce consequences and discussed how the School was addressing the Student's behavior. At the time, the Student was receiving verbal warnings for their behavior.
70. When asked about the IEP amendment from November 21, 2025, the Principal explained School staff had noticed the Student's behaviors were increasing over time and they were less successful in class.
71. The Principal stated they did not conduct an MDR because at the time, based on their dates, they believed they had not reached the ten-day threshold yet.
72. The Principal explained there was discussion during an IEP meeting about services for the Student during the period from January 22, 2026 through February 23, 2026. They indicated the Parent shared the Student would be away from school, and the School would offer 30 minutes of online instruction in the morning and the afternoon. The Principal believed the services were implemented virtually by Special Education Teacher 1, and for all of the days in that time period. The Principal clarified the services were offered from February 9, 2026 through February 16, 2026, because the Parent chose to keep the Student home during the other times. The Principal stated they had asked how else they could help during an IEP meeting, and the Parent stated it would violate HIPAA and the Parent was not interested in sharing that information. The Principal stated they were trying to get a release so they could work together during those times.

School Psychologist Interview

73. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the School Psychologist explained that for the Student's BIP, staff reviewed data which was collected between October 14, 2025 and January 2026. The team identified some areas in which the Student was struggling by reviewing observations and data collected by Special Education Teacher 1. Using that information, they and the SEL Coordinator met with Special Education Teacher 1 and identified different interventions which had already been implemented that the Student used. They also identified other interventions which worked well for the Student in the past and wanted to continue to use.
74. The School Psychologist explained the interventions which had been followed including alternative seating options, a visual timer, access to the Student's own area / a calm down space, a visual schedule, and access to fidgets. They added a token system was a strategy the Student had used previously but it was not in the BIP. They indicated the Student had used, and continued to use, a feelings meter, and an alternative schedule.
75. When asked how the BIP was communicated to staff, the School Psychologist explained everyone had met to review the behavior assessment. They shared Special Education Teacher 1 gave the document to their paraprofessionals to review. The School Psychologist stated they also talked to the support staff who would be called if the Student's behavior escalated.
76. The School Psychologist confirmed they conducted the FBA. They explained the FBA was triggered because the Student had started demonstrating behaviors in the classroom, and the FBA was conducted to determine if a behavior assessment was necessary because the Student had not had one previously.
77. The School Psychologist recalled a meeting during parent-teacher conferences on October 14, 2025 where they received consent to conduct the FBA and develop a BIP. They indicated there was another meeting on October 28, 2025 to discuss an increase in the Student's special education service minutes based on some of Special Education Teacher 1's data. The School Psychologist stated they were not involved in formal meetings between October 28, 2025 and January 6, 2026, and were unaware there had been a November 21, 2025 amendment to the Student's IEP. The School Psychologist later recalled the team amended the IEP to add minutes during the Student's rocket reading because the data from October 23, 2025 to November 20, 2025 showed the Student was struggling in rocket reading, science, and social studies. They indicated the team met on November 20, 2025 to discuss an increase in the Student's support minutes to have them be in the special education classroom for rocket reading, science, and social studies. They indicated the attendees would have included themself, the Principal, Special Education Teacher 1, the General Education Teacher, and the Parent.

78. Regarding when the Student was in inpatient treatment, the School Psychologist recalled a meeting was held to discuss the Student receiving virtual services. They indicated the dates discussed for virtual services were January 26, 2026 to February 9, 2026. They indicated the Parent called the Superintendent and stated the Student was attending outpatient therapy and would not be able to start the two weeks of virtual services. They shared the Parent had sent an email that the Student would not be able to start virtual services until February 9, 2026 and have it go through February 20, 2026.

SEL Coordinator Interview

79. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the SEL Coordinator stated the Student transitioned smoothly into the third grade and they had not dealt with any behavioral issues with the Student until shortly before parent-teacher conferences. The SEL Coordinator described some of the Student's behaviors as "silent defiances," such as covering their mouth or eyes with tape. They indicated if staff ignored those behaviors, the Student would knock a book off a desk or other similar behaviors. The SEL Coordinator stated a teacher asked what behaviors from the Student they should acknowledge or ignore to see what the result was.
80. The SEL Coordinator stated they did not work directly with the Student and were in a support staff role. They explained they were called in after parent-teacher conferences when the Student was escalating and had more behaviors. They described a time when they were called into the art room because the Student was having escalated behaviors and staff had to keep everyone safe. They intervened on that occasion, but in general, the classroom teacher or special education teacher would handle situations with the Student.
81. The SEL Coordinator stated their main role was helping create the Student's behavior plan and participating in the FBA process. They stated the BIP contained steps to take if the Student became dysregulated and their behavior escalated, such as who should respond and how. The SEL Coordinator indicated if the general education or special education staff could not handle the situation, then support staff was called in to help de-escalate it. According to the SEL Coordinator, if support staff could not help, then administration was called, and then the school resource officer, if additional support was needed.
82. The SEL Coordinator described their role was to support staff during meetings and brainstorm ideas and strategies to implement which could help the Student be successful.

Special Education Teacher 1 Interview

83. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, Special Education Teacher 1 explained there was a meeting on August 22, 2025 to discuss the Student entering third grade because they knew the Student had some behaviors and they wanted to work with Special Education Teacher 2 to get the Student's background and history. They met with the Principal on September 30, 2025 to create a plan for the Student's behavior. Special Education Teacher 1 stated the Student shared with the Principal they would like to work in the resource room because they felt the environment was calmer and the classroom could be too loud sometimes. They stated the Principal told the Student they would create a plan to meet their needs and the Student would be able to complete independent work in the resource room.

Special Education Teacher 1 had indicated they wanted the Student to remain in the general education classroom for the "duration of time" the lessons were being taught, and then the Student could complete independent work in the resource room. They explained using that information, the team created a behavior chart which was shared with the Student. They stated the Student was always able to come to their room to complete work, and the Student also had visual schedules, visual timers, and a feelings meter.

Special Education Teacher 1 said after talking with the Parent, the Parent asked if an "I need" could be added. They described this as a way for the Student to communicate they needed a break. They indicated the Student had a personal calm down space in their classroom, and they created a "break tub" for the Student to use when they needed a break, which was available in their classroom and the general education classroom. They stated this allowed the Student to not have to leave the general education classroom to take a break. They indicated all of these strategies were in place prior to January 21, 2026.

84. Special Education Teacher 1 explained that after October 28, 2025, they were collecting data to monitor the Student's behavior and there was a communication log shared with the Parent. They stated the Student continued to have visuals for their feelings, and at one point the Student asked if they could work in a tent, which was provided. Special Education Teacher 1 also incorporated the use of green, yellow, and red folders to help the Student with their work. Special Education Teacher 1 stated they gave the Student the ability to pick where they wanted to sit. They explained the Student came into third grade without a BIP, and the team created one, in addition to a "new IEP" they thought would be a better fit for the Student. Special Education Teacher 1 stated they made a plan for the Student during lunch and used a flow sheet for the Student so it was easy for them to read.
85. When asked about the Student's escalating behaviors, Special Education Teacher 1 stated the Student would break materials, tear up papers, and bang their head on the desk. If staff asked the Student to stop, the Student would say, "or what" and "do it" when they stated they would call the Parent.
86. Special Education Teacher 1 felt the most successful intervention strategy for the Student was when there were limited people in the room and limited conversations happening, and when staff were clear and direct with the Student and providing them choices. They would sometimes have the paraprofessionals remove other students from the room to remove any extra talking or stressors.
87. Special Education Teacher 1 stated they collected data on the Student, and the School Psychologist performed some observations. They collected the data by using an ABC sheet on their computer and also recording some "minute-by-minute" data based on the Student's refusal or non-compliant behavior.

88. Special Education Teacher 1 believed an MDR was not convened for the Student because the School had not reached the threshold of days.
89. When asked about the January 6, 2026 behavior plan and how staff verbalized they were available to the Student, Special Education Teacher 1 explained when the Student had behaviors, they tended to shut down and not answer. They indicated staff would tell the Student they would give them a certain amount of time and then return to the Student and see if they were ready to engage. If the Student was not ready, staff would tell the Student to let them know when they were ready to talk and reiterated they were available. They indicated usually when that option was provided, the Student would approach staff when they were ready.
90. When asked about allowing the Student to regulate on their own, Special Education Teacher 1 stated that strategy was used after receiving input from the Parent. They stated the Student had told staff when they were mad, they did not want anyone to talk to them, which was why staff allowed the Student to "come down" on their own. Special Education Teacher 1 explained the Student was always given the opportunity to rest in their classroom. Special Education Teacher 1 stated they had multiple copies of the feelings meter available to the Student, and if the Student did not respond when asked if they were ready to talk, the feelings meter was provided and staff asked the Student to point to where they were on the meter.
91. Special Education Teacher 1 described there was an incident and then the Parent kept the Student out of school. They indicated the School received an email on January 27, 2026 the Student was in inpatient therapy and the team checked if they had to write an IEP amendment because it had been agreed upon earlier the Student would receive virtual services. Special Education Teacher 1 indicated the IEP was amended because the Student was not receiving services at that time, and on January 28, 2026, an updated amendment was sent to the Parent noting the School would change the amendment dates.

    They stated the team had a virtual meeting with the Parent on February 5, 2026 and indicated the Student's IEP would be amended for the Student to receive virtual services for 30 minutes in the morning and afternoon between February 9 through 20, 2026. Special Education Teacher 1 also sent a meeting link for the Student's online learning. They recalled the Student did not attend portions of their virtual learning on February 9, 10, 12, 13, 16, and 17, 2026. Special Education Teacher 1 explained they worked on the Student's math with them during those sessions, and also sent copies of the work via email and in the mail.
92. Special Education Teacher 1 stated a meeting was held on November 21, 2025 to discuss a potential increase in the Student's service minutes, due to the data they had collected and because the Student's behaviors were increasing. It was proposed for the Student to have 330 minutes for support in ELA, math, rocket reading, science, social studies, and social emotional learning. They stated the team also discussed different recommendations they had received and determined an increase in service minutes was appropriate due to the Student's increase in "aggressive behavior." They stated after the meeting ended, the Assistant Superintendent called the Parent and discussed the proposed changes and the Parent agreed over the phone. They stated the Parent was not invited to the meeting on November 20, 2025 because at the time it was only a team meeting and not an IEP meeting. Special Education Teacher 1 stated an IEP amendment was emailed to the Parent but never returned.

93. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, Special Education Teacher 2 stated they co-teach with Special Education Teacher 1 and helped them because the Student was in their class the previous year.
94. When asked how they were available to the Student, as described in the BIP, Special Education Teacher 2 indicated the Student was with them the majority of the time and they would help the Student when they were in their classroom. When the Student needed to rest and regulate after an escalation, they asked the Student how many minutes they needed and would set a timer. When the timer was up, they would ask the Student if they needed more time. Special Education Teacher 2 would offer the Student two choices of what to finish and they would work on it together. If the Student stated they were frustrated, they asked again how long the Student needed. When asked how they utilized the feelings meter, Special Education Teacher 2 stated they pointed to it and asked the Student to show where they were at, or watch where their gaze went to on the meter.
95. Special Education Teacher 2 described the Student's behavior from January 2026 forward, as a "wave" and they tried to use the strategies in the BIP. They found giving the Student options was a successful intervention strategy. Special Education Teacher 2 stated they helped collect data about the Student by completing a chart which tracked behavior and the Student's participation.
96. During January 22, 2026 through February 23, 2026, Special Education Teacher 2 stated they followed the Student's IEP and had 30 minutes of online instruction with the Student in the morning and afternoon. They indicated there was a period of time the Student did not attend due to mental health issues. They stated they offered SDI worksheets in language and reading during the virtual sessions.

General Education Teacher Interview

97. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the General Education Teacher described the interventions they used with the Student prior to October 29, 2025. They detailed using positive reinforcement, giving choices, providing preferential seating, and using a feelings meter. They stated the Student received 30 minutes of pullout special education services and was in the general education classroom the rest of the day. They indicated the Student also had the opportunity to go to Special Education Teacher 1's classroom, but they "didn't need that." The General Education Teacher shared they had a classroom calming kit with breathing exercises which was available and offered to the Student. They indicated the Student received extended time and, as behaviors started to increase, they implemented breaks, decreased demands, and limited access to supplies.

98. The General Education Teacher stated the October 28, 2025 IEP amendment changed the Student's setting. They described the Student had reading and math with Special Education Teacher 1, and spent social studies and science in their classroom. They continued using the same behavior strategies with the Student.

99. The General Education Teacher recalled during the meeting on November 21, 2025, the team reviewed data recorded about the Student and determined to change their placement to receive all of their services in Special Education Teacher 1's classroom. The General Education Teacher indicated the Student was not in the general education setting after January 2026, and was pulled out for core reading, math, science, social studies, and rocket reading, and was in the general education setting for lunch, recess, and specials.

100. The General Education Teacher stated the first time they saw the Student "shut down" was on September 12, 2025. They indicated around September 17 and 18, 2025, when more academics were being implemented into the day, was when they saw the Student refuse to participate. They explained the Student was given the opportunity to finish some of their work in Special Education Teacher 1's classroom, but then became dysregulated and threw items. They stated that around September 29, 2025, staff started seeing the Student have a lot of behaviors across specials, teachers, and recess, and it progressed from there. They indicated staff tried to de-escalate the behaviors and have the Student spend time in Special Education Teacher 1's classroom, but their behavior continued to escalate.

101. The General Education Teacher stated that providing the Student with choices and extended time, avoiding power struggles, allowing the Student to have time to self-regulate, and offering the Student the ability to return to an activity, were the most successful intervention strategies. Most of the time they observed the Student shut down and be unreceptive to what was being offered.

102. According to the General Education Teacher, data was being collected about the Student, including a communication log which was shared with the Parent. They stated the data collection started with informal behavior tracking and then progressed to ABC documentation. They stated Special Education Teacher 1 collected the ABC data.

Whether USD #394, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), followed the requirements for suspensions of students with disabilities, including providing educational services when required. K.A.R. 91-40-33, 91-40-34(a)(b), 91-40-35 91-40-36; 34 CFR § 300.530.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-33, the phrase "change in placement for disciplinary reasons" means that school personnel or a special education due process hearing officer has ordered any of the following changes in placement of a child with a disability: the child is suspended or expelled from school for more than 10 consecutive school days; the child is subjected to a series of short-term suspensions constituting a pattern that meets all of the following criteria: the suspensions cumulate to more than 10 school days in a school year, each incident of misconduct resulting in a suspension involved substantially the same behavior, the length of each suspension, the total amount of time the child is suspended, and the proximity of the suspensions to one another indicate a pattern; the child is placed in an interim alternative educational setting.

If school personnel order two or more short-term suspensions of a child with a disability during a school year, these suspensions shall not constitute a change in placement for disciplinary reasons if the suspensions do not constitute a pattern as described in paragraph (a)(1)(B). School officials shall have the authority to determine whether a series of short-term suspensions of a child with a disability constitutes a change in placement for disciplinary reasons. This determination shall be subject to review through due process proceedings.

"School officials" means a regular education administrator, the director of special education or the director's designee or designees, and a special education teacher of the child with a disability. "Short-term suspension" means a suspension as authorized by K.S.A. 72-8902(a) and amendments thereto.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-34(a)(b), school personnel may impose one or more short-term suspensions upon a child with a disability during a school year for violations of any school rule if these short-term suspensions do not constitute a pattern amounting to a change in placement for disciplinary reasons as specified in paragraph (a)(1)(B) of K.A.R. 91-40-33. School personnel may order a change in placement of a child with a disability to an interim alternative educational setting.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-35 and 34 CFR § 300.530, an agency shall not be required to provide special education or related services to a child with a disability who has been suspended from school for 10 or fewer school days during any school year, if the agency does not provide educational services to nondisabled children who are suspended from school. A child with a disability shall be entitled to continue to receive special education and related services if the child is suspended from school under either of the following circumstances: for more than 10 cumulative school days in any school year, but with these suspensions not resulting in a change of placement for disciplinary reasons; or for more than 10 consecutive school days in any school year for behavior that has been determined not to be a manifestation of the child's disability.

If a child with a disability is suspended from school under either of the circumstances stated in paragraph (b)(1), the agency that suspended the child shall provide, commencing on the 11th day of suspension and during any subsequent day or days of suspension, special education and related services that are needed to enable the child to continue to participate in the general education curriculum and to progress toward meeting the goals set out in the child's IEP.

If a child with a disability is placed in an interim alternative educational setting in accordance with K.S.A. 72-991a and amendments thereto, the agency shall provide special education and related services to the child that meet the following requirements: the services provided shall enable the child to continue both of the following: to progress in the general curriculum, although in another setting; and to receive those services and modifications, including those described in the child's IEP, that will enable the child to meet the goals set out in the IEP. The services shall include interventions and modifications that address the child's misbehavior and are designed to prevent its recurrence.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-36, if a child with a disability is properly suspended from school for more than 10 cumulative school days in any school year, the special education and related services to be provided to the child during any period of suspension shall be determined by school officials of the agency responsible for the education of the child. If a child with a disability is suspended from school for more than 10 consecutive school days or is expelled from school for behavior that has been determined not to be a manifestation of the child's disability, the child's IEP team shall determine the special education and related services that will be provided to the child.

If a child with a disability is placed in an interim alternative educational setting as a result of the child's possession of a weapon or illegal drug, the child's IEP team shall determine the following: the special education and related services to be provided to the child in the interim alternative educational setting; and those services and modifications that will be provided to address the misbehavior of the child and that are designed to prevent the misbehavior from recurring.

If a child with a disability is to be placed in an interim alternative educational setting by a due process hearing officer because the child is substantially likely to cause injury to self or others, school officials shall propose to the hearing officer the special education and related services to be provided to the child, and those services and modifications to be provided to address the behavior and prevent its recurrence. The hearing officer shall determine whether the services proposed by the school officials are appropriate. If so determined, those services shall be provided to the child. If determined to be inappropriate, the hearing officer shall order any modification in the services to be provided that the hearing officer determines necessary to provide the child with an appropriate education.

An agency shall convene IEP meetings under this regulation as expeditiously as possible and shall be required to give only 24 hours' prior notice of an IEP meeting to the child's parents.

The Parents alleged the Student was suspended for more than 10 school days during the 2025-26 school year, and the LEA did not provide educational services during the suspensions.

The LEA responded, stating per the formal Complaint, the Parent claims the Student was suspended for more than 10 school days. On February 17, 2026, the Director of Special Education contacted the Parent to discuss the potential visit of the special education day school and the dates for which the Parent believed the Student had been suspended. The Parent later sent an email with the dates listed that they believed to be suspension days. The Director of Special Education then worked with the team to verify dates and ensure accuracy of suspension documentation. Per the suspension documentation, the district verified 10 days of suspension. As such, education services for students with disabilities are not required until the 11th day of suspension, and this district is not out of compliance.

In October 2025, the LEA suspended the Student from school on two different occasions for a total of three days. The Parent questioned the validity of these suspensions, whether the Student's IEP was followed, and requested the suspensions be expunged from the Student's record, which the LEA agreed to do. In November and December 2025, the Student was suspended for another two days, and suspended for four days in January 2026, for a total of nine days the 2025-26 school year and at the time the Complaint was filed. Although the Special Education Director stated in their interview the Student was suspended for 10 days, the Parent, the Principal, and the data reviewed by the Complaint Investigator reported nine total days which does not trigger the LEA's requirement to conduct a MDR.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to follow the suspensions procedures, nor was the LEA required to provide the Student services during the suspensions.

Issue Two

Whether USD #394, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, conducted a manifestation determination review (MDR) within the required timelines. K.S.A. 72-991a, K.A.R. 91-40-38; 34 CFR § 300.530(e).

According to K.S.A. 72-991a, the parent of a child with a disability who disagrees with any decision regarding placement, or the manifestation determination, or an agency that believes that maintaining the current placement of a child is substantially likely to result in injury to the child or to others, may request a hearing.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-38 and 34 CFR § 300.530(e), if an agency proposes to change an educational placement for disciplinary reasons, the agency shall implement the provisions of K.S.A. 72-991a and amendments thereto. An agency may conduct the manifestation determination at the same IEP team meeting held to develop or review a behavioral intervention plan under K.S.A. 72-991a and amendments thereto. If, in making a manifestation determination, deficiencies are identified in the child's IEP or placement, or in the provision of services to the child, the IEP team shall make any changes it deems appropriate, and the agency shall implement those changes.

An agency shall convene meetings under this regulation as expeditiously as possible and shall be required to give only 24 hours' prior notice of a meeting to the child's parent or parents. If a parent files a due process complaint concerning the manifestation determination, a resolution meeting between the parties shall be held within seven days of the complaint's filing, unless the parties agree, in writing, to waive the resolution meeting or engage in mediation. If the matter has not been resolved to the satisfaction of both parties within 15 days of the filing of the due process complaint, the due process hearing may proceed

The Parent alleged the LEA did not hold a timely MDR meeting.

The LEA responded, stating the law states that a Manifestation Determination Review (MDR) is required only if a student is removed for more than 10 consecutive school days or if a series of removals totaling more than 10 days creates a pattern constituting a change in placement. Because the district verified exactly 10 days of suspension and these specific legal criteria were not met, a mandatory MDR was not warranted.

After completing research, the Parent perceived scheduling an MDR should have come from the School, and requested one be scheduled. The Principal stated they did not conduct an MDR because at the time, based on their dates, they believed they had not reached the ten-day threshold. The evidence documented nine days of suspension for the 2025-26 school year at the time, which would not have triggered the requirement for the LEA to conduct an MDR.

Based on the evidence reviewed, the Student was removed from school for ten days due to behavior, which constitutes discipline even if the informal removals were not recorded as OSS. Although the Superintendent redacted two days from the official record at the Parents' request, the Student was still excluded from school due to behavior. Additionally, regarding a specific instance where the Parent was requested to retrieve the Student on December 5, 2025, the Student remained on campus until the conclusion of the instructional day. Consequently, this timeframe does not constitute a loss of educational opportunity or a formal removal from the learning environment.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations it is substantiated that the LEA failed to follow requirements when it did not conduct an MDR.

Whether USD #394, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, implemented behavior support for the Student as described in their IEP. K.A.R. 91-40-16(a)(b); 34 CFR § 300.323.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-16(a)(b) and 34 CFR § 300.323, each agency shall be responsible for initiating and conducting meetings to develop, review, and revise the IEP of each exceptional child served by the agency. Each agency shall ensure that the following conditions are met: an IEP is in effect before special education and related services are provided to an exceptional child, those services for which written consent has been granted as specified by law are implemented not later than 10 school days after parental consent is granted unless a reasonable justification for a delay can be shown, an IEP is in effect for each exceptional child at the beginning of each school year, the child's IEP is accessible to each regular education teacher, special education teacher, related service provider, and other service provider who is responsible for its implementation, each teacher and provider described in paragraph (4) of this subsection is informed of the following: that individual's specific responsibilities related to implementing the child's IEP; and the specific accommodations, modifications, and supports that must be provided for the child in accordance with the IEP.

The Parent alleged the LEA did not ensure behavior supports were in place for the Student.

The LEA responded, citing the district implemented a progressive series of actions to ensure the Student had access to behavioral and academic strategies and supports.

The Student's February 11, 2025 IEP included goals for academics and emotional regulation and relevant accommodations were positive behavioral support and a separate quiet location for tests. The SEL Coordinator reported that the Student had transitioned smoothly into third grade and behavioral issues only began shortly before parent-teacher conferences. The Student's behaviors included "silent defiances" such as covering their face with tape, which would escalate if ignored, prompting staff to consult on which behaviors to acknowledge or ignore. Staff interventions included providing a personal calm down space, a "break tub" for in-class breaks, and using timers and the feelings meter. In late October 2025, the IEP team met and the LEA reported on implemented support of allowing the Student to use the special education classroom as a space to self-regulate and complete work. Staff were actively using existing strategies, including offering choices, reminders, timers, visual schedules and tools, and breaks, which was noted to correlate with the Student's emotional regulation improving from 10% to about 50%.

Despite the Parent's concern that the Student was purposefully seeking the resource room, the team agreed to continue collecting behavioral data to identify escalation patterns. To further address the Student's needs, the team proposed a FBA, a change in placement to increase special education minutes, and a discussion of outside therapy services in tandem with in-school options. The LEA collected data on the Student's behavior starting at the end of October 2025 through the beginning of January 2026.

The communication logs for November 2025 document a series of escalating behaviors including refusal, property destruction, and aggression. Incidents ranged from the Student refusing to sit in the library and banging their head on a wall to hitting a computer and running away from a school concert practice. The most severe incident on November 13, 2025 involved the Student destroying property, forcing a classroom evacuation, and physically assaulting the SRO and the Principal by hitting and kicking. Staff responses included ignoring the behavior, removing items, offering choices like the resource room, and, in the severe case, the SRO physically intervening. These logs demonstrate the profound challenges in emotional regulation during this period, despite various de-escalation attempts by school personnel.

The communication logs detail two major incidents in January 2026. The Student destroyed materials, engaged in self-injurious behavior, and became physically aggressive toward the Assistant Superintendent, necessitating the involvement of the SRO. By late January 2026, the Student threw objects and physically struck the Principal and SRO, which resulted in the SRO using handcuffs to gain control and the Student receiving a suspension. In both instances, LEA staff attempted de-escalation strategies, but the escalation of the Student's behavior required SRO assistance to manage the situation.

The Parent perceived that the School's staff were not following the Student's IEP protocols, specifically by failing to provide breaks, timers, and shortened or preferred assignments. Furthermore, the Parent complained that the School moved the Student to the special education classroom until there was no general education time and that multiple staff members surrounded the Student during outbursts, contrary to their request for only one person to intervene.

The Principal reported that the success of de-escalation strategies was inconsistent and was measured by the Student's "in the moment" response, with staff trying different approaches based on observation and the Student's interests. Specifically, there was a plan to have only one person interact with the Student during escalation, offering space and non-verbal communication options via symbolism if needed. The School Psychologist confirmed implementing various interventions (like a feelings meter) and communicating the Behavior Intervention Plan (BIP) to all relevant staff, also noting that the Parent delayed the Student's planned virtual special education services from an initial start of January 26, 2026, to February 9, 2026, due to the Student attending outpatient therapy.

Special Education Teacher 2 provided virtual instruction for 30 minutes twice daily from January to February 2026, using strategies like giving the Student options, though the Student had periods of non-attendance due to mental health issues. Both Special Education Teacher 1 and 2 implemented various interventions, including positive reinforcement, a feelings meter, preferential seating, and breaks with decreased demands, to support the Student's behavior. The General Education Teacher provided support such as a classroom calming kit, extended time, breaks, and decreased demands as the Student's behaviors increased. The teacher noted that the October 28, 2025, IEP amendment changed the Student's placement for reading and math, but they continued using the same behavioral strategies. The most successful strategies were providing choices, offering extended time, avoiding power struggles, and allowing time to self-regulate, though the Student was often observed to shut down and be unreceptive.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to implement the behavior supports as described in the Student's IEP.

Issue Four

Whether USD #394, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, implemented behavior support for the Student as described in their IEP. K.A.R. 91-40-16(a)(b); 34 CFR § 300.323.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-16(a)(b) and 34 CFR § 300.323, each agency shall be responsible for initiating and conducting meetings to develop, review, and revise the IEP of each exceptional child served by the agency. Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to implement the behavior supports as described in the Student's IEP.

Issue Four

Whether USD #394, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, developed an IEP that met the Student's behavioral needs. K.A.R. 91-40-18(a)(b); 34 CFR § 300.324.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-18(a)(b) and 34 CFR § 300.324, in developing or reviewing the IEP of any exceptional child, each agency shall comply with the requirements of K.S.A. 72-987 and amendments thereto, and, as appropriate, shall consider the results of the child's performance on any general state or districtwide assessment programs. If, as a result of its consideration of the special factors described in K.S.A. 72-987(c) and amendments thereto, an IEP team determines that a child needs behavioral interventions and strategies, accommodations, assistive technology devices or services, or other program modifications for the child to receive FAPE, the IEP team shall include those items in the child's IEP.

The Parent alleged the BIP did not prevent the Student's recurring behavior.

The LEA responded that they took a progressive series of actions to ensure the Student was given access to strategies, supports and behavioral and academic curriculum.

The February 2025 IEP noted the Student's behavior as a special factor and the impact of the Student's ED, on their ability to fully participate with peers and instruction. The IEP included a goal and accommodations for emotional regulation. An FBA and BIP were developed in late October 2025 in response to increased Student behaviors and supports such as visuals, fidgets, alternate schedule and seating options, a feeling meter, allowing breaks, having one adult at a time speak with the Student, and support from the SRO were added to the IEP. Time spent in the special education classroom was also increased in late October and November 2025, to address the Student's need for more one-on-one support. In November 2025, the LEA made a referral to a special day school for the Student.

At the beginning of January 2026, the IEP was updated again to include an additional behavior goal with short-term objectives, and additional accommodations were added. The Student's placement was changed to virtual school and the team agreed to meet again at the end of January 2026. The Parent agreed to this placement change as the Student had been placed by the Parent in an outside inpatient setting. At the end of January 2026, the Parent informed the LEA the Student would be home for two weeks, and the IEP team developed temporary daily virtual instruction for the Student. The Student was admitted to an inpatient setting a second time that extended into February 2026, and virtual instruction was to be provided after the Student's discharge.

All of the IEP amendments were documented with PWNs. The Parent did not sign all the PWNs, and the Student was not available at school to implement any school-based changes. The LEA also sought out another program for the Student and this decision had not been formalized at the time the Complaint was filed. Throughout the 2025-26 school year, the LEA responded to the increased needs of the Student by meeting with the Parent, increasing and adjusting the IEP supports and documented the changes.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to develop an IEP that addressed the Student's behavior needs.

Issue Five

> Whether USD #394, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, failed to provide the Student with a FAPE when education services were not provided during suspensions, the Student missed "large amounts of instruction", and the Student was not making meaningful progress. K.A.R. 91-40-2; 34 CFR § 300.101(a)(c).

According to K.A.R. 91-40-2 and 34 CFR § 300.101(a)(c), each agency shall provide FAPE in accordance with K.S.A. 72-966 and amendments thereto, and with this article. Each agency shall make FAPE available to each child with a disability residing in its jurisdiction beginning not later than the child's third birthday. An IEP or IFSP shall be in effect by the child's third birthday, but if that birthday occurs during the summer when school is not in session, the child's IEP team shall determine the date when services will begin.

Each agency shall make FAPE available to any child with a disability, even though the child has not failed or been retained in a course or grade and is advancing from grade to grade. The determination of whether a child advancing from grade to grade is a child with a disability shall be made on an individual basis in accordance with the child find activities and evaluation procedures required by this article. Each agency shall provide special education and related services based on the child's unique needs, not on the child's area of exceptionality.

The Parent alleged that the Student did not receive instruction during suspensions, missed significant instructional time, and was not making meaningful progress.

The LEA responded, saying the Student was not suspended for more than 10 school days, therefore, there is no requirement to provide educational services during suspension of 10 days or less.

The May 2025 IEP Progress Report documented the Student's progress on their emotional regulation goal went from 15% to 50%. When the Student transitioned to a new school year, concerns for the Student's behavior became evident in late September-beginning of October 2025. The IEP team met to adjust the IEP and in November 2025, conducted an FBA, developed a BIP, and sought out a different placement option for the Student that the Parent was to visit in January 2026. The December 2025 IEP Progress Report documented the Student's progress toward their emotional regulation goal was at 30%, a decline from the previous quarter. 2025-26 attendance records showed the Student was absent 24 % of the time, with five of these days being out-of-school suspensions. The Student was passing their academic classes, and had emerging or developing skills in their school behaviors.

The Student's behavior increased over the course of the first two quarters of the 2025-26 school year. The District and the Parent met several times to increase and adjust the IEP support, and an alternate program had been offered. The LEA was responding to the Student's increased needs, and the Student was receiving passing grades. Additionally, the four previous issues presented by this Complaint were found to not be substantiated.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to provide the Student with a FAPE.

Corrective Action

Information gathered in the course of this investigation has substantiated noncompliance with special education statutes and regulations. A violation occurred in the following area:

A. Federal regulations at K.A.R. 91-40-33, 91-40-34(a)(b), 91-40-35 91-40-36; 34 CFR § 300.530 specifies if an agency proposes to change an educational placement for disciplinary reasons, the agency shall implement the provisions of K.S.A. 72-991a and amendments thereto.

In this case, the evidence supports the finding that USD # 394 did not complete an MDR meeting once the Student reached 10 days of OSS. Documentation, Interview, and the LEA Response letter of November 29, 2022 document this. It is noted that the parent reports a good outcome for her child in spite of the noncompliance.

1. Within 15 calendar days of the date of this report, USD # 394 shall submit a written statement of assurance to Special Education and Title Services (SETS) stating that it will comply with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) at 34 C.F.R. 300.301(c) and K.A.R. 91-40-8(f) by completing a MDR meeting, and, if it is determined the behavior is a manifestation of the Student's disability, USD # 394 shall review and amend the IEP, FBA, and/or BIP to ensure the Student's needs are supported through these documents.
2. Further, by June 1, 2026 USD, # 394 will complete the following: (1) submit a written statement of assurance to Special Education and Title Services (SETS) that the LEA's practices and procedures for discipline for students with disabilities regarding informal removals and when to complete an MDR have been reviewed and revised as appropriate to be responsive and compliant with the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) and the Kansas Special Education for Exceptional Children Act; (2), submit a written statement of assurance to Special Education and Title Services (SETS) that all LEA staff who are responsible for student discipline and initiating and/or participating in an MDR meeting have received training on the practices and procedures.

Right to Appeal

Either party may appeal the findings or conclusions in this report by filing a written notice of appeal with the State Commissioner of Education, ATTN: Special Education and Title Services, Landon State Office Building, 900 SW Jackson Street, Suite 620, Topeka, KS 66612-1212. The notice of appeal may also be filed by email to formalcomplaints@ksde.gov The notice of appeal must be delivered within 10 calendar days from the date of this report.

For further description of the appeals process, see Kansas Administrative Regulations 91-40-51(f).

(2) If an appeal committee affirms a compliance report that requires corrective action by an agency, that agency shall initiate the required corrective action immediately. If, after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the agency shall be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following:

(A) The issuance of an accreditation deficiency advisement;
(B) the withholding of state or federal funds otherwise available to the agency;
(C) the award of monetary reimbursement to the complainant; or
(D) any combination of the actions specified in paragraph (f)(2)

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST
UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #459
ON FEBRUARY 19, 2026

DATE OF REPORT: MARCH 26, 2026

The Complaint is against USD #459, Bucklin Public Schools. In the remainder of the report, "the School" and the "local education agency (LEA)" shall refer to USD #459.

When a special education complaint is filed against a school district that is a member of a special education cooperative or interlocal, or that uses any other state recognized public agency to serve children with disabilities, the term "local education agency (LEA)" in this report will include the school district, the special education cooperative or interlocal, and any other agency that is recognized by the state as an administrative agency for public elementary or secondary schools and is serving the educational needs of this student.

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) allows for a 30-day timeline to investigate a child complaint. A complaint is considered to be filed on the date it is delivered to both the KSDE and the LEA. In this case, the KSDE initially received the complaint on February 19, 2026 and the 30-day timeline ended on March 21, 2026.

Allegations

The following issues will be investigated:

ISSUE ONE: Whether USD #459, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), provided the Parent with a copy of the final Individualized Education Program (IEP) from the October 2025 and November 2025 IEP meetings. K.A.R. 91-40-18(d); 34 C.F.R. § 300.322(f).

ISSUE TWO: Whether USD #459, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, provided staff with access to the IEP and implemented emotional supports for the Student. K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(5); 34 C.F.R. § 300.323.

Investigation of Complaint

The Parent did not schedule an interview with the Complaint Investigator. The Case Manager and the Principal were interviewed on March 9, 2026. The Math Teacher, the Biology Teacher, the Business Teacher, the ACES Provider, the Agriculture Teacher, and the English Teacher completed a survey on March 6 and 9, 2026. In completing this investigation, the Complaint Investigator reviewed documentation provided by the Parent and the LEA. Although additional documentation was provided and reviewed, the following materials were used as the basis of the findings and conclusions of the investigation:

1. IEP Meeting Notes, 11/04/25
2. IEP Amendment Draft, 11/04/25
3. IEP Draft, 10/20/25
4. IEP Final, 10/20/25
5. IEP Final Amendment, 11/04/25
6. Paraprofessional Documentation, 10/20/2[5]
7. Teacher Snap Shot, no date
8. Teacher/Staff Survey, 03/06/26-03/10/26
9. Emails between parties, 08/15/25-02/25/26

Background Information

This investigation involved a fifteen-year-old ninth-grade student enrolled at a High School in USD #459. The Student is currently receiving special education or related services as a child with a disability per the IDEA in the area of Specific Learning Disability.

Findings of the Investigation

The following findings are based on a review of documentation and interviews with the Parent and staff in the LEA.

1. On August 15, 2025, the Case Manager shared a document titled "CONFIDENTIAL - 25/26 Teacher IEP [S]napshot" with staff, including the Student's teachers. The Case Manager included the following message: "Here is the working IEP document for your records. PLEASE keep this CONFIDENTIAL! There is updated information for [REDACTED] as I just learned that one of our new students in [REDACTED] grade has an IEP. [REDACTED] I have updated some of [REDACTED] information based on [REDACTED] previous IEP at [REDACTED] last school, but know that this will change as soon as I have a new meeting for [REDACTED]. I will attempt to send out notifications to you when updates are made so that you know to check it."
2. On October 20 2025, both Parents provided the LEA consent, via signature, to "… Communicate and Send Files Electronically."

3. There were several October 20, 2025 IEP documents. Each set of documents contained the following relevant information:
    a. The October 20, 2025 DRAFT IEP included:
        i. A re-evaluation and an IEP were completed on October 20, 2025.
        ii. A signature page was signed by IEP meeting participants.
        iii. In the Parent Notifications and IEP Distribution section, the following was "checked":
            1. "Parents/legal education decision makers with different listed addresses are each to be sent a copy of the IEP."
    b. The October 20, 2025 IEP included:
        i. The signature page was not signed by any of the participants.
        ii. The "Consent to Communicate and Send Files Electronically" was unsigned.
        iii. Accommodations/Modifications: "Safe" person(s) whenever the Student needs to talk with someone when emotions/feelings have escalated, in all settings, both general and special education, for the duration that [the Student] needs for their emotions to be addressed and to be regulated in class from October 20, 2025 to October 19, 2026.
            1. Rationale: "Due to recent bullying concerns, the team agrees that it is important for [the Student] to have people in the building that [they] can go to when needed[,] especially due to current behavioral/social concerns. [The Student] may be able to advocate this need for [themself], but may also benefit from check[-]ins."
4. Prior Written Notice (PWN) dated October 20, 2025 indicated the IEP team met to determine the Student's eligibility for special education, a change in services, a change in placement, and other changes and included a description of the actions proposed and refused, explanations, options considered, a description of the data used, and factors relevant to the proposal or refusal. Consent was provided and documented with the Parent's signature on November 4, 2025. Delivery documentation indicated the document was hand-delivered to each parent on October 20, 2025.
5. A spreadsheet with the Student's name and the date of October 20, 202[5], indicated the Student had access to a "safe" person when emotions were escalated for the duration of the emotions to be addressed and "be regulated in class."
6. On October 23, 2025, the Case Manager emailed the Student's teachers, "I wanted to inform you all about IEP's that have been updated so far this year. I recently finished with … [the Student's] … [IEP] … . The updates have been added to the document shared with you at the beginning of the school year. I will include the attachment below for ease of access. Please review all accommodations to ensure that we are following the laws required of us through IDEA law. And please check back to this document regularly to refresh yourself on the IEPs of the students you teach. If there was anything changed or added, I did bold it so you could see it more easily."

7. There were several November 4, 2025 IEP documents, one was titled "DRAFT," and one was titled "Amendment IEP." Each set of documents contained the following relevant information:
    a. The November 4, 2025 DRAFT IEP included:
        i. A signature page was signed by IEP meeting participants.
        ii. In the Parent Notifications and IEP Distribution section, the following was "checked":
            1. "Parents/legal education decision makers with different listed addresses are each to be sent a copy of the IEP."
        iii. In the Parental Input section, "Parent meeting to discuss the possible addition to the social/emotional area for concerns about depression and suicidal thoughts due to bullying incident(s) that have occurred. Parents would like for [the Student] to have a "safe" person to go to or a couple of people to go to."
        iv. Accommodations/Modifications: "Safe" person(s) whenever the Student needs to talk with someone when emotions have escalated in all special and general education settings (handwritten) for the duration that [the Student] needs for their emotions to be addressed and to be regulated in class, beginning on October 20, 2025 and ending on October 19, 2026.
            1. Rationale: "Due to recent bullying concerns, the team agrees that it is important for [the Student] to have people in the building that [the Student] can go to when needed[,] especially due to current behavioral/social concerns. [The Student] may be able to advocate this need for [themself]."
    b. The November 4, 2025 Amendment IEP "(Amendment Date: 11/04/25)" included:
        i. The signature page and the consent to communicate and send files electronically were unsigned.
        ii. Accommodations/Modifications: "Safe" person(s) whenever the Student needs to talk with someone when emotions/feelings have escalated, in all settings, both general and special education, for the duration the Student needs for their emotions to be addressed and to be regulated in class, beginning on November 4, 2025 and ending on October 19, 2026.
            1. Rationale: "Due to recent bullying concerns, the team agrees that it is important for [the Student] to have people in the building that [they] can go to when needed especially due to current behavioral/social concerns. [The Student] may be able to advocate this need for [themself], but may also benefit from check[-]ins."

8. Per the November 4, 2025 IEP Amendment Form and the November 4, 2025 Parent Request IEP Meeting Notes, the Student's IEP was amended to include a "safe person" accommodation. Additionally, the "Parent Input" section of the IEP was updated.
9. A PWN dated October 20, 2025 indicated the IEP team met on November 4, 2025 to discuss changes to the IEP that did not involve services or placement and included a description of the actions proposed and refused indicating the IEP team met to discuss Parent concerns and agreed to update the Parent Input section of the IEP and add a "safe" person accommodation. Explanations, options considered, and a description of the data used were provided. Other relevant factors indicated "Services will begin 11/04/25 and will be provided on the dates that [the Student] is in attendance for the duration of the IEP." Consent was provided and documented with the Parent's signature. Delivery documentation indicated the document was hand-delivered to each parent on November 4, 2025.
10. On November 6, 2025, the Case Manager emailed the Student's teachers, "I wanted to let everyone know about an update to [the Student's] IEP accommodations. Please review the Teacher IEP snapshot to see [their] updated accommodation and ensure that it is being followed when needed."
11. On December 1, 2025, the Principal emailed the Parent regarding an assignment, "… A team of special education experts has conducted a thorough review of the assignment in question … and the specifics of the most recent Individualized Education Plan. All accommodations as written in [the Student's] IEP have been adhered to in the highest standard. None of the written and agreed[-]upon accommodations, as approved by the entire IEP team, make any exceptions for oral presentations. … If you believe the Individualized Education Plan that was written on October 20, 2025, no longer meets the academic needs of your student, please reach out to your student's special education teacher to discuss further options."
12. On February 13, 2026, the Parent emailed the LEA to share their concerns regarding the implementation of the Student's accommodations, "On 02/12/2026, my child reported that the accommodations outlined in their IEP were not followed. Additionally, the manner in which the situation was handled caused embarrassment and humiliation in front of peers. This has had an emotional impact on my child and has made them anxious about attending class." The Parent requested, "Immediate implementation of all IEP accommodations as written" and "A clear plan outlining how the school will prevent further incidents and protect my child's dignity in the classroom." On February 17, 2026, the Principal responded with several meeting date options. On February 18, 2026, the Parent replied to indicate they were not requesting a building-level meeting.
13. A Teacher Snap Shot spreadsheet noted the Student's initials, listed their accommodations, including "'Safe' person(s)-Whenever [the Student] needs to talk with someone when emotions/feelings have escalated," and provided a column of "additional information."

14. On February 24, 2026, the Case Manager emailed the Student's teachers, "I am checking in on a student's accommodation. [The Student] has the ability to go speak with a safe person as a part of [their] social/emotional regulation. I am checking in to see if [the Student] has utilized this in your class." The following teachers replied:
    a. Health Teacher: "[The Student] has not used it in my class."
    b. Business Teacher: "[The Student] has not asked for this."
    c. Math Teacher: "[The Student] has not requested it in my class … ."
    d. English Teacher: "Nope."
15. On February 25, 2026, the Case Manager emailed the Safe Person "… to check in to see if [the Student] has come in to talk with you at all since the beginning of November [2025] when the accommodation was added." The Safe Person replied the same day, "I am one of [the Student's] safe people but [the Student] has not come to me since we last had that conversation. The last time [the Student] came to my office was when [the Student] felt targeted with the … drama incident last semester. I have told [the Student] and [the Parent] that [the Student] is always welcome to see me but [the Student] has not come to my office in a long time."
16. On February 25, 2026, in an email exchange between the Parent and the School Psychologist, the Parent asked if the LEA had the Parent's updated address and requested a copy of the Student's "… last final [IEP] as I cannot make sure it is being enforced." The School Psychologist replied on the same day, confirming the LEA had the correct address and indicated it was updated when "we amended the IEP." The School Psychologist attached a November 4, 2025 IEP and the "Parent Rights" to the email.

Teacher/Staff Surveys

17. Between March 6, 2026 and March 10, 2026, the Student's teachers and support staff were surveyed to gather information regarding the allegations in this case. Survey responses included:
    a. 6/7 staff members responded, including the English Teacher, the Agriculture Teacher, the Math Teacher, the ACES Provider, the Biology Teacher, and the Business Teacher.
    b. Of the 6 staff members surveyed, all 6 confirmed they had access to the Student's October 20, 2025 IEP.
        i. 3/6 indicated they accessed the IEP within one week of October 20, 2025.
        ii. 1/6 was not sure when they accessed the IEP.
        iii. 2/6 indicated they accessed the IEP on December 1, 2025.
    c. 5/6 staff members confirmed seeing, accessing, and/or receiving the October 20, 2025 accommodations spreadsheet electronically from the Case Manager or the Principal between August 15, 2025 and October 23, 2025.

i. The ACES Provider indicated they did not see, access, or receive the October 20, 2025 accommodations spreadsheet until it was shared by the Complaint Investigator during the investigation.

d. 5/6 staff members confirmed being informed of the Student's amended IEP dated November 4, 2025 via email from the Case Manager between November 4, 2025 and December 1, 2025.
    i. The ACES Provider indicated they did not know how they were informed of the Student's November 4, 2025 amended IEP and wrote, "I got access to an updated teacher IEP snapshot Friday[,] March 6th [,] [2026]."

e. 6/6 staff members confirmed seeing, accessing, and receiving the Student's November 4, 2025 IEP Snap Shot via email, a copy, or by shared access from the Case Manager.
    i. 2/6 staff members indicated they accessed or received the document on August 15, 2025 or during inservice week. However, the IEP snapshot was not created until November 4, 2025.
    ii. 3/6 staff members indicated they accessed or received the document between November 4, 2025 and November 6, 2025.
    iii. 1/6 staff members indicated, "I think I got a copy back in Sept[ember] but [G]oogle access on March 6th[,] [2026]."

f. When asked how the "safe person" accommodation was implemented between October 20, 2025 and February 19, 2026, staff members responded with the following:
    i. English Teacher: "Frequent check[-]ins with [the Student], especially when I can see that [the Student] is not working or is getting frustrated. I leave it up to [the Student] to advocate for [themself] if [the Student] needs to see [their] 'safe' person."
        1. The English Teacher added: "I feel that I have a comfortable enough relationship with [the Student] that [they] would feel comfortable asking to see [their] 'safe' person, especially since [the Student] knows that this is in [their] IEP. [The Student] has not once asked me to leave the classroom during my class, even to use the restroom ([the Student] does this before class). The only time that [the Student] leaves is when [the Student] is dismissed for sports."
    ii. Agriculture Teacher: "[The Student] has not asked to see or talk to anyone outside of my classroom during my classes."
    iii. Math Teacher: "It was available to [the Student], but [the Student] has never utilized this accommodation in my class."
    iv. ACES Provider: "I do not have any recollection of [the Student] needing this during the few times I had [the Student] for the 25 minutes we had for ACES time. I know [the Student] was gone from my room quite a bit[,] but I do not remember [the] exact dates."

v. Biology Teacher: "I have [provided] fill[-]in[-]the[-]blank notes and given [the Student] extra time on work. All my students are told that they can talk to me if they need to."

vi. Business Teacher: "If [the Student] needed to talk with [their] 'safe' person [the Student] was to come to me and tell me [they] needed to be excused from my room. Had [the Student] ever requested this I would have documented it in my planner, sent my admin, the S[pecial] E[ducation] teacher, and [the Student's] 'safe' person an email so we had an electronic confirmation and excused [the Student] from my room."

Case Manager Interview

18. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Case Manager described a multi-step process for finalizing and distributing IEP documents to families. During IEP meetings, the Case Manager provides a draft copy for parents to take home. Following the meeting, the Case Manager records any agreed-upon changes on that draft and enters the updated data into the LEA's computer platform. A finalized copy is only generated once the IEP has been submitted and processed through this system. The Case Manager stated they do not utilize electronic delivery and typically mail all final IEP documents to families. They noted they do not maintain formal documentation of these mailings, such as a log, but rely on a personal paper checklist to track their tasks.
19. The Case Manager described the specific timeline for delivering the Student's IEP to the Parent. For the October 20, 2025 meeting, the Case Manager stated they shared a draft copy at the meeting and intended to send the finalized version the following week. However, the Parent requested an amendment meeting shortly thereafter, which the Case Manager explained put the final processing of the October document on hold. At the subsequent meeting on November 4, 2025, the Case Manager hand-delivered another draft copy of the IEP, which the Parent took. The Case Manager submitted the finalized, amended IEP into the LEA's computer platform on November 26, 2025. They subsequently mailed the finalized version to the Parent during the first week of December 2025.
20. The Case Manager stated they obtained signatures from the Parent at the annual meeting in October 2025 when discussing Student placement, accommodations, and services. At the subsequent amendment in November 2025, they once again obtained signatures.
21. In regards to the Student's safe person accommodation, the Case Manager explained the accommodation was established following a meeting with the Parent to address concerns regarding the Student's social-emotional well-being. The team agreed the Counselor and the Principal would serve as the designated safe persons, and the Student was permitted to visit them whenever they felt the need. The Case Manager instructed both designated safe persons and the Student's teachers to maintain documentation regarding the frequency of these requests and visits to collect data. However, the Case Manager stated no documentation of the accommodation being utilized exists because the Student never requested to see either designated person.

Principal Interview

22. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Principal stated the delay in providing a finalized IEP following the October and November 2025 meetings was due to a combination of administrative and systemic factors. They explained the October 20, 2025 IEP was never "locked down" by the special education service center because an amendment was requested shortly after, resulting in both meetings being rolled into a single updated document. The Principal noted the finalization process was further delayed by the Thanksgiving holiday break and there were two dates, but really one IEP.
23. The Principal explained staff were kept informed of all student needs through a working document hosted in a platform. This document, which contained all identified general student goals and accommodations, was shared with every teacher and paraprofessional to ensure they had access to changes in "real time." The Principal shared this system puts the necessary information at the teachers' "fingertips" to ensure immediate implementation. The Principal stated the Case Manager updated the document after each IEP with updated IEP information. Additionally, they noted staff were reminded of this document during professional development at the start of the year and through monthly Professional Learning Community (PLC) meetings.

Issue One

Whether USD #459, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, provided the Parent with a copy of the final IEP from the October 2025 and November 2025 IEP meetings. K.A.R. 91-40-18(d); 34 C.F.R. § 300.322(f).

According to K.A.R. 91-40-18(d), each agency shall give the parent a copy of the child's IEP at no cost to the parent.

The Parent alleged they had not received a copy of the finalized IEP after the October 2025 and November 5, 2025 IEP meetings.

The LEA stated their practice was to provide a draft copy of the proposed IEP to all team members, including parents, during the annual meeting, which occurred for the October and November 2025 meetings. Furthermore, LEA policy required corrections to be completed within five working days after the meeting was done, and stated this procedure was followed for both the October and November 2025 meetings. In addition to providing an electronic copy of the IEP at the Paent's request, the District maintained it followed all proper protocols.

During their interview, the Case Manager described how a finalized IEP was only generated once it was processed in the LEA's computer system. They also indicated they only mailed final copies of IEPs, but did not have any formal documentation of such mailings in this case. The Case Manager stated they gave the Parent draft copies of both IEPs, but did not submit the final IEP in the LEA's computer system until November 26, 2025 and mailed the IEP to the Parent during the first week of December 2025. This was corroborated by the Principal. The Principal also stated the finalization process was delayed by the Thanksgiving break.

From the evidence, it could be determined the Parent did not receive the final version of the October 20, 2025 IEP because it was amended shortly after its creation and resulted in the amended IEP from November 4, 2025. Thirteen school days passed between when the Parent signed their consent on the PWN and IEP Amendment Form on November 4, 2025, and when the Case Manager submitted the IEP into the LEA's computer system. Even though the specific date of the mailing could not be determined from the evidence, approximately 18 school days (not including the holiday break) would have passed since the day the IEP was amended and when the final IEP was mailed to the Parent during the first week of December 2025. The IDEA does not specify a hard deadline of when parents should receive a final copy of the IEP. In this case, there was no evidence to conclusively determine when the Parent actually received the mailed final copy of the November 4, 2025 IEP or corroborate when the Case Manager mailed it. The evidence also did not indicate the timing of the delivery of the IEP negatively impacted the Parent's ability or right to participate in the Student's education.

Based on the foregoing, according to the IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to provide the Parent with a copy of the final IEP from the October 2025 and November 2025 IEP meetings.

Issue Two

Whether USD #459, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, provided staff with access to the IEP and implemented emotional supports for the Student. K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(5); 34 C.F.R. § 300.323.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(5), each teacher and provider must be informed of their specific responsibilities related to implementing the child's IEP, including the specific accommodations, modifications, and supports that must be provided for the child in accordance with the IEP.

The Parent alleged without the finalized IEP, they were unable to verify if and how emotional supports were being implemented across staff for the Student.

The LEA stated it was their practice to provide an abbreviated version of the IEP to all faculty and staff working directly with students to ensure they had essential practitioner-level information, including all required accommodations, modifications, and behavioral interventions. While the LEA also provided complete finalized copies of the IEP to any school employee with a legitimate need who requested one, the LEA stated no such requests were made by School personnel in this case. According to the LEA, the building administrator and special education teacher met with every individual working with the Student to inform them of their specific responsibilities regarding specialized instructional services and support. The LEA disputed any claims educators were unaware of or failed to implement behavioral supports, as the team followed the IEP as agreed.

On August 15, 2025, the Case Manager shared a working IEP spreadsheet with staff, including the Student's teachers. On October 23, 2025, the Case Manager emailed the Student's teachers about updates to the Student's IEP. Their email referenced the aforementioned IEP spreadsheet the teachers received at the start of the school year, meaning the teachers already had access to the IEP. The Case Manager also emailed staff on November 6, 2025, alerting them to a change in the Student's IEP and instructing them to review the Teacher IEP Snap Shot for updated information.

This was corroborated by the information gathered in the staff survey. All six staff members indicated they had access to the Student's October 20, 2025 IEP and the IEP Snap Shot document. A majority of the staff who responded (5 out of 6) indicated they had access to the Student's accommodations spreadsheet and November 4, 2025 IEP amendment. The ACES Provider's response indicated they did not see the accommodations spreadsheet until the complaint investigation started and they were unsure how they were notified about the November 4, 2025 IEP amendment. However, the evidence did not show the ACES Provider's access to these documents negatively impacted the Student's education.

On February 24, 2026, the Case Manager emailed the Student's teachers and asked if the Student had utilized their "safe person" accommodation. The Health Teacher, the Business Teacher, the Math Teacher, and the English Teacher confirmed the Student never requested to use the accommodation. The following day, the designated "Safe Person" confirmed the Student had not visited their office since the accommodation was added in November 2025.

The evidence showed the LEA fulfilled its obligation to provide staff access to the Student's IEP. There was not any data to indicate the IEP was not followed. Every teacher confirmed that while the "safe person" protocol was available, the Student did not advocate for or use it during the specified timeframe.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated the LEA failed to provide staff with access to the IEP and implement emotional supports for the Student.

Corrective Action

No corrective action has been ordered as there were no findings.

Right to Appeal

Either party may appeal the findings or conclusions in this report by filing a written notice of appeal with the State Commissioner of Education, ATTN: Special Education and Title Services, Landon State Office Building, 900 SW Jackson Street, Suite 620, Topeka, KS 66612-1212. The notice of appeal may also be filed by email to formalcomplaints@ksde.gov The notice of appeal must be delivered within 10 calendar days from the date of this report.

For further description of the appeals process, see Kansas Administrative Regulations 91-40-51(f).

(2) If an appeal committee affirms a compliance report that requires corrective action by an agency, that agency shall initiate the required corrective action immediately. If, after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the agency shall be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following:

(A) The issuance of an accreditation deficiency advisement;
(B) the withholding of state or federal funds otherwise available to the agency;
(C) the award of monetary reimbursement to the complainant; or
(D) any combination of the actions specified in paragraph (f)(2)

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST
UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #475
ON FEBRUARY 11, 2026

DATE OF REPORT: MARCH 10, 0226

The Complaint is against USD #475, Junction City Public Schools. In the remainder of the report, "the School" and the "local education agency (LEA)" shall refer to USD #475.

When a special education complaint is filed against a school district that is a member of a special education cooperative or interlocal, or that uses any other state recognized public agency to serve children with disabilities, the term "local education agency (LEA)" in this report will include the school district, the special education cooperative or interlocal, and any other agency that is recognized by the state as an administrative agency for public elementary or secondary schools and is serving the educational needs of this student.

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) allows for a 30-day timeline to investigate a child complaint. A complaint is considered to be filed on the date it is delivered to both the KSDE and the LEA. In this case, the KSDE initially received the complaint on February 11, 2026, and the 30-day timeline ended on March 13, 2026.

Allegations

The following issues will be investigated:

ISSUE ONE: Whether USD #475, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), provided the Parent with an opportunity to participate in the February 9, 2026 Individualized Education Program (IEP) meeting. K.A.R. 91-40-17(a)(d)(e)(1)(2); 34 §§ C.F.R. 300.322(d), 300.501(b).

ISSUE TWO: Whether USD #475, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, made amendments to the Student's IEP through a properly convened IEP meeting, or a written agreement. K.S.A. 72-987(b)(1), K.A.R. 91-40-18(a)(b)(1)(4); 34 §§ C.F.R. 300.322, 300.324.

ISSUE THREE: Whether USD #475, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, developed an IEP for the Student that included sufficient present levels of academic achievement and functional performance. K.S.A. 72-3429(c)(1); 34 § C.F.R. 300.324.

ISSUE FOUR: Whether USD #475, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, placed the Student in their least restrictive environment (LRE), and whether the placement decision was made in conformity with the IDEA and Kansas administrative rules. K.S.A. 72-3420, K.A.R 90-40-21; 34 §§ C.F.R. 300.114, 300.116.

The Complaint Investigator interviewed the Parent on March 5, 2026. The Case Manager was interviewed on March 6, 2026.

In completing this investigation, the Complaint Investigator reviewed documentation provided by the Parent and the LEA. Although additional documentation was provided and reviewed, the following materials were used as the basis of the findings and conclusions of the investigation:

1. IEP, 02/28/25
2. Prior Written Notice (PWN), 02/28/25
3. IEP Amendment Between Annual IEP Meetings, 02/09/26

Background Information

This investigation involved a fourth-grade student enrolled at an elementary school in USD #475. The Student is currently receiving special education or related services as a child with a disability per the IDEA. The Student is a happy child and enjoys hugs and attention from staff. The Student shows an ability to work independently on mastered skills when given a structured work system and reinforcement when finished.

Findings of the Investigation

The following findings are based on a review of documentation and interviews with the Parent and staff in the LEA.

1. The Student's IEP, dated February 28, 2025, included handwritten notes stating, "This is not the updated IEP" and "No parent input on 2-9-2026". The Parent confirmed they wrote the notes. The information in the IEP was obtained by gathering parent and staff input, and formal and informal assessments. The Student's primary exceptionality was autism. Relevant information included:
    a. Present Level of Academic Achievement and Functional Performance (PLAAFP):
        i. The Student received an autism and Attention-Deficit/Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD) diagnosis on May 15, 2021. The Parent provided medical documentation on February 5, 2024, stating the Student had a medical history of phimosis and voiding dysfunction.
        ii. Academic Performance (reading, writing, and math) - The Student's barriers of scrolling on computer programs and completing tasks affected their rate of progress in learning programs. The Student made errors on skills they had mastered due to a lack of motivation. The Student did not demonstrate ongoing consistency in skills due to behavioral barriers, but indicated mastery when they showed three consecutive mastery trials or 70% mastery or higher cumulatively over time. The Student could "identify colors and tact the colors" with help from their communicative device. The Student was inconsistent in identifying numbers, but could frequently identify numbers one through five. The Student showed regression in these skills when they returned for the 2024-25 school year, so the goal was changed to decrease the number of items within a trial. Over the past IEP period, the Student mastered 14 new skills across various domains, demonstrating growth in verbal and non-verbal areas. They advanced in language, communication, social skills, academic subjects, and daily functioning. The Student progressed in manding, tacting, and receptive language. The Student's addition of skills in reading, writing, and math suggested they were building a foundation for further learning and engagement in structured educational environments. The Student's strongest areas were in match-to-sample, play, and reading, while their weakest areas were in echoic and vocal.

1. Goal #1 - "By the end of the IEP year, [the Student] will produce 2-word descriptive phrases to include size or color and known object label when shown pictures[,] scoring 60% cumulative accuracy."
2. Goal #2 - "By the end of the IEP year, [the Student] will be able to independently copy the letter E after staff have provided an example of it and be legible to unfamiliar adults on 3 out of 5 trials."
3. Goal #3 - "By the end of the IEP year, [the Student] will be able to show 1:1 correspondence to 3 or 4 out of 5 trials by counting out the objects when presented with the number."

iii. Functional/Adaptive - The Student could do tasks when provided assistance from an adult to guide them and help them focus. An adult monitored the Student's hygiene and self-care tasks to ensure all steps were completed. The Student could use the restroom independently, but sometimes needed reminders to stay focused. The Student could wash their hands with some reminders, and use a fork and spoon to feed themselves. The Student could open their water bottle and drink from it, but required some help to unscrew the bottle to fill it. The Student played on their own most of the time. During the transition, the Student needed an adult to provide hand-over-hand assistance when walking in the hallways. The Student listened when their name was called and followed basic commands.

1. Goal #1 - "By the end of the IEP year, [the Student] will be able to answer with [their] first and last name when asked, 'what is your name?' and be able to answer when asked, 'what is your address?' with the use of [their] device on 4 out of 5 trials."

iv. Communication - During the past IEP year, therapy focused on the Student's use of communication, including functions beyond requesting preferred items or needs, and on the use of two-word phrases to increase their utterance length. The Student was allowed to use a total communication approach to interact and respond. They required access to low- or high-tech augmentative and alternative communication (AAC) across all educational settings to enable effective communication with adults and peers. When prompted, the Student would "get their words" and be responsible for independently carrying their device. The Student did not demonstrate consistent motor memory for non-meaningful words or for navigating words across a variety of categories. During the past IEP year, language was modeled on the Student's AAC device and verbally for a variety of functions. The Student was starting to use their voice to say "no" and "like." The Student would imitate up to five two-word utterances with maximum prompting during a session. Based on previous evaluation and current performance, the Student needed to focus on specific vocabulary from common categories. The Student could identify named pictures from two choices with 60% accuracy but was unable to independently navigate their AAC device to select the correct label.

1. Goal #1 - "By the end of the IEP year, [the Student] would produce 2 new object labels for previously unknown objects from categories of clothing, animals, vehicles, furniture, and food when shown picture vocabulary without support."
2. Goal #2 - "By the end of the IEP year, [the Student] will provide 2-word descriptive phrases without support to include size or color and known object label when shown pictures[,] scoring 60% cumulative accuracy."

v. Social/Emotional Behavior - The Student followed directions they understood well without becoming upset. The Student would play next to peers, but would get upset if a peer received attention and they wanted attention. The Student made zero attempts to hit staff or others during the current school year. The Student hit their fist on the table twice in the last 10 days. The Student engaged in non-harmful headbutting when frustrated and trying to communicate. The Student did well regulating their emotions and working through frustrating tasks.

1. Goal #1 - "By the end of the IEP year, [the Student] will decrease scrolling behavior as shown by being able to complete a transfer trial with material [they] [are] asked to point to out of a field of 3 … on 4 out of 10 trials."
2. Goal #2 - "By the end of the IEP year, when shown a video clip of [the Student] being sad, mad, and happy - [the Student] will be able to identify on [their] speech device what emotion [they] [were] showing in the video when asked, 'what feeling?' with an accumulative accuracy of 80% over 10 trials."

vi. Gross/Fine Motor - The Student used strategies throughout the day to help regulate their body for learning. The Student had scheduled breaks throughout the day but was given opportunities for regulation when they requested or appeared dysregulated. Their schedule included:

1. 8:10 a.m. - The Student was provided with high-fives to incorporate proprioceptive input.
2. 8:45 a.m. - A "brain break" where the Student bounced or rolled the ball.
3. 9:10 a.m. - Sensory time where the Student was given a choice board and chose what sensory input they wanted.
4. 9:45 a.m. - Another "brain break".
5. 10:25 a.m. - Recess, where the Student enjoyed swinging, climbing the stairs, and going on the slide. They were given sensory or play choices in the classroom.
6. 11:05 a.m. - Another "brain break".
7. 12:05 p.m. - The Student was given a choice of activities to regulate their body, such as bouncing, standing, and rocking.
8. 12:55 p.m. - The Student was given a movement break in music class after 10 minutes, or earlier if dysregulated.
9. 2:15 p.m. - Recess, where the Student was with their peers in class. The Student enjoyed swinging. The Student had the choice during this time to allow more access to peers.
10. 3:30 p.m. - Bus dismissal, and the Student had the choice to bounce to regulate their body before riding the bus.

vii. Occupational Therapy (OT) - The Student demonstrated emerging motor and sensory-motor skills, with strengths in fine motor skills, sensory-motor and bilateral motor coordination, and self-regulation/social-emotional. Based on observations, data collection, and staff collaboration, it was recommended the Student would work on fine motor development, sensory integration, and social-emotional support. Areas to be considered for a therapist to support in the classroom setting included: improving ability to imitate and write letters, specifically addressing the Student recognizing their name and being able to consistently imitate; continue to work on crossing the middle to incorporate using both sides of their body in functional activities, and expanding self-regulation strategies through the use of all communication to advocate what input the Student required for their body. It was noted the Student demonstrated inconsistent skills due to decreased motivation with some tasks. The Student benefited from a multi-sensory approach, visual supports, and structured activities to encourage skill development. Continued collaboration with the educational team and family would support the Student's progress in those areas.

1. Goal #1 - "By the end of the IEP year, [the Student] would be able to independently copy the letter E after staff have provided an example and it be legible to unfamiliar adults on 3 out of 5 trials."

b. The Student exhibited delays in communication, academic, social/emotional, and functional/adaptive areas of development. Delays in communication affected the Student's ability to get their needs and wants met. Delays in academic areas affected their ability to display learning and retain skills. Delays in social/emotional areas impacted the Student's ability to build relationships with others, and delays in the functional/adaptive area affected the Student's ability to perform functional/adaptive tasks, such as going to the restroom without adult supervision and following one-step directions in their daily routine.

c. The Student received the supplementary aids and services/accommodations in either all educational settings or the special education Adaptive Social and Communication Skills (ACSS) classroom, starting February 28, 2025.

d. Program Modification Services started on February 28, 2025, and took place in the ACSS classroom. These included:

   i. 1:1 direct instruction and independent work systems, two times per class session, for 20 minutes.

   ii. Essential Elements (EE) standards, when grade level standards were above the Student's level, through the completion of the lesson.

   iii. Training of alternative-augmentative communication and aided language stimulation, once per year for all ACSS staff who work with the Student, for 15 minutes.

   iv. Communication and training with the bus staff on the Student's IEP and transportation considerations, including ensuring the safety vest was used and proper behavior strategies as outlined in the IEP. This would occur prior to the start of the school year and every quarter, and if/when there was a change in staff, for 20-40 minutes to review the plan.

e. Special Education and Related Services from February 28, 2025 through May 21, 2025, and also from August 11, 2025, through February 27, 2026, every week, including:

   i. Speech service for 20 minutes, for two days, in the area of speech-language.

   ii. Occupational Therapy (OT) for 15 minutes for one day a week.

   iii. Special Education for 15 minutes, for five days, in the area of social.

   iv. Special Education for 355 minutes, for two days, in the areas of academics, social/emotional, and life skills.

   v. Special Education for 375 minutes, for two days, in the areas of academics, social/emotional, and life skills.

vi. Special Education for 360 minutes, for one day a week, in the areas of academics, social/emotional, and life skills.

vii. Special Education for 40 minutes, for five days, during lunch/recess.

viii. Special Education for 15 minutes, for five days, after school, while waiting for the bus.

ix. Transportation for 40 minutes, for five days, for transportation to and from school.

f. The Student's educational placement stated the Student would not participate with their non-identified peers in the general education setting during the time they received resource-based speech-language services due to their need for specially designed instruction (SDI) in a small-group setting with limited distractions, and described the aforementioned services.

g. The Parent signed the IEP on February 28, 2025. A Staffing Summary regarding the February 28, 2025, meeting summarized the aforementioned information.

2. Relevant information from the IEP Goal and Objectives documents, related to the Student's February 28, 2025, IEP, indicated:

a. PLAAFP Baseline data: "[The Student] shows an understanding of 1 with 70% accuracy, 2 and 3 with 50% accuracy, 4 and 5 [the Student] does not currently show an understanding for."

b. Measurable Annual Goal: "By the end of the IEP year, [the Student] will be able to show 1:1 correspondence to 3 on 4 out of 5 trials by counting out the objects when presented the number."

c. Short-term objectives or benchmarks:

i. "By the end of quarter one, [the Student] will be able to show 1:1 correspondence to 2 on 3 out of 5 trials by counting out the objects."

ii. "By the end of quarter two, [the Student] will be able to show 1:1 correspondence to 2 on 4 out of 5 trials by counting out the objects."

iii. "By the end of quarter three, [the Student] will be able to show 1:1 correspondence to 3 on 3 out of 5 trials by counting out the objects."

iv. "By the end of the IEP period, [the Student] will be able to show 1:1 correspondence to 3 on 4 out of 5 trials by counting out the objects."

d. PLAAFP Baseline data: "[The Student] is currently able to identify what color something is when asked, 'what color?' [The Student] is able to identify directly taught nouns when asked, 'what's this?' or asked to point out of a field of 3. [The Student] does not currently produce 2-word phrases independently."

e. Measurable Annual Goal: "By the end of the IEP year, [the Student] will produce 2-word descriptive phrases without support to include size or color

f. Short-term objectives or benchmarks:

   i. "By the end of the first quarter, [the Student] will produce 2-word descriptive phrases without support to include size or color and known object label when shown pictures[,] scoring 10% cumulative accuracy."

   ii. "By the end of the second quarter, [the Student] will produce 2-word descriptive phrases without support to include size or color and known object label when shown pictures[,] scoring 20% cumulative accuracy."

   iii. "By the end of the third quarter, [the Student] will produce 2-word descriptive phrases without support to include size or color and known object label when shown pictures[,] scoring 40% cumulative accuracy."

   iv. "By the end of the IEP year, [the Student] will produce 2-word descriptive phrases without support to include size or color and known object label when shown pictures[,] scoring 60% cumulative accuracy."

g. PLAAFP Baseline data: "[The Student] can currently copy the prewriting shapes outside of the triangle and square due to the corners."

h. Measurable Annual Goal: "By the end of the IEP year, [the Student] will be able to copy the letter E after staff have provided an example and it be legible to unfamiliar adults on 3 out of 5 trials."

i. Short-term objectives or benchmarks:

   i. "By the end of the first quarter, [the Student] will be able to trace the letter E after staff have provided an example and it be legible to unfamiliar adults on 3 out of 5 trials."

   ii. "By the end of the second quarter, [the Student] will be able to copy the letter E after staff have provided an example and it be legible to unfamiliar adults on 1 out of 5 trials."

   iii. "By the end of the third quarter, [the Student] will be able to copy the letter E after staff have provided an example and it be legible to unfamiliar adults on 2 out of 5 trials."

   iv. "By the end of the IEP year, [the Student] will be able to copy the letter E after staff have provided an example and it be legible to unfamiliar adults on 3 out of 5 trials."

j. PLAAFP Baseline data: "[The Student] has a need to focus on specific vocabulary from common categories (ex., clothing, animals, vehicles, furniture, food) as [the Student] has not securely acquired expressive labels or knowledge of vocabulary on [their] ACC device from modeling alone.

During a recent probe, [the Student] could identify named pictures from 2 choices with 60% accuracy, but [the Student] was not able to independently navigate [their] AAC device to find the correct label (0%)."

k. Measurable Annual Goal: "By the end of the IEP year, [the Student] will produce 2 new object labels for previously unknown objects from each of the categories of clothing, animals, vehicles, furniture, and food when shown picture vocabulary without support."

l. Annual Educational Goal(s) to be supported: "By the end of the IEP year, [the Student] will produce 2-word descriptive phrases without support to include size or color and known object label when shown pictures scoring 60% cumulative accuracy."

m. Short-term objectives or benchmarks:

   i. "By the end of the 4th quarter, [the Student] will produce 1 new object label for previously unknown objects from at least 3 of the categories of either clothing, animals, vehicles, furniture, and food when shown picture vocabulary without support."

   ii. "By the end of the 1st quarter, [the Student] will produce 1 new object label for previously unknown objects from each of the categories of either clothing, animals, vehicles, furniture, and food when shown picture vocabulary without support."

   iii. "By the end of the second quarter, [the Student] will produce 2 new object labels for previously unknown objects from at least 3 of the categories of clothing, animals, vehicles, furniture, and food when shown picture vocabulary without support."

   iv. "By the end of the IEP year, [the Student] will produce 2 new object labels for previously unknown objects from each of the categories of either clothing, animals, vehicles, furniture, and food when shown picture vocabulary without support."

n. PLAAFP Baseline data: "[The Student] is not currently able to," produce 2 new object labels for previously unknown objects.

o. Measurable Annual Goal: "By the end of the IEP year, [the Student] will be able to answer with [their] first and last name when asked, 'what is your name?' and be able to answer when asked, 'what is your address?' with the use of [their] device on 4 out of 5 trials."

p. Short-term objectives or benchmarks:

   i. "By the end of the first quarter, [the Student] will be able to answer with [their] first and last name when asked, 'what is your name?' with the use of [their] device on 2 out of 5 trials."

   ii. "By the end of the second quarter, [the Student] will be able to answer with [their] first and last name when asked, 'what is your name?' with the use of [their] device on 4 out of 5 trials."

iii. "By the end of the IEP year, [the Student] will be able to answer with [their] address when asked, 'what is your address?' with the use of [their] device on 2 out of 5 trials."

iv. "By the end of the IEP year, [the Student] will be able to answer with [their] first and last name when asked, 'what is your name?' and be able to answer when asked, 'what is your address?' with the use of [their] device on 4 out of 5 trials."

q. PLAAFP Baseline data: "[The Student] is unable to identify [their] emotions when asked and currently uses behaviors to communicate when [they] [are] upset."

r. Measurable Annual Goal: "By the following IEP year, when shown a video clip of [the Student] being sad, mad, and happy, [they] will be able to identify on [their] speech device what emotion [the Student] was showing in the video when asked, 'what feeling?' with an accumulative accuracy of 80% over 10 trials."

s. Short-term objectives or benchmarks:

i. "By the end of the first quarter, when shown a video clip of [the Student] being mad, [they] will be able to identify on [their] speech device what emotion [the Student] was showing in the video when asked, 'what feeling?' with an accumulative accuracy of 60% over 10 trials."

ii. "By the end of the second quarter, when shown a video clip of [the Student] being mad and happy, [they] will be able to identify on [their] speech device what emotion [the Student] was showing in the video when asked, 'what feeling?' with an accumulative accuracy of 60% over 10 trials."

iii. "By the end of the third quarter, when shown a video clip of [the Student] being mad and happy, [they] will be able to identify on [their] speech device what emotion [the Student] was showing in the video when asked, 'what feeling?' with an accumulative accuracy of 80% over 10 trials."

iv. "By the following IEP year, when shown a video clip of [the Student] being sad, mad, and happy, [they] will be able to identify on [their] speech device what emotion [the Student] was showing in the video when asked, 'what feeling?' with an accumulative accuracy of 80% over 10 trials."

t. PLAAFP Baseline data: "[The Student] currently is able to point to items shown (errorless), and when field of 3 is mixed, can then choose the correct item with 50% accuracy on known items, [the Student] is unable to complete a transfer trial at this time."

u. Measurable Annual Goal: "By the following IEP year, [the Student] will decrease scrolling behavior as shown by being able to complete a transfer trial with material [the Student] is asked to point to out of a field of 3 … [the Student] is asked to point to a different (already mastered) card out of the field of 3 … then asked for original picture card and able to produce the answer on 4 out of 10 trials."

v. Short-term objectives or benchmarks:

i. "By the end of the first quarter, [the Student] will decrease scrolling behavior as shown by being able to complete a transfer trial with material [the Student] is asked to point to out of a field of 3 … [the Student] is asked to point to a different (already mastered) card out of the field of 3 … then asked for original picture card and able to produce the answer on 1 out of 10 trials."

ii. "By the end of the second quarter, [the Student] will decrease scrolling behavior as shown by being able to complete a transfer trial with material [the Student] is asked to point to out of a field of 3 … [the Student] is asked to point to a different (already mastered) card out of the field of 3 … then asked for original picture card and able to produce the answer on 2 out of 10 trials."

iii. "By the end of the third quarter, [the Student] will decrease scrolling behavior as shown by being able to complete a transfer trial with material [the Student] is asked to point to out of a field of 3 … [the Student] is asked to point to a different (already mastered) card out of the field of 3 … then asked for original picture card and able to produce the answer on 3 out of 10 trials."

iv. "By the following IEP year, [the Student] will decrease scrolling behavior as shown by being able to complete a transfer trial with material [the Student] is asked to point to out of a field of 3 … [the Student] is asked to point to a different (already mastered) card out of the field of 3 … then asked for original picture card and able to produce the answer on 4 out of 10 trials."

3. An undated PWN stated on February 28, 2025, the IEP team reviewed the evaluation/assessment data, current classroom-based assessments and observations, and teacher/staff input to determine: special education and related services required by the Student, the appropriate placement to provide special education and related services identified in the Student's IEP, and any additions, changes, or modifications to the special education and related services or educational program that were needed to enable the Student to meet the measurable goals in their IEP and to participate, as appropriate, in the general curriculum.

a. The PWN included a description of the proposed services the Student would receive, starting February 28, 2025.

b. The explanation of why the services were proposed stated the Student continued to demonstrate communication delays, which negatively impacted them across their educational setting. Due to their needs, the Student required SDI in a setting with fewer distractions and greater opportunities to learn and practice skills. The PWN indicated the Student's special education services and placement in the ACSS specialized program continued to be the most appropriate, given their current barriers and the support needed to enable them to make progress toward their IEP goals.

c. The PWN stated the team considered increasing the Student's general education time. It was rejected due to limited time in the general education setting being meaningful for the Student compared to what they would be doing in the ACSS program classroom, and to the duration the Student was able to remain regulated in that setting without becoming overstimulated.

d. The Parent signed the PWN on February 28, 2025.

4. The Parent sent a text message to the Case Manager on January 13, 2025, which stated, "On [the Student's] home note, it says [they] took off [their] clothes 3 times today. … I think [the Student] [is] not used to wearing diapers[,] that's maybe the reason why [the Student] keeps putting [their] hands down [their pants] … ."

5. An undated text message from the Parent said, "I put [the Student] back on [sic] [their] jumpsuit … to avoid [them] digging down [their] pants."

   a. The Parent sent a text message to the Case Manager on January 29, 2025 which said, "With [the Student] putting [their] hands down [their] pants becoming more frequent I think I need more information about what could be the reason … Same with taking off [their] clothes, what are some of the things in place to help address this?"

6. The Case Manager replied, "I've noticed since [the Student] came back from break, [the Student] has been putting [their] hands down [their] pants multiple times a day and trying to take [their] clothes off."

7. In an undated text message, the Parent shared the Student also put their hands down their pants at home, and the Parent told them "no".

8. On February 5, 2026, the Case Manager sent a chat message to the Parent and the Other Parent. They explained they had taken the Student to the bathroom three times that morning, the Student kept trying to put their hands down their pants, and the Student was frustrated when the Case Manager tried to redirect them. They stated the Student was hitting their hands on the ground, hitting their head with their hand, and trying to hit staff. The Other Parent believed the Student had rashes, which made them uncomfortable.

   a. The Parent asked if the Student was trying to put their hands down the front or back of their pants. The Parent asked for documentation of the Student hitting staff because it was a new behavior.

b. The Case Manager explained they were taking the Student to the bathroom every 20-30 minutes. They acknowledged the Parent had requested the Student go to the bathroom every 15 minutes, but the Case Manager indicated the Student was missing instructional time and was frustrated by having to go to the bathroom that often. The Case Manager stated the Student put their hands down the front of their pants. They stated there was no way they could make the Student remove their hands from their pants.

9. An undated text message from the Case Manager explained the Student put their hands down their pants 26 times the previous day, with durations ranging from three seconds to two minutes and 22 seconds. They stated the Student removed their clothes one time and exposed themselves eight times. The Case Manager explained that during the bus ride, the Student had their hands down their pants for 24 minutes and exposed themself. The Case Manager stated they would continue to use the social story, offer the Student items to keep their hands busy, and take them to the bathroom frequently. They indicated the current day had been better because the Student put their hands down their pants for one minute and exposed themself one time. The Case Manager stated they would place the meeting notice in the Student's folder and indicated the meeting was scheduled for 8:00 a.m. on February 9, 2026.

10. In an undated text message, the Parent requested a hard copy of the Student's IEP. The Case Manager agreed and apologized for forgetting to put the paperwork in the Student's backpack. Handwritten notes beside the text message indicated the Parent did not receive the Student's IEP until the day of the IEP meeting, and it was not the updated version.

11. The Parent emailed the Case Manager and the Principal on February 5, 2026, requesting an IEP meeting due to recent "incidents and concerns" from the Case Manager regarding the Student's behavior. The Principal replied that day with several meeting time options and stated they were notified that morning the Student had tried to pull their penis out on two bus rides. They shared the paraprofessional was trying to prevent it, but it "happened so quickly." The Parent agreed to meet at 8:00 a.m. on February 9, 2026, and said, "This is news to me that [the Student] pulled [their] penis out. All I was told was that [the Student] put [their] hands down [their] pants, and there was no documentation that I received regarding this incident." The Principal stated the Case Manager would send a Notice of Meeting to the Parent the following day.

The Parent asked for clarification on what was meant by the Student removing their clothes and exposing themself. The Case Manager explained the Student removed their shoe and pulled their pants down. They stated the Student barely pulled their pants down and took their genitals out into their hands. The Case Manager indicated it was a relatively new behavior and asked what the team could do to help decrease it. The Other Parent believed the Student's rash made them remove their clothes. The Case Manager indicated the Student was being supervised, but managed to engage in the behavior in less than five seconds. They explained they used visuals, verbal prompts, redirection, and social stories. The Case Manager stated they followed the same plan on the bus to try to decrease the behavior, but indicated the Student refused to remove their hands from their pants.

12. A Notice of Meeting contained the following relevant information:
    a. A proposed meeting time of 8:00 a.m. on February 9, 2026, at the School.
    b. A contact log which stated:
        i. The Parent requested a meeting on February 5, 202,6 via email.
        ii. The meeting was confirmed on February 6, 2026.
        iii. A meeting notice was sent home with the Student on February 6, 2026.
    c. A box had been checked and beside it read, "… parent requested a meeting to discuss [the Student's] recent behavior and toileting needs at school and on the bus[.]"
    d. The Case Manager marked the box indicating the notice was sent home with the Student.
    e. The Parent initialed the statements: "I plan to attend the meeting as scheduled" and "I consent to waive my right to a 10-day prior written notice of the meeting to develop, review, or revise the IEP for my child."
    f. The Parent signed the Notice of Meeting on February 9, 2026.
13. A Staffing Summary, dated February 9, 2026, indicated:
    a. The team members at the meeting were the Parent, the OT, the Case Manager, the LEA Behavior Consultant, and the Principal.
    b. The Parent requested the IEP meeting to address recent concerns about the Student.
    c. The summary portion indicated the Student had begun putting their hands in their pants often, specifically starting on February 5 and 6, 2026. The Case Manager shared the data from the previous week, and the Parent requested additional information beyond the notes sent home. The Parent explained that at home, they would say "[the Student] hands off" when the Student had their hands down their pants, and indicated the Student responded to this prompt. It was written the Student was being taken to the restroom about every 20 minutes, and the Student was also putting their hands in their pants and pulling their pants down, which might reveal their genitals.
    d. The team discussed preferred items for the Student, and the Parent shared the Student enjoyed music. The team discussed adding an additional device for the Student that would play music while they were on the bus.

e. Due to the Student's increased behavior of putting their hands in their pants and to try to reduce incidents of possibly revealing their genitals, the team suggested:
   i. Temporarily removing general education time (15 minutes), which would change IEP minutes.
   ii. Ensuring preferred objects were presented to the Student during any downtime.
   iii. Using the same phrase the Parent used at home if the Student put their hands down their pants.
   iv. Data would be collected on times in which the Student put their hands in their pants and exposed their genitals (at school and on the bus). The data would be shared with the Parent and the Other Parent daily.
   v. A barrier to block others from seeing the Student if/when they put their hands in their pants and possibly expose their genitals.
   vi. A revised social story.
   vii. The special education teacher would train paraprofessionals to implement any changes as needed.

f. At 8:43 a.m., the Parent stated, "I can't do this" and left the meeting. The team amended the IEP.

14. An undated PWN indicated:
   a. On February 9, 2026, the IEP team reviewed evaluation/assessment data for the Student, current classroom-based assessments and observations, and teacher or other staff observations to determine any additions, changes, or modifications to the special education and related services or educational placement that were needed to enable the Student to meet measurable annual IEP goals and participate, as appropriate, in the general curriculum.
   b. A box was checked, indicating there was a substantial change in the Student's placement.
   c. Beginning February 9, 2026, the Student's time in the general education setting would decrease, and their time in the special education setting would increase. The new minutes in the special education (SE) resource room setting were:
      i. SE for 375 minutes, twice a week, every week.
      ii. SE for 380 minutes, once a week, every week.
      iii. SE for 395 minutes, twice a week, every week.
   d. The IEP team proposed using tangible preferred items to occupy the Student's hands during downtime, for the duration of downtime as needed, in all educational settings. They proposed using a device to play music daily while on the bus.

e. The IEP team proposed to remove the Student from the general education setting due to some of their current behaviors (such as putting their hand down their pants, taking their clothes off, and exposing their genitals). The team would work with the Student to decrease these behaviors and revisit the Student's general education time at the upcoming IEP meeting. It was stated the team added the accommodations based on the Student's current behavioral needs, did not feel there were harmful effects due to the change, and that the Student's LRE was in the special education setting where their progress could be monitored.

f. It was indicated the PWN was sent home with the Student. A post-it note on the document said, "sign and date." There were no signatures on the document.

15. An IEP amendment form, dated February 9, 2026, summarized the information in the aforementioned PWN. It described the increases to the Student's time in the special education setting, with a green post-it note beside it which read, "check agree or disagree." The amendment was signed by the Case Manager on February 9, 2026. A green Post-it note read, "Sign and date." There was no signature from the Parent. The LEA's materials contained the same document, but there was no Post-it note or signatures.

16. Portions of the Student's IEP from February 28, 2025, included the following handwritten changes:

    a. Services were added for a "device to play music" daily while on the bus, and the use of tangible items during downtime in all education settings, both starting on February 9, 2026. Green Post-it notes were placed beside the services, and each read "please initial and date on highlighted line."

    b. Under Special Education and Related Services to be provided for the 2025-26 school year, one service was crossed out, and three others had new amounts of minutes to be served and the number of days written in by hand. A green Post-it note was placed beside it, which read, "Please initial and date."

    c. Changes to the Student's educational placement, outlined in the above fact, were handwritten onto the IEP. Another green Post-it note read, "Please initial and date on highlighted lines."

    d. There were no dates or initials written on or near where indicated by the post-it notes on the IEP.

17. Relevant handwritten information from the Student's daily reports included:

    a. January 9, 2026 - The Student put their hands down their pants.

b. January 13, 2026 - The Student was putting their hands down their pants on the bus. The Student kept placing their hands down their pants and removing their clothes three times.

c. January 14, 2026 - The Student had their hand down their pants.

d. January 16, 2026 - The Student removed their clothes in the ACSS room and kept putting their hands down their pants.

e. January 21, 2026 - The Student asked to eat several times. The Student got upset and hit their hands on the desk and table.

f. January 29, 2026 - The Student kept putting their hands down their pants and tried to remove their clothes.

g. January 30, 2026 - The Student wore overalls, which worked well to keep the Student's hands out of their pants.

h. February 2, 2026 - It was written that a meeting notice would be sent home the next day.

i. February 3, 2026 - The Student put their hands down their pants eight times that day.

j. February 4, 2026 - The Student kept their hands out of their pants, but they hit the table and floor with their hands when they requested food and did not get it.

k. February 5, 2026 - The Student put their hands down the front of their pants 26 times, ranging from three seconds to two minutes and 22 seconds. The Student was aggressive toward staff that day, hitting their hands on the floor, table, and desk, and their head.

l. February 6, 2026 - The Student pulled their pants down, put their hands down their pants, and exposed themselves.

m. February 9, 2026 - The Student put their hands down their pants and exposed themselves.

n. February 9, 2026 - The Case Manager thanked the Parent for attending the Student's meeting, and asked the Parent to return the paperwork they included in the Student's folder.

18. Relevant information from behavior charts, specifically regarding the Student putting their hands down their pants and taking their clothes off, indicated:

a. February 5, 2026 - There were 26 incidents of the Student putting their hands in their pants, lasting between 3 seconds and 2 minutes 22 seconds. There were two incidents of the Student pulling their clothes down, and eight times the Student's genitals were exposed.

b. February 6, 2026 - There were 16 incidents in which the Student put their hands in their pants, lasting between 2 seconds and 3 minutes 52 seconds. There were two incidents of the Student pulling their clothes down, and six times the Student's genitals were exposed.

c. February 9, 2026 - There were nine incidents in which the Student put their hands in their pants, lasting between 2 and 5 seconds. There were no incidents of the Student pulling their clothes down, and four times the Student's genitals were exposed.

d. February 10, 2026 - There were 12 incidents in which the Student put their hands in their pants, lasting between 2 and 30 seconds. There were no incidents of the Student pulling their clothes down, and two times the Student's genitals were exposed.

19. Relevant information from the LEA's Special Education Standard Operating Procedures for 2025-26 included:

    a. Any IEP team member could recommend a student's IEP be amended between annual reviews. The process included:

        i. The IEP team, including the classroom teacher and parent(s), discussed the need to amend the current IEP.

        ii. When amending the current IEP to add or remove a related service, the area(s) under consideration must have sufficient data to support the change.

        iii. If the team agreed to amend the current IEP for any reason, the amendment could occur with or without a formal IEP team meeting. If a formal IEP team meeting was held, written notice should be provided at least 10 calendar days prior to the meeting, or if the parent and team agreed to meet earlier, ensure the parent signed the 10-day notice waiver.

        iv. Required forms included a Notice of Meeting (if a meeting was held), the IEP Amendment Between Annual IEP Meetings form, a PWN for Identification/Placement, and amended IEP page(s) with parent initials on each change.

Parent Interview

20. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Parent indicated they were the Student's biological parent.

21. The Parent stated they believed the Student's IEP was amended in August [2025] to add the Student's seizure plan. They added it was their understanding the IEP was going to reflect bus personnel would be trained on the Student's seizure plan.

22. The Parent confirmed they requested the IEP meeting on February 9, 2026, to discuss the "behavior problems" the Student was having. The Parent stated they requested a copy of the IEP prior to the meeting on February 9, 2026, but they were not provided with it until the day of the meeting. The Parent noted "nothing was decided" at the meeting because the Parent got frustrated and left the meeting before they had a chance to propose solutions.

The Parent indicated they had proposed suggestions for the team to try with the Student and stated the Student's response was, "nothing is working." The Parent shared the team mentioned adding a behavior plan, but confirmed the behavior was new and believed it was too early to consider one. The Parent noted the team proposed removing the Student's 15 minutes of daily general education inclusion during recess. The Parent stated their objection to that, given it was the Student's only time with their general education peers.

The Parent stated they did not agree to any changes during the IEP meeting because they left before the discussion of what changes were needed was finished. The Parent confirmed they received the amendment and PWN from the February 9, 2026, meeting in the Student's backpack the same day as the meeting, but noted they never provided verbal or written consent. The Parent noted that they believed services would remain the same if they did not give permission for any changes.

23. The Parent noted the LEA proposed removing the Student's access to the general education setting to protect other students from witnessing the Student "strip down" or "put hands on [themself]." The Parent indicated they understood, but wanted the LEA to try other accommodations before removing the Student from their only time with non-disabled peers.
24. The Parent shared they felt the School should have reviewed behavior data to demonstrate that the Student's behavior was severe enough to warrant taking the inclusion minutes away.

Case Manager Interview

25. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Case Manager was joined by the Special Education Director.
26. The Case Manager shared the Parent had requested a meeting to discuss the recent increase in the Student's behaviors. The Case Manager recalled sending a notice of meeting home to the Parent and receiving it back signed by the Parent.
27. The Case Manager noted the Parent, the OT, the Principal, and the Case Manager were the only ones to attend the meeting on February 9, 2026. The Parent signed an excusal for the general education teacher because the Student spent the majority of their time in the special education classroom.
28. The Case Manager indicated the team discussed the medical reasons for the Student's behaviors during the meeting on February 9, 2026. The team also discussed the new behavior the Student was exhibiting involving pulling their pants down, exposing themself, and "pulling on [their] genitals".

29. Because the Student had demonstrated the behaviors on the bus, they wore a "black zip-up suit" only on the bus to prevent the behavior. The Case Manager reported the Student knew how to get the suit off.
30. The Case Manager noted the team discussed requiring the Student to go to the restroom every 15 minutes, addressing the Student's sensory needs, providing music as a sensory tool, using social stories, and using "tangible preferred items" to occupy the Student's hands.
31. The Case Manager recalled the team discussed having the Student wear the suit during their recess time to prevent the Student from undressing in front of their peers, or taking away the Student's general education time until the Student could learn how to keep their clothes on. The Case Manager indicated the Parent did not want the Student to look different in front of their peers and disagreed with the Student wearing the suit at recess. The Case Manager stated the Parent was in agreement the Student could lose their general education time "temporarily".
32. The Case Manager shared the Parent "seemed to agree" to reducing the Student's general education time, specifically because the Student's annual IEP was due in two weeks from that date, and they could revisit the need then.
33. The Case Manager explained the Parent came into the meeting "aggressive[ly]" and was not happy when they got there. The Case Manager explained to the Parent the motivators that typically worked with the Student were not working, and they asked the Parent what worked for them at home.
34. After the Parent left the meeting, the Case Manager stated they had summarized the meeting and sent the paperwork home to the Parent. The Case Manager indicated they had noted the changes the team discussed while the Parent was in the meeting before they left. The Case Manager indicated they sent home a consent form to make the noted changes to the IEP, but the Parent never signed it. The Case Manager explained they did not make the changes because the Parent did not provide consent.
35. The Case Manager explained the data used in the Student's IEP dated February 28, 2025. They noted the Student was given a verbal data assessment, their social-emotional skills were based on the Parent's input, and the functional-adaptive was written by their previous special education teacher based on "where [the Student] was at".
36. The Case Manager confirmed the teachers and staff used the IEP Goal and Objective forms and that the progress reports and report cards were sent home. They clarified the Parent couldn't see it as a working document, but could access it once it was printed. The Case Manager indicated it was the primary way they reported progress on the Student's goals.
37. The Case Manager confirmed they sent home a daily behavior log for the Student, which documented the Student's bathroom use and other behaviors. The Special Education Director noted it was not a requirement of the IEP, but something they did in their program to ensure additional communication with families.

38. The Case Manager explained ACSS as Adaptive Social and Communication Skills and noted their program focused on those skills. The Special Education Director explained the Student was placed in that program based on their present levels at the time. The Case Manager confirmed the IEP Team determined the placement continued to be the ACSS classroom.

Positions of the Parties, Applicable Regulations, and Conclusions

Issue One

Whether USD #475, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, provided the Parent with an opportunity to participate in the February 9, 2026, IEP meeting. K.A.R. 91-40-17(a)(d)(e)(1)(2); 34 §§ C.F.R. 300.322(d), 300.501(b).

According to 34 §§ C.F.R. 300.322(d), 300.501(b), and K.A.R. 91-40-17(a)(d)(e)(1)(2), each agency shall take steps to ensure one or both of the parents of an exceptional child are present at each IEP team meeting or are afforded the opportunity to participate. These steps shall include scheduling each meeting at a mutually agreed-upon time and place, informing the parents of the information specified in this regulation, and providing written notice to the parents of any IEP team meeting at least 10 days in advance of the meeting. Also, an agency shall take action to ensure parents understand the discussions that occur at IEP team meetings, including arranging for an interpreter for parents who are deaf or whose native language is other than English.

An agency may conduct an IEP team meeting without parental participation if the agency, despite repeated attempts, has been unable to contact the parent or parents or to convince them that they should participate. If an agency conducts an IEP team meeting without parental participation, the agency shall have a record of the attempts the agency made to contact the parents to provide them notice of the meeting and to secure their participation. The record shall include at least two of the following: detailed records of telephone calls made or attempted, including the date, time, and person making the calls and the results of the calls; detailed records of visits made to the parent's home, including the date, time, and person making the visit and the results of the visit; copies of correspondence sent to each parent and any responses received; and detailed records of any other method attempted to contact the parents and the results of that attempt.

The Parent alleged the LEA staff's behavior in the February 9, 2026, IEP meeting denied the Parent meaningful parent participation, and the Parent left the meeting.

The LEA responded that the Parent requested the IEP meeting. The notice of meeting was sent home to the Parent, and the Parent attended the meeting.

On February 5, 2026, the Parent initiated a request for an IEP meeting via email to discuss recent behavioral incidents and toileting needs. The School confirmed the meeting for February 9, 2026, and provided a Notice of Meeting on February 6, 2026, which the Parent signed, and waived the ten-day notice requirement. The Parent attended the meeting alongside the Principal, the Case Manager, the OT, and the LEA Behavior Consultant. During the session, the team discussed data regarding the Student's new behaviors of undressing and genital exposure, and the Parent contributed information about successful prompts used at home. Although the Parent became frustrated and left the meeting at 8:43 a.m. before all solutions were finalized, the record indicates the School provided the opportunity for participation, documented the Parent's input, and responded to the Parent's specific request for the meeting.

Based on the foregoing, according to the IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to provide the Parent with an opportunity to participate in the February 9, 2026, IEP meeting.

Issue Two

Whether USD #475, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, made amendments to the Student's IEP through a properly convened IEP meeting, or a written agreement. K.S.A. 72-987(b)(1), K.A.R. 91-40-18(a)(b)(1)(4); 34 §§ C.F.R. 300.322, 300.324.

According to 34 §§ C.F.R. 300.322, 300.324, and K.A.R. 91-40-18(a)(b)(1)(4), in developing or reviewing the IEP of any exceptional child, each agency shall comply with the requirements of K.S.A. 72-987 and amendments thereto, and, as appropriate, shall consider the results of the child's performance on any general state or districtwide assessment programs. If, as a result of its consideration of the special factors described in K.S.A. 72-987(c) and amendments thereto, an IEP team determines a child needs behavioral interventions and strategies, accommodations, assistive technology devices or services, or other program modifications for the child to receive a Free Appropriate Public Education (FAPE), the IEP team shall include those items in the child's IEP.

According to K.S.A. 72-987(b)(1), except as otherwise provided in this section, each IEP of an exceptional child and any amendment or modification of an IEP shall be made by the child's IEP team. Upon agreement of the parent and the agency, an IEP team can meet in person or by alternative means, including telephone conference calls and video conferences.

The Parent alleged the Student's IEP was amended without their consent.

The LEA replied in Kansas, an IEP can be amended without a meeting if both parties agree; however, in this case, the Parent requested a formal meeting, which was held on February 9, 2026. Although adjustments were discussed, the Parent left the meeting prematurely and declined the Principal's attempt to reconvene and address their concerns. Because the Parent subsequently did not sign or return the amendment paperwork sent home by the Case Manager, the proposed changes could not be legally implemented, and the original IEP remains in place.

Following the February 9, 2026, meeting, the School drafted an IEP amendment and a PWN to increase special education minutes and decrease general education time. These documents, along with the amended IEP pages, were sent home in the Student's backpack with post-it notes requesting the Parent's signature and initials. The Parent did not sign the amendment, or the PWN, and later stated they never provided verbal or written consent for the changes. The Case Manager acknowledged that because the Parent left the meeting early and did not return the signed consent forms, the proposed changes were not implemented. Consequently, while the School documented the proposed amendments, they did not secure the written agreement required by the LEA's operating procedures or State and Federal regulations to finalize changes outside of a completed annual review.

Based on the foregoing, according to the IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to amend the Student's IEP through a properly convened IEP meeting, or a written agreement.

Issue Three

Whether USD #475, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, developed an IEP for the Student that included sufficient present levels of academic achievement and functional performance. K.S.A. 72-3429(c)(1); 34 § C.F.R. 300.324.

According to K.S.A. 72-3429(c)(1) and 34 § C.F.R. 300.324, the IEP for each exceptional child shall include: a statement of the child's present levels of academic achievement and functional performance, including how the child's disability or giftedness affects the child's involvement and progress in the general education curriculum; and for those children with disabilities who take alternate assessments aligned to alternate achievement standards, a description of benchmarks or short-term objections. In developing each child's IEP, the IEP Team must consider the strengths of the child; the concerns of the parents for enhancing the education of their child; the results of the initial or most recent evaluation of the child; and the academic, developmental, and functional needs of the child.

The Parent alleged the Student's IEP did not include "sufficient documentation or data" to make IEP revisions.

The LEA responded by saying the IEP team believed that sufficient data existed in the present levels to determine appropriately ambitious goals, supplementary aides and services, and thus, inform placement.

The Student's February 28, 2025, IEP detailed present levels across academic, functional, and behavioral domains based on staff input, parent feedback, and various assessments. The PLAAFP noted the Student's primary diagnosis of autism and ADHD, as well as medical history regarding voiding dysfunction. Academically, the IEP identified specific barriers such as "scrolling" and lack of motivation, while noting strengths in reading and play and weaknesses in vocal imitation. Functional levels described the Student's ability to perform self-care with adult monitoring and the necessity of hand-over-hand assistance for transitions. Baseline data for goals was specific, such as identifying colors with a communicative device and naming pictures from a field of two with 60% accuracy, providing a foundation for the measurable annual goals and short-term objectives.

Based on the foregoing, according to the IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to develop an IEP for the Student that included sufficient present levels of academic achievement and functional performance.

Issue Four

Whether USD #475, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, placed the Student in their LRE, and whether the placement decision was made in conformity with the IDEA and Kansas administrative rules. K.S.A. 72-3420, K.A.R 90-40-21; 34 §§ C.F.R. 300.114, 300.116.

According to 34 §§ C.F.R. 300.114, 300.116, and K.A.R 90-40-21, each agency shall ensure children with disabilities served by the agency are educated in the LRE. Each agency shall ensure a continuum of alternative educational placements is available to meet the needs of children with disabilities. These alternative educational placements shall meet the following criteria: include instruction in regular classes, special classes, and special schools; instruction in a child's home; and instruction in hospitals and other institutions; and make provision for supplementary services, including resource room and itinerant services, to be provided in conjunction with regular class placement.

In determining the educational placement of a child with a disability, including a preschool child with a disability, each agency shall ensure the placement decision meets the following requirements: the decision shall be made by a group of persons, including the child's parent or parents and other persons who are knowledgeable about the child, the meaning of the evaluation data, and the placement options; and the decision shall be made in conformity with the requirement of providing services in the LRE.

Each agency shall give notice to the parents of any meeting to discuss the educational placement of their child. If a parent cannot participate in person at a meeting relating to the educational placement of the child, the agency shall offer to use other methods to allow the parent to participate, including conference calls and video conferencing. An agency may conduct a meeting to determine the appropriate educational placement of a child with a disability without the participation of a parent if the agency, despite repeated attempts, has been unable to contact the parent or to convince the parent to participate. If an agency conducts a meeting to determine the appropriate educational placement of a child without the participation of a parent, the agency shall have a record of the attempts that the agency made to contact the parent. An agency shall take action to ensure parents understand, and are able to participate in, any discussions concerning the educational placement of their children, including arranging for an interpreter for parents who are deaf or whose native language is other than English.

Each agency shall ensure each exceptional child's placement meets the following criteria: is determined at least annually; is based on the child's IEP; and is as close as possible to the child's home. Unless the IEP of a child with a disability requires some other arrangement, the agency shall ensure the child is educated in the school the child would attend if nondisabled. In selecting the LRE for a child with a disability, the persons making the educational placement decision shall give consideration to any potential harmful effect on the child or on the quality of services that the child needs.

An agency shall not remove a child with a disability from education in age-appropriate regular classrooms solely because of needed modifications in the general curriculum.

In providing or arranging for the provision of nonacademic and extracurricular services and activities, including meals, recess periods, and other nonacademic services and activities, each agency shall ensure each child with a disability participates with nondisabled children in those services and activities to the maximum extent appropriate to the needs of that child. Each agency shall ensure each child with a disability receives the supplementary aids and services specified in the child's IEP as being appropriate and necessary for the child to participate in nonacademic settings.

According to K.S.A. 72-3420, each school district shall be required, to the maximum extent appropriate, to educate children with disabilities with children who are not disabled, and to provide special classes, separate schooling or for the removal of children with disabilities from the regular education environment only when the nature or severity of the disability of the child is such that education in regular classes with supplementary aids and services cannot be achieved satisfactorily.

The Parent alleged the Student’s placement was made without parental participation, not based on documented needs or supports, and the new placement was not the Student's LRE.

The LEA stated they acknowledged the Parent and the IEP team disagree on what constitutes the LRE for this Student. The Parent believes the Student should be integrated more fully into the general education classroom. Based on data and the Student’s present levels, the IEP team remains confident the Student’s LRE was in place to support their wide range of academic, functional, communication, social skills, and behavioral needs.

The IEP team determined that the Student’s LRE was the ACSS specialized program because of significant delays in communication, social-emotional regulation, and functional tasks. The February 28, 2025, IEP and accompanying PWN explained the Student required SDI in a small group setting with limited distractions to make progress. The team considered increasing general education time but rejected it, concluding that the Student would be overstimulated and that the specialized environment offered more meaningful opportunities for skill practice. While the team discussed "temporarily" removing the Student's remaining 15 minutes of general education recess during the February 9, 2026, meeting to address safety and privacy concerns related to disrobing, the Parent expressed a desire for alternative accommodations to maintain peer access, and no formal change to the placement was finalized without parental consent.

Based on the foregoing, according to the IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to place the Student in the LRE, nor that the LEA failed to make a placement decision in conformity with the IDEA and Kansas administrative rules.

Right to Appeal

Either party may appeal the findings or conclusions in this report by filing a written notice of appeal with the State Commissioner of Education, ATTN: Special Education and Title Services, Landon State Office Building, 900 SW Jackson Street, Suite 620, Topeka, KS 66612-1212. The notice of appeal may also be filed by email to formalcomplaints@ksde.gov The notice of appeal must be delivered within 10 calendar days from the date of this report.

For further description of the appeals process, see Kansas Administrative Regulations 91-40-51(f).

(2) If an appeal committee affirms a compliance report that requires corrective action by an agency, that agency shall initiate the required corrective action immediately. If, after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the agency shall be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following:

(A) The issuance of an accreditation deficiency advisement;
(B) the withholding of state or federal funds otherwise available to the agency;
(C) the award of monetary reimbursement to the complainant; or
(D) any combination of the actions specified in paragraph (f)(2)

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST
UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #259
ON FEBRUARY 12, 2026

DATE OF REPORT: MARCH 31, 2026

This report is in response to a complaint filed with our office on behalf of a student, -------, by their foster parent and educational advocate, -------. In the remainder of the report, the student will be referred to as "the Student" and the foster parent as "the Parent."

The Complaint is against USD #259, Wichita Public Schools. In the remainder of the report, "the School" and the "local education agency (LEA)" shall refer to USD #259.

When a special education complaint is filed against a school district that is a member of a special education cooperative or interlocal, or that uses any other state recognized public agency to serve children with disabilities, the term "local education agency (LEA)" in this report will include the school district, the special education cooperative or interlocal, and any other agency that is recognized by the state as an administrative agency for public elementary or secondary schools and is serving the educational needs of this student.

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) allows for a 30-day timeline to investigate a child complaint. A complaint is considered to be filed on the date it is delivered to both the KSDE and the LEA. In this case, the KSDE initially received the complaint on February 12, 2026 and the 30-day timeline ended on March 14, 2026.

Allegations

The following issues will be investigated:

ISSUE ONE: Whether USO #259, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), provided the Parent with access to the Student's educational records when requested by the Parent. K.A.R. 91-40-25, K.A.R. 91-40-50; 34 C.F.R. §§ 99.3, 300.501, 300.611(b), 300.613.

ISSUE TWO: Whether USO #259, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, provided the Student with a free appropriate public education (FAPE). K.A.R. 91-40-1(z); 34 C.F.R. § 300.101.

Investigation of Complaint

The Complaint Investigator interviewed the Parent by telephone on February 27, 2026. The following LEA staff were interviewed on March 3, 2026: the Previous Special Education Teacher and the Behavior Interventionist.

In completing this investigation, the Complaint Investigator reviewed documentation provided by the Parent and the LEA. Although additional documentation was provided and reviewed, the following materials were used as the basis of the findings and conclusions of the investigation:

1. Prior Written Notice for Evaluation or Reevaluation and Request for Consent dated August 12, 2022, electronically signed by the Parent on August 15, 2022 giving consent

Background Information

This Investigation involved an elementary-aged student enrolled in an elementary specialized program called Positive Behavior Supports (PBS) located in the LEA, but outside of the Student's neighborhood school. The Student is currently receiving special education or related services as a child with a disability per the IDEA under the eligibility category of Emotional Disturbance (ED). The Student transferred to the PBS program at the School on November 3, 2025 from a therapeutic day program for behavior at the Previous School, also in the LEA, which they had attended since the beginning of the 2025-26 school year. Their exit date from the Previous School was listed as October 31, 2025. The Student was enrolled in a different district for the 2024-25 school year.

Additionally, the Student was placed in foster care on July 22, 2025 with the Parent. At that time, the Student was also assigned to the Previous Educational Advocate, who retained educational rights on the Student's behalf until the Parent was appointed the Student's educational advocate on November 21, 2025.

Findings of the Investigation

The following findings are based on a review of documentation and interviews with the Parent and staff in the LEA.

1. An IEP dated November 4, 2024 outlined the following relevant information for the Student:
    a. The IEP was originally written on November 4, 2024, initiated on August 14, 2025, and reviewed on November 3, 2025.
    b. An accompanying "Walk-In Consultation" form dated August 14, 2025 indicated that "comparable" special education services from the previous district would be continued in the LEA. The Student would receive special education services in a "special day school setting." The Student would receive speech-language services and counseling services twice per week (unspecified time). The IEP was noted as due on November 3, 2025.
    c. The Student's cognitive abilities were considered "age appropriate," and there were no concerns at the time.
    d. The Student is described as "very friendly." The Student also "comes to school with a smile and is easy to joke around with." The Student enjoys giving teachers hugs, gets along well with peers, and will play Lego with them. The Student enjoys watching videos and coloring.
    e. Social/Emotional present levels update on November 4, 2025: "When [the Student] is told 'no' by an adult, [their] behavior will escalate. [They] will growl, then fold [their] arms across [their] chest and [put] [their] head down. If [the Student] is still unable to get what [they] want, [they] will push items off the table or desk and continue to growl. If [the Student] is left alone, then [they] often [calm] down. If [they do] not calm down, [they] will use profanity, knock over chairs, and throw items."

f. It was indicated that the Student displayed the following impeding behaviors: "destroy teacher and peers' personal property, [lash] out physically to students and adults, scratch, punch, bite, knock over desks and chairs, kick, throw things, yell/scream, [and] knock/pull items off shelves/desks. [The Student] will also elope from [the] assigned area." It was noted an FSA had been conducted and a SIP was in place.

g. Goals: reading, speech, writing, math, and behavior.

   i. Behavior goal: "By the next annual IEP review, in an individual and/or small group setting, [the Student] will learn/utilize self[-]regulation strategies to handle stressful situations (such as becoming upset, frustrated, or angry 90% of the time in 30[-]minute intervals tracked with behavior logs."

      1. Service provider: Social worker
      2. Score: As of November 4, 2024, it was noted, "[The] Student currently has been handling stressful situations 85% of the time as tracked by [their] behavior logs."
      3. A progress note dated October 17, 2025 stated the Student's score for the goal was 76%. It also stated, "[The Student] continues to struggle with stressful situations, but will continue to work towards meeting this goal."

h. It was determined the Student would receive their special education services in a "special day school setting for the entirety of [their] day." They would also receive speech and counseling services each twice weekly.

i. Accommodations starting November 4, 2024 and reviewed on November 4, 2025 as follows:

   i. Read aloud for all assessments and activities, in all school settings, when the activity or assessment contained reading above a kindergarten level and was not assessing the Student's reading ability, throughout the activity or assessment. The Student was also able to have all the questions and answer choices read to them.

   ii. Frequent breaks in a designated safe spot for two minutes.

   iii. Visual schedule that allowed the Student to see what was happening and what would happen next across all school settings, with a five-second pause between classes. iv.

   Placement updated November 4, 2025: "While [the Student] is attending the day school, [they] will not be allowed to participate in any general education curriculum with [their] non-identified peers. As [the Student's] behavior improves, [they] will begin transitioning back to [their] home school."

2. The Student's BIP, dated November 4, 2024, identified several strengths and interests, including a love for toys, board games, snacks, and Godzilla. The plan addressed four primary target behaviors: noncompliance or refusal (such as yelling "No" or sleeping), aggression (including screaming, hitting, kicking, or biting themselves or others), elopement from designated areas, and property destruction. Baseline data from late 2023 through September 2024 indicated that while the Student transitioned to a half-day schedule, which decreased the intensity and duration of these behaviors, the frequency remained relatively consistent. The underlying function of these behaviors was determined to be the avoidance of non-preferred tasks, activities, or tangibles.

   To address these challenges, the plan focused on a replacement behavior where the Student was expected to comply with requests within two to three prompts without engaging in aggression. The goal was for the Student to learn and utilize self-regulation strategies to handle stressful, frustrating, or angry situations. Antecedent-based interventions included providing a highly structured environment, clear directions, frequent breaks, and the avoidance of power struggles or unnecessary physical contact. The Student was provided with one-to-one and small-group social work instruction to develop these compliance and coping skills.

   Staff strategies involved identifying early signs of agitation, such as pacing or yelling, and redirecting the Student toward movement breaks or preferred calming activities. If the Student successfully used these strategies, the staff reinforced the choice and processed the emotions involved. When target behaviors occurred, such as growling or swiping objects, the Student was given space and time to settle down before expectations were reviewed. In cases of elopement, staff followed the Student calmly and requested support via radio. If the behavior escalated to a peak level involving physical aggression toward peers or staff, a "Code Red" was called for de-escalation assistance, and Emergency Safety Interventions (ESI) were authorized as a last resort to ensure the safety of the Student and others.

   It was noted that target behavior data would be collected daily, analyzed monthly, and reported to the Parent quarterly. BIP fidelity would be measured quarterly via teacher interviews. "Case manager and support staff' were listed as those responsible for monitoring BIP effectiveness.

3. A Notice of Team Meeting, dated October 7, 2025 was sent to the Previous Educational Advocate, indicating a meeting scheduled for October 27, 2025 to conduct an annual IEP review and discuss possible changes to the Student's IEP.

4. An IEP dated October 27, 2025 outlined the following relevant information for the Student:
    a. The Previous Educational Advocate and the Parent participated in the discussion.
    b. Present levels of academic achievement and functional performance:
        i. The Student struggled to "sustain attention to initiate and complete tasks, exhibit age-appropriate social skills, demonstrate effective emotional-regulation skills, and adapt to unexpected changes in plans or routines." All elementary academic areas were reportedly delayed.
        ii. The Student was described as "kind and caring," enjoying positive interactions with peers and adults, and as someone who often sought connection through hugs and playful joking with staff, which helped build trust and supportive relationships. The Student was also described as having a "wonderful sense of humor," which brought joy to those around them.
        iii. During their time in the therapeutic day school program at the Previous School, the Student had not demonstrated any physical aggression toward staff. It was noted the Student benefitted from consistent routines, positive reinforcement, and clear expectations. The Student reportedly responded well to a token economy system and completed tasks approximately 85% of the time.
        iv. The Student reportedly did not typically like being asked to go to a calming area, but on occasion, responded positively when encouraged to engage in movement-based activities to help them regulate.
        v. The Student experienced difficulty with transitions and, at times, had become upset, screaming or crying.
        vi. The Student demonstrated difficulty regulating their emotions and, at times, had screamed, cried, growled, or used inappropriate language. On one occasion, the Student destroyed part of a classroom by "pushing, throwing items, kicking, hitting chairs, and tearing items off the wall." On another occasion, when upset, the Student had "engaged in self-injurious behavior by scratching and biting their arm and leg."
        vii. Data collected between August 25 and October 15, 2025 indicated the Student followed directions 85% of the time, remained on task 85% of the time, used respectful language 90% of the time, and maintained safe hands, feet, and objects 92% of the time.
    c. Goals in reading, speech, math, writing, and behavior.
        i. Behavior goal: "By the next annual IEP, when frustrated or upset, [the Student] will reduce verbal aggression (e.g., yelling, inappropriate language, or hurtful statements) and instead use appropriate communication strategies 98% of the time as measured by teacher observations and daily monitoring sheets."

1. An IEP progress report dated December 16, 2025 indicated a progress level of 2 (regression - data below baseline) and a score of 78%. It was noted the Student had demonstrated an increase in disruptive and unsafe behavior since their transition to the School.

ii. Behavior goal: "By the next annual IEP, during classroom activities, [the Student] will remain on task for at least 98% of the scheduled activity time as measured by teacher observations and daily monitor sheets."

1. An IEP progress report dated December 16, 2025 indicated a progress level of 3 (maintained performance - no change from previous progress report/baseline) and a score of 82%. It was noted the Student had demonstrated a "minor" decrease in their ability to attend to task according to daily monitoring.

iii. Behavior goal: "By the next annual IEP review, in an individual and/or small group setting, [the Student] will learn/utilize self-regulation strategies to handle stressful situations (such as becoming upset, frustrated, or angry) 90% of the time in 30-minute intervals tracked with behavior logs."

1. An IEP progress report dated December 16, 2025 indicated a progress level of 2 (regression - data below baseline) and a score of 40%. It was noted the Student was able to utilize self-regulation strategies during stressful situations 40% of the time.

d. Statement of special education services: "Beginning October 27, 2025, [the Student] will receive special education services in a PBS classroom without general education peers. [They] will receive speech-language services 20 minutes weekly, counseling services twice per week for 30 minutes per session, and [the Student] will receive attendant care services for lunch and recess daily for 40 minutes." The Student also required transportation to and from the School with the added accommodation of "hand-to-hand transfer" to a "pre-approved designated individual."

e. Classroom accommodations to begin October 27, 2025:

i. Read aloud for all assessments and activities, conducted daily during literacy instruction and as needed for other classroom activities to support the Student's comprehension and engagement, in all classroom settings for the entirety of the reading activity.

ii. Visual schedule used daily throughout the school day, with staff providing prompts and updates as activities or transitions occur.

iii. Short, frequent breaks as needed throughout the day, in a designated calming area or sensory space within the classroom or nearby, allowing the Student to regulate safely while remaining supervised. Breaks will last two to five minutes, or longer if needed, until the Student is calm and ready to re-engage in the activity.

f. Least restrictive environment (LRE) selection: "[The Student] will not participate with [their] non-general education peers during academic times due to receiving services in the PBS classroom setting. [The Student] will participate with general education peers during lunch, recess, specials, as well as any extracurricular activities."

g. The Student's BIP, updated on October 27, 2025, targeted four primary behaviors: noncompliance or refusal (such as sleeping or verbalizing "no"), aggression (including hitting, biting, or throwing objects), elopement from assigned areas, and property destruction such as tearing materials. These behaviors were often preceded by the Student growling or swiping objects off their desk. The primary function of these actions was determined to be the avoidance or escape of non-preferred tasks and situations in favor of preferred activities.

The Student was expected to follow directions, complete academic tasks, and remain in their assigned area. Baseline data from late 2025 at the Previous School indicated that the Student followed directions and remained on task approximately 85% of the time, while maintaining safe behavior 92% of the time. To support growth, the plan aimed for the Student to learn self-regulation strategies and maintain on-task behavior at a 98% success rate. Prevention strategies included a structured environment utilizing visual schedules, "first-then" language, and a token economy system where stickers were earned and exchanged for prizes. Additionally, the Student was taught a replacement behavior of appropriately requesting a break or continued access to a preferred item.

Staff responses were designed to prioritize safety while minimizing the reinforcement of negative behaviors. For elopement, staff were directed to guide the Student calmly without chasing and use minimal language. During instances of noncompliance, staff avoided power struggles and provided clear choices or "first-then" prompts. Property destruction was managed by redirecting the Student to safer alternatives, such as crumpling paper, while peak aggression required creating physical space, removing peers, and calling for additional safety support if necessary. Following any incident, staff allowed for de-escalation time and utilized post-incident processing to discuss triggers once the Student was calm. Progress was monitored through daily data collection, monthly team analyses, and quarterly fidelity reviews conducted via teacher interviews.

5. Meeting Notes dated October 7, 2025 showed that the Previous Educational Advocate and the Parent were in attendance. Regarding behavior, the Previous Special Education Teacher reviewed the BIP with the team and asked if there were any questions. It was noted that no questions were asked. Based on the Student's progress, the team discussed transitioning the Student to a full-time PBS classroom. The Previous Educational Advocate signed consent for the change in special education placement and services.

6. Documentation showed 20-minute BIP fidelity checks were completed with the Previous Special Education Teacher on October 7 and 15, 2025.
7. A PWN dated October 27, 2025, was emailed to the Previous Educational Advocate and indicated the following:
    a. Beginning on October 27, 2025, the Student's placement would change from full-time at a special day school to full-time in a PBS classroom within a comprehensive elementary school, due to demonstrated progress in their behavior and social-emotional skills. The Student's behavior data reportedly indicated consistent improvement, with "a sustained ability to regulate emotions, follow school expectations, and engage in positive peer interactions." Given their progress, the IEP team believed the Student could successfully transition to a less restrictive setting that provided structural supports through the PBS framework. The placement would allow the Student to continue receiving necessary interventions while benefiting from increased access to peers in general education and a broader range of academic and social opportunities.
    b. The data used for the annual IEP review came from daily classroom performance, curriculum assessments, reading comprehension screening probes, and staff input. "The decision to transition [the Student] was based on a comprehensive review of various data sources, including [the Student's] daily behavior tracking sheets, classroom observations, teacher interviews, and overall classroom performance data." The Student's progress was reportedly demonstrated consistently across different settings, reinforcing the team's confidence in the Student's ability to succeed in a full-time placement.
8. An LEA letter dated October 28, 2025 and sent to the Parent's address, indicated the Student would be assigned to a PBS classroom outside of their neighborhood school due to the limited number of schools hosting PBS programs. It also noted the Student would receive transportation as identified in their IEP.
9. Ten behavior documentation antecedent-behavior-consequence (ABC) sheets for the Student from November 17, 2025 through February 4, 2026, detailed a consistent pattern of physical aggression, property destruction, and peer conflict triggered primarily by academic demands, task transitions, and disagreements with peers. Notable incidents occurred on November 13, 2025, and December 1, 2025, where the Student left assigned areas, flipped desks and chairs, threw classroom materials, and engaged in physical altercations with peers. On December 2, 2025, the Student punched a peer in the face and bit them after a toy was accidentally stepped on, resulting in a 30-minute prone restraint. Further high-intensity behaviors were documented on December 3 and December 17, 2025, involving property destruction and attempts to bite others when the Student was frustrated with technology or refused to participate in holiday-themed crafts.

On January 7 and January 8, 2026, the Student refused to go to lunch, destroyed peer property, used obscenities, and attacked a peer after being asked to sit down. An altercation on January 13, 2026, involving hitting, punching, and scratching, required the School Nurse to examine the Student for facial scratches. On February 4, 2026, the Student became "enraged" and attempted to hit a peer after a desk divider accidentally struck the Student in the face.
Across these incidents, staff documented utilizing several specific strategies from the BIP to manage the Student's behaviors. One of the most frequent strategies used during "peak" behavioral incidents was the evacuation of other students, commonly referred to as a "room clear," to ensure the safety of the Student and their peers. Staff also used the school radio system to request crisis intervention and additional support during high-intensity moments. In at least one instance involving physical aggression toward a peer, staff implemented an ESI, specifically a prone restraint, which was noted as a last-resort safety protocol in the BIP.
Following high-intensity incidents, staff reportedly adhered to the BIP's de-escalation and post-incident strategies. The Student was provided with space and time to regain emotional regulation before staff attempted to address the behavior. Additionally, staff utilized the School Nurse to perform safety checks and examine the Student for injuries following physical altercations or head traumas.
Communication strategies outlined in the BIP were also documented as being implemented. The Special Education Teacher frequently contacted the Parent via telephone to provide verbal reports of behavioral incidents. Staff also used ABC data sheets to provide more detailed, anecdotal tracking of significant behaviors, including incident duration and staff responses.
Furthermore, staff attempted to redirect the Student toward calming strategies or preferred activities when signs of agitation were identified.

10. A 2025-26 attendance profile for the Student during their time in the day treatment program at the Previous School showed four absences and two tardies between August 28, 2025 and October 31, 2025, which was the Student's last enrolled day at the Previous School.
11. A letter from a social services organization dated November 21, 2025, indicated the Previous Educational Advocate's appointment serving the Student was terminated because the Parent had been trained and would serve as the Student's new education advocate. Another letter dated the same date indicated the Parent had been appointed as the Student's education advocate.
12. Based on the Check in to Connect Daily Behavior Monitors documenting the Student's behavioral performance and specific incidents reported in November 2025, the following was summarized:

a. Target behaviors included: safe hands, feet, and objects, staying in the assigned area, being on-task, and using respectful language and voice tones. These behaviors were rated during each of 11 time periods or subjects of the day using a scale of happy (2 points), neutral (1 point), and sad faces (0 points).

b. November 3, 2025: 94%.

c. Undated: 100% with the note, "Amazing!!"

d. November 5, 2025: 100% - "Another STUPENDOUS Day!!"

e. November 6, 2025: 97% - "Woo-Hoo!! GreatJob!!"

f. November 7, 2025: 100% - "Student arrived late," and "Great Math."

g. November 12, 2025: 81%

h. November 13, 2025: 81% - In math, the Student was in another student's space, yelling, screaming, crying, and banging on furniture. The Student also knocked over all the desks and fought with a peer.

i. November 14, 2025: 100% - "AMAZING DAY!!"

j. November 17, 2025: 87%

k. November 18, 2025: 82% - The Student yelled and tried to elope during math, spat food on peers during lunch, and cussed at people during recess.

l. November 19, 2025: 80% - The Student threw an iPad and was yelling during math intervention.

m. November 20, 2025: 63% - The Student threw food and eloped during recess and yelled and cussed during lunch.

n. November 21, 2025: 77% - The Student growled about a game during math and threw objects during their second "specials."

o. November 24, 2025: 74% - The Student was absent from the morning meeting.

p. November 25, 2025: 98%

13. On December 15, 2025, the Behavior Interventionist emailed the School Nurse to request documentation of the Student's facial injury following an incident with another student the previous week. The Behavior Interventionist asked the School Nurse if they had checked on the Student and whether there was any documentation. The School Nurse replied they had checked on the Student and had documentation of what the injuries looked like. They said, "I am not sure if I am allowed to print my documentation out or if they have to request it. I will find out." The Special Education Teacher, who was carbon-copied on the email, added a description of the behavior incident that occurred on December 10, 2025. The Student had reportedly pushed and hit a peer in the head and grabbed something from them. The peer attempted to retrieve the materials from the Student and, in the process, scratched the Student. The School Nurse was called.

14. Based on the Check in to Connect Daily Behavior Monitors documenting the Student's behavioral performance and specific incidents reported in December 2025, the following was summarized:
    a. Target behaviors included: keeping hands, feet, and objects safe, staying in the assigned area, staying on-task, and using respectful language and tone. These behaviors were rated during each of 11 time periods or subjects of the day using a scale of happy (2 points), neutral (1 point), and sad faces (0 points).
    b. December 2, 2025: 50% - The Student was playing with toys during learning, and the toys needed to go home so the Student could focus on learning.
    c. December 4, 5, and 8, 2025: 67%, 94%, and 64%
    d. December 9, 2025: 86% - the Student left early.
    e. December 10, 2025: 92%
    f. December 11, 2025: 86% - The Student kicked a peer during first specials.
    g. December 12, 15, 16, and 17, 2025: 93%, 60%, 74%, and 75%
    h. December 18, 2025: 72% - The Student eloped during the second specials.
15. January 13, 2026 behavior documentation indicated that a peer had tried to take a toy away from the Student, upsetting the Student. The peer and the Student started fighting, hitting, punching, and scratching each other. The room was cleared, and the staff separated the Student and the peer. The Student threw chairs and moved desks. The School Nurse came to check the scratch marks on the Student's face. The Student eventually calmed down.
16. In an email dated January 14, 2026, the Behavior Interventionist informed the Special Education Teacher of a discussion with the Parent regarding the perceived discrepancy between "bigger" behavioral incidents and "decent" daily behavior tracking scores. The Behavior Interventionist explained to the Parent that the Student could still perform well in other subjects if a behavioral situation was contained to a single period. Following a request from the Parent for more comprehensive data to share with the foster care team, the Behavior Interventionist agreed to begin sending home documentation of major behaviors (assault, property destruction, room evacuations, etc.) on the day they occurred. The Behavior Interventionist offered to handle the scanning and distribution of these records and suggested that paraprofessionals be instructed to provide objective, detailed tracking of specific behaviors, such as physical aggression and property destruction, on the back of the ABC behavior documentation sheets.
17. The Behavior Interventionist emailed the School team on January 15, 2026 informing them the Parent requested daily ABC data sheets. The Behavior Interventionist outlined the following things for staff to consider when completing the ABC sheets:
    a. "Be matter[-Jof[-Jfact and non-emotional when writing narratives."
    b. "Include frequency of assaults, bites, property destruction, etc., if possible."

c. "Include whether or not the class needed to be evacuated."

d. "Do not include other students' names."

18. On January 16, 2026, the Behavior Interventionist emailed the School Team notes from an unspecified meeting. They noted the Student maintained "average ability cognitively'' according to November 2023 testing. They wrote, "Skills deficits are likely due to behavior." The notes also indicated there was ABC data for 1O behavior incidents, nine of which were "noncompliance, avoidance of task, and physical aggression," and that these reportedly aligned with the BIP. The notes mentioned the team could hold an IEP amendment meeting to make "minor" changes to the BIP to reflect what was working. Finally, the documented primary behavior "struggles" were related to toys and/or personal space.

19. In a January 16, 2026 email to the Behavior Interventionist, the Parent asked when they would hear from the Social Worker and whether the Behavior Interventionist had the incident report from January 13, 2026. The Behavior Interventionist replied by attaching the incident report to their email and stating they would talk with the Social Worker that day about reaching out to the Parent.

20. On January 21, 2026, the Behavior Interventionist emailed the Special Education Teacher to inform them that the Child Study Team wanted to meet with the Parent to review data and seek clarification on the Parent's thoughts and concerns. The Behavior Interventionist said they would schedule a meeting with all team members to gather behavior data.

21. On January 28, 2026, the Behavior Interventionist emailed the School team and informed them the Parent was not requesting a reevaluation, but would like the BIP reviewed with the IEP team. They stated the Parent's main concerns were the Student's safety, the safety of others, and the Student's behavior affecting the Student's or others' learning. The Behavior Interventionist asked the Special Education Teacher to contact the Parent and set up an IEP meeting with all IEP members. The School Psychologist asked whether there should be a separate meeting to discuss what was and was not working in the Student's BIP and determine whether changes were needed. The Behavior Interventionist responded that once the Special Education Teacher had scheduled an IEP meeting, the Behavior Interventionist would schedule a meeting with the Parent to go over the BIP before the IEP meeting with the rest of the team.

22. The Behavior Interventionist emailed the Special Education Campus Support and the Principal on January 28, 2026 and informed them the Parent had mentioned concerns about the duration of time the Student's peers were required to "miss out on learning." The Parent had allegedly been told by a teacher that when they cleared the room for the Student's behaviors, it often took two to three hours for the peers to be able to return. The Behavior Interventionist stated, "I assured [the Parent] that the duration documentation we currently have of each incident does not exceed one hour and that was one incident that was an hour. The majority are 1O [to] 20 minutes.

23. Meeting Notes documented a clarification meeting on January 28, 2026, during which the Parent, the School Psychologist, and the Behavior Interventionist discussed concerns regarding the Student's safety and potential learning disabilities. The School Psychologist clarified that the Student's average cognitive scores suggested that academic delays were driven by behavioral task avoidance, consistent with an ED exceptionality, rather than a primary learning disability. While the Parent expressed concern that classroom evacuations lasted up to three hours, the staff utilized duration data to clarify that no single incident had exceeded one hour. The Parent also reported physical marks on the Student and shared concerns regarding the safety of all students and the resulting impact on learning. In response, the team proposed reconvening the full lEP team to revise the BIP to improve safety and success, a suggestion the Parent supported.
Additionally, the Parent requested a change in transportation protocols from "hand-to-hand" to "line-of-sight" supervision.
24. Based on the Check in to Connect Daily Behavior Monitors documenting the Student's behavioral performance and specific incidents reported in January 2026, the following was summarized:
    a. Target behaviors included: safe hands, feet, and objects, staying in the assigned area, being on-task, and using respectful language and voice tones. These behaviors were rated during each of 11 time periods or subjects of the day using a scale of happy (2 points), neutral (1 point), and sad faces (0 points).
    b. January 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, and 20, 2026: 82%, 76%, 75%, 71%, 64%, 81%, 68%, 62%, 86%, 60%, and 89%
    c. January 21, 2026: 85% - The Student was not feeling well.
    d. January 22 and 23, 2026: 95%, and 100%
    e. January 27, 2026: 86% - When asked to stay in their seat, the Student called staff a name, hit a peer, and knocked over a desk and chair. The room was cleared for six minutes.
    f. January 30, 2026: 86%
25. Child Study Team Notes dated February 4, 2026 listed the following:
    a. January 14, 2026: The Parent requested the FBA be redone due to concerns with safety and the perception that the Previous School "did not do it well." The last one was presumably completed in 2023. It was noted the current BIP would be reviewed.
    b. January 28, 2026: The Behavior Interventionist reached out to the Parent to discuss their concerns.
26. A February 5, 2026 transportation incident report documented an incident involving the Student when being transported home from the School. The Student reportedly wanted to sit in the front seat of the van and was denied. The Student began yelling, cursing at the driver, and kicking the seat in front of him. This behavior continued throughout the route.

27. On February 6, 2026, the Behavior Interventionist emailed the Parent to apologize for the delay in sending an ABC data sheet. They said they had been out the previous day and not been provided documentation of an incident occurring on February 4, 2026. The Parent replied they had spoken to the Special Education Teacher on February 4, 2026 and was told the Special Education Teacher was going to send all behavioral incident reports for the Student to the Parent, but the Parent had not received them yet. The Parent stated, "This email will be my formal request," and asked for the following documents for the Student:

    a. Copies of all behavioral incident reports, discipline referrals, or behavior documentation involving the Student for the 2025-26 school year.

    b. Any reports, notes, or documentation related to injuries the Student had sustained at the School.

    c. All documentation regarding staff responses, interventions, or corrective actions taken following each incident.

    d. Any internal communications among staff regarding the Student's safety, behavior, and involvement in incidents.

    e. Any documentation regarding supervision plans, classroom management strategies, or safety measures in place.

    The Parent also mentioned they had been informed by the bus driver of two separate bus incidents within the previous two days, during which the driver had to pull the bus over due to safety concerns related to the Student being "verbally and physically aggressive." The Parent also requested those incident reports and to view the bus footage. The Behavior Interventionist responded, "It will take me some time to get [the requested documents] compiled," and said they would try to get the information to the Parent by the end of the day, February 9, or mid-day February 10, 2026. Regarding the bus incidents and footage, the Behavior Interventionist said the School had not received those reports, and the Parent would need to request them directly from the transportation department.

28. On February 6, 2026, the Special Education Teacher responded to a February 4, 2026 email from the Adoption Supervisor requesting information about the Student's behavior. The Special Education Teacher's response included three file attachments, which they stated were "large files." They said they were unable to print a compiled data report from the Check in to Connect program due to technical difficulties, although they were attempting to troubleshoot the issue. In the meantime, they sent all the daily Check in to Connect behavior data sheets to the Adoption Supervisor via email.

29. The Behavior Interventionist emailed the Parent on February 9, 2026 and included 12 attachments of some of the records requested by the Parent. The attached files included ABC behavior data, injury data from the School Nurse, daily behavior monitoring, and internal communications regarding the Student's safety, behavior, and behavior incidents in which the Behavior Interventionist was directly involved.
30. On February 9, 2026, the Parent emailed the Transportation Director and requested a copy of the incident reports from the alleged bus incidents on February 4 and 5, 2026, and requested a scheduled time to view bus footage. The Transportation Director responded the same day with an attached copy of an incident report from February 5, 2026. They also said they were "in the process" of obtaining bus video footage from the two requested days and asked for three school days to gather the information. The Parent replied the same day, asking for the second incident report for February 4, 2026. The Transportation Director responded that they had been unable to determine if a report for that date existed. They said, "It's important to note that not all incidents require a formal report. Sometimes, bus drivers and monitors will maintain open communication with families and discuss bus rides with them, which does not always warrant a formal report." They stated they would review the bus footage and, if there was no existing report, even though one was warranted, they would generate and send it to the Parent.
31. On February 9, 2026, the Special Education Teacher emailed the Parent copies of emails regarding the Student, the Student's break card, and other behavior management strategies used in the classroom. This was in response to the Parent's records request.
32. On February 10, 2026, the Transportation Director emailed the Parent and told them they had not yet received the requested videos. However, the videos were "in the queue," and they expected to have them within the three school days they originally promised the Parent. Regarding the February 4, 2026 bus incident, it was reported the Student started cussing and refusing to sit down after they were told to put toys away. The Student's seat was moved as an intervention.
33. On February 11, 2026, the Transportation Director emailed the Parent and told them that per the Parent's request, bus video footage had been reviewed from the Student's afternoon rides on February 4 and 5, 2026. They stated, "The behavior observed was minor in nature and was appropriately managed by the bus driver and bus monitor at the time." Additionally, the Transportation Director informed the Parent that the video footage was "exclusive property" of the private bus company, and due to the presence of other students on the bus and the LEA not owning the rights to the footage, they were unable to release or share the video recordings.
34. In a February 17, 2026 email to the Special Education Campus Support, the School Counselor documented they had seen the Student 24 times weekly for 30 minutes each time between November 4, [2025] and February 10, [2026].

35. Based on the Check in to Connect Daily Behavior Monitors documenting the Student's behavioral performance and specific incidents reported in February 2026, the following was summarized:
    a. Target behaviors included: keeping hands, feet, and objects safe, staying in the assigned area, staying on-task, and using respectful language and tone. These behaviors were rated during each of 11 time periods or subjects of the day using a scale of happy (2 points), neutral (1 point), and sad faces (0 points).
    b. February 2, 3, and 4, 2026: 53%, 79%, and 71%.
36. A 2025-26 Attendance Profile for the Student's time in the PBS program showed three absences and two tardies between November 12, 2025 and January 29, 2026.
37. A 2025-26 Student Discipline Profile report printed on February 13, 2026 was blank.
38. An undated letter from the Previous School Principal indicated a response to a February 6, 2026 request for records from the Parent. The Previous School Principal noted that they attempted not to duplicate records furnished by the School from whom the original records request was made. They also noted the following:
    a. Behavioral incident reports, discipline referrals, or other behavior documentation: The Student reportedly had zero incident reports during their time at the Previous School.
    b. Reports, notes, or documentation related to injuries the Student sustained at school: These records could be found in the documentation maintained by the School Nurse and provided by the School on February 9, 2026.
    c. Documentation regarding staff responses, interventions, or corrective actions taken following behavior incidents: "All items considered interventions are laid out in the [S]tudent's [BIP], included in the [S]tudent's IEP. Those documents may be accessed through [the online parent portal]."
    d. Internal communications regarding the Student's safety, behavior, and involvement in incidents: The Previous School had no education records responsive to this request. However, they attached behavior data summary information.
    e. Documentation regarding supervision plans, classroom management strategies, or safety measures: The Previous School attached daily teacher lesson plan examples.
39. The Special Education Contact Log for the 2025-26 school year documented the following relevant communications:
    a. October 16, 2025: The first quarter progress report was mailed home.
    b. January 14, 2026: The Behavior Interventionist spoke to the Parent regarding their concerns. They notified the Parent they would speak to the Child Study Team and reach back out to the Parent. They also explained how the Student could still score "decent" on their daily behavior sheet even when the Student engaged in "bigger" incidents.

c. January 15, 2026: The Behavior Interventionist emailed the Parent to inform them they would be sending ABC data sheets for "bigger behavior."

d. January 21, 2026: The Behavior Interventionist emailed back and forth with the Parent to schedule a meeting to discuss the Parent's concerns.

e. January 28, 2026: The Behavior Interventionist spoke with the Parent about their concerns, clarified their desired outcomes, and explained current data. The Parent reportedly stated they were not requesting a reevaluation, but did agree that an IEP team meeting to review the BIP would be helpful.

f. February 17, 2026: The Behavior Interventionist emailed the Parent the requested incident information from December 10, 2025 where the Student was injured at the School. On the same date the Behavior Interventionist also emailed the Parent the one bus incident on file.

40. On February 20, 2026, the Parent sent an email to the Complaint Investigator, attaching 12 documents they claimed were the LEA's "response to [their] records request," which included six files of data sheets, data from the School Nurse, Child Study Team notes, meeting notes, the Student's contact log, and two internal communication files. The Parent also noted that from November 25 [2025] to the present date, the Student had over 15 behavioral incidents, yet the Child Study Team met only once to discuss the Student's safety and behavior, prompting the Parent's concerns.

41. The School Nurse's documentation covering the 2025-26 school year provided detailed records of physical injuries and subsequent medical assessments. Specific relevant incidents were documented as follows:

a. Head traumas and injuries: The logs confirmed multiple instances of head and facial injuries. Specifically, on November 20, 2025, the Student was kicked in the head by a peer, resulting in a hematoma. On February 4, 2026, a desk divider fell on the Student's face, causing redness and swelling near the eye and nose.

b. Bruises and scratches: Several logs documented injuries that the Parent characterized as unexplained. These included bruising on the upper left arm and wrist following a restraint (ESI) on December 2, 2025, redness and a light scratch to the left ear after being punched by a peer on December 3, 2025, and multiple linear scratches to the face and neck caused by a peer on January 8 and 13, 2026.

c. Notification of the Parent: The nurse logs consistently indicated that the Parent was notified via telephone immediately following assessments.

Parent Interview

42. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Parent explained they sought access to written documentation of behaviors the Student had exhibited while attending the School. They noted the Student had 20 incidents since enrolling at the School in November 2025. The Parent recalled receiving verbal reports via phone call from the Special Education Teacher about the incidents, including assaults, elopement, and difficulties with regulation, but the Student's daily behavioral sheets did not reflect these events.

43. The Parent noted the Student came home with "unexplained bruises," and they became concerned with the Student's safety. They reported the Student had a chair thrown at their head, and added the Student bit other students to the point it drew blood. The Parent noted that while the School Nurse called to report "head traumas," the School failed to provide written reports reflecting those calls. When the Parent requested documentation of these incidents, they reportedly received the "runaround."

44. On January 14, 2026, the Parent reportedly made a formal request for documentation from the School and the Previous School, including a "data report of daily behavior." The Special Education Teacher allegedly informed the Parent that a specific data report could not be produced because the "system [was] broken" or "messed up." However, the Parent confirmed they began receiving daily behavior sheets from the School on January 16, 2026, but wanted reports from the computer system showing data, such as how many times the Student was redirected that month. The Parent also reported receiving records from the Previous School on February 26, 2026, but noted these records lacked daily behavioral sheets and internal communications regarding staff interventions.

45. The Parent requested to view bus video footage following incidents on February 4 and 5, 2026, where the Student allegedly kicked, screamed, was physically and verbally aggressive, and "attacked" other students, requiring the bus to be pulled over three times. The Transportation Director reportedly denied the Parent's request to view the video footage, citing privacy concerns, and provided only a "synopsis" of the February 5 incident, of which the Parent had already received a handwritten report from the bus driver.

46. The Parent alleged that the Student's learning environment was inappropriate, noting the Student's desk was placed facing a file cabinet with tape around its perimeter. The Parent characterized this desk arrangement as "seclusion" and stated it was not a requirement found in the Student's IEP or BIP. The Parent also expressed concern that the Student was "missing out on instructional time" because the classroom was frequently evacuated due to behavioral incidents. It was not specified whether these incidents were based on the Student's or others' behavior.

    a. The Parent provided photographs showing the Student's desk facing the side of a file cabinet in a classroom. Another table with student work and a chair was visible to the right of the Student's desk at the front of the same file cabinet. On the side of the file cabinet were visual cues for the Student. On the floor, blue tape marked a designated area. Other photographs provided showed several visual tools, cues, and schedules throughout the classroom.

47. The Parent also asserted that the LEA was not following the Student's IEP because it was not de-escalating the Student and was only writing up incidents after they occurred. The Parent also alleged that the BIP was not being followed or was insufficient, specifically noting that biting other students was a "new behavior" that had not been previously addressed in the BIP.
48. The Parent stated they requested an IEP meeting in January 2026 to address safety concerns, including the Student biting others and being "attacked" by peers. An IEP meeting scheduled for February 12, 2026, was canceled by the Special Education Teacher on February 11, 2026. The Parent noted the meeting was rescheduled for March 10, 2026.
49. Regarding academic progress, the Parent stated the Student is "way academically behind" and believes the School's focus on behavior, driven by an ED label, may be overlooking a "specific learning disability." The Parent also expressed concern that the Student would not "cooperate or do [their] work" unless provided with toys, a practice they wished to have removed from the IEP.

Behavior Interventionist Interview

50. The Behavior Interventionist reportedly received a records request from the Parent on February 6, 2026 and they said they sent the requested records to the Parent via attachments on February 9, 2026. No documents were withheld or deemed to be outside the scope of the educational record during this process. The Behavior Interventionist reported the Parent expressed frustration to them, reporting that they had previously asked the Special Education Teacher for the records, but felt the information was not provided in a timely fashion
51. The Behavior Interventionist stated their role was to provide crisis intervention and regulation support when the Student reached "peak behavior" or became escalated. The School utilized "ABC behavior data," which included anecdotal tracking of incident duration and specific witnessed behaviors, for significant behavioral events. The Student also used a daily monitor, managed by the Special Education Teacher, to track progress.
52. The Behavior Interventionist believed the Student's behavior was "trending in the right direction" since transitioning to the School in early November 2025. Fewer high-intensity behaviors, such as physical aggression, property destruction, and elopement, were observed during the Student's time at the School compared to previous data. The Behavior Interventionist's communication with the Parent occurred primarily regarding the "ABC data sheets" for large-scale or concerning behaviors.

Previous Special Education Teacher Interview

53. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Previous Special Education Teacher stated the Student was in their classroom from the beginning of the 2025-26 school year until approximately the end of October 2025. During this period, the Parent never requested to inspect or obtain copies of the Student's educational records. The Special Education Teacher and the Previous Principal clarified that during the Student's time at the Previous School, the Parent was not the legal educational decision maker (LEDM) or the official educational advocate. Furthermore, the Previous Special Education Teacher noted that they would only report behavioral data or provide records to an individual once their status as an educational advocate was verified.

54. The Previous Special Education Teacher described the delivery of IEP services at the Previous School as including break areas, calm-down zones, visual schedules, and "first-then" schedules.

55. The Previous Special Education Teacher asserted the Student was making progress toward their goals during their enrollment. "Really good behaviors" and data indicating readiness were cited by the Previous Special Education Teacher as the reasons for transitioning the Student to a different setting. They reported that behavioral progress was monitored using Check in to Connect data sheets and direct teacher observations.

Positions of the Parties, Applicable Regulations, and Conclusions

Issue One

Whether USD #259, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, provided the Parent with access to the Student's educational records when requested by the Parent. K.A.R. 91-40-25, K.A.R. 91-40-50; 34 C.F.R. §§ 99.3, 300.501, 300.611(b), 300.613.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-25, each agency shall allow the parents of an exceptional child an opportunity to inspect and review all education records and participate in any meeting concerning their child with respect to the identification, evaluation, or education placement of the child, and the provision of a FAPE to the child. K.A.R. 91-40-50 defines education records as any document or medium on which information directly related to one or more students is maintained by a participating agency.

This regulation also adopts federal provisions regarding parental access to education records and confidentiality, specifically 34 C.F.R. § 300.611(b), which defines "education records" as the type of records covered under the definition of "education records" in 34 C.F.R. part 99 (the regulations implementing the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974).

Further, 34 C.F.R. § 99.3 specifies that "education records" are those records that are directly related to a student and maintained by an educational agency or institution or by a party acting for the agency or institution. 34 C.F.R. § 300.613 adds specificity to these access rights, requiring agencies to permit parents to inspect and review any education records relating to their children that are collected, maintained, or used by the agency. Agencies must comply with parental requests to inspect or review these records without unnecessary delay, before any meeting regarding an IEP, and in no case more than 45 days after the request has been made.

According to the Parent, the LEA failed to maintain and provide behavioral data and denied the Parent access to the Student's records. The LEA responded that the position of USD #259 is that, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, it provided the Parent with access to the Student's educational records upon request. The LEA explained that the Student has been enrolled in two schools in the LEA for the 2025-26 school year. The LEA also explained that the Parent made some requests for records during the time the Student attended the Previous School, but at that time the Parent was not appointed as the Student's educational advocate and therefore did not have rights to the Student's educational records. The LEA's legal obligation at that time was to the Previous Educational Advocate, who maintained educational rights during their appointment as the Student's educational advocate until the Parent was appointed the Student's educational advocate on November 21, 2025 and obtained legal rights to access the Student's records.

In accordance with K.A.R. 91-40-25 and K.A.R. 91-40-50, the LEA's obligation is to provide parents with the opportunity to inspect and review all educational records relating to their child that are actually maintained by the agency. The investigation found that the LEA fulfilled this requirement by providing the Parent with copies of all behavior logs, nurse assessments, and daily tracking sheets currently held in the Student's file. While the Parent alleged they did not receive formal "written reports" from the School Nurse, the evidence confirmed the School Nurse provided the Parent with immediate verbal notifications following assessments and maintained internal written logs of those encounters, which were subsequently disclosed to the Parent during the records request process .

Furthermore, the IDEA does not require an educational agency to create new documents or formal reports that do not already exist in order to satisfy a parental request. Rather, the mandate is to provide access to the records the District maintains at the time the request is made. This is further supported by the fact that the materials submitted by the Parent as evidence for this Complaint were identical to the behavioral and medical records provided by the LEA, indicating the Parent was in possession of the same educational records used by the LEA to inform the Student's programming.

The Student's BIP explicitly established a quarterly reporting frequency to the Parent. The evidence indicated the LEA complied with this requirement by providing quarterly progress reports that aligned with the Student's IEP behavior goals. While the BIP required daily data collection and monthly team analysis, it did not mandate daily or weekly reporting to the Parent as a standard procedure. While the Parent engaged in informal communication regarding data on January 14, 2026, the evidence showed a formal request was sent to the Behavior Interventionist on February 6, 2026. The LEA responded to this formal request on February 9, 2026, within the 45-day time limit of either original date.

Although the Special Education Teacher reported a "system error" that prevented the printing of aggregated trend reports, the LEA fulfilled the request by providing the raw data (daily Check in to Connect sheets) from which those reports were derived. Providing raw data in an alternative format when a specific software-generated report is unavailable satisfies the access requirements, as the substantive information was disclosed. Additionally, the Parent acknowledged receipt of the Student's medical and injury assessments, which documented assessments by the School Nurse following head traumas and peer altercations.

Regarding bus incident footage, the Parent requested to view video footage from transportation incidents occurring in February 2026. Although the LEA denied the request on the grounds that a private company maintained the footage, state and federal regulations under 34 C.F.R. § 99.3 and 34 C.F.R. § 300.611(b) defines "education records" to include those maintained by a party acting for the agency. Because the private bus company provides transportation services on behalf of the LEA, the footage created during these services falls under this definition.

Furthermore, 34 C.F.R. § 300.613(a) mandates that an agency must permit parents to inspect and review records that are collected, maintained, or used by the agency.

In this instance, the Transportation Director obtained and viewed the footage to evaluate the incidents and subsequently developed a written synopsis for the Parent. Because the LEA "used" the record to inform its assessment of the Student's behavior and transportation needs, the Parent's right to access the record was triggered. Per the guidance in Letter to Wachter, the District is required to provide the Parent with the opportunity to inspect and review the actual footage, using redaction or blurring to protect the privacy of other students if necessary. Providing only an accurate synopsis, as seen in the narrowly applied Letter to Grotting, is insufficient when the record has been actively used by the District to make determinations about the Student.

In conclusion, while the LEA complied with the timely provision of the School Nurse's records and raw behavioral data, it failed to provide the Parent with the right to inspect and review the bus video footage from February 2026. Because the video was maintained by a party acting for the LEA and used by the LEA to evaluate the Student's behavioral incidents, it constitutes an "education record" under 34 C.F.R. § 99.3. The provision of a written synopsis in lieu of allowing the Parent to view the actual footage, even with necessary redactions for peer privacy, constitutes a violation of the Parent's access rights under 34 C.F.R. § 300.613 and K.A.R. 91-40-50.

Based on the foregoing, under IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is substantiated that the LEA failed to provide the Parent with access to the Student's educational records upon the Parent's request.

Whether USO #259, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, provided the Student with a FAPE. K.A.R. 91-40-1(z); 34 C.F.R. § 300.101.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-1(z) and 34 C.F.R. § 300.101 "free appropriate public education" and a "FAPE" mean special education and related services that are provided at public expense, under public supervision and direction, and without charge; meet the standards of the state board; include an appropriate preschool, elementary, or secondary school education; and are provided in conformity with an individualized education program.

According to the Parent, the LEA failed to provide the Student with a FAPE. The LEA maintained that, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, the LEA provided the Student with a FAPE.

The Investigation reviewed whether the Student's educational program and placement were reasonably calculated to provide educational benefit following their transition between settings. At the start of the 2025-26 school year, the Student was placed in a more restrictive, separate therapeutic day school program. An IEP and BIP were developed on October 27, 2025, specifically to facilitate the Student's transition to a less restrictive PBS classroom in a comprehensive elementary school. This transition occurred on November 3, 2025.

The Investigation considered the following factors regarding the implementation of a FAPE: adjustment period and implementation, response to behavioral escalation, learning environment, and academic progress. Upon the Student's arrival at the School on November 3, 2025, the LEA implemented the IEP and BIP as written.

Given that the baseline data in the October 2025 BIP was derived from the previous, more restrictive environment, a period of adjustment was necessary for the Student to acclimate to the new setting and for staff to observe the Student's behavioral trends in a less restrictive environment.

While the Parent expressed concern about "new" behaviors, such as biting peers, the LEA maintained consistent tracking through daily monitoring sheets and detailed ABC incident logs. The Behavior Interventionist's statements indicated that, despite these incidents, the Student's behavior was generally viewed as "trending in the right direction," given the transition. By late January 2026, the School team initiated formal discussions with the Parent and the School Psychologist to clarify concerns and adjust the BIP based on incident data collected since the Student's enrollment at the School. This resulted in a proposal to reconvene the IEP team to formalize changes to the behavioral supports.

The Parent also raised concerns about the Student's desk being placed facing a file cabinet with a taped perimeter. The Parent characterized this arrangement as "seclusion" and noted it was not an accommodation explicitly listed in the Student's IEP. However, the October 27, 2025, BIP, designed to support the Student's transition to a less restrictive environment, mandated the use of a "structured environment" as the primary antecedent-based intervention. This desk configuration was implemented as a strategy to meet the BIP's requirement for structure and to manage the Student's documented triggers for noncompliance, such as external distractions. Staff documentation indicated the Student benefitted from clear physical boundaries and visual schedules to feel secure and prepared.

While not explicitly detailed in the IEP, the Investigation found this desk arrangement was part of the ongoing implementation of the BIP's environmental modifications intended to support the Student's safety and academic focus.

Finally, although the Parent alleged the Student was "way academically behind," the LEA's data suggested that delays were primarily due to the Student's "task avoidance" behaviors rather than a lack of educational opportunity. The School Psychologist clarified the Student's cognitive abilities were in the average range, but behavioral noncompliance directly impacted academic output, which was an issue the BIP was specifically designed to address.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to provide the Student with a FAPE.

Corrective Action

Information gathered in the course of this investigation has substantiated noncompliance with special education statutes and regulations. A violation occurred in the following area:

A. Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. § 300.613 and K.A.R. 91-40-50 specify that each participating agency must permit parents to inspect and review any education records relating to their children that are collected, maintained, or used by the agency. Per 34 C.F.R. § 99.3, education records include those maintained by a party acting for the agency.

In this case, the evidence supports the finding that USD #259 did not provide the Parent with the opportunity to inspect and review bus video footage from February 2026. Although the footage was maintained by a private contractor, it met the definition of an education record because it was "used" by the District's Transportation Director to evaluate the Student's behavior and generate a written synopsis. Documentation and Interviews show the District denied direct access to the footage based on third-party ownership and peer privacy, which is inconsistent with federal guidance in Letter to Wachter.

Based on the foregoing, USD #259 is directed to take the following actions:

1. Within 15 calendar days of the date of this report, USD #259 shall submit a written statement of assurance to Special Education and Title Services (SETS) stating that it will comply with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) at 34 C.F.R. § 300.613 and

2. K.A.R. 91-40-50 by ensuring parents are granted the right to inspect and review all education records, including those maintained by third-party contractors acting on behalf of the District or records used by the District to inform educational decisions.
3. Further, by April 15, 2026, USD #259 will complete the following:
    a. Submit a written statement of assurance to SETS that the LEA's practices and procedures for responding to records requests, specifically those involving video surveillance or records maintained by private contractors, have been reviewed and revised as appropriate to be compliant with 34 C.F.R. § 99.3 and Letter to Wachter.
    b. Provide evidence of a training session for administrative and transportation staff regarding the definition of "education records" and the requirement to provide parental access to records "used" by the agency, regardless of physical location or third-party maintenance.

2. Within 15 calendar days of the date of this report, USD #259 shall provide the Parent with a scheduled opportunity to inspect and review the bus video footage from February 4 and 5, 2026. The District may utilize redaction (such as blurring) to protect the privacy of other students in the footage, provided the redaction does not prevent the Parent from meaningfully reviewing the Student's actions and the District's subsequent behavioral assessments. USO #259 shall submit documentation to SETS confirming this review occurred or was offered to the Parent.

Right to Appeal

Either party may appeal the findings or conclusions in this report by filing a written notice of appeal with the State Commissioner of Education, ATTN: Special Education and Title Services, Landon State Office Building, 900 SW Jackson Street, Suite 620, Topeka, KS 66612-1212. The notice of appeal may also be filed by email to formalcomplaints@ksde.gov The notice of appeal must be delivered within 10 calendar days from the date of this report.

For further description of the appeals process, see Kansas Administrative Regulations 91-40-51(f).

(2) If an appeal committee affirms a compliance report that requires corrective action by an agency, that agency shall initiate the required corrective action immediately. If, after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the agency shall be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following:

(A) The issuance of an accreditation deficiency advisement;
(B) the withholding of state or federal funds otherwise available to the agency;
(C) the award of monetary reimbursement to the complainant; or
(D) any combination of the actions specified in paragraph (f)(2)

In the Matter of the Appeal of the Report
Issued in Response to a Complaint Filed
Against Unified School District No. 259
Wichita Public Schools: 26FC259-007

DECISION OF THE APPEAL COMMITTEE

Background

This matter commenced with the filing of a complaint on February 12, 2026, by -------, the education advocate of -------. In the remainder of this decision, ------- will be referred to as "the education advocate" or "the parent," and ------- will be referred to as "the student." An investigation of the complaint was undertaken by a complaint investigator on behalf of the Special Education, and Title Services team at the Kansas State Department of Education. Following the investigation, a Complaint Report addressing the allegations was issued on March 31, 2026. That Complaint Report concluded that there was a violation of special education statutes and regulations

Thereafter, the district filed an appeal of the Complaint Report. Upon receipt of the appeal, an appeal committee was appointed and it reviewed the original complaint filed by the education advocate, the Complaint Report, the district's notice of appeal, and the education advocate's response to the appeal. The Appeal Committee has reviewed the information provided in connection with this matter and now issues this final Appeal Decision.

Preliminary Matters

A copy of the regulation regarding the filing of an appeal [K.A.R. 91-40-51(f)] was attached to the Complaint Report. That regulation states, in part, that: "Each notice shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect." Accordingly, the burden for supplying a sufficient basis for appeal is on the party submitting the appeal. When a party submits an appeal and makes statements in the notice of appeal without support, the Committee does not attempt to locate the missing support.

No new issues will be decided by the Appeal Committee. The appeal process is a review of the Complaint Report. The Appeal Committee does not conduct a separate investigation. The appeal committee's function will be to determine whether sufficient evidence exists to support the findings and conclusions in the Complaint Report.

Discussion of Issues on Appeal

The report identified one issue:

Did the school district provide the education advocate with access to the student's educational records when requested?

The report covers a variety of education records that were requested by and provided to the Education Advocate. The sole issue on appeal involves video footage of a series of bus incidents that occurred during the month of February 2026. The Education Advocate asked to view the video footage of these incidents.

The report found that the district denied the request to view the video footage of these incidents on the grounds that a private company maintained the footage, not the school district. The investigator correctly cited state and federal regulations under 34 C.F.R. § 99.3 and 34 C.F.R. § 300.611(b) defining the term "education records" to include those records that are maintained by a party acting for the agency. Because the private bus company provides transportation services on behalf of the district, the investigator correctly found that footage created during these transportation services fell under this definition of "education records." *Report, p. 31-32

Instead of allowing the Education Advocate to view the video footage of the incident, the Transportation Director obtained and viewed the footage to evaluate the incidents and subsequently developed a written synopsis of the incidents for the Education Advocate. The reason the district provided only a written synopsis of the incidents is because other students were involved in the incidents and so permitting the Education Advocate to view the incidents would necessarily permit the Education Advocate to also view an education record of other students.

The investigator found that:

> Because the LEA "used" the record to inform its assessment of the Student's behavior and transportation needs, the Parent's right to access the record was triggered. Per the guidance in Letter to Wachter, the District is required to provide the Parent with the opportunity to inspect and review the actual footage, using redaction or blurring to protect the privacy of other students if necessary. Providing only an accurate synopsis*, as seen in the narrowly applied Letter to Grotting,* is insufficient when the record has been actively used by the District to make determinations about the Student (Report, finding 45, p. 32)."

it is the language in bold print that the district finds objectional.

The question presented in this appeal is: What is a school district's obligation to permit a parent to 'inspect and review" the education records of their children when those records include personally identifiable information of other students?

This question has been considered many times with the same results, when analyzed under the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA). FERPA is a general education statute but includes special education students under 34 C.F.R. 300.611(b) which defines the term "Education Records" of special education students to mean the type of records under FERPA.

In its appeal, the district cites Letter to Grotting 123 LRP 25615 (SPPO 2022). This letter was a response to a complaint filed with the Student Privacy Policy Office (SPPO), the office in the United States Department of Education that regulates FERPA. This SPPO complaint was similar to the complaint submitted by the Education Advocate and appealed by the school district in this complaint. It involved an incident on a school bus involving more than one student. In that SPPO complaint the district provided an explanation of what happened, including that the student:

> stood up in the aisle and blocked the first set of students who tried to get on the bus. He pushed a 1st grader sitting next to him onto the floor and then leaned on her and kicked her. He threw paper at the bus driver. He took off his pants and his shorts and stood in the middle of the aisle. [The Student] stood up numerous times, moved seats, crawled under seats and stuck his tongue out at students walking by. He yelled "What the frick?" at the bus driver twice. He was singing "I am crazy" and "kitty high five" very loudly. He stood up, danced and sang. He pushed three kids in the face and pushed two more with his backpack. He pulled girls hair. He threw another item across the aisle.

The SPPO noted that

> FERPA provides that when education records contain information on more than one student, the parent may inspect and review or "be informed of" only the specific information about his or her own child. (In the case of an eligible student, he or she may only have access to the information that relate to him or her.) See 34 CFR § 99.12(a).
> Thus, when an education record contains information on more than one student, the parent may inspect and review or "be informed of' only the specific information about his or her own child, unless the information about the other student or students cannot be segregated and redacted without destroying its meaning. See 34 CFR § 99.12(a).

With regard to videos, if the video contains information on more than one student and concern an altercation, the parents of a student involved in the altercation could have the right under FEPRA to inspect and review the video, even though the video also contains information that is also directly related to other students, so long as the information in these records cannot be segregated and redacted without destroying its meaning... We believe that the District is in the best position to make this determination (Emphasis added).

What this means is that FERPA affirmatively requires school districts to make bus videos that are maintained by the district or by a party acting for the district, available for inspection by parents (even when those videos include images of other students) when the images of the other students can be segregated and redacted without destroying the meaning of the video. Often the question of whether a video can be so segregated or redacted is in dispute. In such case, the SPPO guidance counsels that "the District is in the best position to make this determination."

Before proceeding any farther, the Appeal Committees notes that on page 32 of the report, the investigator concludes:

> Because the LEA "used" the record to inform its assessment of the Student's behavior and transportation needs, the Parent's right to access the record was triggered. Per the guidance in Letter to Wachter, the District is required to provide the Parent with the opportunity to inspect and review the actual footage, using redaction or blurring to protect the privacy of other students if necessary. Providing only an accurate synopsis*, as seen in the narrowly applied Letter to Grotting,* is insufficient when the record has been actively used by the District to make determinations about the Student. (Emphasis added).

In its appeal the district asserts that whether the information was "used" by the district does not change the analysis because the regulations define education records as information that has been "collected, maintained, or used by" the public agency (emphasis added). There is no special additional duty for disclosure of records that are "used" by a district. Use by the district is merely a factor in determining if the record is an education record (See, Letter to Anonymous, 24 FAB 27 (SPPO 2020). The Appeal Committee agrees that "use" of information triggers no access rights that are in addition to the access rights specified in the pertinent regulations.

An important element in this "special education" complaint is that this special education complaint process itself is limited to allegations of a violation of special education laws and regulations (34 C.F.R. 300.153(b)(1)). FERPA is not a special education law. Although FERPA provides context due to the adoption of the FERPA definition of the term "education record" in 34 C.F.R. 300.611(b) and the inclusion of FERPA consent provisions in 34 C.F.R. 300.622(a), a violation of FERPA, by itself, is not a violation of special education requirements and so not subject to the special education complaint process.

The most relevant special education regulation that applies to this complaint is 34 C.F.R. 300.615. That regulation is titled, "Records on more than one child." It consists of a single sentence, stating: "If any education record includes information on more than one child, the parents of those children have the right to inspect and review only the information relating to their child or to be informed of that specific information (Emphasis added)." A plain reading of this single-sentence regulation is that when confronted with the situation in this complaint, where a parent's request to review education records includes information on more than one child, the district has two equal options: (1) permit the parent to inspect and review only the information relating to their child or (2) inform parents of the specific information in the record. That means there are two options.

This regulation cannot reasonably be read to eliminate the second option when, as in this complaint, the education records being requested includes information on more than one child.

In the conclusion portion of the report, on page 32, the investigator concludes that "Providing only an accurate synopsis (emphasis added), as seen in the narrowly applied Letter to Grotting, is insufficient when the record has been actively used by the District to make determinations about the Student. We have already clarified that the analysis does not change simply because "the record has been actively used by the District." What the Appeal Committee finds important in this part of the investigator's conclusion is the part of the conclusion that the district did provide the education advocate with an "accurate synopsis" of what happened on the bus (see also Finding 45 on page 26 of the report).

The Appeal Committee finds that under the specific facts in this complaint, that the district performed one of the two options that were available to it under 34 C.F.R. 300.615, when it responded to a request for access to information in an education record (that included information on more than one student) by informing the education advocate of the specific information that was contained in the requested record.

Conclusion

For the reasons stated herein, the conclusion in Issue 1 is reversed and the corrective actions are rescinded.

This is the final decision on this matter. There is no further appeal. This Appeal Decision is issued this 23rd day of April, 2026.

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST
UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #233. OLATHE PUBLIC SCHOOLS
ON FEBRUARY 12, 2026

DATE OF REPORT: MARCH 27, 2026

This report is in response to a complaint filed with the Kansas State Department of Education against USD #233 (Olathe Public Schools) on behalf of four Catholic private schools in the Archdiocese of Kansas City who enroll parentally-placed private students with disabilities. The complaint was filed by -------, Associate Superintendent – Student Services, at the Office of Catholic Schools for the Archdiocese of Kansas City. In the remainder of the report, ------- will be referred to as "the complainant,."

In addition, the four Catholic private schools operated within the Olathe Public Schools district boundaries will be referred to as follows:

- Prince of Peace Catholic School as "School A"
- St. Paul Catholic School as "School B"
- St. James Academy as "School C"
- St. Thomas Aquinas High School as "School D"

Finally, the parentally-placed private school students with disabilities at any of these four Catholic private schools operated by Archdiocese of Kansas City schools will be referred to as "the students" and the Archdiocese of Kansas City staff will be referred to as follows:

- Lorenzo Rizzi, Associate Superintendent – Student Services, at the Office of Catholic Schools for the Archdiocese of Kansas City
- Steve Perla, president, ADAC Advocacy Group
- Ariella Hellman, staff, ADAC Advocacy Group
- Kim Hammers, Director of Embrace
- Kristen Mcbride, Assistant Principal, Prince of Peace Catholic School

When a special education complaint is filed against a school district that is a member of a special education cooperative or interlocal, or that uses any other state recognized public agency to serve children with disabilities, the term " local education agency (LEA)" in this report will include the school district, the special education cooperative or interlocal, and any other agency that is recognized by the state as an administrative agency for public elementary or secondary schools and is serving the educational needs of this student." In this case, USD #233 employees its own staff to serve students with disabilities and is the responsible public agency.

The complaint is against USD #233 (Olathe Public Schools). In the remainder of the report, USD #233 will be referred to as "the Local Education Agency (LEA)" and the LEA staff will be referred to the as follows:

- Anjanette Tolman, Executive Director of Special Services
- Ashley Niedzwiecki, Assistant Director of Special Services 1
- Judy Martin, Assistant Director of Special Services 2
- Stacy Leatherman, Synergy SE Database Support Specialist
- Sally Boyd, Special Services Specialist

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) allows for a 30-day timeline to investigate a complaint from the date in which it was filed. A complaint is considered filed on the date in which it was received by KSDE. In this case, the KSDE initially received the complaint on February 12, 2026. The investigators requested and were granted a two week extension due to working with staff from both the LEA and Office of Catholic Schools for the Archdiocese of Kansas City and spring break.

Evidence Reviewed

During the investigation, the Complaint Investigators, Donna Wickham, and Nancy Thomas, reviewed all evidence and documentation provided by the LEA and the complainant received by March 20, 2026.

On March 9, 2026, the investigators interviewed the Executive Director of Special Services, and both of the Assistant Directors of Special Services.

On March 11, 2026, the investigators interviewed the Associate Superintendent – Student Services, at the Office of Catholic Schools for the Archdiocese of Kansas City, the President and a staff from the ADAC Advocacy, the Assistant Principal of School A, and the Director of Embrace.

The investigators interviewed the principal of School C on March 12, 2026. The principal of School B participated in an interview with one of the investigators on March 13, 2026 and the principals of Schools A and D provided information via email responses.

The investigators contacted staff from the Archdiocese of Kansas City and LEA by phone and email numerous times to clarify issues and request further evidence throughout the investigation.

Documentation provided that predated the twelve months prior to the filing of this complaint was allowed for consideration because of the systemic nature of the allegations. While all documentation was reviewed, the following materials were used as the basis of the findings and conclusions of the investigation:

Documents considered during the investigation:

- LEA Response, dated February 27, 2026
- Agendas and facilitator notes for the Private/Public School Meeting, dated August 28, 2025 and January 28, 2026
- Excel spreadsheet for private school students receiving services as of February 25, 2026
- Database of School C nonresident students whose parents declined special education services
- LEA Private School Participation Submission for 2025 – 2026: Consultation with Private School Representatives and Representatives of Parentally-placed Private School Children
- Kansas State Department of Education Consultation: Documentation of Private School Consultation, signed by principals of four Catholic private schools
- Documentation for one nonresident student parentally-placed at School C including an IEP (dated 10/28/24), emails between parents and resident LEA attempting to arrange speech services during the 2025-2026 school year, Ready, Willing, Able letter (dated 8/25/25, and Prior Written Notice (dated 8/25/25)
- Documentation for second nonresident student parentally-placed at School C including emails between parents and resident LEA attempting to arrange IEP services during July 2025 including learning that their advice for open enrollment was not accurate and using private insurance for related services
- Undated table prepared by the complainant titled, Chart depicts Number of Students in 2025-2026 school year

Emails:

- Email exchange between principal, School C and Assistant Director of Special Services 2 dated between July 29, 2025 at 2:25 p.m. and September 26, 2025 at 5:47 p.m.
- Email exchange between the principal of School B and the Special Services Specialist 2 dated between December 12, 2025 at 2:30 p.m. and January 9, 2025 at 9:37 a.m.
- Email from the Special Services Specialist dated November 6, 2025 at 9:37 a.m. to principals of four schools.
- Email from the complainant to Executive Director of Special Services dated December 8, 2025 at 8:29 a.m.
- Email from the Special Services Specialist dated December 11, 2025 at 1:05 p.m. to principals of four schools
- Email exchange among the Assistant Director of Special Services 2, Synergy SE Database Support Specialist and Special Services Specialist dated between January 8 2026 at 2:40 p.m. and January 15, 2026 at 11:52 a.m.

- Email exchange between the Assistant Director of Special Services 2 and principal of School B dated between January 12, 2026 at 1:23 p.m. and January 13, 2026 at 9:20 a.m.
- Email from Special Services Specialist to Assistant Director of Special Services 2, and Executive Director of Special Services dated January 21, 2026 at 3:09 p.m.
- Email exchange between the Assistant Director of Special Services 2 and principal of School B dated between January 25, 2026 at 2:44 p.m. and March 7, 2026 at 2:29 p.m.
- Email among investigators and Executive Director of Special Services and Assistant Directors of Special Services 1 and 2 dated March 13, 2026 between 10:15 a.m. and March 17, 2026 at 4:40 p.m.
- Email forwarded to investigators by complainant from principal of School A dated March 18, 2026 at 1:46 p.m.

Background Information

This systemic complaint is focused on the LEA's services for nonresident students with disabilities, private school child count, proportionate share calculation and the private school consultation on behalf of four Catholic private schools which are located within the LEA boundaries. The LEA's procedures and collaborations with these four Catholic private schools are being investigated in relation to adherence to IDEA and Kansas regulations and the LEA's stated procedures and practices.

Issue Investigated

Did USD #233 follow state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) for children parentally-placed at the Catholic private schools specific to providing special education services to nonresident students, reporting accurate private school child count data and calculating proportionate share funds following child find activities, and conducting the Consultation.

Although this systemic complaint investigates only one issue, there are three component parts of this issue that will be reported separately: 1) Was the LEA's Consultation timely and meaningful?; 2) Are nonresident students with disabilities who are parentally enrolled in the Catholic private schools denied special education services in the LEA?; and 3) Did the LEA conduct a proper private school child count with respect to students enrolled in Catholic private schools resulting in errors in the proportionate share calculation?

Component One

Was the LEA's Consultation timely and meaningful?

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.134 and state regulations at K.A.R. 91-40-42a provide guidance to ensure timely and meaningful consultation and require responsible public agencies to consult with private school representatives and representatives of parents of parentally-placed private school children with disabilities during the design and development of special education and related services for the children regarding the following:

a) a child find process that includes how parentally-placed private school children suspected of having a disability can participate equitably and how parents, teachers, and private school officials will be informed of the process;
b) the determination of the proportionate share of Federal funds available to serve parentally-placed private school children with disabilities including how the proportionate share of those funds was calculated;
c) how the consultation process will operate throughout the school year to ensure that parentally-placed children with disabilities identified through the child find process can meaningfully participate in special education and related services;
d) how, where, and by whom special education and related services will be provided for parentally-placed private school children with disabilities. This will include the types of services, how special education and related services will be apportioned if funds are insufficient to serve all parentally-placed private school children, including how and when those decisions will be made: and
e) a written explanation of the reasons why the responsible public agency chose not to provide services as recommended if the responsible public agency disagrees with the views of the private school officials.

Under 34 C.F.R. §300.135 and K.A.R. 91-40-42b when timely and meaningful consultation has occurred, the responsible public agency must obtain a written affirmation signed by the representatives of participating private schools. If the representatives do not provide the affirmation within a reasonable period of time, the responsible public agency must forward the documentation of the consultation process to the state education authority (SEA). K.A.R. 91-40-42b defines a reasonable period of time as 30 days of the date the affirmation was requested.

Complainant Position

The complainant alleges in their systemic complaint that the LEA failed to share the amount of proportionate share funds available thus denying a discussion of how these limited funds could best be spent on services. Instead, the principals of the Catholic private schools all reported that the LEA presented that these funds would be allocated to salaries for the staff providing the services to students with disabilities at the August 28, 2025 Consultation meeting. The principals of the Catholic private schools stated their input was not solicited and they would like more input into the program design, especially related to where services are provided.

Local Education Agency (LEA) Position

The LEA responded in their February 27, 2026 written response to the allegations that they did provide the proportionate share calculations and allocated time in each agenda for discussion of the proportionate share calculations as well as to allow time for open discussion and an opportunity for all participants to provide feedback or ask questions. LEA staff acknowledged that, because of delays at the federal level, this information for the 2025-26 school year was shared at the consultation meeting as soon as it became available. They stated that to their knowledge, no private school representative or parent representative expressed any concern or disagreement with using the proportionate share funds to support the staff who provide the services to students attending private schools. The LEA staff indicated that their consultation with private school representatives is ongoing and that the principals of the four Catholic private schools often reach out with questions or requests followed by discussion and decision making.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

1. The LEA provided consultation agendas for meetings held on August 28, 2025 and January 28, 2026. Both consultation agendas included an agenda item which listed the dollar amount of the proportionate share funds available. Both agendas also included time for feedback and questions. The January 28, 2026 consultation agenda included time for private school representatives' remarks and questions. Handwritten notes associated with the August 28, 2025 consultation included the private school census count. However, there is no explanation for how the private school census count is used for calculating the amount of proportionate share funds available during that school year.
2. The LEA's practice is to combine the consultation meeting for special education with the consultation meeting for the Title programs. During interviews, the principals reported that the special education consultation occurs first in the meeting and, since they don't have input into how the special education proportionate share funds are spent, most of the meeting time is devoted to the Title programs where the private schools are able to decide how to spend those proportionate share funds.
3. The LEA staff and two of the principals interviewed by the investigators stated that the consultation meetings are focused more about information dissemination for the special education services, since the meeting covers all available federal programs and services available to private schools.
4. While each consultation meeting agenda allotted time for answering questions, the complainant and principals stated there was not adequate time to hold discussions make recommendations about ongoing practices and services or discuss building specifics.

5. The LEA, complainant, and building principals all indicated that they have regular and ongoing conversations about special education related to specific students.
6. The principals described conversations held during the 2025-2026 school year to clarify services and private school child count questions and were able to identify the LEA staff to call for assistance.
7. An email from the principal of School B to the Assistant Director of Special Services 2 on January 25, 2026 requested a re-examination of the delivery model for onsite speech therapy services. As a part of this email, the principal made the following request, "I went into our conversation believing you could change this model if you were convinced it was best. It sounds like there are additional layers of approval to make this happen. If you don't believe changing the model would be best for all involved, I would like to better understand why. If you do believe it would be best but don't think it will gain traction in the approval process, I would like to partner with you through that process to work towards change." The Assistant Director of Special Services 2 responded on January 28, 2026 stating, "As I mentioned in our meeting the next step is for me to meet with the [LEA partner school staff] and have a conversation with them. It's my plan this will happen next week. After the meeting occurs, I'll reach out to [staff at School B] and share an update."
8. On March 7, 2026 the principal at School B followed up in email to the Assistant Director of Special Services 2 on the status of the request and the Assistant Director of Special Services 2 responded later that day indicating that she would be meeting with the LEA partner school staff next week to "brainstorm sped services" and was hopeful that they would be able to come up with "a couple of options to share with staff at School B". The principal at School B indicated no response has been received with an update and the LEA did not provide an update to the investigators on the status of the request when asked on March, 17, 2026.
9. As an example the principals described abandoning their student improvement plan process and adopting the public school's forms and process after experiencing delays in the child find process when submitting their GEI data collected on their forms to the LEA for consideration during the referral process. The principals stated that the child find process has evolved over time in partnership with partner public school staff.
10. The principals stated that they educate their staff and parents about the child find process.
11. The principal from School B stated that they will be meeting monthly with their LEA partner school to discuss specific students who are experiencing learning or behavioral difficulties beginning in March, 2026.
12. In a clarification conversation with the investigators, SETS staff at KSDE indicated that the consultation with private school representatives was an ongoing process that included not only the consultation meetings usually held at the beginning of each school year or each spring but also through ongoing conversations held between the private school representatives and LEA staff.

13. Following the August 28, 2025 consultation meeting in which only the dollar amount of $51,915 for IDEA Private School Proportionate Share (3-21) was shared, the complainant emailed the Executive Director of Special Services on December 8, 2025 requesting information about how the proportionate share funds were used to service parentally-placed school children with disabilities in the LEA. However, the LEA did not respond to this request. The complainant believes this is an example of failing to provide timely and meaningful consultation with a private school representative.
14. The LEA staff stated in their interview with the investigators that they provide all students who are eligible for special education and related services with equitable services through an IEP regardless of whether they reside in the LEA or in another school district outside of the USD #233 boundaries. The LEA staff reported that they first spend the proportionate share funds to provide the required IEP services and then use state and local funds when the proportionate share funds are fully expended to continue to pay for the required IEP services.
15. The principals at two of the Catholic private schools indicated that they no longer make referrals for special education evaluations for students suspected of having a disability who live outside of the LEA's boundaries. The principals reported they have been told by LEA staff that those students, if eligible under IDEA, must seek any special education or related services from their district of residence.
16. The principal of one of the Catholic private schools initially refused to sign the written affirmation of timely and meaningful consultation until the LEA shared the amount of proportionate share funds that were available. An email from this principal to the Assistant Director of Special Services on September 19, 2025 stated, "Just a reminder I have(sic) been asked not to sign the SPED consultation form until we get our child find and proportionate(sic) share information." Documentation shows the principal signed the affirmation on September 22, 2025.
17. The 2025-26 Kansas State Department of Education Consultation: Documentation of Private School Consultation forms show that all four of the Catholic private school principals signed the affirmation of consultation forms. The signed forms were dated September 4, 2025, September 15, 2025 and September 22, 2025. One form was signed, but a date was not recorded. During an interview, that principal stated that the form was signed following the August meeting.
18. In the KSDE Special Education Private School Participation Submission for the 2025-2026 school year, the LEA reported that written affirmation of timely and meaningful consultation was obtained from all of the representatives of private schools within the district boundaries.

Conclusion

The IDEA is very clear that representatives of private schools are to be consulted during the design and development of the special education and related services which are to be provided to students with disabilities who are voluntarily enrolled in private schools by their parents. The responsible public agency is to obtain written affirmation from the private school representatives that this timely and meaningful consultation has occurred. It is important to note that the consultation may take the form of an annual meeting or multiple meetings during a school year. Regardless of how the timely and meaningful consultation occurs, the IDEA requires that the consultation must address five specific topics.

In this case, USD #233 held two consultation meetings during the 2025-26 school year. The first was held on August 28, 2025 and the second was held on January 28, 2026. Principals from all four Catholic private schools attended both meetings. In addition, the LEA and the principals reported ongoing conversations and email exchanges with the Assistant Director of Special Services 2 and partner public school staff centered around individual student services occurring throughout the school year.

USD #233 reported a practice of combining the special education consultation meeting with the Title programs consultation meeting as both are federal programs which require a consultation process. It is noted that these two federal programs have very different requirements for nonresident students who are enrolled in private schools within the district's boundaries as well as how the associated federal funds are spent. The principals stated that the August and January special education consultations consisted of providing information, little time for comments or questions and no time for discussion or decision making. They further stated that the majority of the meeting was spent on the Title programs consultation because of the ability of the private schools to determine how those funds were spent. USD #233 will update the 2026-27 school year presentation materials to allow discussion time. While not required, the LEA may want to consider separating the special education consultation from the Title programs consultation to allow time for meaningful discussion to occur.

The LEA provided documentation to show that written affirmation were in fact signed and obtained within 30 calendar days following the August 28, 2025 meeting from all private school representatives indicating that timely and meaningful consultation had occurred.

As stated previously, the IDEA requires specific topics be addressed during the special education consultation. The first requirement is to explain the child find process for students attending private schools within USD #233's boundaries. In this case, there is evidence to show that the LEA has a procedure for receiving referrals from private schools and that the private school principals are aware of how to make referrals for a special education evaluation for students suspected of having a disability and in need of special education services. While concerns were found in the practices during the referral process, the LEA is in compliance with federal and state regulations regarding having a child find procedure and ensuring the private school representatives are aware of that procedure.

The second requirement is to share the amount of proportionate share funds that are available to be spent and how those funds are calculated. In this case there is evidence to support a finding that the LEA did share the amount of proportionate share funds available with the private school representatives on the 2025-26 school year. However, there is no evidence showing that the LEA explained how those funds were calculated based on the private school child count and, therefore, USD #233 is found out of compliance.

The third requirement is to have a procedure in place for working with private schools when students are identified as having a disability during the current school year and how those students can access equitable special education and related services. In this case, there is evidence to support a finding that the LEA does have a procedure in place for providing services to private school students who are found eligible for special education and related services. Again, while there are concerns with practices of providing services which will be addressed later in this report, the LEA is in compliance regarding having a procedure in place.

The fourth requirement is to explain the types of services available to private school students with disabilities using proportionate share funds and what will happen to those services when the proportionate share funds are fully expended. In this case, the LEA administrative staff reported that USD #233 provides a free appropriate public education (FAPE) as equitable services to private school students with disabilities attending private schools within the district boundaries, regardless of where the student resides. LEA administrative staff stated that proportionate share funds are spent first when funding special education and related services to students with disabilities in private schools. When these funds are fully expended, USD #233 uses state and local funds to continue to provide FAPE to these students. Please note that the practices for providing FAPE to nonresident students with disabilities attending private schools within the LEA's boundaries will be addressed later in this report. Again, USD #233 is in compliance regarding the requirement to have a plan for the types equitable services available to private school students with disabilities and how to proceed when proportionate share funds are fully expended.

The fifth requirement is to provide a written explanation why the LEA chooses not to provide services as recommended by the private schools. In this case, the principal of School B spoke with the Assistant Director of Special Services 2 and requested speech therapy services be provided onsite at the Catholic private school as provided to School A and followed up this request in an email dated January 25, 2026. The Assistant Director of Special Services 2 responded that this request would be shared with other LEA staff and then get back to the principal within the next couple of weeks. However, a response to the request was never provided by the LEA, and on March 7, 2026, the principal again emailed the Assistant Director of Special Services 2 about the status of the request and, again, no response was provided as to whether the request was accepted or rejected and the reasons why. Because there has been no response in a two month period, the LEA has effectively denied the request without providing a written explanation. For this reason USD #233 is found out of compliance for not providing a written explanation in response to School B's request of January 25, 2026.

Based on the foregoing, USD #233 is found out of compliance for not including all of the required topics during consultations with private school representatives during the 2025-26 school year. Specifically, the LEA did not explain how the proportionate share funds were calculated and did not provide a written response to the principal of School B. These omissions resulted in the ongoing consultations with private school representatives not being meaningful as required in the IDEA. As such, corrective action is required.

Corrective Action

The following corrective actions are ordered regarding the Consultation meeting with private school representatives:

1 USD #233 will update the 2026-27 school year presentation materials to explain how the proportionate share funds are calculated. The materials will be provided to SETS prior to the meeting for feedback.

Component Two

Are nonresident students with disabilities who are parentally enrolled in the Catholic private schools denied special education services in the LEA?

Applicable Law

Under federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.13, an elementary school means a nonprofit institutional day or residential school, including a public elementary charter school, that provides elementary education, as determined under State law. The Kansas state law defines a private elementary school to exclude the education of children prior to kindergarten (K.S.A. 72-3461(c). As such, children with disabilities enrolled in private preschools are not eligible to receive proportionate share services; instead, these children would receive services from their district of residence through the early childhood special education program for children age three through five who are not age-eligible to attend kindergarten.

The Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.132(a) and Kansas regulations at 91-40-43 require that each public agency provide special education and related services to parentally-placed private school children with a disability in grades kindergarten through grade 12.

Both the federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.131and Kansas regulations at 91-40-43 require the school district where the private school is located to conduct child find activities to ensure students suspected of having a disability and in need of special education and related services are evaluated to determine eligibility. The cost of child find activities cannot be funded by the school district's proportionate share funds.

Both federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.132(c) and Kansas regulations at 91-40-43 require school districts to annually report the number of students enrolled in private schools who were evaluated; the total number of students attending a private school within the school district's boundaries who have been found eligible for a disability under the IDEA; and the total number of students with disabilities who are receiving special education and related services.

While some of the requirements are the same, there are significant differences between the federal law and the state law for how services are provided to these students.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.132(b) require school districts to develop an individual service plan (ISP) for each student with a disability enrolled in a private school within the boundaries of that school district so long as the necessary services are available under the district's equitable services plan developed through consultation with representatives of the private schools and paid for by the district's federal proportionate share funds.

Under federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.137(a), parentally-placed private school students do not have an individual right to receive some or all the special education and related services that the student would receive if enrolled in a public school.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.137(b) allow the school district to make the final decision with respect to the services provided to parentally-placed private school children with disabilities following the consultation with private school representatives.

If a student with a disability is enrolled by their parents in a private school within the school district's boundaries and will receive special education or related services, federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.137(c)(1) require that school district to initiate and conduct meetings to develop, review, and revise the student's ISP.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.139 specify that the services provided to parentally-placed private school children with disabilities may be delivered on the premises of private schools in a designated school district building, or at a neutral site. The school district, in consultations with private school representatives, determines where special education and related services are provided. In addition, the school district must provide any necessary transportation so private school students with disabilities are able to access the equitable services described in the ISP. However, the school district is not required to provide transportation outside of the school district boundaries. See also, K.S.A. 72-3462 for same under Kansas statutes, including the provision that "Special education services which are provided under this section for exceptional children who attend a private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school which is located in the school district may be provided in the private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school or in the public schools of the school district. The site for the provision of special education services under this section for an exceptional child shall be determined by the school district in consultation with the parent or guardian of the child and with officials of the private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school. This statute also clarifies that "No school district shall be required to provide such services outside the school district."

All Kansas school districts are required to follow both the federal regulations as well as the Kansas regulations. The key difference between the regulations is how equitable services are provided to parentally-placed students with disabilities enrolled in private schools. The Kansas regulations differentiate between the services which must be made available to parentally-placed private school students with disabilities who are residents of the school district where the private school is located as compared to the equitable services which must be made available to nonresident students with disabilities who are parentally-placed in a private school located within the school district boundaries. In addition, Kansas regulations further specify that the school districts must provide equitable services to gifted children who are residents of the school district and are enrolled in a private school within the school district's boundaries.

Complainant Position

The complainant alleges that nonresident students with disabilities who are parentally enrolled in the four Catholic private schools in the LEA are denied special education services because the LEA has adopted a blanket policy excluding nonresident private school students from equitable services without consultation. Because of this blanket exclusion, the principals reported that nonresident students are not referred for an evaluation in the LEA whenever a parent chooses not to seek an evaluation in their school district of residence. Even when students are evaluated by the district of residence, the private school staff are not regularly included in the eligibility determination or the development of an IEP. Private school staff only find out if a student was determined to be a student with a disability through an evaluation in the school district of residence if the parent chooses to share this information with them.

As context, the complainant provided an email from the Executive Director of Special Services of the LEA to the Assistant Principal of School A that preceded the twelve month investigation period. The email was sent when the parent of two nonresident students with disabilities enrolled at School A and sought special education and related services through the LEA. The email stated, "I have done some checking with KSDE and our own staff council. We are not aware of any new regulations placed on this service provision. As a district in the state of KS, we have always had the flexibility to service students who are not residents but attend a private or parochial school within the boundaries of [the LEA]. Many years ago, the [adjoining] school districts had a gentleman's agreement, and we did some of that. We began serving our own resident students only in approximately 2014 when staffing and transportation started becoming a significant challenge. At this time, we are not serving students who attend private and/or parochial schools if they are not a resident of the [LEA]. I apologize for the inconvenience. Should [complainant] have any further discussion or pieces of information that I am missing, please let me know."

Local Education Agency Position

The LEA responded that under federal law, parentally-placed private school children with disabilities do not have an individual right to receive some or all the special education and related services that the child would receive if enrolled in the public school. They assert that "Under the Act, LEAs only have an obligation to provide parentally-placed private school children with disabilities an opportunity for equitable services funded with Part B funds that the LEA determined, after consultation, to make available to its population of parentally-placed private school children with disabilities. LEAs are not required to spend more than the proportionate Federal share on these services."

The LEA stated in their interview that, while they are aware that IDEA and Kansas regulations allow the use of individual service plans (ISPs) for the nonresident students the LEA strives to do what is best for students with disabilities and offers equitable services through IEPs that provide FAPE for all students with disabilities who attend private schools within their school district boundaries, regardless of where the student resides. They assert that when the proportionate share funds are fully expended, the LEA uses state and local funds to continue providing the nonresident students with disabilities with their IEP services.

It is important to note that school districts must, at a minimum, meet the federal and state requirements. However, all LEA's have the choice to provide more than is minimally required.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The findings of Component One are incorporated herein by reference.

1 The LEA staff stated during their interview with investigators that they choose to provide equitable services through an IEP for any student with a disability enrolled in the four Catholic private schools and do not make a distinction between resident and nonresident students. The LEA staff reported preferring to hold higher standards in providing equitable services that provide FAPE rather than only providing the minimum amount and type of services allowed by state and federal regulations.

2 The LEA staff indicated that each of the four Catholic private schools is paired with an LEA partner school where the majority of equitable services are provided. The LEA has a bus schedule for providing transportation between each Catholic private school and its partner school. However, because of the number of eligible students, speech therapy services are currently provided onsite at School A.

3 The KSDE stated to the investigators that, to their knowledge, most school districts in Kansas write IEPs for students with disabilities who are parentally-placed in private schools within their school district boundaries rather than individual service plans. They reaffirmed that, at a minimum, all school districts must meet the IDEA and Kansas regulations but may choose to provide more services than are minimally required and may choose to spend state and/or local funds to provide services after their proportionate share funds have been fully expended if that is determined after consulting with private school representatives.

4 The complainant and principals reported that the LEA does not use individual service plans or IEPs at any of the four Catholic private schools to provide equitable services to students who do not reside within the LEA district boundaries. Instead, the parents of all nonresident students are told that they need to work with their school district of residence to conduct a special education evaluation to determine eligibility and, if eligible, develop an IEP that would be implemented in the district of residence. The complainant stated that the parents are also told they would need to transport their student to a public school in the school district of residence to receive the special education and related services required by the IEP.

5 The Assistant Director of Special Services emailed and spoke with the investigators on March 17, 2026 after discovering that "There are no students currently residing outside the school district boundary being served through an IEP or service plan."

6 The Assistant Director of Special Services also reported that no nonresident students were referred for a special education evaluation during the past two school years. However, records showed that one student from Missouri was evaluated by the LEA during the 2023-24 school year and that student was found eligible for special education services. This student is currently enrolled in one of the Catholic private schools within the district boundaries but the student does not currently have an IEP or ISP. Student records show that an IEP was never developed for the student and offered to the parent. The Assistant Director of Special Services acknowledged this was in error and indicated a plan to contact the parent of the identified student following the spring break and to schedule an IEP Team meeting to develop and offer an IEP for that student.

7 The Assistant Director reported interviewing the two school psychologists who work with the private schools in the LEA. These two staff confirmed that parents of nonresident students are told that services are only available from the district of residence. The Assistant Director of Special Services indicated that training will be provided to the two school psychologists and appropriate partner school staff to ensure that parents and private school staff are provided with accurate information regarding the LEA's equitable services plan.

Conclusion

In this case, the LEA described its practice to providing equitable services as developing an IEP that provides FAPE to nonresident students with disabilities who are parentally enrolled in private schools within the LEA's boundaries. This practice is a result of the consultation described in Component One and is designed to support this practice. The LEA practice exceeds the IDEA and Kansas requirements as outlined in 34 C.F.R. §300.132 and Kansas regulations at 91-40-43. In consideration of this stated practice and the requirements of the IDEA and Kansas requirements there was likely confusion surrounding students who reside outside the LEA boundaries but are enrolled in Catholic private schools in the LEA boundaries.

Based on the foregoing, there is no evidence to support a finding that the LEA denied special education services to nonresident students with disabilities who are parentally enrolled in one of the four Catholic private schools. As such, corrective action is not required.

Component Three

Did the LEA conduct a proper private school child count with respect to students enrolled in Catholic private schools resulting in errors in the proportionate share calculation?

Applicable Law

Under 34 C.F.R. §300.131 and Kansas regulations at K.A.R. 91-40-42, each responsible public agency must conduct child find activities to locate, identify, and evaluate all children with disabilities who are enrolled by their parents in private, including religious, elementary schools and secondary schools located within the school district's boundaries. The design of the child find activities must ensure the equitable participation of the parentally-placed private school children and result in an accurate count of these children. The child find activities must be similar to those for public school children regardless of whether the student resides in another school district within the state or resides outside of the state. Procedures for conducting child find activities are determined following the timely and meaningful consultation with private school representatives.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.132(c) requires each responsible public agency to annually submit data to the SEA related to the responsible public agency's records of:

a) the number of parentally-placed private school children evaluated each school year,
b) the total number of parentally-placed private school children determined to be children with disabilities within the school district's boundaries, and
c) the number of parentally-placed private school children who receive equitable services.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.133(b) describe the process for calculating the proportionate amount of federal funds to be used for delivering equitable services for parentally-placed private school children with disabilities. K.A.R. 91-42(b)(1) requires every responsible public agency to provide the state education authority with a count of the number of parentally-placed private school children with disabilities attending private schools located in the boundaries of the responsible public agency based upon data collected and maintained by the responsible public agency the last Friday in October and December 1 of each school year. This annual private school child count must be used to determine the amount of federal funds that the responsible public agency must spend on providing special education and related services to parentally-placed private school children with disabilities during the next fiscal year.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.133(d) state that responsible public agencies may choose to use state and local funds to supplement, but in no case supplant, the proportionate amount of federal funds required to be expended for parentally-placed private school children with disabilities as described in the equitable services plan.

Complainant Position

The complainant alleges in the systemic complaint that the 2024-2025 school year proportionate share allocation was implausibly low in comparison to the 2025-2026 school year. The complainant requested but was not provided with an explanation from the LEA. The complainant also reported that, based on a review and comparison of data from the four Catholic private schools, discrepancies were found between the LEA's private school child count and the data from each of the four schools. The complainant believes the LEA is only reporting resident students who are receiving equitable services through IEPs on the private school child count which has resulted in a lower proportionate share of federal funds for the private schools located within the LEA's boundaries.

Local Education Agency Position

The LEA responded in their February 27, 2026 response to the allegations that email communications were sent to all six of the private schools located within LEA's boundaries from the Assistant Director of Special Services to obtain data for the private school child count. The email specifically asked for a "count of students with disabilities attending the private schools regardless of whether they lived within [LEA's] jurisdiction."

The LEA stated that it is not their practice to cease equitable services if all the proportional share funds for a given school year are fully expended. The LEA reported the proportionate share funds are routinely fully expended each school year and subsequently supplemented with state and local funds in order to continue providing equitable services to all students with disabilities who are enrolled by their parent in a private school located within the LEA's boundaries.

The LEA noted that they sought out guidance from the KSDE on this topic to ensure calculations were completed correctly.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The findings of Components One and Two are incorporated herein by reference.

1 An email from the Special Services Specialist to the principals of the four Catholic private schools sent on November 6, 2025 at 9:37 a.m. requested "a count of children with disabilities attending your school on Friday, October 31. This count should include all children determined to have a disability that are parentally-placed in a private school regardless of whether or not they are receiving special education or related services or whether the child lives within the jurisdiction of the [LEA]." The Special Services Specialist also requested the number of identified children who are age 5 and enrolled by their parents in kindergarten whether or not they are receiving services.

2 On December 11, 2025, the Special Services Specialist sent another email to each of the principals at the four Catholic private schools requesting data for the December 1child count. The email stated, "We ask that you conduct a count of children with disabilities attending your school on December 1, 2025 (you previously provided Oct. 31, 2025 data). This count should include all children determined to have a disability that are parentally-placed in a private school regardless of whether or not they are receiving special education or related services or whether the child lives within the jurisdiction of the [LEA]." The email also requested the number of children age 5 and enrolled by their parents in kindergarten whether or not they are receiving services. Emails between the Special Services Specialist and principal of school B document that attempts are made to ensure accuracy and that the LEA was responsive in responding to clarification questions. The principal at school B stated that they turn in the child count, but they are not contacted to reconcile any of the student count numbers or provided with a list from the previous school year to update.

3 The KSDE Special Education Private School Participation Submission for 2025-2026 reported that 40 private school students were evaluated during the preceding school year and 29 private school students were determined to be a student with a disability during the preceding school year. The LEA reported 56 private school students were receiving services from the LEA utilizing the proportionate share of federal funds on December 1. A total of 57 parentally enrolled private school children between the ages 5-21 were identified as eligible to receive equitable services regardless of whether they were receiving any equitable services. The LEA reported that three of these students were five years old and enrolled by their parents in a private school kindergarten regardless of whether they are receiving services. This data was compiled from the six private schools located within the boundaries of the LEA.

4 Although all students attending a private school in the LEA receiving services are to be reported as part of child count, the LEA staff learned and reported to the investigators that only students that reside in the LEA are reported for child count.

5 The complainant stated that the proportionate share for the 2025 fiscal year was $0 and the proportionate share for the 2024 fiscal year was $2,781 and the proportionate share for the 2026 fiscal year was $51, 915. An explanation from the LEA was requested but not provided to explain the year-to-year discrepancy.

6 The complainant provided a chart in the systemic complaint (Appendix D) that listed 63 students who had IEPs during the previous school year; however, no distinction was made between resident and nonresident students with IEPs. The LEA staff sought private school child count clarifications from KSDE on January 8, 2026. KSDE instructed that any student with a disability receiving special education services from the district where the student resides but is enrolled by their parents in one of the four Catholic private schools would be included in the LEA's private school child count used to determine the proportionate share. KSDE also stated that the LEA should report both initial and reevaluations toward the number of private school students evaluated during the preceding school year. Finally, private school students for whom all services were revoked would not count toward the private school child count.

7 However, any student who was exited or withdrew from services without written revocation of consent for special education services would be counted in the private school child count.

8 An email from Assistant Directors of Special Services 2 to the Investigators in response to clarification questions related to the private school child count responded stating, "There were no students listed that lived outside the [LEA] school district boundaries."

9 Additional research by the LEA into evaluations conducted for nonresident students found there were no students evaluated this year or last year who live outside the school boundaries, nor were there any requests for an evaluation. The LEA clarified that regardless of student residence, the district conducts an evaluation according to child find procedures. As noted earlier, the principals of the four Catholic private schools stated that they do not routinely refer nonresident students suspected of having a disability and in need of special education services because equitable services are not provided within the LEA.

10 For context, one of the LEA school psychologists recalled a student, who lived out of state, being evaluated in April of 2024 and discovered the student was found eligible but was not provided with equitable services.

Conclusion

In this case, the district did send out an email with directions to the principals at the four Catholic private schools to collect private school child count data in November and again in December, 2025. The LEA also sought out clarification from KSDE about the child count to provide clearer direction to the private schools and to ensure the private school staff were collecting accurate information regarding resident and nonresident students. The LEA and principals do not have a common tracking system acting as a check and balance or to reconcile any discrepancies. There is evidence that at least one nonresident student who is eligible for special education and attends one of the four Catholic private schools was not included in the private school child count.

It is noted that the LEA did not purposely provide inaccurate data in the private school child count.

Based on the foregoing the LEA is out of compliance with conducting an accurate child count and corrective action is ordered. Based on this finding the accuracy of the proportionate share calculation may not be accurate, but this was not directly investigated.

Corrective Action

1. The LEA shall prepare a document describing the child count procedures. The procedures shall include steps to preserve an accurate child count in the future. It will be provided to SETS no later than August 1, 2026.
2. The LEA will prepare a document describing the child count procedures to share with parents and school staff.

a. This document will be distributed during the first consultation meeting for the 2026-27 school year.

b. The purpose of the document and explanation of the steps will be addressed as an agenda item at the next consultation meeting.

c. This document and agenda showing it was provided at the first consultation meeting for the 2026-27 school year shall be provided to SETS no later fifteen days after the consultation meeting.

3. No later than August 21, 2026, the LEA will create a master list of students with disabilities to share prior to the last Friday in October and December 1 child counts. The LEA will provide SETS with a copy of the reconciled master list no later than November 15, 2026.

Summary of Conclusions/Corrective Action

Although only one issue was investigated, there were three components of that issue. During the course of the investigation, it was determined that the findings of fact and conclusions would be presented for each component in an effort to provide a framework for both parties to review and consider each of these interrelated components as they relate to the overarching issue presented by the complainant. Therefore, a summary of conclusions and correction action are also presented below for each of the three components.

COMPONENT ONE: A violation of 34 C.F.R. §300.134 and 34 C.F.R. §300.135 was found. Corrective action is required.

COMPONENT TWO: A violation of 34 C.F.R. §300.137, 34 C.F.R. §300.138, and 34 C.F.R. §300.139 was found. Corrective action is not required.

COMPONENT THREE: A violation of 34 C.F.R. 34 C.F.R. §300.131; 34 C.F.R. §300.132 and 34 C.F.R. §300.133 was found. Corrective action is required.

Right to Appeal

Either party may appeal the findings or conclusions in this report by filing a written notice of appeal with the State Commissioner of Education, ATTN: Special Education and Title Services, Landon State Office Building, 900 SW Jackson Street, Suite 620, Topeka, KS 66612-1212. The notice of appeal may also be filed by email to formalcomplaints@ksde.gov The notice of appeal must be delivered within 10 calendar days from the date of this report.

For further description of the appeals process, see Kansas Administrative Regulations 91-40-51(f).

(2) If an appeal committee affirms a compliance report that requires corrective action by an agency, that agency shall initiate the required corrective action immediately. If, after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the agency shall be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following:

(A) The issuance of an accreditation deficiency advisement;
(B) the withholding of state or federal funds otherwise available to the agency;
(C) the award of monetary reimbursement to the complainant; or
(D) any combination of the actions specified in paragraph (f)(2)

In the Matter of the Appeal of the Report
Issued in Response to a Complaint Filed
Against Unified School District No. 233,
Olathe Public Schools: 26FC233-007

DECISION OF THE APPEAL COMMITTEE

Background

This matter commenced with the filing of a complaint on February 12, 2026 by -------, Associate Superintendent – Student Services, at the Office of Catholic Schools for the Archdiocese of Kansas City. In the remainder of this decision, ------- will be referred to as "the complainant." USD 233 will be referred to as the LEA.

An investigation of the complaint was undertaken by a complaint investigator on behalf of the Special Education, and Title Services team at the Kansas State Department of Education. Following the investigation, a Complaint Report, addressing the allegations, was issued on March 27, 2026. That Complaint Report concluded that there were violations of special education statutes and regulations.

Thereafter, the complainant requested an extension of time to submit an appeal as the investigator's report was issued on the eve of Holy Week surrounding Easter. That request for extra time was granted. The appeal of the complaint report was filed on April 15, 2026. Upon receipt of the appeal, the LEA was notified and given ten days to respond to the appeal. An appeal committee was appointed and it reviewed the original complaint filed by the complainant, the Complaint Report, the complainant's notice of appeal, and the Local Education Agency (LEA) response to the appeal. The Appeal Committee has reviewed the information provided in connection with this matter and now issues this final Appeal Decision.

Preliminary Matters

A copy of the regulation regarding the filing of an appeal [K.A.R. 91-40-51(f)] was attached to the Complaint Report. That regulation states, in part, that: "Each notice shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect." Accordingly, the burden for supplying a sufficient basis for appeal is on the party submitting the appeal. When a party submits an appeal and makes statements in the notice of appeal without support, the Committee does not attempt to locate the missing support.

No new issues will be decided by the Appeal Committee. The appeal process is a review of the Complaint Report. The Appeal Committee does not conduct a separate investigation. The appeal committee's function will be to determine whether sufficient evidence exists to support the findings and conclusions in the Complaint Report.

Discussion of Issues on Appeal

The report identified one issue with three components. Although violations were found, the complainant has appealed the conclusions in all three components. We address each component separately.

COMPONENT ONE: Was the LEA's Consultation timely and meaningful?

The pertinent regulation Is 34 C.F.R. 300.134, which begins with:

To ensure timely and meaningful consultation, an LEA, or, if appropriate, an SEA, must consult with private school representatives and representatives of parents of parentally-placed private school children with disabilities during the design and development of special education and related services for the children regarding the following…"

Central to this issue is that the term "consult" is not defined in either the relevant statute or regulation. The common meaning of the word "consult" is: "To seek guidance or information from" or "to refer to for information." Webster's Random House Dictionary, (2nd Edition 1999).

In Questions and Answers on Serving Children With Disabilities Placed by Their Parents in Private Schools, 122 LRP 7109 (OSERS 2022), the Office of Special Education and Rehabilitative Services (OSERS) posed two questions related to this issue (Relevant parts of OSERS responses are included and emphasis is added with bold print).

> Question B-1: What is consultation?
> Answer: Consultation is a mandatory process that involves discussions between the LEA, private school officials, and representatives of parents of parentally-placed private school children with disabilities on key issues relating to the equitable participation of eligible private school children with disabilities in Federally-funded special education and related services."
> Consultation must be an ongoing process, not solely an annual meeting. See 34 C.F.R. § 300.134(c). Timeliness is critical to effective consultation and requires collaboration between the LEA and private school officials in developing a timeline and selecting dates for consultation.
> A unilateral offer of services by an LEA with no opportunity for discussion is not adequate consultation, as such an offer does not meet the basic requirements of the consultation process. Only after discussing key issues relating to the provision of special education and related services with all representatives may the LEA make its final decisions with respect to the services to be provided to eligible private school children with disabilities.
> Question B-2: What constitutes meaningful consultation?

Answer: IDEA does not specify what constitutes "meaningful consultation," but in order for consultation to be meaningful, it must be timely and ongoing throughout the school year. See 34 C.F.R. §§ 300.134 and 300.134(c). Establishing a timeline for consultation can help ensure that timely and meaningful consultation occurs throughout the school year. The timeline can include meeting dates and times as well as topics to be discussed. As there is no specific schedule for consultation, States and LEAs are able to determine the appropriate period between consultation discussions based on circumstances in their jurisdictions. The needs, number, and location of parentally-placed private school children with disabilities may vary over time, depending on the circumstances in a particular LEA in a particular year.

In Question D-1 OSERS adds:

Question D-1: What is the process for making decisions with respect to the services to be provided to eligible parentally-placed private school children with disabilities?

Answer: Timely and meaningful consultation must occur before any decisions are made that will affect the participation of parentally-placed private school children with disabilities in IDEA Part B programs. 34 C.F.R. § 300.134. Thus, decisions about services may not be made in advance or in the absence of timely and meaningful consultation. After timely and meaningful consultation has occurred with private school representatives and representatives of parents of parentally-placed private school children with disabilities, the LEA where private elementary schools and secondary schools are located is responsible for making final decisions about all aspects of the services to be provided to parentally-placed private school children with disabilities attending private schools located in the LEA. 34 C.F.R. § 300.137(b).

If the LEA disagrees with the views of the private school officials on the provision of services or the types of services, whether provided directly or through a contract, the LEA must provide to the private school officials a written explanation of the reasons why the LEA chose not to accept the recommendations of the private school officials. 34 C.F.R. § 300.134(e). (See Question B-9 for options available to private school officials to resolve concerns regarding the consultation process.)

Question H-5: When making a determination regarding the services that an LEA will provide to children with disabilities placed by their parents in private schools, could an LEA decide to provide services only to students from their LEA or their State?

Answer: No. Although LEAs have discretion to determine how the proportionate share of IDEA Part B funds will be expended so long as the consultation requirements in 34 C.F.R. § 300.134 are followed for all parentally-placed private school children, LEAs cannot unilaterally determine, prior to or in the absence of the timely and meaningful > consultation process, that the proportionate share of Part B funds for equitable services can only be expended to meet the needs of children who are residents of that LEA or State.

From this lengthy description, we discern from OSERS analysis that consultation is discussion. That interpretation is consistent with the dictionary definition of the term "consult." Meaningful is also an undefined term, but OSERS opines that "to be meaningful, the discussion must be timely and ongoing throughout the school year." In short, meaningful consultation requires "timely and ongoing discussion" throughout the school year. It does not require a school district to adopt any proposal made by a private school, regardless of how reasonable a private school may consider its proposal to be.

20 U.S.C. 1412(a)(10)(A)(iii) and 34 C.F.R. 300.134 require meaningful consultation with officials at private schools based on the assumption that an LEA will have at least one child with a disability enrolled by their parents in a private school that is located within the boundary of the LEA. If there is no private school within the boundary of an LEA the LEA has no obligation to consult or to spend any portion of its federal subgrant to provide any service under this provision. Accordingly, the consultation (discussion) requirement arises when an LEA does have a private school located within its district and there is at least one child with a disability attending that private school. In that instance there is an obligation for the LEA to spend a proportionate share of its subgrant under section 611(f) on those children. One way to do that is to develop a "services plan" pursuant to 34 C.F.R. 300132(b) to provide services to one or more students until the proportionate share is exhausted, at which time all services may end.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.137(a) clarify that there is no individual right of any student to receive any service under a services plan and (b)(2) the LEA makes "the final decisions with respect to the services to be provided…" In addition to this federal requirement, however, Kansas state law provides children with disabilities who are enrolled by their parents in a private school with far more than just the spending of a proportionate share of federal funds.

K.S.A. 72-3462, in pertinent part, states that

> Every school district shall provide special education services for exceptional children who reside in the school district and attend a private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school, whether such school is located within or outside the school district, upon request of a parent or guardian of any such child for the provision of such services. No school district shall be required to provide such services outside the school district. Any school district may provide special education services for exceptional children who attend a private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school located within the school district, whether or not all such children reside in the school district. Special education services which are provided under this section for exceptional children who attend a private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school which is located in the school district may be provided in the private, > nonprofit elementary or secondary school or in the public schools of the school district. The site for the provision of special education services under this section for an exceptional child shall be determined by the school district in consultation with the parent or guardian of the child and with officials of the private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school. Special education services provided under this section for exceptional children who attend a private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school are subject to the following requirements: (a) If the services are provided for in the private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school, amounts expended for the provision of such services shall not be required to exceed the average cost to the school district for the provision of the same services in the public schools of the school district for children within the same category of exceptionality; (b) if the services are provided for in the public schools of the school district, the services shall be provided on an equal basis with the provision of such services for exceptional children attending the public schools; and (c) if the services are provided in the public schools of the school district, transportation to and from such public school shall be provided by the school district. (Emphasis added).

These services are provided with an IEP, not a services plan (K.A.R. 91-40-45(c)). Each identified child attending a private school has an individual right to receive all of the services in the child's IEP (K.S.A. 72-3410(a)(2).

K.S.A. 72-3462 has the same consultation requirement as federal law. Like federal law, it says after consultation, "the site for the provision of special education services under this section for an exceptional child shall be determined by the school district." There is nothing in either federal or state law that requires any substantive standard which LEAs must apply when determining the site for services. The only requirement is meaningful consultation: discussion that is timely and ongoing throughout the school year.

The evidence presented in this complaint and explained in the complaint report supports the investigator's finding that there was more likely than not a timely and ongoing discussion between the parties throughout the school year about how services will be provided to children with disabilities attending a private school. To the extent these discussions may appear to lack meaningfulness to officials of the private schools, that appearance is at most, a procedural and not a substantive defect. That is so because the LEA makes available all of the special education and related services in an IEP to all of these students attending a private school located in the district merely upon request. There is no credible evidence that any eligible student attending a private school in this LEA, who requests services, has been denied services.

With regard to out-of-state students attending a private school in Kansas, they belong in the consultation requirement but they have no individual right to receive any special education services under either federal or state law, unless there are unspent federal proportionate share funds, which is not applicable to this complaint.

The evidence presented supports the LEA contention that its consultation process occurs every year and more often when requested. The issues remain largely the same year after year. With a long history of evaluating strategies for this group of children, an LEA is not required to enter the consultation process pretending it has no idea how it is going to evaluate and provide services to children enrolled in private schools.

The consultation process is much less than the "participation" process that parents enjoy when participating in an evaluation or in an IEP meeting for their child. Nevertheless, even when parents are participating in an evaluation or IEP process, school personal can prepare for proposals they suspect may be made at those meetings and arrive at those meetings with their own understanding of the issues that might arise (see 34 C.F.R. 300.501(b)(3)).

In Deal v. Hamilton Cty. Bd. Of Ed., 104 LRP 59544 (6th Cir. 2004) the court said that team members may come to meetings with pre-formed opinions as long as they are willing to listen and have open minds. However, when an educational program is pre-determined (no amount of information will change the determination of the team), a violation of FAPE occurs because it deprives parents of meaningful participation in the IEP process. Also see the same analysis in: R.L. v. Miami-Dade County Sch. Bd., 114 LRP 30126 (11th Cir. 2014), and J.P. v. City of New York Dept. of Ed., 71 IDELR 77 (2d Cir. 2017).

What may appear to officials of private schools to be predetermination may appear to officials of public schools to be the benefit of experience. One does not usually reflect on repetitive tasks before proceeding as usual. Likewise, this consultation process does not require LEAs to reconsider each year how it will proceed with evaluations and services with a blank mind, as if it had never previously considered the issues.

The consultation process does require LEAs to have discussions and be open to questions and proposals as to options that would be more beneficial to students or are more financially beneficial or practical to public schools than previous practices. The evidence does not support a conclusion that "no amount of information will change the determination" of these school officials going forward. The complainant does not provide a single incidence in which the LEA has denied a request from the complaint without discussion and where that request is clearly more beneficial to the LEA.

In the conclusion portion of the report on this component, the investigator concluded that the district held a consultation meeting on August 28, 2025 and a follow-up meeting on January 28, 2026 that included all five of the topics described in 34 C.F.R. 300.134.

Were these consultations meaningful?

There was nothing to indicate that the LEA refused to even consider the private school proposals, moving forward. Each year LEAs engage in extensive planning for the coming school year. That planning must be completed before school begins each year. It is largely impractical to change plans for a school year when that school year is about to start or is already in progress. The requirement for timely and meaningful consultation is to "consult with private school representatives and representatives of parents of parentally-placed private school children with disabilities during the design and development of special education and related services for the children…" The design and development of special education and related services for the children does not take place in August of each school year. It has to take place well in advance of each school year. When consultation does take place, the discussions need to be meaningful at the time they take place. Typically, that means the consultation consists of a discussion of how the design and development of special education and related services for the children in private schools will be structured for the next school year.

In its appeal, the complainant asserts that after the consultation session on August 28, 2025 private school representatives did not understand how nonresident students, including out-of-state students, could participate in child find and receive equitable services. From this fact, the complainant concludes as follows:

> This confusion goes to the core of IDEA's consultation requirements. Consultation must ensure that private school representatives have a meaningful opportunity to understand and provide input on how child find and services operate in practice. Where participants leave consultation without understanding how an entire category of eligible students is identified, referred, and served, consultation cannot be considered meaningful under IDEA.

While the Appeal Committee agrees that LEAs should strive to provide a clear delivery of content and information that minimizes questions, it sees no requirement under 34 C.F.R. § 300.134 that all participants leave a consultation meeting fully informed and without any questions. That could not possibly be a reasonable interpretation of the term "consultation" or even of "meaningful interpretation."

There is nothing in this complaint that indicates that when these consultations occurred, the LEA refused to "discuss" concerns expressed by the private school officials regarding the design and development of special education and related services for the future. In this instance, when the private school officials expressed a desire for additional consultation, the LEA scheduled a January 28, 2026 meeting. The complainant asserts that this demonstrates non-meaningful consultation because the school year is already more than half over misses the point that consultation is always prospective, not retrospective. Consultation refers to "discussions" about future processes.

The Appeal Committee finds that there is sufficient evidence to support the conclusion of the investigator on this component.

COMPONENT TWO: Are nonresident students with disabilities who are parentally enrolled in the Catholic private schools denied special education services in the LEA?

In this component, the investigator concluded that:

In this case, the LEA described its practice of providing equitable services as developing an IEP that provides FAPE to nonresident students with disabilities who are parentally enrolled in private schools within the LEA's boundaries. This practice is a result of the consultation described in Component One and is designed to support this practice. The LEA practice exceeds the IDEA and Kansas requirements as outlined in 34 C.F.R. §300.132 and Kansas regulations at 91-40-43.

The Appeal Committee agrees with this analysis. There is no evidence that supports the allegation that the LEA denies special education and related services to any child with a disability attending a private school who has an individual right to such services under either state or federal law. Rather, the evidence shows that the LEA meets the requirements of state law and exceeds the requirements of federal law.

Accordingly, there is sufficient evidence to support the conclusion in the complaint report on this issue.

COMPONENT THREE: Did the LEA conduct a proper private school child count with respect to students enrolled in Catholic private schools resulting in errors in the proportionate share calculation?

The complaint report found a violation on this issue because there was evidence that "at least one nonresident student who is eligible for special education and attends one of the four Catholic private schools was not included in the private school child count."

In its appeal, the complainant objects to corrective action required in the complaint report, saying:

> KSDE identified discrepancies but did not verify the child count or require recalculation of the resulting proportionate share. This reflects a critical analytical gap. IDEA requires not only that procedures exist for conducting a child count, but that the resulting count, and the proportionate share calculation derived from it, be substantively accurate.

The Appeal Committee notes the following:

Kansas administrative Regulation 91-40-51(f) permits the appeal of a complaint report on "any of the findings or conclusions of a compliance report." It does not permit an appeal of the corrective action in a complaint report. When a conclusion that an LEA is out of compliance is reversed on appeal, an Appeal Committee will rescind the corresponding corrective action but when a conclusion is not overturned the corresponding corrective action is not subject to appeal.

Nevertheless, the Appeal Committee reviewed the corrective action ordered in this issue and found that it consisted of the following:

1. The LEA shall prepare a document describing the child count procedures. The procedures shall include steps to preserve an accurate child count in the future. It will be provided to SETS no later than August 1, 2026.
2. The LEA will prepare a document describing the child count procedures to share with parents and school staff.
    a. This document will be distributed during the first consultation meeting for the 2026-27 school year.
    b. The purpose of the document and explanation of the steps will be addressed as an agenda item at the next consultation meeting.
    c. This document and agenda showing it was provided at the first consultation meeting for the 2026-27 school year shall be provided to SETS no later fifteen days after the consultation meeting.
3. No later than August 21, 2026, the LEA will create a master list of students with disabilities to share prior to the last Friday in October and December 1 child counts. The LEA will provide SETS with a copy of the reconciled master list no later than November 15, 2026.

The Appeal Committee finds that the corrective action is appropriate.

Sufficient evidence exists to support the findings and conclusions in the Complaint Report

Conclusion

For the reasons stated herein, the Complaint Report is sustained in full.

This is the final decision on this matter. There is no further appeal to the Kansas State Department of Education. This Appeal Decision is issued this 5th day of May, 2026.

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #412, HOXIE PUBLIC SCHOOLS
ON FEBRUARY 20, 2026

DATE OF REPORT: MARCH 23, 2026

This report is in response to a complaint filed with the Kansas State Department of Education against USD #412 (Hoxie Public Schools) on behalf of ------- by one of his guardians, -------. In the remainder of the report, ------- will be referred to as "the student" and ------- as "the guardian" or "the complainant." Additionally, -------' biological mother is -------. In the remainder of the report, ------- will be referred to as "the mother."

The complaint is against USD #412 (Hoxie Public Schools). In the remainder of the report, USD #412 will be referred to as "the Local Education Agency". When a special education complaint is filed against a school district that is a member of a special education cooperative or interlocal, or that uses any other state recognized public agency to serve children with disabilities, the term" local education agency (LEA)" in this report will include the school district, the special education cooperative or interlocal, and any other agency that is recognized by the state as an administrative agency for public elementary or secondary schools and is serving the educational needs of this student." Local Education Agency staff will be referred to In the remainder of this report as follows:

- Sharris Werner, Superintendent/Principal
- Amy Rickert, Director, Northwest Kansas Educational Service Center
- Casey Johnson, Classroom teacher
- Angela Shepard, Interrelated Teacher
- Norie Zerr, Paraeducator
- Macalee White, Paraeducator

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) allows for a 30-day timeline to investigate a complaint from the date in which it was filed. A complaint is considered filed on the date in which it was received by KSDE. In this case, the KSDE initially received the complaint on February 20, 2026.

Evidence Reviewed

During the investigation, the Complaint Investigator, Donna Wickham, reviewed all evidence and documentation provided by the Local Education Agency and the parent. The investigator interviewed the guardian by phone on February 23, 2026 and March 9, 2026. Additional individual interviews were conducted by phone with each school staff on March 9, 10, 11, and 13. An individual interview was conducted with the director of the special education cooperative on March 10, 2026 and the principal/superintendent on March 11, 2026.

The following materials were used as the basis of the findings and conclusions of the investigation:

Documents:

1. Local education agency undated response
2. Screenshots of text to general educator dated October 9 and 10, 2025, December 5, 2025, December 12, 2025 with no time
3. Printouts of ParentSquare communications dated between October 9, 2025 and February 16, 2026
4. Screenshot of text to special education case manager dated December 3, 2025, February 12, 2026
5. Screenshot of texts between guardian and special education case manager dated December 11, 2025 between 3:48 p.m. and 4:02 p.m.
6. Court Order in the matter of the guardianship of the student electronically filed with the clerk of the county district court on January 27, 2025
7. Screenshot of texts between the guardian and superintendent dated February 5, 2025 between 4:49 p.m. and 6:43 p.m.
8. Co-Guardianship document signed by the District Court Judge and electronically filed by an attorney on February 6, 2025
9. Letter titled, Formal Notice of Parental Rights, dated February 19th 2026 sent to the administration, faculty, and staff from the parent, notarized in the state of Colorado on February 19, 2026 stating mother had no educational decision making responsibilities once guardianship was appointed.
10. Notice of Special Education Meeting (NOM) dated for meeting on March 13, 2025
11. Individualized Education Plan (IEP) and meeting notes dated March 13, 2025
12. Prior Written Notice for Identification, Special Education and Related Services, Educational Placement, Change in Services, Change in Placement, and/or Request for Consent (PWN) dated March 13, 2025
13. Notice of Special Education Meeting (NOM) dated for meeting on February 23,2026
14. Notice of Special Education Meeting (NOM) dated for meeting on March 5, 2026; signed by mother on March 3, 2026
15. Notice of Special Education Meeting (NOM) dated for meeting on March 10, 2026
16. Copy of five spelling tests, undated
17. Copy of two math worksheets and video of one math worksheet

Emails:

1. Email exchange between general and special education teacher dated December 4, 2025 between 9:45 a.m. and 12:57 p.m. discussing implementing accommodations and refining the accommodations
2. Email from guardian to special education director dated February 15, 2026 at 9:03 p.m. stating that the parent does not have educational decision making involvement
3. Email from guardian to special education director dated February 15, 2025 at 9:18 p.m. stating concerns with the student IEP accommodations and progress.
4. Email exchange among superintendent, special education director and LEA attorney dated February 16, 2026 between 10:13 a.m. and 11:38 a.m.
5. Email exchanges between superintendent and guardian's attorney dated between February 16, 2026 at 2:58 p.m. and February 18, 2026 at 6:20 p.m. sharing court documents and discussing definition of parent per IDEA and Kansas regulation.
6. Email exchanges between superintendent and KSDE attorney A dated between February 17, 2026 at 10:59 a.m. and February 19, 2026 at 8:39 a.m. seeking state department consultation regarding definition of a parent when responding to guardian's attorney.
7. Email exchange between superintendent and KSDE attorney B dated February 16, 2026 between 11:44 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. seeking consultation about who qualifies as an educational decisionmaker
8. Email from superintendent to special education director dated February 18,. 2026 at 4:59 p.m. directing the IEP be scheduled.

Background Information

The subject of this complaint is a fourth-grade student at the local elementary school during the 2025-2026 school year. The student began schooling in the district and later moved to another state. Referral for special education was started in kindergarten but not completed when the student moved away. The student first became eligible for special education and related services as a student with learning disabilities in March 2025. By report, the student has received speech services in the past. The student's IEP dated March 13, 2025 reports, "[student's] reading skills are improving, but [student] still needs support in some areas. [Student] has difficulty staying on task and often needs help breaking down tasks into smaller steps, which can affect [student's] ability to complete assignments independently. While [student's] reading is improving, it is still below grade level, and [student] is not yet fully on track with [student's] peers. [Student's] grandparents are concerned about [student's] reading, and the team agrees that [student] still needs adult support to stay on track. Because of [student's] progress, [student] will now receive all special services within the regular classroom, through inclusion support and accommodations and modifications listed in [student's] IEP. [Student] no longer needs resource room instruction, and the team will continue to monitor [student's] progress and adjust support as needed." The student has one reading goal for decoding and seven accommodations that includes: 1. Materials read aloud for assessments and assignments, separate, 2. quiet setting for assignments and assessment, 3. check for understanding through scaffolding, 4. modified assignments, 5. modified spelling list, 6. scribe support or shared writing, and 7. Inclusion support for reading and reading in math."

Issues Investigated

Issue One

Did USD #412 follow state and federal regulations of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) when implementing the student's IEP in regard to physically touching/guiding/correcting the student during the 2025-2026 school year?

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.323(c)(2) require school districts to ensure that as soon as possible following the development of the IEP, special education and related services are made available to the child in accordance with the child's IEP. K.A.R. §91-40-16(b)(2) further specifies those services for which written consent has been granted as specified by law are implemented not later than 10 school days after parental consent is granted unless reasonable justification for a delay can be shown.

Parent Position

The parent wrote in her child complaint that "on 2/19/2026 [teacher] grabbed [student's] head and turned it without his consent. [Student] has a past history of abuse making such contact particularly harmful to [student's] emotional well-being that caused distress, fear, and emotional upset for [student]. This violates school safety policies and also student rights."

Local Education Agency Position

The Local Education Agency responded that this allegation reflects a general district practice concern rather than a failure to implement the student's IEP and does not represent a violation of IDEA The LEA asserts that the student's current and prior IEPs have no provisions addressing physical prompting, physical guidance, or staff physical interaction with the student. The IEP team did not identify behavioral or social-emotional needs requiring specially designed instruction, behavioral intervention, or physical supports. Because behavioral needs were not identified as requiring special education services, the IEP contains no behavioral goals, accommodations, or intervention plans related to physical prompting or correction.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

1. The IEP dated March 13, 2025 documents that the student works with the school social worker and sees a family therapist. The LEA states in their response that at the annual IEP meeting held on March 13, 2025, the IEP team, including both the student's mother and grandmother, reviewed the student's social-emotional and behavioral functioning and documented the following:

- The student had been placed with grandparents by court order and was adjusting to changes in his home environment.
- While the placement created concerns outside of school, these circumstances had not negatively impacted the student's educational performance or peer interactions.
- The student interacted appropriately with peers and adults, worked cooperatively with others, and demonstrated positive engagement in the school environment.
- Emotional needs were supported through general education counseling services rather than special education services.
- The IEP team determined that the student's behavior did not impede the student's learning or the learning of others.

2. None of the school staff working directly with the student stated they were aware of any accommodations in the IEP due to the student's trauma history.
   They additionally stated they had not received any special direction in providing correction or feedback to the student due to the student's disability status.
3. None of the school staff, principal or special education director were aware of the incident until it was made as an allegation in the complaint.
4. The guardians stated in their interview with the investigator that they had not disclosed to the school staff that the student had a history of trauma, nor requested any IEP accommodations or services due to the trauma history. They additionally stated they did not report it to the school because they did not feel they could report it since the principal and superintendent are the same person and they did think it would be treated seriously.
5. The guardians stated in emails reviewed and during interview with the investigator that as a result of the incident they had requested the student move to a different fourth grade classroom but were denied with the response that the other fourth grade classroom was at capacity. The school agrees with this interaction.

Conclusion

As suggested in the complaint this allegation may be addressed with the LEA as a general district practice concern. Following investigation there was nothing in the IEP, nor anything that was discovered through evidence review or interview that would suggest that this allegation is an IDEA issue.

Based on the foregoing, the LEA is found IN compliance.

Issue Two

Did USD #412 follow state and federal regulations of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) in regard to recognizing and providing parent participation to the appropriate person (biological mother) when making educational decisions on behalf of the child who had been assigned a legal guardian during the 2025-2026 school year?

Applicable Law

Federal regulation at 34 C.F.R. §300.30 and Kansas state statute at K.S.A. 72-3404 describes those who may be defined as "parent" on behalf of a student with an eligible disability for participation in IDEA activities. A parent may be a biological or adoptive parent of a child; a foster parent; a guardian generally authorized to act as the child's parent, or authorized to make educational decisions for the child; an individual acting in the place of a biological or adoptive parent (including a grandparent, stepparent, or other relative) with whom the child lives, or an individual who is legally responsible for the child's welfare; or a surrogate parent who has been appointed. If a judicial decree or order identifies a specific person or persons to act as the "parent" of a child or to make educational decisions on behalf of a child, then such person or persons shall be determined to be the "parent." K.S.A. 72-3404(m)(n)(o) further categorize the definition as "Parent", "Person acting as parent" and "Education advocate".

Parent Position

The complaint alleged that the school is not recognizing the complainant's legal guardianship status. The school staff reached out to the student's mother and invited her to IEP meetings. She has no parental or educational rights to be invited to IEP meetings or participate in making educational decisions for the student since the child is living with court-appointed guardians.

Local Education Agency Position

The local education agency responded that while planning the annual IEP meeting the special education case manager sought guidance from the administration to ensure the correct educational decisionmakers were invited to the meeting. After checking the student's school file the special education case manager discovered there were no clarifying documents of who was the student's educational decision maker. When the guardians learned the mother had been invited they emailed the LEA indicating co-guardianship and providing court documentation. Following receipt of this information, the Director of Special Education consulted with representatives from the Kansas State Department of Education. The LEA determined that the biological mother and father retained educational decision-making rights and IDEA required their continued inclusion in the IEP process, thus concluding that the biological mother, father and legal guardians should be invited to participate in the IEP meeting.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The findings of Issue One are incorporated herein by reference.

The investigation of this issue focuses only on the complainant's allegation that the school staff incorrectly invited the student's mother to the student's IEP meeting and included her input. References to the biological father in the Findings of Fact are included only to the extent that they provide context. Any findings should not be directly inferred to the biological father as this investigation was specifically focused on the mother.

1. The Notice of Meetings (NOM) dated February 14, 2025, for the March 13, 2025 annual IEP meeting listed the guardians, biological father and mother as educational decisionmakers for the student. The February 23, 2026 for the March 5, 2026 annual IEP meeting mistakenly did not include the guardians as educational decisionmakers and so the meeting was rescheduled for March 10, 2026 to provide notice for the guardians to participate.
2. The Court Order regarding the guardianship of the student electronically filed with the clerk of the county district court on January 27, 2025 documents, "the appointment of a guardian does not terminate a parent's rights." On page 7 of this order it is written that the biological father does not object to the co-guardianship appointment and the mother objects to the appointment of the co-guardianship order, however current legal matter(s) preclude the student from living with the mother at present. A consideration for this appointment is documented as, "Without being appointed co-guardians, Petitioners would have to continue to get his consent regarding the care, medical treatment and educational decisions for the child."
3. The Co-Guardianship document signed by the District Court Judge and electronically filed by an attorney on February 6, 2025 appointed the complainant and spouse as co-guardians of the student with "full power and authority, including all powers of guardians."
4. The guardians stated to the investigator that based on the wording in the guardianship paper "has the powers a parent otherwise would have" they believe that their guardianship covers educational decision making. They state that their attorney reached out to the LEA stating Kansas statute is clear that as guardians they have educational decision making authority.An email exchange between the superintendent and the guardian's attorney verifies this statement.
5. An email from the superintendent to the guardian's attorney dated February 18, 2026 at 6:20 p.m. responded to the assertation that the statute gives the parents the educational decision making as, "The court order does not say who has ultimate (emphasis added) authority to act on behalf of the student when the parent and the guardian disagree. It also does not state that the guardians have sole authority to make educational decisions. If the order is not clear on these things, and the biological parent is asserting the right to make educational decisions, the biological parent is in the stronger position (especially because the order specifies that it does not terminate the rights of the parent). The ambiguity of the order is that there is not sufficient clarity to determine who the educational decision maker is. If the parties disagree with that interpretation, they can go back to court to seek another order clarifying who has the ultimate authority to make educational decisions."

6. The mother sent a document titled, Formal Notice of Parental Rights to the LEA on February 19, 2026 that stated, '1"his letter serves as formal written notice that I, [name of mother], Do plan and request to exercise All Rights and to be inclusive in all educational decisions regarding the minor children [student] and [sibling]. I hereby request [LEA] to update me of all school records, including but not limited to emergency contact forms, student information systems, and health records. Should you require any supporting documentation or have any questions, you may contact me at the information provided below. I expect confirmation that this notice has been received and that the records have been updated accordingly."
7. The LEA staff reported that LEA's attorney reviewed the guardianship documents and in a phone conversation on February 20, 2026 "stands with the mother having educational rights".

Conclusion

In this case the student's mother has not terminated her educational decision making role or had her educational decision making role severed. The student has grandparents who serve as court appointed co-guardians. Both biological parents and guardians are defined as "parents" under 34 C.F.R. §300.30 and K.S.A. 72-3404. While one of the guardian's court documents acknowledges that appointing guardians allows the guardians to obtain care, medical treatment and educational decisions on behalf of the student without getting prior consent to each decision. This document does not state exclusion of the mother in educational decisions.

The superintendent correctly points out in the February 18, 2026 email to the guardian's attorney that the guardian's court orders do not appoint sole authority to make educational decisions. K.A.R. 91-40-27(c) supports the superintendent's assertion, "Unless a judicial order specifies to the contrary, each agency shall recognize the biological or adoptive parent of an exceptional child who is a minor as the educational decision maker for the child if the parent exerts the parent's rights on behalf of the child, even if one or more other persons meet the definition of parent for the particular child." On February 19, 2026, the mother asserted her intention to serve as an educational decision maker on behalf of the child. As such, in absence of any court documents both parties are educational decision makers for the student as no documentation was provided appointing sole or ultimate authority for educational decision making on behalf of the student.

Therefore, the Local Education Agency is IN compliance.

Issue Three

Did USD #412 follow state and federal regulations of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) when implementing the student's IEP in regard to assistance with a schoolwork (specifically spelling and homework)?

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.323(c)(2) require school districts to ensure that as soon as possible following the development of the IEP, special education and related services are made available to the child in accordance with the child's IEP. K.AR. §91-40-16(b)(2) further specifies those services for which written consent has been granted as specified by law are implemented not later than 10 school days after parental consent is granted unless reasonable justification for a delay can be shown.

Parent Position

The complaint alleged that the "school has not provided adequate support for my child's IEP needs, and staff have not responded to repeated requests for assistance. My child continues to struggle with a heavy workload at home. Despite multiple messages to the IEP teacher requesting help, I received no help. This has caused my child undue stress."

Local Education Agency Position

The Local Education Agency responded that on December 11, 2025, the grandmother contacted the special education teacher through the ParentSquare communication platform expressing concern that the student's spelling list was not being reduced consistent with IEP accommodations. The special education teacher consulted with the general education teacher, who subsequently followed up directly with the grandmother regarding the concern and believed the issue was resolved. Next, on February 15, 2026, the grandmother emailed the Director of Special Education expressing concerns regarding communication and implementation of IEP supports.

During a phone conversation on February 16, 2026, the Director discussed these concerns and explained that the upcoming annual IEP meeting would provide an opportunity for the IEP team to clarify accommodation language to ensure shared understanding of expectations related to reduced spelling assignments and homework modifications. The classroom staff maintain documentation demonstrating implementation of accommodations consistent with the current IEP, including modified spelling assignments and adjusted academic expectations.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The findings of Issues One and Two are incorporated herein by reference.

1. The IEP dated May 13, 2025 included seven accommodations: 1. Materials read aloud for assessments and assignments, separate, 2. quiet setting for assignments and assessment, 3. check for understanding through scaffolding, 4. modified assignments, 5. modified spelling list, 6. scribe support or shared writing, and 7. Inclusion support for reading and reading in math. All parties agreed that the only concerns were the modified spelling list and modified assignment related to homework.

2. A signed agreement form dated August 13, 2025 documents that the classroom teacher and special education case manager met to review the IEP at a glance for the student and discussed questions and concerns regarding classroom accommodations/modifications in the student's IEP in order to implement them with fidelity.
3. Paraeducator notes dated from August 25, 2025 through February 20, 2026 document their role in implementing the IEP accommodations.
4. One of the school staff stated that around October 9, the guardian had reached out via ParentSquare about the student's workload being too much. After visiting with the guardian the school staff stated they believed that there was agreement about workload and that accommodations related to workload were being implemented.
5. Emails between the special education case manager and classroom teacher during the first semester verify that the student's IEP accommodations are being used and then discussed adding a spelling pretest to improve the spelling accommodation.
6. The classroom teacher described in an email to the guardian and special education case manager following the December ParentSquare email that the student is provided a below-level list on Monday and given a pretest of the words. On Thursday, the student is tested with a paper/pencil test. On Friday, the test only covers the misspelled words, but the week's score is comprised of Thursday and Friday's correctly spelled words. The school staff stated that following describing the spelling accommodations to the guardian the guardian was assured that the spelling accommodations were made. Samples of graded spelling tests provided by the LEA and guardian show that this process is followed.
7. The classroom teacher also described to the guardian and special education case manager that the number of math problems are reduced and any reading assignments completed by Friday are accepted for the weekly reading grading. The classroom teacher described to the investigator that homework is not assigned. Instead weekly student work is assigned and students are provided time during the day to complete it, managing their own time to ensure it is completed by Friday. The classroom teacher stated that the student was one of many of the fourth graders working on managing their weekly workload. One of the school staff stated to the investigator that at end of day the student and a staff go through the student's "clip" and review what remains for the week and then to check with the teacher to "approve" what goes home since social studies and science rarely are completed outside the class day.
8. The guardian stated during the interview with the investigator in March 2026 that she contacted the school on December 11, 2025 because after reaching out on December 3 or 4 to discuss the spelling she did not believe the accommodation being made matched the what was written in the IEP. While she believes the student is making progress she does not feel the program is moving him forward. In regard to changes in assignments the student is being sent home with homework that is impacting evening activities important to family life. In fact, in regard to homework, there was an instance one Thursday that the student was made to work on it in class while other worked on a project and the student still unfinished work home and had no para support.

9. On February 15, 2026, the grandparent emailed the LEA requesting written clarification of the current IEP services and accommodations being provided; immediate communication from an IEP teacher regarding support strategies for workload and learning needs, a plan for addressing homework volume, classroom accommodations, and academic supports and a meeting to review IEP implementation and effectiveness.
10. School staff during the most recent IEP (March 2026) stated that the homework and spelling accommodations were explained to the guardian and they stated that the guardian verbally agreed that the accommodations were appropriate and needed not change

Conclusion

Based on the interviews and description of how the two IEP accommodations were discussed and implemented in the classroom and explained to the guardian it is found that the LEA did implement the accommodations and the Local Education Agency is IN compliance.

Summary of Conclusions/Corrective Action

1 ISSUE ONE: A violation of 34 C.F.R. §300.323(c)(2) K.A.R. §91-40-16(b)(2) was not found. Corrective action is not required.

2 ISSUE TWO: A violation of 34 C.F.R. §300.30 and K.S.A. 72-3404 was not found. Corrective action is not required.

3 ISSUE THREE: A violation of 34 C.F.R. §300.323(c)(2) K.A.R. §91-40-16(b)(2) was not found. Corrective action is not required.

Right to Appeal

Either party may appeal the findings or conclusions in this report by filing a written notice of appeal with the State Commissioner of Education, ATTN: Special Education and Title Services, Landon State Office Building, 900 SW Jackson Street, Suite 620, Topeka, KS 66612-1212. The notice of appeal may also be filed by email to formalcomplaints@ksde.gov The notice of appeal must be delivered within 10 calendar days from the date of this report.

For further description of the appeals process, see Kansas Administrative Regulations 91-40-51(f).

(2) If an appeal committee affirms a compliance report that requires corrective action by an agency, that agency shall initiate the required corrective action immediately. If, after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the agency shall be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following:

(A) The issuance of an accreditation deficiency advisement;
(B) the withholding of state or federal funds otherwise available to the agency;
(C) the award of monetary reimbursement to the complainant; or
(D) any combination of the actions specified in paragraph (f)(2)

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #262 VALLEY CENTER PUBLIC SCHOOLS
ON FEBRUARY 26, 2026

DATE OF REPORT: APRIL 2, 2026

This report is in response to a complaint filed with the Kansas State Department of Education against USD #262 Valley Center Public Schools on behalf of ------- by his parents ------. In the remainder of the report, ------- will be referred to as "the student" and ------- as "the parents."

When a special education complaint is filed against a school district that is a member of a special education cooperative or interlocal, or that uses any other state recognized public agency to serve children with disabilities, the term "local education agency (LEA)" in this report will include the school district, the special education cooperative or interlocal, and any other agency that is recognized by the state as an administrative agency for public elementary or secondary schools and is serving the educational needs of this student.

Evidence Reviewed

The investigator reviewed all of the evidence initially submitted by both parties and all evidence subsequently requested by the investigator from each party. The following relevant evidence was used to analyze the concerns in this complaint:

- The formal complaint submitted by the parents.
- The response to the complaint submitted by the school district.
- E-Mail correspondence between the parties
- E-Mail correspondence between the parties and the investigator
- The student's most recent evaluation
- The student's current IEP, including Health Care Plan

Findings of Fact

The findings of facts for each concern are those facts that are relevant to the concern and are based upon a review of the documentation and the correspondence with the parties, including supplemental documentation requested by the investigator.

Background Information

The student is a 7 year-old boy in the first grade. He was determined to be eligible for special education with an exceptionality of autism. He has also been diagnosed with mitochondrial myopathy, epilepsy, dystonia, dysautonomia, ataxia, immunoglobulin deficiency, fluid blood sugars, and adrenal insufficiency. He is non-verbal and communicates his needs to parents by taking parents to what he wants. His IEP includes a "Healthcare Plan" that says the student "requires close supervision, typically involving two to three adults to ensure his safety and to provide consistent redirection during classroom and transition periods."

Concern One

School personnel used "unsafe transportation decision-making and a potential failure to follow medical safety protocols."

Parents Position

in the complaint, the parents stated that:

On January 12, 2026, the student was picked up and transported by district staff for in person instruction. Shortly after pick up, the parents received a phone call instructing them to retrieve the student from a transportation bus barn. No information was provided at that time regarding the student's medical condition, behavior or safety status. During a subsequent phone call the staff stated that they were "trying to contain him" and that another individual might be contacted if the parent did not arrive quickly. The parent was not informed of who was supervising the student, what safety measures were being used, whether medical protocols had been followed, or whether a seizure or medical episode was suspected. Upon the parent's arrival, staff reported that the student had exited his harness and was lying on the bus floor kicking staff members. Less than 10 minutes after returning home, the student experienced a seizure. The parent asserts that the decision to transport the student to a bus barn rather than follow a medical safety protocol raises concerns regarding the appropriate assessment of medical versus behavioral presentation, staff training, safety decision making, and compliance with individualized needs.

LEA Position

The LEA acknowledges that the parent was contacted by the Director of Transportation on January 12, 2026, and asked to come and pick up the student due to safety concerns. At the time of the safety concern, the bus was within ¼ mile of the transportation center, approximately 1¼ miles from the student's home and 5.3 miles from the school (Wheatland Elementary). The student remained on the bus for approximately 15 minutes and then independently walked into the transportation center where he waited for approximately 5 minutes before the parent arrived to pick him up.

Findings of Fact

1. On January 12, 2025, an incident occurred while transporting the student to school. The student had taken off his securement vest shortly after departure and had started climbing on the bus seats and kicking at staff. Bus staff made the decision to pull into the parking lot at the transportation center since they were within ¼ mile of this location. The Director of Transportation contacted the parent and asked her to come and get the student since they were unable to safely transport him at that time.

2. Upon arrival at the Transportation Center, the student remained on the bus for approximately 15 minutes and then independently walked into the transportation center where he waited for approximately 5 minutes before the parent arrived to pick him up.
3. The transportation Director later reported that he believed that additional supports would be needed in order to keep the student safe on the bus.
4. The student's IEP includes numerous statements regarding his performance in school, and his need for adult supervision for safety reasons while in school, including:
    - [The student's] 's health conditions can be all encompassing and impact his ability to regulate, perform well academically, and attend school. [The student] struggles significantly with interoception and recognizing what his body is communicating, often placing him in a position of fight or flight making his prefrontal cortex inaccessible to him.
    - He requires close staff supervision, typically involving two to three adults, to ensure his safety and to provide consistent redirection during classroom and transition periods.
    - [The student] currently demonstrates the ability to engage in structured tasks with adult support for approximately one to two minutes…When task demands increase or he reaches his tolerance threshold, [the student] engages in behaviors including vocalizations (screaming), throwing materials, and eloping from the instructional area.
    - [The student's] highest level of engagement occurs during outdoor activities, particularly when swinging. When swinging, he demonstrates increased calmness and can sustain engagement beyond two minutes.
    - Due to the frequency and intensity of elopement and mouthing behaviors, 2–3 staff members are required to maintain [the student's safety and provide continuous supervision.
    - When presented with a writing utensil such as a pencil, [the student} consistently snaps the pencil in half, chews on the pieces, and swallows parts of the pencil. This behavior poses a significant safety concern and interferes with his ability to engage safely and appropriately in fine motor and writing activities.
    - [The student] requires a highly structured learning environment with consistent routines, visual supports, and one-on-one adult assistance, including hand-over-hand prompting, to increase engagement and ensure safety during classroom activities. He benefits from brief, hands-on tasks, access to safe sensory materials, and frequent breaks with positive reinforcement to maintain attention and reduce unsafe behaviors.

- At this time, [the student] remains dependent on full adult support to complete all daily living tasks and functional routines. He benefits from consistent verbal prompting, modeling, and hand-over-hand assistance across settings.
- [The student] has a lengthy medical plan and requires constant care. This would need to be taken into consideration when planning for transportation (Emphasis added).

5. The student's IEP includes a section titled, "Health." This section contains a long list of health concerns. This section includes the question: "Does this student require a Health Care Plan? Next to that question is the word "Yes." The following section of the IEP is titled "Healthcare Plan."
6. The "Health Care Plan lists 14 separate health conditions, along with a lengthy list of medications, strategies and goals, behavior and regulatory strategies. This health care plan does not address transportation supports that should be provided.
7. The student's IEP includes a section titled "Current Performance." That section says: "Due to the frequency and the intensity of elopement and mouthing behaviors two to three staff members are required to maintain the student's safety and provide continuous supervision." Notably, this provision is based on "the intensity of elopement and mouthing behaviors," which likely would not arise during transportation while riding in a harness.
8. The student's IEP includes a general section titled "Transportation." This section says, "[the student] has a lengthy medical plan and requires constant care. This would need to be taken into consideration when planning for transportation (Emphasis added).
9. Another, more specific, section of the student's IEP is titled, "Special Transportation." That section states that [the student] "will need a harness and a para to ride on the bus safely (Emphasis added)." Notably, there is no other reference in the student's IEP to add any additional support during transportation. This indicates that at the time the IEP was written, the IEP team believed that a harness to restrain the student's movement and a para to ride on the bus with the student met the safety concerns that the student would face on the bus and so did not believe the student needed the same level of adult support on the bus that he needed in the school environment.
10. On January 12, 2026, the date of the incident, there was a driver and a para present, both of whom had attended training on the student's Health Care Plan.
11. At the time of the safety concern, the bus was within ¼ mile of the transportation center, approximately 1 ¼ miles from the student's home and 5.3 miles from the school (Wheatland Elementary). When the safety concern arose, the driver made the judgement to go directly to the transportation center as it was the closest location where assistance was available.
12. The student remained on the bus at the transportation center for approximately 15 minutes and then independently walked into the transportation center where he waited for approximately 5 minutes before the parent arrived to pick him up.

13. An IEP meeting was held on February 13, 2026, at which the district proposed the addition of nursing services on the bus and at school.
14. The Prior Written Notice (PWN) proposing nursing services states: "The team proposed the addition of nursing services for the length of time that [the student] rides the bus to and from school and during his services while at school." The explanation in this PWN for proposing Nursing services on the bus was as follows: "The addition of nursing services during transportation and at school was proposed in response to safety concerns on the bus. Nursing services would ensure that a medical professional is with [the student] to help ensure his health, safety, and consistent care."

Analysis

This was an unfortunate incident. It occurred on a moving bus and could have resulted in injury to the student or to others on the bus. Fortunately, it did not. It appears the IEP team may have been wrong in determining that a harness and para support were sufficient to transport the student safely. This appearance is bolstered by the IEP team later proposing to add a nurse on the bus to further support the student's medical needs.

The question presented by the parent in this concern is whether such an error in judgement by the IEP team, if there was an error, constituted a violation of law.

No less authority than the United States Supreme Court has provided guidance on that very question. In Endrew F. v. Douglas County School District, 137 S.Ct. 988, 117 LRP 9767 (S.C. 2017) in a special education case involving a boy with autism, the Supreme Court said that the term "free appropriate public education" means that "a school must offer an IEP reasonably calculated to enable a child to make progress appropriate in light of the child's circumstances (emphasis added)."

The court also added this statement, "The 'reasonably calculate' qualification reflects a recognition that crafting an appropriate program of education requires a prospective judgment by school officials." This statement means that IEP teams must make judgements about what services a student needs going forward. Courts, and other adjudicators (hearing officers and complaint investigators) are to refrain from using the benefit of hindsight to judge the appropriateness of an IEP. An IEP is not inappropriate simply because a student fails to make progress. That is, the court or other adjudicator must look at what the IEP team knew at the time it drafted the IEP, and with that knowledge, determine whether the IEP was reasonably calculated at that moment in time to provide an appropriate education. The Supreme Court was telling adjudicators that they should not use a "Monday Morning Quarterbacking" approach when determining the appropriateness of an IEP. The Supreme Court added that this standard requires that an IEP be reasonably calculated to enable a child to make progress appropriate in light of the child's circumstances, and not whether a court regards it as ideal.

The Supreme Court understood that even with this prospective approach reasonable minds can disagree about whether an IEP is so "reasonably calculated." When that happens the Supreme Court said that deference is given to school officials based on the application of expertise and the exercise of judgment, but that "A reviewing court may fairly expect those authorities to be able to offer a cogent and responsive explanation for their decisions that show the IEP was reasonably calculated to enable the child to make progress appropriate in light of his circumstance at the time it was written.

The evidence presented in this concern demonstrates that this student has significant adult support needs in a classroom. For some reason the IEP team (which includes the parents) apparently did not believe this student needed the same level of adult support on the bus as opposed to the classroom when it drafted and then adopted the student's current IEP. Perhaps that was because the student would be strapped in a harness while on the bus but not while in a classroom. That makes some sense because some of the main safety concerns for the student involved elopement and mouthing objects, which could have been viewed as unlikely while secured in a harness. In hindsight, both the parents and school personnel now appear to believe that determination to have been less than ideal or perhaps even less than appropriate. At the time that decision was made, however, with the understanding that the student would be strapped in a harness during bus transportation with para support, and with the deference the Supreme Court said is to be given to the judgment of school officials in making such decisions, it is concluded that the safety incident on January 12 does not mean that the IEP team failed to develop a proper transportation plan in this student's EP.

The parents stated additional objections in this concern charging that the district's alleged failure to follow an unidentified "medical safety protocol" raises concerns regarding the "appropriate assessment of medical versus behavioral presentation, staff training, (and) safety decision making." In a clarification letter the investigator received from the parent on March 23, 2026, the parent explained this concern as follows:

There was no health assessment completed at any point during the incident. No medical observations were documented, and no qualified medical professional was consulted to assess [the student's] condition. For [the student], situations like this must always be presumed medical in nature when there is uncertainty, given his known needs. That did not occur.

Additionally, we were not provided with any documentation (incident report, medical notes, or observations), and no follow-up communication occurred to assess his condition after the event.

These additional objections , while understandably troublesome to a distressed parent going through the circumstances described in this concern, are not matters addressed by special education law. There is nothing in either federal or state special education law that requires any particular action by a school district when a special education student experiences a "medical incident" at school or on the way to school. Putting aside questions of judgement during and after this incident, there is no special education legal requirement to conduct a health assessment or to make medical observations, or to consult with a qualified medical professional to assess a student's condition when a medical incident occurs. Accordingly, this additional objection is beyond the authority of this complaint process, which is limited to requirements of special education laws and regulations and not "protocols" of any kind.

Conclusion

The allegation of a violation of law related to this concern is not substantiated.

Concern Two

There was a "lack of transparency and failure to provide incident information."

Parent Position

In the complaint, the parent alleges that Following the January 12 incident no incident report or clear timeline was provided to the family. A "FERPA" request was submitted by the parents on February 2 2026, requesting transportation records, internal communications and documentation. The district indicated that portions of those records would take weeks to recover and were not available before the already scheduled February 13, 2026 IEP meeting. The parents agreed to go ahead and hold that meeting. At the February 13, 2026 IEP meeting, district leadership could not answer basic safety questions and repeatedly redirected inquiries to the transportation director. This left unanswered questions, including whether the student was properly secured, who supervised the student, what occurred after the student arrived at the bus barn, whether restraint was used, what medical observations were made, and who determined the situation was a non-medical situation.

LEA Position

The LEA response states,

The district has provided the parent with information related to January 12, 2026, and has offered multiple opportunities for the parents to visit directly with the Director of Transportation.

The parents submitted their FERPA request on February 2, 2026. The Special Education Director emailed parents on February 4, 2026, letting them know that the district had received their FERPA request and asked which records they would like to have prioritized for the February 13, 2026, meeting. All existing records that were available prior to the meeting were emailed to parents on February 11, 2026

The Special Education Director emailed the parents on February 11, 2026, indicating that the IEP documents would be sent that day; however, the remaining documents they had requested would not be available prior to the February 13, 2026, meeting. Parents were asked if they would like to continue with the meeting or postpone the meeting. The Special Education Director emailed the parents on February 12, 2026, with the agenda for the meeting. The parents were informed that the meeting would continue unless we heard differently from parents. On February 12, 2026, the parents sent a reply saying that they would like to move forward with the meeting.

15. In an e-mail from the parent to the district, dated February 2, 2026, the parent made a "formal request for education records for our son."
16. On February 4, 2026 the district responded with an e-mail stating "We have received your request for educational records and are currently working to provide you access to the records maintained by the district. Since we have an IEP meeting scheduled for February 13th, please let me know which records you would like for us to prioritize and we will do our best to provide access by that date. If we are unable to provide the requested records by the date of our IEP meeting, I will reach back out and get your input on how you would like to proceed.
17. On February 11, 2026, the district sent an e-mail to the parent with all IEP documents, and that same day sent another e-mail stating, "Thank you for that clarification [parent]. We will work on an agenda that includes placement options. Do you have specific placements in mind or do you want to discuss as a team at the meeting? In terms of records, I will be sending you all of the IEP documents later today. We are actively working on the other records you have requested; however, we won't be able to get you records beyond IEP documents prior to the meeting on February 13th, Please let me know if you wish to move forward with the meeting or postpone until you receive the records.
18. On February 12, 2026, the district sent an e-mail to the parent saying: "I'm attaching the tentative agenda for tomorrow's meeting. If you would like anything added, please let me know. We'll plan on moving forward with the meeting unless I hear anything differently from you, Also, please reach out if you weren't able to access the IEP records that were sent yesterday.
19. On February 12, 2026, the parent sent a reply e-mail stating" "I'm sorry I never finished this email that I started yesterday. We will go forward with the meeting, thanks. Do you happen to know when those records may be available? I was able to get all of their IEPs all downloaded, so thank you!
20. The February 13 meeting was held.
21. On February 23, 2026, the district sent the parent an e-mail with 7 attachments, saying "Please find the remaining educational records for [the student] attached. Let me know if you have any trouble opening the files. This e-mail also said, "I also wanted to follow up on your request from our meeting on 2/13/26 to view video footage from the transportation building. I followed up with our team and learned that while there are cameras in the parking lot and main office area, the footage is only stored for a limited time. Unfortunately, the recordings from that day were automatically overwritten by the system before the request was made. I also consulted our Technology Director to see if recovery was possible, but we do not have the capability to retrieve deleted files."

22. This e-mail added:
"I want to emphasize that I take [the student's] safety very seriously and I am committed to addressing your concerns. Based on my conversations with our Transportation Director the staffs primary goal was [the student's] protection. When [the student] unhooked his securement vest they were approximately 5.3 miles from Wheatland Elementary. Since they were only % (1/4) mile from the transportation center, the driver pulled into the parking lot to ensure he was in a secure environment.
Mark [transportation director] noted that [the student] remained on the bus for about 15 minutes before walking independently into the transportation center, where he waited in an office for about 5 minutes until you arrived. He was monitored by 2—3 staff members at all times, and no restraints were used. Since I was not there personally, I would be happy to facilitate a meeting with Mark [transportation director] and any other district staff you'd like to speak with so your questions can be answered directly.
Looking ahead, we remain committed to providing a nurse for [the student's] transportation and services while at school if you consent to this option. We would welcome the chance to partner with you on the nurse's training and the development of a formal transportation safety plan. We should also have a response for you soon about your request for us to contract with Levy in USD 259. Please don't hesitate to reach out with any questions."

Analysis

In the complaint, the parent alleges that following the January 12 incident no incident report or clear timeline was provided to the family pursuant to a FERPA request submitted February 2, 2026, in which the parent requested transportation records, internal communications and documentation, and that the district indicated records would take weeks and were not available before the February 13, 2026 IEP meeting. The parent further alleges that, at the February 13, 2026 IEP meeting, district leadership could not answer basic safety questions and repeatedly redirected inquiries to the transportation director. This left unanswered questions, including whether the student was properly secured, who supervised the student, what occurred after the student arrived at the bus barn, whether restraint was used, what medical observations were made, and who determined the situation was a non-medical situation.

The FERPA request was made on February 2, 2026, eleven days before the February 13 IEP meeting. The district sent the records that it had on February 11, 2026, and asked the parents if they wanted to proceed or cancel the IEP meeting scheduled for February 13, 2026. The parents said they wanted to go forward with the meeting and the meeting was held. At the meeting, the parents requested information that the IEP team was not able to provide.

The pertinent federal regulation is 34 C.F.R. 300.613(a). It says:

> Each participating agency must permit parents to inspect and review any education records relating to their children that are collected, maintained, or used by the agency under this part. The agency must comply with a request without unnecessary delay and before any meeting regarding an IEP, or any hearing pursuant to Sec. 300.507 or Sec. Sec. 300.530 through 300.532, or resolution session pursuant to Sec. 300.510, and in no case more than 45 days after the request has been made.

Thus, when a parent makes a request for information in education records the district must respond by permitting parents to "inspect and review" the information contained in those records. Under special education regulations, this right is more restrictive than FERPA, in that it applies only to information that it has "collected, maintained, or used" for special education purposes." Accordingly, the district is not required to provide information it does not have, nor is it required to make additional records to record information requested by a parent.

The district is required by this regulation to provide access to special education records that it maintains before "any meeting regarding an IEP." In this case, the district was unable to comply with this provision and so offered to re-schedule the upcoming IEP meeting, but agreed to proceed with the meeting only after the parents said they wanted to proceed with the meeting without all of the requested information.

The evidence presented shows that (1) the district timely responded to the parents request for access to special education records that were immediately available, (2) the parents agreed to hold the IEP meeting without access to the remaining information, and (3) the remaining information that was in special education records was delivered to the parents within 45 days of the parent's request.

Conclusion

Based on the foregoing, it is concluded that the facts related to this concern do not constitute a violation of special education laws or regulations.

Concern Three

Minimization of Safety Incident and inadequate administrative oversight

NOTE: This concern will address only the allegation that district staff repeatedly described the event as a "minor transportation incident." The portion of this allegation that refers to the adequacy of parent's safety concerns will be addressed in Concern 4.

Parent Position

During the February 13, 2026 IEP meeting, district staff repeatedly described the event as a "minor transportation incident."

LEA Position

Although the district acknowledges the parents' concern, it did not minimize it as a "minor incident." In addition, the district does not believe the concern raises any issues under the IDEA that would be appropriately addressed by a formal complaint decision.

Findings of Fact

23. In this concern the parent alleges that district staff incorrectly described the event as a "minor transportation incident." The district denies this allegation.

Analysis

It is not necessary to determine whether the alleged statement that the safety event was a "minor transportation incident" was made. Even if the parents allegation is correct, it is not an issue that can be addressed through the special education complaint process. The complaint process may only be used to allege a violation of special education laws and regulations (34 C.F.R. 300.153). Special education laws and regulations do not require accuracy of the content of the speech of school personnel (or parents for that matter) at meetings or otherwise, or even the accuracy of information that is contained in physical education records.

Special education regulations do set forth another process parents can use when they believe information that is in education records is inaccurate or misleading. This process involves a parent's right to ask a school district to amend an alleged inaccurate or misleading record and the opportunity for a hearing when a district declines to amend the record. These rights are explained in federal regulations 34 C.F.R. 300.618 to 300.621. There is no provision in special education laws or regulations, however, requiring oral statements made by parents or school personnel to be accurate nor is there any process to challenge the accuracy of any oral comments made in any situation.

Conclusion

The allegation of a violation of Special Education laws or regulations on this issue is not substantiated.

Concern Four

District staff failed to "consider medical needs in placement decisions."

Parent Position

The parents believe that the district's proposal at the February 13, 2026 IEP meeting to add a nurse to resolve their safety concerns is not enough. This is so because the parent's safety concerns involve "systemic safety practices not simply staffing alone." The parents add that "Placements should not punish students for extreme behaviors that are a result of extreme medical problems by keeping a student homebound well after the issues are resolved."

LEA Position

The LEA's response states that, "The district has provided information related to January 12, 2026, and has offered multiple opportunities for parents to visit directly with the Director of Transportation. District staff acknowledge that the transportation incident on January 12, 2026, posed a safety concern for [the student] and did not minimize it by referring to it as a minor transportation incident. An IEP meeting was convened on February 13, 2026, for the purpose of addressing safety concerns and parents' requests to discuss placement. The district proposed the addition of nursing services for transportation at the meeting on February 13, 2026."

Findings of Fact

The findings of fact stated in previous sections of this report are incorporated into this section and will not be repeated unless necessary to provide clarity. The following finding of facts is based upon a review of the documentation.

24. An IEP meeting was held on February 13, 2026, at which the district proposed the addition of nursing services on the bus and at school.
25. The Prior Written Notice (PWN) proposing nursing services states: "The team proposed the addition of nursing services for the length of time that [the student] rides the bus to and from school and during his services while at school."
26. The explanation in this PWN for proposing Nursing services on the bus and at school was as follows: "The addition of nursing services during transportation and at school was proposed in response to safety concerns on the bus. Nursing services would ensure that a medical professional is with [the student] to help ensure his health, safety, and consistent care."
27. The parent has not responded to the Prior Written Notice and request for consent to add the proposed nursing services.
28. The student has not attended school since January 12 because the parents believe "no safe or appropriate placement has been provided following the incident."
29. The parents' summary of their position regarding this concern is:
    While additional medical support may be beneficial, this proposal does not address the core concern, which is the complete lack of accountability and safety oversight demonstrated during the incident. If accountability cannot be ensured in a known, serious event, it raises significant concern about what may occur in situations that are not directly observed or reported. Additional concerns include: • No follow-up to check on [the student's] wellbeing • No acknowledgment or apology regarding the handling of the situation, including statements that staff were attempting to "contain" him and did not know how much longer they could do so • No incident report or formal documentation provided • No medical observations conducted or reviewed We are also left with unanswered safety questions. For example: • If [the student] was unsafe to transport, why was transportation continued rather than waiting for appropriate support? • If he was safe to transport, why was he not transported to his intended destination? The repeated characterization of this as a "minor incident" further undermines trust and highlights the systemic nature of the concern.

30. At the February 13, 2026 IEP meeting, the Special Education Director responded to the parents' remaining questions concerning January 12, 2026, and offered to facilitate a meeting with the Director of Transportation and any other district-level staff they would like to have attend. The parent declined this offer.
31. On February 23, 2026, the special education director for the Ark Valley Special Education Cooperative emailed parents the remainder of the educational records for [the student].

Analysis

In her complaint, the parent described the discussion at the February 13, 2026 IEP meeting and her impression of that discussion as follows:

> During discussions with the district, staff acknowledged they could not guarantee that situations requiring immediate pickup would not occur. While we understand that emergencies happen, a placement with adequate resources should be able to manage certain medical episodes without relying on parents ability to instantly appear. Instead, our experience has included being reported to DCF, being expected to respond immediately regardless of logistical reality, and ultimately being required to retrieve our child from a transportation facility during a potential medical event. Although the district suggested that adding a nurse could resolve these issues our concerns are broader and systematic. Similar difficulties have occurred across multiple schools within the district. These ongoing patterns combined with the lack of transparency or answers following the incident, reinforced our belief that the problem is not easily resolved by a single accommodation.

The parent's concern about the medical issue that arose as a result of the incident on January 12 is genuine. The parent's assertion that similar safety incidents have occurred across multiple schools within the district, however, is not supported by any evidence provided in this complaint. The parent's rejection of the district's offer to add nursing services to the IEP for all of time that the student is riding in a school bus and all of the time the student is at school leaves this medical concern unresolved, but unresolved largely because rejected by the parent's decision to refuse to give the legally required consent.

The parents state that they have "unanswered safety questions," mainly that: If [the student] was unsafe to transport, why was transportation continued rather than waiting for appropriate support? Or, if he was safe to transport, why was he not transported to his intended destination? These questions attack the judgement of school personnel in a manner that is designed to allege negligence however the school personnel chose to respond to the January 12 incident. The facts presented in this complaint reveal that the obvious reason the school transported the student to the Transportation Facility was because that was the closest place, and the fastest way, to get assistance for the student. There is simply no support for the allegation that this decision to take the student directly to the closest facility was deficient in reacting to the safety incident.

This concern is comparable to Concern 1, not in using the benefit of hindsight to question the judgement of an IEP team, but using that same benefit of hindsight to question the judgement of school bus transportation staff during an emergency situation. When the emergency arose, the bus driver drove to the closest facility where assistance was available, approximately one quarter mile away. As the parent alleges, during this incident, no health assessment was completed, no professional medical observations were documented, and no qualified medical professional was consulted to assess the student's condition. That was because by the time his mother had arrived the student had calmed and so he was simply released to the care of his mother upon her arrival.

As for the parent's assertion in this concern that "Placements should not punish students for extreme behaviors that are a result of extreme medical problems by keeping a student homebound well after the issues are resolved," the school did not punish this student nor require that the student no longer attend school. However appropriate the parents deemed the decision to keep the student at home, it was their decision. They may feel like the school forced them into that decision, but their decision to keep the student at home was not made by the school district. Moreover, the offer to add nursing services to support the student in both transportation and school environments shortly after the bus incident, was both timely and reasonably designed to mitigate the perceived safety concerns that were presented in that incident. This proposed additional support has been delayed only because the parents have exercised their right to refuse to give the necessary consent for the district's proposals.

Conclusion

Under all of these circumstances, it is concluded that the allegation that district staff failed to "consider medical needs in placement decisions" is not substantiated.

Concern Five

District staff misrepresented the parents position regarding homebound services.

Parent Position

During the February 13, 2026, IEP meeting, homebound services were framed as declined because parents did not want staff in their home. This is not correct. The parents' concerns were based on appropriateness of placement and least restrictive environment requirements.

LEA Position

The LEA response

Although the district acknowledges the parents' concern, it does not believe the concern raises any issues under the IDEA that would be appropriately addressed by a formal complaint decision.

Homebound services were discussed as an option after parents indicated that they did not wish to send [the student] to school with the addition of nursing services. Parents indicated that they did not feel homebound was appropriate and this was documented in the IEP and on the Prior Written Notice.

Findings of Fact

32. The parents' complaint states that "we declined homebound because it does not meet the student's needs or least restrictive environment requirements. This was framed as us not wanting staff in our home. We clarified that this is inaccurate; our concerns relate to appropriateness of placement not refusal of staff presence. Staff responded that FAPE was being offered and that we simply did not like the options provided. No acknowledgement or accountability was ever taken regarding the transportation incident.
33. The Prior Written Notice from the February 13, 2026, proposed amendment to the IEP, states that, "The team discussed the possibility of homebound services if parents chose not to send [the student] to school with the addition of nursing services. Parents do not feel homebound services are appropriate at this time."
34. Within the parental input section of the February 13, 2026, proposed amendment to the IEP, it was also stated that "Parents do not feel that homebound services are appropriate at this time".

Analysis

There is no evidence of any written statement from any school official saying that homebound services were being "declined because parents did not want staff in their home." If there is such a written statement in the students education records, the process for seeking a remedy with regard to the accuracy of that statement is the same as is available as explained in Concern 3 of this complaint.

There is no provision in special education laws or regulations that requires the parties agree on the rationale for placement decisions. Thus, any stated disagreement regarding reasons for placement decisions cannot constitute a violation of law.

Conclusion

Based on the foregoing, it is concluded that there is n*o failure to comply with law* on this concern.

Concern Six

There was a "potential lack of monitoring equipment and documentation on special education transportation."

Parent Position

District staff stated that the bus involved in this incident did not have cameras and they were unsure whether the bus barn cameras existed. Given the students medical fragility and typical safety practices for special education transportation, absence of monitoring raises concerns regarding accountability, incident verification, and safety oversight.

LEA Position

The LEA response states:

Although the district acknowledges the parents' concern, it does not believe the concern raises any issues under the IDEA that would be appropriately addressed by a formal complaint decision.

The district has provided information to the parents related to January 12, 2026, and has offered multiple opportunities for parents to visit directly with the Director of Transportation.

Findings of Fact

35. The parent alleges that "There was a "potential lack of monitoring equipment and documentation on special education transportation."

Analysis

The allegation that there was a "potential lack of monitoring equipment and documentation on special education transportation," does not meet the threshold requirement of a special education complaint. That threshold is to allege that a violation of law has occurred (34 C.F.R. 300.153). This concern, as well as some of the other concerns in this complaint, refer to a "potential failure." There is always a "potential failure" in every endeavor. The complaint process, however, cannot be used to address concerns alleging a potential failure.

Both Kansas regulation K.A.R. 91-40-51(a) and federal regulation, 34 C.F.R. 300.153(b) state that a special education complaint must allege that an education agency "has" violated a state or federal special education regulation or law. Accordingly, allegations of a potential failure to follow legal requirements are beyond the jurisdiction of this investigation and will not be addressed in this report, at least to the extent that "potential failure" is intended to mean that a violation is likely or possible to occur sometime in the future. Moreover, there is no requirement, in either federal or state law that requires monitoring devices on school busses. Thus, absent an IEP requirement for monitoring equipment on a bus, the lack of such equipment is not a violation of law.

To the extent this concern is meant to allege that the district was required to have monitoring equipment on the student's bus at the time this incident occurred as a matter of providing a FAPE to this student, that is another example of the parent essentially asking the investigator to second-guess the judgement of the IEP team by using the benefit of hindsight. This is exactly the kind of hindsight judgement that the United States Supreme Court said should not be used, as described in detail in Concern 1 of this report.

Conclusion

Based on the foregoing, it is found that the allegation of a violation of law is not substantiated in this concern.

Concern Seven

The student was denied meaningful educational access (potential FAPE concern)

Parent Position

More than one month passed after the January 12, 2026 incident without resolution, answers, or safe placement adjustments. The student has lacked safe access to consistent education during this period.

LEA Position

The LEA response states:

The district made multiple attempts to schedule an IEP meeting with no response from parents. The district offered options for meeting dates within three days of the request for a meeting. After no response to the meeting dates was received from parents, the district sent a Notice of Meeting for a February 13, 2026, IEP meeting.

Findings of Fact

36. On the day of the incident, January 12, 2026 the special education director contacted the school psychologist, asking for an IEP meeting to be convened.
37. The special education director emailed the school team on January 13, 2026, explaining the transportation situation and the need to shift the focus of the next IEP meeting to address safety concerns.
38. The school psychologist emailed the parent on January 15, 2026, offering January 28, 2026 or February 3, 2026 as potential meeting dates. There was no response from parents.
39. The school psychologist emailed the parent again on January 19, 2026, to follow up on the options for meeting dates. There was no response from parents.
40. The parents emailed the team on January 20, 2026, about concerns related to the proposed agenda.
41. The special education director emailed the parents on January 20, 2026, offering to visit and clear up any miscommunications about the agenda. There was no response from parents.

42. The special education director attempted to call the parents on January 22, 2026, and the mailbox was full.
43. The special education director emailed the parent on January 22, 2026, and asked her to call. There was no response from parents.
44. The special education director emailed the parents on January 23, 2026, explaining the proposed agenda, offering to add any agenda items they would like to discuss and offering to visit. The meeting dates of January 28, 2026, or February 3rd, were again offered as options. There was no response from parents.
45. On January 28, 2026, the special education director emailed the parents documenting the attempts to schedule a meeting and informing the parents that the district stands ready, willing and able to provide services as outlined in the IEP. The special education director informed the parents that new dates were being gathered for a possible meeting and that the team would be sending a notice of meeting.
46. Parents responded on January 28, 2026, asking for the team to send proposed meeting dates, along with an updated proposed agenda.
47. The special education director emailed on January 29, 2026, asking for input on specific agenda items that parents would like to have included.
48. The Notice of Meeting for the February 13, 2026, IEP was mailed home on January 29, 2026, and emailed on February 3rd, 2026.
49. An IEP meeting was held on February 13, 2026, at which the district proposed the addition of nursing services on the bus and at school.
50. The Prior Written Notice (PWN) proposing nursing services states: "The team proposed the addition of nursing services for the length of time that [the student] rides the bus to and from school and during his services while at school." The explanation in this PWN for proposing Nursing services on the bus was as follows: "The addition of nursing services during transportation and at school was proposed in response to safety concerns on the bus. Nursing services would ensure that a medical professional is with [the student] to help ensure his health, safety, and consistent care." (Emphasis added).
51. The parent has not responded to the Prior Written Notice and request for consent to add the proposed nursing services.

Analysis

If, as the parent alleges, the student has lacked safe access to consistent education during this period after the bus incident, it is not due to a lack of effort on the part of the school district or this student's IEP team. Administration acted immediately to review this incident and to propose an IEP meeting. The parents did not respond to initial attempts by the district to conduct an IEP meeting. When the IEP meeting occurred, the IEP team issued a PWN proposing nursing services for the student both on the bus and at school. That significant proposed change to the student's IEP has stalled only because the parents have exercised their right to refuse to give their consent to the proposal.

This student's parents sincerely want this child with significant needs to be safe and successful. They apparently believe that the proposed nursing services are inadequate to provide that kind of environment. Again, reasonable minds can disagree when presented with difficult circumstances, but in this complaint the offer to provide a medical professional to personally accompany the student at all times during both transportation and at school is not clearly unreasonable. Hopefully, this experience has not so damaged the parents' relationships with school personnel that there can be no future for this student in a public school. Ultimately that choice remains with these loving parents.

Conclusion

It is concluded that there is no violation of law on this issue.

Summary of Conclusions

The allegations of a violation of special education laws and regulations is not substantiated. There are no corrective actions.

Corrective Action

Information gathered in the course of this investigation has failed to substantiate noncompliance with special education laws and regulations on the issues presented in this complaint. Therefore, no corrective action is required.

Right to Appeal

Either party may appeal the findings or conclusions in this report by filing a written notice of appeal with the State Commissioner of Education, ATTN: Special Education and Title Services, Landon State Office Building, 900 SW Jackson Street, Suite 620, Topeka, KS 66612-1212. The notice of appeal may also be filed by email to formalcomplaints@ksde.gov The notice of appeal must be delivered within 10 calendar days from the date of this report.

For further description of the appeals process, see Kansas Administrative Regulations 91-40-51(f).

(2) If an appeal committee affirms a compliance report that requires corrective action by an agency, that agency shall initiate the required corrective action immediately. If, after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the agency shall be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following:

(A) The issuance of an accreditation deficiency advisement;
(B) the withholding of state or federal funds otherwise available to the agency;
(C) the award of monetary reimbursement to the complainant; or
(D) any combination of the actions specified in paragraph (f)(2)

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST
UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #262 VALLEY CENTER PUBLIC SCHOOLS
ON FEBRUARY 26, 2026

DATE OF REPORT: APRIL 2, 2026

This report is in response to a complaint filed with the Kansas State Department of Education against USD #262 Valley Center Public Schools on behalf of ------- by his parents -------. In the remainder of the report, ------- will be referred to as "the student" and ------- as "the parents."

When a special education complaint is filed against a school district that is a member of a special education cooperative or interlocal, or that uses any other state recognized public agency to serve children with disabilities, the term "local education agency (LEA)" in this report will include the school district, the special education cooperative or interlocal, and any other agency that is recognized by the state as an administrative agency for public elementary or secondary schools and is serving the educational needs of this student.

Evidence Reviewed

The investigator reviewed all of the evidence initially submitted by both parties and all evidence subsequently requested by the investigator from each party. The following relevant evidence was used to analyze the concerns in this complaint:

- The formal complaint submitted by the parents.
- The response to the complaint submitted by the school district.
- E-Mail correspondence between the parties
- E-Mail correspondence between the parties and the investigator
- The student's most recent evaluation
- The student's current IEP, including Health Care Plan

Findings of Fact

The findings of facts for each concern are those facts that are relevant to the concern and are based upon a review of the documentation and the correspondence with the parties, including supplemental documentation requested by the investigator.

Background Information

The student is a 15 year-old boy in the 9th grade. He is eligible for special education under the exceptionality of autism. The student does not use spoken language. When his needs are not being met he can become aggressive by grabbing others, getting out of his chair or head butting a hard surface. The student participates in a functional daily living program that focuses on building independence and self-care, hygiene and personal responsibility across school and home settings. His instruction is guided by the Essentials for Living curriculum and delivered through structured routines, modeling and repetition. The Essentials for Living curriculum Focuses on functional communication, daily living, and adaptive academic skills.

The student participates in learning activities that are significantly modified from grade level expectations and requires direct adult prompting visual supports and intensive repetition. Because he is not able to demonstrate academic skills through traditional testing formats or written responses, the student participates in the dynamic learning maps alternate assessment.

Concern One

We were asked to provide consent for placement without receiving necessary medical safety information required for informed decision making.

Parent Position

On January 22, 2026, during an IEP meeting the team recommended placement at Hope Learning Center. Following the meeting we requested safety information necessary to evaluate the placement including availability and response time of paramedics, emergency medical protocols, and decision making authority during medical emergencies. On at least three occasions, the district staff stated that these questions could not be answered unless we first signed consent for placement. When information was eventually provided we learned that the area where the Hope Learning Center is located relies on volunteer EMT firefighters rather than paramedics and the nearest hospital is approximately 30 minutes away. Based on this information the students "medical team" determined that this placement would not provide safe or timely access to advanced life support and therefore was not a medically viable option. Despite this, the district has continued to characterize our decision as declining a valid placement recommendation rather than recognizing that the placement was medically unsafe and not viable from the outset.

LEA Position

The LEA response states,

The district has repeatedly requested parent consent to communicate directly with [the student's] medical professionals in order to obtain and consider medical input related to his health needs and emergency planning, but those requests have been denied. As a result, the district has not received any documentation or information from [the student's] medical team indicating concerns with the proposed placement or stating that the placement is medically unsafe or not viable. The district remains willing to review and consider any medical documentation the parents wish to provide so that the IEP team can fully consider it as part of the placement discussion.

Findings of Fact

1. Following the Thursday, January 22, 2026, IEP meeting the school psychologist emailed a PWN to the parents proposing a change of placement to Hope Learning Center. The parents replied to the School Psychologist with questions regarding emergency planning related to [the student], as well as a follow-up email asking about transportation. [The parents] referenced that this would be the final piece in order to move forward.
2. The Hope Learning Center (HLC) is a special day school located in Mount Hope. It is a school within the Maize (USD 266) school district, and not a school within USD 262. However, HLC is available to students within USD 262.
3. On the USD 266 web site HLC is listed as one of four "specialty Programs." Its web page says "Students are recommended for attendance at the HLC through IEP teams from neighborhood schools across nine districts. The HLC provides services for Burrton, Cheney, Clearwater, Conway Springs, Goddard, Maize, Renwick, Sedgwick, and Valley Center public schools."
4. The Hope Learning Center (HLC) is a program that supports students with a wide range of needs who have completed a functional, life-skills, or structured learning curriculum and require additional assistance in defining their interests and supports for adult life. It's objective is to provide support not available in other public or community-based settings after completing relevant academic tasks in traditional schooling. The student's home school determines the need for this program based on the student's needs.
5. The LEA representative at the student's January 22, 2026 IEP meeting, reached out to the Administrator at Hope Learning Center (on January 22, 2026), to let him know the student's IEP team had met and recommended a change of placement for the student and that his mother had medical questions that could not be answered during the IEP meeting so they directed her to reach out to directly to the HLC administration.
6. The Administrator at Hope Learning Center (HLC) responded on Friday, January 23, 2026 for clarification regarding if parents had signed the PWN indicating that the student's placement was HLC. The LEA Representative at the student's January 22, 2026 IEP meeting responded that the parents provided verbal agreement but that the parents requested their questions be addressed prior to signing the consent form.
7. The Administrator at Hope Learning Center (HLC) responded to the LEA Representative at the student's January 22, 2026 IEP meeting on January 23, 2026, stating: "I did receive an e-mail from [the parents]. However, this is a bit of an impossible spot, I cannot engage with specific information or guidance communicating with a family with a student that is not mine. If placement paperwork has not been signed, I do not have recourse to engage with this family on behalf of the student. I do not know the student or anything regarding his care, I would be happy to schedule a collaborative conference or intake IEP to accommodate a new student that requires additional delegations, planning or interventions that are of concern to the team or family after placement has been determined (emphasis added).

8. On Saturday, January 24, 2026, the school psychologist forwarded the Special Education Coordinator the parent's questions regarding medical response and transportation.
9. On Monday, January 26, 2026, The Special Education Coordinator emailed the parents to let them know that she was working with HLC to answer all of her questions.
10. The Special Education Coordinator met with administration from HLC on Wednesday, January 28, 2026, and had a phone conversation with USD 262's Director of Transportation to get clarifying information related to the parents questions.
11. On January 28, 2026, the HLC sent USD 262 administration a response to the parents' questions:

    Questions from parents:

    With Mount Hope being farther away, that places his closest parent and the hospital at least 30 minutes out at all times. [The student] recently had a breakthrough seizure last week, so this is understandably very fresh in our minds. I'm wondering what the emergency protocol looks like in a scenario where a student experiences a breakthrough seizure that is not controlled by rescue medication?

12. On January 29, 2026 the special education director sent the following responses to the parents:

    Have we experienced this type of situation before?
    - Yes. HLC has had situations in which a student required an emergency response for seizure activity.

    What does the emergency protocol look like if a seizure is not controlled by rescue medication?
    - Staff would follow the Health Care Plan and medical orders on file, which outline when to call 911, when to call the provider first, and what is first aid for a seizure. Staff would also contact you as soon as possible as part of that response.

    What is the EMT response time to Mount Hope?
    - Direct coverage at HLC is through a volunteer fire/EMS service. They have responded to the building before with a typical response time of approximately 7—12 minutes, although that could vary, Because you raised an important concern about distance and response time, you may also consider reaching out directly to county first responders to ask about typical response times.

    Which hospital would he be transported to?
    - Per the Health Care Plan, Wesley was identified as the preferred hospital (Emergency Room at Tyler and 13th is the closest).

    How is the situation handled while waiting for EMS?
    - Staff would follow the Health Care Plan, and the trained staff on site would support [the student] until EMS arrives.

    If EMS transport is required, would someone familiar with my child ride in the ambulance with them?

- That decision is up to EMS, but again, that could be a good question if you decided to reach out to county first responders.

How are medical decisions made in the interim until we can be reached and/or arrive?

- In the moment, the nurse follows the medical orders and Health Care Plan and uses professional nursing judgment to respond appropriately until you can be reached and/or arrive.

How is behavioral safety during transport typically handled? For example, if [the student] becomes dysregulated on the bus and begins engaging in unsafe behaviors such as hitting his head or attempting to get up, we need a general understanding of how situations like that are managed.

- If [the student] were to start to become dysregulated on the bus, staff would utilize the strategies outlined in his IEP to try to help calm him and keep him and others on the bus safe, If [the student] became dysregulated to the point that his safety, or the safety of others, was in jeopardy, the driver would pull over and call 911.
- In addition to in-the-moment response, there are preventative steps staff can take to increase safety on the bus, For example, staff can ensure [the student] is strategically seated away from windows and also strategically seated away from his sister for additional preventative safety measures.

13. On Thursday, January 29, 2026, along with the correspondence referenced in Finding of Fact 12, the Special Education Coordinator also encouraged the parents to reach out to the county EMS for more specific answers to their questions.
14. The parents responded to the school psychologist on Monday, February 2, 2026, stating they did not agree, and gave their reasons for not agreeing, to the proposed placement change.
15. On Sunday, February 8, 2026, the parents emailed formally clarifying the record regarding [the student's] placement to ensure their position was accurately represented, with the following: Alternative placement viability: The parents stated that the alternative placement (HLC) previously discussed was not a viable option because it did not adequately account for the student's medical needs, including his status epilepticus. Given the requirement for immediate access to advanced life support including timely paramedic response and proximity to hospital care the parents decided that HLC did not meet the safety standards necessary for the student. This communication included this statement: "Our position has consistently aligned with the rest of [the students] educational team: he requires a setting better equipped to provide the supports necessary to meet his educational health and safety needs… While we understand that the student is currently in stay put at the high school our agreement to continue with this setting at this time should not be interpreted as an agreement that it is appropriate or sufficient to meet his needs. We are proceeding based on the districts assertion that it can safely and appropriately educate the student in this setting."

16. The Special Education Coordinator responded on Tuesday, February 10, 2026, to let the parents know that she had printed off their clarifying statements and had uploaded it with the PWN.
17. On Tuesday, February 10, 2026, The Special Education Coordinator let [the parents] know that she would upload their reasons for not signing consent along with the PWN.
18. The Special Education Coordinator emailed [the parents] on Saturday, February 21, 2026, with a rough draft agenda for the upcoming meeting. Within the email, she also asked if there was an updated doctor's Health Care Plan for the student, what the name of the doctor was to be able to communicate regarding [the student's] medical care, clarification regarding the statement of "immediate access to advanced life support", and what placement locations they would like for the school to consider.
19. [The parents] responded on Monday, February 23, 2026, stating that there was not an updated Health Care Plan, that it was the parents' understanding that districts can contract with other districts, such as Wichita Public Schools and that the current health care plan does not specifically reference "immediate access to advanced life support".
20. The current seizure plan that the school has on file does not contain information related to "immediate access to advanced life support".
21. The parents have not provided consent for school officials to speak with the student's doctor.

Analysis

This concern centers around the district's request for consent for a substantial change in placement from a mix of general education and special education environments to a special day school located in a neighboring school district that included specified requirements. A substantial change in placement is defined as the movement of an exceptional child, for more than 25 percent of the child's school day, from a less restrictive environment to a more restrictive environment or from a more restrictive environment to a less restrictive environment (K.A.R. 91-40-1(sss)). A proposed substantial change in placement requires parent consent (K.A.R. 91-40-27(a)(3). The very first requirement in the definition of the term "consent" includes the following: "A parent has been fully informed of all information relevant to the activity for which consent is sought…"

The district's January 22, 2026, PWN proposing placement at "a special day school" and requesting consent for that proposed placement is clear that what is being proposed is "a special day school." Not all special day schools, however, are the same. The parents had legitimate questions about safety concerns due to the student's diagnosis of status epilepticus. Status epilepticus is a life-threatening medical emergency characterized by a seizure lasting more than 5 minutes or multiple seizures without full recovery in between. It can lead to permanent brain damage or death if not treated promptly. Treatment typically involves medications to stop the seizure and address the underlying cause.

Given the parents belief that the student requires immediate access to advanced life support including timely paramedic response and proximity to hospital care, the parents asked school officials if the proposed special day school could provide these services. School officials did not know, as this special day school is part of a different school district, which sets its own admission requirements. The school officials referred the parents to an administrator at the special day school. The administrator of the special day school told the parents he could not answer any of their questions unless and until the student was already committed to enroll in the special day school. As a result, there was no one who would or could provide this information to the parents. Ultimately the officials at the special day school did send the district officials a response to the parents' questions, which was shared with the parents. This was complicated because two separate school districts were involved. It was not, however, a situation where a district requests consent for a proposed placement change and the district knowingly withholds important information from the parent that it possesses. The district did not have the information the parents requested, the district promptly contacted the special day school to get that information, and then once it received a reply from the special day school it immediately provided that information to the parents.

While parents have a right to all relevant information in order to grant informed consent, that is complicated when the proposed placement is an out-of-district placement and district officials do not know the answers to a parents questions. In such cases, a district must make reasonable attempts to gather the missing information. This district did just that and immediately upon obtaining the missing information provided the parents with a written response to their questions. Based on those responses, the parents refused to give consent. That is the way districts are supposed to proceed in these kinds of situations.

For the reasons provided above, the allegation of a violation of law due to a failure to fully inform the parent "of all information relevant to the activity for which consent is sought" is not substantiated when, as here, some of the information relevant to the activity for which consent is sought is not known by the school district at the time it makes the proposal but is provided a reasonable time thereafter.

There is a separate issue inherent in the communication between the district and the parents that is not part of the parents' complaint, but will be addressed here in order to provide an opportunity for the parties to avoid additional conflicts in their communications with each other.

When a parent is responding to a district's proposal and the parents' response is proposing a change of placement that is different than the district's proposal, that is a "counter proposal," and the district must respond to that counter proposal with a Prior Written Notice (PWN).

In this complaint, the district made its proposal and requested consent for a substantial change in placement at an IEP meeting on January 22, 2026. On February 23 the parents informed the district in writing that they were not going to provide the required consent for that proposal. The parents gave their reasons for refusing to give consent. In doing so, the parents were effectively saying that to give consent for a change in placement the placement offer must include immediate access to advanced life support including timely paramedic response and proximity to hospital care. That was a counter proposal.

The parents counter proposal puts the ball in the district's hands. The district cannot simply hold the ball. It needs to act and act within a reasonable time.

The district can act in a number of ways, including (this is not an exhaustive list):

> Search for a special day school that will accept the student and that has the resources the parents believe are necessary and to which they will give consent – even though that special school may be an uncomfortable distance from home;
> Create a suitable environment within the Ark Valley Special Education Cooperative that meets the needs of this student and the concerns of these parents, and for which the parents will give consent;
> Issue a PWN restating the district's current proposal and refusing the parent's proposal for a placement that provides "immediate access to advanced life support including timely paramedic response and proximity to hospital care."

Whatever it proposes, the PWN MUST include an explanation for why the district is refusing the parent's proposal.

However the district responds, it must inform the parents of its decision with a PWN that is provided within a reasonable time after the parents refusal to provide the requested consent and the making of a counter proposal. A "reasonable time" has long been recognized by the Kansas State Department of Education as "fifteen school days, unless there are unusual circumstances" (See Kansas Special Education Process Handbook, Chapter 1, Section D. Prior Written Notice).

The parents first notified the district that they would not consent to the district's placement proposal and explaining why not on February 8, 2026. Thus, the district had until March 1, 2026 to provide a PWN informing the parents how it would proceed. The parents filed this complaint on February 26, 2026. Accordingly, this complaint concern is premature because the district could not have failed its duty to provide a PWN regarding this concern within 15 school days before the complaint was filed. Because this proposal was made a concern in this complaint, the district has reasonably delayed its response to the parents. The school district may correct this situation by providing a PWN to the parents informing them how it is going to proceed with regard to the parents' request for a change in placement that includes immediate access to advanced life support, including timely paramedic response and proximity to hospital care (including an explanation of why it made its decision) within fifteen school days of receipt of this decision.

As to the secondary allegation in this concern that "the district has continued to characterize our decision as declining a valid placement recommendation rather than recognizing that the placement was medically unsafe and not viable from the outset," this secondary allegation will not be addressed in this complaint because this kind of issue is not subject to the complaint process. Instead, federal special education regulations, at 34 C.F.R. 300.618 through 300.621 specify the process to be used for a parent who believes that information collected, maintained, or used for special education purposes is inaccurate or misleading. That process begins with a parent request to the district to amend the contested record. If the district refuses the request, the district must notify the parent of the refusal and the parent's right to a hearing.

There is no process in law for challenging the accuracy of oral statements made by either party.

Conclusion

As indicated earlier, the allegation in this concern of a violation of law is not substantiated.

Concern Two

The district applied "stay put" in a way that maintains a placement already identified by the IEP team as inappropriate and unable to meet (the student's) needs.

Parent Position

During the January 22 IEP meeting, team members agreed that the student's current placement at Valley Center high school was not meeting his needs. After declining the medically unsafe placement, the assistant special education administrator informed us that the student would remain in "stay put" at the high school. The district characterized our decision as declining placement rather than recognizing the recommendation there was medically non-viable. We were informed that hope Learning Center was the only contracted alternative and that no other placements were being considered.

LEA Position

During the January 22 IEP meeting, the IEP team discussed [the student's] current programming and agreed that a change of placement was necessary to meet his needs. The parents indicated agreement with the team that a change in placement was warranted. The point of disagreement was not whether a change was needed, but the specific location of the proposed placement.

With respect to medical safety concerns, the district did not receive additional medical information from [the student's] medical team beyond the health care plan already on file. No new medical documentation was provided that altered the information available to the team at the time of the placement discussion.

In addition, the district explored other potentially viable special education day school options in surrounding districts. The districts that were contacted indicated they do not contract day school placements outside of their own districts. The district communicated to the parents that [the student] would remain in his current placement while the disagreement regarding the proposed placement location remained unresolved.

Findings of Fact

The facts cited in Concern 1 are incorporated into this concern and will not be re-stated except where necessary to add context to the analysis..

22. On January 22, 2026, the student's IEP team proposed a change in placement to a "special day school," (HLC) and a PWN was issued asking the parents to give their consent for this proposed change.
23. On February 8, 2026, the parents informed the district that they were not going to provide the required consent for that proposal because the proposed placement (HLC) did not adequately account for the student's medical needs, including his status epilepticus, which the parents believe requires a placement that provides "immediate access to advanced life support including timely paramedic response and proximity to hospital care."
24. The Special Education Coordinator emailed [the parents] on Saturday, February 21, 2026, with a rough draft agenda for the upcoming IEP meeting, and also asking if there was an updated Health Care Plan, what the name of the doctor was to be able to communicate regarding [the student's] medical care, clarification regarding the statement of "immediate access to advanced life support, and what placement locations they would like for us to consider."
25. [The parent] responded by email on Monday, February 23, 2026, stating that there was not an updated Health Care Plan, that districts do contract with other districts (but did not provide specific information other than Wichita Public Schools to consider), and that the current health care plan does not specifically reference "immediate access to advanced life support".
26. The special education director contacted neighboring districts, specifically including USD 259 and USD 261, and confirmed that those districts do not contract for enrollment in their day schools outside of their districts.

Analysis

The allegation is that "The district applied "stay put" in a way that maintains a placement already identified by the IEP team as inappropriate and unable to meet (the student's) needs." That is a correct statement. When a parent refuses to consent to a proposed substantial change in placement, the proposed change in placement may not be made, even if it is agreed that the current placement is deemed to be "inappropriate and unable to meet (the student's) needs." However, that circumstance is not, by itself, a violation of law. It occurred not because the district applied 'stay put' inappropriately but because the law prevented the district from implementing its proposal. Had the district proceeded with the proposed change in placement without the requisite consent from the parent, that would have been a violation of law.

The parents assert that "immediate access to advanced life support including timely paramedic response and proximity to hospital care" is medically necessary and any environment that does not offer such support is not medically viable. That is the parents' opinion based on what the parents assert is the opinion of the student's doctor. The district is not in complete agreement because it has been unable to directly talk to the student's doctor and doubts the authenticity of a letter said to have been written by the doctor. In any event, while an IEP team must consider any information that a parent brings to the team, it is the team that has the authority and obligation to weigh the information presented to it and to determine what goes into a student's IEP. A medical doctor cannot prescribe special education and related services. That responsibility is left to the discretion of the IEP team. The parents control the extent to which they allow the student's doctor to communicate with the IEP team, but the IEP team may weigh the effect of a refusal to provide such information when developing an IEP.

Ultimately, it is the district's obligation to provide the placement that is determined by the IEP team to be appropriate for the student. The district apparently believes it has such a placement available at HLC. The parents disagree and have refused to give the necessary consent for that placement. This kind of disagreement between parties is an inherent trait in the concept of team work and is not a violation of law just because it happens.

Conclusion

Based on the foregoing, it is found that the allegation of a violation of law is not substantiated. The district has the time allotted to it in the Analysis section of Concern 1 to respond with a PWN to the parents request for a placement that includes: ""immediate access to advanced life support including timely paramedic response and proximity to hospital care."

Concern Three

The district failed to implement interim supports or safety planning that may deny (the student) access to FAPE and creates safety risks for (the student), staff and peers.

Parent Position

The student received a suspension for behavior labeled as "assault" which the team acknowledged was a manifestation of his disability. During the IEP meeting the team identified impulsive behavioral outbursts as a primary reason for recommending a more supportive placement requiring increased staffing and access to safe regulation areas. Since the suspension the student has attended school only twice. Both attempts were challenging and no meaningful changes to staffing levels, environment, or behavioral supports were implemented. We requested an interim safety and support plan while awaiting the next IEP meeting to ensure safety for the student, staff and peers. The district responded that the student remains in "stay put" and stated they were ready willing and able to support him but they did not provide a written safety plan, specific staffing adjustments, environmental modifications, or behavior intervention updates.

LEA Position

The LEA response states:

The complaint alleges a failure to implement interim supports or safety planning and states that this may deny [the student] access to FAPE and create safety risks for him, staff, and peers. This characterization is not accurate.

[The student] currently has a thorough Behavior Intervention Plan (BIP) in place. The BIP outlines preventative strategies, replacement behaviors/skills, and reactive response strategies, including crisis response procedures aligned to the team's identified target behaviors. These supports were developed to promote [the student's] access to instruction and to support safety in the educational environment.

In addition, staff working with [the student] have received training in Safety-Care, including de-escalation techniques, supportive responses, and, when necessary, approved physical holds/restraints consistent with training protocols. This training is in place to ensure staff are prepared to respond safely and consistently when [the student] exhibits escalated behavior.

The district also took staffing steps to strengthen support. Specifically, a new paraprofessional was hired who previously worked in a special education day school setting, bringing relevant experience in supporting students with intensive behavioral needs.

Further, the district was actively working to schedule an IEP meeting to collaborate with the parents and the team and to consider whether any additional changes to[the student's] IEP, including supports and services, were needed. Throughout this time, the district remained ready to implement [the student's] current IEP and provide services in his current placement while the team continued the placement discussion.

Findings of Fact

27. On January 28, 2026, the student "punched a staff member in the throat."
28. For this offence, the student received a one-day out of school suspension.
29. On that same date, the special education coordinator emailed the School Psychologist for clarification regarding the parents' recommendation for a "Ready, Set, "Student" plan and if the team was going to circle back to it. The School Psychologist emailed back saying he would forward the email from the parents. The special education coordinator responded with recommending that they schedule an IEP meeting to respond and determine if the "Ready, Set, (the student]" plan needed to be included with the IEP.

30. A new para was hired on February 17, 2026, filling all open para positions, and bringing with him a background of working at a special education day school.
31. The School Psychologist started working on setting up an IEP meeting and reached out for staff availability.
32. [the student's] case manager, emailed a Notice of Meeting to Parents on February 18, 2026, indicating that the IEP meeting had been set for March 3, 2026.
33. In preparation for the meeting, the Low-Incidence Coach, Assistive Technology Team Member, Autism Interdisciplinary Team Lead, Autism Consultant, and Behavior Support Coach were asked to look at [the student]'s IEP and work with the case manager on additional areas of support to meet his needs.
34. The special education coordinator emailed the parents on Saturday, February 21, 2026, with a rough draft agenda and asked for input and answers to specific questions. The parents responded on February 23, 2026, with updated information and a response to some of the questions that had been asked. The special education coordinator responded on February 24, 2026, letting the parents know that the information and questions that parents provided and asked had been added to the agenda.
35. On Monday, March 2, 2026, the special education coordinator emailed the parents with the agenda for the IEP meeting, along with a draft IEP, and a draft Comprehensive Autism Planning System (CAPS) document.
36. The IEP team met on March 3, 2026, and agreed to the following changes:
    a. Update Parent Input section (non-consent item).
    b. Update Health and Social/Emotional present level (non-consent item).
    c. Update the Preventive Measures section of the Behavior Intervention Plan (consent item). This specifically included parent input and recommendation for a plan called "Ready, Set, [the student]".
    d. Organizing the visual schedule through the Comprehensive Autism Planning System (non-consent item).
    e. Update Special Education Services: [the student] will receive 1:1 adult support throughout his school day (consent item).
    f. Update IEP with a partial day start for up to four days and then implement a full day (consent item). Emphasis added.
37. On March 3, 2026, the special education coordinator emailed the parents, letting them know that the district was waiting to hear back from transportation regarding a route for the shortened day, and also attached the completed CAPS document.
38. The School Psychologist emailed the proposed IEP and PWN to parents on March 4, 2026.
39. The parents emailed the special education coordinator on March 4, 2026, asking what the tentative or hopeful plan for the shorter day was. The special education coordinator emailed back on March 4, 2026, stating that she thought a transportation route had been sorted out and to let her know if mom hadn't heard from LEA Representative at [the student's] January 22, 2026 IEP meeting shortly.

40. The assistant principal contacted parents on March 4, 2026, letting them know that transportation was set up for [the student] to start his shortened day schedule on March 5, 2026.
41. Parents have not returned the PWN that requests consent for the proposed changes..

Analysis

The parents allege that the district failed to implement interim supports or safety planning that may deny (the student) access to FAPE and creates safety risks for (the student), staff and peers.

The facts do not support this allegation. On January 28, 2026, the special education coordinator recommended that the district schedule an IEP meeting to respond to the parents' safety concerns and determine if the "Ready, Set, (the student]" plan needed to be included with the IEP. A new para was hired on February 17, 2026, filling all open para positions, and bringing with him a background of working at a special education day school.

The IEP team met on March 3, 2026, and agreed to update the Health and Social/Emotional present levels, update the Preventive Measures section of the Behavior Intervention Plan, update Special Education Services to add that [the student] will receive 1:1 adult support throughout his school day and update the IEP with a partial day start for up to four days and then implement a full day.

The School Psychologist emailed the proposed IEP and PWN to parents on March 4, 2026, and the assistant principal contacted parents on March 4, 2026, letting them know that transportation was set up for [the student] to start his shortened day schedule on March 5, 2026. Parents have not provided consent for the proposed changes.

Part of the parents' concern is the amount of time it took the IEP team to meet between the student's suspension for aggressive behavior and the subsequent IEP meeting, approximately one month. Understandable! However, instant relief is neither required nor feasible in the complex, procedural laden, team-environment that exists in special education. In order for the IEP team to consider the concerns of the parents, there must be some reasonable amount of planning time to set an agenda, set a meeting date when team members are available, and provide adequate notice of the meeting. There is a procedure by which a district can hold an emergency (or expedited) IEP meeting where parents voluntarily waive their right to a ten-day notice of meeting when it is deemed necessary. The parents did not request an expedited meeting and the law does not require an expedited meeting. These are matters of judgement.

The meeting in this case followed a disciplinary action that had occurred approximately one month prior to the meeting, whereby the student was suspended for one day.. The delay in conducting a meeting, while not a model of efficiency, was not so excessive as to be a violation of law. In addition, the parents did not respond to a request for consent to implement the proposed changes made at the IEP meeting. That has resulted in an additional delay, which sometimes occurs in these "complex, procedural laden, team-environments that exist in special education."

Parents, of course, are free to delay or to refuse to give consent for proposed services and placements when the proposed services and placements require consent, as these proposals at the March IEP meeting did. But that delay or refusal does not mean that "the district failed to implement interim supports or safety planning that may deny (the student) access to FAPE and creates safety risks for the student."

The evidence does not support the parents' assertion that the student's behavior on January 28 required an "interim supports or safety plan." The IEP process does not contemplate a method for which a district must "implement interim supports or safety planning" outside of an IEP meeting.

There is a method by which an IEP may be amended outside of an IEP meeting, but nothing in law requires that a district use that process. In this situation, the district responded to the parent's concerns at an IEP meeting within a reasonable time and addressed the student's needs. The parents have not consented to the district's proposals to meet the parent's concerns.

Parents, of course, are free to delay or to refuse to give consent for proposed services and placements when the proposed services and placements require consent, as these proposals at the March IEP meeting did. But that delay or refusal does not mean that "the district failed in its responsibilities.

In this concern, the district promptly responded to the parents' concerns by seeking information from the parents and setting an IEP meeting and an agenda to discuss and resolve the concerns of the parents. At the meeting, the IEP team agreed with proposed amendments to the student's IEP. The parents have not provided the requisite consent to make the proposed changes to the IEP. Had the district implemented those proposals without consent it would most certainly have been in violation of the parents' right to refuse consent for proposed.

Conclusion

Based on the foregoing, it is found that the allegation of a violation of law is not substantiated on this issue.

Concern Four

Use of disciplinary labeling without adequate implementation of disability related supports may conflict with IDEA protections regarding manifestation behavior and appropriate behavioral intervention.

Parent Position

The student's behavior leading to suspension was acknowledged by the IEP team as a manifestation of his disability. Despite this, documentation labeled the behavior as "assault." The IEP team identified that the student requires additional supports and structured regulation opportunities that were not yet in place at the time of the incident. The use of disciplinary terminology without corresponding supports increases the risk of escalation and may affect future responses by staff or law enforcement.

LEA Position

The LEA points out that:

The term "assault" is a common term. Its use is not a violation of special education laws and regulations.

Findings of Fact

42. The incident occurred on January 28. The student "punched a staff member in the throat" The "Behavior Detail Report" states, "Even though it is part of his disability, assault on staff is not acceptable…"
43. The student received a one-day out of school suspension.
44. The student has received only two days of out-of-school suspension this school year. He received 1 day of Out of School Suspension, without services on September 11, 2025 and one day on January 28, 2026.

Analysis

Special education regulations permit school districts to suspend a child with a disability for any violation of a code of student conduct for up to ten school-days in a school year even when that conduct is a manifestation of the student's disability (34 C.F.R. 300.530). The evidence presented shows that the student's behavior on January 28, 2026 was clearly a violation of school rules and the student had not been suspended for more than ten school days during this school year. Under these circumstances whether the student's behavior was a manifestation of his disability is immaterial. The district was authorized by law to suspend the student.

As for the parents' concern that using the term "assault" increases the risk of escalation and may affect future responses by staff or law enforcement, that may well be an accurate observation. It is not, however, a violation of special education laws or regulations.

Conclusion

Based on the foregoing, it is concluded that the allegation of a violation of law is not substantiated.

Concern Five

Limiting placement consideration to existing contracts may restrict access to appropriate placements necessary to provide FAPE.

Parent Position

The district stated that Hope Learning Center was the only alternative placement available through existing contracts. No documentation has been provided showing exploration of additional programs capable of meeting the students educational and medical needs. The IDEA requires consideration of the full continuum of placement options rather than limiting consideration to contracted programs.

LEA Position

The district acknowledges its LRE requirement and it provides a continuum of services, including general education classes, special education classes, special education schools, home instruction, and contracted private placements.

The district recognizes its responsibility under IDEA to ensure that [the student's] placement is determined based on his unique educational and medical needs, and not based solely on existing contractual boundaries or convenience.

The parents have indicated that [the student's] medical team has stated the location of Hope Learning Center (HLC) is not viable due to medical considerations. At this time, written documentation from his medical provider(s) communicating that determination has not been provided to the district. The district remains willing to review and consider any medical documentation the parents wish to share so that the IEP team can evaluate it as part of the placement discussion.

In an effort to support informed decision-making, the district provided the parents with available information regarding medical services and emergency response considerations related to the proposed placement. The district also encouraged the parents to seek further clarification and confirm accurate details by contacting the county EMT service directly, so that medical-response questions could be answered by the appropriate emergency services provider.

Findings of Fact

All previous findings in this complaint report are incorporated into this concern and will not be repeated, except to the extent that they are essential to the analysis of this concern. The relevant additional findings regarding this concern are:

45. The parents have informed the school district that they will not consent to the district's proposal to place the student at the district's proposed special day school, Hope Learning Center.
46. The district contacted surrounding districts with special education day school programs (USD 259 and USD 261) to inquire about the possibility of contracting for placement at one of their day schools. Those districts confirmed that they do not contract for enrollment in their day schools by students who reside outside of their districts.

Conclusion

The evidence clearly reveals that district does not limit its placement considerations to existing contracts. The district contacted two neighboring districts to inquire about whether the day school in either those districts would accept this student. The district does not have existing contracts with either of these neighboring districts for day school placements, and was informed by the neighboring districts that those neighboring districts do not offer such contracts. There may be other viable placement options for this student, although at a greater distance from home, that are available to the district as indicated previously in this report. How viable other options are must be determined by the student's IEP team, including the parents from whom consent must be obtained. But there is no evidence that supports the allegation that this district limits its placement consideration to existing contracts. In fact, the district attempted to arrange placement of this student into a day school with two neighboring districts with which there is no existing contract.

Based on the foregoing, it is found that the allegation that the district limits its placement consideration to existing contracts is unsubstantiated.

Summary of Conclusions

The allegations in this complaint of a violation of law are not substantiated. No corrective actions are required.

Right to Appeal

Either party may appeal the findings or conclusions in this report by filing a written notice of appeal with the State Commissioner of Education, ATTN: Special Education and Title Services, Landon State Office Building, 900 SW Jackson Street, Suite 620, Topeka, KS 66612-1212. The notice of appeal may also be filed by email to formalcomplaints@ksde.gov The notice of appeal must be delivered within 10 calendar days from the date of this report.

For further description of the appeals process, see Kansas Administrative Regulations 91-40-51(f).

(2) If an appeal committee affirms a compliance report that requires corrective action by an agency, that agency shall initiate the required corrective action immediately. If, after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the agency shall be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following:

(A) The issuance of an accreditation deficiency advisement;
(B) the withholding of state or federal funds otherwise available to the agency;
(C) the award of monetary reimbursement to the complainant; or
(D) any combination of the actions specified in paragraph (f)(2)

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST
UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #262 VALLEY CENTER PUBLIC SCHOOLS
ON FEBRUARY 26, 2026

DATE OF REPORT: APRIL 2, 2026

This report is in response to a complaint filed with the Kansas State Department of Education against USD #262 Valley Center Public Schools on behalf of ------- by his parents -------. In the remainder of the report, ------- will be referred to as "the student" and ------- as "the parents."

When a special education complaint is filed against a school district that is a member of a special education cooperative or interlocal, or that uses any other state recognized public agency to serve children with disabilities, the term "local education agency (LEA)" in this report will include the school district, the special education cooperative or interlocal, and any other agency that is recognized by the state as an administrative agency for public elementary or secondary schools and is serving the educational needs of this student.

Evidence Reviewed

The investigator reviewed all of the evidence initially submitted by both parties and all evidence subsequently requested by the investigator from each party. The following relevant evidence was used to analyze the concerns in this complaint:

- The formal complaint submitted by the parents.
- The response to the complaint submitted by the school district.
- E-Mail correspondence between the parties
- E-Mail correspondence between the parties and the investigator
- The student's most recent evaluation

Findings of Fact

The findings of facts for each concern are those facts that are relevant to the concern and are based upon a review of the documentation and the correspondence with the parties, including supplemental documentation requested by the investigator.

Background Information

The student is an 11 year-old boy in the 5th grade. He is eligible for special education services under the exceptionality category of autism. In his most recent evaluation, he had low reading scores and very low math and written language skills.

Concern One

Inconsistent implementation of IEP accommodations

Parent Position

Prior to winter break during the 2025-2026 school year, at the students assigned school placement, the student reported that a para educator refused to provide scribing support despite scribing being a documented accommodation in his IEP. The student also reported that expectations and supports varied depending on which adult was present, resulting in inconsistent access to required accommodations and increased anxiety impacting his ability to participate in instruction. The issue was later addressed by classroom staff, and we appreciated that response. However, the occurrence itself raised concern regarding consistency of accommodation implementation across staff.

LEA Position

The district does not agree with the parents' characterization. The team worked collaboratively with [the parent] to address concerns as they were raised and took steps to respond and make adjustments based on parent input. Concerns were addressed through direct conversations and follow-up with paraeducator staff regarding expectations and implementation of accommodations, obtaining parental consent for a reevaluation to ensure the team had current information to guide decision-making, and scheduling meetings to collaborate and problem-solve concerns. In addition, the team incorporated specific suggestions that the parents recommended, and an IEP meeting was held where the parents' concerns were discussed and addressed, and additional supports requested by the parent were added as appropriate to ensure [the student] continued to receive FAPE.

Other than an isolated occurrence in which one of [the student's] accommodations was not immediately provided, the district is unaware of any other IEP implementation issues or concerns. As indicated above, this occurrence was addressed immediately, and additional training was provided.

Findings of Fact

1. The student's IEP specifies that the student "will have access to a scribe as needed for any assignment, assessment or project that requires significant amount of handwriting when assistive technology is not available within the school until the assignment is complete."
2. Scribing is done by any adult who is in this student's area or working with him, including general education teacher, paras, and special education teacher.
3. For this student, a significant amount of handwriting is anything beyond his name. His handwriting is very difficult to read. He writes his name most of the time and circles/underlines words. Any time writing is needed (even single words or numbers), staff scribe for [the student], with a rare exception of single words.

4. The district acknowledged that there was one incident where scribing was not provided. The specific incident in question occurred when the entire class was asked in specials (counselor) to write or draw something they were currently dealing with---this was a springboard for an empathy lesson that was about to take place. The student asked his support staff to scribe his thoughts. Staff asked the student to "please try to draw a picture for me first." This task was intended to get the student thinking about concerns that they are currently facing. Student was not happy with that request. The parent shared concerns with [the student's] case manager, in December of 2025, about accommodations. The case manager responded by saying she went over accommodations and explanations with paras.
5. Paras were trained on the accommodations to be provided to the student on August 7, 2025 prior to the start of the school year, on December 11, 2025 when new staff joined and on January 13, 2026 with the initiation of the "Reset with student" proposal.
6. General education teachers were provided with access to the students IEP snapshot in early September 20025. The IEP snapshot includes information on goals, special education and related services, accommodations, modifications, supplementary aids and service and supports for school personnel. The building principle requires that general education teachers have access to IEP information for all students by Labor Day.
7. All teachers have access to the list of the students accommodations in student friendly language in the students notebook that travels with him to every class.
8. The LEA submitted a form titled "IEP Accommodation Attestation Form." The attestation form includes the following attestations: (1) I have been provided with [the students] current IEP accommodations; (2) I am familiar with the accommodations and understand my responsibility in implementing them; (3) I have consistently and routinely provided the accommodations as outlined in the IEP to the best of my ability; and (4) I understand that failure to implement I EP accommodations may impact the students access to a free appropriate public education.
9. The "IEP Accommodation Attestation Form" is dated March 31, 2026 and includes the name, position, and signature of 13 school personnel who work with the student, including four paraprofessionals, school counselor, the student's special education teacher, regular education teacher, music teacher, STEM teacher, art teacher, Librarian, physical education teacher, and ELA teacher.

Analysis

The parent asserts that, prior to winter break during the 2025-2026 school year, the student reported that a para educator refused to provide the scribing support in his IEP. The parent also asserted that the student reported that "expectations and supports varied depending on which adult was present."

This kind of allegation is difficult to investigate because it involves a unique perception of what is going on in a classroom, that may or may not be shared by others in the classroom. Along with that difficulty, courts looking at the obligation of school districts to provide the services specified in a child's IEP say that perfect implementation of an IEP is not required. To be a violation of law the failure to implement an IEP must be a material failure, see: Abigail P. v. Old Forge School District, 124 LRP 21769 (3d. Cir. 2024), joining the 4th, 5th, 8th, 9th, and 11th Circuits saying implementation failure must be material to be actionable.

In this complaint, the student reports some concern about the level of support he is receiving in the classroom. His teachers, paraeducators and other staff members who work with him have individually signed a written form titled "IEP Accommodation Attestation Form." The attestation form includes the following attestations: (1) I have been provided with [the students] current IEP accommodations; (2) I am familiar with the accommodations and understand my responsibility in implementing them; (3) I have consistently and routinely provided the accommodations as outlined in the IEP to the best of my ability; and (4) I understand that failure to implement IEP accommodations may impact the students access to a free appropriate public education.

In this instance a student is expressing a general (imprecise) feeling that his IEP implementation depends on "which adult was present." His teachers, paras and other providers uniformly attest in writing that they have provided the services in the student's IEP to the best of their ability. Considering all the information collected in this investigation, there is an insufficient basis for finding a material failure to implement this student's IEP.

Conclusion

Based on the foregoing, it is concluded that the allegation of a violation of law for failure to materially implement the student's IEP is not substantiated.

Concern Two

Failure to provide timely proactive support for escalating disability related needs.

Parent Position

Prior to and following winter break, the student demonstrated escalating anxiety, dysregulation, and increasing difficulty attending school. On January 5, 2026, the parents communicated specific concerns, including escalating anxiety and physical symptoms, need for predictable supportive adult interactions, identified triggers including afternoon specials scheduling and extended listening periods, and requests for proactive regulation supports. While individual staff made efforts to support the student, consistent proactive supports were not implemented in a timely or coordinated manner. The students condition continued to worsen, resulting in emotional breakdowns, school avoidance, and increased medical involvement.

LEA Position

The district does not agree with the parents' characterization. The team worked collaboratively with [the parent] to address concerns as they were raised and took steps to respond and make adjustments based on parent input. Concerns were addressed through direct conversations and follow-up with paraeducator staff regarding expectations and implementation of accommodations, obtaining parental consent for a reevaluation to ensure the team had current information to guide decision-making, and scheduling meetings to collaborate and problem-solve concerns. In addition, the team incorporated specific suggestions that [the parent] recommended, and an IEP meeting was held where the parents' concerns were discussed and addressed, and additional supports requested by the parent were added as appropriate to ensure [the student] continued to receive FAPE.

Findings of Fact

10. The parents messaged the case manager on January 5, 2026, asking for an IEP meeting to brainstorm some solutions together. The case manager responded that a re-evaluation was coming up.
11. The parents messaged the case manager on January 5, 2026, with all of the concerns and additional agenda items they wanted included in a meeting. The parents referenced the student having physical symptoms as a result of stress and anxiety.
12. The school psychologist emailed a consent to re-evaluate on 1/5/2026.
13. The case manager responded on January 6, 2026, addressing the parent's concerns.
14. On January 7, 2026, The parents messaged the case manager and suggested potential supports to be added to the IEP.
15. On January 9, 2026, the parents messaged the case manager and communicated extreme concern regarding the card mark that [the student] received. The case manager responded that she would let her know when there was a meeting day and time available.
16. On January 10, 2026, the parents messaged and recommended a Reset with [the student's] routine. The parent responded that she loved this and would make a couple of cards for him and staff. She also added that the school psychologist was going to look for a regulation thermometer visual for a visual check-in.
17. The case manager messaged the parents on January 12, 2026, with a Reset with [the student]. The parent responded that it looked great. The case manager also messaged back that she made a more detailed list for accommodations as well.
18. The parent responded on January 12, 2026, saying it meant a lot to all of them. She also mentioned that [the student] was really excited about it.
19. A meeting notice for an IEP meeting was sent on January 12, 2026, for a meeting on January 23, 2026.
20. On January 23, 2026, the team received an email from [the student's] doctor indicating the need for mental health days.

21. On January 23, 2026, the team met and addressed every parent concern that had been raised, indicating continued collaboration. This meeting resulted in the following actions:
    - Added card mark procedure accommodation: [the student] will use an individual behavior card system targeting IEP-identified behavior needs rather than using the building-wide system (consent item).
    - Added supports for school personnel (non-consent item). Special education staff will review the Reset with [the student] with all teachers at the beginning of each quarter, and again whenever new teachers/support staff begin working with him the length of time necessary to ensure all supports are clearly understood and implemented with fidelity.
    - Updated parental input (non-consent item).
    - Update Present Levels
22. The parents have not provided the necessary consent for these proposals.
23. Prior to when he stopped attending, [the student] had missed 14 days (2 mental health days, 8 days for illness, and 4 marked as other).

Analysis

Prior to and following winter break, the student demonstrated escalating anxiety, dysregulation, and increasing difficulty attending school. On January 5, 2026, the parents communicated specific concerns but allege that "consistent proactive supports were not implemented in a timely or coordinated manner." The facts do not support that allegation. The parents communicated their concerns on January 5, 2025. On January 23, 2026, the IEP team met and addressed every parent concern that had been raised, and added a card mark procedure accommodation whereby the student will use an individual behavior card system targeting IEP-identified behavior needs rather than using the building-wide system, and added supports for school personnel. It also added that special education staff will review the Reset with [the student] with all teachers at the beginning of each quarter, and again whenever new teachers/support staff begin working with him for the length of time necessary to ensure all supports are clearly understood and implemented with fidelity.

The parents have not provided the necessary consent for these proposals. Parents have a right to refuse to give consent for such proposals and when they do so the proposals may not be "implemented in a timely or coordinated manner." Indeed, they may not be implemented in any manner. This is the very kind of result that the law requires when parents refuse to give consent for proposed services.

Conclusion

Under these circumstances, the allegation that the school district is in violation of law is not substantiated.

CONCERN 3:

Disciplinary response to disability-related behavior is not appropriate.

Parent's position:

On January 9, 2026 the student experienced significant dysregulation during a STEM class following weeks of documented escalating distress. He received a "Character Card" disciplinary mark despite the behavior being disability related.

LEA's position:

Even if the statements made by the parent in the complaint are true, which the district disputes, their concern is not an IDEA issue. The district's meeting documentation reflects that the IEP team continued the discussion and worked through the parents' disability-related concerns. Specifically, the meeting notes and Prior Written Notice (PWN) indicate the team was able to discuss parent concerns regarding the building-wide card system and recommend an alternative/adjustment to that system to individualize the approach for [the student]. The district remains committed to ensuring his needs are addressed through collaborative, disability-informed problem-solving and appropriate IEP team decision-making.

Findings of Fact

24. On January 6, the student became dysregulated at school.
25. On January 8, the student received a "character card mark" due to his behavior on January 6, pursuant to a "school-wide card mark system." The delay in giving the "character card mark" until January 8 was done to wait until the student was calm enough to talk about it.
26. A Prior Written Notice, dated January 23, 2026, stated that the district added a card mark procedure accommodation, whereby the student will use an individual behavior card system targeting IEP-identified behavior needs rather than using the building-wide system
27. The student has had no suspensions (in-school or out-of-school suspensions).

Analysis

The behavior exhibited on January 9 may well have been related to the student's disability. Nevertheless, school districts are authorized, by law to use the same disciplinary measures on children with disabilities that they use with non-disabled students. An exception to this authority emerges when disciplinary action results in a removal of a student from the educational placement described in the student's IEP for more than ten consecutive days or from a removal for more than ten cumulative days and results in a change of placement (34 C.F.R. 300.530).

The facts in this concern include that this student has not been removed from the educational placement described in his IEP for disciplinary reasons at any time this school year. The delivery of a "character card mark" due to his behavior on January 6, was a disciplinary action that is used with all students. It was not a removal from school and not violation of special education laws and regulations.

Conclusion

Based on the foregoing, it is concluded that the allegation of a violation of law in this issue i*s not substantiated*.

CONCERN 4:

Administrative responses during IEP process undermining disability-informed decision making.

Parent Position

During an IEP meeting intended to formalize supports and address the students escalating needs the school administrator stated that he "just sees kids as kids" and does not personally see disability. The administrator repeatedly stated, "I don't know what you want me to do about it." Some of his suggested responses included removal from instructional time. These statements raise significant concerns regarding understanding of disability manifestation and IDEA protections. The student attended the meeting and was visibly distressed by these interactions. Following the meeting, the student expressed confusion and concern regarding whether disability needs were understood or respected.

LEA Position

Even if the statements made by the parent in the complaint are true, which the district disputes, their concern is not an IDEA issue. The building administrator's comments were misinterpreted and taken out of context. The context for his comment was that he believes that we should meet the unique needs of all students, regardless of whether their needs are disability-based or not.

The district's meeting documentation reflects that the IEP team continued the discussion and worked through the parents' disability-related concerns. Specifically, the meeting notes and Prior Written Notice (PWN) indicate the team was able to discuss parent concerns regarding the building-wide card system and recommend an alternative/adjustment to that system to individualize the approach for[the student]. The district remains committed to ensuring his needs are addressed through collaborative, disability-informed problem-solving and appropriate IEP team decision-making.

Findings of Fact

28. During an IEP meeting the parent alleges that a school administrator said he "just sees kids as kids" and does not personally see disability. The parent added that the administrator repeatedly stated, "I don't know what you want me to do about it," and that some of his suggested responses included removal from instructional time.

Analysis

This concern is based on alleged comments of a school administrator at an IEP meeting at which the student was attending. The alleged comments were that the administrator "just sees kids as kids" and does not personally see disability. The allegation further alleges that the administrator repeatedly stated, "I don't know what you want me to do about it." In addition, it is alleged that some of the principal's suggested responses included removal from instructional time.

The parents allege that these statements "raise significant concerns regarding understanding of disability manifestation and IDEA protections," adding that the student attended the meeting and was visibly distressed by these interactions.

As distressing as these comments may have been to the student and to his parents, such comments at an IEP meeting are not a violation of special education laws or regulations. IEP teams often must deliberate over complicated and sensitive issues. It is important that the participants in these meetings be able to express their opinions openly. Since these meetings are meant to be "team" meetings, tact is a useful approach, but is not required by law (this conclusion should not be interpreted as a finding that there was a lack of tact at this meeting).

Conclusion

Based on the foregoing, even if the parent's allegations are accurate, it is concluded that the allegation of a violation of special education laws and regulations is unsubstantiated.

CONCERN 5:

Failure to provide FAPE resulting in medically supported unilateral placement.

Parent Position

Despite repeated communication regarding escalating disability related needs, effective supports were not implemented in a timely or coordinated manner. The parents developed a proactive framework (" Reset with [the student]") to support regulation. However, administrative responses during the IEP process undermined collaborative problem solving. Following the IEP meeting, the student reported feeling unsafe returning to school. The student's pediatrician evaluated him and determined that returning to the school environment would be detrimental to his mental health. Based on these cumulative concerns, the parents initiated unilateral placement while continuing participation in the IEP process.

The district does not agree with the parents' characterization. The team worked collaboratively with the parents to address concerns as they were raised and took steps to respond and make adjustments based on parent input. Concerns were addressed through direct conversations and follow-up with paraeducator staff regarding expectations and implementation of accommodations, obtaining parental consent for a reevaluation to ensure the team had current information to guide decision-making, and scheduling meetings to collaborate and problem-solve concerns. In addition, the team incorporated specific suggestions that the parents recommended ("Reset with Student"), and an IEP meeting was held where the parents' concerns were discussed and addressed, and additional supports requested by the parent were added as appropriate to ensure [the student] continued to receive FAPE.

With respect to the parents' assertion that [the students] pediatrician determined the school environment was hostile and that return to school would be detrimental, the district notes that the parent emailed providing formal notice of intent to unilaterally enroll [the student] in a private school setting, along with a parent letter. The parent also emailed the same day, indicating she had attached a medical letter from [the student's] pediatrician. The attachment presented as a medical letter was written in the same font and manner as the parent letter and was not on medical letterhead, did not include a physician's signature, and did not come directly from the physician in the manner other correspondence had.

To ensure the district could fully and thoughtfully consider the parents' request, including any request for tuition reimbursement and whether an additional IEP meeting would be beneficial, the district informed the parents that additional information was needed and stated that a Release of Information would be provided so the district could obtain relevant information directly from [the student's] pediatrician. The parents responded that all communication should go through them rather than permitting direct communication with the pediatrician. In the absence of parent consent to communicate directly with the pediatrician and without medical documentation received directly from the medical provider, the district has not received information from [the student's] pediatrician so that it can independently verify and consider the information.

Findings of Fact

The previous findings of fact in this report are incorporated by reference in this concern. In addition:

29. The student's IEP dated 3/5/2025 (prior to the 1/23/2026 amendment) includes a variety of "regulation" supports, including these accommodations:
    - Special education support for transition in the building and at arrival and dismissal, lunch and recess.
    - Access to sensory tools to increase time in workspace.

- Access to visuals to enhance [the student's] learning and regulation through multiple modalities.
- Access to one non-contingent morning break and one afternoon non-contingent break.
- [The student] will be able to communicate his needs for a break or a regulation break.
- {The student] will have a check-in/check-out time during his daily review time with Spratt or staff.
- [The student] will have access to flexible seating--such as standing, wobble stool, etc.

30. The student's IEP goal regarding behavior regulation states:
    - By the next annual IEP, [the student] will understand and express personal thoughts, mindsets, and emotions in a constructive way. This includes but is not limited to describing personal qualities, (for example, personal strengths, weaknesses, interests, or abilities) identify benefits of various personal qualities and identify reliable self-help strategies (for example, positive self-talk, problem solving, time management, and self-monitoring) [The student] will meet this goal in 90% of observation opportunities.
31. In a 12/20/2025 Progress Report, it is reported that: In the second quarter, [the student] is understanding and expressing personal thoughts, mindsets, and emotions in a constructive way in 99% of observation opportunities. He does a good job in ELA working hard and advocating for himself in asking for breaks when he needs them and returning to class promptly.
32. At the 1/23/26 amendment meeting, an additional accommodation was added, stating that the student "will use an individual behavior card system targeting IEP identified behavior needs rather than using the building-wide system."

Analysis

The parents allege that "Despite repeated communication regarding escalating disability related needs, effective supports were not implemented in a timely or coordinated manner." The evidence supports the district's position that the student's IEP addressed the student's "regulation" needs and that the student is making progress in that area.

This is essentially the same allegation made in Concern 2 that there was a "Failure to provide timely proactive support for escalating disability related needs." As determined in Concern 2, the evidence does not support that allegation because:

a) prior to and following winter break, the student demonstrated escalating anxiety, dysregulation, and increasing difficulty attending school;
b) On January 5, 2026, the parents communicated specific concerns but allege that "consistent proactive supports were not implemented in a timely or coordinated manner;"
c) On January 23, 2026, the team met and addressed every parent concern that had been raised, and added a card mark procedure accommodation whereby the student will use an individual behavior card system targeting IEP-identified behavior needs rather than using the building-wide system, and added supports for school personnel;

d) The team also added that special education staff will review the Reset with [the student] with all teachers at the beginning of each quarter, and again whenever new teachers/support staff begin working with him the length of time necessary to ensure all supports are clearly understood and implemented with fidelity. and

e) the parents have not provided the necessary consent for these proposals.

The analysis provided in Concern 2 is incorporated by reference here and so will not be restated.

Conclusion

The allegation of a violation of law regarding this concern is not substantiated.

Summary of Conclusions

The allegation of a violation of special education laws and regulations is not substantiated. There are no corrective actions.

Right to Appeal

Either party may appeal the findings or conclusions in this report by filing a written notice of appeal with the State Commissioner of Education, ATTN: Special Education and Title Services, Landon State Office Building, 900 SW Jackson Street, Suite 620, Topeka, KS 66612-1212. The notice of appeal may also be filed by email to formalcomplaints@ksde.gov The notice of appeal must be delivered within 10 calendar days from the date of this report.

For further description of the appeals process, see Kansas Administrative Regulations 91-40-51(f).

(2) If an appeal committee affirms a compliance report that requires corrective action by an agency, that agency shall initiate the required corrective action immediately. If, after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the agency shall be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following:

(A) The issuance of an accreditation deficiency advisement;
(B) the withholding of state or federal funds otherwise available to the agency;
(C) the award of monetary reimbursement to the complainant; or
(D) any combination of the actions specified in paragraph (f)(2)

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST
UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #229
ON MARCH 2, 2026

DATE OF REPORT: APRIL 10, 2026

The Complaint is against USD #229 Blue Valley Public Schools. In the remainder of the report, "the School" and the "local education agency (LEA)" shall refer to USD #229.

When a special education complaint is filed against a school district that is a member of a special education cooperative or interlocal, or that uses any other state recognized public agency to serve children with disabilities, the term "local education agency (LEA)" in this report will include the school district, the special education cooperative or interlocal, and any other agency that is recognized by the state as an administrative agency for public elementary or secondary schools and is serving the educational needs of this student.

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) allows for a 30-day timeline to investigate a child complaint. A complaint is considered to be filed on the date it is delivered to both the KSDE and the LEA. In this case, the KSDE initially received the Complaint on March 2, 2026, and the 30-day timeline ended on April 1, 2026.

Allegations

The following issues will be investigated:

ISSUE ONE: Whether USD #229, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), implemented the Student's Individualized Education Program (IEP) when the Student was "kept in the principal's office" for the "entirety of the school day" on February 26, 2026. K.A.R. 91-40-16; 34 CFR § 300.323.

ISSUE TWO: Whether USD #229, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, changed the Student's placement when the Student was "remov[ed] from recess as a behavioral consequence" and spent the school day in the principal's office on February 26, 2026. K.A.R. 91-40-34(a), K.A.R. 91-40-21; 34 § C.F.R. 300.116, 300.530(b)(1).

ISSUE THREE: Whether USD #229, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, provided the Student a free appropriate public education (FAPE) when the Student was restricted from recess and spent the day in the principal's office. K.A.R. 91-40-2, K.A.R. 91-40-1(z); 34 CFR §§ 300.17, 300.101.

Investigation of Complaint

The Complaint Investigator interviewed the Parent on March 31, 2026. The following LEA staff were interviewed on April 1, 2026: The Principal, the Administrative Intern, and the Social Worker.

In completing this Investigation, the Complaint Investigator reviewed documentation provided by the Parent and the LEA. Although additional documentation was provided and reviewed, the following materials were used as the basis of the findings and conclusions of the investigation:

1. Chronological Timeline of Events, Fall 2025-Post 02/26/26
2. Individualized Education Program, 10/30/25
3. Addendum: Parent Communication with Building Administration, no date
4. Individual Student Safety Plan, 02/26/25
5. Daily Attendance Profile, 2025-26 School Year

16. Email, re: Official Complaint, 03/02/26-03/03/26

Background Information

This Investigation involved a fifth-grade student enrolled at an elementary school in USD #229. The Student is currently receiving special education or related services as a child with a disability per the IDEA under the category Specific Learning Disability (SLD). The Student had a medical diagnosis of Attention-Deficit/Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD), Dyslexia, and Unspecified Anxiety Disorder. The Student resides with the Parent.

Findings of Fact

The following findings are based on a review of documentation and interviews with the Parent and staff in the LEA.

1. The Student is friendly and gets along well with others. The Student is respectful and polite to both adults and peers, has a good attitude, listens to and follows directions, and is organized. (D22)
2. According to a Psychological Evaluation dated November 7, 2022, the Student had "five atypical T-scores" which was associated with "a very high likelihood of having a disorder characterized by attention deficits, such as ADHD." The Student's pattern of results was suggestive of difficulty staying focused and sustaining attention over time, they had a "very slow mean" response speed and a high inconsistency in reaction times. (D65)
3. The Student met three out of the required six inattentive symptoms for a diagnosis of ADHD. Based on their self-ratings, the Student met zero out of the required six symptoms. (D65) The Student displayed "strong performance" in executive functioning involving planning, organization, working memory, and cognitive flexibility. (D71)
4. The Student's Evaluation Report dated November 28, 2023, documented the following relevant information:
    a. The Student was diagnosed with a SLD with impairment in reading consistent with dyslexia, an SLD with impairment in written expression, an SLD with impairment in mathematics, and an unspecified anxiety disorder. (D53)
    b. The primary concerns for the Student were related to their academic development and secondarily their executive functioning. (D53)
    c. On the Behavior Assessment for Children, third edition, no concerns were noted for "emotional/behavioral functioning." In the home setting, the Student was noted to exhibit emerging concerns for anxiety and depression. (D53)
    d. The Student met the criteria for Dyslexia. (D54)
5. The Student's IEP dated October 30, 2025 contained the following relevant information:
    a. Current academic achievement indicated the Student's learning was impacted by challenges with attention, task initiation, and independent work in reading and writing. The Student required specially designed instruction (SDI) and accommodations to access and continue to make progress in the general education setting. (D28)
    b. The Parent reported the Student's "biggest weakness" was not asking for help when needed. (D29)
    c. The Student's behavior did not impede their learning or the learning of others. (D29)
    d. Reading goal: "Know and apply grade-level phonics and word analysis skills in decoding words. Use combined knowledge of all letter-sound correspondences, syllabication patterns and morphology (e.g., roots and affixes) to read unfamiliar multisyllabic words accurately in context and out of context."

i. Service provided by the Special Education Teacher. (D31)

e. Spelling goal: "By October 29, 2026, when given a list of words to encode (spell) from the following skills: Vowel Teams (predictable and unpredictable), Vowel R, Complex Consonants (soft c & g, dge, tch, silent letters), and Long Vowel Silent e syllables, [the Student] will spell them with 85% accuracy, on 2 out of 3 data collection days."

i. Service provided by the Special Education Teacher. (D31)

f. Executive functioning goal: "By October 29, 2026, [the Student] will increase turning in completed assignments, with an overall average of 85%, 4 out 5 data collection weeks."

i. Service provided by the Special Education Teacher. (D32)

g. A statement of special education indicated to ensure participation in extracurriculars and general education events such as field trips, assemblies, and school-wide activities, regularly scheduled IEP services may be bypassed. (D33)

h. Special education services beginning October 30, 2025 through October 29, 2026:

i. Direct services in a special education classroom for 40 minutes, five times every week.

ii. Direct services in a general education classroom for 60 minutes, five times every week. (D33)

i. Accommodations and modifications:

i. Preferential seating, away from distractions and close to the teacher and the board.

ii. Modify written assignments in length.

iii. Access to the restroom.

iv. Frequent checks for understanding.

v. Alternate work space.

vi. Access to a mint or hard candy.

vii. Access to fidgets to help the Student maintain focus.

viii. Speech to text for writing.

ix. Repeated directions.

x. Chunking assignments and assessments.

xi. Up to 1.5 extended time for assignments. (D35)

j. The Student participated in general and special education within their home school. (D37) (P4-P23)

6. A Chronological Timeline of Events provided by the Parent, stated on February 24, 2026, the Principal met with the "same six [students]" regarding the February 18, 2026 incident. There was no new reported incident that prompted the meeting. During the meeting, the Student corrected what they believed to be inaccurate information, however, the correction was interpreted as disrespect or an interruption. An additional disciplinary response followed and instructional time was lost. (P2)
7. According to a Student Incident Report, the Student had one incident, dated February 25, 2026 documented as the offender for a bullying or harassment violation. (D90-D91)
8. On February 26, 2026, an allegation was made regarding a breakfast interaction. The Student denied the allegation. The Student reported they attempted to avoid conflict by moving seats. The Student was advised they would spend time in the office, and was kept in the Principal's office for the entire school day. The Student was not permitted to attend classes, to eat lunch with their peers, or to attend recess. The Parent stated no formal suspension paperwork was issued and there was no Emergency Safety Intervention (ESI) documentation provided. The Parent also stated there was no written notice of the disciplinary action and no documentation explaining how the IEP services were delivered. (P2)
9. On February 25, 2026, the Principal emailed the Parent to inform them the Student would be "spending some time in the office" the following day. (D10)
    a. On February 26, 2026, the Parent responded to the Principal to question why the Principal decided to "revisit the situation" that had originally occurred on February 18, 2026 and had already been "handled." They asked if "talks and consequences" were the only actions taken to resolve the issue. The Parent asked how long the Student was removed from class, beyond the 20 minutes for the phone call between the Principal, the Parent and the Student. The Parent indicated the Student was "stressed" and stated it was "beginning to show through [their] physical health." (D8-D10)
    b. The Principal and the Parent corresponded through email to schedule a time to discuss the details of the incident. (D7)
    c. In an email dated March 23, 2026, the Principal provided clarification on the events of February 25 and 26, 2026. On February 25, 2026, the Principal received a report that the Student called another student a name. They treated the situation as an instance of bullying, assigned the Student in-school suspension (ISS), and prepared a safety plan. The Student attended ISS from 9:45 a.m. until the end of the day. They participated in the schoolwide activity in the morning which conflicted with their usual special education service time. (D92-D93)
10. According to an unsigned Individual Student Safety Plan dated February 26, 2026, if unexpected or inappropriate behavior continued from the Student, further consequences such as separation from school and involvement with the School Resource Officer would be pursued. The Student would not be allowed to sit with the other student at lunch or in any school setting. If the Student was seated close to them, the Student or the other peer would politely ask to move seats. The Student would not play with the peer at recess or fitness break. Each morning, the Student would report directly to the General Education Teacher's room. If the Student received a school breakfast, they would take their breakfast to the General Education Teacher's room to eat. (P31)

11. On March 2, 2026, the Parent emailed the Superintendent, the Special Education Director, and the School Board to notify them the Complaint had been filed. In the email, the Parent identified they were not provided with the following documents: formal suspension documentation, written notice identifying the disciplinary category, documentation of how the Student's instructional minutes were delivered, information regarding consideration of a Manifestation Determination Review (MDR), and confirmation LEA policy was followed. (D101) In their email, the Parent formally requested:
    a. Written clarification of the disciplinary action taken on February 26, 2026.
    b. Documentation of how the Student's IEP instructional minutes were delivered during their removal.
    c. Confirmation of whether this action constitutes in-school suspension under LEA policy.
    d. Written clarification as to whether this removal qualifies as seclusion under KSDE Emergency Safety Intervention (ESI) regulations.
    e. An immediate IEP meeting to review behavioral supports and ensure procedural compliance.
    f. Written assurance that all future disciplinary measures will follow the IDEA safeguards and LEA policy. (D102-D103)
12. In an undated document titled Parent Communication with Building Administration, the Parent asked whether alternative interventions were implemented beyond administrative conversations and consequences such as social worker intervention, restorative practices, behavioral supports aligned with the Student's IEP, and disability-informed strategies. The Parent further stated they had not received clear information about which supportive interventions were attempted prior to the removal from instruction. The Parent also raised concerns regarding repeated removal from class time. They stated despite efforts to collaborate and clarify concerns at the building level, the February 26, 2026, full-day removal occurred without documentation, IEP implementation clarification, or procedural safeguards. (P26-P27)
13. According to the Student's Daily Attendance Profile for the 2025-26 school year, the Student was marked as having ISS on February 26, 2026. (D5)
14. According to the Student's 5th Grade Schedule, the Student was scheduled to work with the Special Education Teacher between 9:00 a.m. and 9:30 a.m. daily. (D40)

15. On March 2, 2026, the Parent filed the Complaint.
16. On March 3, 2025, the Principal emailed the Parent and stated February 26, 2026, was considered an ISS day. They added, it was assigned as a consequence for the Student's actions on February 25, 2026. The Principal indicated they assigned the ISS as opposed to an out-of-school suspension (OSS) so the Student could work on their schoolwork, meet with the counselor or social worker, work on restorative experiences, and work with the Special Education Teacher for their SDI. (D14)
    a. The Principal added, the Student did not receive their SDI for that day due to a school-wide activity in which the Student was allowed to participate, which occurred at a regularly scheduled time for their SDI. The schoolwide activity ended at 9:45 a.m., and the Student spent the rest of the day in the office with either the Principal, the Administrative Intern, or the Social Worker. (D14)

       On March 3, 2026, the Special Education Director emailed the Parent to follow up after their phone call. The Special Education Director explained the Student's time spent in the Principal's office would only count as a day of removal if the Student did not have access to their general education curriculum, special education services, and access, to the extent appropriate, to their general education peers. They added the disciplinary actions did not constitute an ESI incident. (D15)
17. In an email to the Parent dated March 9, 2026, the Principal described several behavioral incidents that triggered the development of a safety plan following the incident on February 25, 2026. According to the email, the Student made an inappropriate comment to another student during breakfast about them "being gay." After investigating, the Principal learned through other students that the Student had made "multiple comments" similar to that one to the same student throughout the year in unstructured settings. They stated the length of time other students reported hearing these comments ranged "from weeks to months."
    a. The Principal confirmed that, based on the "repetitive nature" of the Student's comments toward the same student, they considered it bullying or harassment and assigned the Student ISS. The Principal noted they considered OSS but wanted the Student to have access to a "restorative day."
    b. The Principal confirmed the Student worked with the Social Worker, the Principal, and the Administrative Intern on behavioral concerns and their schoolwork. They confirmed that the Student did not work with the Special Education Teacher due to the school-wide event's special schedule. They confirmed implementing a safety plan was the District's policy for bullying or harassment situations. (D17-D18) 18. According to a Progress Report dated March 13, 2026, the Student received the following scores toward their IEP goals:
    a. Reading Goal: "[M]aking appropriate progress and on pace to meet goal."

b. Spelling goal: "[M]aking appropriate progress and on pace to meet goal."

c. Executive functioning goal: "[M]aking appropriate progress and on pace to meet goal." (D88-D89)

Parent Interview:

19. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Parent detailed the events of February 26, 2026. They explained the Student spent the school day in the Principal's office, which was later identified as an ISS. The Parent was initially informed by the Principal that the Student would "spend some time in the office" but stated they did not receive clarification that this meant the Student would be isolated from peers and all services for the entire day. Aside from participating in a morning program called "Husky Den," the Student did not receive any IEP services or instruction during the day. (P1, 01:17, 03:03, P2, 05:50, 07:28)

20. Additionally, the Parent shared the Principal confirmed that no IEP services were provided that day and noted the Student did not attend recess or eat lunch with peers. The Parent contended the Student remained in the office with a counselor for the duration of the school day. Regarding academic progress during the ISS, the Student reported to the Parent that they did not complete any schoolwork or receive instruction. Following this event, the Parent observed that the Student's attitude toward school shifted significantly, characterized by increased anxiety and a feeling that the School was no longer a safe environment. (P2, 10:03, P6, 27:48, 28:33, P7, 30:10)

Principal Interview:

21. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Principal was accompanied by the Special Education Director and clarified how ISS was assigned as a consequence for disciplinary infractions or persistent behavioral patterns that had not been corrected through progressive discipline. They shared parent notification generally occurred on the same day as the incident to ensure the family could discuss the situation with the Student at home. While OSS required a formal board policy letter, ISS was normally communicated via telephone. (P3, 07:59)

22. The Principal stated they attempted to call the Parent on February 25, 2026, but were unable to connect and sent an email that evening stating that the Student would be working in the office the following day. During a follow-up call on the morning of the suspension, the Parent requested that the Student meet with a counselor as part of the disciplinary process to help the Student learn and grow. The Parent specifically requested the Social Worker, and the Principal subsequently coordinated that meeting. (P1, 01:47, P2, 02:40, P5, 11:57, 12:38)

23. When assigning ISS to a student with an IEP, the Principal shared that the standard practice is to coordinate with the student's case manager to ensure the continued delivery of SDI. They confirmed their normal practice was for students to attend their regular resource room sessions during ISS. The Principal confirmed they connected with the Special Education Teacher about the Student's ISS and bringing the Student to their space, and the Special Education Teacher informed them the group was not meeting due to the whole-school activity. Because of the school-wide event, the Student's reading group did not meet.

24. Additionally, the Special Education Director clarified that per a clause in the IEP, missed minutes resulting from school-wide activities are generally not required to be made up, provided that all peers in special education are similarly affected. Furthermore, because the Student maintained access to the general curriculum and special education support was available, the LEA did not classify this ISS as a formal day of removal. (P4, 09:11, 10:03, 10:55, P5, 12:52)

25. The Principal detailed the Student's ISS day. On February 26, 2026, they recalled the Student spending approximately 30% to 40% of their day directly with them. Their time together was primarily devoted to academic work, which accounted for 60% to 70% of their interactions. Specifically, the Principal remembered reviewing reading and social studies materials provided by the Student's teacher. The Principal recalled that approximately 20% of their time was dedicated to social-emotional and restorative work intended to help the Student learn from the disciplinary incident. The remainder of the period involved relationship-building, movement breaks, and a 15-minute recess that included outdoor time. (P2, 02:40, 03:40, P3, 07:03, 07:26)

26. The Principal described the Student initially as "closed up." They noted that the Student became more responsive and engaged after about 20 to 30 minutes of working together by engaging the Student in a personal conversation and rapport building. Following this, the Student became more responsive and displayed a typical, more engaged personality for the remainder of the day. (P3, 05:53)

Social Worker Interview:

27. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Social Worker shared they met with the Student for the first time following a request from the Principal and the Student's Parent. The session took place in their office during the afternoon, starting at approximately 1:15 p.m., while the Student was in ISS. The Social Worker recalled that the Student appeared quiet and "bummed," though not visibly upset or crying. To build rapport, the two engaged in casual conversation about football, and the Student utilized various fidgets located on the Social Worker's table. The Social Worker shared they also took a few laps together around the school library to get the Student moving. They indicated they did not perform any academic work with the Student or implement any specific accommodations from the Student's IEP during this interaction. (P1, 01:41, P2, 02:20, 03:35, 04:28, 04:36)

Administrative Intern Interview:

28. The Administrative Intern recalled spending approximately 1.5 to 2 hours with the Student. During this time, they worked on a social studies assignment involving a reading passage, word bank, and map. They had started working on math before the Student returned to the Principal's office. Additionally, the Administrative Intern shared they discussed an incident in which the Student used an unkind term with a classmate, and together they researched strategies for breaking habits and developed a plan to use replacement behaviors or deep breathing in the future. (P1, 01:33, 02:31, P2, 03:19, 03:39, 04:13, 05:10)

Positions of the Parties, Applicable Regulations, and Conclusions

Issue One

Whether USD #229, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, implemented the Student's IEP when the Student was "kept in the principal's office" for the "entirety of the school day" on February 26, 2026. K.A.R. 91-40-16; 34 CFR § 300.323.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(3) and 34 C.F.R. § 300.323, an IEP must be in effect for each exceptional child at the beginning of each school year.

The Parent alleged on February 26, 2026, the Student was removed from instruction for the entirety of the day and kept in the Principal's office. During this time, the Parent alleged the Student was not permitted to attend classes, did not receive instruction aligned with the IEP, was not allowed to eat lunch with their peers, and was not allowed to attend recess. The Parent further alleged no formal suspension paperwork was provided and there was no documentation provided as to how the Student's IEP services were delivered.

The LEA acknowledged that the Student was placed in ISS on February 26, 2026, but the disciplinary consequence was not considered a "short-term disciplinary day of removal." Additionally, the LEA stated that any interruption to SDI was due to a schoolwide schedule accessible to all students, as stipulated in the Student's IEP. The LEA contended the Student remained in ISS for a full school day, participated in general education activities, and had access to the same schoolwork as their peers.

On February 26, 2026, the Student was placed in ISS following an allegation of bullying, resulting in a full-day removal to the Principal's office. The Parent alleged a total denial of instruction and missed recess. The Principal and an Administrative Intern reported providing academic support, restorative work, and an alternative recess throughout the day in addition to the Student attending the schoolwide event. Per the Student's IEP, regularly scheduled special education services could be bypassed to allow for participation in school-wide activities, which accounted for the Student missing their morning SDI reading group. The Principal noted that ISS is typically communicated via telephone rather than formal paperwork, and an email was sent to the Parent the evening prior after a failed call attempt. During a follow-up call on the morning of the suspension, the Parent requested that the Student meet with a counselor, a request the Principal fulfilled by coordinating a meeting with the Social Worker. The Principal coordinated time with the School Counselor per the Parent's request.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to implement the Student's IEP. The LEA provided academic support and fulfilled counseling requests during the disciplinary removal. Furthermore, the temporary bypass of SDI reading services was consistent with the Student's IEP provisions, and the School's communication efforts met regulatory requirements.

Issue Two

> Whether USD #229, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, changed the Student's placement when the Student was "remov[ed] from recess as a behavioral consequence" and spent the school day in the principal's office on February 26, 2026. K.A.R. 91-40-21; 34 § C.F.R. 300.116.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-21 and 34 § C.F.R. 300.116, educational agencies must ensure that children with disabilities are educated in the Least Restrictive Environment (LRE). This includes providing a full continuum of placement options, ranging from regular classes with supplementary services like resource rooms to more intensive settings like special schools, home instruction, or hospitals. All placement decisions must be made by a knowledgeable group of people, including the parents, and must be based on the child's IEP. These decisions should be reviewed at least once a year and in conformity with the LRE, with the goal of keeping the student as close to home as possible, ideally in the same school they would attend if they did not have a disability.

The agency is responsible for making sure parents can fully participate in these placement meetings by providing proper notice, offering virtual options like video conferencing if the parent cannot attend in person, and arranging for interpreters when necessary. While a meeting can proceed without a parent after repeated, documented attempts to contact them, the focus remains on inclusive participation. Furthermore, students should not be removed from regular classrooms simply because they require modifications to the general curriculum.

Agencies must also ensure that students with disabilities can participate in nonacademic and extracurricular activities, such as meals and recess, alongside their peers without disabilities to the maximum extent appropriate, providing any necessary supplementary aids. If a student's IEP requires a specialized public or private facility to receive a FAPE, the agency must provide this at no cost to the parents, including room and board. Any separate facilities used must be comparable to those for non-exceptional children and appropriate for the students' ages and programs.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-34(a) and 34 § C.F.R. 300.530(b)(1), each agency's school personnel may impose one or more short-term suspensions upon a child with a disability during a school year for violations of any school rule if these short-term suspensions do not constitute a pattern amounting to a change in placement for disciplinary reasons.

The Parent alleged that the Student was restricted from recess on February 26, 2026, due to behavioral issues and was required to remain in the Principal's Office for the duration of the day. The Parent contended that this disciplinary action constitutes a change in placement.

The LEA responded that although February 26, 2026 was considered an ISS, it did not constitute a removal or a change of placement under the IDEA. The LEA reported that although the Student was assigned an alternative recess, they were not denied a recess. Rather, the recess occurred in an alternative general education setting with general education staff, which is a common general education disciplinary practice.

The LEA treated the Student's full day ISS on February 26, 2026, as an extension of the general education setting. The Principal and Special Education Director maintained that the placement in the office was not a formal removal from the educational program, as the Student remained on campus to work on general education curriculum materials under the supervision of administrative staff and the Social Worker. By utilizing ISS, the School provided a restorative environment where the Student could engage with academic assignments and receive social-emotional support rather than being excluded from the school environment entirely for one full day. As part of this general education setting, the Principal reported that the Student was provided a 15-minute individual recess to ensure a movement break was included in the day.

The Student received a one day ISS, and although they had access to general education activities, they were not provided with special education services during the suspension; the LEA should record February 26, 2026 as a suspension. A change in placement occurs if a student is removed from their current educational setting for more than ten consecutive school days or if a series of removals constitutes a pattern.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the Student's ISS constituted a change in placement because it was a single incident that did not exceed the ten day threshold. By providing access to academic materials, restorative social-emotional support, and an individual movement break, the LEA maintained the suspension as an extension of the general education setting.

Issue Three

Whether USD #229, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, provided the Student a FAPE when the Student was restricted from recess and spent the day in the principal's office. K.A.R. 91-40-2, K.A.R. 91-40-1(z); 34 CFR §§ 300.17, 300.101.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-2, K.A.R. 91-40-1(z); 34 CFR §§ 300.17, 300.101. Each agency is mandated to provide a FAPE to all exceptional children residing in its jurisdiction, ensuring services are provided at public expense, meet state standards, include appropriate schooling, and follow an IEP. A FAPE must be available beginning no later than the child's third birthday and must be provided even if the child has not failed a course or been retained and is advancing from grade to grade. Ultimately, these services must be based on the child's unique needs rather than their category of disability.

The Parent alleged the previous allegations denied the Student a FAPE.

The LEA's aforementioned responses ensured the continued provision of a FAPE.

The LEA ensured the ISS remained an extension of the general program rather than an exclusionary removal by providing academic materials, a movement break, and the requested counseling. Additionally, the Student's progress report indicated that the Student was making progress toward their IEP goals.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to provide the Student a FAPE, by maintaining access to the general education curriculum and providing necessary social-emotional support during the ISS.

Right to Appeal

Either party may appeal the findings or conclusions in this report by filing a written notice of appeal with the State Commissioner of Education, ATTN: Special Education and Title Services, Landon State Office Building, 900 SW Jackson Street, Suite 620, Topeka, KS 66612-1212. The notice of appeal may also be filed by email to formalcomplaints@ksde.gov The notice of appeal must be delivered within 10 calendar days from the date of this report.

For further description of the appeals process, see Kansas Administrative Regulations 91-40-51(f).

(2) If an appeal committee affirms a compliance report that requires corrective action by an agency, that agency shall initiate the required corrective action immediately. If, after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the agency shall be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following:

(A) The issuance of an accreditation deficiency advisement;
(B) the withholding of state or federal funds otherwise available to the agency;
(C) the award of monetary reimbursement to the complainant; or
(D) any combination of the actions specified in paragraph (f)(2)

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST
UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #263
ON MARCH 9, 2026

DATE OF REPORT: APRIL 15, 2026

The Complaint is against USD #263, Mulvane Public Schools. In the remainder of the report, "the School" and the "local education agency (LEA)" shall refer to USD #263.

When a special education complaint is filed against a school district that is a member of a special education cooperative or interlocal, or that uses any other state recognized public agency to serve children with disabilities, the term "local education agency (LEA)" in this report will include the school district, the special education cooperative or interlocal, and any other agency that is recognized by the state as an administrative agency for public elementary or secondary schools and is serving the educational needs of this student.

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) allows for a 30-day timeline to investigate a child complaint. A complaint is considered to be filed on the date it is delivered to both the KSDE and the LEA. In this case, the KSDE initially received the Complaint on March 9, 2026, and the 30-day timeline ended on April 8, 2026.

Allegations

The following issues will be investigated:

ISSUE ONE: Whether USD #263, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), implemented the accommodations in the Student's IEP when the Student was completing coursework online. K.A.R. 91-40-16; 34 CFR § 300.323.

ISSUE TWO: Whether USD #263, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, provided the Student with the least restrictive environment when the Student was taking online courses. K.A.R. 91-40-21; 34 CFR § 300.116.

Investigation of Complaint

The Complaint Investigator interviewed the Parent on April 1, 2026. The following LEA staff were interviewed on April 2, 2026: The Special Education Teacher and the Principal.

In completing this investigation, the Complaint Investigator reviewed documentation provided by the Parent and the LEA. Although additional documentation was provided and reviewed, the following materials were used as the basis of the findings and conclusions of the investigation:

1. Individualized Education Plan, 09/24/25
2. Amendment IEP, 12/04/25
3. Progress Report, 03/20/26
4. IEP Amendment Form for Changes not Requiring a Full IEP Team Meeting, 12/04/25
5. IEP, 09/24/25
6. Class Progress Report, 03/13/26
7. Principal Notes, 03/04/26-03/05/26
8. Student Attendance, 09/06/19-03/11/26
9. Class Schedule, 2025-26 School Year
10. Attendance Codes, School Year
11. Bright Thinker Platform Accommodation, no date
12. Reduced Multiple Choice Example, no date

Background Information

This Investigation involved an eleventh-grade student enrolled at a high school in USD #263. The Student has an existing IEP and is eligible for special education services. The Student enrolled in the LEA in October 2025 after previously attending schools in other districts. Following an incident in March 2026 involving an allegedly inappropriate comment by a teacher, the Student was transitioned from an in-person class to an online Science course to maintain educational access.

Findings of the Investigation

The following findings are based on a review of documentation and interviews with the Parent and staff in the LEA.

1. An IEP dated September 24, 2025, documented the following relevant information:
    a. The Student had needs in the area of social-emotional.
        i. The Student required support to demonstrate improved self-advocacy skills and assertiveness in conflict situations.
        ii. Needs would be addressed through social work services and a specific goal. (D58)
        iii. Goal: The Student would "be able to demonstrate improved self-advocacy skills and assertiveness during conflict situations, as evidenced by [their] ability to effectively identify and communicate [their] needs in 4 out of 5 observed incidences." (D64)

b. The Student had needs in reading.
    i. The Student had no recorded grades from their previous school and needed a comprehensive academic assessment and targeted support to address their learning gap and attention-related challenges.
    ii. Needs would be supported through paraeducator support and a goal. (D60)
    iii. Goal: By September 23, 2026, with practice on vocabulary words, "[the Student] will improve [their] vocabulary scores to a 75% in English." (D65)
c. The Parent had no concerns. (D61)
d. Time away from peers was considered a potentially harmful effect, but the benefits of special education services were noted to outweigh any harmful effects. (D61)
e. Educational placement and special education services beginning on September 24, 2025 through September 23, 2026:
    i. Social work in the special education resource, pull-out setting for 20 minutes one day per week.
    ii. Special education in the general education inclusion setting for math, science, English, and social studies for 80 minutes, five days per week.
    iii. Special education in the special education resource, pull-out setting for "structured study" for 40 minutes, five days per week. (D66)
f. The Team considered placement in the regular education environment with supplementary aids, but the "severity of the disability is such that services cannot be achieved satisfactorily." (D66)
g. Accommodations:
    i. "A quiet, separate location for classroom assessments/assignments, district assessments, and/or state assessments."
    ii. "Note-taking assistance- such as guided notes or a copy of the teacher's notes at the end of class."
    iii. "Text read aloud by a human or electronic voice reader for classroom assessments/assignments and district/state assessments."
    iv. "Step-by-step explicit instructions, such as a list for classroom assignments."
    v. "Extended time for classroom assignments/assessments, district assessments, and /or state assessments." (D67)
h. Modifications:
    i. "[The] Student will receive fewer answer options for multiple choice assignments/tests in the classroom setting." (D68)

2. On September 24, 2025, prior written notice (PWN) stated the IEP Team met to review the "evaluation/assessment data" for the Student to determine special education and related services needed by the Student and documented the following:

a. "From 9/24/2025-9/23/2026, [the Student] will receive pull-out … social work services for 20 minutes 1x weekly during study skills or a non-core class."

b. "From 9/24/2025-9/23/2026, [the Student] will receive services in the form of …Regular classroom time with para[educator] support in [s]cience, [m]ath, and [s]ocial [s]tudies for 80 minutes 5 days per week and in the form of … [s]pecial [e]ducation classroom time in [s]tructured [s]tudy for 40 minutes 5 days per week."

c. The action was proposed to allow the Student to receive "enough services" while participating with their peers in the general education classroom.

d. The Team considered providing the Student with additional special education services, but rejected that option because the Student demonstrated that they did not require them.

e. The Team identified a potentially harmful effect as the Student feeling they needed more support than they were receiving. The Team stated the opportunity to work to complete assignments outweighed the harmful effects. (D11-D13)

3. An IEP amendment dated December 4, 2025, noted the following information with an initiation date of November 18, 2025:

   a. The Student had needs in the area of Reading.

      i. Which would be met by general education supports, accommodations, modifications, and/or supplementary aids and services, and a goal.

      ii. The Student's reading goal stated, the Student would independently read a grade-level passage and answer eight out of ten comprehension questions with an average accuracy of 100% on 4 out of 5 trials.

      iii. Baseline: The Student independently read a grade-level passage and answered eight out of ten comprehension questions with an average accuracy of 100% on 4 out of 5 trials. (D28)

   b. Accommodations starting November 18, 2025 through September 23, 2026:

      i. "A quiet, separate location for classroom assessments/assignments, district assessments, and/or state assessments."

      ii. "Note-taking assistance- such as guided notes or a copy of the teacher's notes at the end of class."

      iii. "Text read aloud by a human or electronic voice reader for classroom assessments/assignments and district/state assessments."

      iv. "Step-by-step explicit instructions, such as a list for classroom assignments."

      v. "Extended time for classroom assignments/assessments, district assessments, and /or state assessments."

vi. "Student will receive fewer answer options for multiple choice assignments/tests in the classroom setting. (D29-D30)

c. Special education and related services beginning November 18, 2025 through September 23, 2026:

i. Special education support in ELA, social studies, and math in the general education setting, five days per week for 60 minutes total, 20 minutes each class.

ii. Direct social work counseling in the special education setting, one day each week for 20 minutes. (D32)

4. On November 18, 2025, an IEP Amendment Form for Changes not requiring a Full IEP Team Meeting documented the IEP was amended to reflect the changes needed due to a change in schools and noted the Student would receive their special education services in the general education setting. (D39)

5. A PWN, dated November 18 2025, confirmed the information and services stated in the aforementioned amended IEP. Additionally, the PWN stated the "correction was necessary to fit the current students [sic] needs and to comply with [the] IDEA." The PWN stated the changes were needed to reflect the Student's "learning environment" at the School and added "services in the general education classroom" was the [least restrictive environment] (LRE). The IEP team used "current data, [c]lasssroom data, student input, and [the] school schedule as a basis for the decision." (D41-D42)

6. An email dated December 11, 2025, from the Special Education Teacher to the Parent asked the Parent for clarification, and whether they "wanted the changes that were on the paperwork to [the Student's] IEP." The Parent responded with, "Yes." (D51)

7. A progress report dated January 1, 2026, indicated the Student showed "slight regression" on their reading goal and provided no data points. (D48)

8. A document dated March 4, 2026, noted an incident that took place during the fifth hour in which the Student had their phone out, and the teacher had made an "inappropriate comment." The Parent called the office during the sixth hour and had picked up the Student. The following day, the Student was "adamant" about not returning to the fifth-hour class, so the Principal and Assistant Principal with assistance from the Special Education Teacher, helped the Student choose environmental science via an online program. They called the Parent to let them know. (D77)

9. On March 7, 2026, the Parent filed the complaint.

10. A progress report dated March 10, 2026, indicated the Student showed "slight improvement" on their reading goal and provided no data points. (D48)

11. A grade report from the environmental systems online class dated March 13, 2026, indicated the Student's grade was 81.1%, and the Student was at 85% progress in the class. (D70)

12. An undated Bright Thinker platform document indicated the platform incorporated a setting which restricts the number of multiple-choice answer options and stated, "The student's settings limit answer choices to three options when applicable." (D88)
    a. An additional Bright Thinker screenshot of the Student's profile settings indicated checked boxes next to "Automatically allow retries for below-passing activities" and "Ignore time limit on assessments." (D90) 13. The Student's class schedule for the 2025-26 school year indicated the following classes:
    a. Semester 1:
        i. Welding Processes 2
        ii. Journalism and Media Communication
        iii. American Studies
        iv. Tier Geometry
        v. Animal Science
        vi. English 3
        vii. Study Skills
        viii. Advisory 11
    b. Semester 2:
        i. Welding Processes 2
        ii. Nutrition and Wellness
        iii. American studies
        iv. Tier Geometry
        v. Environmental Science Systems
        vi. English 3
        vii. Study Skills
        viii. Advisory 11 (D84)
14. An undated attendance report for the Student's attendance for an eight-period day indicated the following:
        a. Period 1: 15 excused absences; 2 school exempt absences; 7 unexcused absences, and 5 tardies.
        b. Period 2: 15 excused absences; 6 school exempt absences; 4 unexcused absences, and 1 tardy.
        c. Period 3: 16 excused absences; 4 school exempt absences; 3 unexcused absences, and 2 tardies.
        d. Period 4: 15 excused absences; 5 school exempt absences; 2 unexcused absences, and 2 tardies.
        e. Period 5: 18 excused absences; 3 school exempt absences; 2 unexcused absences, and 1 tardy.

f. Period 6: 20 excused absences; 3 school exempt absences; and 2 unexcused absences.

g. Period 7: 25 excused absences; 4 school exempt absences; 2 unexcused absences, and 1 tardy.

h. Period 8: 23 excused absences; 3 school exempt absences; and 1 unexcused absence. (D78-D79, D86-D87)

Parent Interview

15. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Parent described the decision to place the Student into an online science course as an administrative mandate, rather than a collaborative agreement. The Parent initially proposed the change to allow the Student to complete their Science coursework within a study-skills environment and stated the Principal rejected this request, instead offering a transfer to another district or starting the semester over in a science class or an online class. When the Parent identified these alternatives as unacceptable, they shared the administration moved the Student into the online course, disregarding the Parent's initial proposed change. (P2, 04:06)

16. The Parent shared accommodations such as time and a half, notes, and assignments read aloud were not implemented following the Student's move to an online learning environment and were not explained or made accessible to the Student until shortly before spring break. Although the Special Education Manager attempted to facilitate the transition, they explicitly informed the Parent that certain accommodations could not be met within the new format. (P1, 01:12, 01:45, 02:03, P2, 02:57)

Principal Interview

17. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Principal stated they attempted to handle the situation in a manner that was "best for everybody involved," noting that the transition was from one general education placement to another. They expressed appreciation for the team's efforts in meeting the Student's accommodations and ensuring they received credit for previously completed work. (P12, 13:14)

Special Education Teacher Interview

18. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Special Education Teacher, accompanied by the Special Education Director, explained the Student's accommodations were implemented in the online program through a combination of digital tools and direct facilitator support. The Student was provided with a read-aloud option for passages and questions, and the number of multiple-choice options on assessments was reduced. The Special Education Teacher ensured the online facilitator had updated copies of all required accommodations and they remained available in the classroom to provide hands-on assistance and monitor for technical glitches. (P1, 01:22, 02:43, P2, 04:07, 04:48)

19. The Special Education Teacher shared that although the course appeared to be a "full class," the curriculum was modified to remove 11 labs deemed unnecessary for understanding the core points of the course. They clarified, "… so it was reduced altogether, the whole course." The Special Education Teacher indicated the Student did not start the semester over. (P2, 05:26, P3, 06:19) The Special Education Director additionally clarified the Student's transcripts reflect their time in the original science class in addition to the online course. (P1, 01:11)
20. The Special Education Teacher explained they were not involved in the initial decision to change the Student's course to online, noting that it was an administrative decision. The Principal later contacted them to confirm their availability to assist, and were subsequently looped into the plan for the Student's transition. (P3, 06:29, 06:46, 07:51) The Special Education Director shared the Student took part in the decision-making process and had "advocated for this specific class." (P1, 01:11)
21. When asked about the LRE and course change, the Special Education Teacher described the change as "… it was just an appropriate change for the situation. It also gave [the Student] the freedom to work at [their] own pace, which is actually good for [the Student]. [The Student's] accelerated in this course and [has] done very well in the process." (P3, 07:23)
22. The Special Education Teacher described the instructional model in the study skills classroom as a general education environment where students work on their current coursework or online learning tasks at their own pace, in a quiet environment, and with monitored support and guidance. (P2, 03:04, P4, 08:10, 09:05)

Positions of the Parties, Applicable Regulations, and Conclusions

Issue One

Whether USD #263, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, implemented the accommodations in the Student's IEP when the Student was completing coursework online. K.A.R. 91-40-16; 34 CFR § 300.323.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-16 and 34 C.F.R. § 300.323, an IEP must be in effect for each exceptional child at the beginning of each school year. Each public agency must ensure that the child's IEP is accessible to each regular education teacher, special education teacher, related services provider, and any other service provider who is responsible for its implementation. Each agency must ensure that each teacher and provider is informed of their specific responsibilities for implementing the child's IEP and the accommodations, modifications, and supports that must be provided for the child in accordance with the IEP.

The Parent alleged accommodations were not being implemented in the Student's online coursework.

The LEA denied the Student's IEP accommodations were not implemented. The LEA stated all accommodations listed in the IEP were implemented in an online general education setting.

The Special Education Teacher reported that the Student's accommodations were integrated into the Bright Thinker online platform. Specifically, the Special Education Teacher noted that "read-aloud" support was provided through the platform's digital text-to-speech tools, and the Student was granted "extended time" on all online assignments and assessments. Additionally, the Special Education Teacher stated that the Student received accommodations in the form of fewer answer options for multiple-choice questions and was supervised by an online facilitator to ensure these supports were functional.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to provide the Student with the accommodations required in their IEP.

Issue Two

Whether USD #263, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, provided the Student with the least restrictive environment when the Student was taking online courses. K.A.R. 91-40-21; 34 CFR § 300.116.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-21 and 34 CFR § 300.116, each agency shall ensure that children with disabilities served by the agency are educated in the LRE. Each agency shall ensure that a continuum of alternative educational placements is available to meet the needs of children with disabilities. Alternative placements shall include instruction in regular classes, special classes, and special schools, make provision for supplementary services, including resource room and itinerant services, to be provided in conjunction with regular class placement, all to be provided in conjunction with regular class placement.

Each agency shall ensure that, in determining the educational placement of a child with a disability, are made by a group of persons, including the child's parent or parents and other persons who are knowledgeable about the child, the meaning of the evaluation data, and the placement options. The decision shall be made in conformity with the requirement of providing services in the LRE.

Each agency shall give notice to the parents of any meetings to discuss the educational placement of their child. If a parent cannot participate in person at a meeting related to the child's educational placement, the agency shall offer alternative methods to allow the parent to participate, including conference calls and video conferencing. An agency may conduct a meeting to determine the appropriate educational placement of a child with a disability without the participation of a parent if the agency, despite repeated attempts, has been unable to contact the parent or to convince the parent to participate. If an agency conducts a meeting to determine the appropriate educational placement of a child without the participation of the parent, the agency shall have a record of the attempts that the agency made to contact the parent. An agency shall take action to ensure that parents understand and are able to participate in any discussions concerning the educational placement of their children, including arranging an interpreter for parents who are deaf or whose native language is other than English.

Each agency shall ensure that each exceptional child's placement is determined at least annually, is based on the child's IEP, and, for a child with a disability, as close as possible to the child's home. Unless the IEP of a child with a disability requires a different arrangement, the agency shall ensure that the child is educated in the school the child would attend if nondisabled. In selecting the LRE for a child with a disability, the persons making the educational placement decision shall consider any potential harmful effect on the child or on the quality of services the child needs. An agency shall not remove a child with a disability from education in age-appropriate regular classrooms solely because of needed modifications in the general curriculum.

The Parent alleged when they requested the Student be able to finish class coursework in a study skills class, they were offered to start the semester over in an online class that could be completed in a study skills class.

The LEA denied the Student's LRE was changed in a manner inconsistent with the IDEA requirements. The Student transitioned from Animal Science to Environmental Science because Animal Science was only offered with the teacher the Parent requested the Student not have contact with. The LEA worked to respond to the Parent's concern while ensuring the Student could continue accessing the general education curriculum and earn the required science credit. Environmental Science fulfilled the same science credit requirement toward graduation.

In Letter to Fisher, 21 IDELR 992 (OSEP 1994), a change in location does not constitute a change in educational placement if the student's program and opportunities for interaction with nondisabled peers remain the same. The record showed that the online setting was a quiet, general-education location where the Student could work at their own pace with their accommodations. The Student's move from an in-person Animal Science class to a general education study skills room, while working on an online Environmental Science course, maintained the same level of interaction with nondisabled peers and did not alter the Student's LRE by more than 25% of the school day. This shift does not meet the definition of a "substantial change in placement" according to Kansas law. The change was executed as an administrative response to a teacher-student conflict, with Student input, which constituted a change of location rather than placement.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to provide the Student with an education in the LRE. Although the move was an administrative response, the fact that the Student remained within a general education setting establishes that the action was a change of location rather than a change in placement.

Right to Appeal

Either party may appeal the findings or conclusions in this report by filing a written notice of appeal with the State Commissioner of Education, ATTN: Special Education and Title Services, Landon State Office Building, 900 SW Jackson Street, Suite 620, Topeka, KS 66612-1212. The notice of appeal may also be filed by email to formalcomplaints@ksde.gov The notice of appeal must be delivered within 10 calendar days from the date of this report.

For further description of the appeals process, see Kansas Administrative Regulations 91-40-51(f).

(2) If an appeal committee affirms a compliance report that requires corrective action by an agency, that agency shall initiate the required corrective action immediately. If, after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the agency shall be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following:

(A) The issuance of an accreditation deficiency advisement;
(B) the withholding of state or federal funds otherwise available to the agency;
(C) the award of monetary reimbursement to the complainant; or
(D) any combination of the actions specified in paragraph (f)(2)

In the Matter of the Appeal of the Report
Issued in Response to a Complaint Filed
Against Unified School District No. 263,
Mulvane Public Schools: 26FC263-001

DECISION OF THE APPEAL COMMITTEE

Background

This matter commenced with the filing of a complaint on March 9, 2026, by ------- on behalf of her child, -------. In the remainder of this decision, ------- will be referred to as "the parent," and ------- will be referred to as "the student." An investigation of the complaint was undertaken by a complaint investigator on behalf of the Special Education, and Title Services team at the Kansas State Department of Education. Following the investigation, a Complaint Report, addressing the allegations, was issued on April 15, 2026. That Complaint Report concluded that there was no violation of special education statutes and regulations

Thereafter, the parent filed an appeal of the Complaint Report. Upon receipt of the appeal, an appeal committee was appointed and it reviewed the original complaint filed by the parent, the Complaint Report, the parent's notice of appeal, and the district's response to the appeal. The Appeal Committee has reviewed the information provided in connection with this matter and now issues this final Appeal Decision.

Preliminary Matters

A copy of the regulation regarding the filing of an appeal [K.A.R. 91-40-51(f)] was attached to the Complaint Report. That regulation states, in part, that: "Each notice shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect." Accordingly, the burden for supplying a sufficient basis for appeal is on the party submitting the appeal. When a party submits an appeal and makes statements in the notice of appeal without support, the Committee does not attempt to locate the missing support.

No new issues will be decided by the Appeal Committee. The appeal process is a review of the Complaint Report. The Appeal Committee does not conduct a separate investigation. The appeal committee's function will be to determine whether sufficient evidence exists to support the findings and conclusions in the Complaint Report.

Discussion of Issues on Appeal

The report identified two issues. This appeal only addresses Issue One:

Issue One

Whether USD #263, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), implemented the accommodations in the Student's IEP when the Student was completing coursework online. K.A.R. 91-40-16; 34 CFR § 300.323.

The appeal consists of the following:

1. (The student's) accommodations were not met. She did not meet with a counselor the entire year as "she wasn't put on a case load" I recorded that from her IEP meeting. She was not given credit for the work she did in her animal science class, she did majority of the work at home and was not given her time and a half as she had to do an entire semester in less than 9 weeks. Her labs were dismissed because they didn't have a way to do them.
   I want this addressed and not dismissed the way the emotional abuse from the staff is.

   In its response to this appeal, the district asserts that meeting with a counselor was not an issue presented in this complaint and so not an issue subject to appeal. The Appeal Committee agrees. A thorough review of the parent's complaint and the complaint report confirms that meeting with a counselor was neither presented as an issue in this complaint nor considered by the investigator. Accordingly, this issue will not be addressed in this appeal.

2. The remainder of the parent's appeal is a statement that the student "was not given credit for the work she did in her animal science class, she did majority of the work at home and was not given her time and a half as she had to do an entire semester in less than 9 weeks. Her labs were dismissed because they didn't have a way to do them."

The background to this situation needs some explanation.

On March 4, 2026, an incident that took place at school during fifth hour in which the Student had her phone out, and the teacher had made what the parent described as an "inappropriate comment." The Parent called the office during the sixth hour and picked up the Student. The following day, the Student was "adamant" about not returning to the fifth-hour class (Animal Science) taught by the teacher who had made the "inappropriate comment." The Principal and Assistant Principal, with assistance from the Special Education Teacher, helped the Student change from Animal Science to Environmental Science via an online program accessed in a regular education environment at school (Finding of Fact 8, Report, p. 7-8).

In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Special Education Teacher, accompanied by the Special Education Director, explained that the Student's accommodations were implemented in the online program through a combination of digital tools and direct facilitator support. The Student was provided with a read-aloud option for passages and questions, and the number of multiple-choice options on assessments was reduced. The Special Education Teacher ensured the online facilitator had updated copies of all required accommodations and they remained available in the classroom to provide hands-on assistance and monitor for technical glitches (Report, p. 10-11).

In that same interview the Special Education Teacher shared that although the course appeared to be a "full class," the curriculum was modified to remove 11 labs deemed unnecessary for understanding the core points of the course. They clarified, "… so it was reduced altogether, the whole course." The Special Education Teacher indicated the Student did not start the semester over and clarified that the Student's transcripts reflect her time in the original science class in addition to the online course (Report, p. 11).

In her appeal the parent states that the student did work at home and when doing so, she did not get her "time and a half" accommodation. The district's response was as follows:

"The district denies that the student's IEP accommodations were not implemented. When the student began completing Environmental Science coursework through the Bright Thinker online learning platform, staff reviewed the student's IEP accommodations to ensure they could be implemented within the online course and supervised classroom setting."

The district developed a table (chart) outlining each accommodation and how it was to be implemented. This table was also presented to the parent at the annual IEP meeting on April 8, 2026, to explain how each accommodation would be provided within the online learning environment. During the meeting, the parent asked questions regarding the accommodations, and the team provided both the table and verbal explanations to ensure understanding.

As for the accommodation for extended time, the table had three column headings, including:

(1) IEP Accommodation, which stated "Extended Time;"
(2) IEP Verbiage, which stated: "Extended time for classroom assignments and assessments in all settings;" and
(3) Implementation in Online Setting, which stated: "The Bright Thinker platform allows staff to adjust assessment settings. The student's course settings include accommodations to ignore time limits on assessments and allow retries on activities below passing scores, allowing the student to work at an individualized pace.

In reviewing the weight of the evidence presented by the district and the analysis of the investigator, the Appeal Committee finds that sufficient evidence exists to support the findings and conclusions in the Complaint Report.

Conclusion

For the reasons stated herein, the Complaint Report is sustained in full.

This is the final decision on this matter. There is no further appeal. This Appeal Decision is issued this 27th day of April, 2026.

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST
UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #265
ON MARCH 9, 2026

DATE OF REPORT: APRIL 21, 2026

The Complaint is against USD #265, Goddard Public Schools. In the remainder of the report, "the School" and the "local education agency (LEA)" shall refer to USD #265.

When a special education complaint is filed against a school district that is a member of a special education cooperative or interlocal, or that uses any other state recognized public agency to serve children with disabilities, the term "local education agency (LEA)" in this report will include the school district, the special education cooperative or interlocal, and any other agency that is recognized by the state as an administrative agency for public elementary or secondary schools and is serving the educational needs of this student.

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) allows for a 30-day timeline to investigate a child complaint. A complaint is considered to be filed on the date it is delivered to both the KSDE and the LEA. In this case, the KSDE initially received the Complaint on March 9, 2026, and the 30-day timeline ended on April 8, 2026.

Allegations

The following issues will be investigated:

ISSUE ONE: Whether USD #265, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), implemented the Student's IEP on November 12, 2025 when "[the Student's] assigned paraprofessional helped another student instead of supervising [the Student]." Additionally, whether the Student's IEP was implemented as written prior to IEP amendments being made. K.A.R. 91-40-16; 34 CFR § 300.323.

ISSUE TWO: Whether USD #265, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, was required to convene an IEP meeting to review and revise the Student's IEP after the November 12, 2025 incident. K.A.R. 91-40-16; 34 CFR § 300.324(b).

ISSUE THREE: Whether USD #265, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, was required to conduct a functional behavior assessment (FBA) prior to the Parent's request for one on February 10, 2026. K.S.A. 72-3428(h)(1)(A); 34 CFR § 300.303(a)(1).

ISSUE FOUR: Whether USD #265, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, developed a February 10, 2026 IEP that included current and accurate data to support the reduction in occupational therapy (OT) services, and the denial of increased speech services for the Student. K.A.R. 91-40-18; 34 CFR §300.320(a)(1).

ISSUE FIVE: Whether USD #265, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, denied the Student a free appropriate public education (FAPE), as a result of the aforementioned issues. K.A.R. 91-40-2, K.A.R. 91-40-1(z); 34 CFR §§ 300.17, 300.101.

Investigation of Complaint

The Complaint Investigator interviewed the Parent on April 10, 2026. The following LEA staff were interviewed on April 9, 2026: The Occupational Therapy (OT), the speech-language pathologist (SLP), and the Special Education Teacher.

In completing this investigation, the Complaint Investigator reviewed documentation provided by the Parent and the LEA. Although additional documentation was provided and reviewed, the following materials were used as the basis of the findings and conclusions of the investigation:

1. Individual Education Plans, 02/17/25, 02/10/26
2. Progress Report, 01/05/26 & 03/25/26
3. Speech Therapy Re-Evaluation, 06/09/25

17. Emails from September 8, 2025 to March 31, 2026

Background Information

This Investigation involved a second grade student enrolled at an elementary school in USD #265. The Student is currently receiving special education or related services as a child with a disability per the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA).

Findings of the Investigation

The following findings are based on a review of documentation and interviews with the Parent and staff in the LEA.

1. An IEP, dated February 17, 2025, indicated the Student was diagnosed with autism spectrum disorder (ASD). This IEP is also referenced in the LEA materials, with a date of February 4, 2026. The content of the IEP is the same.
    a. The Student displayed decreased fine motor skills, which affected their ability to write, and they required movement throughout the day to be successful. Current performance, as of January 2025, indicated the Student preferred to use their right hand for skilled tasks. They used a four-finger grasp on their writing utensil and were able to trace, copy and write from memory all the shapes, their first name, and 52/52 upper and lower case letters, but threw in a couple lower case letters within the sight words with an occasional reversal 80% of the time. The Student struggled to write with correct letter size and placement. They wrote very large and occasionally started in the middle of the page. The Student held their scissors correctly and cut a straight line and could cut out simple shapes 80% of the time. The Student completed a fine motor task independently with verbal cues 80% of the time with a work system. The Student's needs would be met with General education supports, accommodations, and a goal.
    b. Based on the most recent evaluation, the Student had social emotional needs that required special education or related services. Their behavior did not impede their learning or the learning of others. These needs would be met through accommodations and supplementary aids and supports.
    c. For reading, the Student was able to write their name independently without a prompt, and expressively identify all letters and all letter sounds. When reading CVC words, they were able to identify the initial, medial and ending sound with 95% accuracy. The Student could consistently identify 24/50 sight words, was able to trace all letters, and was beginning to write letters and some words from memory. The Student was able to manipulate a book independently and point to the communication board to identify certain words during group activities. The Student mimicked words and sounds that were said/made by others in the room. Additionally, the Student imitated spoken words and occasionally verbalized words throughout the day. When the Student saw a word they were not familiar with, they replaced it with a word with the same beginning sound. The Student had begun to read CVC and sight words when introduced in different decodable stories. This need

d. Based upon the most recent ongoing data in written language, the Student had needs that required special education or related services. The Student was able to write all letters from memory when writing words, and was able to write the majority of letters as capital or uppercase letters, rather than what was graphically correct. These needs would be met by general education supports, accommodations, modifications, and supplementary aids and supports.

e. The most recent data collection showed the Student displayed needs in math that required special education or related services. The Student was able to match objects, demonstrated color sorting by separating colors objects into alike groups, and completed number and shape puzzles. The Student was able to expressively identify numbers 0-100 when they were shown a picture card of the number, basic colors and shapes. The Student had been observed singing along to counting songs. The Student needed assistance with counting past 30 and used their hands while counting. The Student was working on adding numbers 0-10 with the assistance of manipulatives. These needs would be met by general education supports, accommodations, modifications, and supplementary aids and supports, and a goal.

f. The Student continued to show the need for special education or related services in the area of communication. The Student's communication skills were described as growing. The Student continued to use gestures, body language, behavior, vocalizations, and facial expressions to express themself. The Student increased their use of more functional and appropriate forms of communication, including verbal speech, basic sign language, and pointed to visual supports/communication symbols, as well as using a speech-generating communication device to enhance language use. The Student used multimodal communication to make requests, direct others, label items, respond to share knowledge, and to accept or deny. They spoke in learned phrases or repeated what they heard. The Student produced phrases or sentences on their device when modeled and used during a repetitive activity. They were able to navigate their device to preferred page sets and learned to find new page sets when needed for specific structured tasks. The Student's verbal speech, articulation, speaking fluency, and vocal characteristics were observed to be adequate for speech production and intelligibility, though they were not age appropriate. Their articulation, speaking fluency, and vocal characteristics should continue to be monitored.

    i. The Student showed growth in their communication and expressive language abilities, but continued to display delays for their age and continued to need support to build skills. The Student was able to use learned phrases and sentences and navigate their communication system within structured activities. The Student had not independently carried over the use of those skills outside of direct modeling and prompting. The Student's spontaneous utterances were simple and short. Adults should continue to model language and expansion of utterances using multiple modalities. These needs would be met through general education supports, accommodations, supports for school personnel, assistive technology, supplementary aids and supports, and a goal.

g. In the area of daily living/functioning skills, the Student displayed needs that required special education or related services. The Student was able to drink from a straw at school without any issues and hand-fed themself during snack time. The Student went through the lunch line with minimal support and was able to scoop food going down the line. The Student was able to independently take off and hang up their coat and backpack. The Student initiated using the restroom by using verbal icons and was able to independently use the restroom with minimal verbal prompts. They were able to pull up and down their pants when it was time to change their pull-up and they have used a urinal instead of going into a stall. The Student was able to wash their hands and button a variety of button sizes. The Student required assistance when engaging a zipper. The Student was listed as being self-sufficient in most daily living/functional skills. The needs in this area would be met with general education supports, accommodations, and modifications.

h. It was noted the Student's current delays in developmental domains impacted their learning in all areas to include social emotional, math, reading, communication, and daily living/functional skills. The Student had decreased fine motor skills which affected their ability to write and cut in the classroom and they required movement throughout the day to be successful.

i. The IEP included the following goals:

   i. Goal 1: "By the next IEP, when given two minutes of verbal and visual notice or an upcoming transition, [the Student] will transition from a preferred location to a non-preferred location within 10 seconds or with two or less prompts, with 80% success." This would be measured by teacher observation and data collection.

      1. Benchmark #1 stated, "When given two minutes of verbal and visual notice of an upcoming transition, the Student will transition within 10 seconds with 50% success."
      2. Benchmark #2 stated, "When given two minutes verbal and visual notice of an upcoming transition, [the Student] will transition within 10 seconds with 60% success."

3. Benchmark #3 stated, "When given two minutes verbal and visual notice of an upcoming transition, [the Student] will transition within 10 seconds with 70% success."

ii. Goal 2: "By the next annual IEP, when given a single-digit addition equation accompanied with manipulatives, [the Student] will independently add the objects and provide the sum expressively or written with 80% accuracy." Baseline information indicated the Student was able to find the sum of simple addition equations when presented with manipulatives independently when given verbal prompt with 80% accuracy. It also stated when provided with a written prompt, the Student was able to find the sum with 65% accuracy. The goal would be measured by the data tracking sheet.

1. Benchmark #1 indicated, "When given a single-digit equation with manipulatives, the Student will independently add the objects and provide the sum expressively or written with 60% accuracy."
2. Benchmark #2 stated, "When given a single-digit addition equation accompanied with manipulatives, [the Student] will independently add the objects and provide the sum expressively or written with 65% accuracy."
3. Benchmark #3 indicated, "When given a single-digit addition equation accompanied by manipulatives, [the Student] will independently add the objects and provide the sum expressively or written with 70% accuracy."

iii. Goal 3: "By the next annual IEP, when given a book containing only sight words and decodable words on [their] reading level, [the Student] will independently read the full book, with 80% accuracy, no more than two prompts, over three consecutive data days." Baseline information indicated the Student identified 24/50 Fry sight words on average and was able to blend CVC words with 85% accuracy. The goal would be evaluated by use of a data tracking sheet.

1. Benchmark #1 stated, "When given a book containing only sight words and decodable words on [their] reading level, [the Student] will independently read the full book, with 65% accuracy, no more than four prompts, over three consecutive data days."
2. Benchmark #2 stated, "When given a book containing only sight words and decodable words on their reading level, [the Student] was able to independently read the full book, with 70% accuracy, no more than four prompts, over three consecutive data days."
3. Benchmark #3 stated, "When given a book containing only sight words and decodable words on [their] reading level, [the Student] will independently read the full book, with 75% accuracy, no more than four prompts, over three consecutive data days."

iv. Goal 4: "By the next annual IEP, given occupational therapy services, [the Student] will increase [their] fine motor skills to use a functional grasp on [their] writing utensil while writing words and short sentences with the correct capital case, letter size, and placement on the line 80% of the time for legibility." Baseline information stated the Student used a four-finger grasp on their writing utensil. They continued to prefer to write in capital letters even when shown lowercase, but were able to throw in a couple lower case letters within the sight words. They struggled to write the correct letter size and placement. They wrote very large and occasionally started in the middle of the page. The goal would be evaluated through use of OT observation and collection/classroom samples.

v. Goal 5: "By February 16, 2026, provided speech-language services, using [their] chosen mode of functional communication, [the Student] will a) increase [their] average utterance length to three or more word utterances on at least three of five communication opportunities and b) communicate an increasing number of communicative intents (e.g., requesting, directing, describing, responding, labeling, commenting, sharing, greeting, saying farewell, inquiring, accepting/denying, etc.) from four on average to eight across three data collection days." The goal would be evaluated through SLP data and observation.

1. Benchmark #1 stated, "[The Student] will increase [their] average utterance length to three or more word utterances on at least two of five communication opportunities and to communicate an increasing number of communicative intents, (e.g., requesting, directing, describing, responding, labeling, commenting, sharing, greeting, saying farewell, inquiring, accepting/denying, etc.) from four on average to six across three data collection days."
2. Benchmark #2 stated, "[The Student] will increase [their] average utterance length to three or more word utterances on at least three of five communication opportunities and communicate an increasing number of communicative intents (e.g., requesting, directing, describing, responding, labeling, commenting, sharing, greeting, saying farewell, inquiring, accepting/denying, etc.) from four on average to eight across three data collection days.

j. Special education and related services provided from February 17, 2025 through February 16, 2026 included:

i. Direct speech language services either individually or in a group setting, in a special education classroom in a general education building, for 15 minutes, two times a week.

ii. Special education services for all core subjects, breakfast, lunch, and beginning and ending routines, in a special education classroom in a general education building, each day school was in session per the Student's schedule, for the same amount of time as general education peers.

iii. Special education supports during recess, transitions and all specials, in a general education setting in a general education building, each day school was in session per the Student's schedule, for the same amount of time as general education peers.

iv. OT services individually or in a small group, in a special education classroom in a general education building, for 15 minutes once a week.

v. Special education support on field trips, assemblies, and any non-academic activities, in the general education setting, and when a non academic activity arises, for the duration of the activity.

vi. Access to a special education staff member on a 1:1 basis to facilitate self-help and communication skills, as well as to address safety concerns related to elopement, across all settings in the special education and general education environments, in a general education building and also on field trips, activities, and non-academic activities, when the Student was in attendance, or when there was a non-academic school activity and/or the length of time the Student was in attendance, or for the duration of the non-academic school activity.

k. Accommodations provided every day school was in session, in all settings for the length of the school day, from February 17, 2025 through February 16, 2026, included:

i. Access to alternative modes of communication, including core communication boards with picture based icons as well as a dynamic speech-generating device.

ii. Access to hold a toy or fidget during whole and small group lessons.

iii. Access to visual aids for instruction and expectations to better understand directions each school day when expectations are being reviewed or when there is an opportunity to incorporate visuals. This would be offered throughout the school environment, when appropriate throughout the day.

iv. The Student would receive multiple rewards for positive reinforcement and scheduled sensory breaks while allowing for additional breaks as needed, throughout the school day depending on their behavior, in a general education and special education classroom, when appropriate throughout the school day.

v. The Student would have instructions read to them when written instructions are above their current reading level, across all school settings, in both the general and special education classrooms, for the duration of the task, lesson, or activity.

l. A modification included the Student completing a modified curriculum that was closer to their skill level, daily, in all educational settings for the entire school year, from February 17, 2025 through February 16, 2026.

m. For Supplementary Aids and Services, the Student would have access to visual supports including but not limited to: daily schedule/routines communication board, first/then, and incentive chart throughout the school day as needed in all educational settings, for the school day, from February 17, 2025 through February 16, 2026.

n. Supports for School Personnel included staff working with the Student would have training in Augmentative and Alternative Communication (AAC) and aided language input provided by the SLP or as part of a district provided training, one per year or as new staff were hired, wherever the training was provided, for the length of time needed to complete the training, from February 17, 2025 through February 16, 2026.

o. The IEP stated there were additional services/supports that were added to the IEP to ensure participation in the general education environment to the maximum extent possible. An accumulation of academic data indicated the Student was performing at an instructional level significantly below their peers and required an alternate curriculum. The Student would have attended inclusion for all specials including PE, music, science, library and morning meeting. It was written that the benefits of a more restrictive setting outweighed the benefits of remaining in the classroom. The IEP team determined the benefits of the proposed service setting may have some potentially harmful effects, but due to the nature and severity of the Student's disability, the team determined the benefits of a special education placement outweighed any potentially harmful effects. Partial inclusion in general education was considered during the IEP meeting. The Student had the opportunity to participate in all non-academic and extracurricular activities to the same extent as non-identified peers. The Student had access to assistive technology devices and services, which were documented in the IEP.

2. A prior written notice (PWN) dated February 17, 2025, included:

a. A meeting was held on February 17, 2025 to review the evaluation/assessment data to determine special education and related services, placement, and any additions, changes, or modifications to special education, related services, or placement needed for the Student to meet their IEP goals.

b. A material change in services indicated consent was required. The team proposed an increase or decrease of 25% or more in the duration or frequency of a special education service, a related service or a supplementary aid or a service specified on the Student's IEP. The PWN also indicated a proposed change in placement, for which consent was not required.

c. Actions proposed or refused included updated present levels, goals, and parent input, updated accommodations, and reduced OT from 15 minutes twice a week to 15 minutes once a week. The Student was noted as making progress in OT and no longer required as much time to make gains.

d. More time in the general education setting was considered, but the Student required an alternate curriculum. Data used to make these decisions was listed as Student data, SLP data, OT data, and teacher observations.

e. Parent consent was documented with an "X" in the "I give consent" box indicating consent for placement and the actions specified in the PWN.

3. A Speech and Therapy Reevaluation, dated June 9, 2025, listed the Student's diagnoses as "Autistic Disorder," "Mixed receptive-expressive language disorder," and "Phonological disorder." One of the primary concerns listed was eloping. Additionally, the evaluation noted there were concerns related to the Student's motor development. The Parent listed sensory and social-emotional concerns. It was noted the Student was receiving OT once per week, physical therapy once per week, and speech/language therapy once per week, and those services were listed as ongoing. Objective findings in speech indicated the Student presented with a severe articulation delay, receptive language delay, and a severe expressive language delay.

4. A note drafted by the Principal and the Special Education Teacher after an elopement incident in September 2025, stated the following: "While [the Student] is at school, we are always doing our absolute best to keep [them] and others safe. One of the procedures/accommodations we have put in place are child-proof locks on the classroom doors. [They] are unable to open the classroom doors unless [they] have assistance from an adult. If we are in a general education classroom and [they] elope, we will use the walkies to communicate with other teachers in the building, but this has not been an issue. As for the playground, we have added additional precautions to keep our students safe from elopement. There are carabiners on each lock that prevent the locks from opening unless by an adult. We also have staff standing stations with active eyes who engage with students while on the playground. On the playground, there has been an orange construction fence that is zip tied to the metal bars added as well. [The Student] spends the majority of [their] day with [the Special Education Teacher]. [They] work with [them] directly and attend all inclusion times with [them]."

5. An email exchange dated September 9, 2025 between the Parent and the Special Education Teacher discussed the Student becoming upset, hitting, kicking, attempting to bite, throw items, crying, and screaming. Later that month, in an email dated September 22, 2025, the Special Education Teacher emailed the Parent to discuss the Student's behaviors for the week, specifically when the Student became escalated and/or upset. The Special Education Teacher described two instances when the Student had escalated behaviors.

6. An email exchange, dated October 30, 2025, between the Parent and the Special Education Teacher discussed the Student's behavior with another student in the class. The Parent suggested the Student's 1:1 support could remain between the two students so the Student does not kiss other students or engage in inappropriate behavior. The Special Education Teacher replied and stated the Student had not attempted to kiss anyone that day, and staff are saying "No" to the Student when they exhibit inappropriate behavior.
7. An undated note from Paraprofessional 1, which included four different sources, described a kissing incident that occurred during Science class:
    a. Another student in the class became escalated and that peer's paraprofessional asked for backup. As Paraprofessional 1 assisted with the peer, the Student jumped up and kissed another student.
    b. Paraprofessional 2 described the same information. Paraprofessional 2 contacted the Parent to advise them of the kissing incident, and stated it was the second time they had to contact the Parent due to the Student kissing another student.
        i. Paraprofessional 2 explained Paraprofessional 1 had stepped away from the Student to assist another paraprofessional with an escalated student. The Parent stated it was an IEP violation for Paraprofessional 1 to step away from the Student.
        ii. Paraprofessional 2 indicated they spoke with the Special Education Teacher to get clarification related to the Student's IEP and they were told the 1:1 was for communication and eloping concerns, and the staff did not feel this incident was a violation of the Student's IEP.
    c. An additional note stated the Social Worker spoke with the Special Education Coach. The Social Worker stated the Special Education Coach and the Special Education Director discussed the incident, and did not feel it was a violation of the Student's IEP. The Social Worker relayed this information to the Special Education Teacher.
8. In the LEA's response, they maintained that a formal IEP meeting was not required after the November 12, 2025 incident because the School team promptly reflected on the situation and took immediate corrective action. The behavior, while not preferred, was deemed not a safety concern. Staff created and implemented targeted interventions, such as social stories, power cards, and visuals focused on appropriate peer interactions, which the team deemed adequate to address the behavior. Furthermore, the LEA noted that the Parent did not formally request an IEP meeting or an informal discussion to address the matter at that time.
9. Relevant information from a Progress Report, dated January 5, 2026, included:
    a. Goal #4: "By the next annual IEP, given occupational therapy services, [the Student] will increase [their] fine motor skills to be able to use a functional grasp on [their] writing utensil while writing words and short sentences with the correct capital case, letter size, and placement of the line 80% of time for legibility."

i. The Student achieved a score of "6" (slight improvement) on March 14, 2025, May 9, 2025, October 14, 2025, and December 19, 2025.

b. Goal #5: "By 02/16/2026, provided speech-language services, using [their] chosen mode of functional communication … [the Student] will a) increase [their] average utterance length to 3- or more-word utterances on at least 3 of 5 communication opportunities and b) to communicate an increasing number of communicative intents … from 4 on average to 8 across three data collection days."

i. The Student achieved a score of a "6" and "7" (slight improvement and moderate improvement) on March 14, 2025 and May 12, 2025, respectively. They earned a score of "8" (mastered) on October 14, 2025 and December 19, 2025.

10. In an email, dated January 28, 2026, between the Parent and the Special Education Teacher, the Parent shared that on the day of the kissing incident, the Student's one-to-one support reportedly "had to assist another para[professional] which [sic] a child that was having a meltdown. I know you said during that call that [the Student] was doing better as long as [their] 1:1 support wasn't pulled away." The Special Education Teacher responded to the Parent, and stated the November 2025 kissing incident had been minimized due to multiple supports and interventions. They stated the Student continued to have strong impulses to kiss or smell another student in the class.

11. An email, dated February 10, 2026, from the Outside SLP to the Parent, stated the Outside SLP had sent the Parent the most recent speech evaluation. The email also stated they were working on the Student's pronunciation of /l/ and /sh/.

12. Relevant information from an IEP dated February 10, 2026 included:

a. The Student had needs related to motor that required special education or related services. It was noted the Student displayed decreased fine motor skills, which affected their writing in the classroom. The Parent indicated they did not have any concerns or comments in the area of motor. Current performance indicated no gross motor concerns. An OT note from February 2026 stated the Student was right-hand dominant and preferred to use their right hand for all skilled tasks. They used a four-finger grasp when writing and they are able to trace, copy, and write from memory all basic shapes, their first name, and all 52 uppercase and lowercase letters. The Student preferred writing in capital letters but did write in lowercase when prompted. Their handwriting was legible approximately 75% of the time when they were provided with visual boundaries and verbal cues. They possessed age appropriate cutting skills, held the scissors correctly, and were able to cut along lines for classroom projects with greater than 80% accuracy. The Student independently completed fine motor task boxes with a work system over 80% of the time. This need would be met by general education supports, accommodations, supplementary aids and supports, and a goal.

b. Based on most recent evaluation and ongoing data collection, the Student had needs in the area of social-emotional. Current performance indicated the Student made significant progress related to transitioning from preferred to non-preferred activities and utilized a timer and visual schedule. The Student was given a choice for which order they completed the centers in, and the Student consistently chose the same order for activities on their visual schedule. The Student thrived on routine, clear expectations and opportunities for autonomy, was motivated by social interaction, and showed a strong desire to be around their peers in the general education setting. The Student continued to work on age appropriate play time behaviors. The Student exhibited impulsive behaviors that impacted their ability to fully access instruction and positive interactions with peers. When the Student became overwhelmed or upset, they showed not age-appropriate behavior such as hitting, kicking, tossing chairs and eloping. The IEP indicated the Parent had no concerns and made no comment at that time. This need would be met by accommodations and supplementary aids and supports.

c. Based on the most recent evaluation and ongoing data collection related to reading, the Student displayed needs that required special education or related services. Current reading performance indicated the Student demonstrated foundational reading skills and were able to accurately read 49 out of 60 Fry sight words. The Student was able to decode consonant-vowel-consonant (CVC), consonant-consonant-vowel-consonant (CCVC), and consonant-vowel-consonant-consonant (CVCC) words by applying phonics skills. The Student was able to read with 80% accuracy and benefited from explicit modeling for reading new passages. The Student was able to manipulate letters to create words and manipulate a book independently to read. The Student continued to work on comprehending decodable stories and texts but was unable to identify main ideas and key details of a passage. This need would be met with general education supports, accommodations, modifications, supplementary aids and supports, and a goal.

d. Based on the most recent evaluation and ongoing data collection related to written language, the Student displayed needs that required special education or related services. Current writing performance noted the Student was able to write all letters from memory when writing words and the Student wrote the majority of letters as capital letters, rather than what was graphically correct. This need would be met by general education supports, accommodations, modifications, and supplementary aids and supports.

e. Based on the most recent evaluation and ongoing data collection related to math, the Student displayed needs that required special education or related services. The Student was able to identify numbers 0-120 as well as identify patterns and fill in what comes next. The Student was able to add within 10 from memory. The Student required assistance to complete double digit addition and subtraction. The Student was able to use multiple strategies to complete math computations. This need would be met with general education supports, accommodations, modifications, supplementary aids and services, and a goal.

f. Based on the most recent evaluation and ongoing data collection related to communication, the Student displayed needs that required special education or related services. The Student was described as an effective communicator and used speech to share their thoughts, express their needs, and show knowledge in academic tasks. The Student made progress, and their speech and language skills were a strong tool for their daily success. To help the Student be successful, the IEP would focus on self-advocacy, social navigation, and visual supports. The Parent reported they sometimes had trouble understanding the Student. The Student has mastered all of the communication goals from the previous IEP. This need would be met by general education supports, accommodations, supports for school personnel, supplementary aids and services, assistive technology, and a goal.

g. In the area of daily living/functioning skills, the Student displayed needs that required special education or related services. The Student was able to drink from a straw at school without any issues and hand-fed themself during snack time. The Student went through the lunch line with minimal support and was able to scoop food going down the line. The Student was able to independently take off and hang up their coat and backpack. The Student initiated using the restroom by using verbal icons and was able to independently use the restroom with minimal verbal prompts. The Student was able to pull up and down their pants when it was time to change their pull-up and they have used a urinal instead of going into a stall. The Student was able to wash their hands and button a variety of button sizes. The Student required assistance when engaging a zipper. The Student was listed as being self-sufficient in most daily living/functional skills. The needs in this area would be met with general education supports, accommodations, and modifications.

h. It was noted the Parent inquired about receiving more speech therapy if the Student attended more school days. The SLP stated they felt the Student was seen twice a week, which met their needs. The Parent inquired about an FBA to address elopement, kissing, and other behavior needs with concerns of safety. The Special Education Teacher stated they would discuss the possibility of a FBA with the School Psychologist.

i. The IEP included the following goals:
    i. Goal 1: "By the next IEP, given consult occupational therapy services, [the Student] will increase [their] fine motor skills to be able to write legibly on classroom assignments 80% of the time." Baseline information stated the Student wrote legibly 75% of the time with cues and boundaries. Classroom samples would be used as an evaluation tool.
    ii. Goal 2: "By the next annual IEP review, provided speech-language and special education services, given access to visual reminders or Power Cards, when [the Student] begins to feel overstimulated or frustrated, [they] will use a verbal phrase or a designated visual support to advocate for a need or sensory break in 4 out of 5 opportunities over a 9-week period." The goal would be evaluated by the SLP, special education data, and observation.
    iii. Goal 3: "By the next annual IEP, provided speech-language services, given a preferred activity with a peer or adult, [the Student] will initiate one comment and respond to one follow-up question/comment from the communication partner in 80% of opportunities across a 9 week period." The goal would be evaluated by SLP data and observation.
    iv. Goal 4: "By the next annual IEP, during reading instruction when provided a passage of story on [their] reading level, [the Student] will be able to identify the main idea and three key details about the story with 80% accuracy in 4 out of trials." Baseline information indicated the Student was unable to expressively or receptively identify main ideas and key details of a story of passage. The goal would be evaluated through data collection and teacher observation.
    v. Goal 5: "By the next annual IEP, during math instruction when given double-digit addition and subtraction problems with regrouping, [the Student] will accurately solve the problems with using appropriate strategies (ie. place value, number lines, base-ten etc.) with at least 80% accuracy over three consecutive data days." Baseline information indicated the Student was able to add within 10 from memory and identity numbers 1-120. The goal would be evaluated through the data tracking sheet.
    vi. Goal 6: "By the next annual IEP, during structured and unstructured peer interactions, [the Student] will demonstrate improved impulse control by pausing and using an appropriate response (i,e. keeping hands to self, using appropriate language, waiting turns, etc.) in 4 out of 5 observed opportunities." Baseline data indicated the Student exhibited impulsive behaviors that impacted their ability to fully access instruction or interact positively with peers. These behaviors included acting without thinking, difficulty waiting their turn, and challenges with self-regulation. The goal would be evaluated through data collection and teacher observation.

j. Special education and related services to be provided from February 10, 2026 through February 9, 2027 included:

i. Direct speech language services either individually or in a group setting, in a special education classroom in a general education building, for 15 minutes two times a week.

ii. Special education services for all core subjects, breakfast, lunch, and beginning and ending routines, in a special education classroom in a general education building, each day that school is in session per the Student's schedule, for the same amount of time as general education peers.

iii. Special education supports during recess, transitions and all specials, in a general education setting in a general education building, each day that school was in session per the Student's schedule, for the same amount of time as general education peers.

iv. OT services individually or in a small group, in a special education classroom in a general education building, for 15 minutes once a week.

v. Special education support on field trips, assemblies, and any non-academic activities, in the general education setting, when a non-academic activity arises, for the duration of the activity.

vi. Access to special education staff member on a 1:1 basis to facilitate self-help and communication skills, as well as to address safety concerns related to elopement, across all settings in the special education and general education environments, in a general education building and also on field trips, activities, and non-academic activities, when [the Student] was in attendance, or when there was a non-academic school activity and/or the length of time [the Student] was in attendance, or for the duration of the non-academic school activity.

j. Accommodations provided from February 10, 2026 through February 9, 2027 included:

vii. Access to alternative modes of communication, including core communication boards with picture-based icons as well as a dynamic speech-generating device, every day school was in session in all school settings for the length of the school day.

viii. Access to hold a toy or fidget during whole group and small group lessons every day school is in session, in all school settings, for the length of the school day.

ix. Access to visual aids for instruction and expectations to better understand directions each school day when expectations are being reviewed or when there was an opportunity to incorporate visuals throughout the school environment, when appropriate throughout the day.

x. "[The Student] will receive multiple rewards for positive reinforcement and scheduled sensory breaks while allowing for additional breaks as needed, throughout the school day depending on [their] behavior, in a general education and special education classroom, when appropriate throughout the school day … ."

xi. "[The Student] will have instructions read to [them] when written instructions are above [their] current reading level, across all school settings, in both the general and special education classrooms, for the duration of the task, lesson or activity … ."

xii. For modifications, the Student would complete a modified curriculum that was closer to their skill level, daily, in all educational settings for the entire school year, from February 10, 2026 through February 9, 2027.

xiii. For supplementary aids and services, the Student would have access to visual supports, including but not limited to: daily schedule/routines communication board, first/then, incentive chart throughout the school day as needed in all educational settings, for the school day, from February 10, 2026 through February 9, 2027.

13. A PWN dated February 10, 2026 included:

a. A meeting was held to discuss special education and related services required by the Student and any additions, changes or modifications needed. The document contained a checked box that indicated a material change in services required consent, and as a result of the meeting, the IEP team was proposing a 25% or more change in the duration or frequency of special education service, a related service or a supplementary aid or a service specified on this student's IEP.

b. A description of the action proposed or refused described the following: updated goals, present levels, parent input, updated verbiage of the program modifications, decreased OT service to monthly consult, and removed support for school personnel.

c. Explanations of why the action was proposed or refused stated that support for school personnel was removed because the Student no longer used AAC as their primary mode of communication; therefore, staff working with the Student were no longer required to have direct training to support their use of AAC. The Student was making significant progress during OT pull out services and the Student was making progress in the special education classroom with the supports provided.

d. More time in the general education classroom was considered, but the Student still required an alternate curriculum for core subjects.

e. Data used as the basis for this decision was obtained from observations, student data, special education data, SLP data and OT data. No harmful effects were anticipated.

14. Relevant information from a transcript of the February 10, 2026 IEP meeting included:

a. The SLP stated the Student had been talking more and producing longer utterances, which the SLP indicated was a "big difference from a couple years ago."

b. The OT explained the Student could copy fonts, was able to write any letter in any size, and responded well to critiques of their work. They indicated the Student liked to write on the chalkboard, but often wrote on any surface the OT provided. The OT stated the Student could add spaces between words, which they were not doing the previous year. The OT explained the Student had made "huge gains" from the previous year. The OT said, "… I'm getting to the point where I can't challenge [the Student] motor wise … I'll have [them] do the hardest activity … [the Student] will do that just [lickety-split] with no help from adults or anything." The OT indicated it was getting difficult to challenge the Student in OT sessions because they were doing well.

c. The Special Education Teacher stated the Student was doing well with transitioning and was working on acceptable playtime behavior. The Special Education Teacher explained the Student mostly played nicely with peers but sometimes had trouble with impulse control. They indicated the Student had challenges with self-regulation and would display "aggressive behaviors" when overstimulated, but stated it had not happened in a while. The Special Education Teacher stated they had interventions in place, including using social stories, visuals in the classroom, visual schedules, and power cards. The Social Worker believed the interventions helped the Student and indicated they had seen "tremendous growth" in the Student over the course of a year.

d. The Special Education Teacher explained the Student had made progress in their reading skills, but they wanted to help the Student increase their volume louder when they read.

e. The SLP stated the Student was talking more, communicated their needs, and shared their knowledge about subjects. The SLP stated they were unsure of what to work on next with the Student because they were doing so well. They wanted to work on teaching the Student strategies for peer interactions, social navigation, and unstructured times.

f. The Parent agreed the Student was talking more but stated sometimes it was hard to understand their pronunciation.

g. The OT proposed moving from a direct service to a consult service because they did not feel they were challenging the Student and stated the Student had all of their fine motor skills. The OT stated they wanted to work with the staff who helped the Student and answer any concerns they had or provide strategies if the Student was struggling. The OT wanted the Student to be in class learning instead of working on fine motor skills tasks, which they perceived the Student had achieved. They indicated the Student would still participate in their group on Fridays. The OT explained they created a goal which stated the Student would increase their fine motor skills to be able to write legibly on their own in the classroom, on classroom assignments 80% of the time. They stated they would review the Student's work samples from class to ensure there was no regression or difficulties with the assignments. The Parent did not have any questions when asked.

h. The Special Education Teacher presented a new social-emotional goal for the Student to demonstrate improved impulse control by pausing and using an appropriate response, such as keeping their hands to themself, using appropriate language, for four out of five observed opportunities. The Special Education Teacher stated the Student's services were not changing, other than the OT services, which were moving from direct to a consult.

i. The Special Education Teacher summarized the changes to the Student's IEP, including decreasing the Student's OT services to a monthly consult.

j. The SLP stated they did not work on speech sounds with the Student because they did not have a problem understanding the Student, but acknowledged the Parent mentioned they had a hard time understanding the Student at home. The Board Certified Behavior Analyst (BCBA) stated there were times when the Student was clear and times when they were not. The SLP indicated the Student had learned phrases they repeated which were clearer and easier to understand. The SLP explained they had not worked on speech production with the Student and were more focused on communication. The SLP indicated they could work on additional speech skills with the Student if they were ready.

k. The SLP had not seen the Student have needs related to verbal speech at school and asked the team if they had seen the Student be frustrated when trying to verbalize something and not being able to understand the Student. The Special Education Teacher stated they understood the Student well, but a person unfamiliar with the Student might have trouble understanding the Student. The SLP stated they could start trying new things with the Student and speak to the other SLP. They indicated they would not adjust the Student's speech time at that moment, but it was not off the table.

l. The SLP explained there was not a specific guideline for how often services were provided, but it was based on the therapist's interpretation of the need and how beneficial it was to have a student pulled out for services or being exposed to the classroom. The SLP's focus was to ensure the Student was functionally communicating at school, accessing the curriculum, and interacting with others, but not necessarily that a student was "extremely fluent" with their speech. They felt the Student was having their speech needs met at School. The Principal added once the Student started to attend school more often, they could change their services if they saw a need.

m. The Parent discussed a strategy the Student was learning with an outside provider about boundaries, such as which people were appropriate to kiss or hug. The BCBA added this was being worked on with the Student because the Student had had issues kissing people at School. They indicated the Student had responded well to the teachings.

n. The Parent requested the School perform an FBA for elopement, kissing, and aggression, to determine the cause and work to prevent the behaviors. The Special Education Teacher stated they would speak to the School Psychologist and let the Parent know about next steps.

o. The Parent shared with the BCBA the Student had eloped the week before Christmas break. The Parent indicated to the BCBA they felt the SLP was not scheduling more speech service minutes with the Student because they did not have enough time to accommodate it. The BCBA explained to the Parent if the Student's speech and OT skills were not inhibiting their functionality at the School, the team would not work on those skills. The Parent perceived the School was going to avoid conducting the FBA.

15. PWN dated February 19, 2026, included:

    a. The LEA proposed to conduct a reevaluation requiring parental consent. The explanation section stated the action was proposed because the Parent requested an FBA to determine the Student's needs, and the child study team and IEP team believed this to be appropriate. The team considered not doing an FBA but that consideration was rejected, as the FBA was appropriate to determine the Student's needs. The data listed to be used was Parent request and IEP data.

16. A Progress Report, dated March 12, 2026, provided data on all goals. Relevant goal information included for the first goal indicated that the Student demonstrated fluctuating progress, ranging from "slight improvement" to "maintained performance," across 2025 and 2026. For the second goal, which involved independently solving single-digit addition equations using manipulatives with 80% accuracy, the Student mastered the objective in January 2026.

17. In an email exchange, dated March 12 and 13, 2026, the Special Education Teacher informed the Parent about the Student hitting the paraprofessional and attempting to run outside. They shared the Student was unable to escape due to the safety locks. The next day, the Parent responded and requested information about the Student's schedule, classes that were attended, sequence of events, supports, and deescalation strategies that were implemented during the incident. The Parent asked for specifics related to the day and also asked for documentation related to the incident.

18. Relevant information from a Progress Report, dated March 25, 2026, included the following:
    a. OT goal indicated the Student achieved a score of "6" (slight improvement) on March 14, 2025, May 9, 2025, October 14, 2025, December 19, 2025, and March 13, 2026.
    b. Functional Communication goal indicated the Student had a "6" and "7" (slight improvement and moderate improvement) on March 14, 2025 and May 12, 2025, respectively. They had a score of "8" (mastered) on October 14, 2025, December 19, 2025, and March 13, 2026.
19. Undated speech attendance logs for the 2024-25 and 2025-26 school years documented the Student's participation in speech services. During the Spring 2025 term, the Student was serviced 14 of 17 opportunities across March, April, and May, with the year concluding on May 15, 2025. The 2025-26 service data indicated the following: 5 of 5 opportunities in August; 7 of 11 opportunities in September; 9 of 10 in October; 8 of 8 in November; 6 of 8 in December; 11 of 12 in January; 6 of 7 in February; and 6 of 6 in March.
20. Two undated OT attendance records for the 2024-25 and 2025-26 school years, documented the Student's participation in OT services. During the Spring 2025 term, the Student was served for 12 of 15 opportunities across March, April, and May, with the school year concluding on May 15, 2025. Following February 17, 2025, service frequency was changed to once weekly, indicated by a hand note. The 2025-26 service data reflected the following: 4 of 6 opportunities in August; 5 of 8 in September; 7 of 8 in October; 3 of 6 in November; 4 of 6 in December; 7 of 8 in January; 2 of 5 in February; and 1 of 6 in March.
21. A student discipline entry for the period March 10, 2025 - March 27, 2026 showed one entry on April 3, 2025 in which the Parent was contacted regarding inappropriate behavior. The Parent picked the Student up from school and advised the LEA the Student did not receive their morning medication, which may have led to the behavior.
22. The LEA provided the Complaint Investigator a visual cue card of positive social behavior(s) the Student could participate in with peers, an example of a social story, and an example of the Student's written work.
23. In an undated report card for school year 2025-26, the Student was rated as M, consistently meeting standards/masters the standard, in areas of demonstrating competency in a variety of motor skills and movement patterns, applied knowledge of concepts, principles, strategies and tactics related to movement and performance, demonstrated knowledge and skills to achieve and maintain a health-enhancing level of physical activity and fitness. The Student received a rating of P, progressing towards the standard, in exhibiting responsible personal and social behavior the respected self and others.

Parent Interview:

24. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Parent explained they received a phone call regarding the events on November 12, 2025. They were told the Student's designated one-to-one paraprofessional diverted their attention from the Student to assist another child who was having a tantrum. During this interval, the Student moved to the other end of a table and kissed a peer. The Parent shared they informed the School that this diversion of support violated the Student's IEP, which mandated one-to-one support throughout the entire school day to address safety concerns such as elopement.
25. The Parent explained the Student exhibited a history of elopement as well as aggressive behaviors such as hitting, kicking, pinching, and intentional urination. Although the School had initiated an FBA a few years prior, the Parent never received the results, and the School declined to create a formal behavior plan at that time because the teacher was already implementing informal supports. During an IEP meeting on February 10, 2026, the Parent formally requested a new FBA to "figure out what it is that the teacher is doing differently that may not be written formally into the IEP." While the School eventually agreed to conduct the assessment, the Parent expressed concern that the School's approach was "reactive instead of being proactive." As of April 10, 2026, the Parent understood the FBA to be ongoing but had received no formal notification of its completion.
26. The Parent shared their concern regarding the School's decisions to reduce OT services and deny an increase in SLP services during the February 2026 IEP meeting. They explained the School proposed a reduction in OT services based on the OT's assertion that the Student had made significant progress in handwriting. However, the Parent reported that the Student's January 2026 progress report indicated they had not met their OT goals, and the March 2026 report showed they only met requirements when provided with significant cues and boundaries rather than working independently.
    a. Additionally, the Parent stated that neither data nor work samples were provided to support the reduction of services at the February 2026 IEP meeting. The Parent requested an increase in SLP services to three sessions per week to address the Student's articulation disorder and expressive language delays. The Parent shared the School denied the increase at the IEP meeting, with the SLP stating the Student was "functional" in the classroom and that the schedule was determined at the SLP's discretion. The Parent expressed concern that the School's refusal to address these communication deficits may have exacerbated the Student's behavioral escalations.

SLP Interview:

27. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the SLP reported the Student's speech services remained consistent at twice a week for 15 minutes, and no changes to these minutes were proposed during the February 2026 IEP meeting.

The SLP shared, "I don't recall any issues … on my end about implementing [the Student's] IEP as it's written." The SLP noted that, while they may have suggested an increase in services years prior if the Student had been attending School more frequently, they kept services at twice a week because the Student was attending twice a week.

28. Regarding the Parent's request for increased services to address articulation, the SLP stated that current data and the Student's progress did not indicate a need for additional service time. The SLP acknowledged that the Student had inaccurate speech sound production but asserted that the Student was able to functionally communicate and express needs in the educational setting. The SLP concluded that even if they were to target specific speech sounds, an increase in service minutes was not required to meet the Student's needs within the academic environment.

Special Education Teacher Interview:

29. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Special Education Teacher recalled the November 12, 2025 incident and shared they were not present at that time, but as the case manager, it was relayed to them. They reported that the Student was working in a science class when a peer became violent. The Student's assigned paraprofessional turned to assist with the other student for a "brief second," during which time the Student moved to kiss a peer.
Following the incident, they, along with the Social Worker, called the Parent to discuss the behavior. During this call, the Parent alleged a denial of a FAPE, stating a breach of the one-to-one support-related service. The Special Education Teacher assured the Parent that one-to-one services were being provided and would continue. No changes were made to the Student's service minutes or one-to-one status following the incident, though a goal was updated to focus on "positive peer interactions."

30. The Special Education Teacher stated, "There have been no issues implementing [the Student's] IEP." They explained they use social stories, a token economy, and "structured visual schedules" to assist in the encouragement of predictability to reduce "impulsive behavior."

31. The Special Education Teacher stated that the Student's behaviors were not "consistent enough on a day-to-day basis" to cause "serious concern," noting that the structured classroom environment promoted predictability. When the Student became dysregulated, they typically exhibited repetitive language before escalating to hitting, kicking, pinching, or attempting to bite. Regarding the February 10, 2026 FBA request, the Special Education Teacher facilitated the process by contacting the School Psychologist, and the School team approved the assessment and the process was underway.

32. The Special Education Teacher shared they supported the proposed reduction in OT services, asserting that the Student was "very capable" of writing uppercase and lowercase letters with correct sizing. They characterized the Student's occasional poor writing as "stubbornness" rather than a lack of ability, noting their work was legible and successful within the classroom curriculum. Regarding SLP services, the Special Education Teacher explained they collaborated with the SLP and agreed that the focus should remain on functional responses and comprehension rather than increasing minutes. The Special Education Teacher stated the SLP and the OT gathered their own data, and they collected work samples as data. They maintained that comparative reviews of the Student's IEPs showed "fantastic progress" and that current interventions were "successful."

OT Interview:

33. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the OT reported having a positive rapport with the Student, noting that they followed a consistent "three-basket" work system during sessions. The OT focused on fine motor, visual motor, and visual perceptual skills using various manipulatives like snap cubes and magnets to practice letter formation, placement, and spacing. The OT noted that while the Student preferred writing in capital letters, they were capable of writing lowercase letters and mimicking different fonts when requested.
34. The OT explained their decision to transition the Student from direct to consult services. This recommendation was based on their assessment that the Student could write each letter legibly and in the correct placement, meaning they no longer required "skilled intervention." The OT used a "print tool" which assessed writing as the data to support their decision. The OT intended for the consult services to focus on helping classroom staff and paraprofessionals maintain the Student's consistency, as the Student would sometimes write poorly or in large script when in a poor "learning state." According to the OT, when this reduction was proposed, the Parent stated they were fine with it because they did not care about the Student's writing.
35. When asked about the impact of changes in OT services to the Student, the OT explained there had been no change, as the Parent has not signed the IEP. They have continued to see the Student for OT services.

Positions of the Parties, Applicable Regulations, and Conclusions

Issue One

Whether USD #265, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, implemented the Student's IEP on November 12, 2025 when "[the Student's] assigned paraprofessional helped another student instead of supervising [the Student]." Additionally, whether the Student's IEP was implemented as written prior to IEP amendments being made. K.A.R. 91-40-16; 34 CFR § 300.323.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-16 and 34 C.F.R. § 300.323, an IEP must be in effect for each exceptional child at the beginning of each school year. Each public agency must ensure that the child's IEP is accessible to each regular education teacher, special education teacher, related services provider, and any other service provider who is responsible for its implementation. Each agency must ensure that each teacher and provider is informed of their specific responsibilities for implementing the child's IEP and the accommodations, modifications, and supports that must be provided for the child in accordance with the IEP.

The Parent alleged that on November 12, 2025, the Student's assigned paraprofessional assisted another student instead of supervising the Student. Additionally, they alleged the IEP was not implemented as written at the time.

The LEA maintained the Student's IEP was implemented as written, ensuring that all identified services and supports were delivered in alignment with the needs of the Student.

Under the standard established in Van Duyn v. Baker School District 5J, 502 F.3d 811 (9th Cir. 2007), a failure to implement an IEP is only a violation if the deviation from the IEP is "material," meaning there is more than a minor discrepancy between the services provided and those required. Given that the paraprofessional's diversion was momentary and necessary to ensure the safety of all students, and the Student remained in the secure environment designated by the IEP, the brief lapse in proximity did not constitute a material failure to implement the Student's required safety and communication supports. Additionally, prior to the IEP amendment made in February 2026, the evidence indicates the Student's services were consistently delivered in accordance with the existing IEP as written.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that USD #265 failed to implement the Student's IEP as written.

Issue Two

Whether USD #265, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, was required to convene an IEP meeting to review and revise the Student's IEP after the November 12, 2025 incident. K.A.R. 91-40-16; 34 CFR § 300.324(b).

According to K.A.R. 91-40-16 and CFR § 300.324(b), an IEP must be in effect for each exceptional child at the beginning of each school year. Each public agency must ensure the child's IEP is reviewed periodically, but not less than annually, to determine whether the annual goals for the child are being achieved. IEPs may be revised as appropriate to address a lack of expected progress towards annual goals, results of any reevaluation, parent input, child's anticipated needs, or other matters.

The IEP team must consider the following special factors: In the case of a child whose behavior impedes the child's learning or that of others, consider the use of positive behavioral interventions and supports, and other strategies, to address that behavior. In the case of a child with limited English proficiency, consider the language needs of the child as those needs relate to the child's IEP. Additionally, consider the communication needs of the child, and in the case of a child who is deaf or hard of hearing, consider the child's language and communication needs, opportunities for direct communications with peers and professional personnel in the child's language and communication mode, academic level, and full range of needs, including opportunities for direct instruction in the child's language and communication mode. Finally, consider whether the child needs assistive technology devices and services.

In making changes to a child's IEP after the annual IEP Team meeting for a school year, the parent of a child with a disability and the public agency may agree not to convene an IEP Team meeting for the purposes of making those changes, and instead may develop a written document to amend or modify the child's current IEP. If changes are made to the child's IEP, the public agency must ensure that the child's IEP Team is informed of those changes.

The Parent alleged an IEP meeting was not called to review and revise the IEP for behavior needs after a November 12, 2025 kissing incident.

The LEA maintained the team did not formally meet after the November 12, 2025 incident because the team discussed the behavior informally and took immediate corrective action, implementing additional supports.

Following the November 2025 incident, the LEA implemented informal interventions, including social stories and power cards, to address the Student's behavior. The record showed that the kissing incident was an isolated event and did not rise to the level of an established habit or a major safety risk that would necessitate an immediate formal IEP revision. The LEA's data demonstrated that the behavior was effectively managed through the immediate implementation of informal, targeted interventions, such as social stories and power cards, which allowed the Student to continue making growth in the general education setting. Because the Student's progress remained consistent and the behavior was successfully mitigated without a change in placement or services, the LEA was not required to convene the team prior to the annual review. Furthermore, there is no evidence the Parent formally requested an IEP meeting prior to the annual review in February 2026.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that USD #265 was required to convene a formal IEP meeting immediately following the November 12, 2025 incident.

Issue Three

> Whether USD #265, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, was required to conduct a functional behavior assessment (FBA) prior to the Parent's request for one on February 10, 2026. K.S.A. 72-3428(h)(1)(A); 34 CFR § 300.303(a)(1).

According to K.S.A. 72-3428(h)(1)(A) and 34 CFR § 300.303(a)(1), each agency shall ensure that a reevaluation of each exceptional child is conducted if the agency determines that the educational or related services needs of the child, including academic achievement or functional performance, warrant a reevaluation, or if the child's parent or teacher requests a reevaluation.

The Parent alleged that the LEA should have completed an FBA prior to the Parent's request on February 10, 2026.

The LEA asserted that a FBA was not conducted prior to the Parent's request because the Student was successfully accessing the general education curriculum and making adequate progress toward existing goals.

Prior to the Parent's formal request, the record shows the Student was successfully accessing the curriculum and making significant progress with existing supports. Specifically, quarterly progress reports and teacher observations documented the Student was meeting academic benchmarks, and that the existing supports were effectively reducing elopement and behavior incidents. After the Parent formally requested the FBA at the February 2026 meeting, the LEA promptly issued a PWN to initiate the FBA. The LEA met its obligation by responding to the formal request, as prior data did not indicate the existing behavioral supports required an assessment.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that USD #265 was required to have completed an FBA prior to the Parent request.

Issue Four

Whether USD #265, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, developed a February 10, 2026 IEP that included current and accurate data to support the reduction in OT services, and the denial of increased speech services for the Student. K.A.R. 91-40-18; 34 CFR § 300.320(a)(1).

According to K.A.R. 91-40-18 and 34 CFR § 300.320(a)(1), in developing or reviewing the IEP of any exceptional child, each agency shall consider the results of the child's performance on any general state or districtwide assessment programs. If an IEP team determines that a child needs behavioral interventions and strategies, accommodations, assistive technology devices or services, or other program modifications for the child to receive a FAPE, the IEP team shall include those items in the child's IEP. The term IEP means a written statement for each child with a disability that is developed, reviewed, and revised in a meeting and that must include a statement of the child's present levels of academic achievement and functional performance, including how the child's disability affects the child's involvement and progress in the general education curriculum (i.e., the same curriculum as for nondisabled children).

The Parent alleged that at the February 10, 2026 IEP meeting, OT services were transitioned to consult-only services and speech services were not increased. Furthermore, the Parent alleged that data was not provided to support these changes and that service decisions were dictated by the Student's schedule rather than individual needs.

The LEA maintained the IEP was developed using current and accurate data and supports were aligned with identified needs.

The OT provided evidence that the Student had achieved significant fine motor gains, including legible writing and 80% accuracy in classroom tasks, suggesting that "skilled intervention" was no longer required. Regarding speech, the SLP maintained data showing the Student had mastered previous goals and was communicating functionally within the educational environment. There was no evidence to suggest the need for continued OT services or increased speech services.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that USD #265 developed the February 10, 2026 IEP without current and accurate data.

Issue Five

Whether USD #265, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, denied the Student a FAPE, as a result of the aforementioned issues. K.A.R. 91-40-2, K.A.R. 91-40-1(z); 34 CFR §§ 300.17, 300.101.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-2, K.A.R. 91-40-1(z) and 34 CFR §§ 300.17, 300.101, a FAPE means special education and related services that are provided at public expense, under public supervision and direction, and without charge. A FAPE must meet the standards of the State board and include an appropriate preschool, elementary, or secondary school education. A FAPE must be provided in conformity with an IEP.

The Parent alleged that the cumulative effect of the aforementioned violations resulted in a denial of a FAPE.

The LEA maintained that it provided a FAPE because the Student's services and supports were appropriately designed, data-driven, and implemented to meet their individual needs.

The record indicates the Student made growth and progress across academic and communication domains. Attendance logs confirm the consistent delivery of services, and the LEA adjusted goals and interventions as the Student met benchmarks. The LEA addressed the Student's evolving needs through data-driven IEP revisions, informal supports, and maintained the required supports such as the 1:1 paraprofessional, safety cards, positive reinforcements and visual supports necessary to access their education.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that USD #265 denied the Student a FAPE, as no violations were found regarding the aforementioned allegations.

Right to Appeal

Either party may appeal the findings or conclusions in this report by filing a written notice of appeal with the State Commissioner of Education, ATTN: Special Education and Title Services, Landon State Office Building, 900 SW Jackson Street, Suite 620, Topeka, KS 66612-1212. The notice of appeal may also be filed by email to formalcomplaints@ksde.gov The notice of appeal must be delivered within 10 calendar days from the date of this report.

For further description of the appeals process, see Kansas Administrative Regulations 91-40-51(f).

Upon receiving an appeal, an appeal committee of at least three department of education members shall be appointed by the commissioner to review the report and to consider the information provided by the local education agency, the complainant, or others. The appeal process, including any hearing conducted by the appeal committee, shall be completed within 15 days from the date of receipt of the notice of appeal, and a decision shall be rendered within five days after the appeal process is completed unless the appeal committee determines that exceptional circumstances exist with respect to the particular complaint. In this event, the decision shall be rendered as soon as possible by the appeal committee.

(2) If an appeal committee affirms a compliance report that requires corrective action by an agency, that agency shall initiate the required corrective action immediately. If, after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the agency shall be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following:

(A) The issuance of an accreditation deficiency advisement;
(B) the withholding of state or federal funds otherwise available to the agency;
(C) the award of monetary reimbursement to the complainant; or
(D) any combination of the actions specified in paragraph (f)(2)

In the Matter of the Appeal of the Report
Issued in Response to a Complaint Filed
Against Unified School District No. 265,
Goddard Public Schools: 26FC265-001

DECISION OF THE APPEAL COMMITTEE

Background

This matter commenced with the filing of a complaint on March 9, 2026, by ------- on behalf of her son, -------. In the remainder of this decision, ------- will be referred to as the parent," and ------- will be referred to as "the student." An investigation of the complaint was undertaken by a complaint investigator on behalf of the Special Education, and Title Services team at the Kansas State Department of Education. Following the investigation, a Complaint Report, addressing the allegations, was issued on April 21, 2026. That Complaint Report concluded that there was a violation of special education statutes and regulations

Thereafter, the district filed an appeal of the Complaint Report. Upon receipt of the appeal, an appeal committee was appointed and it reviewed the original complaint filed by the parent, the Complaint Report, the parent's notice of appeal, and the district's response to the appeal. The Appeal Committee has reviewed the information provided in connection with this matter and now issues this final Appeal Decision.

Preliminary Matters

A copy of the regulation regarding the filing of an appeal [K.AR. 91-40-51(f)J was attached to the Complaint Report. That regulation states, in part, that: "Each notice shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect." Accordingly, the burden for supplying a sufficient basis for appeal is on the party submitting the appeal. When a party submits an appeal and makes statements in the notice of appeal without support, the Committee does not attempt to locate the missing support.

No new issues will be decided by the Appeal Committee. The appeal process is a review of the Complaint Report. The Appeal Committee does not conduct a separate investigation. The appeal committee's function will be to determine whether sufficient evidence exists to support the findings and conclusions in the Complaint Report.

Discussion of Issues on Appeal

The report identified five issues. The report concluded that there were no violations of law. The parent's appeal the conclusion in Issue 4. Issue Four is:

Issue Four

Whether USO #265, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, developed a February 10, 2026 IEP that included current and accurate data to support the reduction in occupational therapy (OT) services, and the denial of increased speech services for the Student. KA.R. 91-40-18; 34 CFR §300.320(a)(1).

Occupational Therapy

The investigator concluded that, with regard to occupational therapy, "The OT provided evidence that the Student had achieved significant fine motor gains, including legible writing and 80% accuracy in classroom tasks, suggesting that "skilled intervention" was no longer required." With regard to speech therapy, the investigator concluded that, "Regarding speech, the SLP maintained data showing the Student had mastered previous goals and was communicating functionally within the educational environment." Finally, the investigator concluded that, "There was no evidence to suggest the need for continued OT services or increased speech services." (See Report, p. 37)

The complainant does not allege that occupational therapy services were reduced. The allegation appears to be only that at an IEP meeting on February 10, 2026, the IEP team proposed reductions in these services based on data that was not current or accurate. The data presented by the district resulted only in a proposal made by the IEP team. That proposal was later withdrawn because the parent refused to give the required consent. No change was made to the student's IEP and no service was withheld.

The complaint process is not available for this kind of dispute, where a parent is alleging only that information maintained by the district is inaccurate.. When a parent believes that information in education records is inaccurate or misleading the federal special education regulations has set out a separate process for challenging the accuracy of the information. That process allows parents to request that the disputed information be amended. If the district refuses to amend the disputed information, the district must inform the parents of that decision and advise the parents that they have a right to request a hearing. If, as a result of the hearing, it is determined that the information is inaccurate or misleading it must amend the information. If, as a result of the hearing, it is determined that the information is not inaccurate or misleading, the district must inform the parents of their right to place in their child's education records a statement commenting on the information or setting forth any reasons for disagreeing with the decisions of the district.

The Appeal Committee notes that in it's response to this appeal, the district will continue to provide OT services directly.

Speech Therapy

With regard to the allegation that the parent's request for additional speech therapy was denied by the IEP team based on inaccurate data, the Appeal Committee notes the following findings in the complaint report:

- The Student made significant progress on his speech goal, achieving a score of a "6" and "7" (slight improvement and moderate improvement) on March 14, 2025 and May 12, 2025, respectively. He earned a score of "8" (mastered) on October 14, 2025 and December 19, 2025. Finding of fact 9b(i), p. 16.
- Based on the most recent evaluation and ongoing data collection related to communication, the Student displayed needs that required special education or related services. The Student was described as an effective communicator and used speech to share their thoughts, express their needs, and show knowledge in academic tasks. The Student made progress, and their speech and language skills were a strong tool for their daily success. To help the Student be successful, the IEP would focus on self-advocacy, social navigation, and visual supports. The Parent reported they sometimes had trouble understanding the Student. The Student has mastered all of the communication goals from the previous IEP. This need would be met by general education supports, accommodations, supports for school personnel, supplementary aids and services, assistive technology, and a goal. Finding of Fact 12.f, p. 18-19.
- In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the SLP reported the Student's speech services remained consistent at twice a week for 15 minutes, and no changes to these minutes were proposed during the February 2026 IEP meeting. The SLP shared, "I don't recall any issues ... on my end about implementing [the Student's] IEP as it's written." The SLP noted that, while they may have suggested an increase in services years prior if the Student had been attending School more frequently, they kept services at twice a week because the Student was attending twice a week (emphasis added). Finding of Fact 27, p. 30
- Regarding the Parent's request for increased services to address articulation, the SLP stated that current data and the Student's progress did not indicate a need for additional service time. The SLP acknowledged that the Student had inaccurate speech sound production but asserted that the Student was able to functionally communicate and express needs in the educational setting. The SLP concluded that even if they were to target specific speech sounds, an increase in service minutes was not required to meet the Student's needs within the academic environment. Finding of Fact 28, p. 30-31

In a written statement, dated May 7, 2026, the student's speech therapist made the following observations:

- When looking at [the student] globally, his speech and language needs are effectively met within the current timeframe. Increasing service minutes for a single deficit area would necessitate pulling him from other critical educational programming or peer interactions, which would risk a violation of the Least Restrictive Environment (LRE) mandate. The current speech_ language goals continue to address Dominic's needs in relation to his overall academic services. Within the proposed goals, his intelligibility and speech sound production would be addressed as part of his ability to effectively interact and communicate in the school setting.

- The ASHA notes that "more" is not always "better." Clinical efficacy is found in the balance of direct service and the child's ability to generalize those skills. The current frequency provides sufficient intervention to drive progress without causing "therapy fatigue" or disrupting his broader academic development.
- Educational Model: Focuses on providing the support necessary for the student to access their curriculum and participate in school. The current school-based dosage is specifically designed to address the educational impact of his communication needs.
- While supplemental private therapy may follow a medical model, the school's role is to ensure he is making meaningful progress toward his IEP goals, which the current data confirms he is doing.
- Private therapy's goal is clinical remediation, while my goal under IDEA is educational access. Currently, Dominic is demonstrating the ability to communicate effectively within his school environment, which is the standard we are legally required to meet.

It is not uncommon for members of an IEP team to disagree about what constitutes an appropriate educational program for a child with a disability. Frequently, when such disagreements arise, there is a compromise made by both parties to construct an IEP that provides meaningful educational benefit to the student. Other times, the parties become involved in a complaint process like this one or even in due process hearing and court proceedings.

In Endrew F. v. Douglas County School District, 137 S.Ct. 988, 117 LRP 9767 (S.C. 2017) a dispute over what an IEP must offer to constitute a free appropriate public education for a child with a disability went all the way to the United States Supreme Court. In that decision, the supreme court set the standard for what constitutes an appropriate IEP. The court said in order to provide a free appropriate public education, "a school must offer an IEP reasonably calculated to enable a child to make progress appropriate in light of the child's circumstances."

What does appropriate mean? The Supreme Court gave some guidance on this issue. It said (emphasis added with bold print):

- The IEP must aim to enable the child to make progress;
- The required progress need not be ideal, but must be appropriate in light of the child's circumstances;
- There is a wide range of children with disabilities and the benefits obtainable by children at one end of the spectrum will differ dramatically from those obtainable by children at the other end;
- For children who are fully integrated in the regular classroom, an IEP "typically should" be reasonably calculated to enable the child to achieve passing marks and advance from grade to grade;

- There is no bright-line rule, the adequacy of a given IEP turns on the unique circumstances of the child;
- A high standard proposed by the student in this case, consisting of an IEP reasonably calculated to provide a child with opportunities to achieve academic success, attain self-sufficiency, and to contribute to society that are substantially equal to the opportunities afforded children without disabilities, is rejected; and
- Deference is given to school officials based on the application of expertise and the exercise of judgment, but "A reviewing court may fairly expect those authorities to be able to offer a cogent and responsive explanation for their decisions that show the IEP is reasonably calculated to enable the child to make progress appropriate in light of his circumstance.

Progress then is the measuring stick. Not ideal progress, but appropriate progress in light of a child's individual circumstances. When a dispute such as this one is sent to an administrative body such as a state department of education the supreme court directs the administrative agency to give at least some deference to school officials in exercising both expertise and judgement, as long as they are able to offer a cogent and responsive explanation for their decisions.

The Appeal Committee finds that the school district has provided a cogent and responsive explanation for their decisions.

This child is only attending school two days per week and is receiving two sessions of speech services per week. In addition, this student is making appropriate progress in speech therapy as measured by the last four progress reports. It may not be ideal progress, but he is meeting his speech goal and is effectively communicating with staff and other students.

There is another element to this analysis. As the speech therapist opined, more is not always better. That is especially true when more speech services would also deprive the student of other learning and socializing opportunities. This consideration is especially applicable for a student like this one who is only attending school on a part-time basis.

Sufficient evidence exists to support the findings and conclusions in the Complaint Report

Conclusion

For the reasons stated herein, the Complaint Report is sustained in full.

This is the final decision on this matter. There is no further appeal. This Appeal Decision is issued this 14th day of May, 2026.

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST
UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #265
ON MARCH 9, 2026

DATE OF REPORT: APRIL 21, 2026

This report is in response to a Complaint filed with our office on behalf of a student, ------- by their parent, -------. In the remainder of the report, the student will be referred to as "the Student" and the parent as "the Parent."

The Complaint is against USD #265 Goddard Public Schools. In the remainder of the report, "the School" and the "local education agency (LEA)" shall refer to USD #265.

When a special education complaint is filed against a school district that is a member of a special education cooperative or interlocal, or that uses any other state recognized public agency to serve children with disabilities, the term "local education agency (LEA)" in this report will include the school district, the special education cooperative or interlocal, and any other agency that is recognized by the state as an administrative agency for public elementary or secondary schools and is serving the educational needs of this student.

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) allows for a 30-day timeline to investigate a child complaint. A complaint is considered to be filed on the date it is delivered to both the KSDE and the LEA. In this case, the KSDE initially received the Complaint on March 9, 2026 and the 30-day timeline ended on April 8, 2026.

Allegations

The following issues will be investigated:

ISSUE ONE: Whether USD #265, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), developed an individualized education program (IEP) that addressed the Student's need for access to written instructional material and assessments after a read-aloud accommodation was removed from the IEP in spring 2025. Further, whether the LEA provided the Student with IEP support for open-ended academic tasks across subject areas, and whether the IEP documented and addressed the Student's educational and functional performance with and without support. K.A.R. 91-40-16; 34 CFR § 300.323.

ISSUE TWO: Whether USD #265, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, provided the Student with a free appropriate public education (FAPE) when the LEA developed an IEP that did not include accurate or complete data about the Student's classroom performance and independent functioning. K.A.R. 91-40-2, K.A.R. 91-40-1(z); 34 CFR §§ 300.17, 300.101.

Investigation of Complaint

The Complaint Investigator interviewed the Parent and the following LEA staff on April 10, 2026: Teacher 1 and the Instructional Support Teacher.

In completing this investigation, the Complaint Investigator reviewed documentation provided by the Parent and the LEA. Although additional documentation was provided and reviewed, the following materials were used as the basis of the findings and conclusions of the investigation:

1. Emails dated 04/07/25–03/19/26
2. Attendance Log, 2025-26 School Year
3. Classroom Work Samples, no date
4. Fastbridge and Reflex Data Scores, 2025-26 School Year
5. IEP Contact Log, 08/07/25-03/09/26
6. Individualized Education Program, 04/16/24, 04/08/25
7. Neuropsychological Evaluation Summary, 11/20/25
8. Prior Written Notice, 04/03/25, 01/13/26
9. Progress Report, 2024-25 School Year, 2025-26 School Year
10. Report Card, 2024-25 School Year, 2025-26 School Year
11. Written Responses to Questions, 04/13/26

Background Information

This Investigation involved a 10-year-old student enrolled in the fourth grade at an elementary school in USD #265. The Student is currently receiving special education and related services as a child with a disability per the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) under the eligibility category of Orthopedic Impairment (OI). The Student takes medication for Attention-Deficit/Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD), asthma, and seizures, but does not take medication at school and is on a Health Care Plan.

Findings of the Investigation

The following findings are based on a review of documentation and interviews with the Parent and staff in the LEA.

1. An IEP, dated April 16, 2024, indicated the Student required special education or related services in reading.
    a. It was indicated the Student made gains in phonics, which increased their oral reading fluency. The Student was described as being more confident in their reading and as willing to volunteer to read aloud. It was also noted the Student needed to continue working on fluency, and that unit reading tests had been modified.

b. The Student was noted to be in a high-risk range on a reading evaluation, indicating the Student needed additional support to improve reading accuracy and automaticity. The Student read 39 words with 90% accuracy at an unspecified text level. An additional reading assessment indicated the Student was in the "some-risk" category, meaning they needed additional supports to improve their overall reading skills. It is also noted the Student had previously been scoring 30-40% on comprehension assessments and had improved to 80%.

c. The Student made gains in written language, and their legibility had also improved. The Student wrote with correct letter size and placement and showed adequate spacing between words. The Student could write complete sentences and improve their spelling skills.

d. The Student needed additional instruction and practice in phonics as the patterns became more difficult. The Student's need for modified spelling tests had decreased, and their quarter three phonics grade was 86%. The Student's writing legibility and ability to write in complete sentences had also improved.

e. The Parent stated math and being friendly with other kids were strengths for the Student. The Parent stated the Student's greatest needs were reading and writing, emotional support, and extra time and prompts when called on in class. The Student was receiving more special education support than was stated in their IEP.

f. Goal 4 stated, "By the next annual IEP, [the Student] will increase [their] oral reading fluency to 100-110 words with 98% accuracy as measured by [curriculum-based measurement] CBM progress monitoring." Baseline data indicated the last 3 progress monitoring probes showed 79 words with 99% accuracy, 66 words with 96% accuracy, and 62 words with 95% accuracy. The evaluation procedure used was CBM/[oral reading fluency] ORF grade-level passages.

g. The following services were listed as being provided from April 16, 2024 through April 15, 2025:

    i. Special education support to aid in providing the accommodations and supplementary aids and services outlined in the IEP in a regular or special education classroom, daily per the classroom schedule and determined by the staff working with the Student for 30 minutes.

    ii. Materials read out loud for assignments and assessments daily, when the test is above the Student's instructional level, unless the read aloud invalidates an assessment, in all settings, for the amount of time needed to provide the read aloud.

iii. Access to a quieter space for work and assessments daily, when a non-distractable environment is needed for the Student to focus on the task, in a general or special education classroom, for the time needed to complete the task.

iv. Directions and tasks broken down into tasks or chunks to ensure the Student understands the task daily, in all settings, for the amount of time needed to give directions and check for understanding.

v. Paper/pencil assessment or close proximity to an adult when given an assessment, to discourage the Student from clicking answers in a general or special education classroom for the time needed to take the assessment.

vi. Allow the Student to express knowledge on assignments and assessments in an alternative way, or modify questions and answers to allow for less answer choices, a stem provided, or multiple choice, when given an assessment or assignment that requires the Student to give a lengthy answer or they need time to process the information in order to formulate their ideas, in all academic settings, for the amount of time needed to complete to provide the accommodation in order for the Student to complete the task.

vii. Assignments checked off by a staff member prior to turning in, and if assignments need to be sent home for completion, they are added to a daily communication log, daily before turning in assignments, and at the end of the day, in the general education classroom, for the amount of time needed to check in on assignments.

viii. Additional time to respond to auditory input throughout the school day, in all academic settings, for up to 15 seconds.

ix. Access to sensory breaks as needed throughout the school day, in all settings, for the length of the school day.

x. Access to preferential and/or flexible seating options. This may include close proximity to an adult, seating away from highly distracting areas or students, being allowed to stand, etc., as needed throughout the school day, in all school settings, for the length of the school day.

2. A Progress Report dated March 21, 2025, indicated the following progress toward the Student's IEP goals:
   a. Goal: The Student will write legibly on classroom assignments 90% of the time without verbal cues.
   b. Goal: The Student will increase their oral reading fluency to 100-110 words with 98% accuracy.
      i. Progress was measured by CBM/ORF grade level passages.
      ii. Status code: "8-Mastered."

iii. Comments: The Student met their ORF goal, reading 111 words per minute with 100% accuracy.

3. Relevant information from a transcript of an April 3, 2025, IEP meeting included:
    a. The OT stated the Student had received consult services, meaning the OT consulted with the Case Manager and classroom teacher about the Student's progress and whether they had any concerns about the Student's sensory needs or writing. They indicated the Case Manager and Teacher 2 reported the Student was doing great with their writing and only had occasional sensory needs, which had not impacted them in the classroom. The OT wanted to move the consult service to a support for school personnel, so the staff would contact the OT if they had any concerns about the Student. The OT stated the Student took a little more time with their writing, but they did not believe it was a concern.
    b. The Physical Therapist (PT) indicated the Student had functional mobility in the School setting.
    c. The School Psychologist explained the Student's nonverbal problem-solving was above average, and their visual memory was "weak."
    d. The Case Manager stated the IEP team originally was not going to have support in reading for the Student next year, but determined the Student still needed some support. They explained the Student struggled with "deeper level" questions. The Parent believed the Student needed help with content writing and generating ideas for answers. The Case Manager indicated the Student's work was an "A" but became a "C" because the Student was losing and not completing assignments. They stated accommodations were added, and the Student was receiving paraprofessional support during reading and independent work time. Teacher 2 clarified this would help the Student complete their assignments and turn them in.
    e. The Case Manager stated the Student's writing skills continued to grow, handwriting was not an issue, and their spelling was good. Teacher 2 confirmed this, but indicated sometimes the Student missed writing a word to complete a sentence, which they worked on. The Case Manager stated the Student needed to build their writing stamina. They explained all of the teachers used graphic organizers, which they believed the Student needed. They agreed with the Parent's earlier statement about the Student struggling with idea generation and stated the Student would receive assistance.
    f. The SLP explained they were working with all of the general education teachers on a technique to help students with writing. They indicated they successfully used that technique with the Student. The SLP stated it was a template to help students learn to write paragraphs. The SLP shared the "open-ended question piece" would be hard for students, especially students with ADHD. They referred back to the template and how it supported students by breaking down the steps and pulling everything together at the end.

g. The Case Manager said, "[The Student] currently has an A minus in writing. Independently, [they] can write one paragraph, but [the Student] gets off topic 50% of the time. So with support, [the Student] writes successfully at grade level. So we're gonna keep that support." The Parent perceived the writing support was for sentence structure and grammar, but did not help with generating ideas or putting thoughts on paper. The Case Manager stated the support was for everything. Teacher 2 provided an example of the support by explaining sometimes it looked like a conversation with the Student to help generate ideas and then completing the templates.

h. Teacher 2 stated the Student was in the low-risk category for math, so they were not receiving intervention during math time, but had access to help if needed. They stated a paraprofessional would work with the Student on any math skills the Student was struggling with. The Parent stated they were concerned about the Student working on math word problems. The Case Manager explained that for the 2025-26 school year, the Student would be in a classroom with a paraprofessional who already helped students with word problems. The Parent wanted to have something "extra" in the IEP about math, but the Case Manager stated the Student did not have support in math because the data showed they did not qualify for it. Teacher 2 stated the Student would do their math work in their head and not write it out, but they could relay the information. Teacher 2 stated this was a challenge for most students.

i. The Advocate requested the IEP show when the Student required support, even if it was already being provided through the general education curriculum. The School Psychologist suggested the IEP state, as appropriate, when an accommodation could be provided by the regular education teacher or paraprofessional. The Case Manager referred to an accommodation in the Student's current IEP: having assignments checked by staff for completion prior to submission, and noted this would occur daily.

j. The SLP shared the Student had been on consult services during the 2024-25 year and was functioning within normal limits for communication. The SLP wanted to add a writing accommodation for the Student to have graphic organizers for writing tasks. They added this could be targeted explicitly for certain content areas. The Parent asked if it was only for writing assignments because they were concerned all of the Student's classes were to a point where longer written answers were expected. The SLP stated the accommodation could be used wherever. They indicated it supported the general education teachers already offered, but wanted to add it as an accommodation so it was purposeful.

k. The Advocate asked if it was written in the IEP "that things need to get anchored into or contextualized into familiar topics." The SLP stated it was not, but it was a good accommodation to add. The School Psychologist asked if the accommodation could be worded that "instead of writing out an explanation,

[the Student] can verbally explain it to the teacher or another adult." The SLP agreed and stated it could be applied throughout the school day and did not have to be specific to anything in particular.

l. The Parent stated the Student's current IEP included an accommodation allowing the Student to demonstrate knowledge on assignments and assessments in an alternative way. They were concerned it was being removed. The Case Manager stated they would add the accommodation to the new IEP.

m. The Case Manager proposed a writing goal for the Student, "[The Student will] generate and organize ideas to stay on topic in writing assignments, producing three ideas per assignment and three of four trials. And that's with graphic organizers. … even with the comparison support, we want [the Student] to come up with the ideas because we're trying to get [them] more independent. … for reading, [the Student] will complete reading tasks and assignments 90% of the time. So with the accommodation that we gave [them], with that little support that we're giving [them] at the end of the day, we're gonna see how we do." The Case Manager explained the Student's "C" in reading was due to missing or incomplete assignments, which was why they added an accommodation and provided paraprofessional support during reading time. The Advocate expressed concern the goal was not addressing the root of why the Student was not turning in assignments. The Case Manager clarified the accommodation would be for the Student to check in with a teacher or paraprofessional at the end of the day, as well as during independent reading time, the Student would receive support to turn in their work. The SLP also addressed the Advocate's concern. They explained evidence-based practice showed executive functioning issues were typically supported through accommodations, which were written to work toward independence. Regarding the Student, they stated accommodations would include a routine or a check-in time. They explained the Student checked in with the paraprofessional, and this should transition into the Student performing a check-in for themselves. The SLP did not believe an executive functioning goal was necessary.

n. The Case Manager stated the Student's reading was at 100% accuracy, but they wanted to make sure the Student turned their work in. The Parent's main concern was the writing aspect of assignments.

o. The Advocate expressed concern the Student's incomplete assignments were due to a writing deficit and believed the Student needed to improve their writing skills. They asked which tools were helping to address the Student's writing deficit. Teacher 2 explained the Student was turning in incomplete assignments because they were reading the question, getting distracted, and forgetting to finish it. The IEP team discussed different ways to use visual reminders to help the Student turn in their assignments. This led to the idea of using visual reminders and a check-in with the Student, which the Parent agreed to. The SLP believed this accommodation could lead the Student to independently check their work. The Case Manager added the Student would have special education support for writing and work completion for reading.

p. The Parent asked why the Student's accommodation to "receive special education support to aid in providing the accommodations and supplementary aids and services outlined in the IEP" was being removed. The Case Manager stated it was because the Student no longer had supplementary aids. They indicated the reading accommodation was added in its place.

q. The Case Manager listed accommodations the Student would still have, including access to a quiet space for assessments, tasks broken down into steps, a staff check-in to ensure the Student understood the tasks, checked assignments, and information repeated as necessary. The Case Manager stated the team added an accommodation for staff to check the Student's assignments for completion prior to turning them in. They indicated the Student would still be provided additional time to respond to auditory input, academic and non-academic questions, verbal requests, and instructions. The Case Manager stated the graphic organizer would be added as an accommodation and the read-aloud accommodation would be removed because the Student "did not want it."

4. Prior Written Notice (PWN) dated April 3, 2025, stated staff met to determine whether the Student required special education and related services and to assess whether any additions, changes, or modifications to services or placement were required. A description of the action proposed or refused stated the team updated present levels, accommodations, and goals, removed supplementary aids, and removed special education services for English Language Arts (ELA) during instructional time. An explanation of why the action was proposed or refused stated the Student no longer showed the need for supplementary aids, flexible seating, and breaks, and the data no longer supported the Student needing full coverage during the ELA block. The team considered keeping supplementary aids and coverage for the Student but determined that they were no longer needed. The data used as the basis for the decision included teacher reports, classroom observations, district assessments, and curriculum-based assessments.

5. An IEP dated April 8, 2025, provided the following relevant information:

    a. The Student wrote with a consistent left-handed grasp and used a quadropod grasp on their writing utensil. They wrote legibly on classroom assignments 90% of the time without verbal cues. The occupational therapist (OT) reported good letter formation and sentence writing, but the student's writing assignments took longer than their peers'. The OT indicated the Student displayed age-appropriate cutting and self-care skills in the classroom.

    b. The IEP stated the Student needed to develop their comprehension skills, including answering higher-level questions, inferring the author's purpose, and making predictions. The Student struggled to complete their work entirely and turn it in on time. Strategies included circling or highlighting the problems to be finished, repeating the numbers to be completed back to the teacher, and consulting with a peer. This need was met through general education supports and accommodations.

c. In the area of written language, the Student continued to grow their writing skills. They could type and write with good letter formation, and their sentences were mostly in correct order with correct spelling. Needs included building writing stamina and writing complete, coherent sentences. The Student needed graphic organizers and writing templates to help continue their writing. They relied on assistance in expanding their thoughts into paragraphs. Current performance indicated the Student had an A- in writing. This need was met through accommodations.

d. The Parent requested a writing graphic organizer for the Student. It was indicated the Student was successful with the writing strategy, which was already being utilized.

e. A goal for writing stated, "By the next annual IEP, [the Student] will generate and organize ideas to stay on topic in writing assignments, producing at least three ideas per assignment in 3 of 4 trials." Baseline information indicated the Student wrote two sentences independently and in order, staying on topic. With support, the Student was able to write one paragraph using writing prompts, graphic organizers, and templates.

f. The following accommodations were listed as being provided from April 8, 2025 through April 7, 2026:

    i. Special education support for writing and work completion for reading in a general education classroom each day, during class time, for the same amount of time as general education peers have ELA.

    ii. Access to a quieter space for daily assessments when a non-distractable environment is needed for the Student to focus on the assessment, in a general education or special education classroom, for the time needed to complete the task.

    iii. Access to directions, tasks broken down into chunks, and a check-in to ensure the Student understands the task, each day school is in session, in all settings, for the time needed to give directions and check for understanding.

    iv. Additional time to respond to auditory input, throughout their school day, in all academic settings, for up to 15 seconds.

    v. Frequent check-ins from staff for understanding, when answering constructed or open-ended written responses are required, in the general education classroom, for the amount of time needed to complete the task.

    vi. Comprehension contextualization to help the Student connect academic content and skills to real-world or personal situations, when they exhibit a lack of comprehension, in the general or special education classroom, for the amount of time needed to gain comprehension.

vii. In all academic settings, the Student should be permitted to express their knowledge through alternative methods or modified questions. For assignments and assessments that require lengthy responses or significant processing time, instructors should provide accommodations such as sentence stems, multiple-choice formats, or fewer answer choices. Additionally, the Student must be given sufficient time to process information and formulate their responses to ensure they can successfully complete each task.

viii. A visual schedule outlining the daily routine, including transitions, activities, and tasks, each day school is in session, in the general education classroom, for the entirety of the school year.

g. It was noted the Student did not need modifications or supplementary aids and services. The Student's placement was in the General Education Classroom for the entire school day.

h. The Student had a diagnosis of ADHD that impacted their academic performance and required special education support in order for them to make gains in the general education curriculum. The Student also had weaknesses in auditory processing and memory that caused the Student difficulty processing information presented orally. "At times this does impact [the Student's] ability to follow multi-step directions and complete more complex assignments."

6. In an email exchange between the Case Manager and the Parent, dated April 7, 2025, the following draft IEP changes were included:
    a. Accommodations
        i. Record 3 amended to include Math and ELA assignments.
        ii. Records 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, and 9, "added per our discussion."
    b. Goals
        i. Reworked Goal 3 to reflect the Student would be given a tracking system to help them in their executive functioning goal.
7. In an email exchange between the Case Manager and the Parent, dated April 11, 2025, the Parent indicated they had concerns about the draft IEP they had been sent. The Parent noted the following:
    a. The Student still needed access to a quiet space during assignments, which the Student's teacher had said the Student used.
    b. Regarding highlighting, the goal was to foster long-term independence by providing guided instruction, rather than just the tool itself, to help the Student complete non-writing tasks, such as multiple-choice assignments.

c. The Parent wanted to know how the School planned to help the Student meet a work-completion goal. From what had come home, it looked like the incomplete work was mostly due to the Student's lack of a written response.

d. The Parent also wanted to know how the School would address incomplete work that was not writing-related. The Case Manager responded that any incomplete work at the end of the day, after their check-out, would be taken home to complete.

e. The draft IEP required all subject assignments to be checked before being turned in, but this was changed to only ELA and Math, rather than adding support for word problems, as discussed. The Case Manager responded that Accommodation Record 3 covered that as word problems were in math.

f. The only data specific to word problems came from the Student's classwork and tests, as well as the neuropsychologist's input based on their testing. The Case Manager replied that the data did not support the academic need for special education services in math instruction. The Student still needed it across all academic subjects to accommodate and support the Student's executive functioning throughout parts of their academic day.

g. The Parent suggested that if the Case Manager needed more input from the neuropsychologist, to let them know. The Case Manager indicated they had a copy of the report.

h. The School Psychologist suggested providing the Student with help with word problems and noted that the recorded math test grades were mostly low. The Case Manager indicated that Math remained the Student's strongest subject, and the data did not support the need for special education services in Math.

i. During the IEP meeting, the need for more help with providing longer answers to questions was identified. The Case Manager indicated it was in the IEP, Accommodations Record 7.

8. In an email exchange between the Parent and the Case Manager on April 15, 2025, the Parent suggested the following changes to the Amended IEP:

    a. "By the next annual IEP, [the Student] will utilize pre-taught organizational skills to independently organize, complete and turn in general education assignments 90% of the time."

    b. Benchmarks

        i. "By (Progress reporting time) [the Student] will utilize pre-taught organizational skills to organize, complete and turn in general education assignments 60% of the time with no more than 3 prompts."

        ii. "By (Progress reporting time) [the Student] will utilize pre-taught organizational skills to organize, complete and turn in general education assignments 70% of the time with no more than 3 prompts."

iii. "By (Progress reporting time) [the Student] will utilize pre-taught organizational skills to organize, complete and turn in general education assignments 80% of the time with no more than 2 prompts."

c. "By (Progress reporting time) [the Student] will utilize pre-taught organizational skills to organize, complete, and turn in general education assignments 90% of the time with no more than 2 prompts."

i. Accommodation Record 3 - Instead of, "[The Student] will have assignments checked by a staff member prior to turning in to check for understanding and completion," change to "[The Student] will have frequent check-ins from teacher/adult support to check for understanding of expectation and assignment."

ii. Accommodation Record 8 - Instead of "[The Student] will be allowed to carry and use a marking utensil (such as a highlighter or marker) to independently mark or highlight the problems or questions assigned on worksheets, assignments, or tests," changed to "Adult support will assist or check that [the Student] marked or highlighted the problems or questions assigned on worksheets, assignments, or tests to help identify important or key words."

iii. The Case Manager agreed to change Accommodation Record 3. For Accommodation Record 8, "[The Student] will be prompted to use a marking utensil (highlighter or marker) to independently mark the problems assigned on worksheets, assignments, and tests."

9. An email exchange between the Parent and the Case Manager on April 24, 2025, indicated the Parent wanted to keep the Case Manager's new wording for Accommodation Record 8. For Accommodation Record 5, instead of "[The Student] will have assignments checked by a staff member prior to turning in to check for understanding and completion," changed to "[The Student] will have frequent check[-]ins from a staff member to check for understanding."
10. Written language and math work samples, dated August 8, 2025 through February 26, 2026, indicated the Student was able to complete a writing sample about the Transcontinental Railroad. Teacher 1 noted, "100% independent, checked in, but [the Student] didn't want support." On a math computation sample, the Student scored 8 out of 8 correct. Journal entry samples indicated the Student could write complete sentences to form a paragraph in six minutes.
11. According to a Parent Response document entry dated September 2, 2025:
    a. 2024-25 gradebook screenshots showed unspecified units with no recorded tests, indicating the data used to decide on read-aloud removal was incomplete. An email thread dated March 19, 2026, indicated the Instructional Support Teacher said the work sample data was not differentiated between supported and independent work.
    b. 2024-25 reading assessments showed the Student fell behind in reading comprehension, dropping from the 47th percentile to the 26th percentile.

c. A 2025 Writing Example 1 showed minimal work despite class discussion, additional time, and partner comparison, as noted in a classroom work sample.
d. A 2025 Writing Example 2 showed more writing with more structured assignments, as noted in a classroom work sample.
e. A 2025 incomplete writing assignment indicated the Advocate expressed concern that incomplete assignments were due to writing deficits.

12. An email exchange, dated September 2 and 3, 2025, between the Parent and the Instructional Support Teacher discussed the Parent's frustration with the way questions were asked. The Instructional Support Teacher explained the curriculum used was selected by the LEA, and questions could be adjusted, but there were limits to what could be adjusted. It was also indicated the Teacher, after noticing the test scores, suggested moving the Student to a different location in the classroom. The Teacher advised the Parent they would try this, even though it was not listed in the Student's IEP. The email also informed the Parent of how the Student had adjusted to the start of the school year. The Teacher also advised the Parent that the Student did not do well on a math test, and they would be moved closer to the very small group they pulled out, to ensure the Student was going at a responsible pace and doing their best. It was also explained they used a conference room and the Student sat at the end of the table. It was also stated that their work throughout class time did not match their expectations for the test, and that pulling the Student close may help.
13. An email exchange between the Parent and Teacher 1, dated September 5, 2025, indicated Teacher 1 wanted the Parent to come to school and be shown how to access the Student's daily work. The Parent agreed.
14. An email exchange, dated September 26 to 29, 2025, between Teacher 1 and the Parent, discussed the Student's difficulty focusing, their eyes wandering off, and their brain not being locked in on what was in front of them.
15. A writing sample submitted by the Parent, dated September 12, 2025, indicated the Student wrote one sentence in 5 minutes.
16. In an email exchange between Teacher 1 and the Parent, dated September 28, 2025, the Parent stated the Student could not focus at home as well as at school. The Parent was not sure if the Student was having "staring spell seizures or not." The Parent indicated excitement could trigger the Student. The Parent shared that the Student struggled getting through assignments two years prior when the Student was "regressing with [Continuous Spike and Wave in Sleep] CSWS."
17. According to an IEP Contact Log, dated September 2, 2025, the Parent was emailed to provide an update on how the Student was doing and to note that the Student did not do well on their first math test. The Parent requested tests be sent home for the Parent to review.
18. A neuropsychological evaluation summary dated November 20, 2025, provided the following relevant information:

a. The Parent reported the Student enjoyed school and was doing well with their grades. The Parent also stated the Student had experienced a decline in their state-based testing results. The Parent stated the Student performed best when given a multiple-choice format rather than being asked to generate responses. The Parent further reported the Student had difficulty with word problems and with organizing their thoughts for writing assignments.
b. The Parent recalled the Student occasionally had difficulty keeping track of their schedule when something was out of the ordinary, and that their personal spaces were often messy. The Parent stated the Student's symptoms of impulsivity and hyperactivity were generally well controlled with medication.
c. The evaluation reported improvements in the Student's attention and concentration. Their performance fell within the average range. The purpose of the evaluation was for continued monitoring of cognitive effects related to their epilepsy and potential side effects of the Student's medication.
d. The report stated the Student's full-scale Intelligence Quotient (IQ) was 112, in the above-average range (79th percentile). There was significant variability across the five domain areas that complete the full-scale IQ. The Student's working memory was in the 16th percentile, while their fluid reasoning and visual-spatial domains were reported at the 88th and 82nd percentiles, respectively. The Student's poorer performance was likely attributed to mild symptoms related to ADHD.
e. The Student demonstrated age-appropriate skills across several cognitive domains, including expressive and receptive vocabulary, visual motor integration, and fine motor skills. The Student's academic skills across math computation, spelling, word reading, and sentence comprehension were all in the average range. With regard to executive functioning, the Student performed within the broad average range on tasks associated with attention, concentration, problem-solving, and following multi-step directions. The Parent's ratings fell in the "clinically significant" range for concerns related to self-monitoring and initiation.
f. The Student experienced challenges with broad memory skills, and there was a clinically significant difference in the Student's immediate recall of verbal and nonverbal information, with verbal recall being significantly better. This information indicated the Student had a more difficult time with information presented in a nonverbal manner. The contrast in verbal and nonverbal recall ability impacted the Student's learning and ability to demonstrate what they knew, and accommodations in this area were highly recommended. The evaluation stated, given the clinical significance of these findings, the Student met criteria for an Other Specified Neurodevelopmental Disorder due to Medical Condition, with a specific weakness in nonverbal memory skills.
g. Relevant recommendations were listed as follows:

i. Avoid timed tests and allow extra time on tests and assignments as needed.
ii. Allow the Student to take tests in a different testing environment as needed.
iii. Rules and instructions should be clear and brief, delivered via visual and verbal means.
iv. Helpful strategies included having the Student repeat instructions, allowing the Student to utter instructions to themselves, and rule prompts.
v. Establish eye contact with the Student prior to giving essential instructions. Keep new information brief and repeat it concisely.
vi. Give the Student prompts at the outset of the task, as well as when they are nearing completion of their work.
vii. Reduce copying aspects of work.
viii. Provide extra structure and intermittent deadlines for long-term assignments.
ix. Coach the Student through stages so they are not behind.
x. When planning the Student's schedule, consider the part of the day when they are most attentive and schedule more taxing activities or assignments during those periods.
xi. Help the Student organize and visually connect ideas.
xii. Encourage the Student to highlight keywords in the text.
xiii. Preorganize information for tasks.
xiv. Incorporate word banks and multiple-choice formats when assessing learning.
xv. Clarify and ensure the Student's understanding of the information presented.
xvi. Chunking information into sets or groups of details rather than as a single series.
xvii. Allow the Student to use technology when writing.
xviii. Provide assistance in creating an outline for the pre-writing activities.
xix. Assistance with brainstorming.
xx. Attempt writing assignments for smaller periods of time over longer periods.
xxi. Consider not penalizing the Student for spelling errors when spelled phonetically, when the error does not change the meaning of the sentence.

xxii. Develop a grading model that places greater emphasis on the organization of ideas and content, with less emphasis on grammar, punctuation, and spelling errors.

19. An email, dated December 4, 2025, between Teacher 1 and the Parent discussed the Student's difficulty remembering to turn things in at home and at school. Teacher 1 indicated they were having the Student show Teacher 1 their binder each morning when they sat down and at the end of the day as well.
20. A work sample dated December 8, 2025, indicated the Student wrote one sentence, with no time recorded.
21. Relevant information from a transcript of a February 24, 2026 meeting to review academic progress included:
    a. Teacher 1 explained that, according to testing, the Student had foundational and language arts skills at the fourth-grade level, writing at a fifth-grade level, and reading at a third-grade level. The Parent expressed concern the Student struggled with the questions, not reading.
    b. Teacher 1 said, "[The Student] is a strong reader … but when we're applying it and … analyzing what [the Student] [is] reading … that's where we still want to continue to give [them] some support."
    c. The Parent stated they had not seen many writing assignments, but believed there had to be writing components in almost all of the Student's classes.
22. An email exchange, dated February 27, 2026 through March 2, 2026, between the Parent and the Instructional Support Teacher, discussed the Student's difficulty with distraction, how the Student loved socializing, and the Student was easier to redirect than they were at the beginning of the school year. The Student also demonstrated improved work completion. The Instructional Teacher stated a need to maintain focus and watch for possible seizures, and they did not feel turning in assignments was a good goal, since the Student had been doing fairly well. The Parent asked what supports and/or accommodations were being considered or revised.
23. According to an IEP Contact Log, on February 27, 2026, the Parent asked to have sent home any supports or services the team had already decided on. The Case Manager replied they had not made any decisions but were beginning the process of collecting feedback for the IEP.
24. An email exchange between Teacher 1 and the Parent, dated March 2, 2026, Teacher 1 indicated they were reviewing the Student's educational records, evaluations, and recent performance data "to ensure the IEP accurately reflects [the Student's] needs and the level of support required for [them] to access instruction." Teacher 1 shared the Student was easily distracted some days.
25. 26. An email, dated March 12, 2026, between the Parent and the Special Education Teacher explained "some prompting" referred to days the Student was struggling, and they needed prompting to turn in work. It was further indicated the IEP goal defined mastery as 90% of the time, and the Student was averaging a 93% turn-in rate. Because the goal's criteria were not 100%, the Special Education Teacher concluded mastery was achieved. The Special Education Teacher explained they considered the prompts when analyzing the goal, and noted the Student needed more prompting at the beginning of the year. The current goal did not specifically track homework submissions. The Student was supported by adults in the classroom; the adults would report when the Student was having a rough day and share how much support the Student needed to complete a task. The Special Education Teacher stated they used all classroom assignments for their data collection, and they were working on writing a goal for the Student to help them remember to turn in homework in the morning, and an additional accommodation was also considered for the next IEP meeting.

26. The Parent also asked in their March 12, 2026 email how independence was defined when determining the goal was mastered, whether performance with an adult prompting was considered successful for independent performance, how the "turning in" component of the goal was measured, particularly for assignments that required delayed submission, what types of assignments were included in data collection and how frequently data was collected and recorded.
27. A Progress Report dated March 12, 2026, indicated the following progress toward the Student's IEP goals:
    a. Goal: The Student will generate and organize ideas to stay on topic in writing assignments, producing at least three ideas per assignment.
        i. Progress was measured by writing assignments/ samples.
        ii. Status code: "4-Slight regression."
        iii. Comments: "[The Student] was presented with a writing task and was able to generate/organize ideas to stay on topic producing at three ideas with some adult support scoring 82%."
    b. Goal: The Student will utilize pre-taught organizational skills to independently organize, complete, and turn in general education assignments 90% of the time.
        i. Progress was measured by classroom observations and assignments.
        ii. Status code: "8-Mastered."
        iii. Comments: "[The Student] was able to utilize strategies [they have] been taught and with some prompting from an adult to complete and turn in the work [they have] been assigned 93% of the time."
28. An email exchange between the Instructional Support Teacher and the Parent, dated March 12, 2026, indicated the Parent stated the recent progress report noted the Student had been able to utilize strategies with some adult prompting. The Parent requested clarification on the following:
    a. "How independence was defined when determining that the goal was mastered." The Instructional Support Teacher responded: Some adult prompting referred to "the random days [the Student] was struggling and needed to prompt [the Student] to turn in [their] work."

b. "Whether performance with adult prompting was considered successful independent performance." The Instructional Support Teacher responded: "I did consider the prompts needed in the overall analysis of this goal. Since most of the time [the Student] was turning them in on [their] own and [their] work was complete above the goals targeted percentage. I knew [the Student] meant the goal percentage part. Normally, I would have called an amendment meeting to change the goal." The Instructional Support Teacher stated they considered the Student's overall needs and knew they remembered the Student struggled to remember things.

c. "How the 'turning in' component of the goal was measured, particularly for assignments that required delayed submission (such as homework or corrections)." The Instructional Support Teacher responded: "The current goal does not clarify specifically tracking homework submission. I did not go over to see if [the Student] was turning in homework when [the Student] came into the building each morning." The Instructional Support Teacher indicated they used daily class assignments that were assigned for a grade, versus any missing assignments for that class.

d. "What types of assignments were included in the data collection." The Instructional Support Teacher responded: "All assignments that grades were taken for the class."

e. "How frequently data was collected and recorded." The Instructional Support Teacher responded: "I use [Teacher 1's] assigned work, so it varies based on what [Teacher 1] is doing week to week. There are no set data points each week." The Instructional Support Teacher indicated they used all the assigned work based on points each week.

29. According to a Report Card for the 2024-25 school year, quarter 4, the Student grades were:
    a. Reading - A
    b. Math - A
    c. Writing - A
    d. Social Studies - A
    e. Respect/Learner responsibility - ranged from meets to progressing.
30. A Report Card for the 2025-26 school year, third quarter, indicated the following grades for the Student:
    a. Reading - B+
    b. Mathematics - B+
    c. Social Studies - A-
    d. Science - A-
    e. Writing - B
    f. Respect/learner responsibility - M - Meets

31. A Reading Assessment Family Report for the 2025-26 school year for reading indicated:
    a. Fall 2025
        i. CBM reading English - some risk.
        ii. District reading assessment- some risk.
        iii. District reading assessment-- on track.
    b. Winter 2025
        i. CBMreading English - some risk.
        ii. District reading assessment - some risk.
        iii. District reading assessment - on track.
    c. A district reading fluency CBM Progress Monitoring document indicated that the Student averaged 114 words per minute (level of text unspecified).
    d. A Math Quiz Test Scores document indicated the Student took a test on August 29, 2025, scoring 55% independently. On March 25, 2026, the Student scored 5 out of 5 correct.
32. The Parent filed the Complaint on March 9, 2026.
33. An email exchange between the Parent and the Instructional Support Teacher dated March 13, 2026, indicated the Parent continued to have concerns about how independence "is being defined and measured related to the goal." The Parent shared that overall percentages appeared high, but there had been multiple documented instances in which both complete and incomplete work remained in the Student's binder.

Parent Interview

34. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Parent recalled during the IEP meeting "last year," the IEP Team told the Parent the Student did not need the read-aloud accommodation, and it was removed from the IEP.
    a. The Parent shared the Student failed a math test at the beginning of the current school year, which was when the Parent began communicating with the Case Manager.
    b. The Parent was told the Student was seated near other students who had a read-aloud accommodation so the Student could "hear the read-aloud."
    c. The Case Manager told the Parent they could try to paraphrase for the Student "to see if that helps." The Case Manager also "suggested" text-to-speech and stated the Student "still had" read-aloud.
    d. The Parent stated the Student was given read-aloud accommodations after it was removed from the IEP, indicating a continued need.
35. The Parent asserted the Student did not have writing supports across subjects, and did not have a specific writing service in their writing class to help with "generating ideas, brainstorming, and getting those ideas out." The Parent added the Student has never had writing support across subjects, and that they had brought it up "in the past," but it was dismissed. The Parent shared there was nothing in the Student's IEP to support open-ended tasks across subjects, reading comprehension, or helping the Student express ideas the Student gets from reading.

   a. The Parent noted the Student's reading scores from last year showed a "significant drop" in reading comprehension from the fall to the winter, and the scores had not "bounced back up."

36. The Parent explained their understanding of the writing accommodations for the Student, which included having access to a paraeducator in the classroom, and the option to go to "small group" for writing access.
37. The Parent shared the IEP indicated the Student needed check-ins and support or they would have difficulty completing tasks. The Student told the Parent they needed reminders to turn in work.
38. The Parent recalled the Student's progress was tracked using their final grade instead of "how much support [the Student] has on any given task, how [the Student] does on an assignment, or whether an assignment is turned in."
39. The Parent explained why the supplementary aids were removed at the April 3, 2025, IEP meeting. They noted the IEP Team removed the instructional time of the reading service because the Student "was reading fine." The Parent noted the Student's reading comprehension scores were "very low" and added the Student "should still be having service for the instructional for reading." The Parent was unable to recall what data was used to support that decision.
40. The Parent noted a work sample they provided from September [2025] showed the Student needed assistance on a math test "through each problem," and noted the significance was the Student could not "do the problem independently, that it had to be read aloud, it had to be reworded, and that [the Student] had to be guided through it." The Parent stated it was significant because the Student did not have that level of support listed on their IEP.
41. The Parent described another work sample that was created when the Student was in second grade. The Parent stated because it was a "less structured" writing assignment, the Student struggled to generate ideas and put them on paper. The Parent added the writing samples showed that when the Student was given an unstructured writing assignment, they produced minimal writing, and when it was structured, it did "appear to be better" writing. They added, even in the work sample with support, the first paragraph was one sentence long.
42. The Parent said the School Psychologist described "something else going on" with the Student's working memory, and that the Student "scored much higher when a question was read to [the Student] and [they] responded verbally." The Parent stated the School Psychologist's information confirmed the pediatrician's report, which indicated the Student performed better when they were read to and were able to respond verbally.
43. The Parent shared in an email regarding the Parent interview on April 12, 2026, the School Psychologist indicated the Student's Decoding Composite "shows [the Student] is a good reader. … is a fluent reader … [the Student's] word recognition fluency and decoding fluency are both average." The School Psychologist explained the Student's listening comprehension was better than the Student's reading comprehension. The Student's orthographic processing score showed the Student was not dyslexic, "so something else is going on with [the Student's] working memory." The Parent indicated the School Psychologist said the Student does better if they listen and respond verbally than if they read or write. The Parent shared the School Psychologist indicated despite writing good sentences, the Student did not write as many sentences as would be expected for a student their age.

44. An email dated April 12, 2026, indicated the Parent wanted to clarify interview responses regarding the IEP. The Parent stated, "The IEP does include general language related to check-ins during tasks. While this language is not limited to a specific subject, it does not function as direct or consistent support for open-ended responses across content areas." The Parent explained the check-ins were not defined in a way that ensured support throughout task completion or provided structured assistance for generating or organizing responses. According to the Parent, the IEP:
    a. Identified significant needs in both reading comprehension and written expression, but the services and supports were described in general terms, such as check-ins and assistance during tasks.
    b. Did not clearly define the instructional component, the specific skills being taught, or how the support was delivered.
    c. Identified reading comprehension as an area of need, but the supports focused primarily on access, such as text-to-speech, rather than clearly defining direct instruction in reading comprehension skills.
    d. The Student's difficulty understanding how questions are worded was not directly addressed because the focus was on access rather than ensuring comprehension through clarification or rewording.
    e. The Student did not consistently recognize when they were misunderstanding a question and did not know when they needed support to use text-to-speech.
    f. The Student required check-ins to ensure tasks were completed correctly, which suggested the Student was not independently identifying when they were confused.
    g. The Parent was concerned that the Student relying on text-to-speech without "built-in adult support for monitoring and clarification may not effectively address the Student's needs."
    h. Overall, the Parent was concerned the current IEP language did not clearly define how the Student's needs in comprehension, written expression, and task completion would "be addressed in practice across settings."

Teacher 1 Interview

45. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, Teacher 1 was joined by the Special Education Director and the Principal. Teacher 1 stated they were the Student's fourth-grade teacher.
46. Teacher 1 described the supports they had in place for the Student. They stated the Student was in their room for core instruction and throughout the day. The Student received read-alouds in math for any questions they had trouble with, and they received support with multi-step problems. The Student received pullout support when they needed a separate environment for testing. Supports were provided by Teacher 1 or a paraeducator in the classroom.
47. Teacher 1 noted the paraeducator provided additional support for the Student. In reading, the paraeducator helped the Student "whenever something's not making sense." They talked to the Student and gave them extra time in reading and writing activities. The paraeducator checked in on the Student to make sure they were where they needed to be. The Paraeducator ensured the Student knew where the reading support access was located, including where to find the computer-based read-aloud. Teacher 1 noted the Student often denied needing support and preferred to read on their own.
48. Teacher 1 shared that having the Student's schedule posted had been helpful. Additionally, the Student required multiple steps to be broken down and written on the board.

Instructional Support Teacher Interview

49. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Instructional Support Teacher was joined by the Special Education Director and the Principal.
50. The Instructional Support Teacher shared the Student's work samples were provided by Teacher 1. They stated the Student was in full inclusion in the general education classroom when they were completed. They shared the Student received the supports listed in their IEP for written expression, and had a paraeducator available when the work samples were completed. They noted the Student "did not always need everything that was listed on the IEP, but they were available."
    a. The Instructional Support Teacher clarified the Student completed the math work sample "completely independent."
    b. The Instructional Support Teacher recalled observing the Student completing an assignment in social studies class independently and added the Student pulled up the prompts like they were supposed to.
51. The Instructional Support Teacher noted Teacher 1 graded the Student's work and then sent it home to the Parent. The Instructional Support Teacher noted the Student needed prompting to turn in work. They added they checked once every week or two, randomly checked for missing assignments, and compared them with the total number of assignments to get the percentage.
52. The Instructional Support Teacher said the data they used was based on what Teacher 1 did in class because the Student had full inclusion. They added, in fourth grade, students were writing five paragraphs as a multi-step process. They indicated the reason there wasn't daily data was because the projects took longer.

Case Manager Written Response

53. In a written response to the Complaint Investigator, the Case Manager described the data collected toward the Student's written language goal, which included writing samples collected and reviewed over time, collaboration with Teacher 1, review of current grades, classroom-based assessments, district assessments, and daily classroom work. Additionally, the Case Manager used the Student's journal assignments to evaluate the Student's writing skills in a "natural classroom setting," and to document the Student's "writing behaviors, engagement, and application of skills during instruction."
54. The Case Manager recalled the IEP Team's decision to remove supplementary aids was based on a thorough review of classroom data, input from Teacher 1, and related services in coordination with the OT. The Data indicated the Student was not accessing the supplementary aids when they were offered in the classroom and was not advocating for the supports. Additionally, the materials log indicated the Student had not checked out any materials. The Case Manager used that information to determine the "removal of the supplementary aids was appropriate."
55. The Case Manager stated full paraprofessional coverage during ELA was not removed. Rather, it was reduced to "targeted support for work completion, as needed." They noted the adjustment was made after a review of data, including current grades, classroom-based assessments, district assessments, daily classroom work, and curriculum assessments. According to the data, the Student "continued to demonstrate academic growth, access to the general education curriculum, and progress toward [their] IEP goals."
56. The Case Manager explained the Student "often" declined paraprofessional support during ELA and chose not to go to the designated area in the classroom for support. Based on the Student's performance and their "observed independence," the determination was made during the April 8, 2025, IEP meeting to reduce coverage during ELA. The decision was discussed and analyzed by the IEP Team.

Teacher 2 Written Response

57. In a written response to the Complaint Investigator, Teacher 2 noted the Student had not been receiving modifications on their IEP prior to the April 8, 2025 IEP meeting. The stated modifications were not a part of the Student's IEP, and the Student did need accommodations and services, which were continued with the updated IEP.
58. Teacher 2 confirmed the IEP Team reviewed multiple sources of data to determine the Student's level of performance and needs, including current grades, classroom assessments, district assessments, and daily classroom work. Teacher 2 noted, based on the data, the IEP Team determined the Student could access the general education curriculum "effectively" and made "adequate" academic progress without the need for modifications.

59. Teacher 2 recalled the Student entered the third grade participating in the general education setting, with additional support as needed. They added, the Student's time outside the general education setting was limited to receiving related service minutes. The Student was "making academic growth" and was successfully accessing the general education curriculum.
60. Teacher 2 confirmed the IEP Team reviewed updated data and "determined a reduction in services was appropriate." They added the change was discussed with the Parent and consent was obtained prior to implementation.

Positions of the Parties, Applicable Regulations, and Conclusions

Issue One

Whether USD #265, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, developed an IEP that addressed the Student's need for access to written instructional material and assessments after a read-aloud accommodation was removed from the IEP in spring 2025. Further, whether the LEA provided the Student with IEP support for open-ended academic tasks across subject areas, and whether the IEP documented and addressed the Student's educational and functional performance with and without support. K.A.R. 91-40-16; 34 CFR § 300.323.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-16 and 34 CFR § 300.323, each LEA is responsible for organizing and holding meetings to create, review, and update the IEP for every exceptional child they serve. To ensure proper support, the LEA must have an IEP active before any special education services begin and at the start of every school year, with services typically starting within 10 school days of receiving parental consent. The LEA is also required to ensure that every teacher and service provider working with the child can easily access the IEP and clearly understands their specific roles in providing the necessary accommodations and supports.

The Parent alleged the LEA removed the Student's read-aloud accommodation without data and did not provide enough writing support across subjects. Further, the Parent alleged the LEA used inaccurate IEP data.

The LEA responded that it implemented the Student's IEP as written, ensuring all identified services and supports were delivered in alignment with the Student's needs. The LEA indicated evidence demonstrated the IEP was carried out with fidelity and supported by ongoing communication with the Parent, as well as the consistent use of data to guide instructional decisions and service delivery.

Additionally, the LEA responded that the Student was able to access the general education curriculum and make adequate progress toward IEP goals. The LEA noted that the data used in decision-making reflected the Student's independent performance and was appropriately used to inform instructional planning and support provision. Further, staff provided consistent opportunities for support and maintained communication with the Parent regarding the Student's progress and needs.

The April 8, 2025 IEP provided graphic organizers, templates, and special education support. For reading comprehension and open-ended tasks, the plan utilized contextualization, frequent check-ins, and alternative assessment formats. To manage ADHD and auditory processing weaknesses, the IEP mandated chunked instructions, visual schedules, and a 15-second processing delay. Additionally, task completion was ensured through staff checks, the use of marking utensils, and access to a quiet space for assessments.

The IEP documented that while the Student could independently write two legible sentences, they strayed from the topic 50% of the time without intervention; however, with the use of graphic organizers and templates, the Student successfully produced full paragraphs on grade level. In mathematics, the Student often performed calculations mentally and scored 55% on independent assessments, but achieved perfect scores when an adult guided them through word problems. Although the Student possessed high independent reading fluency, the documentation noted that comprehension of deeper-level questions required external contextualization to be successful. The IEP reflected that, without oversight, the Student's grades dropped because assignments remained unfinished in their binder, whereas adult check-ins and prompting increased the turn-in rate to 93%.

Following the April 8, 2025 IEP, the Student maintained consistent academic performance, earning grades of B to A- across all core subjects by the third quarter of the 2025-26 school year. In math, the Student showed measurable growth, improving from 55% on an independent quiz in August 2025 to a perfect score in March 2026, and achieved 100% fluency in multiplication and division. Reading fluency remained stable, with the Student averaging 114 words per minute, though fall and winter assessments continued to place the Student in the "some risk" category.

Regarding IEP goals, the Student mastered their organizational goal by turning in assignments 93% of the time, although the teacher noted this still required some adult prompting. In writing, the Student demonstrated the ability to complete independent samples. However, progress reports from the same period indicated a "slight regression" in the Student's specific goal to generate and organize ideas, and a November 2025 neuropsychological evaluation confirmed that while general academic skills were in the average range, the Student continued to struggle with self-monitoring and verbal recall.

While there is limited data documenting the Student's access to their accommodations as listed in their IEP, the Student's classroom grades and IEP progress reports indicate the Student was making progress toward their goals with the given supports. Although the Parent requested a specific accommodation, legal precedence does not require the Student be provided it if there is evidence the Student is able to make meaningful progress with alternative accommodations. (Board of Educ. v. Rowley, 458 U.S. 176 (1982)).

Based on the foregoing, according to the IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to develop an IEP that addressed the Student's need for access to written instructional material and assessments after a read-aloud accommodation was removed from the IEP in April 2025. It is not substantiated that the LEA failed to provide the Student with IEP support for open-ended academic tasks across subject areas, nor is it substantiated that the IEP failed to document and address the Student's educational and functional performance with and without support.

Issue Two

Whether USD #265, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, provided the Student with a FAPE when the LEA developed an IEP that did not include accurate or complete data about the Student's classroom performance and independent functioning. K.A.R. 91-40-2, K.A.R. 91-40-1(z); 34 CFR §§ 300.17, 300.101.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-2 and 34 CFR § 300.101, each LEA must provide a FAPE to students with disabilities and gifted students. A child is entitled to a FAPE even if they are passing their classes and moving from grade to grade. Whether a student who is advancing still qualifies as having a disability is decided on a case-by-case basis through evaluations. Every LEA must provide services based on the child's unique, individual needs rather than just their general category of disability.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-1(z) and 34 CFR § 300.17 a free appropriate public education, commonly known as a FAPE, refers to special education and related services that are designed to support students effectively. To meet this standard, the services must be provided at public expense and stay under public supervision and direction without any charge to the parents. Additionally, these services must meet the specific standards set by the state board and include an appropriate education at the preschool, elementary, or secondary school level. Finally, all services must be delivered in a way that aligns with the requirements of the student's IEP.

The Parent alleged the LEA used inaccurate and incomplete data, which resulted in an IEP that did not align with the Student's needs.

The LEA responded, it met its obligations under the IDEA. The LEA indicated the IEP was developed using current and accurate data, and services were reasonably calculated to enable the Student to make meaningful educational progress in light of individual circumstances. Supports were aligned with identified needs and implemented consistently to ensure access to instruction and participation in the general education environment. The signed PWNs and email exchanges between both the Parent and the LEA demonstrate the Parent consented to both actions and agreed with the actions.

The LEA met its obligation to provide a FAPE by developing and implementing an IEP that included SDI, related services, and accommodations specifically tailored to the Student's identified areas of need in reading, writing, and executive functioning. Documentation, including quarterly report cards and goal progress monitoring, confirmed the Student made meaningful educational progress, maintained grades of B or higher, and successfully mastered key organizational objectives. While the Parent expressed concerns regarding the granularity of the data used for decision-making, the evidence demonstrates that the IEP was reasonably calculated to enable the Student to progress in light of their unique circumstances. (Endrew F. v. Douglas County School District RE-1, 580 U.S. 386 (2017).

Based on the foregoing, according to the IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to provide a FAPE to the Student when the LEA developed an IEP.

Right to Appeal

Either party may appeal the findings or conclusions in this report by filing a written notice of appeal with the State Commissioner of Education, ATTN: Special Education and Title Services, Landon State Office Building, 900 SW Jackson Street, Suite 620, Topeka, KS 66612-1212. The notice of appeal may also be filed by email to formalcomplaints@ksde.gov The notice of appeal must be delivered within 10 calendar days from the date of this report.

For further description of the appeals process, see Kansas Administrative Regulations 91-40-51(f).

Upon receiving an appeal, an appeal committee of at least three department of education members shall be appointed by the commissioner to review the report and to consider the information provided by the local education agency, the complainant, or others. The appeal process, including any hearing conducted by the appeal committee, shall be completed within 15 days from the date of receipt of the notice of appeal, and a decision shall be rendered within five days after the appeal process is completed unless the appeal committee determines that exceptional circumstances exist with respect to the particular complaint. In this event, the decision shall be rendered as soon as possible by the appeal committee.

(2) If an appeal committee affirms a compliance report that requires corrective action by an agency, that agency shall initiate the required corrective action immediately. If, after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the agency shall be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following:

(A) The issuance of an accreditation deficiency advisement;
(B) the withholding of state or federal funds otherwise available to the agency;
(C) the award of monetary reimbursement to the complainant; or
(D) any combination of the actions specified in paragraph (f)(2)

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST
UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #512, SHAWNEE MISSION PUBLIC SCHOOLS
ON FEBRUARY 11, 2026

DATE OF REPORT: MARCH 24, 2026

This report is in response to a complaint filed with the Kansas State Department of Education against USD #512 (Shawnee Mission Public Schools) on behalf of Catholic private schools in the Archdiocese of Kansas City who enroll parentally-placed students with disabilities. The complaint is filed by Dr. Lorenzo Rizzi, Associate Superintendent - Student Services, at the Office of Catholic Schools for the Archdiocese of Kansas City. In the remainder of the report, Dr. Rizzi will be referred to as "the complainant." Of the Catholic private schools operated within the Shawnee Mission Public Schools district boundaries seven provided evidence in consideration of this investigation and will be referred to as follows:

- Holy Trinity Catholic School as "School A"
- Holy Cross Catholic School as "School B"
- Good Shepherd as "School C"
- Bishop Miege High School as "School D"
- John Paul II Catholic School as "School E"
- St. Joseph Catholic School as "School F"
- St. Ann Catholic School at "School G"

Finally, the parentally placed private students with disabilities at any of the Catholic private schools will be referred to as "the students." Evidence is provided referring to two specific students. They will be referred to as "student one" and "student two" in the evidence section, however the names of the students are not included.

The Archdiocese of Kansas City staff will be referred to as follows:

- Lorenzo Rizzi, Associate Superintendent - Student Services, at the Office of Catholic Schools for the Archdiocese of Kansas City
- Steve Perla, president, ADAC Advocacy Group
- Ariella Hellman, staff, ADAC Advocacy Group
- Kim Hammers, Director of Embrace
- Kristen Mcbride, Assistant Principal, Prince of Peace Catholic School

When a special education complaint is filed against a school district that is a member of a special education cooperative or interlocal, or that uses any other state recognized public agency to serve children with disabilities, the term" local education agency (LEA)" in this report will include the school district, the special education cooperative or interlocal, and any other agency that is recognized by the state as an administrative agency for public elementary or secondary schools and is serving the educational needs of this student." In this case, USD #512 own staff serve students with disabilities and is the responsible public agency.

- Sherry Dumolien, Associate Superintendent of Special Education and Strategic Initiatives
- Rebecca Schnoebelen, Facilitator of Federal Programs
- Allison Staroski, Budget Manager
- Emily Demo, Coordinator of Special Education

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) allows for a 30-day timeline to investigate a complaint from the date in which it was filed. A complaint is considered filed on the date in which it was received by KSDE. In this case, the KSDE initially received the complaint on February 11, 2026. The investigator requested and was granted an extension due to working with staff from both the LEA and Office of Catholic Schools for the Archdiocese of Kansas City and spring break.

Evidence Reviewed

During the investigation, the Complaint Investigators, Donna Wickham, and Nancy Thomas reviewed all evidence and documentation provided by the LEA and the complainant received by March 24, 2026.

On March 9, and March 25, 2026, the investigators interviewed the Associate Superintendent of Special Education and Strategic Initiatives.

On March 11, 2026, the investigators interviewed the Associate Superintendent - Student Services, at the Office of Catholic Schools for the Archdiocese of Kansas City, the President and a staff from the ADAC Advocacy, the Assistant Principal, of a Catholic private school and located outside the LEA and the Director of Embrace. Principals and/or staff with special education responsibilities for five Catholic private schools (Schools A-E) provided information via email responses.

The investigators additionally contacted staff from both the Archdiocese of Kansas City and LEA staff by phone and email numerous times to clarify issues and request further evidence throughout the investigation.

Documentation provided that predated the twelve months prior to the filing of this complaint was allowed for consideration because of the systemic nature of the allegations. While all documentation was reviewed, the following materials were used as the basis of the findings and conclusions of the investigation:

Documents considered during the investigation:

- LEA Response, dated February 27, 2026
- Non-public/Private School Meeting PowerPoint, dated August 28, 2025 and sign in sheet
- Copy of Summary Notes of LEA meeting dated September 26, 2025
- Appendix D of the complaint, excel spreadsheet prepared by the LEA sharing IDEA proportionate share expense budgets from school years 2023-24, 2024-25, 2025-26
- Appendix E of the complaint, Chart depicts Number of students in 2023-24; 2024-25, 2025-26 school year prepared by the complainant
- Kansas Grant Reporting System Module: Private School Participation
- KSDE submission for the LEA Private School Participation Submission for 2025 - 2026: Consultation with Private School Representatives and Representatives of Parentally-placed Private School Children and Raw data provided by LEA to support the child count
- Documentation for Student One including PWN to conduct special education evaluation dated November 1, 2024; Evaluation Report and PWN for Evaluation Report, IEP and PWN for IEP dated February 7, 2025; PWN dated October 20, 2025; IEP amendment dated October 30, 2025; PWN dated November 10, 2025; IEP dated January 8, 2026
- Documentation for Student Two including Evaluation Report and PWN for Evaluation Report, IEP and PWN for IEP dated March 4, 2025; PWN dated October 20, 2025; IEP amendment dated October 30, 2025; PWN dated November 14, 2025; IEP dated December 12, 2025
- Responses to survey emailed from Schools A, B, C, and D to investigations regarding Components One through Six

- Email from budget manager to Associate Superintendent of Special Education and Strategic Initiatives dated March 23, 2026 at 4:12 p.m.

Background Information

This systemic complaint is focused on the LEA's Consultation model, services for nonresident students with disabilities, evaluation procedures, child count, proportionate share calculation and use of proportionate share funds on behalf of the Catholic private schools located within the LEA boundaries. The LEA's procedures and collaborations with these private schools are being investigated in relation to adherence to IDEA and Kansas regulations and the LEA's stated procedures and practices.

Issue Investigated

Did the LEA follow state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) for children parentally-placed at the Catholic private schools by their parents specific to providing special education services to nonresident students, reporting accurate child count data and calculating proportionate share funds following child find activities, planning and conducting the consultation meeting, providing onsite services to resident students with disabilities, and responding to requests for special education evaluation?

Although this systemic complaint investigates only one issue, there are six component parts of this issue that will be reported separately; 1) Was the LEA's Consultation timely and meaningful? 2) Were the proportionate share funds incorrectly spent on staff time for child find activities, gifted education and administrative costs? 3) Are nonresident students with disabilities who are parentally enrolled in Catholic private schools denied special education services in the LEA? 4) Did the LEA refuse to provide onsite services to resident students with disabilities who are parentally-placed in the Catholic private schools? 5) Did the LEA conduct a proper child count with respect to students enrolled in the Catholic private schools resulting in errors in the proportionate share calculation? 6) Did the LEA require RTI before conducting a special education evaluation for students with a suspected disability enrolled in the Catholic private schools?

Component One

Was the LEA's Consultation timely and meaningful?

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.134 and state regulations at K.A.R. 91-40-42a provide guidance to ensure timely and meaningful consultation and require responsible public agencies to consult with private school representatives and representatives of parents of parentally-placed private school children with disabilities during the design and development of special education and related services for the children regarding the following:

a) a child find process that includes how parentally-placed private school children suspected of having a disability can participate equitably and how parents, teachers, and private school officials will be informed of the process;
b) the determination of the proportionate share of Federal funds available to serve parentally-placed private school children with disabilities including how the proportionate share of those funds was calculated;
c) how the consultation process will operate throughout the school year to ensure that parentally-placed children with disabilities identified through the child find process can meaningfully participate in special education and related services;
d) how, where, and by whom special education and related services will be provided for parentally-placed private school children with disabilities. This will include the types of services, how special education and related services will be apportioned if funds are insufficient to serve all parentally-placed private school children, including how and when those decisions will be made: and
e) a written explanation of the reasons why the responsible public agency chose not to provide services as recommended if the responsible public agency disagrees with the views of the private school officials.

Under 34 C.F.R. §300.135 and K.A.R. 91-40-42b when timely and meaningful consultation has occurred, the responsible public agency must obtain a written affirmation signed by the representatives of participating private schools. If the representatives do not provide the affirmation within a reasonable period of time, the responsible public agency must forward the documentation of the consultation process to the state education authority (SEA). KAR. 91-40-42b defines a reasonable period of time as 30 days of the date the affirmation was requested.

Complainant Position

The complainant alleges in their systemic complaint that the LEA had predetermined that the proportionate share funding would be allocated to salaries for the staff providing the services to resident students with disabilities at the August 28, 2025 Consultation meeting. They assert that this predetermination is confirmed by an April 18, 2024 email from the LEA's general counsel stating that, "[LEA] has already determined and allotted all of its federal proportionate share of dollars to resident children attending a private/parochial school located in the [LEA], and so [LEA] has no obligation to and does not provide any services to Missouri students attending a private/parochial school located in the district' (Appendix A of the complaint)

The complainant alleged that by the time consultation occurred, the LEA had already committed all proportionate share funds to resident students and categorically excluded nonresident students from consideration. As a result, there was no opportunity for meaningful dialogue regarding the services that could be offered to nonresident students in violation of the federal regulations requiring the LEA to jointly discuss the use of proportionate share funds, the services to be provided, and the students to be serviced. The principals of the Catholic private schools stated their input was not solicited and they would like more input into the program design, especially related to where services are provided. When asked to consider the needs of nonresident students, the LEA refused to do so and did not provide a written explanation as required by 34 C.F.R. §300.134(e).

Finally, during the consultation meeting the LEA did not share the child count or the basis for the proportionate share budget or cost for services to allow for meaningful dialogue on how to best use the limited funding available to meet the needs of the group of eligible students. As a result the private school leaders did not sign the affirmation of consultation forms following the 2025 consultation meeting.

Local Education Agency Position

The Local Education Agency responded that an annual consultation meeting was held and all necessary participants and required components as required by the IDEA and Kansas regulations were included. Following the annual meeting an individual meeting with the complainant was held to listen to and discuss the raised concerns. Further, the LEA has 25 private and parochial school partners and only the complainant has raised concerns about the private school participant's role.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

1. The LEA staff stated that the special education and Title programs consultation meeting was announced via email on July 17, 2025 to the complainant and all of the Catholic private schools. For school officials that cannot attend they may receive a recorded copy of the meeting and request follow-up with a special education coordinator. The investigators requested a copy of the audio recording, but the archived timeline had expired and was unavailable to the investigators.
2. The LEA's practice is to combine the consultation meeting for special education with the consultation meeting for the Title programs. The complainant and principals stated that at the August consultation meeting decisions about services were presented for the upcoming school year. The complainant and principals reported the special education consultation occurs first in the meeting and, since they do not have input into how the special education proportionate share funds are spent, most of the meeting time is devoted to the Title programs where the private schools are able to decide how to spend those proportionate share funds.

3. The August 28, 2025 special education Consultation was addressed through six slides. Slide one stated that Federal law requires that children with disabilities in private schools (K-12) be provided an opportunity for participation in special education services, but that the child with a disability in a private school has no individual right to special education or related services at the private school (District picks location) and that the public school district where the private school is located must ensure that a proportionate share of federal funding is used to provide services to this population of children. Slide two listed each of the private schools located in the LEA and the public school partnered for disability and gifted services. Slide three described the legal requirements of the special education consultation, stating "The private school proportionate share of Title Vl-8 funds is calculated by KSDE. In [LEA], we dedicate all of these funds to pay staff salaries and benefits. As a result, we will exceed the required spending. We could add additional expenses, such as materials expended and cost of transportation." Slide four presented the required and actual amounts spend during 2023-24, 2024-25 and the required amount for 2025-26. As stated by the complainant the child count and resulting proportionate share calculations were not provided. Slide five listed required child find process aspects to collect during consultation. The slide stated that participant views are requested. Slide six was a screenshot of the General Education Intervention (GEI) summary.
4. The Associate Superintendent of Special Education and Strategic Initiatives explained to the investigator that an error was made at the August 28, 2025 consultation in not explaining how the proportionate share was calculated for all private schools. It was shared with the investigator that the excel spreadsheet provided in a meeting with the complainant (Appendix D of the complaint) served that purpose.
5. Appendix D of the complaint provide the IDEA proportionate share allocation for all private schools budget for three school years as follow $161,030 (2023-24); $163,207 (2024-25); $163,290 (2025-26). The number of private school students determined to be a student with a disability during the preceding school year are also listed for each of the three school years.
6. Following a request from the complainant to meet and discuss concerns and work "first-hand the challenges" the LEA and complainant agreed and they met September 26, 2026 following the August Consultation meeting to address questions and concerns they had. Meeting minutes document the purpose was to discuss "o*ngoing challenges and explore possible solutions regarding the provision of special education services to student attending Catholic schools located in the [LEA] boundaries.*" An action item from the meeting was for the Catholic private schools to gather and provide information on the most common related services needed by students attending their schools to understand and determine ways to better provide support.
7. A second Nonpublic Spring Consultation Meeting is planned for April 28, 2026. The meeting invite was sent out March 11, 2026 by the Facilitator of Federal Programs. The meeting description states it will occur in-person and be informational and focused on Title Grants programs for both current and newly participating schools.

8. The complainant stated this is the first time in memory a second meeting has been held during the same school year. The Associate Superintendent of Special Education and Strategic Initiatives explained this meeting is partly in response to meeting with the complainant in September 2025 to increase involvement of the private schools in the decision making process. Following the April 28, 2026 meeting smaller group meetings are planned for private school staff to gather input and have discussions about 2026-27 school year with the goal of improving the meaningfulness of the consultation.
9. The LEA staff and principals stated that the Catholic private school staff are directed to their public school partner and/or special education coordinators as the "in-district specialist" to answer questions they might have as the consultation meetings are more focused on information dissemination since the meeting covers all federal programs and services available to private schools.
10. The principals state that the child find process has evolved over time in partnership with their partner public schools, rather than through the formal consultation meeting. The five principals contacted wrote that they educate their staff and parents about the child find process based on what they glean from their interactions with the partner public school staff.
11. The LEA has a central coordinating person for requesting evaluations who then funnels the request to the building coordinator to follow through. The five principals/staff providing email responses named a staff person located in the partner public school as the person they would go to for answers to questions.
12. In a clarification conversation with the investigators, SETS staff at KSDE indicated that the consultation with private school representatives was an ongoing process that included not only the consultation meetings usually held at the beginning of each school year or each spring but also through ongoing conversations held between the private school provide all students who are eligible for special education and related services with equitable services through an IEP regardless of whether they reside in the LEA or in another school district outside of the LEA boundaries
13. The LEA staff reported that they first spend the proportionate share funds to provide the required IEP services and then use state and local funds when the proportionate share funds are fully expended to continue to pay for the required IEP services. It was reported that these funds are typically fully expended during October.
14. The LEA staff stated in their interview with the investigators that they provide all Kansas students who are eligible for special education and related services with equitable services through an IEP regardless of whether they reside in the LEA or in another school district outside of the LEA boundaries. The LEA staff reported that they first spend the proportionate share funds to provide the required IEP services and then use state and local funds when the proportionate share funds are fully expended to continue to pay for the required IEP services. The associate superintendent of special education and strategic initiatives stated that this approach results in the funds being fully spent by October and there are minimal funds remaining for the out of state students who do not have IEPs in the LEA

15. An email from the complainant to the Facilitator of Federal Programs dated September 3, 2025 stated,"I just wanted to let you know that I recommended that our schools do not sign the IDEA/SpEd form until we get clarification from KSDE on how public schools should approach providing services in our schools without a consultation on an individual basis. It is still each school's decision if they want to sign it. The five principals the investigators queried stated that they were instructed to not sign the written affirmation of timely and meaningful consultation until the LEA engaged in discussion about the services and proportionate share funding uses."
16. None of the Catholic private school principals attending the consultation signed the written affirmation leading the LEA to provide the attendance sheet and consultation PowerPoint to the KSDE for the 2025-2026 school year.

Conclusion

The IDEA is very clear that representatives of private schools are to be consulted during the design and development of the special education and related services which are to be provided to students with disabilities who are voluntarily enrolled in private schools by their parents. The responsible public agency is to obtain written affirmation from the private school representatives that this timely and meaningful consultation has occurred. It is important to note that the consultation may take the form of an annual meeting or multiple meetings during a school year. Regardless of how the consultation occurs, the IDEA requires that the consultation must address five specific topics.

In this case, USD #512 held one consultation meeting during the 2025-26 school year on August 28, 2025 and the principals from all Catholic private schools attended the meeting. The LEA reported that the written affirmations were not signed by the attendees within 30 calendar days following the August 28, 2025 meeting.

The LEA invited the Catholic private school principals to a second in-person meeting April 18, 2026. The stated intent of the second meeting is to be responsive to the Catholic private schools request for more input about services and use of the proportionate share.

As stated previously, the IDEA requires specific topics be addressed during the special education consultation. The first requirement is to explain the child find process for students attending private schools within USD #512's boundaries. In this case, there is evidence to show that the LEA has a procedure and designated staff for receiving referrals from private schools and that the private school principals are aware of how to make referrals for a special education evaluation for students suspected of having a disability and in need of special education services. While some concerns and varying experiences were found in the practices during the referral process, the LEA is in compliance with federal and state regulations regarding having a child find procedure .. and ensuring the private school representatives ::ir~ aware of that procedure.

The second requirement is to share the amount of proportionate share funds that are available to be spent and how those funds are calculated. In this case there is evidence to support a finding that the LEA did share the amount of proportionate share funds available with the private school representatives. The Associate Superintendent of Special Education and Strategic Initiatives admitted that the LEA did not explain how those funds were calculated based on the private school child count but later remedied that by providing a document that explained it, and therefore, USD #512 is found in compliance.

The third requirement is to have a procedure in place for working with private schools when students are identified as having a disability during the current school year and how those students can access equitable special education and related services. In this case, there is evidence to support a finding that the LEA does have a procedure in place for providing services to private school students who are found eligible for special education and related services. Again, while there are concerns and varying experiences with practices of providing services which will be addressed later in this report, the LEA is in compliance regarding having a procedure in place.

The fourth requirement is to explain the types of services available to private school students with disabilities using proportionate share funds and what will happen to those services when the proportionate share funds are fully expended. In this case, the LEA reported that for Kansas students an IEP is written and free appropriate public education (FAPE) to eligible private school students with disabilities, regardless of where the student resides in Kansas. The LEA stated that proportionate share funds are spent first when funding special education and related services to Kansas students with disabilities in private schools and typically are fully spent during October and proportionate share funds are spent on out-of-state students eligible for special education as funds are available. When these funds are fully spent, USD #512 uses state and local funds to continue to provide FAPE to the Kansas students.

Again, USD #512 is in compliance regarding the requirement to have a plan for the types equitable services available to private school students with disabilities and how to proceed when proportionate share funds are fully expended.

The fifth requirement is to provide a written explanation why the LEA chooses not to provide services as recommended by the private schools. In this case, the complainant and principals made child specific, logistic and LEA practice requests. In all cases it was found that the LEA responded to the complainant, providing an explanation. For the fifth requirement, USD #512 is found in compliance.

Based on the foregoing, USD #512 is found in compliance for providing consultation that was timely and meaningful. The associate superintendent of special education and strategic initiates acknowledged that errors were made but amended and corrected during the same school year. Additionally, the LEA is changing practices to provide more opportunities to listen to and gather input for services provision and use of the proportionate share funds during the current school year. Therefore, no corrective action is ordered.

Component Two

Were the proportionate share funds incorrectly spent on staff time for child find activities, gifted education and administrative costs?

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at C.F.R. §300.131 (d) and Kansas regulations at 91-40-48 state that an agency may use state and federal funds to make personnel available at locations other than at its facilities to the extent necessary to provide special education and related services to exceptional children enrolled in private schools, if those services are not normally provided by the private schools the cost of carrying out the child find requirements, including individual evaluations, may not be considered in determining if an LEA has met its child find obligation for parentally-placed private school children with disabilities.

As stated in 34 C.F.R. § 300.133(a), each LEA is required to spend a proportionate share of IDEA Part B funds on providing special education and related services to children with disabilities who are enrolled by their parents in private, including religious, elementary schools and secondary schools in order for the LEA to meet its responsibility for providing equitable services. According to Question 0-1 (page 48) in Office of Special Education and Rehabilitative Services Office of Special Education Programs, Questions and Answers on Serving Children with Disabilities Placed by their Parents in Private Schools Guidance Document, Revised February 2022 an LEA may not use these funds on administrative costs.

34 C.F.R. § 300.8 lists thirteen defined disabilities categories and does not include gifted education. "Giftedness" is not included as a qualifying category under IDEA However, K.S.A 72-3429 requires every exceptional child, including gifted to have an IEP which specifies services, goals and supports.

Complainant Position

The complaint stated that the LEA claims to have spent more than the proportionate share for the past few years. For example, at the August 28, 2025 consultation meeting it was presented that the LEA was required to spend $163,585 for proportionate share, and they actually spend $287,754 on staff time. Given the large amount of funds for staff time and the proportionate share calculation not being provided at the August 28, 2025 consultation meeting the complainant stated a concern that these funds may include staff time for child find activities and administrative costs that are disallowed by IDEA On December 8, 2025 when the complainant requested additional information the LEA provided cost figures in January 2026 that showed that the LEA spent staff time for "GFTSPED" which the complainant interpreted as gifted services. To the extent that this expenditure reflects gifted education the complainant asserts that gifted services may not be counted toward satisfaction of the IDEA proportionate share obligation, leading the complainant to believe that funds may have been comingled with other federal and local funds.

Local Education Agency Position

As explained in Component One, the LEA's equitable services approach is to provide IEP based services for all Kansas students enrolled at private schools and proportionate share funds for out-of-state students special education services. As such the LEA expends all of its proportionate share funds and then uses general funds for all of the IEP services for Kansas eligible parentally-placed students after that. The document prepared by the LEA was meant to show the complainant all of the resources being provided to the Catholic private schools above and beyond the proportionate share fund expenditures. The presented expenses were not meant to be construed as spendings solely from the proportionate share funds.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The findings of Component One are incorporated herein by reference.

1. None of the five principals at the schools surveyed or complainant had any specific knowledge or familiarity related to the use of the proportionate share funds being used for staff conducting child find activities, administrative costs, or gifted education.
2. The LEA provides all Kansas students who are eligible for special education and related services with equitable services through an IEP regardless of whether they are reside in the LEA The LEA staff reported that they first spend the proportionate share funds to provide the required IEP services and then use state and local funds when the proportionate share funds are fully expended to continue to pay for the required IEP services. The remaining proportionate share funds provide limited services to out-of-state eligible students enrolled in a Catholic private school.
3. In response to a December 8, 2025 request from the complainant to extract specific information regarding the proportionate share specifically for the Catholic private schools the LEA shared detailed information about how LEA funds are expended for private school students. The LEA staff stated that it detailed how the funds were expended for private school students with disabilities and exceptionalities. The information was meant to show the complainant that the LEA equitable services provided to the private schools exceed what they are required to by federal and state regulation to spend and therefore did not separate where the service was billed, but believe in retrospect that it was not understood, leading the complainant to believe that the proportionate share funds were not properly spent. The LEA response stated, "While there is an allegation about the district counting gifted services as part of their proportionate share, the district intended to share the amount they expend beyond their identified proportionate share. The district is aware that Gifted services are an unfunded required service per KS regulations; the district does not take into account gifted services when calculating proportionate share."

4. The budget manager from the LEA responded to the investigator on March 23, 2026 at 4:12 p.m. replied that the proportional share is allocated solely to cover the salaries of certified staff who deliver required services to the students in private and parochial schools.

Conclusion

The IDEA is clear about how proportionate share funds may be and may not be spent. Those identified in the complaint are not allowed as described IDEA regulation and/or clarified in the revised February 2022 OSEP Q & A document. Confusion about whether the proportionate share funds were used for these activities likely resulted for two reasons. First, as found in Component One, no explanation was provided at the August 2025 consultation meeting as to how those funds were calculated based on the private school child count (proportionate share). Second, the model for providing equitable services in the LEA is to provide IEPs for all Kansas students and limited services for eligible out-of-state students, thereby using all of the proportionate share funds and then tapping into state and local funds. Given this model the LEA did not make a visible distinction when presenting whether the funds expended constituted proportionate share funds or those from the general fund since they are both used in meeting the LEA's equitable service model.

Based on the foregoing, U*SD #512 is found in compliance* and did not incorrectly spend its proportionate share funds on staff time for child find activities, gifted education and administrative costs. Therefore, corrective action is not ordered.

Component Three

Are nonresident students with disabilities who are parentally placed in Catholic private schools denied special education services in the LEA?

Applicable Law

Under federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.13, an elementary school means a nonprofit institutional day or residential school, including a public elementary charter school, that provides elementary education, as determined under State law. The Kansas state law definition of a private elementary school does not include the education of children prior to kindergarten. As such, children with disabilities enrolled in private preschools are not eligible to receive proportionate share services; instead, these children would receive services from their district of residence through the early childhood special education program for children age three through children age five who are not age-eligible to attend kindergarten.

The Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.132(a) and Kansas regulations at 91-40-43 require that each public agency provide special education and related services to parentally-placed private school children with a disability in grades kindergarten through grade 1 2.

Both the federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.131 and Kansas regulations at 91-40-43 require the school district where the private school is located to conduct child find activities to ensure students suspected of having a disability and in need of special education and related services are evaluated to determine eligibility. The cost of child find activities cannot be funded by the school district's proportionate share funds.

Both federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.132(c) and Kansas regulations at 91-40-43 require school districts to annually report the number of students enrolled in private schools who were evaluated; the total number of students attending a private school within the school district's boundaries who have been found eligible for a disability under the IDEA; and the total number of students with disabilities who are receiving special education and related services.

While some of the requirements are the same, there are significant differences between the federal law and the state law for how services are provided to these students.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.132(b) require school districts to develop an individual service plan (ISP) for each student with a disability enrolled in a private school within the boundaries of that school district so long as the necessary services are available under the district's equitable services plan developed through consultation with representatives of the private schools and paid for by the district's federal proportionate share funds.

Under federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.137(a), parentally-placed private school students do not have an individual right to receive some or all the special education and related services that the student would receive if enrolled in a public school.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.137(b) allow the school district to make the final decision with respect to the services provided to parentally-placed private school children with disabilities following the consultation with private school representatives.

If a student with a disability is enrolled by their parents in a private school within the school district's boundaries, federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.137(c)(1) require that school district to initiate and conduct meetings to develop, review, and revise the student's ISP.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.139 specify that the services provided to parentally-placed private school children with disabilities may be delivered on the premises of private schools, in a designated school district building, or at a neutral site. The school district, in consultations with private school representatives, determines where special education and related services are provided. In addition, the school district must provide any necessary transportation so private school students with disabilities are able to access the equitable services described in the ISP. However, the school district is not required to provide transportation outside of the school district boundaries.

All Kansas school districts are required to follow both the federal regulations as well as the Kansas regulations. The key difference between the regulations is how equitable services are provided to parentally-placed students with disabilities enrolled in private schools. The Kansas regulations differentiate between the equitable services which must be made available to parentally-placed private school students with disabilities who are residents of the school district where the private school is located as compared to the equitable services which must be made available to nonresident students with disabilities who are parentally-placed in a private school located within the school district boundaries. In addition, Kansas regulations further specify that the school districts must provide equitable services to gifted children who are residents of the school district and are enrolled in a private school within the school district's boundaries.

Complainant Position

The complainant alleged that nonresident students with disabilities who are parentally enrolled in the Catholic private schools in the LEA are denied special education services because the LEA has adopted a blanket policy excluding nonresident private school students from equitable services. The complainant described an incident in which the LEA informed a Missouri parent that they would need to seek services from the resident public school district. This precluded any consideration of that nonresident student from consideration for equitable services.

Local Education Agency Position

The LEA responded that according to the IDEA, parentally-placed students with disabilities do not have an individual entitlement to receive special education and related services from the LEA in which the private school is located, but they may receive equitable services funded through the IDEA proportionate share. Further, the LEA where the private school is located determines the equitable services offered. Kansas regulations address only Kansas students and provide that Kansas students parentally-placed in a private school located in a different LEA than one in which the child resides may receive individual special education and related services and FAPE from the district of residence or receive equitable services funded through the IDEA proportionate share. During an interview with the LEA staff it was further explained that in meeting the IDEA and Kansas regulations the LEA's practice is to provide services, outlined in student IEPs to all Kansas students enrolled in any Catholic private school located in the LEA boundaries. For students who reside out-of-state the equitable services are fairly limited and funded through the IDEA proportionate share. While the LEA relies of the proportionate share funds for out-of-state and Kansas students who do not reside within LEA boundaries the LEA continues to use state and local funds for the Kansas students, but do not continue services for out-of-state eligible students.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The findings of Components One and Two are incorporated herein by reference.

1. The complainant defined to the investigators that nonresident students with disabilities are those students with disabilities that reside in Kansas but not in the boundaries of the LEA and students that live out of state (specifically Missouri students).
2. The LEA, complainant and principals reported that the LEA does not use individual service plans for any of the Catholic private schools to provide equitable services to students who do not reside withing the LEA district boundaries.
3. The Associate Superintendent of Special Education and Strategic Initiatives described Equitable services in the LEA for Kansas student residing outside the LEA boundaries are provided guided by an IEP and paid for by proportionate share funds and then local and state funds.
4. The Associate Superintendent of Special Education and Strategic Initiatives stated that when a child with a suspected disability residing out of state is identified through the LEA's child find the parent is told that the either the LEA or the district in which the child resides may conduct the evaluation. The reason to offer this choice is that ultimately an out of state student must seek IEP and FAPE protections at the district of residence and equitable services are fairly limited since the majority of the funds are reserved for Kansas students with disabilities. Due to this, it is often more expedient for the home LEA to conduct the evaluation, write the IEP if found eligible, provide the services than for the LEA to conduct the evaluation, determine eligibility, write the IEP and then provide the IEP to the home LEA to implement.
5. The Associate Superintendent of Special Education and Strategic Initiatives stated that when a Kansas child with a suspected disability residing in an LEA other than the LEA boundaries is identified through the LEA's child find the parent is told that the either the LEA or the district in which the child resides may conduct the evaluation, and if found eligible and write the IEP and provide those services. The reason to offer this choice is that the parents may choose to receive services at the student's home school. Although transportation is not typically provided, it may be a student/parent preference for high school students or those who have a strong home community preference. In the case of a Kansas student attending school in the LEA and attending a Catholic private school in another the LEA will provide the evaluation and provide services at a partner public school with transportation as is done for resident students.
6. The principal described services at School A as determined individually based on the identified goals and transportation is provided to a partner public school for students who reside within the district, but parents provide transportation for students who reside in other districts. The principal stated two parents discontinued IEPs due to the logistics of parents needing to organizing their transportation.
7. The principal at School B reported that student services are provided at partner public schools based on student's level of need. An IEP of a third grader eligible for special education under the category of autism (student one) receives both direct and indirect services. The student receives transportation services to and from the partner public school as written in the IEP. This student resides in a different district. A fifth grader with learning disability as the special education eligibility category lives in another LEA but attends School B (student two). This student receives direct services. The student receives transportation services to and from the partner public school as written in the IEP.

8. The principal at School C confirmed that students residing outside the LEA boundaries were being served through IEPs and receiving services in the district of residence with parents privately transporting. The distinction provided was that students who live in the LEA were bused to a local public school to receive their special education and related services.
9. The principal at School D reported they have nine Kansas students with IEPs, with four of the students residing outside the LEA's boundaries. They report that for those students their IEPs are "held" within those districts and services are met through in house support plans. In some cases the students were moved to "indirect services" to allow the student to remain at School D without missing school time due to transportation to a partner public school. IEP progress monitoring is done through email communication for collecting data, work samples, teacher feedback and transition documents.

Conclusion

Equitable services are special education and related services, including direct services, provided to parentally-placed private school children with disabilities in accordance with the provisions of IDEA and its implementing regulations in 34 C.F.R. §§ 300.130 through 300.144. Under the IDEA, LEAs have an obligation to provide parentally-placed private school children with disabilities an opportunity to participate in the services funded with IDEA Part B funds. The LEA must make available services to those parentally-placed private school children with disabilities that have been designated to receive equitable services. The amount of IDEA Part B funds is based on the proportionate share calculation. No parentally-placed private school child with a disability has an individual right to receive some or all of the special education and related services that the child would receive if enrolled in a public school. 34 C.F.R. § 300.137(a). If a child with a disability who is enrolled in a private school by the child's parents is designated to receive equitable services from an LEA, the LEA must develop, review, and revise a services plan that describes the specific special education and related services that will be provided to the child. See 34 C.F.R. § 300.138(b).

According to the Kansas Special Education Process Handbook, "The district where the private school is located is not obligated to provide any services to a nonresident child with a disability once it has expended the required proportionate share of funds. The parent of the nonresident child would have to go to the district of residence to request services. The district of residence can offer services in the resident district, but if the parent refuses, the resident school has met its obligation to make FAPE available."

In this case, the LEA provided equitable services to all Kansas-eligible students special education and related services through an IEP. They allocate their proportionate share funds first to pay for these services and then use state and local funds to continue paying for the student's services during the school year. The two IEPs examined showed two students enrolled at School B that live in a different LEA but receive IEP services at a LEA partner public school as an example. Principal reported some variation and dependence on parent transportation. The LEA reported it did not use its proportionate share funds for transportation, only staff salaries.

In the case of equitable services to students living in another state enrolled at one of the Catholic private schools the LEA does not write IEPs and provides limited services. While they do and have conducted out-of-state student special education evaluations their practice is to inform the parent that if they want to consider IEP services they may wish to have the evaluation conducted in the home LEA to be fully informed, prior to determining whether to receive limited equitable services at the Catholic private school where the student is enrolled. The LEA stated that equitable services to students is extremely limited due to the limited proportionate share funds and priority to provide IEP services to Kansas students. The associate superintendent of special education and strategic initiatives stated to the investigators that the proportionate share funds are typically spent by October so the LEA's model of equitable services is to prioritize services through an IEP and provide more limited services to out of state students since the services are based on availability of IDEA funding and the needs of the group of private school students. As investigated in Component One it was determined that the consultation was compliant.

Based on the foregoing the LEA is in compliance with providing services to nonresident students with disabilities based on the IDEA and Kansas regulations and the LEA's stated equitable service model. Therefore, no corrective action is ordered.

Component Four

Did the LEA refuse to provide onsite services to resident students with disabilities who are parentally placed in the Catholic private schools?

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. § 300.139(a) state that services to parentally-placed private school children with disabilities may be provided on the premises of private, including religious, schools to the extent consistent with law. The revised February 2022 OSEP Q & A document clarifies that the Department generally believes that, unless there is "a compelling rationale for these services to be provided off-site, LEAs should provide services on-site, at the child's private school, to not unduly disrupt the child's educational experience."

34 C.F.R. § 300.137(b) provides more guidance on making the decision by stating that after timely and meaningful consultation and giving due consideration to the views of the private school officials, the LEA makes the final decisions with respect to the services to be provided to eligible parentally-placed private school children with disabilities.

Complainant Position

The complainant asserted that the LEA refused to provide onsite services to eligible students at Catholic private schools in spite of U.S. Department of Education's recommendation that onsite services be provided "unless there is a compelling rationale' for offsite service so as not to "unduly disrupt the child's education experience." However, the LEA was not open to considering onsite services and stated that services could be delivered only at the public schools and was not discussed at the consultation before the decision was made.

Local Education Agency Position

The LEA states in its LEA response that it considers service location through consultation and the development of plans for service delivery. The district serves 25 different private parochial schools. For efficiency of services and the number of students served, the district has provided services on-site. The district also provides transportation to and from the private parochial schools as well as works with the student team to determine the least disruptive time for services to occur.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The findings of Components One through Three are incorporated herein by reference.

1. Slide thirteen of the August 28, 2025 consultation PowerPoint lists that "How and where special education and related services will be provided for parentally placed private school children with disabilities" is one discussion point of the consultation.
2. Some of the Catholic private school principals stated that arranging services around class schedules can be challenging, but in their survey responses to the investigators did not request onsite services. Many stated they did not think it was an option or permitted.
3. The associate superintendent of special education and strategic initiatives stated that transporting the eligible students to partner public schools has been the model the LEA has adopted to serve students.

Conclusion

Under 34 C.F.R. §300.139(a), services may be provided on private school premises when consistent with law; however, IDEA does not require onsite delivery. An offer to provide services at the public school site generally meets a school district's obligations, even if parents refuse the services at that site. It was determined in Component One that the LEA was in compliance with meaningful and timely consultation as the LEA met this obligation for the school year. As described in the conclusion of Component One the LEA is meeting in small groups to collect input from the school officials and may be considered as a delivery option.

Based on the foregoing, the LEA is in compliance not providing onsite services to eligible Catholic private school students during the school year and no corrective action is ordered.

Component Five

Did the LEA conduct a proper child count with respect to students enrolled in the Catholic private schools resulting in errors in the proportionate share calculation?

Applicable Law

Under 34 C.F.R. §300.131 and Kansas regulations at K.A.R. 91-40-42, each responsible public agency must conduct child find activities to locate, identify, and evaluate all children with disabilities who are enrolled by their parents in private, including religious, elementary schools and secondary schools located within the school district's boundaries. The design of the child find activities must ensure the equitable participation of the parentally-placed private school children and result in an accurate count of these children. The child find activities must be similar to those for public school children regardless of whether the student resides in another school district within the state or resides outside of the state. Procedures for conducting child find activities are determined following the timely and meaningful consultation with private school representatives.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.132(c) requires each responsible public agency to annually submit data to the SEA related to the responsible public agency's records of:

a) the number of parentally-placed private school children evaluated each school year,
b) the total number of parentally-placed private school children determined to be children with disabilities within the school district's boundaries, and
c) the number of parentally-placed private school children who receive equitable services.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.133(b) describe the process for calculating the proportionate amount of federal funds to be used for delivering equitable services for parentally-placed private school children with disabilities. K.A.R. 91-40-42(b)(1) requires every responsible public agency to provide the state education authority with a count of the number of parentally-placed private school children with disabilities attending private schools located in the boundaries of the responsible public agency based upon data collected and maintained by the responsible public agency the last Friday in October or December 1 of each school year. This annual private school child count must be used to determine the amount of federal funds that the responsible public agency must spend on providing special education and related services to parentally placed private school children with disabilities during the next fiscal year.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.133(d) state that responsible public agencies may choose to use state and local funds to supplement, but in no case supplant, the proportionate amount of federal funds required to be expended for parentally-placed private school children with disabilities as described in the equitable services plan.

Complainant Position

The complainant alleges in the systemic complaint that they are concerned that the LEA is not including nonresident students in the child count causing the proportionate share calculation to be inaccurately low. The complainant also reported that, based on a review and comparison of their data discrepancies were found between the LEA's private school child count and the data from each of the schools. They noted that the LEA count included three Catholic private schools which are not in the LEA boundaries.

Local Education Agency Position

The LEA responded in their February 27, 2026 response that their child count includes students who are determined eligible for special education under IDEA and are parentally enrolled in private schools located within the LEA boundaries, regardless of the student's home residence. Eligibility determinations are made through Child Find procedures, and the district maintains documentation of referrals, evaluations, and eligibility determinations supporting the count. The LEA has not received any information from KSDE that the submission of data was inaccurate. Further, the LEA states that they submit child count data through the KSDE reporting systems and maintain documentation supporting the count methodology. Differences among district counts and counts maintained by the private school systems may reflect different inclusion criteria and do not indicate inaccuracies in the LEA's child count.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The findings of Components One through Four are incorporated herein by reference.

1. The LEA maintains a record of all LEA students with IEPs in Skyward. Each student that is enrolled in a Catholic private school is checked as attending a private/parochial school. Two IEPs provided to the LEA showed this designation and the home address was outside the LEA boundaries.
2. Students included in the child count are entered into SpedPro/KidPro in the KSDE system and assigned a unique number in the state that flags any discrepancies.
3. The LEA provided the individual submissions from Schools B, C, D, E, F, and G and the times they were recorded that were summed with the other LEA private schools to make up the child count submissions to KSDE for the 2025-2026 school year
4. The LEA has a staff person whose responsibility it is to input child count and reconcile any discrepancies in between Skyward and SpedPro to ensure the numbers are accurate.
5. The LEA provided information about the 22 students that were reported as evaluated as 20 were students who resided in the LEA and two resided in a neighboring LEA During the 2025-2026 school year no out-of-state evaluations were conducted for students referred from the Catholic private schools.

6. Two evaluations provided by the district are for students at School B that reside outside the LEA boundaries and were conducted by the LEA The associate superintendent of special education and strategic initiatives reported that these evaluations were reported for the 2025-2026 school year.
7. The complainant and investigators discussed during their interview that students younger than aged 5 are not reported in the 5-21 child count and may be inadvertently included in the complainant numbers of students.

Conclusion

Under 34 C.F.R. §300.132(c) the LEA is required to annually submit a) the number of parentally-placed private school children evaluated each school year, b) the total number of parentally-placed private school children determined to be children with disabilities within the school district's boundaries, and c) the number of parentally placed private school children who receive equitable services to the KSDE. The KSDE has established a form and training manual to ensure accuracy of the child count. In this case the LEA described procedures and a system of checks and balances within the LEA to guide accurate data collection. The LEA provided their data sources from multiple schools and evaluations to show how the data are compiled.

Accurate child count data is prerequisite for computing proportionate share funds. In this case it is found that the procedures and supporting data suggest that the child count data are accurate and as described in the Component One findings the LEA did explain the proportionate share to the complainant when correcting the earlier omission. For these reasons it is found that the LEA did conduct a proper child count with respect to students enrolled in the Catholic private schools and there is not reason to suspect errors in the proportionate share calculation. Therefore, no corrective action is ordered.

Component Six

Did the LEA require RTI before conducting a special education evaluation for students with a suspected disability enrolled in the Catholic private schools?

Applicable Law

According to 34 C.F.R. §300.131 (a) each LEA must evaluate all children with disabilities who are enrolled by their parents in private schools located in the school district served by the LEA as part of their child find requirements. Further, when carrying out that requirement, the LEA must undertake activities similar to the activities undertaken for the agency's public school children (34 C.F.R. §300.131 (c)).

K.A.R. 91-40-7(c)(3), expressly authorize districts to evaluate a child without going through any GEI if the child's parents consent to an evaluation and the school agrees that an evaluation is appropriate.

Complainant Position

The complainant alleged that the LEA "imposed a requirement that parentally placed private school students participate in General Education Intervention (GEI) ... as a condition of initiating an evaluation for special education eligibility. They allege this is a new practice and have told this required by several of the LEA staff who have been working with the schools for several years.

Local Education Agency Position

The LEA responded that while the LEA may review RTI (General Education Interventions or GEI) data as part of its problem-solving process, they do not require GEI nor use it to delay or deny an evaluation. They further state that they regularly consult with staff at private schools and parents of private school children with disabilities on how to best locate, identify and evaluate students who may have disabilities using methods comparable to those used for children in public schools in the LEA.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The findings of Components One through Five are incorporated herein by reference.

1. The LEA stated that the GEI approach has been used in the public schools for a long time but not consistently used with the private and parochial schools. The LEA staff stated that an emphasis was made during the 2025-2026 school year to extend GEI practices to the private and parochial schools to ensure that comparable services were offered in both locations. The staff stated that is likely why school staff stated it was now required with the schools, but that is not true. There are some cases is which a special education evaluation should not be delayed by the use of GEI and that is true with a student at the public schools as well as a private and parochial school.
2. The GEI requirement is also reflected in Shawnee Mission's August 2025 consultation materials (slide 15), confirming that this practice is systemic.
3. In a November 13, 2025, email from a speech-language pathologist working with School A explained that the LEA's special education coordinators had 'recently instructed' staff to begin GEI speech services for initial evaluation for private school students, a process already used with public school students. The email went on to explain the process and timelines for using GEI practices.
4. An October 24, 2025 email from a LEA speech-language pathologist working at School E documented that a kindergarten teacher was required to complete multiple pre-evaluation screening tools and collect weeks of data collection before an evaluation for the student was considered. In an email dated November 13, 2025 the principal at School E alerted the complainant of this situation.
5. Staff at School A stated that they have a robust multi-tiered intervention system in place that includes both push-in and pull-out models and students are monitored regularly for progress. For academic concerns, the school team never reaches out to the partner public school for evaluation unless they have already provided significant interventions and they have not been effective. They report parents may reach out and have in the past.

6. The principal at School E summarized a meeting regarding a sixth-grade student with dyslexia that the school would need to demonstrate that the student "did not make progress while receiving frequent and intensive' interventions-described as four days per week for 20-30 minutes per session, typically over a six-to-eight-week period."
7. The principal at School C stated that the partner public school is timely in reaching out after a referral is made and GEI services take place in the student's own classrooms the School C school, by student's familiar teachers.

Conclusion

The KSDE encourages the use of a multi-tiered system of supports for all children, encompassing school-wide support for both academic and behavioral competency. A GEI process is one of those multi-tiered systems preceding an initial evaluation that is available to assist in determining the specific concerns and needs of their child. While child find is required by special education law, GEI is one of Kansas' method of conducting child find for school age children. The Kansas Special Education Process Handbook also describes circumstances; it would not be necessary to begin with the GEI process before referring the student for an initial evaluation. This would most likely occur in an instance where a student with an obvious disability has not been identified previously or in situations in which it would be inappropriate to delay further evaluation to determine the student's need for special education.

The IDEA and Kansas regulations require that an LEA use the comparable evaluation procedures for the private schools as are used in the public schools. In this case the LEA has adopted the use of GEI as a step to gather additional data in consideration of a special education evaluation. While partner public staff misspoke in suggesting that the LEA's attempt to move the public practice of GEI to the private schools as "required" it is not. Examples were not provided by the LEA or complainant of a student being denied a special education evaluation while GEI was ongoing. While the process for GEI can be lengthy and there were certainly experience reported whereby the logistics of completing the paperwork and coordination of reviewing and using the data were frustrating they did not constitute a denial.

Therefore, the Local Education Agency is in compliance and did not require RTI before conducting a special education evaluation for students with a suspected disability enrolled in the Catholic private schools. Therefore, corrective action is not required.

Summary of Conclusions/Corrective Action

Although only one issue was investigated, there were three components of that issue. During the course of the investigation, it was determined that the findings of fact and conclusions would be presented for each component in an effort to provide a framework for both parties to review and consider each of these interrelated components as they relate to the overarching issue presented by the complainant. Therefore, a summary of conclusions and correction action are also presented below for each of the three components.

COMPONENT ONE: A violation of 34 C.F.R. §300.134 and 34 C.F.R. §300.135 was not found. Corrective action is not required.

COMPONENT TWO: A violation of C.F.R. §300.131 (d), C.F.R. §300.133(a), and C.F.R. §300.8 was not found. Corrective action is not required.

COMPONENT THREE: A violation of 34 C.F.R. §300.131, 34 C.F.R. §300.132, 34 C.F.R. §300.137, and 34 C.F.R. §300.139 was not found. Corrective action is not required.

COMPONENT FOUR: A violation of 34 C.F.R. 34 C.F.R. §300.139(a) and 34 C.F.R. §300.137(b) was not found. Corrective action is not required.

COMPONENT FIVE: A violation of 34 C.F.R. §300.131; 34 C.F.R. §300.132 and 34 C.F.R. §300.133 was not found. Corrective action is not required.

COMPONENT SIX: A violation of C.F.R. §300.131 was not found. Corrective action is not required.

Destruction of Records

In compliance with federal regulations, at 34 C.F.R. 300.624, I am providing notice to both parties that, within 60 days of the date of a final decision, any personally identifiable information of any student obtained by the investigator in this investigation will be considered no longer needed to provide educational services to any such student and may be destroyed by the investigator. Any personally identifiable information regarding this complaint held by the Kansas State Department of Education will be deemed no longer needed to provide educational services to the above-named student six years after the date of the final decision and may be destroyed by the department at that time. After expiration of these timelines, a parent may request destruction of the information obtained in this complaint. If such a request is made, the information will be destroyed.

Right to Appeal

Either party may appeal the findings or conclusions in this report by filing a written notice of appeal with the State Commissioner of Education, ATTN: Special Education and Title Services, Landon State Office Building, 900 SW Jackson Street, Suite 620, Topeka, KS 66612-1212. The notice of appeal may also be filed by email to formalcomplaints@ksde.gov The notice of appeal must be delivered within 10 calendar days from the date of this report.

For further description of the appeals process, see Kansas Administrative Regulations 91-40-51(f).

K.A.R. 91-40-51(f) Appeals.

Upon receiving an appeal, an appeal committee of at least three department of education members shall be appointed by the commissioner to review the report and to consider the information provided by the local education agency, the complainant, or others. The appeal process, including any hearing conducted by the appeal committee, shall be completed within 15 days from the date of receipt of the notice of appeal, and a decision shall be rendered within five days after the appeal process is completed unless the appeal committee determines that exceptional circumstances exist with respect to the particular complaint. In this event, the decision shall be rendered as soon as possible by the appeal committee.

(2) If an appeal committee affirms a compliance report that requires corrective action by an agency, that agency shall initiate the required corrective action immediately. If, after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the agency shall be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following:

(A) The issuance of an accreditation deficiency advisement;
(B) the withholding of state or federal funds otherwise available to the agency;
(C) the award of monetary reimbursement to the complainant; or
(D) any combination of the actions specified in paragraph (f)(2)

In the Matter of the Appeal of the Report
Issued in Response to a Complaint Filed
Against Unified School District No. 512
Shawnee Mission Public Schools: 26FC512-013

DECISION OF THE APPEAL COMMITTEE

Background

This matter commenced with the filing of a complaint on February 11, 2026 by Dr. Lorenzo Rizzi, Associate Superintendent - Student Services, at the Office of Catholic Schools for the Archdiocese of Kansas City. In the remainder of this decision, Dr. Rizzi will be referred to as "the complainant." USO 512 will be referred to as the LEA.

An investigation of the complaint was undertaken by a complaint investigator on behalf of the Special Education, and Title Services team at the Kansas State Department of Education. Following the investigation, a Complaint Report, addressing the allegations, was issued on March 24, 2026. That Complaint Report concluded that there were no violations of special education statutes and regulations

Thereafter, the complainant requested an extension of time to submit an appeal as the investigator's report was issued on the eve of Holy Week surrounding Easter. That request for extra time was granted. The appeal of the complaint report was filed on April 15, 2026. Upon receipt of the appeal, the LEA was notified and given ten days to respond to the appeal. An appeal committee was appointed and it reviewed the original complaint filed by the complainant, the Complaint Report, the complainant's notice of appeal, and the Local Education Agency (LEA) response to the appeal. The Appeal Committee has reviewed the information provided in connection with this matter and now issues this final Appeal Decision.

Preliminary Matters

A copy of the regulation regarding the filing of an appeal [K.A.R. 91-40-51 (f)] was attached to the Complaint Report. That regulation states, in part, that: "Each notice shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect." Accordingly, the burden for supplying a sufficient basis for appeal is on the party submitting the appeal. When a party submits an appeal and makes statements in the notice of appeal without support, the Committee does not attempt to locate the missing support.

No new issues will be decided by the Appeal Committee. The appeal process is a review of the Complaint Report. The Appeal Committee does not conduct a separate investigation. The appeal committee's function will be to determine whether sufficient evidence exists to support the findings and conclusions in the Complaint Report.

Discussion of Issues on Appeal

Issues Investigated

Did the LEA follow state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) for children parentally-placed at the Catholic private schools by their parents specific to: (1) providing special education services to nonresident students, (2) reporting accurate child count data and calculating proportionate share funds following child find activities, (3) planning and conducting the consultation meeting, (4) providing onsite services to resident students with disabilities, and (5) responding to requests for special education evaluation?

The report states that only one issue was presented in this complaint but that there were six "component parts" of that single issue (Report, p. 5). The report concluded that there were no violations of law and so no corrective actions were ordered. We will address each component part as the conclusions all six concerns were appealed by the LEA

Was the LEA's Consultation timely and meaningful?

The pertinent regulation Is 34 C.F.R. 300.134, which begins with:

> To ensure timely and meaningful consultation, an LEA, or, if appropriate, an SEA, must consult with private school representatives and representatives of parents of parentally-placed private school children with disabilities during the design and development of special education and related services for the children regarding the Following ... "

Central to this issue is that the term "consult" is not defined in either the relevant statute or regulation. The common meaning of the word "consult" is: "To seek guidance or information from" or "to refer to for information." Webster's Random House Dictionary, (2nd Edition 1999).

In Questions and Answers on Serving Children With Disabilities Placed by Their Parents in Private Schools, 122 LRP 7109 (OSERS 2022), the Office of Special Education Services (OSERS) posed two questions related to this issue (Relevant parts of OSERS responses are included).

> Question B-1: What is consultation?
> Answer: Consultation is a mandatory process that involves discussions between the LEA, private school officials, and representatives of parents of parentally placed private school children with disabilities on key issues relating to the equitable participation of eligible private school children with disabilities in Federally-funded special education and related services."

Consultation must be an ongoing process, not solely an annual meeting. See 34 C.F.R. § 300.134(c). Timeliness is critical to effective consultation and requires collaboration between the LEA and private school officials in developing a timeline and selecting dates for consultation.

A unilateral offer of services by an LEA with no opportunity for discussion is not adequate consultation, as such an offer does not meet the basic requirements of the consultation process. Only after discussing key issues relating to the provision of special education and related services with all representatives may the LEA make its final decisions with respect to the services to be provided to eligible private school children with disabilities.

Question B-2: What constitutes meaningful consultation?

Answer: IDEA does not specify what constitutes "meaningful consultation," but in order for consultation to be meaningful, it must be timely and ongoing throughout the school year. See 34 C.F.R. §§ 300.134 and 300.134(c). Establishing a timeline for consultation can help ensure that timely and meaningful consultation occurs throughout the school year. The timeline can include meeting dates and times as well as topics to be discussed. As there is no specific schedule for consultation, States and LEAs are able to determine the appropriate period between consultation discussions based on circumstances in their jurisdictions. The needs, number, and location of parentally-placed private school children with disabilities may vary over time, depending on the circumstances in a particular LEA in a particular year.

In Question D-1 OSERS adds:

Question D-1: What is the process for making decisions with respect to the services to be provided to eligible parentally-placed private school children with disabilities?

Answer: Timely and meaningful consultation must occur before any decisions are made that will affect the participation of parentally-placed private school children with disabilities in IDEA Part B programs. 34 C.F.R. § 300.134. Thus, decisions about services may not be made in advance or in the absence of timely and meaningful consultation. After timely and meaningful consultation has occurred with private school representatives and representatives of parents of parentally-placed private school children with disabilities, the LEA where private elementary schools and secondary schools are located is responsible for making final decisions about all aspects of the services to be provided to parentally placed private school children with disabilities attending private schools located in the LEA 34 C.F.R. § 300.137(b).

If the LEA disagrees with the views of the private school officials on the provision of services or the types of services, whether provided directly or through a contract, the LEA must provide to the private school officials a written explanation of the reasons why the LEA chose not to accept the recommendations of the private school officials. 34 C.F.R. § 300.134(e). (See Question B-9 for options available to private school officials to resolve concerns regarding the consultation process.)

Question H-5: When making a determination regarding the services that an LEA will provide to children with disabilities placed by their parents in private schools, could an LEA decide to provide services only to students from their LEA or their State?

Answer: No. Although LEAs have discretion to determine how the proportionate share of IDEA Part B funds will be expended so long as the consultation requirements in 34 C.F.R. § 300.134 are followed for all parentally-placed private school children, LEAs cannot unilaterally determine, prior to or in the absence of the timely and meaningful consultation process, that the proportionate share of Part B funds for equitable services can only be expended to meet the needs of children who are residents of that LEA or State.

From this lengthy description, we discern from OSERS analysis that consultation is discussion. That interpretation is consistent with the dictionary definition of the term "consult." Meaningful is also an undefined term, but OSERS opines that "to be meaningful, the discussion must be timely and ongoing throughout the school year."

In short, meaningful consultation requires "timely and ongoing discussion" throughout the school year. It does not require a school district to adopt any proposal made by a private school, regardless of how reasonable a private school may consider its proposal to be.

20 U.S.C. 1412(a)(1 0)(A)(iii) and 34 C.F.R. 300.134 require meaningful consultation with private schools based on the assumption that an LEA will have at least one child with a disability enrolled by their parents in a private school that is located within the boundary of the LEA If there is no private school within the boundary of an LEA the LEA has no obligation to consult or to spend any portion of its federal subgrant to provide any service under this provision. Accordingly, the consultation (discussion) requirement arises when an LEA does have a private school located within its district and there is at least one child with a disability attending that private school. In that instance there is an obligation for the LEA to spend a proportionate share of its subgrant under section 611 (f) on those children. One way to do that is to develop a "services plan" pursuant to 34 C.F.R. 300132(b) to provide services to one or more students until the proportionate share is exhausted, at which time all services may end.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.137(a) clarify that there is no individual right of any student to receive any service under a services plan and (b)(2) the LEA makes "the final decisions with respect to the services to be provided ... " In addition, Kansas state law provides children with disabilities who are enrolled by their parents in a private school with far more than the meager spending of a proportionate share of federal funds.

K.S.A. 72-3462, in pertinent part, states that

> Every school district shall provide special education services for exceptional children who reside in the school district and attend a private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school, whether such school is located within or outside the school district, upon request of a parent or guardian of any such child for the provision of such services. No school district shall be required to provide such services outside the school district. Any school district may provide special education services for exceptional children who attend a private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school located within the school district, whether or not all such children reside in the school district. Special education services which are provided under this section for exceptional children who attend a private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school which is located in school district may be provided in the private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school or in the public schools of the school district. The site for the provision of special education services under this section for an exceptional child shall be determined by the school district in consultation with the parent or guardian of the child and with officials of the private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school. Special education services provided under this section for exceptional children who attend a private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school are subject to the following requirements: (a) If the services are provided for in the private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school, amounts expended for the provision of such services shall not be required to exceed the average cost to the school district for the provision of the same services in the public schools of the school district for children within the same category of exceptionality; (b) if the services are provided for in the public schools of the school district, the services shall be provided on an equal basis with the provision of such services for exceptional children attending the public schools; and (c) if the services are provided in the public schools of the school district, transportation to and from such public school shall be provided by the school district. (Emphasis added).

These services are provided with an IEP, not a services plan (K.AR. 91-40-45(c)). Each identified child attending a private school has an individual right to receive all of the services in the child's IEP (K.S.A 72-341 0(a)(2).

K.S.A 72-3462 has the same consultation requirement as federal law. Like federal law, it says after consultation, "the site for the provision of special education services under this section for an exceptional child shall be determined by the school district." There is nothing in either federal or state law that requires any substantive standard which LEAs must apply when determining the site for services. The only requirement is meaningful consultation: discussion that is timely and ongoing throughout the school year.

The evidence presented in this complaint and explained in the complaint report supports the investigator's finding that there was more likely than not a timely and ongoing discussion between the parties throughout the school year about how services will be provided to children with disabilities attending a private school. To the extent these discussions may appear to lack meaningfulness to officials of the private schools, that appearance is at most, a procedural and not a substantive defect. That is so because the LEA makes available all of the special education and related services in an IEP to all of these students attending a private school located in the district merely upon request. There is no credible evidence that any eligible student attending a private school in this LEA, who requests services, has been denied services.

With regard to out-of-state students attending a private school in Kansas, they belong in the consultation requirement but they have no individual right to receive any special education services under either federal or state law, unless there are unspent federal proportionate share funds, which is not applicable to this complaint.

The evidence presented supports the LEA contention that its consultation process occurs every year and more often when requested. The issues remain largely the same year after year. With a long history of evaluating strategies for this group of children, an LEA is not required to enter the consultation process pretending it has no idea how it is going to evaluate and provide services to children enrolled in private schools.

The consultation process is much less than the "participation" process that parents enjoy when participating in an evaluation or in an IEP meeting for their child. Nevertheless, even when parents are participating in an evaluation or IEP process, school personal can prepare for proposals they suspect may be made at those meetings and arrive at those meetings with their own understanding of the issues that might arise (see 34 C.F.R. 300.501 (b)(3)).

In Deal v. Hamilton Cty. Bd. Of Ed., 104 LRP 59544 (6th Cir. 2004) the court said that team members may come to meetings with pre-formed opinions as long as they are willing to listen and have open minds. However, when an educational program is predetermined (no amount of information will change the determination of the team), a violation of FAPE occurs because it deprives parents of meaningful participation in the IEP process. Also see the same analysis in: R.L. v. Miami-Dade County Sch. Bd., 114 LRP 30126 (11 th Cir. 2014), and I.P. v. City of New York Dept. of Ed., 71 IDELR 77 (2d Cir. 2017).

What may appear to officials of private schools to be predetermination may appear to officials of public schools to be the benefit of experience. One does not usually reflect on repetitive tasks before proceeding as usual. Likewise, this consultation process does not require LEAs to reconsider each year how it will proceed with evaluations and services with a blank mind, as if it had never previously considered the issues.

The consultation process does require LEAs to have discussions and be open to questions and proposals as to options that would be more beneficial to students or are more financially beneficial or practical to public schools than previous practices. The evidence does not support a conclusion that "no amount of information will change the determination" of these school officials going forward. The complainant does not provide a single incidence in which the LEA has denied a request from the complaint without discussion and where that request is clearly more beneficial to the LEA

In the conclusion portion of the report on this component, the investigator concluded that the district held a consultation meeting on August 28, 2025 and a follow-up meeting on April 18, 2026 that included all five of the topics described in 34 C.F.R. 300.134. With regard to the April 18, 2026 meeting, the report says, "The stated intent of the second meeting is to be responsive to the Catholic private schools request for more input about services and use of the proportionate share."

Were these consultations meaningful?

There was nothing to indicate that the LEA refused to even consider the private school proposals, moving forward. The LEA serves students enrolled in 25 private parochial schools located within the district's boundaries. Each year LEAs engage in extensive planning for the coming school year. That planning must be completed before school begins each year. It is largely impractical to change plans for a school year when that school year is about to start or is already in progress. The requirement for timely and meaningful consultation is to "consult with private school representatives and representatives of parents of parentally-placed private school children with disabilities during the design and development of special education and related services for the children ... " The design and development of special education and related services for the children does not take place on August 15 of each school year. It has to take place well in advance of each school year. When consultation does take place, the discussions need to be meaningful at the time they take place. Typically, that means the consultation consists of a discussion of how the design and development of special education and related services for the children in private schools will be structured for the next school year.

In its appeal, the complainant asserts that after the consultation session on August 28, 2025 private school representatives did not understand how nonresident students, including out-of-state students, could participate in child find and receive equitable services. From this fact, the private complainant concludes as follows:

> This confusion goes to the core of IDEA's consultation requirements.
> Consultation must ensure that private school representatives have a meaningful opportunity to understand and provide input on how child find and services operate in practice. Where participants leave consultation without understanding how an entire category of eligible > students is identified, referred, and served, consultation cannot be considered meaningful under IDEA

While the Appeal Committee agrees that LEAs strive to provide a clear delivery of content and information that minimizes questions, it sees no requirement under 34 C.F.R. § 300.134 that all participants leave a consultation meeting fully informed and without any questions. That could not possibly be a reasonable interpretation of the term "consultation" or even of "meaningful interpretation."

There is nothing in this complaint that indicates that when these consultations occurred, the LEA refused to "discuss" concerns expressed by the private school officials regarding the design and development of special education and related services for the future. In this instance, when the private school officials expressed a desire for additional consultation, the LEA scheduled an April 18, 2026 meeting, about which the report says, "The stated intent of the second meeting is to be responsive to the Catholic private schools request for more input about services and use of the proportionate share." The complainant asserts that this demonstrates non-meaningful consultation because the school year is already more than half over misses the point that consultation is always prospective, not retrospective. Consultation refers to "discussions" about future processes.

The Appeal Committee finds that there is sufficient evidence to support the conclusion of the investigator on this component.

Component Two

> Were the proportionate share funds incorrectly spent on staff time for child find activities, gifted education and administrative costs?

The complainant's allegation is that the report relied on the LEAs assertions rather than a review of "accounting records, expenditure ledgers, payroll allocations, or other documentation sufficient to determine what costs were included in the "GFTSPED" category or whether those costs were allowable under IDEA"

LEA responded as follows:

> In attempting to explain how the proportionate share funds are expended, the district provided financial information indicating that its spending on services actually exceeds what is required by law. The district did not separate where the services were billed, which led to the Archdiocese's belief that the funds were not properly spent. The district's intention was merely to show the amount expended beyond its proportionate share. Gifted services are an unfunded required service under state regulations, and the district does not take those services into account when calculating proportionate share. Therefore, the Archdiocese's position that proportionate share funds were misused cannot stand, and KSDE properly reviewed and investigated the evidence provided in making its determination according to 34 C.F.R. § 300.133.

In this component the investigator made the following findings:

1. None of the five principals at the schools surveyed or complainant had any specific knowledge or familiarity related to the use of the proportionate share funds being used for staff conducting child find activities, administrative costs, or gifted education.
2. The LEA provides all Kansas students who are eligible for special education and related services with equitable services through an IEP regardless of whether they reside in the LEA The LEA staff reported that they first spend the proportionate share funds to provide the required IEP services and then use state and local funds when the proportionate share funds are fully expended to continue to pay for the required IEP services. The remaining proportionate share funds provide limited services to out-of-state eligible students enrolled in a Catholic private school (the Appeal Committee presumes this means if there are any remaining funds).
3. In response to a December 8, 2025 request from the complainant to extract specific information regarding the proportionate share specifically for the Catholic private schools the LEA shared detailed information about how LEA funds are expended for private school students. The LEA staff stated that it detailed how the funds were expended for private school students with disabilities and exceptionalities. The information was meant to show the complainant that the LEA equitable services provided to the private schools exceed what they are required to by federal and state regulation to spend and therefore did not separate where the service was billed, but believe in retrospect that it was not understood, leading the complainant to believe that the proportionate share funds were not properly spent. The LEA response stated, "While there is an allegation about the district counting gifted services as part of their proportionate share, the district intended to share the amount they expend beyond their identified proportionate share. The district is aware that Gifted services are an unfunded required service per KS regulations; the district does not take into account gifted services when calculating proportionate share."
4. The budget manager from the LEA responded to the investigator on March 23, 2026 at 4:12 p.m. replied that the proportional share is allocated solely to cover the salaries of certified staff who deliver required services to the students in private and parochial schools.

From these facts, the investigator concluded that the LEA, in accordance with state law, provides services, upon request, through an IEP (as opposed to a services plan) for all special education Kansas students attending a private school, and limited special education services for eligible out-of-state students pursuant to federal law. In doing so, the investigator found that all of the LEAs proportionate share funds were expended on children with disabilities (not including gifted students). When those funds were expended, the LEA used state and local funds to continue providing services to those children throughout the remainder of the school year. Given this model, the investigator found that while the LEA did not make a visible distinction when presenting whether the funds expended constituted proportionate share funds or those from the general fund, they did exhaust all of the federal proportionate share funds.

While the report did not cite "accounting records, expenditure ledgers, [or] payroll allocations," it did state, in finding three, that In response to a December 8, 2025 request from the complainant to extract specific information regarding the proportionate share specifically for the Catholic private schools the LEA shared detailed information about how LEA funds are expended for private school students. The LEA staff stated that it detailed how the funds were expended for private school students with disabilities and exceptionalities. The information was meant to show the complainant that the LEA equitable services provided to the private schools exceed what they are required to by federal and state regulation to spend."

This finding shows that the district did present supporting documentation to the investigator. In any event, all of these children with a disability attending a private school in Kansas have an individual right to receive all of the services in their IEPs throughout the school year, merely upon request. This right under Kansas law dwarfs the proportionate share of federal funds spending requirement under federal law. By complying with state law school districts meet and exceed the spending requirements of federal law. Nothing presented by the complainant in this appeal of component two produces any doubt in the Appeal Committee that the private school has spent significantly more than its proportionate share of federal funds on these private school children. The extraordinary additional burden to provide a free appropriate public education (FAPE) to private school children with disabilities through an IEP in Kansas schools under state law is such that there could not be any other reasonable conclusion.

The complaint report is sustained on this component.

Component Three

Are nonresident students with disabilities who are parentally placed in Catholic private schools denied special education services in the LEA?

In this component, the investigator concluded that:

> In this case, the LEA provided equitable services to all Kansas-eligible students special education and related services through an IEP. They allocate their proportionate share funds first to pay for these services and then use state and local funds to continue paying for the student's services during the school year (Report, p. 20)."

This conclusion is supported by the factual findings in the report, except to the extent that the services provided are referred to in the report as equitable services.

Equitable services are services provided to private school students through a "services plan" (34 C.F.R. 300.132(b)). These "equitable services" are funded through a proportionate share of the IDEA subgrant. When that proportionate share of federal funding is exhausted, the LEA has no continuing obligation, under federal law, to provide any additional services to this group of students. Under this federal provision, an LEA could choose to spend its entire proportionate share of federal funds on one student alone or to all such students until the funds are spent and then end all services to all of these students attending a private school (see 34 C.F.R. 133). Accordingly, "No parentally-placed private school child with a disability has an individual right to receive some or all of the special education and related services that the child would receive if enrolled in a public school (34 C.F.R. 300.137(a)).

This LEA, however, does not use a "services plan" for any of these students. Instead, it provides special education services to this population of students through an IEP that offers an individual right to a full free appropriate public education (FAPE) throughout the school year. The LEA makes this available to all of the Kansas resident students that attend the private school, upon request. In accordance with state law at K.S.A. 72-3462 when an LEA is providing special education to resident students attending a private school located within the LEA, the LEA determines the site for services.

USD 512 goes beyond even this expanded FAPE provision to include a FAPE offer to non-resident Kansas students attending a private school that is located in the district, though not to out-of-state students. Out of state students would be eligible only for equitable services if there was any remaining proportionate share of federal grant funds. Because of the generous additional FAPE entitlement under Kansas law that provides a year-long individual right to a FAPE through an IEP for these Kansas students in a private school, the proportionate share of federal grant funds is quickly expended.

There was no finding in the complaint report or evidence in the private school's appeal that, when requested, services through an IEP were denied to any student. There may have been instances where a student residing outside the state was denied equitable services under a services plan because the proportionate share of federal grant funds had already been allocated. Accordingly, there is sufficient evidence to support the conclusion in the complaint report on this issue.

Component Four

Did the LEA refuse to provide onsite services to resident students with disabilities who are parentally placed in the Catholic private schools?

In its appeal, the complainant cites the district's Consultation Presentation, Slide 10, which says, "District picks location." The complainant's appeal asserts that "This statement reflects a predetermined position that services would be provided only at public school sites."

The Appeal Committee disagrees with this analysis. The statement in question merely mirrors the Kansas statute at K.S.A. 72-3462 that says when public schools offer a FAPE through an IEP to students attending a private school the public school determines the site for services. There is nothing in "District picks location" that could be interpreted to mean the location is always at the public school. It is likely correct that a public school would have to perceive some additional benefit to providing services at the private school as opposed to the public school, and that the burden of persuasion might legitimately on the private school. There are expenses to providing services at the public school, transporting students to and from services being a significant expense. So, there is room for discussion but the final decision under both federal and state law is reserved to the public school. The private school has not asserted in this appeal that it made a proposal for services to be provided at the private school that was clearly more beneficial to the party making the decision - the public school, and was nevertheless rejected without the opportunity to discuss the proposal.

The conclusion in the report is sustained on this issue.

Component Five

Did the LEA conduct a proper child count with respect to students enrolled in the Catholic private schools resulting in errors in the proportionate share calculation?

The complainant's appeal states that "The report relies on the existence of procedures to conclude that the LEA satisfied its obligations. However, the accuracy of the child count depends not on the existence of procedures, but on whether all eligible students were identified and included." The complainant asserts that the data used by the public school is inaccurate.

That description does not accurately describe the findings in the report in this component. Those findings are as follows:

1. The LEA maintains a record of all LEA students with IEPs in Skyward. Each student that is enrolled in a Catholic private school is checked as attending a private/parochial school. Two IEPs provided to the LEA showed this designation and the home address was outside the LEA boundaries.
2. Students included in the child count are entered into SpedPro/KidPro in the KSDE system and assigned a unique number in the state that flags any discrepancies.
3. The LEA provided the individual submissions from Schools B, C, D, E, F, and G and the times they were recorded that were summed with the other LEA private schools to make up the child count submissions to KSDE for the 2025-2026 school year
4. The LEA has a staff person whose responsibility it is to input child count and reconcile any discrepancies in between Skyward and SpedPro to ensure the numbers are accurate.
5. The LEA provided information about the 22 students that were reported as evaluated as 20 were students who resided in the LEA and two resided in a neighboring LEA During the 2025-2026 school year no out-of-state evaluations were conducted for students referred from the Catholic private schools.

6. Two evaluations provided by the district are for students at School B that reside outside the LEA boundaries and were conducted by the LEA The associate superintendent of special education and strategic initiatives reported that these evaluations were reported for the 2025-2026 school year.
7. The complainant and investigators discussed during their interview that students younger than aged 5 are not reported in the 5-21 child count and may be inadvertently included in the complainant numbers of students.

In the conclusion portion of this component, the investigator noted that "The KSDE has established a form and training manual to ensure accuracy of the child count. In this case the LEA described procedures and a system of checks and balances within the LEA to guide accurate data collection. The LEA provided their data sources from multiple schools and evaluations to show how the data are compiled."

The investigator added that, "In this case it is found that the procedures and supporting data suggest that the child count data are accurate and as described in the Component One findings the LEA did explain the proportionate share to the complainant when correcting the earlier omission. For these reasons it is found that the LEA did conduct a proper child count with respect to students enrolled in the Catholic private schools and there is not reason to suspect errors in the proportionate share calculation.

The complainant questions the accuracy of the data used by the LEA There may well be some flaws in the data, as may often be the case when substantial amounts of data are being gathered and organized. Sometimes inconsistencies may appear in even accurate data. In this case, the investigator cited the LEAs system of checks and balances used to "guide accurate data collection." Assuring complete accuracy of data used to calculate the proportionate share of federal funds is beyond the capacity of this complaint process. However, the Appeal Committee finds that the preponderance of the evidence supports the conclusion of the investigator.

The conclusion of the investigator is sustained on this issue.

Component Six

Did the LEA require RTI before conducting a special education evaluation for students with a suspected disability enrolled in the Catholic private schools?

In its appeal the complainant states, "KSDE's conclusion that the LEA did not improperly use the GEI/RTI process to delay evaluations because no student was actually denied an evaluation, reflects a misapplication of the law. The relevant inquiry is not whether evaluations were ultimately conducted, but whether the LEA delayed evaluations by requiring completion of general education interventions (GEI/RTI) prior to initiating the evaluation process. Federal law is clear that Response to Intervention may not be used to delay or deny an evaluation. See 34 C.F.R. §§ 300.301-300.304."

The Appeal Committee agrees that an RTI process cannot be used to delay an evaluation when it is agreed that an evaluation is appropriate. Absent such agreement, an RTI process is required by state law. Kansas regulation K.A.R. 91-40-7(c) states (emphasis added):

> Any board may refer a child who is enrolled in public school for an evaluation if one of the following conditions is met:
>
> (1) School personnel have data-based documentation indicating that general education interventions and strategies would be inadequate to address the areas of concern for the child.
> (2) School personnel have data-based documentation indicating that before the referral or as a part of the referral, all of the following conditions were met:
> (A) The child was provided with appropriate instruction in regular education settings that was delivered by qualified personnel.
> (B) The child's academic achievement was repeatedly assessed at reasonable intervals that reflected formal assessment of the student's progress during instruction.
> (C) The assessment results were provided to the child's parent or parents.
> (D) The assessment results indicate that an evaluation is appropriate.
> (3) The parent of the child requests, and gives written consent for, an evaluation of the child, and the board agrees that an evaluation of the child is appropriate.

Accordingly, absent such agreement, an RTI process is required to obtain the necessary data based documentation before proceeding to an evaluation. The complainant cited no instance in which the LEA refused to initiate an evaluation of a student that it agreed would be appropriate.

Sufficient evidence exists to support the findings and conclusions in the Complaint Report on this component, and they are sustained.

In its appeal, the complainant presents a seventh component that was not a part of the complaint. That seventh component is titled "Failure to Require Corrective Action of Systemic Noncompliance." It expresses the complainant's position that the district requires corrective action for its non-compliance with federal law. Since the Appeal Committee has determined that the district has complied with both state and federal law, it finds this additional part of the appeal to be without merit.

Conclusion

For the reasons stated herein, the Complaint Report is sustained in full.

This is the final decision on this matter. There is no further appeal to the Kansas State Department of Education. This Appeal Decision is issued this 5th day of May, 2026.

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST
UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #259
ON MARCH 17, 2026

DATE OF REPORT: APRIL 20, 2026

This report is in response to a Complaint filed with our office on behalf of a student, ------- by their parent, -------. In the remainder of the report, the student will be referred to as "the Student" and the parent as "the Parent."

The Complaint is against USD #259, Wichita Public Schools. In the remainder of the report, "the School" and the "local education agency (LEA)" shall refer to USD #259.

When a special education complaint is filed against a school district that is a member of a special education cooperative or interlocal, or that uses any other state recognized public agency to serve children with disabilities, the term "local education agency (LEA)" in this report will include the school district, the special education cooperative or interlocal, and any other agency that is recognized by the state as an administrative agency for public elementary or secondary schools and is serving the educational needs of this student.

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) allows for a 30-day timeline to investigate a child complaint. A complaint is considered to be filed on the date it is delivered to both the KSDE and the LEA. In this case, the KSDE initially received the Complaint on March 17, 2026 and the 30-day timeline ended on April 16, 2026.

Allegations

The following issues will be investigated:

ISSUE ONE: Whether USD #259, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), implemented the Student's individualized education program (IEP) after their primary teachers took a leave of absence in October and November 2025. K.A.R. 91-40-16 (b); 34 CFR § 300.323 (a)(d).

ISSUE TWO: Whether USD #259, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, ensured the Student's special education services were provided by a staff member qualified to provide special education or related services to exceptional children. K.S.A. 72-3404(j); 34 CFR §§ 300.156, 300.207.

ISSUE THREE: Whether USD #259, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, ensured placement decisions were made by a team including the Parent, and whether the LEA ensured the Student was placed in the least restrictive environment (LRE) when the Mixed Abilities program was removed from the Student's home school. K.A.R. 91-40-21; 34 CFR §§ 300.116, 300.327.

ISSUE FOUR: Whether USD #259, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, provided the Student with a free appropriate public education (FAPE) by implementing the Student's IEP and providing special education instruction from qualified staff, in the Student's LRE. K.A.R. 91-40-2, K.A.R. 91-40-1(z); 34 CFR §§ 300.17, 300.101.

Investigation of Complaint

The Complaint Investigator interviewed the Parent on April 14, 2026. The following LEA staff were interviewed on April 13, 2026: The Special Education Director, the Principal, and the IEP Manager. A written statement was submitted by the Paraeducator on April 17, 2026.

In completing this investigation, the Complaint Investigator reviewed documentation provided by the Parent and the LEA. Although additional documentation was provided and reviewed, the following materials were used as the basis of the findings and conclusions of the investigation:

Background Information

This Investigation involved a sixth-grade student enrolled in a Mixed Abilities (MA) program at a middle school in USD #259. The Student experiences Down Syndrome and is eligible as a child with a disability per the IDEA under the exceptionality of Intellectual Disability (ID). The Student is "happy and pleasant," knows and does well with classroom routines and small groups, and succeeds in schoolwork with visual aids. The Student is nonverbal and uses sounds, gestures, and an augmentative and alternative communication (AAC) device to communicate.

Findings of the Investigation

The following findings are based on a review of documentation and interviews with the Parent and staff in the LEA.

1. The Student's January 23, 2025 IEP contained the following relevant information:
    a. The IEP was in effect from January 24, 2025 to January 22, 2026.
    b. Present level of academic achievement and functional performance:
        i. Reading: "[The Student] can match upper and lowercase letters with 100% accuracy. [They are] able to identify 26/26 letters with 100% accuracy. [The Student] is about 75% accurate with letter sound correspondence when given an array of two. When answering comprehension questions about a short story, [they are] able to accurately answer 90% of the time, when given two visual choices."
        ii. Math: "[The Student] is able to identify shapes, colors, and numerals 0-20 with 100% accuracy. When given objects or pictures of objects, [they are] able to count using one to one correspondence, up to 10 with 100% accuracy. [The Student] is able to sort objects into equal groups with visuals with 60% accuracy. [They] will combine groups and count to find out [the] total."
        iii. Writing: "[The Student] is able to trace [their] name and short words with [their] left hand. [The Student] makes [their] best attempts to write [their] name, which is legible. When given a sentence stem and visual choices, [they] will complete a sentence."
        iv. Social/Emotional: "[The Student] appears to be a happy child that enjoys greeting [their] peers and familiar adults. [They] will ask adults for hugs by going up to [adults] and touching arms with [their] hands. [The Student] has several friends that will engage with [them] at recess and [the Student] will follow along and let them play."

v. Occupational Therapy (OT): "[The Student] has good movement and functional strength in [their] arms and hands. [They are] left hand dominant. [The Student] can lace small beads on string, complete insert puzzles and pick up small items with a pincer grasp (100%). [They] can copy vertical and horizontal lines, cross and a circle (80% of the time). [They] can connect-the-dots for square and triangle shapes with cues. [The Student] can accurately trace lines for shapes and letters with good accuracy (80% accuracy). [They] can write [their] name from memory (5/7 legible letters). [The Student] can make cuts across paper using regular scissors with staff assistance to cut across a line. [They] can use utensils and drink from a straw. [They] can un/zip [sic] a pre-engaged zipper and wash [their] hands after staff prompting."

vi. Physical Therapy (PT): "[The Student] continues to progress with gross motor skill acquisition and functional mobility in the school setting. [They] can walk within the classroom and down the hall with supervision. [They] can transition from seated on the floor to standing using one hand to push up from the floor. [The Student] can tailor sit on the floor and reach to retrieve items to either side of [them] without losing [their] balance. [The Student] typically ascends stairs using one or two handrails and a reciprocal gait pattern and descends stairs using one or two handrails and a step to gait pattern. [The Student] prefers 2 handrails but with prompting can use only one. [They] will occasionally use [a] reciprocal pattern when descending stairs if given tactile prompts. [The Student] can get into and out of a regular classroom chair or armed wooden chair. [They] can access age appropriate playground equipment with supervision."

vii. Adapted Physical Education (APE): "[The Student] demonstrates notable proficiency in seated activities, where [the Student] excels at ball rolling with perfect accuracy at 5-foot distances. [They have] developed strong ball control skills, successfully dribbling with [their] feet and bouncing balls to targets with 60% accuracy. [The Student] shows a clear hand dominance (left) and has developed functional strength in both arms and hands. [They are] particularly successful with implement-based activities, showing consistent grip strength and accuracy when striking objects from a seated position. [Their] ability to maintain balance while reaching from a seated position and [their] successful transitions from floor to standing indicate good core strength and body awareness. These capabilities provide a strong foundation for continued physical development."

viii. Speech: "[The Student] has been a joy to work with this year. [The Student] continues to work hard during speech sessions. [They have] been using [their] high tech communication system to request and comment during speech sessions. [They] can consistently generate "I+want+object" with 75% accuracy given maximum prompts from the [speech language pathologist] (SLP) for each response. [The Student] prefers to repeatedly point to only one picture but has generated 3 words when modeled. [They] can follow simple directions given by the SLP but sometimes can get distracted by others in the room. We have continue [sic] to encourage [the Student] to use verbal output but [the Student] continues to prefer using [their] high tech communication device."

c. Goals:

i. Speech: "By the next annual IEP, during small group or one-on-one activities, [the Student] will use total communication including but not limited to gestures, high/low tech AAC, and verbal speech to improve functional communication for a variety of purposes (requesting, commenting, describing and stating emotion), with 60% accuracy and with decreased reliance on prompting by SLP and/or teacher, as measured by SLP data and observation."

1. Benchmark 3: "[The Student] will use total communication including but not limited to gestures, high/low tech AAC, and verbal speech to improve functional communication for a variety of purposes (requesting, commenting, describing and stating emotion), with 60% accuracy and with no more than 3 prompts."
2. Benchmark 4: "[The Student] will use total communication including but not limited to gestures, high/low tech AAC, and verbal speech to improve functional communication for a variety of purposes (requesting, commenting, describing and stating emotion), with 60% accuracy and with no more than one prompt."

ii. Adapted PE: "By next annual IEP, while receiving individualized standards-based instruction, [the Student] will improve [their] gross motor skills with 60% accuracy, as measured by teacher observation and data."

1. Benchmark 3: By October 17, 2025, "By the next quarter, [the Student] will strike a suspended object with an implement from a standing position independently, 2 out of 5 trials, as measured by teacher observation and data collection."
2. Benchmark 4: By December 19, 2025, "By the next quarter, [the Student] will strike a suspended object with an implement from a standing position independently with proper follow-through, 3 out of 5 trials, as measured by teacher observation and data collection."

iii. Reading 1: "By next annual IEP, when read a passage/story and given an array of 3 choices, [the Student] can identify illustrations or tactile graphics/objects that reflect aspects of a familiar text, such as setting, characters, or action if it is a story or a person, place, thing, or idea if it is an informational text, with 80% accuracy as measured by teacher data/observation and assessment."

1. Benchmark 3: By October 15, 2025, "By the end of the third nine weeks, when read a passage/story and given an array of 3 choices, [the Student] can identify illustrations or tactile graphics/objects that reflect aspects of a familiar text, such as setting, characters, or action if it is a story or a person, place, thing, or idea if it is an informational text, with 70% accuracy as measured by teacher data/observation and assessment."
2. Benchmark 4: By December 15, 2025, "By next annual IEP, when read a passage/story and given an array of 3 choices, [the Student] can identify illustrations or tactile graphics/objects that reflect aspects of a familiar text, such as setting, characters, or action if it is a story or a person, place, thing, or idea if it is an informational text, with 80% accuracy as measured by teacher data/observation and assessment."

iv. Reading 2: "By next annual IEP, when read a passage, demonstrate an understanding of text while actively engaged in shared reading of a history/social studies, science, and technical texts/story, [the Student] will demonstrate an understanding of text while actively engaged in shared reading of a history/social studies, science, and technical texts with 80% accuracy as measured by teacher data/observation and assessment."

1. Benchmark 3: By October 15, 2025, "By the end of the third nine weeks, when read a passage, [the Student] will demonstrate an understanding of text while actively engaged in shared reading of a history/social studies, science, and technical texts with 65% accuracy as measured by teacher data/observation and assessment."
2. Benchmark 4: By December 15, 2025, "By next annual IEP, when read a passage, demonstrate an understanding of text while actively engaged in shared reading of a history/social studies, science, and technical texts/story, [the Student] will demonstrate an understanding of text while actively engaged in shared reading of a history/social studies, science, and technical texts with 80% accuracy as measured by teacher data/observation and assessment."

v. Math 1: "By the next annual IEP, when given visuals/pictures, [the Student] will extend the sequence of a non-numeric pattern by selecting an object/picture to show what appears next in a pattern through an active participation response with 80% accuracy as measured by a teacher data/observation/assessment."

1. Benchmark 3: By October 15, 2025, "By the third nine weeks, when given visuals/pictures, [the Student] will extend the sequence of a non-numeric pattern by selecting an object/picture to show what appears next in a pattern through an active participation response with 60% accuracy as measured by a teacher data/observation/assessment."
2. Benchmark 4: By December 15, 2025, "By the next annual IEP, when given visuals/pictures, [the Student] will extend the sequence of a non-numeric pattern by selecting an object/picture to show what appears next in a pattern through an active participation response with 80% accuracy as measured by a teacher data/observation/assessment."

vi. Math 2: "By the next annual IEP, when given guidance and objects/pictures, [the Student] will represent and interpret data on a picture or bar graph, with 80% accuracy as measured by a [sic] teacher data/observation/assessment."

1. Benchmark 3: By October 15, 2025, "By the third nine weeks, when given guidance and objects/pictures, [the Student] will represent and interpret data on a picture or bar graph, with 60% accuracy as measured by a [sic] teacher data/observation/assessment."
2. Benchmark 4: By December 15, 2025, "By the next annual IEP, when given guidance and objects/pictures, [the Student] will represent and interpret data on a picture or bar graph, with 80% accuracy as measured by a [sic] teacher data/observation/assessment."

vii. Social: "By next annual IEP, when [the Student] requires assistance, [they] will independently seek help from adults when needed in 3 out of 4 opportunities with 80% accuracy as measured by teacher data/observation and assessment."

1. Benchmark 3: By October 15, 2025, "By the third nine weeks, when [the Student] requires assistance, [they] will independently seek help from adults when needed in 3 out of 4 opportunities with 60% accuracy as measured by teacher data/observation and assessment."
2. Benchmark 4: "By next annual IEP, when [the Student] requires assistance, [they] will independently seek help from adults when needed in 3 out of 4 opportunities with 80% accuracy as measured by teacher data/observation and assessment."

d. Specially Designed Instruction (SDI), Related Services, and Least Restrictive Environment:

i. 2024-25 school year: "[The Student] will receive special education services in a self contained setting without non-exceptional peers for all core academic areas to work on [their] IEP goals, functional academics, curriculum based on extended state standards, and daily living skills. This will be served through a Mixed abilities classroom. These services will be for 300 minutes two days per week, 315 minutes one day per week, 305 minutes one day every week, and 300 minutes one day every 2 weeks, 285 minutes one day every 2 weeks. [The Student] will receive special education services in a general education setting with non-exceptional peers for 90 minutes three days per week and 45 minutes two days per week for all specials classes, including art, PE, music, library, and tech lab. [They] will receive 40 minutes of attendant care services beyond [their] instructional day for lunch and recess."

ii. 2025-26 school year: "[The Student] will receive special education services in a self contained setting without non-exceptional peers for all core academic areas to work on [their] IEP goals, functional academics, curriculum based on extended state standards, and daily living skills. This will be served through a Mixed abilities classroom. These services will be for 310 minutes four days a week every 3 of 4 weeks, 295 minutes one day every 1 of 4 weeks. [The Student] will attend exploratory classes for 80 minutes five days per week with para[educator] support in a general education setting with non-exceptional peers. [They] will receive 40 minutes of attendant care services beyond [their] instructional day for lunch, restroom, transitions."

iii. "Occupational therapy will be a direct service 15 minutes 1x every 4 weeks either individual or group session, inside or outside [the Student's] classroom setting within the school calendar year."

iv. "[The Student] will receive indirect physical therapy for 15 minutes per month."

v. "[The Student] will receive a total of 30 minutes of speech and language services inside of the special education classroom each week. Typically that will be served as two 15 minute sessions, but that could vary based on scheduling."

e. Accommodations and Modifications, beginning January 24, 2025:

i. Read aloud, as needed, in classroom settings, for the duration of the assignment or assessment.

ii. Communication book/device, anytime communication is needed, in all locations, throughout the day.

iii. Wait time, as needed, in classroom settings, throughout the day.

iv. Scribe, as needed, in classroom settings, for the duration of the assignment or assessment.

v. Visual supports, throughout the day, in classroom settings, throughout the day.

vi. Repeated directions, as needed, in classroom settings, throughout the day.

vii. Slant writing board, as needed, in classroom settings, throughout the day.

f. The Student was eligible for extended year services.

2. On March 12, 2025, the District sent a school assignment letter to the Parent. For the 2025-26 school year, the Student was assigned to the Middle School for sixth grade.

3. An Extended School Year (ESY) Attendance chart showed the ESY was held June 02, 2025 through July 10, 2025. The Student was absent on June 19, 2025 and July 3, 2025 for therapy.

4. A progress report dated July 10, 2025 indicated the following relevant information:

a. Progress codes:

i. 1 - N/A - Your child did not work on this goal during the reporting period (see required note).

ii. 2 - No - Progress is not sufficient to meet this goal by the annual IEP. Goal, Instructional strategies and/or student supports need to be reviewed.

iii. 3 - Prog - Progress has been made towards the goal, but the goal may not be met by the annual IEP. The goal, instructional strategies and student support may need to be reviewed.

iv. 4 - Yes - Progress has been made towards reaching the goal by the annual IEP.

v. 5 - Met- Performance is at or above what is required. The goal has been met.

5. A 2025-26 school year OT Attendance Calendar and provider log indicated the Student received OT services for 15 minutes every four weeks from August 19, 2025 through January 9, 2026. A note on the calendar for January 15, 2026 reported "IEP-OT now indirect[.]" The log showed OT consultations on February 10, 2026 and March 4, 2026.
6. A 2025-26 SLP Calendar and provider log reported the Student received speech-language services approximately twice a week, for 15 minutes per session, August 19, 2025 through March 24, 2026.
7. An APE Service Calendar indicated the Student participated in APE approximately twice a week August 25, 2025 through January 21, 2026. The Student had a medical procedure and began participating again in March 2026. Progress with walking up and down stairs was noted on October 29, 2025. Notes written on the document reported the Student stayed at least an extra ten minutes after class two to three times a month. The notes did not indicate why the Student stayed longer.
8. Staffing Calendars for October 2025 through December 2025 recorded Teacher 1 as absent October 7, and October 9, 2025 through March 23, 2026. The same calendars recorded Teacher 2 as absent October 3 through October 7, October 13, October 30 and 31, November 7, and November 13, 2025 through March 23, 2026. There is no data after March 23, 2026. These same documents indicated a "Paraeducator Classroom Supervisor" was assigned to one or both of the classrooms for 13 days in October 2025, six days in November 2025, four days in December 2025, seven days in January 2026, zero days in February 2026, and zero day of March 2026 during the complaint period.
9. On October 21, 2025, Teacher 1 emailed subplans to the IEP Manager for the week of October 20, 2025. Plans covered activities for hours one, two, four, five, seven, and eight for the range of days Monday through Thursday.

10. A letter from the IEP Manager to "MA families," sent out by the Principal on November 18, 2025, let the families of the students in the MA program know the IEP Manager would be "stepping in to support the MA classroom full-time through December 1st [2025]." The IEP Manager explained "I have been asked to support the program at this time because both of the current Mixed Abilities Special Education teachers are out on medical leave. Administration anticipates they will receive an update on their return dates prior to Thanksgiving break. However, even after they do return, I will continue to be involved in the classroom on a half-time basis for the remainder of the school year. This will help provide ongoing continuity for students and families."
11. An undated progress report indicated the following relevant information:
    a. Progress codes:
        i. 1 - N/A - Your child did not work on this goal during the reporting period (see required note).
        ii. 2 - No - Progress is not sufficient to meet this goal by the annual IEP. The goal, instructional strategies and/or student support need to be reviewed.
        iii. 3 - Prog - Progress has been made towards the goal, but the goal may not be met by the annual IEP. The goal, instructional strategies and student support may need to be reviewed.
        iv. 4 - Yes - Progress has been made towards reaching the goal by the annual IEP.
        v. 5 - Met- Performance is at or above what is required. The goal has been met.
    b. Speech:
        i. October 2025: Progress 4, Score "60% accuracy with more than 5 prompts."
        ii. December 2025: Progress 4, Score "70% accuracy with more than 5 prompts."
    c. Adapted PE:
        i. October 2025: Progress "3 of 5", Score 5.
        ii. December 2025: Progress "4 of 5", Score 5.
    d. Reading 1:
        i. October 2025: Progress 4, Score "60%."
        ii. December 2025: Progress 4, Score "75%."
    e. Reading 2:
        i. October 2025: Progress 4, Score "40%."
        ii. December 2025: Progress 4, Score "55%."
    f. Math 1:

i. October 2025: Progress 4, Score "25%."

ii. December 2025: Progress 4, Score "30%."

g. Math 2:

i. October 2025: Progress 4, Score "30%."

ii. December 2025: Progress 4, "Score 50%."

h. Social:

i. October 2025: Progress 3, Score "50%."

ii. December 2025: Progress 3, Score "50%."

12. Handwritten data sheets reported "Quarter 2[,] 25-26" progress monitoring for:

a. Reading 1, monitored between November 18, 2025 and February 19, 2026.

b. Reading 2, monitored between December 9, 2025 and March 25, 2026.

13. A Student Contact Log indicated on November 11, 2025, the Special Education Area Director returned the Parent's phone call to the Assistant Superintendent of Student Support Services' office. They discussed the Student's needs and the "current status of the MA classroom." The Parent offered "if [they] needed to be part of the discussion towards solutions, they would be happy to."

14. In an email exchange between the Parent and the School Board, the Superintendent, and the Assistant Superintendent of Student Support Services dated from December 15, 2025 to January 24, 2026:

a. On December 15, 2025, the Parent thanked the Board for letting them speak at a board meeting. They expressed their ongoing frustration with the lack of a consistent teacher in the Student's classroom and detailed growing concerns around the Student's behavior. The Parent questioned the value of holding the Student's upcoming annual IEP meeting without a dedicated teacher. They asked that the District seek more input from parents with students in the MA program.

b. The Superintendent responded on December 17, 2025 to share that the need for more special education teachers was State-wide, and the District had implemented incentives for teachers to gain special education training. They indicated they would reach out to the staff at the Middle School to relay the Parent's concerns about the upcoming IEP meeting. The Superintendent informed the Parent that improved and expanded methods for parents to provide feedback to the District were forthcoming, and encouraged the Parent to apply for a position with the District.

c. On January 11, 2026, the Parent emailed again to express disappointment the Student's teacher had not yet returned to the classroom. They informed the Superintendent "I did apply to be on the special needs advisory council. I appreciate the opportunity to apply." The Parent went on to inquire about a previous District decision to remove MA classes from certain schools. They stated "With fewer schools to place those in MA, I believe the teachers are overwhelmed." Further, they asserted "I think the larger class sizes are making it worse for the teachers. It would be a very challenging, sometimes difficult, job with smaller classes and now I think in some regards it is more like a glorified daycare. Yes there is learning happening but not as much as they should be."

d. The Assistant Superintendent of Student Support Services replied on January 12, 2026. They reported "[The IEP Manager was] leading the teaching, lesson planning, and sharing IEP management with another special education teacher at [the Middle School]. For the past several months, we have also assigned a Qualified Behavior Interventionist to support our students in Mixed Abilities at [the Middle School]. Finally, we have moved an additional paraeducator allocation to the MA programs at [the Middle School] to help address needs related to these absences." The Assistant Superintendent of Student Support Services indicated the Middle School classroom size was among the lowest in the District, and thanked the Parent for their feedback.

e. The Parent responded on January 14, 2026 to reiterate the Student was regressing, and questioned why the District was filling the teacher position on a week-by-week basis.

f. On January 24, 2026, the Parent reached out again to inform the group "We had [the Student's] IEP last week and it's now documented that [they] in fact [have] regressed this year. We still don't have our teachers back and the frustration continues." They again questioned the District's decision to reduce the number of MA classes across the District.

15. [Physical Therapy] Log Notes and Data reported the Student received direct PT services on January 7, February 4, and March 11, 2026. It was noted the Student had foot surgery prior to the February 4, 2026 sessions, and the therapist gave recommendations for staff to support the Student's recovery.

16. A Notice of Meeting reported an annual review IEP meeting was scheduled for January 15, 2026.

17. The Student's January 15, 2026 IEP contained the following relevant information:

a. Eligibility remained under intellectual disability.

b. Present level of performance in Reading, Math, Writing , and Occupational Therapy remained functionally stable. Updates included:

i. Social/Emotional: "[The Student] demonstrates several social-emotional strengths within both structured and semi-structured school environments. [They are] generally a happy and pleasant student who enjoys greeting familiar peers and adults, often seeking appropriate physical connection (such as touching an adult's arm to ask for a hug). [The Student] responds positively to supportive interactions and readily accepts help from peers and staff during activities. [The Student] participates more consistently in small group settings when routines are predictable and visually supported, and [the Student] often follows along with peer play at recess and enjoys being included in group activities. In structured settings such as music, [the Student] demonstrates strong emotional regulation, appears engaged, and transitions smoothly with adult guidance. [The Student] continues to show gradual growth in [their] ability to participate in classroom groups, regulate [their] emotions, and respond to social opportunities when provided with familiar expectations and supportive communication partners."

ii. PT: "[The Student] demonstrates gross motor skills that support [their] ability to access the educational environment. [They] can ambulate throughout the classroom and hallway with appropriate supervision. [The Student] does employ a slower cadence with bilateral out-toeing gait pattern. [They] can transition on/off the floor and in/out of [their] regular classroom chair/desk. [They] can pick up items from the floor and carry items in one or both hands. [The Student] ascends stairs using a reciprocal gait and one handrail. [They] will typically descend stairs using a step-to gait when only one handrail is available. When given bilateral handrails or hand support, [they] will descend stairs using a reciprocal gait and 1-2 tactile cues. [The Student] consistently wears bilateral SMO's [supramalleolar orthosis]."

iii. Speech: "[The Student] is a non-verbal communicator who uses a high-tech voice output communication device to communicate in the education setting. [They have] also been noted to use vocalizations and some gestures. [The Student] is currently able to report how [they are] feeling, and can engage in some structured and non-structured communication tasks using [their] device. When asked questions about a specific topic (i.e., holidays, football, etc.), [the Student] is able to use [their] device to provide an appropriate response. [The Student] benefits from verbal cues and encouragement and pointing models on [their] device."

c. Parent concerns: "Parents are very concerned about the current learning at middle school. They feel like [the Student] is backwards with bathroom training. They are also concerned with the number of notes they get home about [the Student] not wanting to work. This is a new behavior. They feel like the lack of consistency this year has negatively impacted [the Student]! They have questions about how often is [the Student] using [their] talker[?] Is [the Student] participating in class activities, and how [the Student] interacts with [their] peers[?] They would like [the Student] to make improvements with Reading, Math, keyboarding. OT- Buttons, Speech using [their] talker, trying words and writing."

i. Speech: "By the next annual IEP, during small group or one-on-one activities, [the Student] will use total communication including but not limited to gestures, high/low tech AAC, and verbal speech to improve functional communication for a variety of purposes (requesting, commenting, describing and stating emotion), in 75% of opportunities and with minimum verbal cues/prompts by SLP and/or teacher, as measured by SLP data and observation."

1. Benchmark 1: By March 13, 2026, "By the next annual IEP, during small group or one-on-one activities, [the Student] will use total communication including but not limited to gestures, high/low tech AAC, and verbal speech to improve functional communication for a variety of purposes (requesting, commenting, describing and stating emotion), in 60% of opportunities and with minimum verbal cues/prompts by SLP and/or teacher, as measured by SLP data and observation."

ii. Adapted PE: "By next annual IEP, while receiving individualized standards-based instruction, [the Student] will improve [their] gross motor skills with 100% accuracy, as measured by teacher observation and data."

1. Benchmark 1: By March 13, 2026, "By the third nine weeks, [the Student] will demonstrate skipping, sliding and hopping on 1 foot, 1 of 5 tries, as measured by teacher observation and data collection."

iii. Reading 1: "Within this IEP [t]imeline when given a familiar story or classroom video and 4 picture-step cards, [the Student] will sequence events in logical order with 75% accuracy across 4/5 opportunities as measured by classroom data collection."

1. Benchmark 1: By March 13, 2026, "Within this IEP [t]imeline [g]iven a familiar story or classroom video and 4 picture-step cards, [the Student] will sequence events in logical order with 25 % accuracy across 4/5 opportunities as measured by classroom data collection."

iv. Reading 2: "During this IEP year, when given visual letter cards or digital choices (array of 2-3) [the Student] will identify the sounds associated with the consonant and short vowel letters with 80% accuracy across 4/5 sessions as measured by teacher-made probes and work samples"

1. Benchmark 1: By March 13, 2026, "During this IEP year given visual letter cards or digital choices (array of 2-3) [the Student] will identify the sounds associated with the consonant and short vowel letters with 20% accuracy across 4/5 sessions as measured by teacher-made probes and work samples."

v. Math 1: "By the next annual IEP, when given visuals/pictures, [the Student] will extend the sequence of a non-numeric pattern by selecting an object/picture to show what appears next in a pattern through an active participation response with 80% accuracy as measured by a [sic] teacher data/observation/assessment."

1. Benchmark 1: By March 13, 2026, "By the first nine weeks, when given visuals/pictures, [the Student] will extend the sequence of a non-numeric pattern by selecting an object/picture to show what appears next in a pattern through an active participation response with 20% accuracy as measured by a [sic] teacher data/observation/assessment."

vi. Math 2: "Within this IEP time frame, when given manipulatives, pictures, or digital supports, [the Student] will solve simple addition problems within 10 with visual modeling getting 70% accuracy over 4/5 sessions by work samples and instructional records."

1. Benchmark 1: By March 13, 2026, "Within this IEP time frame given manipulatives, pictures, or digital supports, [the Student] will solve simple addition problems within 10 with visual modeling getting 10% accuracy over 4/5 sessions by work samples and instructional records."

vii. Social Skills: Removed.

e. Specially Designed Instruction, Related Services, and Least Restrictive Environment, from January 15, 2026 to January 14, 2027:

i. "For the remainder of the 2025-2026 and the 2026-2027 school year, [the Student] will receive special education services in a self[-]contained setting without non-exceptional peers for all core academic areas to work on [their] IEP goals, functional academics, curriculum based on extended state standards, and daily living skills. This will be served through a Mixed Abilities classroom. These services will be for 310 minutes four days a week every 3 of 4 weeks, 295 minutes one day every 1 of 4 weeks."

ii. "[The Student] will attend exploratory classes for 80 minutes five days per week with para[educator] support in a general education setting with [sic][.] For the 2025-26 school year, [the Student] will receive special education services in a self[-] contained setting without non-exceptional peers for all core academic areas to work on [their] IEP goals, functional academics, curriculum based on extended state standards, and daily living skills. This will be served through a Mixed Abilities classroom. These services will be for 310 minutes four days a week every 3 of 4 weeks, 295 minutes one day every 1 of 4 weeks. [The Student] will attend exploratory classes for 80 minutes five days per week with para[educator] support in a general education setting with non-exceptional peers. [The Student] will receive 40 minutes of attendant care services beyond [their] instructional day for lunch, restroom, transitions."

iii. "[The Student] will receive indirect occupational therapy for 10 minutes every 4 weeks to support school-related fine motor, bilateral hand and self-help needs."

iv. "[The Student] will receive indirect physical therapy for 15 minutes per month."

v. "[The Student] will receive a total of 30 minutes of speech and language services inside of the special education classroom each week. Typically that will be served as two 15 minute sessions, but that could vary based on scheduling."

f. Accommodations and Modifications remained the same, beginning January 15, 2026.

g. The Student remained eligible for ESY.

18. The following email exchange between the Parent and the Superintendent and the Assistant Superintendent of Student Support Services occurred from February 6 to February 26, 2026:

a. On February 6, 2026, the Parent emailed the Superintendent and the Assistant Superintendent of Student Support Services. The Parent shared the assigned teachers had not yet returned, explaining "the principal indicated that it's kind of a week by week basis which is extremely frustrating." They reiterated concerns about the Student's regression, and expressed "hesitation" at enrolling the Student at the Middle School the following year. The Parent reported the MA program classrooms had been moved to the basement of the Middle School, which was the only area of the Middle School without an elevator. They stated the Student recently had toe surgery, had a cast, and was using a walker, which made taking the stairs difficult. The Parent expressed liability concerns and praised the Middle School MA staff for their "phenomenal job helping [the Student] navigate[.]" The Parent expressed frustration around not getting updates on the teacher assignment situation, and shared again they applied to the special needs committee.

b. The Assistant Superintendent of Student Support Services responded on February 9, 2026 to share they had drafted an earlier response to the Parent's inquiries, and apologized for failing to send it. They stated they had received the Parent's communications, confirmed they responded to an email on January 12, 2026, and noted they had consulted with other staff members who were also in contact with the Parent. The Assistant Superintendent of Student Support Services stated "We make our responses a team effort, but I'm sorry if it appears that I have personally been ignoring you." They acknowledged the Parent's frustration that the assigned teachers had not returned and stated no decisions had been made yet for the following school year. They offered to assist the Parent in "exploring other buildings." The Assistant Superintendent of Student Support Services reported the relocation of the classrooms was "done collaboratively between the classroom staff and building administration to allow for a more spacious, safe learning environment." They stated they would confer with the Middle School's physical therapy team to "ensure that an appropriate space is available to [the Student]." Finally, the Assistant Superintendent of Student Support Services thanked the Parent for their participation in the District.

c. The Parent replied on February 14, 2026. They shared they had emailed the previous school year to express disappointment when the MA program was removed from the Student's Elementary School. The Parent told the Assistant Superintendent of Student Support Services "truly it seemed like you didn't care" when the Parent did not receive a response to their concerns. The Parent stated "The answer to your question is we'd love to request that [the Student] go back to [Elementary School]. [They were] thriving there and we still believe that taking MA out of [Elementary School] was a mistake." The Parent reported the assigned teachers had still not returned, and expressed the Student was "suffering and [their] IEP reflects it." The Parent reiterated "[The Student] had made such strides at [Elementary School] and to see [them] regress is very difficult. Please reconsider putting MA back at [Elementary School] and letting [the Student] go back there."

d. On February 23, 2026, the Assistant Superintendent of Student Support Services responded to the Parent "We have noted your desire for Mixed Abilities to return to [Elementary School]. Knowing that we have that request documented, if there comes a point where you wish to request a different building for 2026-27 which currently has a Mixed Abilities program, please feel free to let us know."

e. The Parent responded the same day by asking "What is the reason MA was removed from certain schools?"

f. The Assistant Superintendent of Student Support Services replied on February 26, 2026 "The reason we do not currently have Mixed Abilities at [Elementary School] is due to a lack of physical space (this became an issue when the building was converted to a PreK-8th grade setting)."

19. A progress report dated March 24, 2026 indicated the following relevant information:

a. Progress codes:

i. 1 - N/A - Your child did not work on this goal during the reporting period (see required note).

ii. 2 - No - Progress is not sufficient to meet this goal by the annual IEP. The goal, instructional strategies and/or student support need to be reviewed.

iii. 3 - Prog - Progress has been made towards the goal, but the goal may not be met by the annual IEP. The goal, instructional strategies and student support may need to be reviewed.

iv. 4 - Yes - Progress has been made towards reaching the goal by the annual IEP.

v. 5 - Met- Performance is at or above what is required. The goal has been met.

b. Speech:

i. March 24, 2026: Progress 4, Score "Using high tech AAC device: Requesting and commenting 60% with 5 prompts using moderate verbal cues."

c. Adapted PE:

i. March 24, 2026: Progress 1, with a comment the Student had been out due to surgery recovery.

d. Reading 1:

i. March 24, 2026: Progress 3, Score 15%, with comment "[The Student] was completing [the] previous goal. [They] completed that on 02/19/2026. We started working on this goal after completion. [The Student's] average is still 15%."

e. Reading 2:

i. March 24, 2026: For Mastery, Progress 1, Score 20%, with a comment "[The Student] is inconsistent with this skill." For the short term objective, Progress 4, Score 20%, with a comment "[The Student] is working on this skill. But has shown more independence with this skill."

f. Math 1:

i. March 24, 2026: Progress 3, Score 10%, with comment "[The Student] does this better with 1:1 help to stay on task."

g. Math 2:

i. March 24, 2026: Progress 4, Score 10%, with comment "Making progress needs to be engaged more in the work."

20. A class schedule dated March 26, 2026, reported the assigned primary teacher for the Student was Teacher 1. The Student had Teacher 2 for Math Adapted and Science Adapted. Handwritten notes on the document indicated the Paraeducator spent the most time with the Student.

21. A 2025-26 report card indicated the following:

a. Quarter 1:

i. Tier 3 Math grade: P

1. Score 2 in one out of one assignments.

ii. Social Studies 6 grade: B

1. Score 2.5 in seven out seven assignments.

iii. Language Arts 6 Grade: B

1. Score 2.5 in seven out seven assignments.

iv. Physical Education 1 grade: A

1. Score 3.5 in one of 11 assignments, score 3 in ten of 11 assignments.

v. Explorations in Art grade: c

1. Score 2 in three out of three assignments.

vi. Tier 2 Literacy Decoding grade: P

1. Score 3 in three out of three assignments.

vii. Math 6 Adapted Grade: c

1. No score. Comments report "Lack of interest/attention in class."

viii. Science 6 Adapted grade: A

1. Score 3 in one out of one assignments.

b. Quarter 2/Semester 1:

i. Tier 3 math grade: P

1. No scores and no assignments listed.

ii. Social Studies 6 grade: A

1. Scores and assignments the same as Quarter 1.

iii. Language Arts 6 grade: A

1. Scores and assignments the same as Quarter 1.

iv. Explorations in Art grade: C

1. Score 2 in three out of three assignments.

v. Physical Education 1 grade: A

1. Score 3 in four out of four assignments.

vi. Tier 2 Literacy Decoding grade: P

1. Score 3, no assignments listed.

vii. Math 6 Adapted grade: A

1. Score 3, no assignments listed.

viii. Science 6 Adapted grade: A

1. Score and assignment the same as Quarter 1.

c. Quarter 3:

i. Tier 3 Math grade: P

ii. Social Studies 6 grade: A

iii. Language Arts 6 grade: A

iv. Physical Education 1 grade: A

v. Visual Arts grade: A

vi. T2 Literacy Decoding grade: P

vii. Math 6 Adapted grade: A

viii. Science 6 Adapted grade: A

d. Scoring Rubric:

i. 1- Emerging

ii. 2- Developing

iii. 3- Mastery

iv. 4- Advanced

v. P-Passing[1.1][1.2][1.3]

22. According to an undated Sub Binder document belonging to Teacher 1, students worked on "goals work" located in the "white binder" during their first hour block.

23. On March 17, 2026, the Parent filed the Complaint.

Parent Interview

24. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Parent and Parent 2 shared their observations of the educational impact of the absent teachers on the Student. They shared "[The Student] thrives on consistency[.]" They perceived the lack of consistency at the Middle School resulted in regression for the Student. The Parent expressed "None of them, even … [the] two main teachers have gotten to know [the Student] and to work with [them] on a consistent basis … . And [the Student] needs that consistency." The Parent reported, "We have never had anyone tell us that [the Student] refuses to work in class until this year, or … that [the Student] needs more prompting to do the work or that [the Student] needs more guidance … ." The Parent attributed this behavior to the lack of a consistent licensed teacher in the classroom. Additionally, they expressed concerns over a substitute knowing "what's normal and what's not."

25. The Parent shared concern regarding staff qualifications. They questioned the special education training of the substitutes, and acknowledged the IEP Manager was providing lesson plans that the paraeducators and substitutes implemented. The Parent stated, "[Paraeducators] might be trained in special needs and have some training working with them, but they're not licensed. They don't have the education and the training and the licenses that teachers do." The Parent also stated, "Because [the Student] never knew who was going to be there on any given day when [they] showed up, [the Student] has really, really regressed."

26. Regarding SDI, the Parent shared while they had received progress reports, they were not getting daily updates on the Student's schoolwork. They expressed, "We don't know on a daily basis if there's even a teacher in the room, quite honestly. And I don't know how the teachers, if there is one there, are taking what is in the IEP and implementing it." Parent 2 reiterated the Student "doesn't get papers every day," and indicated schoolwork was sent home "every couple of weeks or every month." The Parent shared they received daily notes from the Paraeducator about the Student's demeanor, "[b]ut we don't get reports as to what they're doing [in class]." They thought primarily the paraeducators were conducting SDI, and expressed concern there might not always be a licensed teacher in the classroom when students are present. The Parent believed the class size was too large and shared, "I don't feel like [the Student is] getting direct one-to-one with a licensed [teacher] in mixed abilities or special needs teacher. … [The Student] may be getting a lot of one-on-one time with [paraeducators]. They're not licensed." They stated, "I can tell you that their IEP has a number of specific minutes that they're supposed to spend with teachers. I feel 100% confident that those minutes have not been met this year because they've been lacking teachers." The Parent and Parent 2 repeatedly expressed they were unaware of daily classroom activities and lessons.

27. The Parent identified regression in the Student's counting ability. They shared during the 2024-25 school year, the Student was able to count to 40. In the 2025-26 school year, the Parent observed the Student was only able to count to 20. They also expressed concern the Student had not yet brought home a library book in the 2025-26 school year. The Parent shared the Student "likes to be read to."

28. Regarding the physical location of the Student, the Parent described the MA program classrooms as being moved to "a basement. It's down a half flight of stairs … in three classrooms. No other students are in that area as far as general ed[ucation]." They stated the LEA asserted the basement was "[t]he only space they had in the building that could accommodate [the MA program]." The Parent shared there was no elevator to the area, only the stairs. They reported the Student needed additional assistance to navigate the stairs after a foot surgery, but was generally able to use the stairs without issue.

29. Regarding LRE, the Parent explained they and Parent 2 "fought tooth and nail" to keep the Student at their Elementary School when it was announced the Elementary School would become a pre-kindergarten to eighth-grade school. The Parent stated the Student had been at the Elementary School for seven years and was "thriving" there. They disagreed with the LEA's decision to remove the MA program from the Elementary School when the format changed. The Parent claimed the LEA did not ask for parent input when making the decision and perceived the shift as "a horrible mistake." They expressed "[The LEA] has turned the mixed abilities classrooms into glorified daycare centers." The Parent noted they had shared their concerns with the Assistant Superintendent of Student Support Services, and felt dismissed.

30. The Parents described aggressive behaviors the Student began exhibiting after starting at the Middle School. They acknowledged some of those behaviors may be due to natural physiological changes, and noted they were considering autism testing, however, they asserted the behaviors did not start until the Student changed schools. The Parent indicated the staff at the Middle School had not observed the behaviors at the same level the Parents were seeing in their home, and advised the Parent the behaviors may be due to the Student becoming a teenager.

31. Regarding bathroom accidents, the Parents shared the Student needs to be prompted to use the bathroom "every hour on the hour … [o]r at least every two to three hours," and they keep the Student on a schedule at home. They stated they shared this information with Teacher 1 at the beginning of the year. The Parent reported "For a while there … we were getting wet clothes home quite a bit because they didn't have the staff there to get [the Student] to the bathroom as [they] needed."
32. The Parent and Parent 2 repeatedly praised the Middle School staff and asserted their concerns were at the LEA level. The Parent expressed "It feels like from my communications with [the LEA], … it doesn't feel like they care."

IEP Manager Interview

33. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the IEP Manager stated "I took over [the MA program] till December 1, [2025] and what I did is organize the classrooms, made sure we had all the data collection from the first quarter and that we could move it to the second quarter." They explained part of their role in the LEA was "making sure that we were collecting the right data … and … were providing … the right instructions for each student, [and] also for the group."
34. The IEP Manager reported their regular schedule for their role placed them at the Middle School "half day every day of the week." They said they primarily worked there in the morning, but the exact timing could shift depending on the needs of their other assigned schools.
35. Regarding teacher absences, the IEP Manager indicated they worked with the paraeducators and general education staff to make sure everyone was aware of the MA program students's needs. They stated they spoke with and emailed all the teachers to make them aware of MA program students' goals. The IEP Manager reported they met with each paraeducator individually to discuss each student. They shared they met with the paraeducators at the Middle School as a group every morning.
36. Regarding substitutes, the IEP Manager indicated they expected each substitute to "read the IEP at a glance for each student … then I would go over specific things for each student." They explained there was a "book" in the classroom that contained the IEP at a Glance, with goals, accommodations, and behavior plans if applicable, for each student in the classroom. They shared the substitutes had access to the book, and were welcome to ask them any questions as well.
37. The IEP Manager explained several other members of school staff and administrators were available throughout the day on a regular basis to assist with the needs of the MA program. They reported the Assistant Principal, the Social Worker, the School Psychologist, and others "in charge of the behavior part of it" regularly checked in on the program. The IEP Manager indicated each of these people was familiar with the students and their IEPs.

38. The IEP Manager described instruction in the MA program as "For each student, we have a little book for the individual work." For group instruction, they reported the program utilized an online and disability-accessible current events newspaper. They indicated any one assigned to supervise a classroom used the same district curriculum, whether it was the assigned teacher, a paraeducator, or a substitute.
39. Regarding SDI, the IEP Manager stated "[The students] have their goals and then I would check with the [paraeducators] and we would create the work that they're going to do individually, and the [paraeducators] would collect a lot of the data." The IEP Manager reported they would occasionally spot check data to make sure it was being recorded uniformly and the paraeducators working with the Student maintained consistency. The IEP Manager gave the paraeducators in the program sheets to use for data tracking, and they used that information to fill out progress reports. They indicated they also used classwork and assessments as data points. The IEP Manager acknowledged they did not document their daily check ins with the paraeducators.
40. The IEP Manager shared they believed changes in the Student's behavior were age appropriate, having more to do with the transition from elementary to middle school, the physical changing of buildings and meeting new staff, and general changes of puberty, than a lack of consistency in teaching staff. They described the Student's behavior as "not atypical of any kid … going to middle school."

Principal Interview

41. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator and the Special Education Director, the Principal indicated the MA program teachers at the Middle School were both on leave due to injuries. They explained the Worker's Compensation process and how that impacted the ability to hire a long-term substitute. The Principal reported they do not make decisions about hiring substitutes, which happens at the LEA level. They shared, "We were just waiting for more information until the [LEA] made the decision to move more to a long-term situation."
42. Regarding substitute qualifications and training, the Principal reported, "If they're on our list we get of who's taking the position … then we know those are … vetted in our qualified subs from the district." They stated, "I'm not sure what formal training occurs outside of my control at the local building level." The Principal shared at the building level, substitutes get a lesson plan, information on the assigned classroom, and in the case of special education, access to the students' IEPs and associated documents. They indicated long-term substitutes are expected to attend staff meetings.
43. The Principal shared their clerical team put together information packets for every substitute in the building on a given day, and they assigned one of the assistant principals to be the liaison with the MA program. They confirmed the IEP Manager was in charge of data collection and assessments for the MA program. They indicated "one of [the Middle School's] instructional coaches" also administered testing.

44. The Principal shared they were active in the lesson planning for the MA program. They reported once they assessed the teachers' absences as long-term, they received permission from the LEA "to stay on top of things so that we could get some of our other special ed[ucation] teachers involved with the lesson planning." The Principal expressed, "We just wanted to make sure that we were providing a quality experience for those kids, regardless of who was in there … ." They indicated they trained themself on the curriculum so they could be of more assistance.
45. The Principal acknowledged the Parent's concerns regarding the Student's behavior, and surmised there may be more behavioral issues at home than at school. The Principal expressed they did not have academic or behavioral concerns for the Student, describing them as "a cool little [person]." They stated any behavior or academic struggles coming up at the School were age-appropriate and typical of the transition between elementary and middle school.
46. During the Principal's interview, the Special Education Director gave additional information. They reported the Student had "moved to another level higher" within the LEA curriculum for all goals except one math goal. The Special Education Director stated, "That may have been an area where Parents might've seen some, what appeared to be regression because between spring and [the Student's] ESY reports, [they] did go backwards there, but then [the Student] continued to make some steady progress through the fall." The Special Education Director indicated the Student continued to improve on the second math goal throughout the school year.
47. The Special Education Director reported staff had been added to the MA program to address parental concerns. The extra staff included a licensed social worker and a paraeducator.
48. Addressing LRE, the Special Education Director explained the LEA's decision to reorganize the MA program at the LEA level due to changes in funding, staffing, and building needs. They further explained the Student's neighborhood school had never contained an MA program, prompting the IEP team to choose the Elementary School for the Student's elementary education. The Special Education Director confirmed the Parent was involved with choosing the Middle School. They indicated the LRE and educational placement in the Student's IEP remained intact when they switched buildings.

Special Education Director Interview

49. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Special Education Director explained the general protocol for teacher absences in the MA program at the Middle School was to have the present teacher supervise both classrooms, with paraeducators stepping in to lead lessons if a substitute was not available. They asserted this was allowed by the agreement between the LEA and the paraeducator's union. The Special Education Director reported the paraeducators were "instructional" and had to "go through a certain amount of training for [the Middle School] to be able to hire them as instructional paraeducators." They expressed, "Special ed[ucation] para[professionals] also know how to carry it out because that's what they do. They know the students."

50. The Special Education Director confirmed the IEP Manager was ultimately responsible for lesson planning and progress monitoring for the MA program at the Middle School. They shared the Special Education Team Lead, a qualified licensed staff member, assisted the IEP Manager with lesson planning. The Special Education Director stated the MA program substitutes and paraeducators were expected to implement SDI and accommodations. They indicated MA program staff had data sheets for progress monitoring. They asserted paraeducators were not expected to make lesson plans, but could create or organize lesson materials.

51. Regarding the IEP Manager's role, the Special Education Director explained, "[The IEP Manager is] there half-time and [their] job is in a supporting role. So [they're] there anyway, but they didn't make [the IEP Manager] substitute for this entire time because then [they] also couldn't support [their] other school." The Special Education Director confirmed the IEP Manager met with staff daily, including MA program paraeducators and substitutes.

Paraeducator Written Statement

52. In a written statement emailed to the Complaint Investigator on April 17, 2026, the Paraeducator provided the following information:

    a. The Student demonstrated skills in reading comprehension of stories read aloud and content from educational videos. They disliked math and were often reluctant to count past ten or complete math tasks. The Student preferred to be left alone and engaged in self-stimulatory behaviors, though the Paraeducator perceived the Student understood the expectation was to complete assigned work. Overall, the Student maintained skill level throughout the 2025-26 school year.

    b. The Student displayed disruptive behaviors, like throwing or pushing items, which significantly improved throughout the 2025-26 school year.

    c. "Data is collected consistently to monitor [the Student's] progress, and [their] work is kept in a folder for documentation purposes. Some work was previously sent home due to a misunderstanding, but efforts are now in place to ensure all work remains at school for data collection."

    d. The Student tended to be independent socially and did not "actively engage with peers." However, they frequently sought sensory input by touching staff and general education students on the arms. The Student enjoyed cooking activities. They did not independently use their AAC device, though staff modeled its use.

e. The Student did not independently indicate a need for the restroom, however, they used a recorded button when prompted. The Student was independent with toileting but required supervision to prevent playing in the toilet.

f. The Paraeducator described the Student as "a kind and enjoyable student." The Paraeducator noted "Given the transition to a new school environment and expectations as a sixth grader, some regression in academic skills might be expected as [the Student] continues to adjust to middle school routines." They stated "[The Student] has not shown noticeable impact from the absence of a consistent classroom teacher."

Positions of the Parties, Applicable Regulations, and Conclusions

Issue One

Whether USD #259, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, implemented the Student's IEP after their primary teachers took a leave of absence in October and November 2025. K.A.R. 91-40-16 (b); 34 CFR § 300.323 (a)(d).

According to K.A.R. 91-40-16 (b) and 34 CFR § 300.323 (a)(d), each agency shall ensure that an IEP is in place for each exceptional child and is implemented as soon as possible following development of the individualized education program. At the beginning of each school year, each local educational agency must have in effect, for each child with a disability within its jurisdiction, an IEP as defined by federal law. The agency shall further ensure that the child's IEP is accessible to each regular education teacher, special education teacher, related services provider, and any other service provider who is responsible for its implementation, and that each teacher and provider is informed of their specific responsibilities related to implementing the child's IEP and the specific accommodations, modifications, and supports that must be provided for the child in accordance with the IEP.

The Parent alleged that the Student's IEP was not being met because there were no trained teachers in the Student's classroom after October 2025.

The LEA stated it implemented the Student's IEP after the Student's primary teachers took a leave of absence in October and November 2025.

The January 2025 IEP mandated 300 minutes of daily specialized instruction in a self-contained setting, 30 minutes of weekly speech therapy, 15 minutes of direct monthly occupational therapy, and 15 minutes of indirect monthly physical therapy. The January 2026 IEP mandated 310 minutes of daily specialized instruction four days a week, and 295 minutes of daily specialized instruction one day a week, in a self-contained setting. It mandated 30 minutes of weekly speech therapy, 10 minutes of indirect monthly occupational therapy, and 15 minutes of indirect monthly physical therapy.

Documentation showed the Student received their ESY services in June and July of 2025. Service logs from October 2025 through March 2026 recorded speech therapy was delivered twice weekly, and occupational therapy was provided every four weeks. Documentation indicated the Student attended Adapted Physical Education approximately twice a week from October 2025 to January 2026, and was on medical excusal for February 2026, returning on restriction in March 2026. Physical Therapy logs reported the Student received 15 minutes of direct services January through March 2026. Progress reports following the benchmark schedule established in the IEP indicated the Student was receiving SDI. Work samples and photographic evidence demonstrated the Student's accommodations were being met.

Teacher 1 and Teacher 2 began leaves of absence on October 7 and November 13, 2025, respectively, leaving the MA program without its assigned teachers through March 2026. The IEP Manager provided full-time support in the classroom until December 1, 2025, and subsequently transitioned to a half-day schedule while paraeducators and rotating substitutes managed the program. Lessons plans provided by the LEA indicated both teachers left reasonable and coherent instructions for substitutes and paraeducators. The Student's daily schedule reported they were assigned a paraeducator for every period of the school day as well as for recess, lunch, and toileting assistance. Administrators corroborated that additional staff were allocated to the MA program during the teachers' absence. Documentation suggested there were no gaps in adult supervision.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to fully implement the Student's IEP after their primary teachers took a leave of absence in October and November 2025.

Issue Two

Whether USD #259, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, ensured the Student's special education services were provided by a staff member qualified to provide special education or related services to exceptional children. K.S.A. 72-3404(j); 34 CFR §§ 300.156, 300.207.

According to K.S.A. 72-3404(j), a special teacher means a person, employed by or under contract with a school district or a state institution to provide special education or related services, who is qualified to provide special education or related services to exceptional children as determined pursuant to standards established by the state board, or assist in the provision of special education or related services to exceptional children as determined pursuant to standards established by the state board.

According to 34 CFR § 300.156, each state must establish and maintain qualifications to ensure that personnel necessary to carry out the purposes of this part are appropriately and adequately prepared and trained, ensuring that those personnel have the content knowledge and skills to serve children with disabilities. These qualifications must require that each person employed as a public school special education teacher who teaches in an elementary, middle, or secondary school has obtained full state certification as a special education teacher or passed the state special education teacher licensing examination and holds a license to teach in the state as a special education teacher. Furthermore, the individual must not have had special education certification or licensure requirements waived on an emergency, temporary, or provisional basis and must hold at least a bachelor's degree.

According to 34 CFR § 300.207, the LEA must ensure that all personnel necessary to carry out Part B of the Act are appropriately and adequately prepared, subject to the requirements related to personnel qualifications and section 2102(b) of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act.

The Parent alleged the LEA failed to provide trained staff to implement the Student's IEP.

The LEA responded, stating that it ensured the Student's special education services were provided by a staff member qualified to provide special education or related services to exceptional children.

Documentary evidence and interviews with LEA representatives reported staff positions were added or diverted to assist with the MA program while the assigned teachers were on temporary leave. A qualified behavior interventionist and an additional paraeducator were added to the MA program staff. The Principal designated the Assistant Principal as the primary contact and liaison for the program. The IEP Manager and the Special Education Team Lead created and administered lesson plans. The LEA maintained all assigned staff members were properly trained and credentialed.

While they acknowledged they did not document the supervision, the IEP Manager confirmed they met daily with paraeducators and as needed with substitutes. The IEP Manager created data tracking sheets for the paraeducators, and evidence showed the paraeducators used the sheets.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to ensure the Student's special education services were provided by a staff member qualified to provide special education or related services to exceptional children.

Issue Three

Whether USD #259, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, ensured placement decisions were made by a team including the Parents, and whether the LEA ensured the Student was placed in the LRE when the Mixed Abilities program was removed from the Student's home school. K.A.R. 91-40-21; 34 CFR §§ 300.116, 300.327.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-21, 34 CFR § 300.116 and 34 CFR § 300.327 the LEA must ensure that the parents of each exceptional child are members of any group that makes decisions on the educational placement of their child. The placement decision must be made by a group of persons, including the parents and other persons knowledgeable about the child, the meaning of the evaluation data, and the placement options. The placement must be determined at least annually, be based on the child's IEP, and be as close as possible to the child's home. Unless the IEP of an exceptional child requires some other arrangement, the child shall be educated in the school that he or she would attend if not exceptional. In selecting the LRE, consideration shall be given to any potential harmful effect on the child or on the quality of services that he or she needs. An exceptional child shall not be removed from education in age-appropriate regular classrooms solely because of needed modifications in the general curriculum.

The Parent alleged the LEA changed the Student's placement when they removed a Mixed Abilities program from the Student's home school.

The LEA responded that it ensured placement decisions were made by a team including the Parents.

According to Murray v. Montrose County School Dist., 51 F. 3d 921 - Court of Appeals, 10th Circuit 1995, the IDEA states that a disabled child should be educated in the school he or she would attend if not disabled, unless the child's IEP requires placement elsewhere. It does not further specify where, within an LEA, that inclusion shall take place.

The Parent was notified of changes in the Elementary School's programming and communicated with the LEA about this change outside of the Complaint timeline. The Parent had ample time and the support of the LEA to consider several options for a different physical location for the Student, both prior to and during the 2025-26 school year. The Special Education Director stated the Parent was a member of the IEP team that chose the Middle School for the Student. The Student's special education placement remained the same when their physical location was changed.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations it is not substantiated that the LEA changed the Student's placement when they removed a Mixed Abilities program from the Student's neighborhood school.

Issue Four

Whether USD #259, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, provided the Student with a FAPE by implementing the Student's IEP and providing special education instruction from qualified staff, in the Student's LRE. K.A.R. 91-40-2, K.A.R. 91-40-1(z); 34 CFR §§ 300.17, 300.101.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-2, K.A.R. 91-40-1(z); 34 CFR §§ 300.17, a free appropriate public education or a FAPE means special education and related services that are provided at public expense, under public supervision and direction, and without charge; meet the standards of the state board, including the requirements of this part; include an appropriate preschool, elementary school, or secondary school education in the state involved; and are provided in conformity with an IEP that meets all applicable requirements. Each agency shall provide a FAPE to every exceptional child in accordance with state and federal law, ensuring that special education and related services are based upon the child's unique needs rather than the child's area of exceptionality and that a FAPE is made available even if the child is advancing from grade to grade. Furthermore, every exceptional child shall be eligible for graduation upon the successful completion of state and local board requirements, receiving the same recognition and diploma as their non-exceptional peers, unless the child's IEP designates goals other than high school graduation.

According to 34 CFR § 300.101, a FAPE must be available to all children residing in the State between the ages of 3 and 21, including children with disabilities who have been suspended or expelled from school. For children beginning at age 3, each State must ensure that the obligation to make a FAPE available begins no later than the child's third birthday, with an IEP or an IFSP in effect by that date. The determination that a child is eligible must be made on an individual basis by the group responsible within the child's LEA for making such eligibility determinations.

The Parent alleged the Student regressed in their skills since their teacher went on a leave of absence.

The LEA responded that it provided the Student with a FAPE by implementing the Student's IEP and providing special education instruction from qualified staff, in the Student's LRE.

During Teacher 1's absence beginning October 2025 to the Student's annual IEP review on January 15, 2026, the Student missed benchmarks for their Reading 2 goal in October 2025 and December 2025 by 25%. They were within 5% of benchmarks in December 2025 for Reading 1. Both reading goals were changed at the January 15, 2026 IEP meeting. In the March 2026 Progress Report, the Student was at the benchmark for Reading 2. It was noted the Student began working on the updated Reading 1 goal in February 2026, and therefore was still measuring at baseline after one month. No regression was indicated on progress reports for either goal at any point.

During the same period, the Student missed benchmarks for both of their math goals by up to 50%. The Math 1 goal remained the same in the January 15, 2026 IEP, with the Student effectively resetting their progress, and continuing to fall below benchmarks at their March 24, 2026 progress report. A comment on their Math 6 Adapted grade for Quarter 1 reported the Student's lack of focus in math class. A statement from the Paraeducator corroborated the Student's reluctance to complete math assignments. The IEP Manager noted this as typical behavior for a child progressing from elementary to middle school.

The Student maintained their Social Emotional progress throughout the 2025-26 school year until the goal was removed in the January 15, 2026 IEP. Service logs reported the Student received all related services, and progress reports indicated they met all related service goals. Report cards indicated the Student maintained or improved their grades in all classes between Quarter 1 and Quarter 2 of the 2025-26 school year.

As noted above, a change in location does not equal a change in placement.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to provide the Student with a FAPE by not implementing the Student's IEP nor providing special education instruction from qualified staff, in the Student's LRE.

Corrective Action

The Complaint Investigation did not substantiate any of the allegations, and no corrective action is ordered.

Right to Appeal

Either party may appeal the findings or conclusions in this report by filing a written notice of appeal with the State Commissioner of Education, ATTN: Special Education and Title Services, Landon State Office Building, 900 SW Jackson Street, Suite 620, Topeka, KS 66612-1212. The notice of appeal may also be filed by email to formalcomplaints@ksde.gov The notice of appeal must be delivered within 10 calendar days from the date of this report.

For further description of the appeals process, see Kansas Administrative Regulations 91-40-51(f).

K.A.R. 91-40-51(f) Appeals.

Upon receiving an appeal, an appeal committee of at least three department of education members shall be appointed by the commissioner to review the report and to consider the information provided by the local education agency, the complainant, or others. The appeal process, including any hearing conducted by the appeal committee, shall be completed within 15 days from the date of receipt of the notice of appeal, and a decision shall be rendered within five days after the appeal process is completed unless the appeal committee determines that exceptional circumstances exist with respect to the particular complaint. In this event, the decision shall be rendered as soon as possible by the appeal committee.

(2) If an appeal committee affirms a compliance report that requires corrective action by an agency, that agency shall initiate the required corrective action immediately. If, after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the agency shall be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following:

(A) The issuance of an accreditation deficiency advisement;
(B) the withholding of state or federal funds otherwise available to the agency;
(C) the award of monetary reimbursement to the complainant; or
(D) any combination of the actions specified in paragraph (f)(2)

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST
UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #233
ON MARCH 17, 2026

DATE OF REPORT: APRIL 20, 2026

This report is in response to a Complaint filed with our office on behalf of a student, -------, by their parent, -------. In the remainder of the report, the student will be referred to as "the Student" and the parent as "the Parent."

The Complaint is against USD #233 Olathe Public Schools. In the remainder of the report, "the School" and the "local education agency (LEA)" shall refer to USD #233.

When a special education complaint is filed against a school district that is a member of a special education cooperative or interlocal, or that uses any other state recognized public agency to serve children with disabilities, the term "local education agency (LEA)" in this report will include the school district, the special education cooperative or interlocal, and any other agency that is recognized by the state as an administrative agency for public elementary or secondary schools and is serving the educational needs of this student.

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) allows for a 30-day timeline to investigate a child complaint. A complaint is considered to be filed on the date it is delivered to both the KSDE and the LEA. In this case, the KSDE initially received the Complaint on March 17, 2026, and the 30-day timeline ended on April 16, 2026.

Allegations

The following issues will be investigated:

ISSUE ONE: Whether USD #233, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), provided special education and related services to the Student as described in the Individualized Education Program (IEP); and whether the LEA staff implementing the IEP were sufficiently trained. K.A.R. 91-40-16(b); 34 CFR § 300.323.

ISSUE TWO: Whether USD #233, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, developed an IEP that accurately reflected the Student's needs and supports designed to meet these needs. K.A.R. 91-40-16(a); 34 CFR § 300.320.

ISSUE THREE: Whether USD #233, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, failed to provide a free appropriate public education (FAPE) to the Student when the IEP was not designed to meet the Student's needs and the IEP was not implemented by trained staff. K.A.R. 91-40-2, K.A.R. 91-40-1(z); 34 CFR §§ 300.17, 300.101.

Investigation of Complaint

The Complaint Investigator interviewed the Parent on April 8, 2026. The following LEA staff were interviewed on April 8, 2026: the Principal, the School Psychologist, and the Special Education Teacher.

In completing this investigation, the Complaint Investigator reviewed documentation provided by the LEA. Although additional documentation was provided and reviewed, the following materials were used as the basis of the findings and conclusions of the investigation:

1. Prior Written Notice, 04/23/25
2. Interim Process Documentation, 05/19/25
3. Daily Attendance Totals, 08/13/25-01/21/26
4. Email, re: Autism Specialist for [the School], 09/13/24-03/23/26
5. Email, re: [the Student] Behavior Intervention Plan, 01/08/26
6. Email, re: Moving Students to Group I, 09/10/25-03/26/26
7. Behavior Support Plan (BSP), no date
8. Progress Report, 2025-26 School Year
9. Parent-Teacher Conferences - Student Profile, 10/2025
10. Individual Education Program, 05/02/25
11. Behavior Support Plan, no date
12. Daily Schedule, no date

Background Information

This Investigation involved a fifth-grade student enrolled at a therapeutic school (School) in USD #233 (LEA), which was located on the campus of a Psychiatric Residential Treatment Facility (PRTF) where the Student resided. The Student is currently receiving special education or related services as a child with a disability per the IDEA, and is eligible under the category of Specific Learning Disability (SLD).

Findings of the Investigation

The following findings are based on a review of documentation and interviews with the Parent and staff in the LEA.

1. A “Student Entry/Exit” document for the School indicated a May 19, 2025 entry date for the Student, with placement into the School by the Parent. School paused for summer break on May 22, 2025. The Student returned from summer break and attended the School from August 13, 2025 to November 21, 2025, with 68 days enrolled and 68 days of attendance.

2. Information about the School was outlined in a document as follows:
    a. Students were placed into the School by a parent, guardian, or agency due to social-emotional and behavioral needs exhibited at school or home.
    b. The School specialized in trauma-informed instruction, operated in close partnership with a therapeutic treatment plan established by the PRTF, and its calendar aligned with the LEA.
    c. Students at the School had access to the following universal supports:
        i. Small class sizes with a low adult-to-student ratio;
        ii. Specialized staff trained with the Safe Crisis training program for prevention, management, and de-escalation of aggressive or disruptive behaviors;
        iii. Management of emergency safety intervention (ESI) and de-escalation strategies;
        iv. A safe room for recovery and de-escalation;
        v. Positive behavior intervention supports (PBIS);
        vi. On-site counseling services;
        vii. Daily morning triage to assess student needs;
        viii. Pet therapy to promote emotional regulation;
        ix. On-site psychiatric services for mental health support;
        x. Social skills training to enhance interpersonal interactions;
        xi. Frequent breaks/prompts to maintain focus and reduce stress;
        xii. Use of a First/Then process for task completion and classroom engagement;
        xiii. Alternated non-preferred with preferred tasks for increased participation;
        xiv. Reduced academic demands to support individualized learning needs;
        xv. Modified curriculum supports tailored to individual strengths and challenges;
        xvi. Extensive classroom environment accommodations and modifications (including extended time, preferential seating, visual schedule, manipulatives/fidgets, and flexible seating options);
        xvii. Significantly reduced unstructured time/activities to minimize stressors; xviii. Supervised use of technology to ensure safety and focused engagement, supervised transitions to/from school, supervised restroom breaks, and short and supervised passing periods between classes; and
        xix. No homework requirements.
3. The LEA Response noted the staff working with the Student "included a certified special education elementary teacher, and two certified special education middle school teachers," and these teachers individualized the Student's English and math programs. It was also noted the Student's progress during their time in the LEA "did not indicate a need for the IEP team to reconvene."

4. April 23, 2025 PWN from the LEA documented a review of the Student's placement and additions, changes, or modifications to services. Relevant information included:
    a. A proposed change of services was "to immediately begin providing services that are comparable to those described on the Student's IEP." These services would be provided by the School and "the number of minutes the Student will attend school are unilaterally determined by [the School] and not by [the LEA] or the Student's IEP Team."
    b. A proposed change of placement noted, "the educational placement described in the Student's IEP will not be implemented while in this alternative school setting." It was clarified the placement in the School, which was a "psychiatric residential treatment facility," was not an IEP team decision; rather, it was a "unilateral decision of the parents/state or county agency/court."
    c. These changes were proposed because the Student was residing at the PRTF.
    d. Options considered stated, "all options were accepted."
    e. Data used for the proposed action indicated a review of the Student's IEP "and all other available records."
    f. Other factors relevant to the proposal indicated the PRTF was "not an educational placement made by the IEP team," and the LEA would "provide special education services comparable to those outlined in the Student's IEP." It was noted the LEA was not required to provide a comparable placement when the placement of the Student was made by a parent, legal guardian, or a state agency.
    g. The acknowledgement and consent lines were signed by a "parent/legal education decision maker" and were dated April 28, 2025.
5. April 29, 2025 PWN from the Former LEA documented a review of the Student's needed special education and related services, appropriate placement, and additions, changes, or modifications to services. Relevant information included:
    a. A proposed change of services requiring consent included additional direct instruction in the resource room for 30 minutes, five days per week for math and 20 minutes, one day per week for social work, and additional special education support in general education for "90 minutes in [English Language Arts] ELA , math, and science, and social studies." Changes not requiring consent were updating the Student's goals and Behavior Support Plan (BSP).
    b. In the "Explanation of Why the Action was Proposed," the items requiring consent were listed as:

i. The Student needed to improve specific math skills and "close the gap between what [they] can do independently" and what was expected at grade level;

ii. The Student experienced "a few behavior regressions" resulting in time periods with less success at school; and

iii. The Student experienced "more frequent escalations and the introduction of self-injurious behaviors in the school setting this school year[,] [which] indicates a need for additional support to better support [the Student's] regulation and implement [their] Behavior Intervention Plan [BIP] and accommodations."

c. In the "Explanation of Why the Action was Proposed," the items not requiring consent were listed as:

i. The Student's goals were updated to reflect current performance and areas of instructional need; and

ii. ii. The Student's (BIP) was updated to include self-injurious behaviors and "two additional setting events" that were shared by the Parent.

d. Options considered included supporting the Student in a general education setting for math, "but that would not best meet [the Student's] current needs in that content area."

e. Data used for the proposed actions included progress monitoring data, various standard tests, and "collaborating with [the] Parent, special education teachers, general education teacher, school social worker, and [the] Principal."

f. Other relevant factors included the Student not having access to their non-disabled peers when receiving instruction in the resource room.

6. The Student's May 2, 2025 IEP from the Former LEA included the following relevant information:

a. The IEP meeting was an annual review with the most recent evaluation on May 6, 2024.

b. The Student's present levels for reading were documented with reading scores on various tests in the 1st, 3rd, "below 5th," and "below the 10th" percentiles. The Student's scores indicated "a continued need to direct specialized instruction in phonics and fluency." It was noted the Student's direct instruction for reading had been a multisensory reading intervention program that engages multiple senses simultaneously when reading (tracing, tapping, etc.) and "supports learners with dyslexia and other learning disabilities."

c. The Student's goal for reading was, "When presented with an untimed fourth[-]grade passage, [the Student] will be able to read one paragraph with at least 90% accuracy by [the] end of the IEP as measured by Work Samples." This goal's measurable objectives and baseline data were established using a third-grade curriculum-based measurement (CBM) for accuracy.

d. The Student's present levels for math were documented with math scores on various tests in the 3rd, 4th, 7th, and 8th percentiles. It was noted the Student's behavior "significantly impacts [their] academic performance," and there were gaps in the Student's independent math skills.

e. The Student's goal for math was, "When given two-digit by 1-digit multiplication problems, [the Student] will be able to solve with at least 80% accuracy by [the] end of the IEP as measured by Work Samples."

f. The Student's present levels for social-emotional regulation were documented with multiple types of data collection for behavior, including a point system, measured times for appropriate behaviors, and scores from a comprehensive multi-method tool used to evaluate behavior, emotions, and self-perceptions of a child. The Student needed access to self-regulation breaks, in-class support for co-regulation, and a BIP. Data for the Student's ability to follow instructions was also included. It was noted the Student's dysregulation impacted their ability to follow directions.

g. The Student's goal for regulation was, "When experiencing dysregulation in any setting at school, [the Student] will be able to accept or initiate a coping strategy either independently or with staff assistance on at least 3 out of 5 occasions by [the] end of the IEP as measured by Anecdotal Records."

h. Considerations included a checkmark next to "yes," which answered the question, "Does the Student's behavior impede the Student's learning or that of others?" These behaviors would be addressed with a BIP.

i. The Student had an Individual Health Care Plan on file, but since "medication has changed frequently this school year with many hospitalizations and unwanted side effects, a health care plan is currently not needed."

j. Program Modifications and Supports for "all subjects," for the length or duration of the indicated item, included:

   i. Directions given in a variety of ways when they contained more than one step;

   ii. Text-to-Speech software when the text was above the Student's reading level;

   iii. Read aloud when the text was above the Student's reading level;

   iv. Preferential seating during academic and non-academic instruction;

   v. Math manipulatives for math during independent work;

   vi. Chunking of assignments when given a worksheet with problems or questions;

   vii. Shorten assignments for all assignments and assessments;

viii. Extended time for all assignments and assessments;

ix. Reinforcement system for whole group, small group, and independent work time;

x. Frequent reminder of rules before the start of an activity;

xi. Extra time for transitions when asked to transition to a new activity;

xii. Other testing in a small group during classroom, district, and state assessments; xiii. Other First/Then visual when the Student completed an activity or task; and

xiv. Other visuals when the Student was presented with math problems, and the Student was demonstrating "low accuracy."

k. Supports for School Personnel indicated the "Staff who support [the Student] will be provided with training by [the Student's] resource teacher and the school social worker on the best ways to support [the Student's] emotional regulation and [their] Behavior Intervention Plan at least one time at the beginning of the school year for 20 minutes. Additional trainings will be provided as necessary when debriefing escalations or if [the Student's] plan is amended."

l. The Service Delivery Statement indicated the Student would receive direct instruction in the special education setting for 60 minutes, five days a week in the area of reading (30) [minutes] and math (30) [minutes], and 50 minutes, five days a week for social emotional instruction, regulation, and incentives or debriefing." The Student would also receive support in the general education classroom for transition and "a portion of all academic areas to implement [their] accommodations and to support [their] regulation."

7. In a May 2, 2025 document from the LEA, titled "Interim Process Documentation," IEP goals and services were outlined as follows:

a. "Transfer IEP Date" was listed as May 19, 2025, while the IEP date was listed as May 2, 2025.

b. The Student's goal for reading was, "When presented with an untimed fourth[-]grade passage, [the Student] will be able to read one paragraph with at least 90% accuracy by [the] end of the IEP as measured by Work Samples."

c. The Student's goal for math was, "When given two-digit by 1-digit multiplication problems, [the Student] will be able to solve with at least 80% accuracy by [the] end of the IEP as measured by Work Samples."

d. The Student's goal for social-emotional was, "When experiencing dysregulation in any setting at school, [the Student] will be able to accept or initiate a coping strategy either independently or with staff assistance on at least 3 out of 5 occasions by [the] end of the IEP as measured by Anecdotal Records."

e. The Statement of Special Education/Related Services listed special education services provided by a "resource teacher" in an "alternative school" for 360 minutes, five times per week, from May 19, 2025 to May 1, 2026.

f. Annual Consideration of LRE described the impact of the Student's disability on their involvement/progress in the general education curriculum as, "[The Student] demonstrates social/emotional and behavioral needs and currently attends [the School], which is [a PRTF]. … The school environment typically has small class sizes and a high adult-to-student ratio for intensive support, supervision, and instruction." It is noted the Student's needs could not be met in a less restrictive environment, the placement by the Parent into the PRTF "prevents [the Student's] participation in typical general education settings," and access to peers would be "limited."

8. In an undated document, a diagram indicated specifically how adults should respond to the Student based on the Student's displayed behavior. Preferred activity times were listed, along with information to contact the Parent. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Special Education Teacher explained this document would be used to "outline the steps we need to take to meet [the Student's] behavior goals … when a situation happens. … It's kind of a step-by-step guide for us." The Special Education Teacher confirmed the document was created by the Former LEA, but the School used it as a guide.

9. In the Student's undated BIP from the LEA, the following relevant information was included:

a. The related diagnoses were Attention-Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD), Oppositional Defiant Disorder (ODD), and Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD).

b. Problem behaviors were listed as verbal aggression, physical aggression, elopement, property destruction, self-harm, and refusal. Each behavior was described.

c. The Student's preferred items included "painting nails, Just Dance, YouTube, and crafts." Nonpreferred action included "being told no."

d. The goal of the plan was to "decrease aberrant behaviors[,] as well as motivate and teach appropriate alternative behaviors."

e. Procedures for "Body Positioning and Room Organization" included:

i. Remain within arm's length, place oneself between the Student and exits, move away from the Student if they begin to escalate or aggression occurs, and keep the room and floor clear of unsafe items.

f. Procedures for "Placing Demands" included:

i. "State demands with an upbeat, positive tone of voice";

ii. "Use statements, not questions" with examples and non-examples provided;

iii. Reinforce the compliance of the demand with praise; and

iv. Provide options when possible.

g. Procedures for "Noncontingent Reinforcement: Ongoing Attention" included:

i. Free access to staff attention;

ii. Ensure large amounts of positive reinforcement;

iii. Interact with the Student as much as possible;

iv. Use an enthusiastic voice tone;

v. Rotate between activities; and

vi. Offer choices.

h. Procedures for "Denied Access" included:

i. "[The Student] has identified and demonstrated that being told 'no' or denied access is difficult to maintain safety."

ii. Staff should use "naturalistic opportunities to deny access a minimum of one time a session," and five minutes "must pass with safe behaviors before reinforcement" for the same mand[atte]. The example listed was, "The Student asks for a break during class. [Staff] tell [the Student] 'no.' [The Student] sits safely in class for five minutes and asks for a break again. [Staff] reinforces mand[ate]."

iii. "Provide praise and encouragement to [the Student] for tolerating the denied access."

i. The response to "Verbal Aggression" was outlined as providing the Student with replacement language and walking to the safe room.

j. The expected response to "Elopement" included specific language to use for a break, body proximity, prompting for the safe room with specific body positions and tone-of-voice to use, and handling refusal with repeat instruction in a neutral voice every 30 seconds.

k. Response to "Physical Aggression" called for staff providing space, blocking attempts of aggression, and providing instruction to walk to the safe room.

l. Response to "Property Destruction" indicated staff use of proximity and "block all attempts of property destruction," while being prepared for aggression, and the provision of instruction to stop and walk to the safe room.

m. Response to "Self-Harm" outlined the removal of items that could be used for self-harm and instructing the Student to walk to the safe room.

10. In a September 10, 2025 email to the Special Education Teacher, the School Psychologist, multiple staff of the LEA, and multiple staff of the PRTF, the Principal provided notification that the Student would be moving from the elementary school classroom to the middle school classroom. They stated, "It is an odd situation[,] but one that is necessary." The Principal added they wanted the Student to "engage in the middle school curriculum the best that [they] can," but the Student would still be enrolled in the Special Education Teacher's class. The Principal requested the Special Education Teacher determine how they wanted communication from the middle school and elective teachers, since the Special Education Teacher would continue in their role as the Student's case manager.

a. The Special Education Teacher replied on September 11, 2025, and requested a weekly update about the Student be communicated to them. They included data on the Student, along with shortened versions of the Student's IEP goals. They indicated the Student refused to finish testing, liked to help adults, and "did well when I had [the Student] work for 10 minutes and then [take] a short break" for an allotted time, which was important for staff to "stick to."

11. In a September 13, 2025 email, the Autism Specialist notified the School staff about their service of providing teams "with consultation on best practices for supporting students who have autism." They shared times they would be at the School and invited staff to email them if they needed consultation for a specific student.

12. In an October 2025 Student Profile for Parent-Teacher Conferences, the Student was rated as "almost always" in the category of using technology independently and rated "never" in "makes crude sexual comments during class." For the categories of cursing at adults, blurting out, being able to ask for breaks before becoming escalated, and needing increased supervision and structure during transitions, the Student was rated as "sometimes." For the categories of pro-social behaviors with adults and peers, responding appropriately to adult directions, leaving class without permission, cursing at peers, and working independently without needing frequent adult prompts, the Student was rated as "often."

13. An October 15, 2025 IEP Progress Report indicated the Student was "making sufficient progress" toward their reading goal, had not yet demonstrated progress toward achieving their math goal, and had demonstrated "some progress" toward their social-emotional goal.

14. The Student's first quarter elementary progress report for the 2025-26 school year included a grading scale of an "A" for "excellent performance," a "B" for "very good performance," a "C" for "satisfactory performance," and a "PN" for "progress needed." Skill areas were graded as a "strength," as "progressing," or "improvement needed." The following were the Student's relevant grades:

    a. Spelling – "C" and one skill was a strength;

    b. Speaking – "C", one skill was a strength, and two were progressing;

    c. Reading – "C", one skill was a strength, and two were progressing;

    d. Writing – "C", five skills were a strength, and one was progressing;

    e. Math – "C", three skills were progressing, and two were a strength;

    f. Science – "PN" and one skill was a strength;

    g. Social Studies – "A" and one skill was progressing; and

h. "Learning and Work Habits," which were listed as "Attentive," "Cooperative," "Organized," "Productive," "Respectful," and "Responsible," were all graded as a strength.

15. In a January 7, 2026 email to the Principal, the Autism Consultant indicated the Student was "enrolled with us" and requested the most recent behavior plan for the Student. "In one of [the Student's] last plan of care meetings, I believe it was [the PRTF] staff that mentioned they would share [the Student's] BIP." The Principal followed up on January 8, 2026 and attached the Student's BSP.

16. On March 17, 2026, the Parent filed the Complaint.

Parent Interview

17. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Parent explained the relationship and timeline of the Student's placements. On May 25, 2025, the Student entered the PRTF. "Between September, [2025] and May, [2025], [the Student] had 13 acute stays, which means short-term temporary stays." The Parent recalled that in August of 2025, the Student started at the School, which was on the campus of the PRTF. In November of 2025, the Student was discharged from the PRTF, stopped attending the School, and was re-enrolled into the Former LEA.

18. The Parent indicated the Former LEA had been working with them since September of 2025 to plan the transition back into the Former LEA. During this time, the Parent learned the School had put the Student into "10 to 12 holds a week." The Parent shared the Former LEA observed the Student and relayed to the Parent that in one of the classrooms, "[the Student] did amazing because they had somebody who kind of knew how to deal with autistic kids. They were giving [a] heads-up about things. They had structure, kind of giving [a] heads-up as things were transitioning, that kind of thing. In the other classroom, there was no structure, no heads up about anything, and [the Student] ended up needing a hold." The Parent explained, based on the Former LEA's observations and the reports they received from the School, the Former LEA initiated efforts to enroll the Student in the Special Education Day Treatment School. The Parent shared that their concern regarding untrained staff at the School came from information the Former LEA relayed to the Parent after their observation of the Student.

19. The Parent indicated the Student was moved into a different classroom during their time at the School because the Student "fit better in the older classroom." The Parent additionally reported the PRTF did "18 holds or ESIs" on the Student, they were notified about this "when we were about ready to exit," and they believed this impacted the Student's ability to get into other schools.

20. The Parent reported they did not know if six out of the ten program modifications and supports on the Student's IEP were implemented by the School. They believed four out of ten were not implemented. Those not implemented were the provision of visuals, the use of a reinforcement system, the provision of frequent reminders to the Student of rules before the start of an activity, and allowing the Student extra time for transition. The Parent stated, "everything was negative, not a positive reinforcement," and "it doesn't sound like [the LEA]" implemented frequent reminders of rules and extra time for transition. The Parent added, "I don't think they did any visuals at all for [the Student]." In reference to the Student's BSP implementation, the Parent indicated the support provided was "inconsistent," "depended on which teacher [the Student] had," and the School staff's primary response to behavior was physical holds, with little positive reinforcement or redirection. The Parent noted one particular teacher was experienced and would offer prompts and warnings, but they believed this approach was not standard practice for all staff. The Parent added they never received "follow-up from the [School] when [the Student] did anything wrong."

21. The Parent shared their belief the School did not know the Student "was at first-grade reading level because on some of the documents I got later after the fact from [the PRTF], it said [the Student] was reading at grade level, which [they] never [have]. [The Student is] dyslexic." When asked about the Student's IEP progress reports from the School, the Parent recalled they "never received any reports" while the Student was attending. They added they worried about how far behind the Student's reading was when they started at the School. "I don't think [the Student's reading] progressed at all while [they were] there," and then when the Student was discharged from the PRTF and returned to the Former LEA, and then they were "out for two months" before the Former LEA secured a placement in the Special Education Day Treatment School.

Principal Interview

22. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Principal clarified the PRTF was a separate entity from the School, the School was located on the campus of the PRTF, and students from the School "are residents [at the PRTF]." The Principal noted the PRTF staff accompany students to the School "in the capacity of supporting their behavioral needs while we meet their academic needs."

23. The Principal explained when the Student enrolled in the School, they obtained records from the Former LEA, reviewed them, and put the Student's IEP in place at the School because "[The Student's] IEP requirements were ones that we could meet" without making changes to the IEP. The Principal acknowledged, "[The PRTF] doesn't have as much to do with the academic side," and did not have contact with the Former LEA. The Principal shared the Student was placed in the Special Education Teacher's room, and accommodations, direct instruction, data review, and data collection were put into place by the Special Education Teacher. The Principal added the Student's BIP contained strategies "we have embedded into our system just as a school in a PRTF," but the Student's additional needs were met in the classroom setting. "We basically just go through and figure out what [the Student's] needs are, and then we built [the Student's] curriculum around what [their] level was." When asked if the services included in the IEP were actually delivered by qualified personnel, the Principal responded, "Yes."

24. The Principal shared the decision to change the Student from the elementary classroom to the middle school classroom was made "for everybody's safety, [the Student's] and the teacher's safety." When the change was made, the Student had not been at the School "long enough that it made sense to change a case manager and change delivery. … The people that were administering [the Student's] instruction from day to day had equal qualifications to [the Special Education Teacher]. So it would just be similar to a regular school environment where you have one case manager who oversees everything, but other special education teachers that may implement some of those services. … It was just a change of location for [the Student], but we maintained continuity for [their] case manager."
25. The Principal explained the Special Education Teacher "visited with" the teachers and aides regarding the Student's IEP and needs. This included de-escalation techniques that the Special Education Teacher "went through with those teachers individually." The Principal added they regularly partner with the PRTF, which provides training to the School staff "specific to autism," and "every teacher that worked with [the Student] attended that training." They indicated de-escalation training was annual, there was "additional autism training and just working with specific special needs," along with special education teachers attending professional development multiple times per year.
26. The Principal clarified that the Student was unenrolled from the School "the week before Thanksgiving," 2025, and the Former LEA was responsible for implementing the Student's IEP from that point in time.

School Psychologist Interview

27. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the School Psychologist indicated the transition between classrooms "is pretty structured." They explained a routine where "students are asked to empty their shoes and pockets before each class to ensure that they're not transporting any type of materials between classrooms," and the same protocol exists between the School building and the PRTF building, along with the lunchroom. "Students are given advanced notice of when transitions will be happening," and "every transition is supervised. We don't have lockers or any unstructured time. That also goes for bathroom breaks. … We also have a lot of built-in support throughout classroom tasks. So when one task is ending, and another one is beginning, [students are] given an advanced notice of that. There's lots of visual supports built into the classrooms as far as [the] daily schedule, what will be covered that day, and topics of instruction for that day."
28. The School Psychologist explained specifically for the Student, "We met with each teacher and ensured that [the Student's] IEP goals were made known to them and [the Student's] individual behavior support needs as well. … We have received training in safe crisis management [and] de-escalation strategies," which were all part of the Student's BIP.

29. The School Psychologist provided a rationale regarding the Parent's noted discrepancy in the Student's reading level. "There can sometimes be a discrepancy on what students are able to do at home versus what they're able to do at school, based on the differences of structure [and] support. Different situations have different learning environments and different distractors and things like that. So I can't speak specifically to how [the Student] reads at home, but at school, I know what that looks like here. And our teachers go to great lengths to make sure that the students' results are valid and represent what they're able to do." They indicated they use the Fast Bridge program, along with individualized CBMs to analyze reading skills. The School Psychologist described the Student's reading environments at the School as "small" and "structured" with not more than five or six students in a group, and "when reading skills are being measured, that's done individually."
30. When asked about how the team used the "hold" data to inform IEP decisions for the Student, the School Psychologist reported the Student was "making progress. It was slow, but measurable." They added that the therapeutic team from the PRTF typically "takes the lead" on those interventions, and "sometimes that can look like things becoming more frequent or severe, before they get better. And as a school team, we don't always have all of that information." Additionally, the School Psychologist indicated the PRTF invited the School team to a biweekly plan of care meeting to provide an update on their data and observations. They clarified the PRTF is not a part of the IEP team "per se," and the plan of care meetings are "where that data was shared, and discussions were had about what should be happening with [the Student's] annual IEP. So it wasn't necessarily an IEP team that was called. It was a therapeutic team meeting."
31. The School Psychologist clarified the Former LEA would be responsible for services once the Student was discharged from the PRTF and was not a resident on campus.

Special Education Teacher Interview

32. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Special Education Teacher indicated it was "procedure" at the School to follow the protocols described by the School Psychologist in fact number 27. "It's giving kids a warning. It's giving them time to wrap up their activities. It's telling them what's coming next. It's a visual schedule. All of that is embedded in what we do every day, so that's just part of our procedures." The Special Education Teacher reiterated that they followed the Student's IEP.
33. The Special Education Teacher explained that many of the Students in the School have a diagnosis of autism, ADHD, and dyslexia, "So that's part of how every year at the beginning of the year we talk about this, we have training for it as part of our professional development. We also reach out to district personnel who are trained also in this when we have questions. It's part of our background and part of what we do every day."

34. The Special Education Teacher referenced the Student's IEP progress report when asked about the Student's reading level, noting the Student "was given curriculum-based measures to track [their] progress. And [the Student] was, at that point, 90% accuracy, I believe, in our fourth-grade level. When [the Student] was regulated, [they] can read. [The Student] is a very good reader when [they're] regulated." The Special Education Teacher confirmed the progress report was a product completed by staff at the School.

Positions of the Parties, Applicable Regulations, and Conclusions

Issue One

Whether USD #233, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, provided special education and related services to the Student as described in the IEP; and whether the LEA staff implementing the IEP were sufficiently trained. K.A.R. 91-40-16(b); 34 CFR § 300.323.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-16(b) and 34 CFR § 300.323, each agency shall ensure an IEP is in effect before special education and related services are provided to an exceptional child, those services for which written consent has been granted as specified by law are implemented not later than 10 school days after parental consent is granted unless reasonable justification for a delay can be shown, and an IEP is in effect for each exceptional child at the beginning of each school year. Further, each agency shall ensure the child's IEP is accessible to each regular education teacher, special education teacher, related service provider, and other service provider who is responsible for its implementation, and each teacher and provider is informed of that individual's specific responsibilities related to implementing the child's IEP, and the specific accommodations, modifications, and supports that must be provided for the child in accordance with the IEP.

The Parent alleged special education services for the Student, who experiences autism, were not correctly provided due to untrained staff.

The LEA contended "sufficiently trained and licensed staff" provided the Student with special education and related services as required in the Student's IEP.

Upon the Student's entry into the School on May 19, 2025, the LEA issued PWN stating its intent to provide services comparable to those described in the Student's existing IEP, despite the unilateral parental placement into the PRTF. The School's educational environment inherently provided extensive universal supports that mirrored many of the Student's required accommodations, including small class sizes, trauma-informed instruction, PBIS, and significantly reduced unstructured time. Furthermore, the LEA explicitly adopted the Student's transfer IEP goals for reading, math, and social-emotional regulation, and it assigned a certified special education teacher to oversee the delivery of 360 minutes of daily special education services. Although the Student was moved from an elementary to a middle school classroom in September 2025 for "safety" reasons, the Principal and the Special Education Teacher confirmed the Student remained on the original teacher's caseload to maintain continuity, and the teachers in the new setting held equal qualifications.

Regarding the implementation of specific modifications and behavioral supports, the Student's BSP and program modifications were integrated into the School's daily procedures. While the Parent expressed concern that some modifications, such as visuals, reinforcement systems, and transition reminders were not utilized, the School staff clarified these strategies were "embedded" into the School's standard operating procedures for all students. The School Psychologist and the Special Education Teacher noted students were given advanced notice of transitions, used visual schedules, and received frequent prompts, which aligned with the requirements of the IEP and the BSP. Furthermore, the Special Education Teacher monitored progress through CBMs and reported the Student was making sufficient progress in reading and some progress in social-emotional goals by October, 2025. While the Parent contested the Student's reading level, the School Psychologist clarified the results were based on standardized tools like Fast Bridge and individualized measurements conducted in a structured, low-distraction environment. Further, the IEP transferred from the Former LEA indicated the reading levels were based on third-grade CBMs, while the goals were written for fourth-grade levels.

The LEA staff included certified special education teachers who individualized the Student's programs, and the School specialized in trauma-informed instruction and safe crisis management. The Principal and the Special Education Teacher detailed ongoing training that included annual de-escalation training, professional development on specific disabilities such as autism, and consultation with district experts like the Autism Specialist. When the Student moved to the middle school classroom, the Special Education Teacher met with the new staff to ensure they were briefed on the Student's specific IEP goals and individual behavioral support needs. Although the PRTF staff (who are separate from the School staff) performed physical holds, the School staff regularly communicated with the PRTF to align therapeutic and academic data.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations it is not substantiated the LEA failed to provide special education and related services to the Student as described in the IEP; and not substantiated the LEA failed to provide sufficiently trained staff to implement the IEP.

Issue Two

Whether USD #233, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, developed an IEP that accurately reflected the Student's needs and supports designed to meet these needs. K.A.R. 91-40-16(a); 34 CFR § 300.320.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-16(a) and 34 CFR § 300.320, each agency shall be responsible for initiating and conducting meetings to develop, review, and revise the IEP of each exceptional child served by the agency. The term IEP means a written statement for each child with a disability that is developed, reviewed, and revised in a meeting in accordance with the IDEA, and that must include a statement of the child's present levels of academic achievement and functional performance, including how the child's disability affects the child's involvement and progress in the general education curriculum (i.e., the same curriculum as for nondisabled children). An IEP must include a statement of measurable annual goals, including academic and functional goals designed to meet the child's needs that result from the child's disability to enable the child to be involved in and make progress in the general education curriculum, and meet each of the child's other educational needs that result from the child's disability. For children with disabilities who take alternate assessments aligned to alternate academic achievement standards, a description of benchmarks or short-term objectives must be included. An IEP must contain a description of how the child's progress toward meeting the annual goals will be measured, and when periodic reports on the progress the child is making toward meeting the annual goals (such as through the use of quarterly or other periodic reports, concurrent with the issuance of report cards) will be provided.

An IEP must include a statement of the special education and related services and supplementary aids and services, based on peer-reviewed research to the extent practicable, to be provided to the child, or on behalf of the child, and a statement of the program modifications or supports for school personnel that will be provided to enable the child to advance appropriately toward attaining the annual goals, to be involved in and make progress in the general education curriculum in accordance with the IDEA, to participate in extracurricular and other nonacademic activities, to be educated and participate with other children with disabilities and nondisabled children in these activities. An explanation of the extent, if any, to which the child will not participate with nondisabled children in the regular class and in the activities must be included. An IEP must include statement of any individual appropriate accommodations that are necessary to measure the academic achievement and functional performance of the child on State and districtwide assessments, and if the IEP Team determines that the child must take an alternate assessment instead of a particular regular State or districtwide assessment of student achievement, a statement of why the child cannot participate in the regular assessment, and the particular alternate assessment selected is appropriate for the child. An IEP must specify the projected date for the beginning of the services and modifications listed, and the anticipated frequency, location, and duration of those services and modifications.

The Parent alleged the School inaccurately reported reading progress, and the IEP was not followed or changed appropriately based on this information.

The LEA contended the Student's IEP was appropriately developed and the supports included in the IEP were designed to meet the Student's needs.

Upon the Student's May 19, 2025 enrollment at the School, following a unilateral parental placement into the PRTF, the LEA promptly issued PWN, which established the LEA would provide services comparable to those in the Student's previous IEP, while conducting its own evaluations to determine current needs within the new setting. The evidence shows the IEP team incorporated goals in reading, mathematics, and social-emotional regulation that were consistent with the Student's identified disability category of SLD. Although the Parent expressed concerns regarding the accuracy of the Student's reading level and the necessity of more intensive behavioral supports, the LEA based its determinations on curriculum-based measurements and standardized tools such as Fast Bridge, which indicated the Student was capable of fourth-grade level work when regulated.

The design of the IEP and the accompanying BIP reflected a comprehensive approach to the Student's social-emotional needs by leveraging the universal supports already built into the School's therapeutic environment. These supports included trauma-informed instruction, small class sizes, and a high adult-to-student ratio, which the LEA determined were appropriate to address the Student's requirements for a structured environment and frequent de-escalation. While the Parent contended the IEP failed to include necessary 1:1 support and specific sensory modifications, the LEA provided evidence the Student's needs were being met through the school-wide PBIS and the expertise of specialized staff, including the School Psychologist and an Autism Specialist who was available for consultation. The LEA asserted the IEP was designed to provide a FAPE in the LRE available, given the Student's residential status, and with a focus on goals that would allow for academic progress, while also addressing the Student's behavior.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to develop an IEP that accurately reflected the Student's needs and supports designed to meet these needs.

Issue Three

> Whether USD #233, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, failed to provide a FAPE to the Student when the IEP was not designed to meet the Student's needs and the IEP was not implemented by trained staff. K.A.R. 91-40-2, K.A.R. 91-40-1(z); 34 CFR §§ 300.17, 300.101.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-2 and 34 CFR § 300.101, each agency shall provide a FAPE in accordance with the law. Each agency shall make a FAPE available to each child with a disability residing in its jurisdiction beginning not later than the child's third birthday. Each agency shall make a FAPE available to any child with a disability even though the child has not failed or been retained in a course or grade and is advancing from grade to grade. The determination of whether a child who is advancing from grade to grade is a child with a disability shall be made on an individual basis in accordance with child find activities and evaluation procedures required by this article. Each agency shall provide special education and related services based upon the child's unique needs and not upon the child's area of exceptionality.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-1(z) and 34 CFR § 300.17, "Free appropriate public education" and "FAPE" mean special education and related services that are provided at public expense, under public supervision and direction, and without charge, meet the standards of the state board, include an appropriate preschool, elementary, or secondary school education, and are provided in conformity with an IEP.

The Parent alleged that the LEA failed to provide a FAPE to the Student when the IEP was not designed to meet the Student's needs and the IEP was not implemented by trained staff.

The LEA contended the Student was provided with a FAPE.

The LEA ensured a smooth transition into the School by adopting comparable services from the transfer IEP and subsequently using standardized evaluative data, such as Fast Bridge assessments, to maintain goals that were appropriate for the Student's abilities. Implementation was also evidenced through the School's existing therapeutic environment, where universal supports such as trauma-informed instruction and visual schedules were embedded into daily routines to meet the Student's social-emotional requirements. Additionally, the LEA had highly trained special education staff who remained consistent during classroom transitions, ensuring the Student's specialized instruction and behavioral interventions were delivered as designed. The alignment between the Student's documented progress and the comprehensive supports provided by the LEA confirms the LEA fulfilled its obligations to provide a FAPE.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to provide the Student a FAPE.

(1) Any agency or complainant may appeal any of the findings or conclusions of a compliance report prepared by the special education section of the department by filing a written notice of appeal with the state commissioner of education. Each notice shall be filed within 10 days from the date of the report. Each notice shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect.

Upon receiving an appeal, an appeal committee of at least three department of education members shall be appointed by the commissioner to review the report and to consider the information provided by the local education agency, the complainant, or others. The appeal process, including any hearing conducted by the appeal committee, shall be completed within 15 days from the date of receipt of the notice of appeal, and a decision shall be rendered within five days after the appeal process is completed unless the appeal committee determines that exceptional circumstances exist with respect to the particular complaint. In this event, the decision shall be rendered as soon as possible by the appeal committee.

(2) If an appeal committee affirms a compliance report that requires corrective action by an agency, that agency shall initiate the required corrective action immediately. If, after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the agency shall be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following:

(A) The issuance of an accreditation deficiency advisement;
(B) the withholding of state or federal funds otherwise available to the agency;
(C) the award of monetary reimbursement to the complainant; or
(D) any combination of the actions specified in paragraph (f)(2)

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST
UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #437
ON MARCH 16, 2026

DATE OF REPORT: APRIL 28, 2026

This report is in response to a complaint filed with the Kansas State Department of Education on behalf of ------- by her parents, -------. In the remainder of the report -------will be referred to as "the student" and ------- will be referred to as the "complainants" or "the parents" or individually as "the father" and "the mother" respectively.

When a special education complaint is filed against a school district that is a member of a special education cooperative or interlocal, or that uses any other state recognized public agency to serve children with disabilities, the term " local education agency (LEA)" in this report will include the school district, the special education cooperative or interlocal, and any other agency that is recognized by the state as an administrative agency for public elementary or secondary schools and is serving the educational needs of this student."

In this case, the complaint is against USD #437 (Auburn/Washburn Public Schools) which employs its own staff to meet the requirements of the IDEA. In the remainder of the report, this responsible public agency will be referred to as "the local education agency (LEA)".

In the remainder of the report, the LEA staff will be referred to as follows:

- Heidi Carlson, Director of Secondary Special Services
- Charlie Stoltenberg, Washburn Rural North Middle School (WRNMS) Principal
- Tina Schindler, Special Education Teacher
- Dana Ellis, Board Certified Behavior Analyst (BCBA)
- Braeden Pfau, School Psychologist
- Cheyanne Colwell, General Education Social Studies Teacher
- Bradley McCarter, School Resource Officer (SRO)
- Michelle Lawson, Paraprofessional 1
- Mikyla Brix, Paraprofessional 2
- Linda Davis, Paraprofessional 3
- Charlie Chesmore, Assistant Principal
- Christin Barkemeyer, Dean of Students

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) allows for a 60-day timeline to investigate a complaint and allow for an appeal process from the date on which it was filed. A complaint is considered filed on the date on which it was received by KSDE and the LEA. In this case, March 16, 2026 is considered as the date the complaint was filed.

Evidence Reviewed

The father was interviewed by telephone on April 6, 2026 and the mother was interviewed by telephone on April 7, 2026. The following LEA staff provided written responses to interview questions during the investigation process.

- WRNMS Principal
- Special Education Teacher
- General Education Social Studies Teacher
- SRO
- Paraprofessional 1

In addition, written documentation was provided by both the LEA and the complainants. All the documentation was reviewed, and the following written documentation was used in consideration of the issues:

1. Individual Education Program (IEP) Amendment dated August 6, 2025
2. Prior Written Notice (PWN) signed by the father on August 6, 2025
3. Student's Class Schedule for the 2025-26 school year
4. Paraprofessional Assignment Chart dated between August 12, 2025 and March 12, 2026
5. IEP dated October 13, 2025
6. PWN signed by parents on October 16, 2025
7. Email dated November 13, 2025 at 12:49 PM written by the father to the "Team" which included the WRNMS Principal, the Special Education Teacher, and the BCBA
8. Email dated November 13, 2025 at 1:02 PM written by the WRNMS Principal to the parents
9. Emails dated November 13, 2025 at 6:02 PM written by the BCBA to the parents
10. Email dated November 14, 2025 at 7:02 AM written by the father to the BCBA
11. Email communication dated December 2, 2025 at 2:21, 4:17, and 6:45 between the mother and the Special Education Teacher
12. Email dated December 4, 2025 at 4:31PM written by the Special Education Teacher to the mother
13. Daily Report dated March 9, 2026 handwritten by Paraprofessional 1
14. IEP Goal Progress Reports dated December 29, 2025 and March 13, 2026
15. Emails dated March 9, 2026 written by the mother to the WRNMS Principal at 12:27, 12:35, 12:49, 12:58, 1:05, and 2:41 PM
16. Emails dated March 9, 2026 written by the WRNMS Principal to the mother at 12:43, 1:03, and 2:34 PM

17. Emails dated March 10, 2026 written by the WRNMS Principal to the mother at 8:39 AM and 1:55 PM
18. Emails dated March 10, 2026 written by the mother to the WRNMS Principal at 11:06 AM and 4:33 PM
19. Emails dated March 11, 2026 written by the WRNMS Principal to the mother at 8:05 and 9:44 AM
20. Email dated March 11, 2026 written by the mother to the WRNMS Principal at 8:36 AM
21. Emails dated March 12, 2026 written by the WRNMS Principal to the mother at 9:33 and 10:53 AM
22. Emails dated March 12, 2026 written by the mother to the WRNMS Principal at 10:32 and 11:09 AM
23. Email dated March 12, 2026 written by the Director of Secondary Special Services to the mother at 3:00 PM
24. Emails dated March 12, 2026 written by the mother to the Director of Secondary Special Services at 3:17 and 3:50 PM
25. Email dated March 13, 2026 written by the Director of Secondary Special Services to the mother at 4:58 PM
26. Email dated March 13, 2026 written by the mother to the Director of Secondary Special Services at 8:55 PM
27. PWN dated March 13, 2026 and not signed by either parent
28. The LEA's Response to the Allegations dated April 6, 2026 written by the Director of Secondary Special Services
29. Email dated April 9, 2026 written by the mother to the investigator regarding text messages with the Special Education Teacher
30. Email dated April 20, 2026 written by the Director of Secondary Education to the investigator
31. Emails dated April 20, 2026 written by the parents to the WRNMS Principal, Special Education Teacher, and Director of Secondary Special Services

Background Information

The student is currently enrolled in the 8th grade at WRNMS. Her most recent triennial reevaluation was completed on October 18, 2023. At that time, it was determined that she continued to meet the eligibility criteria for the exceptionality of Multiple Disabilities based on medical diagnoses of Down's Syndrome, Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD), and Reactive Attachment Disorder (RAD). There were two IEPs in effect during the 2025-26 school year with the first being an August 6, 2025 IEP amendment to the transfer IEP from USD #345 and the second being the annual IEP developed on October 13, 2025. Both IEPs include special education support in general education classes as well as specialized instruction and related services provided in the low incidence program in the district.

Issues Investigated

Based on the written complaint, five issues were identified and investigated.

Issue One

USD #437, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to implement the student's IEP, specifically by not providing the required special education instruction and support during the general education social studies class during the 2025-26 school year.

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.323(c)(2) require each public agency to ensure that as soon as possible following the development of the IEP, special education and related services are made available to the child in accordance with the child's IEP.

Parent Position

The parents reported that the student is not being included in the general education social studies class as required by the IEP. They believe that the student is segregated from her peers most of the class period in a small room adjacent to the social studies classroom and separated by a glass wall. The parent indicated the LEA staff's belief that allowing the student to see her peers does not fulfill the IEP's requirement that the specialized instruction and supports be provided in the general education setting.

In addition, the parents are concerned that the student is not being provided the accommodations and modifications in the social student class as required by her IEP. The parents are frustrated that the social studies schoolwork is not being sent home despite multiple requests. The parents believe this was because these class materials are not being modified or modified incorrectly. The parents noted that once this child complaint was filed, the LEA began to provide copies or work completed in social studies, but this confirmed their beliefs that the work was not being modified correctly for the student. The parents specifically were concerned with the number of choices the student was given in multiple choice questions and the visuals paired with vocabulary words and concepts.

The parents indicated the student earns good grades on the assignments but then does poorly on quizzes and tests which indicates to them that the student is not learning. The parents indicated they are willing to help the student study but, again, are unable to assist the student because of a lack of materials being sent home by the LEA staff.

LEA Position

The LEA reported that a paraprofessional has been assigned to support the student in the sixth hour general education Social Studies class for 242 minutes per week every day during the 2025-26 school year. The paraprofessional provides direct implementation support for the student's IEP accommodations and modifications under the supervision of the special education teacher.

The LEA indicated that the student is provided with modified versions of tests and assignments on the same lessons presented in the classroom and assigned to the student's peers. The paraprofessional implemented the required accommodations and modifications including reading aloud to the student, giving verbal cues and prompts to remain on task, repetition and review of learned skills, etc. The LEA believes that the student's IEP has been implemented in the social studies class and the student has been provided with the required special education instruction and support in that general education classroom.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The following findings of fact are based on interviews and a review of documentation.

1. The student's IEP requires 234 minutes per day of special education services and support in the general education setting for the following classes: Skills for Success, social studies, science, two elective classes, and advisory. The student receives 42 minutes per day of those required services in the sixth hour social studies class with paraprofessional support during the 2025-26 school year.
2. The IEP requires the following accommodations and modifications in all subject areas, including the social studies class, related to the parents stated concerns for multiple choice questions and the visuals paired with concepts or words.

Accommodation / Modification	Location	Frequency
All classwork, tests, projects, and quizzes are modified to her instructional reading and conceptual level	All subjects	In all educational settings
Pre teach vocab with visuals	All subjects	Daily
Reduced answer, 2 options	All subjects	During all multiple choice assessments

There was no accommodation / modification related to quizzes/assessments and assignments being sent home on a daily basis.

3. The WRNMS Principal reported the school building was recently built and classrooms were designed to include adjacent small group work areas, which are separated by a "glass wall". This design allows the classroom teacher to continue to supervise the classroom when students are working in small groups, receiving interventions or enrichment, or collaborating through project-based learning.
4. The mother sent emails to the WRNMS Principal on March 9, 2026 at 12:27 and 12:35 PM questioning why the student who has an IEP, a BIP, and one-to-one paraprofessional support had missing assignments, but no schoolwork was ever sent home in the social studies class. The mother stated, "We already know that [the student] and her peers are pulled out of the classroom for separate instruction, but that it is viewed as inclusive because there is a clear window between the typical students and [the student] and her peers with disabilities" and questioned if the IEP was being implemented. The mother also requested that copies of social studies assignments and assessments be sent home daily.
5. The WRNMS Principal responded via email to the parent that same day at 12:43 and 1:03 PM indicating he would follow up on the mother's concerns about the student's inclusion in the general education social studies class and the lack of schoolwork being sent home. The WRNMS obtained copies of the student's social studies work from the General Education Social Studies Teacher, scanned, and attached those to the email sent to the mother as well as made copies and sent those home with the student at the end of the school day.
6. The mother responded via email to the WRNMS Principal on March 9, 2026 at 12:49 and 12:58 PM stating, "You may recall that we have requested copies of her work on multiple occasions, and we periodically get copies of other things, but never social studies. [The Special Education Teacher's] response was that her team regularly sins [sic], stuff home to us. So, apparently somebody is stealing it out of her backpack and keeping it for themselves. weird, don't you think?" The mother also suggested the WRNMS Principal should observe how students with disabilities are being included in the general education classes.
7. On March 9, 2026 at 2:34 PM, the WRNMS Principal responded to the mother via email describing his meeting with the student's school team to address the mother's concerns. He noted that a lot of the work [the student] does in the social studies class in on her Chromebook in Google Classroom so he instructed them to take screenshots of that work to send home so that the parents receive a paper copy of it each day. In addition, he explained how the parents could access the student's assignments in the Google Classroom to see the work that is being assigned to the student each day as well. He encouraged the mother to let him know if schoolwork wasn't making it home so he could intervene. The WRNMS Principal stated, "In regards to your concerns about what inclusion looks like, we have students, both those with an IEP and those without an IEP that utilize common spaces for a space to work. When students get pulled for small group work, they are always in close proximity to the Gen-Ed classroom in a common space that is used by all types of students. When Mila does small group work, it takes place after whole group instruction from the Gen-Ed teacher and when all students are working independently. Teachers report that Mila is often in the Gen-Ed classroom for whole class periods, and that small group work does not take place on a daily basis".

8. The mother responded to this email at 2:41 PM and stated, "Once again, completely different from what [the Special Education Teacher] told us. Proudly, by the way, as she thought I'd be quite impressed that her students were pulled away, but could see their classroom through the glass. You can PR it all you want. Secondly, this is not the first time we've been told that social studies would be sent to us... Also, this does not answer for how [the student], with an IEP, a BIP, and a one on one has missing work. It also does not explain how she's getting 100% on daily work, and 50% on quizzes. That appears to be a pretty significant gap, don't you think? If I were the principal over those classes, I would wonder why there is such a wide gap?? Especially for a student with an IEP, a BIP, and a one on one".
9. On March 10, 2026 at 8:30 AM, the WRNMS Principal responded to the parent and stated, "I was able to touch base with Mila's Social Studies teacher this morning with these specific concerns. She looked into why the assignment was marked missing, and it appears as though it was something she hadn't completed in class - thus the teacher marked it that way to remind herself to make sure Mila was able to attempt it later. I told her to mark it exempt for now, and that we can change the score once Mila is able to attempt it. She also told me that the quizzes are based on how Mila answers the questions when she takes the quizzes. She receives all of her accommodations when she's taking the quiz, and the score is entered based on her answers. With all of that being said, Mila is graded pass/fail for her assignments and overall grade per her IEP. I will scan an example of a recent bell work quiz when I get a chance later today so you can see what the modifications look like and what she's attempting".
10. The mother responded on March 10 at 11:06 PM, 2026 stating, "I really do have to ask, do you think that a child with an IEP regularly getting a 50% on their daily quizzes is being appropriately accommodated?? Do you think that that child is appropriately learning the materials and accessing and understanding the curriculum, and being appropriately accommodated?? That seems OK to you??".
11. The WRNMS Principal responded back to the mother on March 10, 2026 at 1:55 PM. Indicating that he was sending home a copy of a modified social studies quiz so the parent could review the document. He also noted that he would follow up with the social studies teacher about the grading concerns and stated, ". . . my hunch is that a lot of the daily work is being graded based on completion with quiz scores being graded on mastery of the content. As you stated, a question I'm going to pose to the team, as I would any of my teachers when students do not master the content the first time, is how we can reteach and ensure that the content is being learned. While your question is centered specifically around a student with an IEP who is receiving 8th grade curriculum in a heavily modified format per her IEP . . .With regards to accommodations, I'll review and ensure that I get a comprehensive response to your entire question, but she is receiving her quizzes in a highly modified format including only two answer choices, her quizzes are read aloud, and she has a visual on the quiz, all of which align with her IEP. In her accommodations, she has written in that her Pass/Fail is based on effort, which I take to mean the course as a whole - thus [the student] will pass Social Studies as she is an active participant and gives her best effort from what I've been told. If I'm incorrect on this, and this means that each individual assignment is based on effort, then the scores of the quizzes will need to be changed to 100% to reflect her effort. This accommodation is based on what we discussed in her IEP meeting earlier this fall, so if you believe that there needs to be something different, we can certainly amend as needed. Again, as I've stated throughout our interactions, it is my desire to partner with you throughout this process".

12. The mother responded to the WRNMS Principal via an email on March 10, 2026 at 4:33 PM still expressing concerns about the student not passing the social studies quizzes but then began sharing concerns regarding the incident involving the SRO. Note that the issues related to the incident involving the SRO will be addressed in Issue Two and Issue Three in this Investigation Report.
13. The General Education Social Studies Teacher provided the following written response to questions about implementation of the student's IEP:
    The student is included in my classroom through direct instruction, often times when I am teaching the student is blurting or making comments. I always say yeah that is right or yes that is correct. On multiple occasions we have done study review days with buzzers the student is put into groups with peers and joins in the game to the best of their ability.
    The student spends roughly 15-20 minutes in class, sometimes longer depending on direct instruction. There have been multiple days where the student stays during the whole period due to projects and tasks we complete together. Even if they are on the other side of the glass wall, I continue to interact with them, and they continue to have access to me and other peers.
    The assignments/quizzes have reduced answer choice, are read aloud, lowered to a prek-kindergarten level, circle the best answer, and draw lines to what matches. Oftentimes the student would also have box work/tasks they need to complete, they would work on those during assignment work as well.

1. The para provides reteaching, talking through assignments/assessments, providing student redirection due to blurting/behaviors, assistance through assignment completion. I enjoy having her in class and including her while I am up providing direct instruction to the class. The students as well as myself work to include her, my work and their work.
2. Paraprofessional 1 provided the following written responses to questions about the implementation of the student's IEP:
    The teacher always calls on the student at least once a day. She will make sure she calls on every student in the classroom at least once. If the question is open-ended, she will make sure to give the student two choices to choose from and I will support as needed. When the student does have an outburst, the teacher either ignores it or makes it a part of the class and continues teaching the class. There are days we stay in the class the whole time - most weeks 3-4 days of the week we are in class the entire time. On the days that we leave the class, we are in the class for all whole-class instruction and then the last 10-15 minutes we leave the class because the rest of the class is having quiet work time and I need to be able to talk to the student to provide her modifications. I reread the text to the student, I read all questions and all options. I provide options if options are not made available. I give sentence starters as needed. The teacher provides a modified assignment and I provide additional modifications to ensure the assignment is compliant. The social studies teacher and special education teacher will modify the student's assignments and tests/quizzes.

3. The WRNMS Principal provided the following written response to questions about the implementation of the student's IEP:
I have observed the 6th period Social Studies classroom as a part of regular walk throughs, spending a few minutes each time in the classroom. I have seen a variety of things including the student in question in the gen ed classroom receiving whole group instruction or working in the classroom. I've also seen a group of students pulled out into the hallway in our commons space to work on small group instruction as well. I would note that the common space is utilized by SPED and Gen Ed. students alike for pull out, small group work.

14. The parents received copies of the student's completed work from the social studies class on April 17, 2026. The mother emailed the WRNMS Principal, the Special Education Teacher, and the Director of Secondary Special Services on April 20, 2026 at 3:18 PM sharing concerns about the visuals paired with key concepts by stating, "Please explain to me how the wave is supposed to represent what the Rio Grande river and that the Mexico choice is represented by what a cactus I have no idea what the next icon is protecting homes what is that a shield? Are these appropriate uses of pictures as choices and explanations of the actual academic content??". The father also emailed the same LEA staff on April 20, 2026 at 3:43 PM stating, "Part of the discussion about what should be modified for [the student] is what are the most important parts of this unit that she should learn about. She can exposed to it but what are the essential parts. We have no idea because we don't know if her study guide is the whole unit. I have no idea what the Week 4 paper is supposed to be about? The quiz is simply reducing the answers by 1 choice. This is not an appropriate accommodation for [the student]. That is a common accommodation for a student with a specific learning disability. There should be visuals to go with answers and it really does not need to be more than two options. We should also be helping with studying to make sure information that she is being exposed to is connecting. We see nothing ahead of time and I don't feel that papers coming home are connected?? Why is that?".

15. The WRNMS Principal responded to the parents' emails on April 21, 2026 at 8:20 AM stating, "Thank you for reaching out again yesterday with your questions and concerns. The items that you've shared are actually part of weekly vocabulary work that is done in the Social Studies classroom. Students receive 4 discipline specific vocabulary words each week and Mila reviews the words both in whole group as well as in small group. It is discussed verbally and as well as written on worksheets. They then quiz over the words at the end of the week. Chris, as you've stated, the quizzes should have two selections not three, and include visuals which Tina has modified for Mila's level. With regards to the broader class work, they are currently working on Westward Expansion. Tina is going to send home the study guide as well as the quiz in a folder for you today so that you can review the material with Mila. Tina and I have connected and we will make sure that all materials that can be used to help study at home be sent to you in advance, including the quiz so you can see exactly how she'll be assessed".

16. The LEA provided a copy of the Modified History Quiz for 9.3. This quiz included 17 multiple choice questions. Four of those questions had more than the two choices required by the IEP. The quiz included three vocabulary questions for the terms "impressment", "embargo", and "confederation". Only one visual was provided for the term "impressment", which depicted a forearm being held by the wrist by another hand. The two choices for the definition were: 1) a military force made up of local citizens to help protect their town, land, or nation or 2) the act of forcing men into military or naval service. The LEA also provided a copy of the modified assignment for Lesson 11.2.1. This assignment included vocabulary matching questions for the terms "assimilate" paired with , "Indian Removal Act" paired with , and "Indian Territory" paired with . Four of the questions used the same visual paired with different responses i.e. a smiley face for "Yes", "Happy", "Be Free", and "Good Land".

CONCLUSION

In this case, the student's IEP requires special education support in the student's social studies class for 42 minutes per day. Interviews and documentation show this support is being provided. The parent's concerns regarding the student being isolated during the majority of the class period in the adjacent workspace behind the glass wall was not substantiated based on written interviews with the General Education Social Studies Teacher, Paraprofessional 1, and the WRNMS Principal, which all reflected the student being included in the general education setting on a regular basis. Also based on the interviews and information about the new building design, it appears that the adjacent workspace is available for and used by all students in the general education social studies class.

The student's IEP also includes specific accommodations / modifications that are to be implemented for modifying tests/quizzes and assignments. The WRNMS Principal acknowledged and a review of samples of modified work found the student is not always provided with only two choices on multiple choice questions. In addition, the choice of visuals to be paired with terms is not appropriate because on visuals that do not clearly reflect the term (a cactus for Mexico, a wave for the Rio Grande River) and using the same visual for multiple terms (a smiley face for the terms for "Yes", "Happy", "Be Free", and "Good Land"). Finally, the conceptual level of the samples provided does not appear to be aligned to the student's instructional level in order to expose the student to the concepts that will assessed on the History, Government, Social Studies Alternate Assessment (HGSS-AA) in high school.

Based on the foregoing, the LEA is found OUT of compliance with federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.323(c)(2) for failing to implement the student's IEP, specifically the accommodations and modifications related to test/quizzes and assignments. As such, corrective action is required.

Issue Two

USD #437, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to implement the student's behavior intervention plan on March 9, 2026, specifically by involving the building's school resource officer (SRO).

Applicable Law

In the case of a child whose behavior impedes the child's learning or that of others, federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.324(a)(2)(i) require that the IEP Team consider the use of positive behavioral interventions and supports, and other strategies to address that behavior. The IEP Team may choose to address the identified behavior through IEP goals, accommodation/modifications, and/or the development of a behavior intervention plan (BIP).

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.323(c)(2) require each public agency to ensure that as soon as possible following the development of the IEP, special education and related services are made available to the child in accordance with the child's IEP.

Parent Position

The parents reported that, on March 9, 2026, the LEA failed to follow the student's BIP which resulted in the student's behavior escalating to the point that the SRO was called to remove the student from the classroom. The parents believe that this situation could have been avoided if school staff had followed BIP.

The parents also indicated that they were not informed of the SRO's involvement with the student and only found out through because of the daily note written by the paraprofessional. After inquiring with LEA administrators about the situation, the parents were provided with differing accounts of what happened. Please note that Issue Three will address these parent concerns.

LEA Position

The LEA reported the student's BIP was implemented as written on March 9, 2026. The BIP includes six "Reactive Strategies" listed from least to most restrictive and Paraprofessional 1 followed each of those steps during the incident. The fifth strategy is to remove the student from the classroom and the BIP does not specify which LEA staff may, or may not, be involved in that process.

The LEA reported that the summary of the SRO's job description approved by the USD #437 Board of Education states, "The Campus Police Officer/School Resource Officer supports and facilitates the educational process within the Auburn-Washburn USD 437 School District by providing a safe and secure environment through building and establishing meaningful relationships with students and staff". The LEA noted the SRO's job description includes the following responsibilities:

- Serve as a wrap-around services team member to support student success
- Serve as a visible and active law enforcement officer on campus
- Conduct routine patrols of assigned facilities to include buildings
- Make yourself available to students and staff as needed in the role of an informal counselor.
- Perform other duties as assigned

The LEA reported, "The SRO routinely interacts with students, both students who receive special education services and students who do not. In addition, he is visible across the campus he supports for the duration of his workday. Part of his workday includes routine patrolling which is what led him to be near the Trek classroom [the student's special education classroom] when the incident occurred. Importantly, at no time did he ever touch the student or engage with the student in any way that constituted restraint, seclusion, or any other emergency safety intervention. The student was never secluded and never restrained. The student's BIP does not prohibit the use of specific adults nor does it specify which adults should engage with the student to support regulation".

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The following findings of fact are based on interviews and a review of documentation. Note that the findings from Issues One are incorporated herein by reference.

1. The student's BIP includes the following "Reactive Strategies" when a problem behavior occurs. These are listed from the least to most restrictive.

1) Sensory: When student's behaviors are believed to be due to a sensory reaction, student will be offered noise-cancelling headphones

2) Passive Ignoring: When student is exhibiting behaviors that are attention-driven, staff will do the opposite, shifting attention away from her towards the other students activities, breaks, etc. There is no communication verbal at this point, unless there is a safety issue.

3) Count backwards 3,2,1

4) Do I need to call Mom, do I have to call BaBa

5) Removal from class: When student is continuing to exhibit these behaviors for a continued duration (10 minutes or longer; with the exception of those that involve safety concerns), she will be removed from the classroom into the hallway or another room in the building. She will take a break, and be reminded of positive choices that she can make and then no adult interaction will be done during this time. After 2 minutes, check with student to see if she is ready to return and if she is calm and ready to learn and demonstrated that she is calm and ready by completing some simple tasks or work activities she may return, if no, then set the timer again for 2 minutes and repeat. Through all of this, reinforcement of positive behaviors should be followed. Rewards and attention for better behavior, while removing attention and desired activities should be followed while she is not following rules.

(6) Call Mom and have student talk to her

2. Paraprofessional 1 provided the following written response to questions about the incident involving the SRO on March 9, 2026:

On March 9, 2026, during 1st hour, the student was dysregulated in the classroom. Staff initially utilized passive ignoring in response to the behavior. When the behavior continued, [the student] was offered a walk as a de-escalation strategy to help her reset. Upon returning to the classroom, the walk was not successful in resolving the behavior. [The student] was then offered the opportunity to go to the sensory room and sit in the tent with a weighted blanket. While in the tent, she began thrashing her body, causing the tent to roll. I then used a verbal countdown strategy, counting backward from 3, 2, 1. When this strategy was not effective, I asked [the student] if I needed to call her mom, and she responded no. I then asked if I needed to call BaBa, and she again responded no. I informed her that if she was unable to maintain a quiet body, we would need to make a call. After [the student] had been in the sensory room for a while, I was standing in the doorway of the sensory room, when [the student] ran out of the room and past me toward the classroom door. She grabbed a trash can and threw it in the direction of other students. She then picked up the same trash can a second time and again threw it toward the students. At that time, I determined that the classroom was no longer safe for the other students, and the decision was made to evacuate them from the room. The substitute teacher and another paraprofessional escorted the other students into the hallway, while another paraprofessional and I remained in the classroom with [the student]. During this time, [the student] began kicking at both of us. I used the intercom to request immediate support from someone in the office. While awaiting support, [the student] continued attempting to kick both staff members before throwing herself to the floor and thrashing her body.When the SRO arrived, he located one of [the student's] preferred fidget items in her bucket and offered it to her. [The student] responded positively and willingly followed the SRO. Because the classroom still contained other students who required supervision and support, I did not accompany the SRO to the office. At that time, [the student] was compliant and followed him voluntarily.

3. The SRO provided the following summary of the incident with the student on March 9, 2026:

I was walking in the forest walk (the forest walk is the primary hallway connecting all wings at Washburn Rural North Middle School) and noticed the Trek classroom (where the student receives services) was being cleared of students. One staff member flagged me down and requested support. I entered the classroom and two staff members were in the room with the student. The student was sitting on the floor and staff were at least 4-5 feet away from her. I could see that items had been thrown around in the classroom. Because staff had chosen to clear the room, I knew that even though the student was seemingly regulated at the time, the student likely needed a break to entirely regulate away from the classroom as is consistent with her behavior plan. I have interacted with the student over the course of the year, so I noticed her crate that she brings with her to her classes. Inside her crate I noticed one of her fidgets that she prefers. I picked it up and asked her if she would like to walk with me and have her fidget.

She left the room with me within one minute of me entering the room. As we exited the room, the student pushed the "all call" button that is by the door - this has happened other times during the year. The office staff immediately called to offer assistance and we shared it was pushed on accident by a student. When I become involved with a student and I have reason to believe that the student needs to regulate or there could be potential disciplinary action needing to be taken, I walk with the student to the main office and have the student engage with either the principal, the assistant principal, or the dean of students. The student walked with me to the main office and the assistant principal, [Assistant Principal], is the administrator who was available at the time. The student and I walked into [the Assistant Principal's] office, I sat across from [the Assistant Principal], the student stood by the door, the door remained open.

[The Assistant Principal] asked the student about what was going on. The student did not respond. [The Assistant Principal] then asked the student about the fidget she was holding. The student gestured "mine" with the item, so [the Assistant Principal] did not ask more about it. I shared with [the Assistant Principal] that the student seemed to be having a hard time, so we decided to take a walk. [The Assistant Principal] engaged for a few more minutes with the student. The student remained calm the entire time and became entirely regulated.

At this point the dean of students, [Dean of Students], walked by [the Assistant Principal's] office, noticed the student standing in the doorway of [the Assistant Principal's] office. She asked if the student was ready to go to PE. The student shook her head "yes," so [the Dean of Students] walked with the student to PE where her staff was waiting for her.

4. The SRO provided the following written response to questions about the incident involving the student on March 9, 2026:

As far as I recall, I was in the main hallway approximately 30 feet from the classroom when I noticed staff escorting the other students out of the classroom. I do not recall being called to the classroom. It is possible that the classroom staff called the office telling them they needed help. But I specifically, as the SRO, was not called to the room.

I am aware that the student has a behavior intervention plan. I have been an SRO for the district for the last 7 years. Prior to that I was a Topeka Police Officer for 26 years with 5 of those being assigned to the SRO unit. I have dealt with numerous situations like this in the past and am aware that sometimes a different face and a distraction (like a toy or some other object) helps them to focus on that instead of what is upsetting or agitating them. With this student, I have seen staff use this approach when they are dysregulated.

5. The Director of Secondary Special Services provided the following summary about the incident involving the SRO on March 9, 2026:

In discussing the incident with principal [the WRNMS Principal] and [the Assistant Principal], standard building procedure is to follow students' individual IEPs and BIPs. In the case of this student, the student's BIP lists six steps should the student be displaying any of the problem behaviors. Step 5 is "removal from class" and step 6 is "call Mom and have student talk to her." The team worked through steps 1 through 5 but never attempted step 6 because the student became regulated upon completing step 5. The BIP does not require staff to progress to step 6 in every incident; rather, progression to the next step is only necessary when the student remains dysregulated after the prior intervention step has been implemented. The SRO's involvement occurred during implementation of step 5, "removal from class," and served as an additional adult support to facilitate the student's movement away from the classroom environment so she could fully regulate.

Conclusion

In this case, documentation and interviews show the student's IEP team developed a BIP to address her behavior that interfered with her learning and the learning of others. It is noted that the BIP does not contain any mention of staff who are prohibited or required to be involved in the implementation of the BIP. Based on the foregoing, the LEA is determined to be in compliance with federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.324(a)(2)(i).

The student's BIP includes six "Reactive Strategies" that are to be used when problem behavior occurs. In this case, there is evidence from interviews to support a finding that the LEA implemented the student's BIP on March 9, 2026. Paraprofessional 1's description of the incident showed she started with the second strategy of active ignoring and when that didn't have an impact, she went back to strategy one and provided other sensory options to address the student's dysregulation. When those were unsuccessful, she used the third strategy and counted back from 3-2-1. That was also unsuccessful and Paraprofessional 1 asked if mom or BaBa needed to be called as required by strategy four. At that point, safety became an issue for the student, staff, and peers and strategy five was implemented to remove the student from the classroom. The SRO's involvement began at this point and his interaction with the student went back to strategy one with providing sensory options including the fidget and walking which helped the student regulate her behavior and return to her school day routine.

The student's BIP does not specify who is prohibited or required to implement the student's BIP and, in this case, Paraprofessional 1 and the SRO were the LEA staff who provided the "Reactive Strategies" as required by the BIP. Based on the foregoing, the LEA is found in compliance with C.F.R. 34 §300.323(c)(2) which required the IEP be implemented as written.

Issue Three

USD #437, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to provide accurate parental notification as required under 34 C.F.R. §300.504 and K.A.R. 91-40-17, and provided inaccurate information that denied the parents meaningful participation in decisions regarding the student's behavior intervention plan (BIP) implementation following the incident on March 9, 2026.

Applicable Law

It is noted that the parent specifically identified these state and federal regulations when making this allegation.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.504 relate to the IDEA procedural safeguards notice which must be provided to the parents of a child with a disability at least annually. It is noted that state regulations at K.A.R. 91-40-26 describe the requirement that public agencies provide the Parent Rights Notice (Procedural Safeguards) to the parents.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.504 (c) require that the procedural safeguards notice must include a full explanation of all of the procedural safeguards available under §300.148, §300.151 through 300.153, §300.300, §§300.502 through 300.503, §§300.505 through 300.518, §§300.530 through 300.536 and §§300.610 through 300.625 relating to—

(1) Independent educational evaluations;
(2) Prior written notice;
(3) Parental consent;
(4) Access to education records;
(5) Opportunity to present and resolve complaints through the due process complaint and State complaint procedures, including—
    (i) The time period in which to file a complaint;
    (ii) The opportunity for the agency to resolve the complaint; and
    (iii) The difference between the due process complaint and the State complaint procedures, including the jurisdiction of each procedure, what issues may be raised, filing and decisional timelines, and relevant procedures;
(6) The availability of mediation;
(7) The child's placement during the pendency of any due process complaint;
(8) Procedures for students who are subject to placement in an interim alternative educational setting;

(9) Requirements for unilateral placement by parents of children in private schools at public expense;

(10) Hearings on due process complaints, including requirements for disclosure of evaluation results and recommendations;

(11) State-level appeals (if applicable in the State);

(12) Civil actions, including the time period in which to file those actions; and

(13) Attorneys' fees.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.504 (d) require these procedural safeguards be provided in language the parents can understand.

State regulations at K.A.R. 91-40-17 relate to IEP Team meetings and the participants. It is noted that these state regulations mirror the federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.322.

State regulations at K.A.R. 91-40-17(a) require that each public agency take steps to ensure that one or both of the parents of an exceptional child are present at each IEP team meeting or are afforded the opportunity to participate. These steps must include scheduling each meeting at a mutually agreed-upon time and place, informing the parents of the purpose of the meeting, the positions of the persons invited to the meeting, and the right for the parent to invite any other person who they believe has knowledge or special expertise about the child to the meeting. In addition, the parent must be provided with notification of the meeting at least 10 days in advance of the meeting unless this requirement is waived so the IEP Team can meet sooner.

Parent Position

The parents reported that, following the March 9, 2026 incident with the SRO, the school administration failed to contact them, and they only learned of the incident from a note to the family from the student's paraprofessional. The parents indicated that they have subsequently received two other differing stories from LEA staff on what happened during the incident. The parents are concerned because they believe the LEA and the school building staff have a history of not telling the truth to the parents and to KSDE.

In an email to the investigator on March 22, 2026, the mother stated, ". . . Parental notification requirements — IDEA's procedural safeguards were primarily designed to help schools and parents work together, and Congress placed enormous emphasis on compliance with procedures giving parents a large measure of participation at every stage of the administrative process. When a school misrepresents what happened — especially involving an SRO incident with a nonverbal child — it directly undermines that participation right". The mother stated, "The district failed to provide accurate parental notification as required under 34 C.F.R. §300.504 and K.A.R. 91-40-17, and provided inaccurate information that denied us, the parents, meaningful participation in decisions regarding the student's BIP implementation. The discrepancies around the incident are in writing from the person we thought was [the student's] para, from the principal and from the director of secondary special education, and we still do not to this day know the correct story. How can we meaningfully be involved in our daugher's IEP and BIP process if we cannot get appropriate and consistent communication about a behavioral incident?".

The mother also noted that KSDE Child Complaint investigations have found violations where the LEA did not fulfill its procedural obligations under the IDEA and has required corrective action and staff training as remedies.

LEA Position

The LEA indicated their position in the April 6, 2026 Response to the Allegations by stating, "The district respectfully disagrees that 34 C.F.R. §300.504 or K.A.R. 91-40-17 were implicated by the March 9, 2026 incident. 34 C.F.R. §300.504 pertains to procedural safeguards notice requirements and is not triggered by a routine behavioral incident that does not involve a proposed or refused change to evaluation, placement, services, or disciplinary change of placement. Similarly, K.A.R. 91-40-17 pertains to parent participation in IEP team meetings and decision-making processes. Following the March 9 incident, the district did not propose or refuse any change to the student's IEP, BIP, placement, or services. Rather, staff implemented the existing BIP as written.

Further, the parents were provided timely communication regarding the incident through the student's daily communication log sent home on March 9, 2026 and additional clarification through follow-up communication on March 12, 2026. Meaningful parent participation under IDEA does not require parental involvement in each day-to-day instance of implementation of an already adopted BIP. Meaningful participation was provided when the BIP was developed and agreed upon during the annual IEP meeting on October 13, 2025".

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The following findings of fact are based on interviews and a review of documentation. Note that the findings from Issues One and Two are incorporated herein by reference.

1. The Daily Report dated March 9, 2026 handwritten by Paraprofessional 1reported that the student was throwing her body around, whining, yelling, and laughing at everything during the second hour math class. The report shows that the student spent 20 minutes completing guided math boxes and working on IXL math [an adaptive computerized math program] and spent 10 minutes in gross motor activities. The report also included an additional note for second hour describing the student's inappropriate behavior more specifically and stated, "School Resource Officer was called to help remove her".
2. On March 12, 2026 at 10:32 AM, the mother sent an email to the WRNMS Principal stating, "On March 9, 2026 it was noted on [the student's] communication sheet, with NO other contact or information from the teacher or administration or behavior team, that [the student] had such severe behaviors that the school resource officer had to be involved. Is it typical for there to be NO communication with the family when this occurs outside of a paras note on the daily communication sheet?? Does this all seem okay to you guys?? . . .

1. We received no communication from the school regarding the involvement of the school resource officer to help remove [the student] from the classroom during second hour on Monday, March 9, 2026. The para, wrote in the parent daily communication that the SRO officer was called in to help remove [the student]. Per Kansas law, the school is required to attempt to contact the parents at least two times the day of an incident that involves a school resource officer engaging with a student with an IEP and a BIP".
2. On March 12, 2026 at 10:53 AM, the WRNMS Principal responded stating, "With regards to the incident that you described, it's my understanding that our SRO was called to assist and used [the student's] preferred manipulative to redirect her attention, and she walked with him to the office where she de-escalated with [the Assistant Principal] who stated that she was calm when she arrived. He stated that he spoke with her for 5-7 minutes and then [the Dean of Students] walked her back to class".
3. In this same email, the WRNMS Principal acknowledged that the parents should have been contacted regarding the March 9, 2026 incident involving the SRO and indicated his administrative team were now aware of their responsibilities for future situations. Please note that the allegation that the building administrative team did not follow policy and procedures related to parent contact when an SRO is involved with a student will not be addressed as these do not fall under the jurisdiction of the IDEA and I have no authority to investigate such issues.
4. The parent responded via an email on March 12, 2026 at 11:09 AM to WRNMS Principal and copies to the Director of Secondary Special Services stating, "This is the 4th time this week I have asked you about this incident! Why have we STILL received no update until I asked about it AGAIN??? This is neither the right thing nor the legally required communication required in these circumstances. I want, in writing, TODAY, what the antecedent was to this incident, and how you plan to ensure your school staff legally and correctly handle these situations going forward. You suggesting an IEP meeting does not change the fact that it is Thursday at 11 AM, and you are just finally giving us a little bit of an update on an legally handled scenario by your staff on Monday morning during second hour. So, let's not pretend that you suggesting an IEP meeting in someway makes this all OK. Do the right thing, but in the very least, you need to do the legally required and correct thing. So, tell me in writing, why something like this occurred when we see it nowhere else, ever, with [the student]. What was occurring before the incident? You should be asking everyone involved what would make a child who never acts like this, suddenly not only be out of control, but have to have your SRO involved. You should be involving the behaviorist, immediately, to understand what in the world is going on?? You should be having some grave concerns about what is happening in the classroom to cause a child to have this kind of reaction. You yourself should be reading the bip [sic] and trying to understand what is going on. Pretending like you suggesting an IEP meeting is in some way the solution or is in someway our fault for what is happening in your school, is insulting and inappropriate. We have been asking for an FBA and a bip since November 13!!!! Could someone, ANYONE, take some proactive action on your end could??? SO, LET'S SEE WHAT YOU GET BACK TO ME WITH IN WRITING ABOUT THIS INCIDENT, TODAY, AND THE ANTECEDENT TO THE INCIDENT. IF YOUR STAFF WORKING WITH [the student] DOES NOT UNDERSTAND WHAT AN ANTECEDENT IS, THEN OBVIOUSLY [the BCBA] HAS NOT BEEN TRAINING THEM ON HOW TO APPROPRIATELY ADDRESS UNDERSTAND AND ADDRESS THE BEHAVIOR".

5. The Director of Secondary Special Education responded to the parents by email on March 12, 2026 at 3:00 PM stating, "In communicating with WRN staff, here are some more details regarding March 9. The support staff member who has been working with [the student] was unexpectedly absent on Monday after receiving military orders. As such,
6. Monday was the first day [the student] was with someone other than her preferred adult. (Coverage for [the student] has continued uninterrupted.) The staff member working with [the student] shared that [the student] started her day dysregulated. By 2nd hour, the staff member took [the student] for a walk to support regulation. Regulation did not occur and [the student] began screaming and thrashing. She went to the cooldown tent in [the Special Education Teacher's] room and continued thrashing, screaming, and throwing items at the staff member. The staff member said they would call mom (as is consistent with the [student's] behavior plan). [The student] yelled "no" and ran out of the room. Upon exiting the room, she started throwing trash cans at people. At this point, the SRO was involved as he was the closest additional adult to the space. At no point did the SRO touch [the student]. He used her preferred fidget and encouraged her, without touching her, to walk with him. They walked to [the Assistant Principal's] office. [The Assistant Principal]engaged in a conversation with [the student] who regulated quickly, and [the Dean of Students] walked her back to class. There were no further challenges".
7. The mother responded on March 12, 2026 at 3:17, 3:19 and 3:50 PM to the Director of Secondary Special Services again asking for an explanation of why the parents were not contacted on the date of the incident involving the SRO. The mother also wanted an explanation for "why your account differs from the written account we got from the parent educator on Monday. They said they called the SRO. You say the SRO just happened to be nearby. Very different account accounts". The mother also indicated she was filing a complaint of a procedural violation with KSDE in this email chain.
8. The Director of Special Services responded to the mother on March 13, 2026 at 4:58 PM restating the WRNMS Principal's explanation that it was an oversight that the parents had not been contacted on Monday of the incident involving the SRO and again noting that the WRNMS Principal had taken corrective action with his administrative team. This email included a new PWN proposing an expedited FBA.

9. In an email dated April 20, 2026, the Director of Secondary Special Education stated the student's preferred paraprofessional was Paraprofessional 2 who received military notification of deployment in March 2026. When asked about the discrepancy between the information in the March 12 email and the Paraprofessional Assignment Chart, she replied, "At the time of my writing the report [email], my understanding was that Monday was the first day [Paraprofessional 2] was out on military leave. That is not accurate. She was out Thursday and Friday the week before with potential military leave orders, and Monday was the first day the team had full clarity regarding her long-term military leave."
10. The LEA noted that the parents have refused to reconvene the IEP Team until the FBA is conducted; however, the parents have not provided written consent to conduct the proposed expedited FBA to date.

Conclusion

The parents specifically cited an IDEA regulation and a Kansas regulation to support an alleged procedural violation impacting the parents' participation in the decision-making process for their student's IEP and BIP based on differing reports of the March 9, 2026 incident involving the SRO.

The first IDEA regulation at 34 C.F.R. §300.504 requires that public agencies provide the parent with a copy of the Procedural Safeguards at least annually in understandable language to ensure parents are aware of their rights in regard to the IDEA. This document describes the rights of parents regarding (1) independent educational evaluations; (2) prior written notice; (3) parental consent; (4) access to education records; (5) opportunity to present and resolve complaints through the due process complaint and State complaint procedures; (6) the availability of mediation; (7) the child's placement during the pendency of any due process complaint; (8) procedures for students who are subject to placement in an interim alternative educational setting; (9) requirements for unilateral placement by parents of children in private schools at public expense; (10) hearings on due process complaints, including requirements for disclosure of evaluation results and recommendations; (11) State-level appeals (if applicable in the State); (12) civil actions, including the time period in which to file those actions; and (13) attorneys' fees.

In this case, the parents speak, read, write, and understand English and are aware of their procedural safeguard rights as evidenced through emails and the filing of this child complaint (State complaint) to resolve their allegations that the LEA has violated the IDEA, specifically in Issue Three that the differing accounts of the March 9 incident involving the SRO will impact their ability to meaningfully participate in the IEP and BIP decision-making process for the student. This IDEA regulation does not impact the alleged violation that the parents raise and, therefore, the LEA is in compliance with 34 C.F.R. §300.504 in regards to the procedural safeguards notice.

Kansas state regulations at K.A.R. 91-40-17(a) and federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.322 require that each public agency take steps to ensure that one or both of the parents of an exceptional child are present at each IEP team meeting or are afforded the opportunity to participate. These regulations more closely align with parents' allegation of a violation of the IDEA when the LEA provided differing accounts of the March 9 incident, which the parents believe impacted their ability to meaningfully participate in the IEP and BIP decision-making process.

It is important to note that the IDEA does not specifically state that public agencies must provide accurate information, but provisions related to parent participation imply and effectively require accuracy and truthfulness in the information public agencies provide to parents. Courts have consistently held that misleading or incomplete information that prevents informed parental involvement constitutes a procedural violation of IDEA.

As noted previously, federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.322 require that parents have the opportunity to participate in IEP Team meetings and to be involved in the decision-making process. The Amanda J. v. Clark County School District court case from the 9th Circuit in 2001 found that withholding information from the parents infringed upon their opportunity to participate in the IEP formulation process. In this case, the Clark County School District withheld critical evaluation data showing autism indicators. These were key factors about their child and the lack of disclosure impacted the development of an IEP reasonably calculated to provide FAPE.

This case highlights that the IDEA does not permit public agencies to withhold information from the parents that is necessary for them to make informed decisions. By failing to disclose the results of the evaluation, the Clark County School District prevented the parents from participating in the IEP process in any meaningful way and seriously infringed the parents' opportunity to participate in the IEP formulation process.

Although Kansas falls in the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals, we can look to the other Circuits for guidance. In this case, the findings of the investigation do reflect that the parents were provided with three differing versions of the incident involving the SRO officer on March 9, 2026. While there were differences with how the SRO became involved in the incident, all three reports show the student returned to the classroom and continued with her school day. The reports from the WRNMS Principal and the Director of Secondary Special Services both noted the interaction between the SRO and the student were positive resulting in the student becoming regulated and returning to her classroom. The LEA provided several possible antecedents which could have triggered the behavior on that day including being dysregulated when exiting the school bus that morning and a change in the paraprofessional working with the student.

It is noted that the parents are choosing to not participate in the IEP process at this time until an FBA is completed but, at the same time, not providing consent for the FBA to be conducted.

Regardless, the question is whether the differing reports of the incident involving the SRO provided to the parent will prevent the parents from participating in the IEP process in a meaningful way and seriously infringe the parents' opportunity to participate in the IEP and BIP formulation process in the future.

In this case, the SRO involvement actually helped the student to become regulated using strategies he had observed the special education staff using with the student as part of her IEP and BIP. All three reports included information about possible antecedents that could be discussed in the IEP and BIP formulation process. The discrepancy of whether the SRO was sent from the office or whether the SRO was in the vicinity and stepped in to assist school staff, is not a key factor that the IEP Team, including the parents, would need to consider during the IEP and BIP review and revision, if appropriate, process.

Based on the foregoing, the LEA is found in compliance with Kansas state regulations at K.A.R. 91-40-17(a) and federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.322. However, it recommended that the LEA review their procedures and practices for communicating effectively with parents in the future.

Issue Four

USD #437, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to inform the parents of a change in the paraprofessional assigned to work with the student beginning on March 9, 2026 and ensuring the new paraprofessional was appropriately trained to meet the unique needs of the student.

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.17 defines a free appropriate public education (FAPE) as special education and related services that are provided at public expense, under public supervision and direction, and without charge and are provided in conformity with an individualized education program (IEP).

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.503(a) require school districts to provide parents with prior written notice a reasonable time before they propose or refuse to initiate or change the identification, evaluation, educational placement, or the provision of FAPE to the student.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.320(a)(4) requires IEPs to include a statement of the special education and related services and supplementary aids and services, based on peer-reviewed research to the extent practicable, to be provided to the child, or on behalf of the child, and a statement of the program modifications or supports for school personnel that will be provided to enable the child to advance appropriately toward attaining the annual goals; to be involved in and make progress in the general education curriculum and to participate in extracurricular and other nonacademic activities; and to be educated and participate with other children with disabilities and nondisabled children.

Parent Position

The parents reported that the explanation of the incident on March 9, 2026 from the Director of Secondary Special Services indicated that a different paraprofessional was working with the student on that date instead of the one who typically worked with the student. The parents expressed concerns that they were not informed of this change in paraprofessional assignments. The parents believe the LEA must provide this information to them as the student is nonverbal and unable to communicate with the parents about her school day. The parents are concerned that the different paraprofessional who was working with the student on May 9, 2026 may not have been appropriately trained to meet the student's unique personal hygiene needs and may not be able to implement the student's IEP and BIP.

They also indicated that the LEA never provided them with the names of the paraprofessionals who were assigned to work with the student during the 2025-26 school year. Because they do not know the names of the various paraprofessionals assigned to work with the student, the parents have this same concern for all those paraprofessionals as well.

LEA Position

The LEA noted that personnel assignments, including paraprofessional assignments, are administrative staffing decisions. Such decisions do not require prior parental notice or parental participation under IDEA or state regulations.

The LEA also reported that, while the student's IEP does not require any specific training or support to be provided for school personnel, all paraprofessionals working within the school district receive ongoing professional development and training and the Paraprofessionals 1, 2, and 3 all participated in both district-wide training as well as training specific to students in the Special Education Teacher's classroom. The LEA indicated the student has been provided with ongoing paraprofessional support by trained staff as required by the IEP during the 2025-26 school year.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The following findings of fact are based on interviews and a review of documentation. Note that the findings from Issues One, Two, and Three are incorporated herein by reference.

1. During the 2025-26 school year, two IEPs were in effect. These were dated August 6 and October 13, 2025. Both IEPs require the student to receive special education support from a paraprofessional in the classroom setting and neither IEP required any specialized training and/or support for school staff as a related service. Both IEPs also included a BIP which required staff "to be aware of the behavior plan so that we are all coming at the behaviors with the same solution. Staff should have similar ways to responding to [student] (tone when "serious" vs "playful", amount of time before she is removed from room, what is identified as a stim and what is identified as attention-seeking behavior)".

2. The following table summarizes the 2025-26 Paraprofessional Assignment Chart which showed the paraprofessionals assigned to support the student between August 12, 2025 and March 12, 2026:

Paraprofessional	Assignment dates
Paraprofessional 1	August 12 – December 19 except for a half-day on October 29, 2025
Paraprofessional 1	January 5 – January 16, 2026 except for January 15, 2025
Paraprofessional 1	March 5 – March 12, 2026
Paraprofessional 2	January 20 – March 4, 2026 except for a half-day on February 16, 2026
Paraprofessional 3	October 29, 2025 (half-day)
Paraprofessional 3	January 15, 2026
Paraprofessional 3	February 16, 2026 (half-day)

3. Within the past 12 months, Paraprofessional 1 participated in the following professional development: Opening Convocation, Classroom/Student training taught by the Special Education Teacher; and an Early Release PD opportunity taught by the Director of Secondary Education.
4. Since January 2026, Paraprofessional 2 participated in the following professional opportunities: Human Resources Orientation; behavior therapist and planning taught by the BCBA; Initial Para Training; and Group Supervision for behavior therapists and registered behavior therapists by the BCBA.
5. Paraprofessional 2 met with the BCBA on January 20, January 21, January 22, February 5, and February 23, 2026 for individual consultation and mentoring to work effectively with the student.
6. During the 2025-26 school year, Paraprofessional 3 participated in the following professional development: Initial para training; HR orientation; Convocation; Every Kid Needs a Champion training; Rethinking Challenging Kids; Stress and Childhood; and Classroom/Student training taught by the Special Education Teacher.
7. As noted previously in Issue Three, Paraprofessional 2 received notice of military deployment orders on March 4 and was placed on long-term leave as of March 9, 2026. The LEA assigned the paraprofessional who had previously worked with the student during the 2025-26 school year, Paraprofessional 1, to again provide the required special education support in the classroom for the student.

Conclusion

The IDEA regulations require the IEP to include a statement of the special education services to be provided to a student to receive FAPE. The IDEA regulations also require parents to be given prior written notice when the public agency proposes or refuses to change the identification, evaluation, placement, or provision of FAPE to the child and defines the term "FAPE" as special education services provided in conformity with the IEP. However, there is nothing in the IDEA regulations that require a public agency to include the names of the specific staff assigned to provide those special education services to the child.

Documentation showed that the student's IEPs required special education support in the classroom setting. Documentation provided by the LEA indicated that the student received this special education support from primarily by two different paraprofessionals during the 2025-26 school year. Paraprofessional 1 worked with the student starting at the beginning of the school year until Paraprofessional 2 was hired by the LEA at the beginning of the second semester. Paraprofessional 2 worked with the student starting on January 20 until being deployed by the military at the beginning of March 2026. At that time, Paraprofessional 1 returned to working with the student during the long-term absence. The LEA assigned Paraprofessional 3 when either of the two primary paraprofessionals were absent for short periods. The documentation shows the LEA provided the student with the required special education support services at all times during the 2025-26 school year.

Documentation also showed that the student's BIP required staff working with the student to be aware of the BIP and to be consistent with implementation. The LEA's documentation showed that all three paraprofessionals assigned to work with the student during the 2025-26 school year have received training to support students with behavioral concerns and both Paraprofessionals 1 and 2 received targeted training from the Special Education Teacher for specific students receiving special education services in their classroom. In addition, Paraprofessional 2 received ongoing consultation and mentoring from the BCBA specifically focusing on the student.

In this case, the student's BIP required the staff working with the student to be aware of the BIP and implement with fidelity. Two paraprofessionals were assigned to work with the student during the school year with third paraprofessional serving as the substitute if the "regular" paraprofessional was absent. Documentation shows that all three paraprofessionals were familiar with the student's BIP and had received training to support student behavior. In addition, both "regular" paraprofessionals had received student specific training and support from the Special Education Teacher and the BCBA. Based on this information, the paraprofessionals working with the student were appropriately trained to meet the student's unique needs in the school setting.

The LEA did not make any changes to the type, amount, or location of the special education services to be provided for the student to receive FAPE but only changed the paraprofessional assigned to provide the services required by the IEPs. Because there were no proposed changes in identification, evaluation, placement, and provision of FAPE, the LEA was not required to provide the parent with PWN.

Based on the foregoing, the LEA is found in compliance.

Issue Five

USD #437, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to respond to the parents' request for a functional behavior assessment (FBA) and an updated behavior intervention plan (BIP) on November 13, 2025.

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.303(a)(2) require public agencies to ensure that a reevaluation of each child with a disability is conducted if the child's parent or teacher requests a reevaluation.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.503(a) require school districts to provide parents with prior written notice a reasonable time before they propose or refuse to initiate or change the identification, evaluation, educational placement, or the provision of FAPE to the student.

Parent Position

The mother stated their position when filing the Child Complaint with KSDE by writing, "On November 13th when [the Special Education Teacher], [the student's] teacher and case manager, was requesting I come pickup [the student] for the 8th time this year, we asked [the Special Education Teacher], in writing (text) and in person, for an FBA and BIP update, immediately. [The father] and I both reached out to [the BCBA] directly, in writing, as this was not the first time we had asked [the Special Education Teacher] to follow the BIP, and to involve the district behaviorist. [The father] was, ironically, with [the Director of Secondary Special Services] at the Tri-State Special Education Law Conference in Omaha, and in person requested her assistance. [The student] currently has a BIP, which in Kansas is a part of the IEP, and therefore part of IDEA. We heard NOTHING back, requested an update in writing on December 2, 2025. At that time we were told we would be receiving further information, and here we are March 15, 2026, still asking for more information. On March 9, 2026 [the student] had behaviors that prompted the staff to call the SRO for her removal. We received no communication, and AGAIN asked for update on her FBA and BIP. Nothing. After repeatedly asking [the WRNMS Principal] and informing him that this is a procedural violation and that we will be reporting this to the state, he involved [the Director of Secondary Services], sped director, and she sent a PWN. A PWN for an 11/13/2025 [evaluation] [sic] was sent on 03/12/2026, a full quarter and a half, 120 days, after the request was made".

LEA Position

The LEA acknowledged that both the father and the mother contacted staff on November 13, 2025 regarding the student's inappropriate behavior and requested the involvement of the BCBA. Multiple email exchanges occurred between LEA staff and the parents on November 13 and November 14, 2025 regarding an observation by the BCBA. Consistent with those communications, the district's BCBA conducted the observation of the student on November 14, 2025 and provided recommendations to staff. The LEA stated, "At no point in those communications did the parent make a clear request for a formal evaluation, Functional Behavior Assessment (FBA), or revision of the student's Behavior Intervention Plan (BIP). Rather, the communications were interpreted as collaboration regarding behavioral observation and supports".

On December 2, 2025, the student's mother contacted the Special Education Teacher and requested an update. Multiple emails dated between December 2 and 4, 2025 were exchanged by the mother and the Special Education Teacher where the recommendations made by the BCBA were shared. The LEA stated, "Between December 4, 2025 and March 10, 2026, while multiple email communications occurred between the family and district staff, none included a clear request for a formal evaluation, an FBA, or revision of the BIP".

The mother first clearly expressed that she believed an FBA had been requested previously and requested that the district proceed with a reevaluation in an email on March 11, 2026. Upon receiving this clarified request, the LEA responded on March 13, 2026, by issuing a PWN seeking parental consent to conduct a targeted evaluation in the form of an FBA. However, the LEA has not yet received written consent to conduct the FBA. Accordingly, the district is legally unable to proceed with formal evaluative procedures at this time.

The LEA believes it responded promptly once a clear request for an evaluation was communicated by the parents and took appropriate steps to obtain consent. The district cannot conduct a formal FBA without parental consent.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The following findings of fact are based on interviews and a review of documentation. Note that the findings from Issues One, Two, Three, and Four are incorporated herein by reference.

1. The father sent an email on November 13, 2025 at 6:44 AM to the BCBA regarding a request from the Special Education Teacher. The father stated, ". . . [The student] is struggling with behaviors at school and we are hoping that you can go over and observe. I don't think that as much active ignoring is going on as it could be but hoping you can help then within the class . . . "
2. The mother sent an email to the father and the BCBA on November 13, 2026 at 7:53 AM stating, "They just let me know that she came off the bus and is having lots of problems so I'm going to pick her up again today. This is like the sixth time I've had to go pick her up. We need somebody to be doing some intervention and help here this is not OK".
3. The mother sent a text to the Special Education Teacher on November 13, 2025 in response to being asked to take the student home. In the text, the mother asks about the involvement of the behaviorist and the Special Education Teacher replies that a request has been made. The mother then responds by stating, " . . . I need the behaviorist to intervene, and we need some real interventions laid out and a plan".

4. The father sent an email to the "Team" on November 13, 2025 at 12:49 PM stating that he "understood that [the BCBA] is coming over to the middle school tomorrow to observe [the student]". The father indicated that the student had been picked up early by the parents seven times due to behavior even though the parents had shared strategies that have worked in the past, tried starting the student's morning in a positive way, and providing rewards for having a good day at school. The father stated, "Active ignoring works but only works with consistency and fidelity. We can't continue to try to correct [the student's] behavior from afar. The school team needs to develop a plan that can work based on ideas that we have presented and ideas that you are able to generate together. It is time for a different approach".
5. The BCBA contacted the parents via email on November 13, 2025 at 6:02 PM to gather information for the upcoming observation and the father responded on November 14, 2025 at 7:02 AM sharing information about strategies that had and had not worked in the past.
6. In an email to the Special Education Teacher dated December 2, 2025 at 2:21 PM, the mother requested "an update on [the student's] behavior, as well as the behavioral assessment and plan. We have heard NOTHING since we made this request, no communication at all".
7. The Special Education Teacher responded on that same date at 4:17 PM indicating that the BCBA completed the observation on November 14, 2025 and met with the Special Education Teacher on November 18, 2025 to share "some thoughts and recommendations". The recommendations from the BCBA included addressing sensory needs using a choice board, providing high rates of reinforcement with behavior specific praise for any desired behaviors through an expansion of the student's current token economy, and changing the focus to desired behaviors paired with visual and written supports. The Special Education Teacher told the parents that the BCBA met with staff working with the student on November 19, 2025 to review and discuss these recommendations. The Special Education Teacher also informed the parents that she was arranging for more in-depth training from the BCBA for all staff working in her classroom as well as requesting the BCBA provide staff support for consistent implementation of the recommendations.
8. The mother responded on that same date at 6:45 PM stating, "Great, thank you for this update on the plan". The mother also requested some type of daily communication between the school and home. The Special Education Teacher responded in an email to the mother on December 4, 2025 at 8:06 PM indicating the daily behavior sheet was being modified to address this request for daily information about the student's school day in a "more reader friendly family form".
9. On March 11, 2026, the mother sent an email at 8:36 AM to the WRNMS Principal stating, "Is it not standard practice when a family requests a behavior plan that an assessment is conducted and the team, including the parents, are a part of a meeting to go over the plan, its implementation, how data will be collected and used?? Was [the BCBA] only involved on the one occasion or is she still involved?? We called for a BIP, which is a part of the IEP process, and requires an FBA and an update to the current BIP in her IEP, which requires an IEP meeting to ensure you have developed a plan and that the BIP is developed and implemented with fidelity. Has an FBA been completed??".

10. The WRNMS Principal responded to the parents via email on March 12, 2026 at 9:33 AM stating, "Since December 2, [the BCBA] has supported staff in-person 6 times evenly spaced across the weeks. As we have engaged as a staff, we were not under the impression that an FBA was requested but rather observations and recommendations, which is what we've sought from [the BCBA]. As this appears to be a communication error, I apologize. There has clearly been a communication breakdown on our end with regards to keeping you in the loop of when [the BCBA] has provided support and what support has been provided, and again, for that I apologize. Upon reflection of all of this information, I believe that it would be in our best interest to consider holding an IEP team meeting after break to discuss the FBA with our entire team present including our School Psych in order to determine our next steps and to ensure that we are moving forward in a positive direction. I have included [the Director of Secondary Special Services] on this response as well so that we can continue to respond to your concerns as a team. Please let me know your thoughts and potential dates/times that would work for you two with regards to an IEP team meeting".
11. The mother sent an email to the WRNMS Principal and the Director of Secondary Special Services on March 12, 2026 at 11:09 AM which stated, "The IEP meeting should happen after the FBA. Is [the BCBA] going to have the FBA done by the last week of this month?? Please, do tell. Again, in writing by the end of the day. We will set a date for an IEP and a BIP meeting when the FBA, which is a required aspect of the IDEA protected BIP process that we requested on November 13th is completed and we have had a chance to review it and come to the meeting with an understanding of what it is that [the BCBA] found in the FBA that we again requested on November 13. On March 9, [the student] had a behavior that required the physical involvement of an SRO, and you still do not have an SBA [sic] and an updated behavioral plan for us to view and to have a meeting with the staff about, that was requested on November 13. You legally had 60 days from November 13. It is now March 12. I want in writing by the end of the day what was happening on the ninth. I want in writing by the end of today when the FBA that was requested on November 13 will be completed and when we will have a copy to review before a BIP meeting THAT IS LEGALLY SOMEWHERE AROUND 60 DAYS OVERDUE!".
12. The Director of Secondary Special Services sent an email to the parents on March 12, 2026 at 3:00 PM which responded to questions regarding the incident on March 9, 2026. In addition, the email addressed the request for an FBA by stating, "Regarding the FBA request, attached is a PWN for consent to evaluate. You will notice that the PWN stipulates that this FBA "is not intended to be [the student's] triennial reevaluation, nor will it alter her 3-year reevaluation due date." Districts have varying practices when it comes to FBAs. In Auburn-Washburn, we get consent on a PWN prior to initiating the FBA process. You can print and sign the attached PWN or you can sign the copy that was emailed to you to sign digitally. Either way, upon receipt of the signed FBA PWN, we will initiate the FBA. I have added [the School Psychologist] to this email thread as he is the psychologist at WRN and he will be facilitating the FBA as is consistent with district precedent".

13. The mother responded through an email to the Director of Secondary Special Services at 3:12 PM stating, "When will the FBA be completed? We made the original request on November 13. The calendar does not start when we sign the PWN is signed, as you guys did not follow the appropriate protocol. I want in writing when the SBA [sic] will be completed, and this needs to be escalated because it has been over 120 days since our request".
14. The Director of Secondary Special Education created and sent the parents a new PWN dated March 13, 2026 proposing an expedited reevaluation of the student based upon the mother's request for the FBA to be "escalated". This PWN stated, "The LEA is proposing to obtain consent to conduct a targeted evaluation of [the student] for the sole purpose of completing a Functional Behavior Assessment (FBA). This evaluation is not intended to serve as [the student's] triennial reevaluation and will not change her current reevaluation due date. The purpose of the FBA is to assist the IEP Team in understanding the function of [the student's] behaviors and to inform potential revisions to her Behavior Intervention Plan (BIP) and related IEP supports and accommodations. At the parent's request, the LEA is prepared to complete the FBA on an expedited timeline (approximately 13 school days rather than the standard 60 school days)". The LEA reported that the parents had not yet provided written consent to proceed with the FBA.
15. In the initial Child Complaint Form, the parent noted "The Director of Secondary Special Services had the audacity to call this an expedited FBA on March 13th. We made the request TO HER , to the BCBA, and to the Special Education Teacher all on 11/13/2025. 120 days. "expedited" ?? Until I said reported to state, didn't get a PWN".
16. During the interview on April 7, 2026, the mother acknowledged receiving the PWN proposing to conduct an expedited FBA but stated that the written consent to proceed with the FBA so the student's BIP could be reviewed and updated, if needed, had not been provided. When asked for the reason(s) why consent had not yet been provided, the mother indicated she "wanted the SEA [State Education Authority which is KSDE] to do their job".

Conclusion

The IDEA regulations allow the parents to request an evaluation of the student and require the public agency to respond to such a request by providing the parents with PWN either proposing or refusing to conduct the requested evaluation.

In this case, the original request for the BCBA to observe the student was made by the father on November 13, 2025 at 6:44 AM. This request was followed by the mother's text to the Special Education Teacher after being called about the student's behavior when getting off the bus that morning stating that "I need the behaviorist to intervene, and we need some real interventions laid out and a plan". These two requests were followed by an email to the "Team" from the father at 12:49 PM acknowledging that the BCBA was planning to observe the student on November 14, 2025 and indicating that "The school team needs to develop a plan that can work based on ideas that we have presented and ideas that you are able to generate together. It is time for a different approach".

No written documentation was provided showing that the parents requested an FBA on November 13, 2025. Instead, the documentation reviewed showed the parents requested an observation and recommendations from the BCBA as an intervention.

This is supported by the interaction between the mother and the Special Education Teacher on December 2, 2025 when the mother requested "an update on [the student's] behavior, as well as the behavioral assessment and plan". At that time, the Special Education Teacher provided a summary of the observation, the BCBA recommendations, and the plan for the BCBA involvement moving forward, and the mother acknowledged this information in an email on December 2, 2025 at 6:45 PM by stating, "Great, thank you for this update on the plan". This interaction supports the LEA's position that an FBA was not requested on November13, 2025 because the mother did not mention or question the status of the alleged request for an FBA in her communication with the Special Education Teacher.

This is also supported by the findings that the LEA did not provide the parents with PWN following the parents' communications on November 13, 2026 because documentation showed that the LEA's practice is to provide a PWN to obtain written parent consent prior to initiating the FBA process. It is also noted that the LEA's practice is to have a school psychologist facilitate the FBA rather than the BCBA. Neither of these things occurred prior to the November 14, 2025 observation of the student by the BCBA.

It is clear that the mother requested that the BIP be reviewed and updated based upon a new FBA in her email to the WRNMS Principal on March 11, 2026. On March 12, 2026, in response to the mother's request, the LEA offered to reconvene the student's IEP Team to discuss the BIP and the FBA; however, the mother refused to meet until the FBA had been completed. On March 12, 2026, following LEA practices, the Director of Secondary Special Education sent the parent a PWN proposing to conduct an FBA of the student but the parent responded via an email stating "I want in writing when the SBA [sic] will be completed, and this needs to be escalated because it has been over 120 days since our request". Based upon that request from the mother, the Director of Secondary Special Education sent a new PWN on March 13, 2026 proposing to an expedited reevaluation of the student to conduct the FBA. To date, the parents have not yet provided written consent to proceed with the reevaluation.

Based on the foregoing, the initial request for an FBA was made by the mother in an email to the WRNMS Principal on March 11, 2026 and the LEA responded appropriately on March 13, 2026 by providing the parents with a PWN proposing an expedited reevaluation to conduct the FBA. As such, the LEA is found in compliance.

It is interesting to note that the parents have chosen not to provide written consent to allow the LEA to conduct the expedited FBA for the student so that the IEP Team can consider this new information when reviewing and, if appropriate, updating the student's BIP. This delay appears to be at odds with the parent's original goal of obtaining updated data to support the student's appropriate behavior in the school setting.

Summary of Conclusions/Corrective Action

ISSUE ONE: Violations of federal regulations were found at 34 C.F.R. 300.323(c)(2) and corrective action is required as described below:

1. Within 30 days of the date of this report, the LEA will provide SETS with an assurance statement that it will comply with federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.323(c)(2) which require public agencies to ensure students' IEPs will be implemented as written.
2. Prior to the first day of the 2026-27 school year, the LEA will provide training for the Special Education Teacher through TASN on strategies for identifying the essential elements from the general education social studies grade level standards and how to choose visuals to appropriately modify tests/quizzes and assignments for students participating in the State's alternate assessment. No later than August 31, 2026, the LEA will provide SETS with documentation that the training was provided including who provided the training, when the training was provided, and copies of the training agenda and the presentation slides and/or handouts.

ISSUE TWO: Based on interviews and a review of documentation, no violation of IDEA regulations was found.

ISSUE THREE: Based on interviews and a review of documentation, no violation of IDEA or Kansas regulations was found.

ISSUE FOUR: Based on interviews and a review of documentation, no violation of IDEA regulations was found.

ISSUE FIVE: Based on interviews and a review of documentation, no violation of IDEA regulations was found.

Right to Appeal

Either party may appeal the findings or conclusions in this report by filing a written notice of appeal with the State Commissioner of Education, ATTN: Special Education and Title Services, Landon State Office Building, 900 SW Jackson Street, Suite 620, Topeka, KS 66612-1212. The notice of appeal may also be filed by email to formalcomplaints@ksde.gov The notice of appeal must be delivered within 10 calendar days from the date of this report.

For further description of the appeals process, see Kansas Administrative Regulations 91-40-51(f).

K.A.R. 91-40-51(f) Appeals.

(1) Any agency or complainant may appeal any of the findings or conclusions of a compliance report prepared by the special education section of the department by filing a written notice of appeal with the state commissioner of education. Each notice shall be filed within 10 days from the date of the report. Each notice shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect.

Upon receiving an appeal, an appeal committee of at least three department of education members shall be appointed by the commissioner to review the report and to consider the information provided by the local education agency, the complainant, or others. The appeal process, including any hearing conducted by the appeal committee, shall be completed within 15 days from the date of receipt of the notice of appeal, and a decision shall be rendered within five days after the appeal process is completed unless the appeal committee determines that exceptional circumstances exist with respect to the particular complaint. In this event, the decision shall be rendered as soon as possible by the appeal committee.

(2) If an appeal committee affirms a compliance report that requires corrective action by an agency, that agency shall initiate the required corrective action immediately. If, after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the agency shall be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following:

(A) The issuance of an accreditation deficiency advisement;
(B) the withholding of state or federal funds otherwise available to the agency;
(C) the award of monetary reimbursement to the complainant; or
(D) any combination of the actions specified in paragraph (f)(2)

In the Matter of the Appeal of the Report
Issued in Response to a Complaint Filed
Against Unified School District No. 437
Auburn/Washburn Public Schools: 26FC437-013

DECISION OF THE APPEAL COMMITTEE

Background

This matter commenced with the filing of a complaint on March 16, 2026 by ------- on behalf of their child, -------. In the remainder of this decision, ------- will be referred to as "the parents," and ------- will be referred to as "the student." An investigation of the complaint was undertaken by a complaint investigator on behalf of the Special Education, and Title Services team at the Kansas State Department of Education. Following the investigation, a Complaint Report, addressing the allegations, was issued on April 28, 2026. That Complaint Report concluded that there was a violation of special education statutes and regulations.

Thereafter, the parents filed an appeal of the Complaint Report regarding only Issue 5. Upon receipt of the appeal, an appeal committee was appointed and it reviewed the original complaint filed by the parent, the Complaint Report, the parents' notice of appeal, and the district's response to the appeal. The Appeal Committee has reviewed the information provided in connection with this matter and now issues this final Appeal Decision.

Preliminary Matters

A copy of the regulation regarding the filing of an appeal [K.A.R. 91-40-51(f)] was attached to the Complaint Report. That regulation states, in part, that: "Each notice shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect." Accordingly, the burden for supplying a sufficient basis for appeal is on the party submitting the appeal. When a party submits an appeal and makes statements in the notice of appeal without support, the Committee does not attempt to locate the missing support.

No new issues will be decided by the Appeal Committee. The appeal process is a review of the Complaint Report. The Appeal Committee does not conduct a separate investigation. The appeal committee's function will be to determine whether sufficient evidence exists to support the findings and conclusions in the Complaint Report.

Discussion of Issues on Appeal

The sole issue under appeal is Issue five:

> USD #437, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to respond to the parents' request for a functional behavior assessment (FBA) and an updated behavior intervention plan (BIP) on November 13, 2025.

The pertinent regulation is 34 C.F.R. 300.503(a), which states (Emphasis added).

(a) Notice. Written notice that meets the requirements of paragraph (b) of this section must be given to the parents of a child with a disability a reasonable time before the public agency--

(1) Proposes to initiate or change the identification, evaluation, or educational placement of the child or the provision of FAPE to the child; or
(2) Refuses to initiate or change the identification, evaluation, or educational placement of the child or the provision of FAPE to the child.

At issue in this appeal is: Was the district required to respond to requests from the parents with a PWN, and if so when?

The regulation says that the PWN must be given to parents only when the public agency proposes or refuses to initiate or change the identification, evaluation, or educational placement of the child or the provision of FAPE to the child. However, the Office of Special Education Programs (OSEP), which is the office within the United States Department of Education that writes and enforces the federal special education regulations has provided the following guidance:

> The purpose of the written notice requirement is to inform parents of a public agency's final action on a proposal or refusal to initiate or change the identification, evaluation, or educational placement, or the provision of FAPE to a particular child. Regardless of how a change to the above factors is suggested, it is the responsibility of the public agency to make a final decision and actually implement any determined change. Therefore, in the circumstances where a public agency is not proposing a change, but rather agreeing with a change that has been proposed by a parent, the public agency would be required to provide prior written notice to the parent, consistent with 34 CFR § 300.503 (emphasis added).
> See, Letter to Lieberman, 52 IDELR 18 (OSEP 2008).

Accordingly, it does not matter whether a proposal is made by a school district or by a parent. When a proposal is made by either party, and a final decision is made, a PWN is required. The PWN must be provided to the parent within a reasonable time. In Kansas, a reasonable time in which to provide a PWN is 15 school days, unless there is an unusual circumstance (See Kansas Special Education Process Handbook, Chapter 1, Section D, p. 6) for timeline. PH-Ch01 [https://www.ksde.gov/docs/default-source/sets/ph-ch01.pdf].

One of the problems with this regulation is that it uses undefined terms. In particular it does not define the term "proposes." That is particularly problematic because the very action that triggers the PWN requirement (for the situation in this complaint) is when a parent "proposes to initiate or change the identification, evaluation, or educational placement of the child or the provision of FAPE to the child."

What does it mean to "propose" something? The Appeal Committee looked at various definitions of the term "propose" in legal dictionaries, standard dictionaries and on-line dictionaries. All had similar definitions. The Black Law Dictionary defined "proposal" as "An offer; something proffered. An offer, by one person to another, of terms and conditions with reference to some work or undertaking, or for the transfer of property, the acceptance whereof will make a contract between them." A similar, although less formal definition in Dictionary.com is that "proposal" means "the act of offering or suggesting something for acceptance, adoption, or performance".

Using either of these definitions, it is clear that the school district is required to respond with a PWN to any proposal from the parent regarding identification, evaluation, or educational placement of the child or the provision of FAPE to the child. The only remaining question is whether the parents in this complaint made a proposal. To address that question, the Appeal Committee looks at the uncontested findings of fact in the complaint report on this issue

In finding of fact 1 (on p. 37), the report says:

> The father sent an email on November 13, 2025 at 6:44 AM to the BCBA regarding a request from the Special Education Teacher. The father stated, ". . . [The student] is struggling with behaviors at school and we are hoping that you can go over and observe. I don't think that as much active ignoring is going on as it could be but hoping you can help then within the class . . . "

This is a request for observation, not a proposal related to identification, evaluation, placement or the provision of a free appropriate public education (FAPE). As such, a PWN was not required.

In finding of fact 2 (on p. 37), the report says:

> The mother sent an email to the father and the BCBA on November 13, 2026 at 7:53 AM stating, "They just let me know that she came off the bus and is having lots of problems so I'm going to pick her up again today. This is like the sixth time I've had to go pick her up. We need somebody to be doing some intervention and help here this is not OK (emphasis added)".

Here, the parent is making a request for somebody to "be doing some intervention and help here." A request for help, however, does not meet the definition of a proposal, which may be accepted or rejected.

Finding of Fact 3 (on page 17) is similar. It says:

> The mother sent a text to the Special Education Teacher on November 13, 2025 in response to being asked to take the student home. In the text, the mother asks about the involvement of the behaviorist and the Special Education Teacher replies that a request has been made. The mother then responds by stating, ". . . I need the behaviorist to intervene, and we need some real interventions laid out and a plan (emphasis added)".

When a parent requests "real interventions" and a "plan," the parent is not submitting a proposal that may be accepted or denied. Rather, the parent is requesting that the school district develop a proposal.

Finding of Fact 4, on page 37-38) describes an email from the parents to the "Team" on November 13, 2025 at 12:49 PM stating,

> We can't continue to try to correct [the student's] behavior from afar. The school team needs to develop a plan that can work based on ideas that we have presented and ideas that you are able to generate together. It is time for a different approach.

This statement, like the previous statements, is not a proposal. It was not sufficiently specific enough "for acceptance, adoption, or performance." It is essentially a request for a proposal. School districts may consider such requests as a request for an IEP meeting to consider the parents' concerns, but until parents make an actual proposal for which the school district must either accept or deny in a final decision, the district response need not be in a PWN.

Note: A PWN was finally delivered on March 11, 2026, offering to conduct a functional behavioral assessment (FBA). This PWN was sent 4 months after the parents first requested help through interventions and a plan. The parents have not provided the necessary consent for the district to proceed with the proposed FBA. Accordingly, the proposed FBA has not been initiated.

Conclusion

For the reasons stated herein, the conclusion in the report on this issue is sustained.

This is the final decision on this matter. There is no further appeal. This Appeal Decision is issued this 14th day of May, 2026.

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #402, AUGUSTA PUBLIC SCHOOLS
ON MARCH 26, 2026

DATE OF REPORT: APRIL 30, 2026

This report is in response to a complaint filed with the Kansas State Department of Education against USD #204 Augusta Public Schools on behalf of ------- by her mother -------. In the remainder of the report, ------- will be referred to as "the student" and ------- as "the parent" or "the complainant."

When a special education complaint is filed against a school district that is a member of a special education cooperative or interlocal, or that uses any other state recognized public agency to serve children with disabilities, the term "local education agency (LEA)" will be used. This report includes the school district, and the interlocal which is recognized by the state as an administrative agency for public elementary or secondary schools and is serving the educational needs of this student. In this case, the complaint is against USD #402 (Augusta Public Schools) which is supported by the USD #638 Butler County Special Education Interlocal. In the remainder of the report, USD #402 and #638 will be referred to as "the LEA."

For the 2025-2026 school year the student is attending the third grade at Lincoln Elementary which will be referred to as "the school" in the remainder of the report. School and LEA staff will be referred to In the remainder of this report as follows:

- April Hilyard, director
- Denise Walton, assistant director
- Ken Talley, principal
- Jayme Whitlow, third grade teacher
- Annie Lee, kindergarten teacher
- Kelly Nelson, speech/ language therapist

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) allows for a 30-day timeline to investigate a complaint from the date in which it was filed. In this case, a one-week extension was requested and granted. A complaint is considered filed on the date on which it was received by KSDE. The KSDE initially received the complaint on March 26, 2026.

Evidence Reviewed

The LEA made the following staff available for phone interviews on April 14, 2026 as part of this investigation.

- Denise Walton, assistant director
- Ken Talley, principal
- Jayme Whitlow, third grade teacher

During the investigation, the complaint investigator reviewed all evidence and documentation provided by the LEA and the parent. Additionally, the complaint investigator contacted the parent and/or director on March 27, 31, April 7, 9, 13, 14, 19, 20, 22 and 23, 2026 by email to clarify evidence and documentation.

In completing this investigation, the complaint investigator reviewed documentation provided by the complainant and LEA. Although additional documentation was provided and reviewed, the following materials were used as the basis of the findings and conclusions of the investigation:

Documents -

1. The student's initial IEP dated February 28, 2020.
2. Exit and Extended Absence Information form for the student dated August 11, 2021.
3. Student's kindergarten registration form for the 2022-2023 school year.
4. Electronic message exchange between the third grade teacher and parent on September 6, 2025.
5. Email from the parent to the principal requesting the student's cumulative record sent September 25, 2025.
6. The principal replied confirming the records request on September 26, 2025.
7. Email from the parent to the principal noting the absence of the student's Pre-K IEP in the cumulative records, sent October 2, 2025.
8. The principal replied, "IEP paperwork is not housed in [LEAs] cumulative folders, those documents are kept at the interlocal. I can't tell you when the exit meeting occurred." sent on October 6, 2025.
9. Email from the parent to the principal requesting special education testing dated February 13, 2026.
10. Email reply from the principal stating that the parent request for testing had been forwarded to the school psychologist dated February 16, 2026.
11. Evaluation PWN dated February 27, 2026, signed by the parent on March 3, 2026.
12. IEP meeting minutes dated March 11, 2026.
13. Interim IEP dated March 11, 2026.
14. PWN consenting IEP, signed by parent on March 11, 2026.
15. Kindergarten teacher statement related to knowledge of student's IEP status, dated April 9, 2026.

16. LEA response to allegations dated April 9, 2026.
17. Annual IEP dated April 16, 2026.
18. Email exchange with the assistant director to clarify evidence from the speech/language therapist sent April 22, 2026.
19. Students Fastbridge scores for grades 1, 2 and the first two data points for grade 3.

Background Information

The student named in this complaint is attending the third grade at an LEA elementary school during the 2025–2026 school year. According to the parent, the student first qualified for special education services when the student was three with the identified exceptionality of developmental delay. The student attended the LEA's three year old early childhood special education program until four years of age at which time the parents moved the student to a local private preschool program. The student re-enrolled in the LEA for kindergarten for the 2022-2023 school year. The student received title one, tier 2 support in math and reading in first grade, testing out of support at the end of first grade.The student was diagnosed with ADHD in October 2025 by their pediatrician. At that time, the student began taking Vyvance 10 mg daily. In February 2026, the dosage was increased to 20 mg daily. In March of 2026, the medication was changed to 5mg per day of Focalin each morning.

The student's interim IEP, as of the complaint filing, was dated March 11, 2026 and includes the following two goals:

1. Reading comprehension.
2. Math computation.

The March 11, 2026 IEP provides student accommodations and modifications in reading for all assignments and assessments, in all core content academic areas (ELA/Reading, Math, Science & Social Studies), for the duration of the assignment/assessment. The student receives read aloud support when instructions/directions require more than one step, in all core content academic areas, for the duration of the instructions given, throughout each day. Also, the student is given frequent breaks, for up to 5 minutes for each 30 minutes of consecutive instructional and/or work time. The student's services include 120 minutes of Special Education direct services in a regular education classroom, 5 days per week, every week.

The IEP team met on April 16, 2026 to review the reevaluation and as a result the student continues to be eligible for special education services. The exceptionality was changed to Specific Learning Disability and a secondary exceptionality of Other Health Impairment of ADHD was added.

Issues Investigated

Based on the written complaints and interview with the complainant, one concern that falls under IDEA or Kansas regulations was identified and will be investigated.

Issue One

Did USD #402 implement the student's IEP during the 2025-2026 school year as required by 34 CFR §300.323(c)(2)?

Applicable Law

34 C.F.R. §300.323(c)(2) requires LEAs to ensure that as soon as possible following the development of the IEP, special education and related services are made available to the child in accordance with the child's IEP.

Parent Position

The parent complaint states that, "[The student] was on an IEP during [their] time in the 3 year old preschool program at [the elementary school]. When the district closed the 4 year old program at [the elementary school], we took [the student] to a private school still within [town]. The IEP was never closed or exited. The IEP was then 'lost'. The IEP was 'found' again this year when I asked for a special education evaluation for [the student]. The school agreed to do a 're-evaluation' since [the student] still had an active IEP but it needs to be updated since it was last updated 3 1/2 years ago." The parent also expressed concern that there should be action taken to ensure no other student's IEPs are lost.

LEA Position

The district response states the following:

1. The student was determined eligible for special education and related services at age three and received services through the district's early childhood special education program.
2. During the student's four-year-old preschool year, the student was enrolled in a local private school and was not receiving services through the district.
3. Upon enrollment in kindergarten at [the LEA elementary school], the parent/guardian completed district enrollment documentation and indicated "No" in response to the question regarding whether the student had a current Individualized Education Program (IEP).
4. At the time of enrollment, the district was not provided documentation of a current IEP, prior eligibility, or any request for continuation of services.
5. The parent/guardian, who was employed as a teacher within the building during the relevant time period, did not notify district personnel that the student had previously been identified as a child with a disability or request special education services.

6. From kindergarten through third grade, the district did not receive a referral for evaluation, a request for evaluation from the parent, or information from staff indicating a suspected disability requiring special education services.
7. During the time period in question, the district had no knowledge, nor reasonable basis to suspect, that the student was a child with a disability in need of special education and related services."

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The following finding of facts is based upon a review of the documentation and interviews with all parties.

1. The student had a Pre-K IEP dated February 28, 2020 which was implemented at the LEA's preschool until the preschool closed and the parents enrolled the student in a private local preschool in the fall of 2021. The February 28, 2020 IEP delivered 160 minutes of special education services 2 days per week and 180 minutes 2 days per week. Additionally, the student received 20 minutes of speech/language 2 days per week. The IEP goals included, Communication (age appropriate vocabulary, answer /wh/questions, produce the /s/ clusters), Pre-academic skills (match letters, count numbers, name colors and follow one-step directions) and Other (dress self and appropriate play).
2. The LEA's exit documentation reflects the student moved out of the district with the last day of services being May 27, 2021. The document did not indicate that the student had been withdrawn from special education.
3. In an email exchange the assistant director confirmed there was no evidence that, at the time of the student's move to the local private preschool, the parents had withdrawn consent for special education services or that the LEA had determined the student was no longer eligible, sent April 22, 2026.
4. The student's initial special education evaluation was reported on February 28, 2020. There were no annual IEP meetings until the parent requested a reevaluation on February 16, 2026 and the team met on March 11, 2026. Additionally, there was no triennial evaluation, which was due by February 27, 2023.
5. The student re-enrolled in the LEA for kindergarten for the 2022-2023 school year. The LEA's registration form asks: "Is your student currently on an I.E.P. (Individual Education Plan) or a 504 Plan?" The parent checked "No" in response to this question.
6. In an email exchange when asked why the parent indicated that the student did not have and IEP when completing the kindergarten enrollment form, the parent replied, "I checked the box that [the student] did not have an IEP because [the student] had left the district preschool when our superintendent closed the 4 year old program at [the elementary school]. We took [the student] to [a local private] preschool where they do not follow IEPs." sent on April 13, 2026.

7. Due to the parent's assertion that the kindergarten teacher knew of the Pre-K IEP, the LEA requested a written statement from the kindergarten teacher which states, "At no point during the school year did the parent communicate to me, either verbally or in writing, that the student had previously been identified for special education services or had an active IEP prior to entering kindergarten." dated April 9, 2026.
8. In an email exchange with the assistant director, the speech/language therapist stated, "No one ever brought any concerns at all to me. [The student] never had any articulation errors even in pre-k, 'speech' was fine. When [the student] originally qualified for DD I did work with [them] on vocabulary but not since then, nor did anyone ever bring any concerns to me. Not [the student's] teachers or [the student's parent]." on April 22, 2026.
9. In a google message exchange with the third grade teacher the parent stated, "[The student] had an IEP in preschool for a language delay. Then [they] went to [private local] preschool for a year of preschool and when [the student] came back to [the elementary school], no one else brought it up. In fact, I can submit a parent request for eval so that it gets done quicker." The parent also asked the teacher's opinion on whether the student may have ADHD, the message was sent September 6, 2025.
10. The parent emailed the principal requesting the student's cumulative folder on September 25, 2025.
11. The principal replied confirming the request on September 26, 2025.
12. In an email to the principal the parent stated, "I noticed that [the student's] IEP from Pre-K was not included or mentioned at all. I have a physical copy of it, but I'm worried about not having found it in [their] records. I don't recall having an exit meeting to discontinue it. Also, I think it may have been helpful for [the] kindergarten through third grade teachers to have been made aware of [the student's] language delay." sent October 2, 2025.
13. The principal replied, "IEP paperwork is not housed in [LEA's] cumulative folders, those documents are kept at the interlocal. I can't tell you when the exit meeting occurred." sent October 6, 2025.
14. In an email exchange with the assistant director they shared that the school psychologists, "keep all district special education evaluation files at [the elementary school] separated by school. Each school has Active and Inactive students. The psychologist did find a file for [the student] in Inactive that housed the original child find and initial evaluation." sent April 22, 2026.
15. In an email to the principal, the parent requested a special education evaluation on February 16, 2026.
16. The school sent an Evaluation PWN dated February 27, 2026, which was signed by the parent on March 3, 2026 consenting to the special education evaluation.
17. An IEP meeting was held March 11, 2026 to offer the student services pending the results of the special education reevaluation. The team agreed to provide interim services of 120 minutes of special education services per day, five days a week to address a reading comprehension and math computation goal.

18. In the LEA interview on April 14, 2026 the third grade teacher:
    a. Reported that the student has struggled in several academic areas including reading comprehension and math this school year requiring, "a lot of extra support." The teacher also noted that the parent expressed academic concerns which the teacher discussed with the principal, including making the principal aware of strategies suggested for the family to use at home.
    b. The teacher also stated, "[The parent and I talked on and off over the year about a potential [special education] evaluation, the first conversation was in September or October [2025]. The parent also expressed concern that the student may have ADHD."
    c. When asked if the teacher suspected the student may have a disability, the teacher replied, "I had those concerns and discussed them with the parent. I was waiting for [the parent] to trigger the evaluation."
    d. When asked if the teacher felt the student needed an IEP, the teacher replied, "For sure."
    e. The teacher shared that they knew about the pre-school IEP for speech/language, but did not know the scope of the Pre-K IEP and did not realize the student had a developmental delay diagnosis but rather the conversations with the parent had been focused on what was currently appropriate for the student. The teacher stated, "The message I got from [the parent] was that their child needs a loving, kind teacher, not that the school isn't supporting the earlier diagnoses."
    f. The teacher also shared, "We've also been doing our best to honor the parent's wishes that have been communicated. I was never asked to find something from the previous IEP."
19. In the April 14, 2026 LEA interview the principal:
    a. Stated that they took no further action to confirm the student had been exited from special education services upon learning from the parent that the student had a Pre-K IEP when previously enrolled.
    b. The principal also shared that they agreed with the parent's request for a reevaluation based on the student's academic needs. They also shared that the parent had not communicated with them directly about academic concerns in the 2025-2026 school year.
    c. The principal reported that staff shared the students' overall performance and skill gaps concerns during the 2025-2026 school year.
    d. The principal stated that the student began taking medication for ADHD symptoms during the school year and they planned to consider initiating General Education Interventions (GEI) if there wasn't academic improvement with the medication. The principal felt there were dramatic improvements when the student began taking the medication and the principal was waiting to see if there would be a positive impact on the student's Fastbridge scores.

20. The Fastbridge scores show the student scored below average in the second grade and the first two assessments of third grade in both aMath and aReading.
21. In an email exchange with the parent, they stated that "[The student] began taking ADHD medication around October 10th of 2025. [The student] doubled the dosage in February 2026 after hearing from the teacher that it wasn't sufficient, then in March we switched the medication to a non-stimulant to help with anxiety. [The student] is doing well so far with that one." sent April 20, 2026.
22. The IEP team met on April 16, 2026 to review the re-evaluation and as a result the student continued to be eligible for special education services. The exceptionality was changed to Specific Learning Disability and a secondary exceptionality of Other Health Impairment of ADHD was added.
23. This new IEP includes special education services in the general education classroom for 90 minutes per day and special education services in the special education classroom for 30 minutes per day to address three goals:
    a. Task Initiation & Completion
    b. Reading Comprehension
    c. Computation

Conclusion

In this case, 34 CFR 300.323(c)(2) requires LEAs to ensure that as soon as possible following the development of the IEP, special education and related services are made available to the child in accordance with the child's IEP.

Special Education Services:

The student left the LEA to attend a local private preschool in the fall of 2021. At that time, the parents did not withdraw their consent for services and the LEA did not determine that the student was no longer eligible for services, thus the LEA should have met the IEP team and determined how to best implement services in the child's new educational setting. There is no evidence of another IEP meeting until the IEP team meeting on March 11, 2026 prompted by the parent's reevaluation request on February 16, 2026. Additionally, the student's initial special education evaluation was reported on February 28, 2020.There was no triennial evaluation, which was due by February 27, 2023. It appears that the student was essentially dropped from the LEA's special education services in 2021until the parent requested a reevaluation in 2026.

Staff Knowledge of IEP:

Evidence confirms that the third grade teacher and the principal were aware of the existence of a Pre-K IEP, although reportedly were not clear that the student should have still been receiving services. When the parent shared the existence of the student's Pre-K IEP in an email to the principal on October 2, 2025, the principal reportedly assumed the student was no longer eligible for services and did not request records from the LEA or the school psychologist to confirm. More importantly, however, the LEA's process for ensuring that students with previous IEPs who re-enter the LEA either continue to receive services when they have not been dismissed by the LEA or had parental consent withdrawn has either failed or does not exist.

Availability of Records:

The school psychologist reported to the assistant director that this student's original child find and initial evaluation were in an Inactive file. It appears that school staff do not have easy access to historical IEP records. The assistant director shared, "We've always kept cumulative folders and special education folders separate just to make sure we ensure confidentiality of those specific records."

In this case, the student's last IEP of record was dated February 28, 2020. It is found that IDEA and Kansas regulation were not followed to either convene the annual IEP or determine if the student should have exited special education. The child complaint process only allows an investigation up to twelve months prior so cannot investigate the previous errors related to this complaint, however since the LEA provided evidence that the student continued to be a student eligible for special education and related services it is found that the LEA failed to implement an IEP. Based on the foregoing, it is found that the LEA failed to implement the student's IEP from the point at which the parent notified the principal that the student had an IEP, on October 2, 2025 to March 11, 2026. The LEA is out of compliance and corrective actions are required.

Summary of Conclusions/Corrective Action

1. ISSUE ONE: A violation of A violation of 34 CFR 300.323(c)(2) was found based on the LEAs failure to provide special education services from October 2, 2025 up to March 11, 2026.
    a. The LEA shall immediately, within 21 days, submit a written statement of assurance to Special Education and Title Services (SETS) stating that it will comply with state statutes and regulations at Federal regulations at 34 CFR 300.323(c)(2).
    b. Within 40 school days of the issuance of this report, the LEA shall offer compensatory services as follows:
        - From October 2, 2025 through March 11, 2026: 120 minutes of special education services per day, consistent with the March 11, 2026 IEP.
        - From March 12, 2026 through April 16, 2026: 120 minutes of special education services per day, with 30 of those daily minutes delivered outside of the regular education classroom, consistent with the April 26, 2026 IEP.

c. The LEA shall schedule the required compensatory services and provide that schedule to the parent and to Special Education and Title Services (SETS) in writing. The parent may choose to accept all, some, or none of the offered compensatory services. The parent must respond to the school district and Special Education and Title Services (SETS), in writing, to identify which services (if any) are accepted. The written schedule of services may be sent to SETS at brian.dempsey@ksde.gov

d. Once the district receives the written response, it will schedule any accepted compensatory services. If a student is absent or a parent is unable to make the student available at the scheduled time, the services scheduled for that day will not be made up. If district staff are unavailable, the services will be rescheduled. Any compensatory service that is declined or not used as scheduled will be considered waived, as long as the district has made a good-faith effort to begin and to provide the services in a timely manner.

e. Within 40 school days of the issuance of this report, the LEA shall conduct an audit to ensure that any students who previously had IEPs are either currently receiving special education services or have been formally dismissed by the LEA or parental consent withdrawn and provide documentation to SETS within one week of the audit.

f. Within 60 school days of the issuance of this report, the LEA shall review their procedures for transitioning records of students in early childhood special education to school age services. These procedures should be developed or reviewed and provided to SETS for review and approval. Once approved by SETS a training should be scheduled to occur before the beginning of the 2026-27 school year with all LEA office staff responsible for overseeing or managing records and administrative staff at both the LEA and Interlocal offices. Documentation of the training, training materials and attendance sheets will be provided to SETS within one week of the training.

g. Prior to the beginning of the 2026-27 school year the LEA shall schedule and hold a training to all school staff, including principal, special education administration and school psychologists and Interlocal staff who support the LEA regarding who is able to refer a student for a special education evaluation, the procedures for referring a student for a special education evaluation. This joint LEA/Interlocal training is recommended for the two staffs to discuss how they should work together when a child is suspected of having a disability and discover any learning history. Documentation of the training, training materials and attendance sheets will be provided to SETS within one week of the training.

Right to Appeal

Either party may appeal the findings or conclusions in this report by filing a written notice of appeal with the State Commissioner of Education, ATTN: Special Education and Title Services, Landon State Office Building, 900 SW Jackson Street, Suite 620, Topeka, KS 66612-1212. The notice of appeal may also be filed by email to formalcomplaints@ksde.gov The notice of appeal must be delivered within 10 calendar days from the date of this report.

For further description of the appeals process, see Kansas Administrative Regulations 91-40-51(f).

K.A.R. 91-40-51(f) Appeals.

(1) Any agency or complainant may appeal any of the findings or conclusions of a compliance report prepared by the special education section of the department by filing a written notice of appeal with the state commissioner of education. Each notice shall be filed within 10 days from the date of the report. Each notice shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect.

Upon receiving an appeal, an appeal committee of at least three department of education members shall be appointed by the commissioner to review the report and to consider the information provided by the local education agency, the complainant, or others. The appeal process, including any hearing conducted by the appeal committee, shall be completed within 15 days from the date of receipt of the notice of appeal, and a decision shall be rendered within five days after the appeal process is completed unless the appeal committee determines that exceptional circumstances exist with respect to the particular complaint. In this event, the decision shall be rendered as soon as possible by the appeal committee.

(2) If an appeal committee affirms a compliance report that requires corrective action by an agency, that agency shall initiate the required corrective action immediately. If, after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the agency shall be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following:

(A) The issuance of an accreditation deficiency advisement;
(B) the withholding of state or federal funds otherwise available to the agency;
(C) the award of monetary reimbursement to the complainant; or
(D) any combination of the actions specified in paragraph (f)(2)

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST
UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #475
ON MARCH 27, 2026

DATE OF REPORT: MAY 7, 2026

This report is in response to a complaint filed with the Kansas State Department of Education on behalf of ------- by his mother, -------, and his advocate, -------. In the remainder of the report ------ will be referred to as "the student" and ------- will be referred to as the "the parent". ------- will be referred to as "the complainant". The parent has provided written consent to share personally identifiable information with the complainant and, as such, the complainant will receive a copy of this investigation report in addition to the parent and the LEA. Note that the parent also provided written consent to interview -------, another advocate who attended the March 9, 2026 IEP Team meeting, and she will be referred to as the "advocate" in the remainder of the report.

In the remainder of the report, the following school staff will be referred to as follows:

- Brooke Marx, Assistant Principal
- Lindsey Jones, Special Education Teacher/Case Manager
- Brianna Barton, School Psychologist
- Courtney Eichhorn, Associate Superintendent/Executive Director of Special Education
- Takara Brownbridge: General Education Math Teacher
- Noemilyn Castillo, General Education Science Teacher
- Angela Kriepke, General Education World Geography Teacher

When a special education complaint is filed against a school district that is a member of a special education cooperative or interlocal, or that uses any other state recognized public agency to serve children with disabilities, the term " local education agency (LEA)" in this report will include the school district, the special education cooperative or interlocal, and any other agency that is recognized by the state as an administrative agency for public elementary or secondary schools and is serving the educational needs of this student."

In this case, the student is a resident of the Junction City Public School District (USD #475) who employs their own staff to provide special education and related services to students in the district. Therefore, in the remainder of this report, USD #475 is the responsible public agency and will be referred to as the "LEA".

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) allows for a 60-day timeline to investigate a complaint and allow for an appeal process from the date on which it was filed. A complaint is considered filed on the date on which it was received by KSDE. In this case, the KSDE initially received the complaint on March 27, 2026 and assigned the case for investigation on that same date.

Evidence Reviewed

Both parties were contacted via telephone during the investigation to gather and clarify information. The complainant was interviewed by telephone on April 14, 2026 and the parent was interviewed on that same date. In addition, the parent provided written consent to interview the advocate who attended the IEP Team meeting on March 13, 2026. She was also interviewed on April 14, 2026.

The LEA made the following school personnel available for a virtual interview on April 16, 2026 as noted below:

- Assistant Principal
- Special Education Teacher/Case Manager
- School Psychologist
- Associate Superintendent/Executive Director of Special Education

Written documentation was provided by the LEA and the complainant. All the documentation was reviewed and the following written documentation was used in consideration of the issue:

1. The Individual Education Program (IEP) dated March 26, 2025
2. Individual Health Plan for seventh grade
3. Emails between the parent and the General Education Science Teacher written between August 29, 2025 through April 10, 2026
4. Prior Written Notice (PWN) proposing a reevaluation signed by the parent on January 14,, 2026
5. Screenshots of text messages between the parent and various school staff dated between March 4 and March 27, 2026
6. Emails between the parent and the General Education World Geography Teacher written between March 11 and March 12, 2026
7. Eligibility and Multidisciplinary Team Report dated March 13, 2026
8. IEP dated March 13, 2026
9. PWN proposing the student's continued eligibility, change in services, and substantial change of placement signed by the parent on March 13, 2026
10. Staffing Summary dated March 13, 2026
11. Typed meeting notes from the March 13, 2026 IEP Team meeting written by the advocate
12. Handwritten meeting notes from the March 13, 2026 IEP Team meeting written by the complainant
13. Screenshots of text messages between the parent and the Special Education Teacher / Case Manager dated between March 22 and March 24, 2026

14. Statement dated March 25, 2026 written by the Assistant Principal
15. Email dated April 6, 2026 at 3:31 PM written by the parent to the General Education Social Studies Teacher
16. Email dated April 6, 2026 at 3:37 PM written by the General Education Social Studies Teacher to the Special Education Teacher/Case Manager and the Assistant Principal which was forwarded to the Associate Superintendent/Executive Director of Special Education
17. Response to the Allegations dated April 10, 2026 written by the Associate Superintendent/Executive Director of Special Education
18. Emails dated April 29, 2026 between the Associate Superintendent/Executive Director of Special Education and the Investigator
19. Emails dated April 30, 2026 between the parent and the Investigator

Background Information

The student is 13 years old and currently enrolled in the 7th grade at Junction City Middle School in USD #475 for the 2025-26 school year. The student lives at home with his parent and has aways attended school in USD #475. The parent reported the student has medical diagnoses of Autism and Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD), and that the students takes medication for anxiety and depression. The parent also stated that the student receives ABA services in the home through insurance.

The student was initially evaluated and found eligible for special education and related services at age three and received early childhood special education services in USD #475. The student has had an IEP since that time. During his most recent special education reevaluation on March 13, 2026, the multidisciplinary team determined the student continued to be eligible for special education under the exceptionality category of Autism.

The IEP for seventh grade requires the student to receive special education support in core classes and electives in the general education setting as well as receive special education support in personalized learning time and advisory periods in the special education setting. The student also receives transportation daily and direct social work services once per week as related services. His placement was in the general education setting at least 80% of the school day.

Issues Investigated

Based on the written complaint, two issues were identified and investigated.

Issue One

USD #475, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to consider the concerns of the parent when developing the IEP on March 13, 2026.

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.501(b)(1) require that the parents of a child with a disability must be afforded an opportunity to participate in meetings with respect to the identification, evaluation, and educational placement of the child; and the provision of FAPE to the child.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.322(a) requires that each public agency must take steps to ensure that one or both of the parents of a child with a disability are present at each IEP Team meeting or are afforded the opportunity to participate, including notifying parents of the meeting early enough to ensure that they will have an opportunity to attend; and scheduling the meeting at a mutually agreed on time and place.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.321(a)(6) allow the parent to invite other individuals they believe have knowledge or special expertise regarding the child to the IEP team meeting.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

1. The LEA contacted the parent on January 13, 2026 to arrange an eligibility determination and IEP Team meeting. The LEA provided the parent with a meeting notification scheduling the meeting for March 13, 2026, the agreed upon date. The purpose of the meeting was to determine continued eligibility based on a reevaluation and to review the IEP and revise, if appropriate.
2. The parent attended the March 13, 2026 meeting in person. She invited the complainant and the advocate to attend and participate in the meeting with her because she believed these people had knowledge of not only the student but also reading instruction and special education. Both the complainant and the advocate also attended the meeting on March 13, 2026 in person.
3. At the meeting, the multidisciplinary team first conducted the reevaluation of the student by reviewing the results of the assessments. The Staffing Summary written by the LEA stated:

   The School Psychologist proposed to the team to discuss eligibility determination and to answer the question whether [the student] has an exceptionality. [The student] does have an exceptionality of: "Autism" means a developmental delay significantly affecting verbal and nonverbal communication and social communication, generally evident before the age of three but not necessarily so, that affects a child's educational performance. The team agreed that [the student] does have an exceptionality. The team began discussions about whether [the student] needs special education services.

   Discussions began with [the parent] sharing that she does feel he has an exceptionality and that he does need special education services. The advocate reported that students with Autism will score higher on intellectual assessments. The [General Education Math Teacher] shared that based on teacher observations and [the student's] performance in classes that there is no need for specially designed instruction.

The [Special Education Teacher] shared the current progress that she as the special education teacher and her paraeducators are really only working on the instructional accommodations but that academic goals are not appropriate based on academic progress. [The parent] shared that he has only had behavior goals since fourth grade. It was proposed to consider dismissing from special education based on the reevaluation results or moving to consult. The team discussed concerns of dismissing at this time due to some comprehension concerns and concerns with transitions with no support. Some team members do not agree. The team continued to discuss concerns and came to the consensus that we will continue with special education services and can address some of the concerns to include comprehension through accommodations.

4. Based on the reevaluation, the student was determined to continue to be eligible for special education and related services under the exceptionality category of Autism and the parent was provided with prior written notice of the continued eligibility at the conclusion of the meeting.
5. Meeting notes provided by the LEA, the advocate, and the complainant all reflect that the IEP was then reviewed.
6. The parent reported during her interview that she shared concerns during the IEP Team meeting related to the student's reading comprehension based on the novels being studied in the language arts class and that she requested that a goal and services be added to the IEP. However, she was told this could not be done "based on a hunch". The parent noted that an accommodation for an alternate setting for assignments and tests was added to address her concerns with reading comprehension.
7. The meeting notes kept by the complainant showed that the parent asked if the reading comprehension would addressed due to the student's difficulty understanding themes for the novels being studied but was told by the Assistant Principal that "most 7th graders don't get themes and we can't make a goal based on a hunch".
8. The meeting notes kept by the advocate stated, "Mom was concerned about his comprehension especially with the books they were going to have him read this year. This question was dodged every single time. There was no input from the ELA teacher. The only teacher present was the math teacher who left the meeting several times".
9. The LEA's staffing summary of the March 13, 2026 IEP meeting stated that the parent indicated that her concerns were addressed during the IEP Team meeting and noted that the parent wanted the copy of the procedural safeguards provided to her at the meeting. The staffing summary also noted that the prior written notice (PWN) was reviewed by the team at the conclusion of the IEP Team meeting.
10. During the interview, the LEA staff noted that the IEP Team also discussed deleting the current special education services provided in the special education setting and reducing the amount of special education services provided in the general education setting beginning immediately. However, the parent was not in agreement with the change happening during the current school year. The team discussed options and decided to reduce the amount of time in the special education setting for the remainer of this school year and then to delete all of the special education services provided in the special education setting and reduce the amount of special education services provided in the general education setting at the beginning of the 2026-27 school year.

11. The PWN dated March 13, 2026 documents that the LEA proposed to continue the student's eligibility for special education, to make a material change in services and a substantial change in placement, as well as update the behavior goal and make changes to the accommodations in the IEP. The PWN stated, "Alternate Location for Assignments and Assessments was added to meet [the student's] needs for work completion and comprehension".
12. The parent reported that after filing this complaint with KSDE, the LEA reconvened the IEP Team on April 27, 2026 to discuss the parent's concerns with reading comprehension. The parent reported the team "did finally realize [the student] struggles with inferences" and a plan was made to address this concern. The parent stated, "It was just nice to go in an IEP meeting and actually be heard for once".

Conclusion

In this case, interviews and documentation found that the LEA scheduled and held an IEP Team meeting at a mutually agreed upon time and place in order to provide the parent with the opportunity to participate in the identification, evaluation, and educational placement of the student; and the provision of FAPE to the student. It is noted that the parent attended the IEP Team meeting and invited the complainant and the advocate to attend the IEP Team meeting with her.

Interviews and documentation show that the parent expressed concerns when the LEA discussed dismissing the student from special education during the eligibility determination process and that the team ultimately determined that the student continued to be eligible for special education services. In addition, during the development of the IEP, the parent shared concerns about the student's reading comprehension and requested a goal and services in this area be added to the IEP. However, based on the IEP Team discussions, the LEA proposed to add a targeted accommodation to address the parent's concern with reading comprehension. In addition, the parent's concerns were discussed in relation to proposals for a material change in services and a substantial change in placement at the March 13, 2026 IEP Team meeting.

Based on the foregoing, there is evidence to make a finding that the LEA did consider the parent's concerns during the IEP Team meeting held on May 13, 2026. The LEA is found to be in compliance with federal regulations implementing the IDEA in regard to this allegation.

It is noted that, even though the LEA did consider the parent's concerns during the March 13, 2026 IEP Team meeting, the filing of the complaint caused the LEA to proactively reconvene the IEP Team to further explore the parent's concerns and provide her with the opportunity for meaningful participation in a manner that enhanced the communication between the parent and LEA.

Issue Two

USD #475, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to provide the parent with appropriate prior written notice following the March 13, 2026 IEP Team meeting.

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.503(a) require school districts to provide parents with prior written notice a reasonable time before they propose or refuse to initiate or change the identification, evaluation, educational placement, or the provision of FAPE to the student.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.503(b) require the prior written notice to include 1) A description of the action proposed or refused by the agency; 2) An explanation of why the agency proposes or refuses to take the action; 3) A description of each evaluation procedure, assessment, record, or report the agency used as a basis for the proposed or refused action; 4) A statement that the parents of a child with a disability have protection under the procedural safeguards of this part and, if this notice is not an initial referral for evaluation, the means by which a copy of a description of the procedural safeguards can be obtained; 5) Sources for parents to contact to obtain assistance in understanding the provisions of this part; 6) A description of other options that the IEP Team considered and the reasons why those options were rejected; and 7) A description of other factors that are relevant to the agency's proposal or refusal.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

1. As noted in Finding 11 in Issue One, the PWN dated March 13, 2026 documents that the LEA proposed to continue the student's eligibility for special education, to make a material change in services and a substantial change in placement, as well as make changes to the accommodations in the IEP and update the behavior goal.
2. The PWN dated March 13, 2026 includes a description of the actions being proposed, an explanation of why the actions were being proposed, options considered and why those options were rejected, a description of the data used as a basis for the proposed action, and other factors relevant to the proposed actions. In addition, the PWN includes a statement that the parent has rights as described in the Procedural Safeguards and where an additional copy of the Procedural Safeguards can be obtained. The PWN also includes a listing of four agencies in Kansas where an explanation of the Procedural Safeguards and additional information/resources can be obtained by parents. The parent provided written consent for the proposed actions on March 13, 2026.
3. LEA staff reported that their practice is to update the draft IEP on the computer in real-time during the IEP Team meeting and this allows the LEA to provide parents with a typed PWN at the end of each IEP Team meeting for them to consider. Some parents choose to sign the PWN at the end of the meeting while others choose to take the PWN home and return it after further considering the actions proposed or refused. The LEA staff reported this practice was followed for the student's IEP Team meeting held on March 13, 2026 and stated that the student's parent chose to sign the PWN at the end of the meeting.

4. The parent indicated during the interview that she does not remember ever being provided with a document called a PWN. However, since filing this child complaint, she discovered a signed PWN was provided to her as part of the March 13, 2026 IEP documentation. The parent indicated that she was asked to sign multiple documents at the end of the IEP Team meeting but did not realize that the PWN was one of the many documents that she had signed.
5. Interviews with the parent, the complainant, and the advocate all indicated that the discussions were held during the IEP Team meeting about continuing eligibility, making changes in services and changing the placement of the special education services as well as making changes to the accommodations and the behavior goal. The parent acknowledged she was in agreement with the changes the LEA was proposing although she reported that she sometimes "just gives up and gives in and just does what the LEA wants".
6. Interviews with the parent, the complainant, and the advocate all indicated that they were asked to sign the IEP Team meeting attendance record at the end of the meeting. In addition, the parent was asked to sign multiple additional documents without the LEA staff providing explanations of what she was signing.

Conclusion

In this case, documentation and interviews show the PWN dated March 13, 2026 contains all the content required by the IDEA regulations but there is a significant discrepancy between the LEA and parent's descriptions of how the PWN was presented to the parent and how the written consent was obtained.

In this case, the parent indicated that had never been provided with a copy of a PWN and was unaware of the purposes of the IEP documentation she was being asked to sign at the end of the March 13, 2026 IEP Team meeting. However, there is also evidence to support that the parent agreed with the changes which were discussed and proposed during the IEP Team meeting and for which she gave written consent on March 13, 2026. It is also noted that the LEA provided the parent with a written copy of the PWN along with the revised March 13, 2026 IEP. Based on the foregoing, the LEA is determined to be in compliance with federal regulations regarding providing the parent with appropriate PWN in this specific instance.

It is noted that the LEA has a practice which allows for a real-time typed version of the PWN to be provided to parents at the end of an IEP Team meeting and it is strongly suggested that the LEA reexamine their practice to incorporate a clear explanation of the PWN to parents in order to avoid any miscommunication in the future.

Summary of Conclusions/Corrective Action

ISSUE ONE: Based on interviews and a review of documentation, no violation of IDEA regulations was found.

ISSUE TWO: Based on interviews and a review of documentation, no violation of IDEA regulations was found.

Right to Appeal

Either party may appeal the findings or conclusions in this report by filing a written notice of appeal with the State Commissioner of Education, ATTN: Special Education and Title Services, Landon State Office Building, 900 SW Jackson Street, Suite 620, Topeka, KS 66612-1212. The notice of appeal may also be filed by email to formalcomplaints@ksde.gov The notice of appeal must be delivered within 10 calendar days from the date of this report.

For further description of the appeals process, see Kansas Administrative Regulations 91-40-51(f).

K.A.R. 91-40-51(f) Appeals.

(1) Any agency or complainant may appeal any of the findings or conclusions of a compliance report prepared by the special education section of the department by filing a written notice of appeal with the state commissioner of education. Each notice shall be filed within 10 days from the date of the report. Each notice shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect.

Upon receiving an appeal, an appeal committee of at least three department of education members shall be appointed by the commissioner to review the report and to consider the information provided by the local education agency, the complainant, or others. The appeal process, including any hearing conducted by the appeal committee, shall be completed within 15 days from the date of receipt of the notice of appeal, and a decision shall be rendered within five days after the appeal process is completed unless the appeal committee determines that exceptional circumstances exist with respect to the particular complaint. In this event, the decision shall be rendered as soon as possible by the appeal committee.

(2) If an appeal committee affirms a compliance report that requires corrective action by an agency, that agency shall initiate the required corrective action immediately. If, after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the agency shall be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following:

(A) The issuance of an accreditation deficiency advisement;

(B) the withholding of state or federal funds otherwise available to the agency;

(C) the award of monetary reimbursement to the complainant; or

(D) any combination of the actions specified in paragraph (f)(2)

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST
UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #251
ON APRIL 1, 2026

DATE OF REPORT: MAY 1, 2026

This report is in response to a Complaint filed with our office on behalf of a student, -------, by their parent, -------. In the remainder of the report, the student will be referred to as "the Student" and the parent as "the Parent."

The Complaint is against USD #251 North Lyon County Public Schools. In the remainder of the report, "the School" and the "local education agency (LEA)" shall refer to USD #251.

When a special education complaint is filed against a school district that is a member of a special education cooperative or interlocal, or that uses any other state recognized public agency to serve children with disabilities, the term "local education agency (LEA)" in this report will include the school district, the special education cooperative or interlocal, and any other agency that is recognized by the state as an administrative agency for public elementary or secondary schools and is serving the educational needs of this student.

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) allows for a 30-day timeline to investigate a child complaint. A complaint is considered to be filed on the date it is delivered to both the KSDE and the LEA. In this case, the KSDE initially received the Complaint on April 1, 2026 and the 30-day timeline ended on April 30, 2026.

Allegations

The following issues will be investigated:

ISSUE ONE: Whether USD #251, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), ensured the specially designed instruction (SDI) and accommodations in the Student's Individualized Educational Program (IEP) were implemented when the Student engaged in computer games during their special education service time. K.A.R. 91-40-16(a)(b); 34 CFR § 300.323(a)(d).

ISSUE TWO: Whether USD #251, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, ensured the Student received instruction that was provided by personnel who were appropriately trained and supervised in meeting the requirements to assist in the provision of special education and related services to children with disabilities when the special education teacher changed positions in late January 2026. K.S.A. 72-3404(j); 34 CFR §§ 300.156, 300.207.

Investigation of Complaint

The Complaint Investigator interviewed the Parent and the Other Parent on April 16, 2026. The following LEA staff were interviewed on April 16, 2026: The Adapted Special Education Teacher 1, the Math Teacher, the Special Education Coordinator, Paraprofessional 1, and the Special Education Director.

In completing this investigation, the Complaint Investigator reviewed documentation provided by the Parent and the LEA. Although additional documentation was provided and reviewed, the following materials were used as the basis of the findings and conclusions of the investigation:

1. Student Benchmarks, 2024-25 & 2025-26 School Years
2. Progress Monitoring, 2025-26 School Year
3. Individualized Education Plan, 04/23/25
4. Team Meeting Notes, 05/19/25
5. Individualized Education Plan Amendment Form for Changes not Requiring a Full Individualized Education Plan Team Meeting, 08/19/25
6. Prior Written Notice for Identification, Special Education and Related Services, Educational Placement, Change in Services, Change in Placement, and/or Request for Consent, 08/19/25
7. Progress Report, 04/09/26
8. Week View, 01/26/26-04/17/26
9. Daily Reports, 02/02/26-04/17/26
10. License and Code of Conduct (Multiple Educators)
11. Math Worksheets, 09/02/25-04/02/26
12. Grades, 2025-26 School Year
13. Report Card, 2024-25 School Year
14. Special Education Cooperative Long-Term Substitute Teacher Hiring and Compensation Process
15. Inclusion Support, Revised 01/25/26
16. Activity Reports, 12/31/25-01/30/26, 01/31/26-02/28/26, and 03/01/26-03/31/26
17. Assessor Copy of Reading Assessment, 01/05/26-04/08/26
18. Para Training for Staff, 04/25/25-04/01/26
19. Emails, 04/07/25-04/17/26

Background Information

This Investigation involved an eighth-grade student enrolled at an elementary school in USD #251. The Student is currently receiving special education or related services as a child with a disability per the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) under the exceptionality of autism. The Student follows instructions well and is “always willing to put in [their] best effort.”

They enjoy reading. The Student wears a brace as a medical device. The Parent is a teacher in the LEA and currently has the Student in their class for three periods a day.

Findings of the Investigation

The following findings are based on a review of documentation and interviews with the Parent and staff in the LEA.

1. "Benchmark scores" for the Student for the 2024-25 school year were:
    a. Reading Composite: High Risk.
        i. Fall: 16th percentile; Winter: 4th percentile; and Spring: 7th percentile.
    b. Math Composite: High Risk.
        i. Fall: 3rd percentile; Winter 1st percentile; Spring: 7th percentile.
2. "Benchmark scores" for the Student for the 2025-26 school year were:
    a. Reading Composite: Low Risk.
        i. Fall: 3rd percentile; Winter: 44th percentile; Spring: Not yet assessed.
        ii. There was a note attached that read "Due to the inconsistency of progress monitoring of [the Student's] reading goal, reading fluency logs were kept. [The Student's] benchmark scores show success."
    b. Math Composite: Medium Risk.
        i. Fall: 19th percentile; Winter: 26th percentile; Spring: Not yet assessed.
3. Student Activity Reports provided by the LEA, dated January 1, 2026 through March 31, 2026, detailed the Student's use of School computers and programs, including Blooket and IXL. The reports only recorded login times, not the length of use of the programs, and all instances were categorized as "Educational." The Parent stated in their Complaint that they reviewed the Student's computer history from February 2, 2026 through March 27, 2026. In the Complaint, the Parent highlighted the following dates, noting the Student's core math instruction was from 9:03 a.m. to 9:53 a.m. The information the Parent provided in the Complaint matched the activity reports provided by the LEA, except that the February 4, 2026 login information was in the Parent's Complaint, but not in the LEA activity report:
    a. Blooket access on January 28, 2026 at 9:27 a.m.
    b. Blooket access on February 2, 2026 at 9:36 a.m., February 3, 2026 at 9:38 a.m., February 4, 2026 at 9:15 a.m., and February 5, 2026 at 9:14 a.m.
    c. Blooket access on February 9, 2026 at 9:19 a.m. and on February 11, 2026 at 9:18 a.m.
    d. Blooket access on February 17, 2026 at 9:13 a.m. and on February 20, 2026 at 9:26 a.m.
    e. On February 24, 2026, Blooket access at 9:32 a.m. and IXL access at 9:33 a.m. There were three internet searches between these logins. IXL access on February 25 and 26, 2026, at 9:31 a.m. on both days.

f. On March 5, 2026, Blooket access at 9:27 a.m., 9:34 a.m., 9:38 a.m. (twice at that time), and 9:40 a.m., with IXL access at 9:33 a.m.

g. Blooket access on March 10, 2026 at 9:35 a.m.

h. Blooket access on March 24, 2026 at 9:40 a.m., March 25, 2026 at 9:29 a.m., March 26, 2026 at 9:36 a.m., and on March 27, 2026 at 9:29 a.m.

4. An email from Adapted Special Education Teacher 1, dated April 21, 2025, asked the Parent if a draft IEP could be submitted the following night. Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 wanted to update the Student's math goal and was waiting on the Student to finish a math assessment. They also stated they wanted to add a reading fluency goal. The Parent responded the same day, "Not a problem."

5. An IEP and related Meeting Notes, dated April 23, 2025, included the following relevant information:

   a. The purpose of the meeting was an annual IEP review.

   b. Parent concerns included lack of socialization, the impact of autism spectrum disorder (ASD) on the Student's math skills, and the timing of occupational therapy (OT) services.

   c. Present level of academic achievement and functional performance (PLAAFP) were described.

   d. Goals were documented in the following areas:

      i. Motor (OT), communication, reading, writing, and math. A social-emotional goal was not yet identified.

   e. Accommodations/Modifications/Supplementary Aids in place from April 23, 2025 to April 22, 2026:

      i. Extended time, when assignments could be completed within one class period, in the general education setting for one additional class period.

      ii. Separate setting for assessments, during assessments, in the general education setting, throughout the assessment period.

      iii. Directions repeated/restated, whenever the Student appeared confused after directions were given, in all settings, "until understanding is demonstrated."

      iv. Shortened assignments or scribe, when assignments were more than three sentences in length or when the Student was expected to take notes, in all settings, for the length of the assignment.

      v. Redirection/prompts to focus, whenever the Student was off task, in all settings, "until engaged/focused."

      vi. Frequent breaks, whenever the Student showed fatigue or discomfort due to their back brace, in all settings, for 10 minutes.

      vii. Fine motor skills: cursive writing, cutting, coloring assistance, when assignments were handwritten or would be presented in class, in all settings, for the length of the assignment.

viii. Communication log/adult support writing/planner, "at the end of each class period in which adult support is provided," in all settings, for a "1-2 sentence description."

ix. Additional space for writing, any time the Student was asked to fill out a form, in all settings, for the length of the assignment.

x. Scaffolded social interactions, "in naturally occurring situations, [the Student] will receive prompts to interact with peers," in all settings, for the duration of the activity.

f. Special Education and Related Services:

i. Speech, for 15 minutes per week, from February 4, 2025 to February 3, 2026.

ii. Adult Support, for 300 minutes per day, from February 4, 2025 to February 3, 2026.

iii. Specialized Instruction for math and writing, for 25 minutes a day, four days a week, from February 4, 2025 to May 22, 2026.

iv. Specialized Instruction for math and writing, for 25 minutes a day, five days a week, from August 20, 2025 to April 22, 2026.

v. OT, for 20 minutes per week, from April 23, 2025 to April 22, 2026.

g. An explanation of the least restrictive environment (LRE) stated the Student spent the majority of their day in general education settings with adult support. They received instruction in a special education setting for reading fluency, writing, and math for 25 minutes a day, four days a week during the 2024-25 school year, and for 25 minutes a day, five days a week for the 2025-26 school year.

h. PWN, attached to the IEP, dated April 23, 2025, documented the change in SDI from four days a week in the 2024-25 school year to five days a week in the 2025-26 school year.

6. Team Meeting Notes dated May 19, 2025 indicated the team met to discuss the Student's progress on their IEP goals. Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 noted the Student had "done very well on [their] math goal[.]"

7. The Student's Report Card for the 2024-25 school year indicated a final grade in math of an A.

8. An IEP Amendment Form dated August 25, 2025 documented an IEP amendment on August 19, 2025. The form included the following relevant information:

a. "Beginning on 8/20/2025, all special education and related services will be provided during the IEP school year based upon the district's academic calendar. The [S]tudent will receive the following services":

i. "SDI for 75 minutes a day, four days per week, for Math Core and Writing Skills."

ii. "SDI for 55 minutes a day, one day a week, for Math Core and Writing Skills."

iii. "Adult Support for 326 minutes a day, four days per week, for electives, ELA, Science, Social Studies, Physical Education/Health, Homeroom, and lunch support (10 minutes to assist [the Student] in heating [their] lunch and opening containers)."

iv. "Adult Support for 311 minutes a day, one day per week, for electives, ELA, Science, Social Studies, Physical Education/Health, Homeroom, and lunch support (10 minutes to assist [the Student] in heating [their] lunch and opening containers)."

b. Related services:

i. "OT for 20 minutes per week for direct occupational therapy services."

ii. "Speech Services for 15 minutes per week. Speech services will be delivered via teletherapy."

c. "[The Student's] goals, accommodations, and modifications remain the same, as they provide [the Student] with appropriate access to the general education curriculum."

d. PWN dated August 19, 2025, documenting the changes to the IEP, was attached.

9. Math work samples for the Student dated September 2, 2025 through March 31, 2026, reported scores between 63% and 100% per assignment, with 42 out of 49 assignments being scored 80% or above.

10. An email exchange from September 30, 2025 to October 1, 2025 between Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 and the Parent detailed staffing concerns for paraprofessionals working with the Student. Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 informed the group how a paraprofessional absence was being covered. The Parent shared they were not comfortable with the solution due to previous instances of the Student being left alone. They also expressed concern about IEP minutes not being met. The Parent stated, "Even though [Paraprofessional 1] is only going to miss 5 minutes every morning, until [Paraprofessional 2] returns (or there is a sub), those minutes will add up. … [M]y best guess is at least 95-ish minutes, which adds up to at least two class periods. Even though it is only 5 minutes a day, … I am uneasy with [the Student's] IEP minutes not being met (depending on the week, the minutes could be off by 25 minutes)." Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 replied they found a different solution, so no minutes would be missed.

11. The Parent emailed Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 on December 8, 2025 and stated they were concerned about the Student's interactions with their classmates. The Parent referenced the portion of the Student's IEP which discussed social interactions and asked what they could do to help the Student in this area. Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 replied that day and said they had added games with peers "as appropriate" in their classroom and brainstorming activities to help the Student talk more.

12. The following relevant reading assessment data was collected from the Student:

a. January 5 to February 6, 2026: Text 1 Correct Words Per Minute (CWPM) spanned from 118 to 139, with an average of zero errors.
b. February 9 to February 13, 2026: Text 2 CWPM spanned from 107 to 148, with an average of zero errors.
c. February 23 to February 27, 2026: Text 3 CWPM spanned from 122 to 151, with an average of zero errors. A handwritten note said "cold timing" on February 23, 2026.
d. March 23 to March 27, 2026: Text 4 CWPM spanned from 132 to 157, with an average of zero errors. Handwritten notes indicated "cold timing" on March 23, 2026 and "hot timing" for March 24 to March 27, 2026.
e. Week of March 30, 2026: Text 5 CWPM spanned from 148 to 162, with an average of zero errors. A handwritten note indicated "cold timing" for March 30, 2026.

13. A staffing change occurred in the LEA on January 12, 2026. Effective January 26, 2026, Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 became a special education coordinator for the LEA. Adapted Special Education Teacher 1's classroom, the "resource room," was covered by certified substitute teachers from January 27 to February 27, 2026. Instructional guidance was provided under the direction of Adapted Special Education Teacher 2, with lesson planning support from Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 in their new role. The Long-Term Substitute was hired and began managing the classroom on March 2, 2026.

14. An Inclusion Support schedule for Paraprofessional 1 dated January 25, 2026, included the following relevant information:
    a. Paraprofessional 1 was assigned to the Student throughout the day, with the exception of the time between 9:30 a.m. and 10:00 a.m., when they were assigned to other students, and between 12:35 p.m. and 1:25 p.m., when they took their lunch.
    b. Paraprofessional 1 assisted the Student in Life Skills Math from 9:03 a.m. to 9:30 a.m. in Adapted Special Education Teacher 1's classroom. They transitioned to a different classroom to assist other students at 9:35 a.m.
    c. A note on the document read "[The Student] has nearly a full day of support. [They do] go to lunch without para[professional] support. Included in [their] minutes are 10 minutes of support to assist [them] in opening containers and heating [their] lunch. [The Student] has [the Parent's] class before lunch. [The Parent] heats [the Student's] lunch and loosens containers. When [Adapted Special Education Teacher 2] suggested teaching [the Student] to open [their] containers and heat [their] own lunch, the suggestion was rejected due to concern that [the Student] would not have enough time to eat. However, the minutes have remained to cover any day [the Parent] is absent."

i. The Complaint Investigator noted that the Student's schedule for the 2024-25 school year included a class with the Parent prior to their lunch period, however; the Student's 2025-26 school year schedule did not.

d. SDI periods were documented as 9:03 a.m. to 9:53 a.m. and 1:00 p.m. to 1:25 p.m.

e. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator on April 16, 2026, the Parent clarified the Student was in the Parent's class before the lunch period in the 2024-25 school year. However, the Parent stated they continued to store the Student's lunch in their classroom and assist the Student with lunch preparations during the 2025-26 school year.

15. Weekly schedules for the Student for Adapted Special Education Teacher 1's classroom from January 26 to April 17, 2026, confirmed in interviews to have been prepared by Adapted Special Education Teacher 1, contained the following relevant information:

a. January 26 to January 31, 2026:

i. "Life Skills Math," described as "Fluency Practice & IEP Objectives for Math," from 9:03 a.m. to 9:30 a.m., five days a week. Paraprofessional 1 was assigned to assist the Student. Instructions for materials needed and where to find the lesson plan were left for the Paraprofessional.

ii. "Core Math," described as "Foundations for Algebra," from 9:30 a.m. to 9:53 a.m., five days a week. The schedule included instructions on where to find the lesson, an objective, and a list of materials needed for each lesson, which contained manipulatives and visual aids.

iii. "Writing & [Reading] Rd Fluency," described as "January Writing Prompts," from 1:00 p.m. to 1:30 p.m., five days a week, "with a para ([Paraprofessional 2]), if available." Schedule instructions noted "[The Student] chooses a prompt and writes a paragraph with a beginning, middle, and end. I will bring the rubric on Friday and we can look at what [the Student] has completed."

iv. The Schedule included relevant attendance notes, such as a snow day and an OT session.

b. February 1 to February 28, 2026:

i. "Life Skills Math," described as "Fluency Practice & IEP Objectives for Math," described as "Daily Work with [Paraprofessional 1]" and from 9:03 a.m. to 9:30 a.m., five days a week.

ii. "Core Math," described as "Foundations of Algebra," from 9:30 a.m. to 9:53 a.m. five days a week. The description included a link to find lesson plans. An objective was included, and the student materials description remained. The lessons for February 2, February 9, and February 17, 2026 were labeled "Taught."

iii. "Writing & [Reading] Rd Fluency," described as "Creative Writing," from 1:00 p.m. to 1:30 p.m., five days a week. Notes remained the same. The objective was listed as "February Writing Journal - Explanation."

c. March 1 to April 2, 2026:

i. "Life Skills Math," described as "Fluency Practice & IEP Objectives for Math," described as "Daily Work with [Paraprofessional 1]" and from 9:03 a.m. to 9:30 a.m. five days a week.

ii. "Core Math," described as "Foundations of Algebra," from 9:30 a.m. to 9:53 a.m., five days a week. An objective was included, and the materials description remained.

iii. "Writing & [Reading] Rd Fluency," described as "March Writing calendar and rubric," from 1:00 p.m. to 1:30 p.m., five days a week. Notes remained the same.

16. Daily notes from Paraprofessional 1 dated February 2, 2026 through April 2, 2026 described daily objectives for the Student's math and reading goals. The Student's math objectives were to divide a six-digit number by a one-digit number, and then divide a four-digit number by a three-digit number. The notes also contained instructions to let the Student and another student answer questions and encourage a conversational exchange between them. It did not contain information describing the Student using computer games.

17. In an email to Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 and the Principal dated February 25, 2026, the Parent expressed concerns about class staffing and reported there were no math grades recorded in the SIS for the Student. The Parent stated, "… we don't want any surprises and we don't know if we need to be working on certain concepts at home." Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 replied on February 26, 2026 and again on February 27, 2026 to acknowledge the Parent's concerns and share the LEA's progress on filling open positions. They informed the Parent a long-term substitute teacher had been secured for the vacancy caused when Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 changed positions within the LEA. They told the Parent, "the invitation to send students to the resource room if they are not receiving all of their in-class support minutes is a standing invitation." Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 assured the Parent they would update grades that weekend. On February 27, 2026, the Parent replied, thanking Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 for the update, and reiterating the importance of grades to know "how [the Student] is performing, and if we need to provide at[-]home support."

18. In an email exchange between the Parent and the Special Education Coordinator dated between March 25 and March 26, 2026:

a. The Parent expressed concerns about the Student using a computer to access online games during their SDI in math. The Parent expressed, I am not OK with a computer teaching [the Student]. If [they have] been on the computer, I feel like this is wasted learning time, and [the Student] is not getting [their] full minutes."

b. The Special Education Coordinator responded to explain the Student had used the computer after completing their assigned work for the day. They acknowledged the Parent's dislike of computer-aided learning, and reported, "I have asked the computer to no longer be utilized with [the Student] in the resource room, except for progress monitoring that requires the use of the computer."

c. The Parent clarified, "I oppose [the Student] playing [online]/computer games during [their] math instructional time and having a computer program … providing instruction instead of a human providing instruction. This is [the Student's] core math time, it isn't a supplemental math time, so [their] lessons are extremely important." The Parent requested "real[-]world math applications" for the Student, such as hand-counting real money with another person. They reminded the Special Education Coordinator the computer situation had already been discussed at their Parent-Teacher conference. The Parent shared, "I felt like we left conferences with a good game plan … but when I voice my concern about [the Student] being on the computer vs. getting specialized instruction/direct instruction, I feel like I'm being portrayed as overreacting. … Every parent has [their] own parental preference(s), and we prefer human lessons vs. the computer[.]"

d. The Special Education Coordinator thanked the Parent for expressing these concerns and stated they clarified the Parent's position with the Long-Term Substitute. The Special Education Coordinator encouraged the Parent to speak to the Long-Term Substitute directly.

e. The Parent shared while they had confidence in the Long-Term Substitute, they were also concerned about the support the Long-Term Substitute was receiving. They asked "… does [the Long-Term Substitute] have access to the needed resources (to assist in lesson adjustments planning)? Does [the Long-Term Substitute] have access to real[-] world math lessons and other supplemental resources?"

f. Finally, the Special Education Coordinator assured the Parent they were working closely with the Long-Term Substitute on curriculum, and the Long-Term Substitute had access to necessary resources.

19. A 2025-26 school year transcript dated April 8, 2026, listed the following relevant information:

a. The Student retained a 4.0 grade point average throughout the year.

b. They achieved the following math grades for the year so far:

i. Quarter 1: A (95.54%)

ii. Quarter 2: A- (90.75%)

iii. Semester 1: A- (93.14%)

iv. Quarter 3: A (97.69%)

20. A training log dated April 8, 2026, detailed the following LEA trainings for Paraprofessional 1 and Paraprofessional 2 from August 14, 2025 to February 26, 2026.
    a. Paraprofessional 1:
        i. CPI New Certification, Day 1 and 2, completed September 11, 2025.
        ii. KSDE Annual Required Training, completed November 13, 2025.
        iii. Classroom & LEA Orientation, completed November 13, 2025.
        iv. Student Technical Support Training, two modules, completed February 26, 2026.
        v. Behavior Intervention Training, four modules, completed February 26, 2026.
        vi. ASD specific training, two modules, completed February 26, 2026.
    b. Paraprofessional 2:
        i. CPI New Certification, Day 1 and 2, completed September 11, 2025.
        ii. KSDE Annual Required Training, completed November 13, 2025.
        iii. Classroom & LEA Orientation, completed November 13, 2025.
21. A Progress Report, dated April 9, 2026, included the following relevant information describing the Student's progress toward their IEP goals:
    a. Communication 1:
        i. May 19, 2025: "7- Moderate Improvement";
        ii. October 21, 2025: "7- Moderate Improvement"; and
        iii. March 10, 2026: "7- Moderate Improvement."
    b. Communication 2:
        i. May 19, 2025: "8- Mastered";
        ii. October 21, 2025: "7- Moderate Improvement";
        iii. December 19, 2025: "6- Slight Improvement"; and
        iv. March 10, 2026: "7- Moderate Improvement."
    c. Reading:
        i. May 19, 2025: "8- Mastered";
        ii. October 17, 2025: "7- Moderate Improvement";
        iii. December 16, 2025: "5- Maintained Performance"; and
        iv. March 9, 2026: "5- Maintained Performance."
    d. Writing: May 19, 2025: "7- Moderate Improvement";
        i. October 17, 2025: "6- Slight Improvement";
        ii. December 16, 2025: "6- Slight Improvement"; and
        iii. March 9, 2026: "5- Maintained Performance."
    e. Math:
        i. May 19, 2025: "8- Mastered";

1. Additional comments stated, "According to curriculum assessments, given problems involving multiplication by 10's, 100's, or the powers of 10, [the Student] can solve the problems with 90% accuracy or better."

ii. October 17, 2025: "6- Slight Improvement";

1. Additional comments stated, "Given problems involving division, [the Student] can divide a 4-digit number by a 3-digit number with 63% accuracy, as measured by curriculum assessment of the skill. [The Student] can also multiply multiple-digit numbers with an average of 77% accuracy; the October benchmark of the skill was 90%. [The Student] averaged 93% on multiplying a multi-digit number by 1 single-digit number. [The Student] still needs practice when multiplying by a 2 or 3-digit number to meet [their] benchmark, but [the Student] is remarkably independent with multiplication and is working very hard to meet this objective."

iii. December 16, 2025: "7- Moderate Improvement";

1. Additional comments stated, "Given problems involving division, [the Student] can divide a 4-digit number by a 3-digit number with 80% accuracy or better, as measured by curriculum assessment of the skill. [The Student] can also relate multiplication to division facts as opposite operations with 95% accuracy and divide 6-digit numbers by a 1-digit number with 67% accuracy, as measured by curriculum assessments."

iv. March 9, 2026: "7- Moderate Improvement."

1. Additional comments stated, "Given problems involving division, [the Student] can divide a 6-digit number by a 1-digit number with 80% accuracy or better, as measured by curriculum assessment of the skill. Week of 2/9/2026 = 50% (2/4)[.] Week of 2/17/2026 = 75% (3/4)[.] Week of 2/24/2026 = 75% (3/4)[.] Week of 3/2/2026 = 80% (4/5)[.]"

f. Motor (OT): May 14, 2025: "7- Moderate Improvement";

i. October 15, 2025: "8- Mastered";

ii. December 16, 2025: "8- Mastered"; and

iii. March 5, 2026: "8- Mastered."

22. The LEA provided current licenses for the following staff:

a. Adapted Special Education Teacher 1, expires October 12, 2027.

i. Licensed in Elementary K-9, Learning Disabilities K-9, Special Education ELA K-9, Special Education Math.

b. Adapted Special Education Teacher 2, expires January 20, 2028.

i. Licensed in Adaptive Special Education K-12, and Physical Education PreK-12.

c. Long-Term Substitute, expires June 30, 2026.

i. Licensed in Emergency Substitute Teacher PreK-12.

ii. A note indicated "Limited to no more than 45 days in the same assignment."

d. General Education Teacher, expires November 17, 2029.
   i. Licensed in Elementary K-9, ELA 5-8, and General Science 5-9.

e. Substitute 1, expires December 11, 2027.
   i. Licensed in Elementary K-9.

f. Substitute 2, expires June 30, 2026.
   i. Licensed as Emergency Substitute Teacher PreK-12.
   ii. A note indicated "Limited to no more than 45 days in the same assignment."

g. Substitute 3, expires February 4, 2027.
   i. Licensed as Substitute Teacher PreK-12.

h. Substitute 4, expires January 21, 2032.
   i. Licensed as Substitute Teacher PreK-12.

i. Substitute 5, expires June 30, 2027.
   i. Licensed as Emergency Substitute Teacher K-12.

23. The LEA "Long-Term Substitute Teacher Hiring and Compensation Process" document explained:
    a. "This process applies to all Long-Term Substitute Teachers serving the [LEA] and working in an outlying district."
    b. "[The LEA] will identify the need for a Long-term Substitute Teacher and coordinate with the [Other District's] Substitute Coordinator to initiate the hiring process. [Other District] serves as the employing district for onboarding, payroll, and board approval. All substitute teachers must submit an application through [Application Software]. The [Other District's] Substitute Coordinator will manage the onboarding process, which includes verifying that all required licensure and credentials are current and appropriate for the assignment. Substitute teachers will follow the same onboarding standards currently in place for [Other District] district staff. [The Other District] Board approval is required. Long-term substitutes must complete all required paperwork and orientation prior to the start of their assignment."

Parent Interview

24. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Parent and the Other Parent shared concerns regarding the LEA using substitutes rather than hiring a full time teacher when Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 changed positions. The Other Parent specified "[The LEA doesn't] have a licensed teacher in charge and [they're] relying on just substitutes or para[professional]s who don't have that training." The Parent added, "I honestly don't think anybody was trained." The Other Parent expressed, "[W]e know that [the Student] has not been receiving [their] actual math instruction minutes … . And so that's our big concern."

25. The Parent and the Other Parent repeatedly questioned the background, qualifications, training, and certifications of the Long-Term Substitute. The Other Parent asserted the Long-Term Substitute "doesn't have any teacher background." The Parent added, "they did not hire a certified person, somebody who is familiar with IEPs and somebody who knows how to make the adjustments." Further, the Parent expressed, "we don't know exactly everything that's being left for [the Long-Term Substitute], but it's obvious that it's not enough. [The Student is] not being given the true 50 minutes of specialized instruction. … [Adapted Special Education Teacher 1] is leaving lessons, but are they quality lessons? Is it worth [the Student's] time?"
26. Regarding the change of roles for Adapted Special Education Teacher 1, the Parent asserted, "there was no transparency with the parents. We were told that [Adapted Special Education Teacher 1] is going to be making the transition, and that was pretty much it." They stated, "we had heard that … two para[professional]s were running the show in the background, telling the subs what to do."
27. Regarding the Student's math grades being late, the Parent indicated Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 explained they were "prioritizing the best I can." The Parent shared, "I understand juggling multiple roles. What I am upset with is the lack of communication. … We don't know what we need to be working on at home."
28. When asked about computer programs, the Parent said, "[W]e worry that [the Student's] math instruction is … impacted by all of this." They shared they believed half the Student's math instruction was being done through IXL, which they described as "pretty much the computer teaching the student." They expressed "dislike of a computer being [the Student's] teacher when [the Student] is there for specialized math instruction." The Parent questioned, "If [the Student] doesn't quite understand the topic, how can a computer teach it versus a human teaching [them]?" The Other Parent observed the Student used computer programs more often when Paraprofessional 1 left the classroom. The Parent mentioned some use of the computer for Blooket and IXL on the activity log when Paraprofessional 1 was assigned to the Student, and more use when Paraprofessional 1 was out of the room. According to the Parent, Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 told them no lesson plans included instruction through computer programs and Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 was unaware the Student was using computer programs.
29. The Parent stated they relayed their concerns with Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 at a parent conference on March 12, 2026. They expressed, "We were able to have a very good conversation." On March 25, 2026, the Student told the Parent they played Blooket during math class again. The Parent checked the Student's school computer activity and confirmed the Student had used Blooket during their math SDI period that day. The Parent shared, "that was after the fact that we had communicated our concerns with [Adapted Special Education Teacher 1] about that is [the Student's] specialized math instruction, why is [the Student] on Blooket?" The Parent reported they emailed Adapted Special Education Teacher 1, who explained there may have been miscommunication between themself, the Long-Term Substitute, and Paraprofessional 2. They reported in the week following the email exchange, instead of being on their computer, the Student "drew a lot of pictures" during their math period. According to the Parent, Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 implied the Parent "told them not to allow [the Student] to use the computer." The Parent clarified they asked the computer only be used for progress monitoring, and not instruction. The Parent asserted, "[What] [w]as supposed to be taking place … wasn't taking place. … [The Student] was drawing, not doing math, just drawing."

30. The Other Parent explained they moved the Student from general education math to SDI math for the 2025-26 school year because they wanted the Student to have "more real-world math experience," specifically with money, instead of algebra. The Parent added, "Money is something that [the Student] needs help on. … [They need] the hands-on." They stated Paraprofessional 1 had provided the Student lessons with money. The Parent reported when Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 was teaching in the classroom, Paraprofessional 1 began the period working with the Student, and Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 implemented SDI for the latter part. The Other Parent stated they believed the substitutes and other paraprofessionals were letting the Student play games on their computer rather than delivering instruction.

31. The Other Parent explained Blooket as "a program that can be educational if a teacher creates questions and has the questions go on it, but it also could be used as a game where kids could seek out what type of questions they want." They stated, "IXL is fine if a teacher can build lessons and build it all out and you can assign them." The Other Parent shared they were familiar with IXL as the technology director for the LEA. They reported when they asked Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 if lessons had been assigned to the Student, Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 confirmed no lessons had been assigned by themself or Paraprofessional 1. The Other Parent acknowledged the Student did not use IXL often. The Parent shared, "No one brought up [the Student] being on the computer as misuse of class time."

32. Regarding adult support, the Parent acknowledged both Paraprofessional 1 and Paraprofessional 2 assisted the Student throughout the day. They expressed appreciation for both paraprofessionals. The Other Parent shared concerns the Student was not interacting with peers often. The Parent stated the Student was with their peers most of the day and their IEP included adult support for peer interactions. They noted, "[The Student] is a quiet one."

Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 Interview

33. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 stated they became the Student's case manager in April 2025. They confirmed they were the Student's teacher from August 2025 until January 26, 2026, when they transitioned away from full-time classroom teaching. They shared, "Generally, I'm the elementary teacher, but because I picked [the Student] up last year, I kept [the Student] on my caseload this year."

34. Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 confirmed they provided SDI for the Student, specifically in math and writing, from August 2025 through January 26, 2026. They shared they were assisted by Paraprofessional 1 and Paraprofessional 2. Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 asserted there was "never a lesson plan to be on the computer playing games. … They might get to get on something that they wanted to for maybe five minutes or the end of class." They shared playing computer games in their class was "very rare" and did not recall any specific instances.
35. Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 stated, "I don't know what Blooket is. I've never done that with the kids." Regarding IXL, Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 reported "[I]t's not really a game, it gives extra practice for a skill you're doing. … when I use IXL with a student or any program with a student, they sit next to me and I'm watching what they're doing. And just the same as if it was a paper pencil lesson."
36. Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 reported between January 26, 2026 and February 27, 2026, their open classroom position was filled by rotating daily substitutes, and the Long-Term Substitute began classroom duties on March 2, 2026. During that time, Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 stated substitutes and paraprofessionals were responsible for SDI. Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 confirmed they created the lesson plans for the substitute teachers.
37. Regarding filling the vacancy, Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 shared "We did our best to get a long-term sub in there as quickly as we could. … I feel like I did as much as I possibly could do, to plan for things for the para[professional]s, for the subs and for the students." They reported they showed the Long-Term Substitute how to use the lesson plan scheduling program to access and update the daily lessons. Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 asserted they maintained creating the lesson plans and gave the Long-Term Substitute directions in implementing the plans.
38. Regarding late grades, Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 explained, "I was completely overwhelmed. I'll be completely honest. I was doing two jobs at one time. … That was one thing I could not get done. … I did tell the [P]rincipal." They shared they also alerted the Special Education Director of their workload. Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 reported they were still handling teaching duties on top of their coordinator duties.
39. Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 indicated the Student received paraeducator support throughout the day, and if Paraprofessional 1 was absent, "We would rotate [in] another para[professional]." They stated "adult support" meant a paraprofessional assisted the Student in general education classes, but did not mean a one-to-one assignment. Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 explained paraprofessionals implemented the Student's "scaffolded social interactions" accommodation by encouraging the Student to interact with peers.

40. Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 gave detailed descriptions regarding the implementation of the Student's accommodations. They confirmed extra time, repeated directions, a scribe, redirection, and fine motor skill assistance were received. They stated the Student did not take State assessments, therefore this accommodation was only occasionally used for in class testing. Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 acknowledged they did not effectively shorten assignments since the Student had math in the adapted classroom for the 2025-26 school year. They indicated that accommodation would be reinstated in general education in the following year. Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 shared the Student was allowed breaks, but did not often use this accommodation. They reported the cursive accommodation was an artifact from a specific past teacher, and the communication log was the Parent's request.

Paraprofessional 1 Interview

41. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, Paraprofessional 1 indicated they were the Student's paraprofessional throughout the school day. They stated they worked with the Student for the entirety of the 2025-26 school year and "a little bit" during the 2024-25 school year. Paraprofessional 1 explained that in addition to supporting the Student, they were also working with another student up until recently, and sometimes another student, if they had to be pulled out for services.

42. When asked how they served the Student in April and May of 2025, Paraprofessional 1 stated they only had to support the Student if the other paraprofessional was absent. They said, "… when we have paras that are absent, we kind of fill in when we need to … ." Paraprofessional 1 stated for the 2025-26 school year, they were with the Student during all of their classes throughout the school day.

43. Paraprofessional 1 stated how they helped the Student depended on the subject. They said, "I will guide [the Student] in the right direction on what lessons we're doing and help [them] figure out the answers that need to be. … [P]retty much everything [the Student] does is on [their] own, but if [the Student] doesn't understand, I'll just pull [them] to the side or we'll go to another room because we can read out loud … ." They stated for times when they were gone, someone else filled in for them. Paraprofessional 1 stated the only time they were not with the Student during the day was from 9:30 a.m. to 9:45 a.m. when the Student was at recess.

44. Paraprofessional 1 indicated for the 2025-26 school year, they would accompany the Student to Adapted Special Education Teacher 1's classroom for math.

45. Paraprofessional 1 stated the Student did not play games on the computer during Adapted Special Education Teacher 1's class when Paraprofessional 1 was with them, unless the Student was using IXL. When asked how frequently IXL was part of the Student's work during math class, Paraprofessional 1 stated, "It just depends." They also said, "I say a handful of times, the whole year, I've been with [the Student] with IXL."

46. Paraprofessional 1 explained when they arrived at 9:00 a.m., they took the Student and another student to the gym, because the latter was "hyperactive" and needed to get some energy out. They stated while this was happening, Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 was working with the other students. Paraprofessional 1 stated they were in the gym with the Student and the other student for about 5-10 minutes, and they did not go to the gym every day. Paraprofessional 1 perceived they took care of the Student and the other student before math class to help the Adapted Special Education Teacher until they could get to them for instruction.
    a. Paraprofessional 1 indicated when they returned to the classroom after being in the gym with the Student and the other student, they prepared the Student and the other student for the math lesson by completing worksheets. They were with the Student from 9:00 a.m. to 9:30 a.m. and then Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 would take over. Paraprofessional 1 explained they left the classroom at 9:30 a.m. to go to another class. They indicated this was the routine until Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 got a new job.
    b. Paraprofessional 1 stated the Long-Term Substitute was working with the students after Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 had left for another job. They indicated from 9:30 a.m. forward, the students were supposed to complete their workbooks, but it was not getting done. Paraprofessional 1 asked the Long-Term Substitute if it was easier if they worked on math from 9:00 a.m. to 9:30 a.m. with the Student and the other student, and then the Long-Term Substitute completed their topic of the day from 9:30 a.m. to 9:45 a.m. They indicated the Long-Term Substitute agreed to this and Paraprofessional 1 worked with the Student and the other student on math assignments listed on the board from 9:00 a.m. to 9:30 a.m. They did not know what happened between 9:30 a.m. to 9:45 a.m. because they were not in the classroom. When they returned at 9:45 a.m., Paraprofessional 1 continued working on math with the Student.
    c. In the interview, the Special Education Director indicated Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 left on January 26, 2026. They explained once the Adapted Special Education Teacher obtained a new job, the LEA sought to find certified people to fill the position. While that was happening, the LEA used daily substitutes and around early to mid-February, they secured a long-term substitute. They indicated Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 had created the lesson plans, so Paraprofessional 1 was working under the direction of Adapted Special Education Teacher 1.
47. During the interview, Paraprofessional 1 was asked about the implementation of the Student's accommodations. They indicated:

a. The Student received extra time to complete their assignments, and the Student was able to go to another room for assessments and take tests privately.
b. Paraprofessional 1 could re-read instructions, or if something was written on the board, Paraprofessional 1 wrote it in the Student's daily journal. They would review information slowly and read it together.
c. They did not scribe much for the Student and stated the Student did "pretty much" everything. They stated they worked on every assignment with the Student.
d. For redirection and focus, they stated the Student did well at staying on topic.
e. They asked the Student to state if they wanted a break, but indicated the Student did not take many breaks.
f. Paraprofessional 1 helped with cutting, but had never seen the Student write in cursive.
g. For the communication log, adult support writing, and a planner, they indicated they completed a plan with the Student every day.
h. The Student had additional space for writing.
i. For scaffolded social interactions, they stated they tried to get the Student to be "more open" with their classmates.

48. During the interview, Paraprofessional 1 was asked about the implementation of the Student's special education and related services. They indicated:
    a. For receiving adult support/special education services for 300 minutes a day, five days a week, every week, they said, "That's just every classroom" and added they were with the Student in all of their classes.
    b. When asked if they provided SDI, Paraprofessional 1 stated they did what the "IEP says to help [the Student] with."
    c. The Student did not play computer games when they were with them, but Paraprofessional 1 did not know what happened when they were not in the classroom. The only time Paraprofessional 1 allowed the Student to play a game was if they were done with their assignment and it was part of their free time.
49. Paraprofessional 1 stated they had not had much training regarding the implementation of the Student's IEP. They explained they were given IEPs, told what the accommodations were and to follow them, but other than that, it was online training and not one-to-one training. Paraprofessional 1 indicated they had conversations with the Student's teachers on how to help the Student. They stated the Student's teachers provided strategies and guidance on how Paraprofessional 1 should work with the Student.
50. Paraprofessional 1 stated they used online modules to learn about different topics, including CPI training. The Special Education Director indicated for 0-5 years of service, a staff member needed 20 hours of in-service training, and for more than 10 years of service, it was only 10 hours of in-service training. They indicated one of the ways staff could meet those hours was by utilizing the online modules. A training log showed Paraprofessional 1 completed training for the following topics: KSDE annual required training, classroom and LEA orientation, CPI new certification training (two sessions), helping students succeed with the web browser (parts one and two), applied behavior analysis (ABA), understanding the power of reinforcement in ABA, defining the four functions of behavior, what are the parts of behavioral interventions, Autism 101-10 (managing behaviors and implementing strategies for ASD), and Autism 101-11 (optimizing autism support through data collection). They completed 18.75 between August 14, 2025 and February 26, 2026.

Math Teacher Interview

51. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Math Teacher indicated they were the Student's teacher during the 2024-25 school year. They stated the Student had "pretty much" one-to-one support in the classroom, and a paraprofessional was "always" with them. They shared their classroom during the 2024-25 school year was part of the general education setting.
52. The Math Teacher described the Student as reserved and quiet, but stated the Student asked for help when needed. They indicated the Student's needs were "pretty high," which was why the Student had a "one-on-one" paraprofessional. They indicated Paraprofessional 1 was the paraprofessional who supported the Student, but that it might have been a few different people throughout the school year.
53. The Math Teacher stated they did not allow much computer usage in their classroom and indicated the Student engaging in computer games would not have occurred within math general education time.
54. The Math Teacher described Blooket as an educational quiz game. They explained the game could be for any subject, and while usually the entire class competed against each other, it could also be an individual activity. They shared the game was used during the time when they served the Student. The Math Teacher stated they also used IXL in their class for about 5-10 minutes at a time, usually as a check-in after a lesson for comprehension. They stated the Parent had never shared a concern about the Student's use of either program.
55. The Math Teacher believed Blooket could be considered just a game, but it was used in their classroom as an educational game. They indicated they did not use any games on IXL. The Math Teacher perceived they used Blooket about once a week for ten minutes during the time they served the Student, and always in a group setting. For the same period of time, the Math Teacher believed they used IXL with the Student about twice a week for ten minutes each, in an individual setting.
56. During the interview, the Math Teacher was asked about the implementation of the Student's accommodations when the Student was using Blooket and IXL in their class. They indicated:

a. Both of the learning platforms allowed students to answer questions at their own speed, so the Student would have had as much processing time as they needed.
b. The Student did not generally require a separate setting, and a separate setting would not have been used with those learning platforms.
c. The Math Teacher re-read questions as necessary.
d. The paraprofessional sometimes scribed for the Student.
e. The paraprofessional would have provided the Student with reminders regarding redirection and prompts to focus. The Math Teacher occasionally prompted the Student if they were "really off task."
f. The Student took a break as often as they needed, which sometimes meant leaving the room and sometimes was just stepping away from their task.
g. Accommodations for fine motor skills, cursive writing, cutting, and coloring assistance were "not relevant."
h. In regards to Blooket and IXL, they stated the accommodations for communication log, adult support, and writing/planner were not relevant because it was related to an in-class activity, not homework.
i. The Student had access to scratch paper to accommodate for additional space for writing.
j. For scaffolded social interactions, the Student sat at table groups and the paraprofessional encouraged the Student to talk with classmates if they needed to. With the games, the Student would work by themself to answer the questions.

57. During the interview, the Math Teacher was asked about the implementation of the Student's special education and related services when the Student was using the aforementioned online platforms in their class. They indicated:
    a. The Student was not pulled from their class for speech services.
    b. They observed the Student receiving additional support for 300 minutes a day, five days a week, each week.
    c. They did not know if specialized instruction for 25 minutes every week in the special education or regular education building was occurring, because it did not include the Math Teacher.
    d. They did not recall the Student being pulled out of their classroom to receive services.

Special Education Coordinator Interview

58. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Special Education Coordinator explained they stopped working with the Student in May 2025. They did not know what students' computer usage at the School looked like.

59. The Special Education Coordinator described their role during the investigation period as helping the special education teachers by answering questions, providing guidance, helping write IEPs, scheduling meetings, and talking with parents.

60. The Special Education Coordinator explained that every school year they obtained all of the "IEPs at glance," which listed the accommodations, modifications, minutes, goals, and services a student would be receiving. They indicated this document instructed general education teachers on what a student with an IEP was working on, as well as their accommodations and modifications. The Special Education Coordinator indicated they held a two-hour orientation with all of the paraprofessionals and discussed each student with an IEP and the information within the document. They wanted the paraprofessionals to ensure students were receiving the support and services they needed while in the classroom, and the paraprofessionals could come to them if they had a question. They stated the meeting with the paraprofessionals was held at the beginning of the year, and a meeting for teachers was held during the first in-service when they returned to school.

61. When asked how the LEA supported students when paraprofessionals were absent or unavailable, they said, "… we usually service the ones that have the most needs." The Special Education Coordinator stated they would also help if they were available.

62. The Special Education Coordinator stated that paraprofessionals delivered instruction. They explained when they were a teacher, they would explain the main concept or topic and a paraprofessional would help with practice skills or facilitating the lesson.

Special Education Director Interview

63. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Special Education Director reported the LEA attempted to fill the vacancy created by Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 changing positions prior to January 26, 2026. They stated all substitutes hired for the position, including the Long-Term Substitute, retained State licensure, therefore, "in the eyes of [the State], we had certified people providing services and supports." The Special Education Director shared the Long-Term Substitute was invited to LEA-wide training, however the training had not yet occurred.

64. The Special Education Director confirmed Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 continued to create SDI lesson plans "to ensure the continuity of service." They stated "[W]e hope that our substitutes are doing what we have left them." They acknowledged relying on paraprofessionals for support with routines. The Special Education Director asserted Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 was "in communication with the Parent throughout this whole time of the change in position."

65. Regarding using computer programs for instruction, the Special Education Director confirmed no lesson plans included computer time. They described the Student's computer use as "very miniscule." They acknowledged a substitute may allow it in error, or the Student may have "got off task." They stated there was no log info for how long the Student was on each program.
66. On April 1, 2026, the Parent filed this complaint.

Positions of the Parties, Applicable Regulations, and Conclusions

Issue One

Whether USD #251, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing IDEA, ensured the SDI and accommodations in the Student's IEP were implemented when the Student engaged in computer games during their special education service time. K.A.R. 91-40-16(a)(b); 34 CFR § 300.323(a)(d).

According to K.A.R. 91-40-16(a)(b) and 34 CFR § 300.323(a)(d), each agency shall be responsible for initiating and conducting meetings to develop, review, and revise the IEP of each exceptional child served by the agency. Each agency shall ensure the following conditions are met: an IEP is in effect before special education and related services are provided to an exceptional child; those services for which written consent has been granted as specified by law are implemented not later than 10 school days after parental consent is granted unless reasonable justification for a delay can be shown; an IEP is in effect for each exceptional child at the beginning of each school year; and the child's IEP is accessible to each regular education teacher, special education teacher, related service provider, and other service provider who is responsible for its implementation. Additionally, each teacher and provider must be informed of their specific responsibilities related to implementing the child's IEP and the specific accommodations, modifications, and supports that must be provided for the child in accordance with the IEP.

The Parent alleged the LEA did not provide the Student with the services as listed in their IEP when the Student was allowed to play games on their computer during math instruction.

The LEA maintained the Student was provided with SDI and accommodations in accordance with the IEP dated April 23, 2025 and amended on August 19, 2025.

In March 2026, the Parent expressed concerns about the Student accessing online games during their math SDI, and believed the Student spent more time on IXL and Blooket when Paraprofessional 1 was not in the classroom. The Parent shared these concerns with Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 on March 12, 2026 but saw the Student was still accessing programs during their service time, which the data supported. The Other Parent believed the substitutes and other paraprofessionals were letting the Student play computer games rather than delivering instruction. Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 asserted there was "never a lesson plan to be on the computer playing games. … They might get to get on something that they wanted to for maybe five minutes or the end of class." Paraprofessional 1 stated the Student did not play computer games during Adapted Special Education Teacher 1's class when Paraprofessional 1 was with them, unless the Student was using IXL. They did not know what happened between 9:30 a.m. and 9:45 a.m. because they were not in the classroom.

Paraprofessional 1 indicated they used IXL "a handful of times" with the Student as part of math class, and provided SDI by following the Student's IEP. The Math Teacher stated they did not allow much computer usage in their classroom, but used Blooket about once a week for ten minutes during the time they served the Student, and used IXL with the Student about twice a week for ten minutes each time. The Special Education Director and Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 confirmed no lesson plans included computer time. The Special Education Director described the Student's computer use as "very miniscule" and acknowledged a substitute may allow it in error, or the Student may have "got off task."

Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 indicated the Student received paraprofessional support throughout the day, and described how the Student's accommodations were implemented. Paraprofessional 1 and the Math Teacher also described how they supported the Student, implemented the Student's accommodations, and how related services were provided.

The Student's core math instruction was from 9:03 a.m. to 9:53 a.m. Activity reports of the Student's computer usage showed login times for IXL and Blooket, but not the length of time spent on the programs. According to the activity reports, from January 28, 2026 through March 27, 2026, the Student accessed Blooket 20 times and IXL four times. The Parent acknowledged IXL and Blooket could be useful educational tools if a teacher used them correctly.

While the activity logs demonstrated the Student accessed Blooket and IXL multiple times, it was not possible to determine how long the Student spent on IXL or Blooket or in what capacity. According to Beer ex rel. A.B. v. USD 512 Shawnee Mission (2023), "School districts incur liability when 'a material failure to implement an IEP violates the IDEA.'" (citing Van Duyn v. Baker Sch. Dist. 5J, (9th Cir. 2007)). Additionally, E.C. by W.C. and K.C. v. U.S.D. 385 Andover (2020) states, "'[T]o prevail on a claim under the IDEA, a party challenging the implementation of an IEP must show more than a de minimis failure to implement all elements of that IEP, and, instead, must demonstrate that the school board or other authorities failed to implement substantial or significant provisions of the IEP.' … Without further guidance from the Tenth Circuit on this standard, the Court proceeds with its analysis under the prevailing "materiality" standard from its sister circuits … ." (citing Houston Indep. Sch. Dist. v. Bobby R ., (5th Cir. 2000)). Overall, the evidence indicated the Student continued to achieve and make progress. While it is clear the Student accessed Blooket and IXL, the evidence did not demonstrate that access to these programs resulted in a failure to implement the Student's accommodations and SDI during their service time.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to ensure the SDI and accommodations in the Student's IEP were implemented when the Student engaged in computer games during their special education service time.

Issue Two

Whether USD #251, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, ensured the Student received instruction that was provided by personnel who were appropriately trained and supervised in meeting the requirements to assist in the provision of special education and related services to children with disabilities when the special education teacher changed positions. K.S.A. 72-3404(j); 34 CFR §§ 300.156, 300.207.

According to K.S.A. 72-3404(j), a special teacher means a person, employed by or under contract with a school district or a state institution to provide special education or related services, who is qualified to provide special education or related services to exceptional children as determined pursuant to standards established by the state board, or to assist in the provision of special education or related services to exceptional children as determined pursuant to standards established by the State board.

According to 34 CFR § 300.156, the State Educational Agency (SEA) must establish and maintain qualifications to ensure that personnel necessary to carry out the purposes of this part are appropriately and adequately prepared and trained, including that those personnel have the content knowledge and skills to serve children with disabilities. These qualifications must include requirements for related services personnel and paraprofessionals that are consistent with any State-approved or State-recognized certification, licensing, registration, or other comparable requirements that apply to the professional discipline in which those personnel are providing special education or related services; and ensure that related services personnel who deliver services in their discipline or profession meet the aforementioned requirements and have not had certification or licensure requirements waived on an emergency, temporary, or provisional basis; and allow paraprofessionals and assistants who are appropriately trained and supervised, in accordance with State law, regulation, or written policy, in meeting the requirements to be used to assist in the provision of special education and related services to children with disabilities.

The qualifications described above must ensure each person employed as a public school special education teacher in the State who teaches in an elementary school, middle school, or secondary school has obtained full State certification as a special education teacher, or passed the State special education teacher licensing examination, and holds a license to teach in the State as a special education teacher, except that when used with respect to any teacher teaching in a public charter school, the teacher must meet the certification or licensing requirements, if any, set forth in the State's public charter school law; has not had special education certification or licensure requirements waived on an emergency, temporary, or provisional basis; and holds at least a bachelor's degree.

A teacher will be considered to meet the aforementioned standard if the teacher is participating in an alternate route to special education certification program under which the teacher receives high-quality professional development that is sustained, intensive, and classroom-focused in order to have a positive and lasting impact on classroom instruction, before and while teaching; participates in a program of intensive supervision that consists of structured guidance and regular ongoing support for teachers or a teacher mentoring program; assumes functions as a teacher only for a specified period of time not to exceed three years; and demonstrates satisfactory progress toward full certification as prescribed by the State. The State ensures, through its certification and licensure process, that the aforementioned provisions of the law are met.

According to 34 CFR § 300.207, the LEA must ensure that all personnel necessary to carry out Part B of the Act are appropriately and adequately prepared, subject to the requirements of 34 CFR § 300.156 (related to personnel qualifications) and section 2102(b) of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act.

The Parent alleged the LEA failed to provide adequately trained staff following the special education teacher's transition to the role of coordinator. The Parent claimed the LEA did not fill the resulting vacancy, instead relied on educational assistants and substitute teachers to provide the Student's instruction.

The LEA contended the Student continued to receive a FAPE, provided by appropriately trained and supervised personnel, following the mid-year staffing transition that occurred on January 12, 2026.

When Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 started a new role on January 26, 2026, their classroom was covered by certified substitute teachers until the Long-Term Substitute started on March 2, 2026. The evidence showed that all personnel, including the substitutes and the Long-Term Substitute, held valid State licensure, which the Special Education Director confirmed.

Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 stated that after accepting their new position, substitutes and paraprofessionals were responsible for SDI, which the Special Education Director confirmed. In their interview, Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 explained they created SDI lesson plans for the substitute teachers, provided instructional guidance, and supported the Long-Term Substitute, which the Special Education Director confirmed. Instructional guidance was also provided under the direction of Adapted Special Education Teacher 2, with additional lesson planning support from Adapted Special Education Teacher 1. The evidence showed Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 prepared weekly schedules for the Student's math, reading, and writing instruction from January 26 to April 17, 2026, which included information for the paraprofessional on where to find materials, the lesson plan, instructions, objectives, manipulatives, and visual aids.

The evidence included training logs for Paraprofessionals 1 and 2, which showed completion of various modules. Paraprofessional 1 also indicated they had conversations with the Student's teachers on how to help the Student, including strategies and guidance on how to work with the Student. The Special Education Coordinator indicated they held a two-hour orientation with all of the paraprofessionals and discussed each student with an IEP and the information contained within the IEP.

According to the KSDE 2024-25 Special Education Reimbursement Guide State Categorical Aid, to be employed as a special education paraeducator, the minimum requirements were to be a high school graduate (or GED certificate), and complete an orientation session addressing confidentiality, the services to be provided, and the policies and procedures of the LEA concerning special education. It also stated paraeducators could provide instructional or related services under the supervision of licensed or certified special education professionals in an accredited or approved special education program. It stated paraeducators could not be responsible for selecting, programming, or prescribing educational activities or materials for the students without the supervision and guidance of the special teacher; be solely responsible for preparing lesson plans or initiating original concept instruction; assigned to implement the IEP for students with exceptionalities without direct supervision and involvement from the professional; and be employed in lieu of certified or licensed special education personnel or used as substitute teachers.

Although the Parent expressed concerns about a lack of trained personnel, the evidence demonstrated staff held the proper licensure, and were trained, supervised, and guided by Adapted Special Education Teachers 1 and 2. There was no evidence to indicate the provision of the Student's special education and related services were provided by improperly supervised or un-trained personnel.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to ensure the Student received instruction that was provided by personnel who were appropriately trained and supervised in meeting the requirements to assist in the provision of special education and related services to children with disabilities when the special education teacher changed positions.

Corrective Action

Information gathered in the course of this investigation did not substantiate noncompliance with special education statutes and regulations. Therefore, no corrective action is ordered.

Right to Appeal

Either party may appeal the findings or conclusions in this report by filing a written notice of appeal with the State Commissioner of Education, ATTN: Special Education and Title Services, Landon State Office Building, 900 SW Jackson Street, Suite 620, Topeka, KS 66612-1212. The notice of appeal may also be filed by email to formalcomplaints@ksde.gov The notice of appeal must be delivered within 10 calendar days from the date of this report.

For further description of the appeals process, see Kansas Administrative Regulations 91-40-51(f).

K.A.R. 91-40-51(f) Appeals.

(1) Any agency or complainant may appeal any of the findings or conclusions of a compliance report prepared by the special education section of the department by filing a written notice of appeal with the state commissioner of education. Each notice shall be filed within 10 days from the date of the report. Each notice shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect.

Upon receiving an appeal, an appeal committee of at least three department of education members shall be appointed by the commissioner to review the report and to consider the information provided by the local education agency, the complainant, or others. The appeal process, including any hearing conducted by the appeal committee, shall be completed within 15 days from the date of receipt of the notice of appeal, and a decision shall be rendered within five days after the appeal process is completed unless the appeal committee determines that exceptional circumstances exist with respect to the particular complaint. In this event, the decision shall be rendered as soon as possible by the appeal committee.

(2) If an appeal committee affirms a compliance report that requires corrective action by an agency, that agency shall initiate the required corrective action immediately. If, after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the agency shall be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following:

(A) The issuance of an accreditation deficiency advisement;
(B) the withholding of state or federal funds otherwise available to the agency;
(C) the award of monetary reimbursement to the complainant; or
(D) any combination of the actions specified in paragraph (f)(2)

In the Matter of the Appeal of the Report
Issued in Response to a Complaint Filed
Against Unified School District No. 251
North Lyon County Public Schools: 26FC251-001

DECISION OF THE APPEAL COMMITTEE

Background

This matter commenced with the filing of a complaint on April 1, 2026, by ------- on behalf of her daughter, -------. In the remainder of this decision, ------- will be referred to as "the parent," and ------- will be referred to as "the student." An investigation of the complaint was undertaken by a complaint investigator on behalf of the Special Education, and Title Services team at the Kansas State Department of Education. Following the investigation, a Complaint Report, addressing the allegations, was issued on May 1, 2026. That Complaint Report concluded that there were no violations of special education statutes and regulations

Thereafter, the patent filed an appeal of the Complaint Report. Upon receipt of the appeal, an appeal committee was appointed and it reviewed the original complaint filed by the parent, the Complaint Report, the parent's notice of appeal, and the LEA's response to the appeal. The Appeal Committee has reviewed the information provided in connection with this matter and now issues this final Appeal Decision.

Preliminary Matters

A copy of the regulation regarding the filing of an appeal [K.A.R. 91-40-51(f)] was attached to the Complaint Report. That regulation states, in part, that: "Each notice shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect." Accordingly, the burden for supplying a sufficient basis for appeal is on the party submitting the appeal. When a party submits an appeal and makes statements in the notice of appeal without support, the Committee does not attempt to locate the missing support.

No new issues will be decided by the Appeal Committee. The appeal process is a review of the Complaint Report. The Appeal Committee does not conduct a separate investigation. The appeal committee's function will be to determine whether sufficient evidence exists to support the findings and conclusions in the Complaint Report.

Discussion of Issues on Appeal

The report identified two issues. The conclusions for both issues have been appealed.

Issue One

Whether USD #251, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), ensured the specially designed instruction (SDI) and accommodations in the Student's Individualized Educational Program (IEP) were implemented when the Student engaged in computer games during their special education service time. K.A.R. 91-40-16(a)(b); 34 CFR § 300.323(a)(d).

The parent's appeal states that the student is supposed to get 50 minutes of specialized math instruction daily from 9:03 am to 9:53 am, but the student spends some of that time playing non-educational games on a computer instead of getting specialized math instruction from a human. The computer time is used primarily to access two programs: Blooket and IXL. The parent stated that Blooket was used by the student nine times in February and six times in March and IXL was used two times in February.

Part of the difficulty for this Appeal Committee is that it does not know what Blooket and IXL are other than the brief descriptions provided in the complaint report by school staff members, as follows:

> The Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 stated, I don't know what Blooket is. I've never done that with the kids." Regarding IXL, Adapted Special Education Teacher 1 reported "[I]t's not really a game, it gives extra practice for a skill you're doing. … when I use IXL with a student or any program with a student, they sit next to me and I'm watching what they're doing. And just the same as if it was a paper pencil lesson." Finding of fact 35, p. 21
>
> The Math Teacher described Blooket as an educational quiz game. They explained the game could be for any subject, and while usually the entire class competed against each other, it could also be an individual activity. They shared the game was used during the time when they served the Student. The Math Teacher stated they also used IXL in their class for about 5-10 minutes at a time, usually as a check-in after a lesson for comprehension. They stated the Parent had never shared a concern about the Student's use of either program. Finding of fact 54 on page 27.
>
> The Math Teacher believed Blooket could be considered just a game, but it was used in their classroom as an educational game. They indicated they did not use any games on IXL. The Math Teacher perceived they used Blooket about once a week for ten minutes during the time they served the Student, and always in a group setting. For the same period of time, the Math Teacher believed they used IXL with the Student about twice a week for ten minutes each, in an individual setting. (Report, finding of fact 55, p. 27)
> Paraprofessional 1 stated the Student did not play games on the computer during Adapted Special Education Teacher 1's class when Paraprofessional 1 was with them, unless the Student was using IXL. When asked how frequently IXL was part of the Student's work during math class, Paraprofessional 1 stated, "It just depends." They also said, "I say a > handful of times, the whole year, I've been with [the Student] with IXL." (Report, finding of fact 45, p. 23-24)

The Appeal Committee also notes the investigator's finding that the "Student Activity Reports" record log-in times but do not record the length of use. In all instances, the use of these programs were categorized as "educational." Report, finding of fact 3, p. 4)

From this evidence, it appears that the student accessed these programs with a fair amount of frequency but an unknown amount of time. Thus, the percentage of frequency does not provide the percentage of time the student was accessing these programs. It also appears that these programs can be used as an individualized educational aid.

The investigator's conclusion included this explanation:

> While the activity logs demonstrated the Student accessed Blooket and IXL multiple times, it was not possible to determine how long the Student spent on IXL or Blooket or in what capacity. According to Beer ex rel. A.B. v. USD 512 Shawnee Mission (2023), "School districts incur liability when 'a material failure to implement an IEP violates the IDEA.'" (citing Van Duyn v. Baker Sch. Dist. 5J, (9th Cir. 2007)). Additionally, E.C. by W.C. and K.C. v. U.S.D. 385 Andover (2020) states, "'[T]o prevail on a claim under the IDEA, a party challenging the implementation of an IEP must show more than a de minimis failure to implement all elements of that IEP, and, instead, must demonstrate that the school board or other authorities failed to implement substantial or significant provisions of the IEP.' … Without further guidance from the Tenth Circuit on this standard, the Court proceeds with its analysis under the prevailing "materiality" standard from its sister circuits … ." (citing Houston Indep. Sch. Dist. v. Bobby R ., (5th Cir. 2000)). Overall, the evidence indicated the Student continued to achieve and make progress. While it is clear the Student accessed Blooket and IXL, the evidence did not demonstrate that access to these programs resulted in a failure to implement the Student's accommodations and SDI during their service time. (Report, p. 32-33). Report, p. 32-33)

The Appeal Committee agrees with this analysis. In a case cited by the investigator, Houston Indep. Schl Dist. v. Bobby R, 200 F.3d 341, 31 IDELR 185 (5th Cir. 2000), the court explained that "to prevail on a claim under the IDEA, a party challenging the implementation of an IEP must show more than a de minimis failure to implement all elements of that IEP, and, instead, must demonstrate that the school board or other authorities failed to implement substantial or significant provisions of the IEP. This approach affords local agencies some flexibility in implementing IEP's, but it still holds those agencies accountable for material failures and for providing the disabled child a meaningful educational benefit." The Appeal Committee also notes that the 10th Circuit has ruled similarly (Kansas is in the 10th Circuit so its interpretation is law in Kansas). In L.C. and K.C. v. Utah St. Bd. Of Ed., 105 LRP 12668 (10th Cir. 2005), the court said that, although a school cannot ignore the fact that an IEP is clearly failing, occasional deviations from the IEP are not necessarily a violation of IDEA.

This same analysis has been adopted more recently in other circuits that have considered it. In, Abigail P. v. Old Forge School District, 124 LRP 21769 (3d. Cir. 2024), the 3rd Circuit joined the 4th, 5th, 8th, 9th, and 11th Circuits saying implementation failure must be material to be actionable. It explained, "Indeed, a requirement of perfect adherence would ignore the realities and the challenges that the IDEA was built to accommodate…A materiality standard affords local agencies some flexibility while still holding those agencies accountable for material failures and for providing the disabled a meaningful education benefit (emphasis added)."

In addition, the Appeal Committee notes that the federal regulations define the term "specially designed instruction" as follows:

> "Specially designed instruction means adapting, as appropriate to the needs of an eligible child under this part, the content, methodology, or delivery of instruction--
>
> (i) To address the unique needs of the child that result from the child's disability; and
>
> (ii) To ensure access of the child to the general curriculum, so that the child can meet the educational standards within the jurisdiction of the public agency that apply to all children.

There is no requirement that the specially designed instruction be delivered directly to the student "from a human," as proposed by the parent in this complaint appeal. Specially designed instruction may be designed in advance of class time and provided to a student to work on individually, with appropriate support from school staff members.

In her appeal, the parent also questions the investigator's finding that the student continued to make progress during February and March, primarily because that was such a short time ago. While there may not be a lot of evidence of progress during the past few months, the evidence that does exist supports the conclusion in the report. For example, Team Meeting Notes dated May 19, 2025 indicated the team met to discuss the Student's progress on IEP goals and the Adapted Special Education Teacher noted the Student had "done very well on [their] math goal[.]" (Finding of fact 6, Report, p. 7). In addition. The report cited a Progress Report dated April 9, 2026, indicating that the student had "mastered" the math goal Report, finding of fact 21, p. 15.

Finally, in her appeal the parent questions the investigator's interview technique of permitting the Special Education Director to sit in on the interviews. The parent's questions included: Why was that allowed? Is it a form of intimidation when the boss sits in on interviews? Can the interviewees talk freely and honestly when the boss is present? While these could be legitimate concerns in some situations, we cannot address them on appeal because the appeal process, by state law, may only be used to challenge the findings and conclusions in a complaint report, not the investigative techniques used by an investigator.

For the reasons stated above, it is concluded that there is sufficient evidence to support the conclusion in Issue one.

Issue Two

> Whether USD #251, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, ensured the Student received instruction that was provided by personnel who were appropriately trained and supervised in meeting the requirements to assist in the provision of special education and related services to children with disabilities when the special education teacher changed positions in late January 2026. K.S.A. 72-3404(j); 34 CFR §§ 300.156, 300.207.

In this portion of the Appeal, the parent says:

> I am asking that Issue Two (p. 34-37 of the report) is also overturned, because even though all of the substitutes are licensed, my child has gone almost an entire semester with no certified teacher (not a certified substitute, but a certified teacher) instructing her specialized math instruction, and her spring assessment scores back up my concerns.

The Appeal Committee understands and sympathizes with the parent on this issue. Finding and keeping qualified staff is important for students, parents and school officials. The unfortunate reality is that maintaining staff levels has been a persistent difficulty, especially in rural areas like this one. That is the reason the state of Kansas has adopted procedures in its state regulations for the use of substitute teachers (see K.A.R. 91-31-34).

The report concluded that:

> Although the Parent expressed concerns about a lack of trained personnel, the evidence demonstrated staff held the proper licensure, and were trained, supervised, and guided by Adapted Special Education Teachers 1 and 2. There was no evidence to indicate the provision of the Student's special education and related services were provided by improperly supervised or un-trained personnel.

This appeal does not assert that there is error in this conclusion and the Appeal Committee finds none.

Sufficient evidence exists to support the findings and conclusions in the Complaint Report on this issue.

Conclusion

For the reasons stated herein, the Complaint Report is sustained in full.

This is the final decision on this matter. There is no further appeal. This Appeal Decision is issued this 20th day of May, 2026.

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST
UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #259
ON APRIL 1, 2026

DATE OF REPORT: MAY 1, 2026

This report is in response to a Complaint filed with our office on behalf of a student, -------, by their parent, -------. In the remainder of the report, the student will be referred to as "the Student" and the parent as "the Parent."

The Complaint is against USD #259 Wichita Public Schools. In the remainder of the report, "the School" and the "local education agency (LEA)" shall refer to USD #259.

When a special education complaint is filed against a school district that is a member of a special education cooperative or interlocal, or that uses any other state recognized public agency to serve children with disabilities, the term "local education agency (LEA)" in this report will include the school district, the special education cooperative or interlocal, and any other agency that is recognized by the state as an administrative agency for public elementary or secondary schools and is serving the educational needs of this student.

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) allows for a 30-day timeline to investigate a child complaint. A complaint is considered to be filed on the date it is delivered to both the KSDE and the LEA. In this case, the KSDE initially received the Complaint on April 1, 2026 and the 30-day timeline ended on April 30, 2026.

Allegations

The following issues will be investigated:

ISSUE ONE: Whether USD #259, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), allowed the Parent an opportunity to inspect and review all educational records when the Parent's access to the online parent portal was terminated. K.A.R. 91-40-50, 91-40-25(a); 34 CFR §§ 300.613, 300.501(a)(1).

ISSUE TWO: Whether USD #259, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, took steps to ensure both parents were present and had the opportunity to participate at the IEP meeting held on February 25, 2026. Further, whether the LEA ensured the IEP and placement decisions were made by a group of persons, including the Student's Parent or Parents, when the team met on February 25, 2026, and included the Parent's input in the Student's IEP, and removed the Parent's name from the Student's emergency contact. K.A.R. 91-40-21(c)(1)(A), 91-40-17(a)(b)(1), 91-40-25; 34 CFR §§ 300.322(a)(b)(1)(c)(d), 300.501(b)(c).

ISSUE THREE: Whether USD #259, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, obtained the Parent's informed consent on the Medicaid consent document as part of the IEP dated March 10, 2026. K.A.R. 91-40-27(a)(2-3); 34 CFR § 300.154(d)(1)(2)(iv)(v).

ISSUE FOUR: Whether USD #259, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, ensured the Student's IEP was in effect, and accommodations such as the Student's bathroom accommodation and the communication binder were implemented. K.A.R. 91-40-16(a)(b); 34 CFR § 300.323(a)(d).

ISSUE FIVE: Whether USD #259, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, provided the Parent with notice regarding proposed actions to change the Student's IEP when the Student's services changed, and when the Parent requested amendments to the IEP. K.A.R. 91-40-26, K.S.A. 72-3430(b)(2); 34CFR § 300.503(a)(b).

ISSUE SIX: Whether USD #259, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, revised the IEP when the Parent requested inaccuracies to be changed, and whether the LEA considered the concerns of the Parent, and the academic, developmental, and functional needs of the Student when it changed the Student's bathroom accommodations. K.S.A. 72-3429(f)(2), K.A.R. 91-40-18(a)(c); 34 CFR §§ 300.324(b), 300.324(a)(4)(6).

ISSUE SEVEN: Whether USD #259, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, ensured the Student was placed in the Least Restrictive Environment (LRE) when the Student's inclusion time was removed from their IEP at the February 25, 2026, IEP meeting. K.A.R. 91-40-21; 34 CFR § 300.114.

Investigation of Complaint

The Complaint Investigator interviewed the Parent on April 27, 2026. The following LEA staff were interviewed on April 22, 2026: the Primary Interrelated Teacher, the Principal, the Supervisor of Student Records and Enrollment Services, the Speech Language Pathologist, the Special Education Campus Support, the Special Education Director, and the Supervisor of Student Support Services.

In completing this investigation, the Complaint Investigator reviewed documentation provided by the Parent and the LEA. Although additional documentation was provided and reviewed, the following materials were used as the basis of the findings and conclusions of the investigation:

1. Emails between the parties,11/17/25 through 04/14/26
2. Petition for Protection from Abuse Order, 12/18/25
3. Individualized Education Program, 02/24/25

4. Handwritten Paraprofessional Note, no date
5. [the Student] Profile Notes, 09/15/25
6. IEP Progress Report - Annual Goal, 02/25/26
7. Prior Written Notice, 02/10/26-03/13/26
8. Accommodation Monitoring Form, 03/02/26-03/09/26
9. Notice of Meeting, 03/05/26
10. Text Chain - the Custodial Parent [the Student] and Speech Language Pathologist, 03/07/26-03/10/26
11. Individualized Education Program, 03/10/2026
12. Prior Written Notice, 04/13/26
13. Meeting Notes, 03/10/26
14. Prior Written Notice, 04/01/26
15. Parent Access Dates, 01/05/26-02/10/26
16. [The Student's] Emergency Contact List, no date
17. Parent Consent for Release of Information and Medicaid Reimbursement, 02/25/26

Background Information

This Investigation involved a first-grade student enrolled at a magnet elementary school in USD #259. The Student is currently receiving special education or related services as a child with a disability under the IDEA, in the category of Developmental Delay. An active Protection from Abuse (PFA) order exists between the parents, and they maintain joint legal custody of the Student.

Findings of the Investigation

The following findings are based on a review of documentation and interviews with the Parent and staff in the LEA.

1. A September 15, 2025 Student profile note completed by the School Nurse indicated the primary concern as other health-related, the health services as clinical care, and the outcome as disposition/plan for assistance with incontinence/urinary hygiene issues. Comments indicated the Student had used the restroom and that their pants became wet with urine "while in the bathroom." The School Nurse assisted the Student in changing clothes and notified the Custodial Parent. The LEA response indicated the September 15, 2025 incident as the only bathroom accident reported, which resulted in the "[the Student] getting urine on [their] pants" during the time they were in the bathroom.
2. In a November 17, 2025 email to the Parent, the Primary Interrelated Teacher informed them the Student's communication logs were in their backpack. The email indicated an attachment of the Student's first quarter progress report.

3. A PFA Order dated December 17, 2025 indicated protection for the Custodial Parent from the Parent, and joint legal custody of the Student until the order expired between the Parent and the Custodial Parent. There was no expiration date indicated.
4. A Parent Access Dates document dated January 5 through February 10, 2026, regarding the Parent's access to the online parent portal stated, "This shows rights were removed on [January 5, 2026] [and] [January 20, 2026], then added back on [February 9, 2026] and [February 10, 2026]."
5. In an email dated February 8, 2026 to the Principal, the Parent "formally" requested "immediate" access to:
   a. Online parent portal – "Restore my login credentials."
   b. Duplicate reporting – "Add my email … to all distribution lists for school newsletters, class announcements, and emergency notifications."
   c. Records Release – "Please forward electronic copies of [the Student's] most recent: Report Cards (Q2/Q3); Attendance Record (Dec[ember] 2025 - Present); IEP Progress Reports."

   Additionally, they stated, "I assert my federal right under [the] IDEA to be notified of and included in all IEP team meetings. Please ensure I am contacted directly for scheduling."
6. In an email dated February 9, 2026 to the Principal and the Supervisor of Student Records and Enrollment Services, the Administrative Assistant explained the Parent's educational rights "were not deleted." They shared the Principal received an email from the Custodial Parent on January 19, 2026 which initiated the change in the Student's account, and that the changes made were "completed in accordance with the [Custodial Parent's] request."
7. Email exchanges from February 9 through February 12, 2026, between the Custodial Parent and the Primary Interrelated Teacher detailed the coordination of the Student's annual IEP meeting. The Primary Interrelated Teacher inquired whether the Parent would be attending, to which the Custodial Parent explicitly requested that they not be included, citing the PFA order. The Custodial Parent noted that, while they did not want the Parent present at their meeting, the Parent was "more than welcome to have [their] own meeting." They ultimately scheduled the Custodial Parent's meeting for February 24, 2026, at 3:30 p.m. The Custodial Parent confirmed their attendance and electronically signed the Notice of Meeting on February 11, 2026.
8. In a February 10, 2026 email to the Parent, the Primary Interrelated Teacher inquired about scheduling the Student's IEP and offered two dates for a phone meeting.
9. PWN dated February 10, 2026, documented the LEA's proposals regarding the Student's educational program, which the team reviewed on February 25, 2026. The LEA proposed a change in placement that moved the Student to a more restrictive environment for more than 25% of the school day. This proposal scheduled the Student to receive 170 minutes of special education services weekly without general education peers during decoding, English language arts (ELA), and math. Additionally, the LEA proposed a 50% reduction in speech and language services, decreasing them from 30 minutes to 15 minutes per week. These actions were proposed because the team determined that pullout services were the best option, given the Student's academic performance and the pacing of the general education classroom. The input and data used as a basis for this decision included District assessment results, formal testing, teacher and paraprofessional input, observations, and work samples. The LEA rejected the option of maintaining the Student's current minutes in the general education classroom, citing the Student's developmental delays and academic data. Consent for these changes was provided by the Custodial Parent on March 13, 2026, as indicated by the Custodial Parent's signature.

10. In a February 13, 2026 email to the District General Counsel and the Principal, the Parent indicated:
    a. "No termination of Rights" and stated there is no existing court order terminating their "Joint Legal Custody." They asserted their "federal rights to educational access remain fully intact."
    b. They explained their prior request to access the Student's records made on February 8, 2026 was "ignored."
    c. Additionally, they again requested the same items listed in their February 8, 2026 request.
11. Email exchanges from February 24 through March 10, 2026 between the Principal, the Primary Interrelated Teacher, and the Parent detailed:
    a. The Parent postponed a scheduled meeting because they had not yet received the Student's current IEP or progress data. They asserted their legal right to review these educational records before participating in an IEP meeting.
    b. The Primary Interrelated Teacher confirmed a new meeting for the Parent on February 27, 2026. They informed the Parent that the Custodial Parent was meeting with the team on February 25, 2026 to draft the document, but emphasized that the IEP would not be finalized until the Parent reviewed it and attended their own meeting.
    c. The Parent responded, stating they had checked their email and the online parent portal and had not yet received a draft IEP. Additionally, they expressed concern that the Custodial Parent would sign an IEP before the Parent's input was considered and decisions were finalized. They requested the signed IEP by the Custodial Parent and all progress data be sent to them.

d. Additionally, the Principal responded to the Parent, stating that a copy of the new draft would be shared once completed and that the IEP would not be finalized until all parties were in agreement.

e. On February 25, 2026, the Primary Interrelated Teacher emailed the Parent a draft copy of the IEP and IEP Progress Report. Additionally, the Parent reported an error message encountered in the online parent portal system while attempting to sign documents.

f. On February 27, 2026, during their scheduled IEP meeting time, the School team attempted to reach the Parent via phone. They stated they would wait a few minutes for the Parent to call back.

g. The following day, the Parent contacted School staff to apologize for their absence, explaining that their phone had broken before the meeting, leaving them unable to call. They requested that the IEP meeting be rescheduled.

h. On March 3, 2026, the Primary Interrelated Teacher emailed with dates and times for the rescheduled meeting. Later that day, the Parent responded with their preferred meeting time.

i. On March 5, 2026, the Primary Interrelated Teacher emailed the Parent a notice of the meeting.

j. On March 10, 2026, the Primary Interrelated Teacher emailed the Parent to inquire about confirmation of the meeting and received no response.

12. A Receipt of Parent Rights in Special Education-Procedural Safeguards dated February 24, 2026, indicated the Parent's receipt with an electronic signature dated February 26, 2026.

13. In a February 25, 2026 email to the Custodial Parent, the Primary Interrelated Teacher confirmed their attendance for the IEP meeting that day. The Custodial Parent responded, confirmed their attendance at the meeting, and inquired about confirmation that the Parent would not be in attendance.

14. A Parent Consent for Release of Information and Medicaid Reimbursement dated February 25, 2026 indicated the Custodial Parent as the parent with their electronic signature on the parent/guardian line.

15. An IEP Progress Report dated February 25, 2026 stated relevant goal information reported on May 22, October 15, and December 15, 2025, and February 25, 2026:

a. Speech – mastery level indicators of 1 ("Not Measured - Please contact your IEP manager for additional information") and three 4's ("Improvement - Improvement from baseline and/or previous reporting period.") Notes stated, "Due to absences, [the Student's] progress has not exceeded that of the baseline data"; "[The Student] is making improvements in [their] speech sound productions"; "[The Student] is making great progress on [their] R blends and L blends"; and "[The Student] has made great progress with L blends sounds. [They] can produce them in phrases with 80-90% accuracy. [The Student] can produce R blends when segmented in 50% of phrases."

b. Reading – mastery level indicators of 1, 4, and two 5's ("Mastered - Met goal"). Relevant notes stated, "[The Student] is almost at 75%! [The Student] very closely met [their] goal! [The Student] was missing short and long vowels. [The Student] is now learning to sound out short words like (cat, dog, pig). I am able to up [their] goal to reading [Consonant-Vowel-Consonant] (CVC) words."

c. Math – mastery level indicators of 1, 4, 3 ("Maintained Performance - No change from previous progress report/baseline OR No change from previous reporting period"), and 5. Relevant notes stated, "[The Student met [their] math goal and is ready for a higher one. Once [they] get to 20. I will teacher [sic] [them] to count by 10s to 100. Then [their] goal will be to count to 100 or pass [sic]."

d. Occupational Therapy (OT) – mastery level indicators of 1 and three 4's. Relevant notes stated, "[The Student] is making progress towards this goal. [The Student] is not making triangles independently at this time but can make them with visual cues and supports."

16. An Accommodation Monitoring Form documented the frequency and effectiveness of required IEP accommodations between March 2 and March 8, 2026 and stated the following:

a. Regarding a weekly communication log between the School and the family, the Primary Interrelated Teacher noted on March 7, 2026, that it had "been done 80% of the time this school year."

b. The "Noncontingent Restroom Breaks" accommodation, stated on March 2, 2026, that the Student was "always able to use the restroom when [they] ask" and was "always seated near a staff member."

c. Other accommodations used included flexible breaks, preferential seating, two-step directions, a pulse oximeter, oral responses when not writing, visual supports, and adult supervision during transitions.

17. A Notice of Meeting dated March 5, 2026, indicated a meeting for March 10, 2026 at 9:30 a.m. via phone conference to discuss possible changes in the Student's IEP. Other participants were indicated as the SLP and the OT. A copy of the procedural safeguards was provided as indicated by an "X" in a box. The Parent waived their right to 10 days prior written notice of the IEP meeting, signed and accepted on March 9, 2026.

18. An Individualized Education Program (IEP) dated March 10, 2026, indicated the following relevant information:

a. The IEP team members indicated the Custodial Parent attended as "consulted" and the Parent "participated by phone."

b. The Student was documented as having an exceptionality of Developmental Delay that impacted cognitive and communication skills, as well as academic progress in ELA and math.

c. The Student's Present Levels of Academic Achievement and Functional Performance (PLAAFP) stated the Student exhibited a range of strengths, including verbal abilities that scored in the average range. Educationally, the Student made significant gains, achieving 75% accuracy in letter names and sounds and 80% accuracy in recognizing numbers up to 20. The Student was described as being ready to read words soon, having demonstrated 70% accuracy in blending words with three sounds.

d. Socially and emotionally, the Student maintained a positive attitude, made friends easily, and followed basic directions while enjoying classroom activities like books and playdough. The Student's physical and motor skills were functional for the school setting, characterized by a functional tripod grasp for writing and the ability to copy their name with 100% accuracy within one-inch boxes. The Student was noted to be a strong verbal communicator who could ask and answer questions, engage in imaginary play, and produce L-blends in phrases with 80% accuracy or higher.

e. Under the "Needs as They Affect Learning" section the Parent's input was included:

   i. "Under my concerns regarding the bathroom. My main concern about [the Student] wetting [themself] and it not being documented was not listed."

   ii. "Also, the concern of my access being removed from [the online parent portal], the IEP, and the mass email system, was not added. I understand I was given the [number] for [Accessible Media and Materials Center] (AMAC), but my concerns are not noted."

   iii. "Finally, the Social/Emotional section on page 4 omits critical documentation provided by [the Student's] para[educator], [the Paraeducator]. To ensure [the Student's] distress is officially recorded (even [the First Grade Teacher] noted that [the Student] has a hard time with the para[educator]), I require the following direct quotes from [the Paraeducator] be added to page 4:"

      1. "[The Student's] behavior recently is new[,] [the Student] guesses on [their] math then gets upset."
      2. "We rest our brains by putting our head down for 2 mins."
      3. "[The Student] hides [their] work when guessing then lies about finishing worksheets."
      4. "Then rolls [their] eyes when I ask to see the worksheet - [Paraeducator] 3/10/2026."

f. The Parent/Guardian concern section included the Custodial Parent's concern of the Student getting their work done and listed the Parent's concerns:

   i. "Per student's [Parent]: The para[educator] having a hard time with [the Student] and concerns about a letter from the para[educator], [the Parent] wants it documented."

   ii. "Bathroom being addressed, was addressed in the IEP accommodations. Incident September 15th [2025], [the Student] has been refused to go to the bathroom, when the nurse has called. [The Student] wetted [themself] that day on September 15th [2025]. My main concern about [the Student] wetting [themself] and it not being documented was not listed."

iii. "Also, the concern of my access being removed from [the online parent portal], the IEP, and the mass email system, was not added. [The Parent] wants documentation from December-February, parent was supplied number for [an] AMAC request. Principle [sic] supplied name [Supervisor of Student Records and Enrollment Services] and phone number. Said [they] did not get communication logs between October 24 & 31, November 7 & 19, December 5 & 12 [2025]."

g. Goals were listed in the areas of speech, OT, reading, and math.

h. Services listed to start March 10, 2026, through March 9, 2027, in the following:

i. OT with special education services in a general education building, participating without general education peers for 15 minutes, one time every week.

2. ii. Speech and Language Services for 15 minutes, one time weekly, with special education services in a general education building, and participating with general education peers.

i. Special Education Services for 170 minutes, five times weekly, with special education services in a general education building, and participating without general education peers.

ii. Description of the SDI stated, "[The Student] will receive special education services in a general education building participating without general education peers during decoding, ELA, and math. [The Student] will receive educational [OT] services for 15 minutes weekly in the classroom or pullout. [The Student] will receive speech and language services for a total of 15 minutes per week. Typically this will be served in [one 15-minute session]."

i. Relevant accommodations starting on March 10, 2026:

j. "Weekly Home/School Communication tool (to include summary of classroom skills worked on for the school week to include reading, writing, math, related services [the Student] had for the day, and socialization skills.)" Rationale stated, "Via-email, help with classwork, homework. Scan handwork and send home weekly," within the general and special education setting, completed weekly.

ii. "[The Student] will have be [sic] able to ask for a restroom break after [G-tube] flushes" due to medical necessity, each school day, within the general and special education settings, "for the duration of the time it takes [the Student] to use the restroom."

iii. "[The Student] will be provided a peer model and supervision during individual transitions, i.e. restroom, office" to assist with safety, each school day, within the general and special education settings.

k. Rationale for the LRE stated, "The IEP team agrees that the current IEP time in services and placement of services will meet [the Student's] needs."

l. Parent/Guardian statement included the Custodial Parent was provided a copy of their rights on February 27, 2026 and the Parent was provided their copy of rights on March 10, 2026.

m. The Parent Consent for Release of Information and Medicaid Reimbursement page indicated the Custodial Parent's name on the parent line.

19. Meeting notes dated March 10, 2026 for the annual IEP meeting stated the team reviewed the Present Levels of Performance, the Parent wanted additional quotes added into the document, and the Parent's concerns "were updated from [the Parent]." Additionally, the document indicated the accommodations and service minutes were "agreed upon."

20. In a text chain dated March 10, 2026 between the SLP and the Custodial Parent, the SLP stated, "Just wanted to let you know that we are in the meeting with [the Parent] and [they] verbally consented to a reduction in speech minutes." The SLP indicated the Parent wanted to continue the communication log as an accommodation, and they had agreed "about the bathroom change." Additionally, the SLP shared the team was unable to "put the new IEP forward. … [The Parent] wants us to use [the Student's] current IEP."

21. An email exchange from March 10 to March 11, 2026 between the Parent and the Primary Interrelated Teacher detailed:

a. Following the March 10, 2026 IEP meeting, the Parent requested that the "concerns" section include documentation that the mandatory communication binder had not been sent home on October 24 and 31, November 7 and 14, and December 5 and 12, 2025.

b. The Primary Interrelated Teacher responded and confirmed the concerns were listed in the IEP. Additionally, they sent a draft IEP along with signature pages for the PWN and Medicaid forms.

c. The Parent subsequently identified further "discrepancies and omissions" that required correction before they would consider signing the document. The Parent expressed concern that they had been "completely removed" from the Procedural Safeguards page and that the draft incorrectly listed an IEP start date of February 27, 2026, despite the Parent not officially participating until the March 10, 2026 meeting. Additionally, they stated concerns regarding the Student's wetting not being documented, access to the online parent portal, and the Social/Emotional section omitting documentation by the paraeducator. They requested the following be listed in the PLAAFP section:

i. "[The Student's] behavior recently is new [the Student] guesses on [their] math [sic] then gets upset."

3. ii. "We rest our brains by putting our head down for 2 mins [.]"

4. iii. "[The Student] hides [their] work when guessing [,] then lies about finishing worksheets."

5. iv. "Then rolls [their] eyes when I ask to see the worksheet."

d. The Primary Interrelated Teacher clarified the timeline of the meeting planning process, reminding the Parent that the Custodial Parent had participated in their own separate meeting in February 2026. Consequently, the Primary Interrelated Teacher explained that the February date would remain next to the Custodial Parent's name on the Parental Rights page to accurately reflect that earlier, individual session. Additionally, the Primary Interrelated Teacher offered to allow the Parent to type out exactly how they wished their concerns to be worded for direct inclusion in the IEP.

22. An email exchange from March 10, 2026 through March 24, 2026, between the Parent, the Supervisor of Student Records and Enrollment Services, and the Associate General Counsel indicated the following:

a. On March 10, 2026, the Parent emailed and stated they were directed to reach out regarding their request of "system audit logs detailing exact times, dates, and staff user IDs associated with the removal and restoration of my contact information." Additionally, they requested logs for the student information system, the online parent portal, IEP emergency contact information, and the School's mass email system from December 1, 2025 through March 10, 2026.

b. On March 24, 2026, the Associate General Counsel responded and confirmed receipt of the request. They explained, "The information you seek appears to consist primarily of system audit logs, login history, staff user identifications (IDs), and other similar administrative records. That type of information is internal operational and [Information Technology] IT records maintained for the purpose of system administration and security. Under FERPA, they are not considered educational records and therefore will not be produced. … we will let you know if there are any responsive records before April 24, 2026."

c. The Parent responded and requested the Student's educational records, along with the time and date the records were modified.

23. In a March 24, 2026 email to the Primary Interrelated Teacher, the Parent confirmed receipt of the draft IEP and indicated they were "formally refusing to sign this document due to the following retroactive alterations, falsified records, and outstanding information." Relevant items included:

a. "Medicaid Consent … : The [Custodial Parent's] name was inexplicably deleted and replaced with my name without my authorization or consent."

b. They indicated their lack of access to records with specific dates and logs, which detailed their contact information and access removal and addition to the communication systems and educational portals.

c. The Parent indicated, "[The LEA] is directed to continue implementing [the Student's] current, finalized IEP."

24. PWN issued on April 1, 2026, following an annual IEP meeting held on March 10, 2026 outlined the following changes:

a. A material change in services described the Student would receive special education services in a general education building participating without general education peers during decoding, language arts, and math.

b. Other IEP changes indicated parental consent was not required with a checked box.

c. Description of the action proposed that the Student would receive special education services in a general education building, participating without their general education peers during decoding, ELA, and math.

d. An explanation stated, "Due to [the Student's] academic performance and the pacing in the classroom, the team decided that it is best for [the Student] to be pullout [sic] is the best option at the moment."

e. Other options considered were keeping the special education minutes the same, but was rejected due to the Student's delays and academic data.

f. Data used to make the decision included "formal" testing, District assessment, teacher and para[educator] input, observation, and Student work samples.

g. Other factors stated, "[The Student] will miss some classroom instruction to receive academic pullout, OT, and speech services."

h. The form was signed by the Custodial Parent on April 1, 2026.

25. An undated Emergency Contact List for the Student indicated the order of emergency contact as:

a. Custodial Parent - listed cell phone number; and

b. The Parent - listed cell phone number.

26. On April 1, 2026, the Parent filed the Complaint.

27. On April 2, 2026, the Primary Interrelated Teacher emailed the Parent a copy of the finalized IEP.

28. In an April 13, 2026 email to the Parent, the Special Education Campus Support stated the email was sent "separately" to each parent and indicated "Due to clerical errors, corrections were made to the Student's IEP paperwork." Corrections to the IEP included the Medicaid form being reverted back to the Custodial Parent, a pronoun change, and additional parental concerns attributed to the Parent under the parent concerns section.

29. PWN issued April 13, 2026, to the Parent and Custodial Parent following an IEP meeting held on March 10, 2026, indicated the following relevant information:

a. A proposed change of decreasing speech services for a total of 15 minutes a week, being served in one 15-minute session. Additional changes to update accommodations and modifications included:

i. "Weekly home/school communication tool had adjustments to the rationale section to reflect email communication and [the] duration box was adjusted from duration of the IEP to weekly."

ii. "During individual transitions, adult supervision was changed to a peer model."

iii. "[The Student] will be able to ask for a restroom break after [G-tube] flushes, due to medical necessity."

b. The Change in Placement (Parental Consent Not Required) section stated, "[The Student] will receive special education services in a general education building participating without general education peers during decoding, ELA, and math core. (80 minutes of special education services with general education peers during reading (listening comprehension, word recognition, and phonemic awareness was discontinued and moved to special education services without general education peers, increasing [their] total time without general education peers to 170 minutes)."

c. Other changes and notices stated updates were made to goals and the PLAAFP section to "reflect [the Student's] current needs and abilities." Additionally, clerical corrections included:

i. "The Medicaid form was reverted to [Custodial Parent] and [the Parent] was removed from the form (page 15)."

6. ii. A typographical error, which included pronouns, was changed on page 3 under the Social Emotional Strengths section.

7. iii. "[The Parent's] items [they] had [the Primary Interrelated Teacher] add under parental concerns and comments on pages 4 and 5 were attributed to [them], "Per [the Parent]."

8. iv. Parental consent not required box checked.

d. These actions were proposed because the Student's IEP was due for annual review, and after a review of the Student's progress over the past 12 months.

e. Other options considered and rejected indicated the IEP team rejected not updating the IEP because the proposed IEP was designed to provide the Student with "educational benefit."

f. Data used to inform these decisions included progress reports, classroom performance and participation, observations, progress monitoring, LEA screeners, staff and parent input, and work samples.

g. The Student's proposed IEP was crafted to provide educational benefit in the Student's LRE. The Team felt the educational benefits outweigh any negative effects.

Parent Interview:

30. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Parent shared that they attended most IEP meetings, except for one. They described interactions during these meetings as "tense", as the Parent expressed concerns regarding the School's compliance with the IEP. The Parent explained they were sent multiple drafts of the most recent IEP.

31. The Parent explained they identified several omissions in draft IEP documents, including the removal of their contact information, signature lines, and parental concerns. They shared they refused to sign the document. They confirmed a version of the IEP sent on April 2, 2026 restored the requested contact information and parental input.

32. The Parent explained their access to the online parent portal was removed in early January 2026 after the School received a protection order. The Parent discovered they were locked out of these systems on February 13, 2026, and subsequently contacted the LEA to assert that their parental rights remained intact. Following multiple inquiries, the Principal confirmed during an IEP meeting on March 10, 2026, that access to the online portal had been restored.

9. When asked about the September 15, 2025 bathroom incident, the Parent shared they had requested documentation regarding the incident. They explained they initially heard from the Student they were not permitted to use the restroom due to a time constraint, then wet themself. The Parent explained the School Nurse provided notification of the event to the Custodial Parent when it occurred. They reported the Student returned home with their wet clothes in a bag. Additionally, they reported they had not received a physical or electronic copy of the binder accommodation.

33. The Parent explained their concerns regarding the change of speech service and the reduction of inclusion time would impact the Student's access to their peers. They shared these changes were reviewed during the IEP meeting, and stated, "For the most part, I was okay with some of it," and after reflecting, had more concerns but did not voice them during that meeting.

10. Primary Interrelated Teacher Interview:

34. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Primary Interrelated Teacher described the meeting planning process with both Parents. Due to the PFA, they set up separate meetings for each Parent. They shared both Parents were sent separate meeting notices, they held a meeting with the Custodial Parent, then held an additional meeting with the Parent, after one no-show attempt from the Parent. They shared that after the successful second meeting with the Parent, they had agreed to the changes, yet they had to wait over 10 days for the Parent to sign.

35. The Primary Interrelated Teacher indicated the Parent requested copies of the IEP, and they shared multiple drafts of the IEP with the Parent.
36. When asked about the Medicaid consent form from March 10, 2026, the Primary Interrelated Teacher explained, "It was an IEP error," and that normally, they place the primary caregiver on the form, but did not in this case. They explained that on the Custodial Parent's copy, they placed the Custodial Parent's name and thought they would do the same for the Parent due to the meeting being with the Parent. They stated they rectified this error "weeks ago" on the finalized copy of the IEP.
37. The Primary Interrelated Teacher reported having difficulty placing both Parents' names on the Procedural Safeguards page. They stated the Parent had been sent their rights, and signed the document, and the Custodial Parent was sent their rights as well.
38. The Primary Interrelated Teacher described the discussion around inclusion time and the reduction of speech services. At the IEP meeting with the Parent, the Speech-Language Pathologist indicated they wanted to reduce the Student's therapy to one day per week and that the Parent was "fine with that." Additionally, they shared pullout services were discussed due to the Student working in class on decoding "wasn't helping," and they had "thought [the Student] [would] be better served in the [special education] classroom." They indicated the Parent had agreed to this.
39. When asked about data to support the IEP team's reasoning for reducing speech services and placing the Student in pullout, the Primary Interrelated Teacher stated they used District assessment data and early progress monitoring data, which included the Student's short-vowel consonant-vowel-consonant (CVC) words, sounds, math skills, and early addition.
11. The Primary Interrelated Teacher detailed the implementation of the Student's accommodations, which included sending weekly summary communication logs home and occasionally emailing them. They were not made aware the Parent had left their previous residence, and the logs were only going to the Custodial Parent until approximately January 2026. Additionally, they ensured the Student was escorted by an adult to the bathroom whenever needed, stating the Student always had access to the bathroom. Furthermore, when shown the LEA materials for "[The Student's] Weekly Summary", the Primary Interrelated Teacher confirmed that this was a Parent-requested document that was sent home weekly in the Student's backpack.
40. The Primary Interrelated Teacher confirmed the Parent was sent PWN after the March 10, 2026 IEP meeting through the online parent portal. They admitted it contained errors, including the omission of service provider minutes and a summary of all accommodation changes. They later rectified the PWN and issued a new one, which the Custodial Parent signed. The Primary Interrelated Teacher was unsure why the Parent did not sign, and noted that all the Parent's requests were rectified.

Principal Interview:

41. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Principal recalled the Parent's access to the online parent portal was withdrawn by the Administrative Assistant, who believed a no-contact order required the removal of the account to prevent the Parent from gaining access to the Custodial Parent's address. The Principal estimated the restriction lasted for a period of about a month, during which they were unaware the access had been turned off. After the Parent emailed about access on a Sunday, the Principal responded on Monday and added that the Supervisor of Student Records and Enrollment Services had contacted the School first. The Supervisor of Student Records and Enrollment Services advised that the online parent portal had been updated and no longer allowed parents to view each other's personal information, leading the Administrative Assistant to restore the Parent's access on the same day the School received the LEA's clarifying email.
    a. Additionally, the Principal recalled in a conversation on March 10, 2026, they believed the access had been fixed, though the Parent was still seeking logs of who made the changes and on what exact dates. The Principal additionally shared that they were aware during this time the Parent had been emailed records from the Primary Interrelated Teacher, and stated, "We still were providing [the Parent] with the materials necessary for [them] to be aware of what was going on with [their] student."

Speech Language Pathologist Interview:

42. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Speech Language Pathologist explained the Student's speech services were reduced to once a week because the Student had made significant gains, was down to a single sound error, and the reduction supported serving them in their LRE. The Speech Language Pathologist indicated they used progress note data to support this change, noting that the Student had reached approximately 80% accuracy with R-blends at the single-word level and was transitioning to working on them at the phrase and sentence levels. Additionally, they shared the Student was seen both individually and in group sessions, and made more gains in the group environment.

Supervisor of Student Records and Enrollment Services Interview:

43. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Supervisor of Student Records and Enrollment Services explained being notified by the Parent regarding their access to the online parent portal. They recalled the Parent emailed them on the evening of Sunday, February 8, 2026 informing them that their access had been removed. The access had been removed by the Administrative Assistant on January 5, 2026 after reviewing the PFA document, which the Supervisor of Student Records and Enrollment Services had determined did not state that the Parent's rights should be taken away. They shared they advised the School to reinstate the rights and access to the online parent portal, which allows a parent to see attendance, grades, and communication. They stated the following Monday morning, February 9, 2026 the record showed that the various access permissions were fully restored for the Parent.

44. The Supervisor of Student Records and Enrollment Services defined educational records as a birth certificate or proof of an address and explained the online parent portal as access to "enrollment." They shared records are not posted in the online parent portal. Instead, they are requested, and copies are "given."

Supervisor of Student Support Services Interview:

45. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Supervisor of Student Support Services stated no new documents in the online parent portal were added or changed during the time period the Parent did not have "temporary access." They shared once the IEP paperwork was finalized, it would be available in the system; no draft forms were available. They shared all IEP documentation was finalized after the reinstatement of the Parent's access.

Special Education Director

46. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Special Education Director explained the Medicaid form was reverted to display the Custodial Parent's name, and the Parent's name was removed from the form at the Parent's request. They indicated the change was a clerical error that occurred when the IEP staff generated the form separately for each parent.

Positions of the Parties, Applicable Regulations, and Conclusions

Issue One

Whether USD #259, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, allowed the Parent an opportunity to inspect and review all educational records when the Parent's access to the online parent portal was terminated. K.A.R. 91-40-50, 91-40-25(a); 34 CFR §§ 300.613, 300.501(a)(1).

According to K.A.R. 91-40-25(a) and CFR 34. §§ 300.613, 300.501(a)(1), an LEA is required to allow parents to inspect and review all educational records related to the identification, evaluation, educational placement, and the provision of a free appropriate public education (FAPE) to their child that are collected, maintained, or used by the agency. The agency must comply with the request without unnecessary delay and before any meeting regarding an IEP, and in no case more than 45 days after the request has been made. Additionally, parents have the right to a response from the participating agency to reasonable requests for explanations and interpretations of the records, and to copies of the records containing the information, if failure to provide these copies would effectively prevent the parent from exercising the right to inspect and review the records. Also, a representative of the parent may inspect and review the files if authorized. An agency may presume that the parent has authority to inspect and review records relating to their child unless the agency has been advised that the parent does not have the authority under applicable State law governing such matters as guardianship, separation, and divorce.

K.A.R. 91-40-50 defines educational records as records directly related to a student and maintained by an educational agency or institution or by a party acting for the agency or institution. The term does not include records that are kept in the sole possession of the maker, are used only as a personal memory aid, and are not accessible or revealed to any other person except a temporary substitute for the maker of the record.

The Parent alleged the LEA denied them access to the online parent portal, which prevented the Parent from reviewing documents or providing concerns prior to the meeting.

The LEA acknowledged that certain access rights were "mistakenly turned off" for a period of time, but maintained that the Parent had access to inspect and review physical records prior to their full online access being restored.

The Parent's access to the online parent portal was suspended from January 5 through February 9, 2026, due to an administrative misinterpretation of an PFA order. On February 8, 2026, the Parent formally requested immediate access to the online parent portal and electronic copies of report cards, attendance records, and IEP progress reports. Access was restored to the online parent portal on February 9, 2026. On February 25, 2026, the Primary Interrelated Teacher emailed the Parent the requested draft IEP and Student IEP progress reports. This delivery occurred 13 days before the March 10, 2026 IEP meeting. Furthermore, the LEA's refusal to provide system audit logs and login histories was appropriate under FERPA and the IDEA guidelines; as the Associate General Counsel clarified on March 24, 2026, such IT records are internal administrative data and do not constitute "educational records" directly related to the Student.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations it is not substantiated that the LEA hindered the Parent's access to educational records.

Issue Two

Whether USD #259, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, took steps to ensure both parents were present and had the opportunity to participate at the IEP meeting held on February 25, 2026. Further, whether the LEA ensured the IEP and placement decisions were made by a group of persons, including the Student's Parent or Parents, when the team met on February 25, 2026, and included the Parent's input in the Student's IEP, and removed the Parent's name from the Student's emergency contact. K.A.R. 91-40-21(c)(1)(A), 91-40-17(a)(b)(1), 91-40-25; 34 CFR §§ 300.322(a)(b)(1)(c)(d), 300.501(b)(c).

According to K.A.R. 91-40-17, K.A.R. 91-40-25, and 34 CFR §§ 300.322(a)(b)(1)(c)(d), 300.501(b)(c), each agency shall take steps to ensure that one or both of the parents of an exceptional child are present at each IEP team meeting or are afforded the opportunity to participate. This includes any meeting concerning their child with respect to the identification, evaluation, or education placement, or provision of a FAPE. Required steps to ensure parent participation include scheduling meetings at a mutually agreed-upon time and place and providing written notice of any IEP team meeting at least 10 days in advance. The notice shall indicate the purpose, time, and location of the IEP meeting and the titles and positions of the persons who will attend on behalf of the agency.

If neither parent of an exceptional child can be physically present for a meeting concerning the child, the agency shall attempt other measures to ensure parental participation, including individual or conference telephone calls. As used in this regulation, a meeting shall not include informal or unscheduled conversations involving agency personnel and conversations on issues including teaching methodology, lesson plans, or coordination of service provision if those issues are not addressed in the child's IEP.

Finally, K.A.R. 91-40-21(c)(1)(A) states that in determining the educational placement of a child with a disability, each agency shall ensure that the placement decision is made by a group of persons, including the child's parents and other persons who are knowledgeable about the child, the meaning of the evaluation data, and the placement options.

The Parent alleged that the LEA held an IEP meeting without notifying the Parent, and they did not discuss removing the Student's inclusion time from their IEP. The Parent alleged documents were altered without their knowledge or consent, and their objections and correction requests were ignored. The Parent also alleged they were removed from the Student's emergency contact form.

The LEA maintained that steps were taken to ensure that both parents were present and had the opportunity to meaningfully participate and collaborate in the development of the Student's annual IEP. Furthermore, the LEA maintained the IEP placement decisions were made by a group of persons, including both parents, when the team met on different days, and both parents' input was included in the development of the IEP. Additionally, the LEA maintains both Parents' names are on the emergency contact list.

The LEA facilitated separate meetings to accommodate the PFA while ensuring both parents' participation rights. Although the team met with the Custodial Parent on February 25, 2026, the LEA explicitly deferred all final decisions until the Parent could participate. Following a rescheduling, the Parent provided input via phone on March 10, 2026. This input, including specific concerns about bathroom incidents and paraeducator observations, was documented within the draft IEP. Furthermore, School records confirmed the Parent remained on the Student's emergency contact list. By providing drafts for review and incorporating the Parent's feedback before attempting to finalize the document, the District ensured that IEP and placement decisions were made by a representative group.

Based on the foregoing, according to the IDEA and Kansas special education regulations it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to ensure both parents were present and provided the opportunity to participate in the IEP process, that placement decisions were made by a group of persons, including both Parents, or the emergency contact was removed.

Issue Three

Whether USD #259, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, obtained the Parent's informed consent on the Medicaid consent document as part of the IEP dated March 10, 2026. K.A.R. 91-40-27(a)(2-3); 34 CFR § 300.154(d)(1)(2)(iv)(v).

According to K.A.R. 91-40-27(a)(2-3); 34 CFR § 300.154(d)(1)(2)(iv)(v), each agency shall obtain parent consent before initially providing special education and related services to an exceptional child or making a material change in services to, or a substantial change in the placement of, an exceptional child, unless the change is made under the provisions of K.A.R. 91-40-33 through 91-40-38 or is based upon the child's graduation from high school or exceeding the age of eligibility for special education services. A public agency may use the Medicaid or other public benefits or insurance in which a child participates to provide or pay for the services required under this part, as permitted under the public benefits or insurance program. Prior to accessing a child's or parent's public benefits or insurance for the first time, and after providing notification to the child's parents, the agency must obtain parental consent. The consent must specify the personally identifiable information that may be disclosed, the purpose of the disclosure, and the agency to which the disclosure may be made, and specifies the parent understands and agrees that the public agency may access the parent's or child's public benefits or insurance to pay for services. Additionally, the agency must provide written notification annually to the child's parents, that includes a statement of the parental consent provisions, a statement of the "no cost" provisions, a statement that the parents have the right to withdraw their consent to disclosure of their child's personally identifiable information to the agency responsible for the administration of the State's public benefits or insurance program (e.g., Medicaid) at any time, and a statement that the withdrawal of consent or refusal to provide consent to disclose personally identifiable information to the agency responsible for the administration of the State's public benefits or insurance program, (e.g., Medicaid) does not relieve the public agency of its responsibility to ensure that all required services are provided at no cost to the parents.

The Parent alleged the LEA listed the Parent's name on the Medicaid consent document without their consent.

The LEA contends that it formally requested consent from the Parent for the March 10, 2026 drafted IEP, and that the Parent provided their informed consent. The School corrected the document to show the Custodial Parent's name instead of the Parent's name, since only one parent's name was required.

The record confirmed that while the March 10, 2026 IEP draft mistakenly listed the Parent's name on the Medicaid consent line, this was an administrative clerical error resulting from the LEA's efforts to generate separate documentation for each parent. The Parent did not provide informed consent and formally refused to sign the document, citing the unauthorized name replacement as a "falsified record." However, the LEA already possessed valid informed consent from the Custodial Parent, who signed the reimbursement form on February 25, 2026. Upon identifying the error, the LEA notified the Parent on April 13, 2026, that the form had been reverted to the Custodial Parent's name. Because the LEA had secured valid consent from one parent with legal custody and corrected the clerical mistake before finalizing the document without attempting to proceed under the Parent's name, the procedural requirements for obtaining informed consent were maintained.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations it is not substantiated the LEA failed to obtain appropriate informed consent for Medicaid reimbursement.

Issue Four

Whether USD #259, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, ensured the Student's IEP was in effect, and accommodations such as the Student's bathroom accommodation and the communication binder were implemented. K.A.R. 91-40-16(a)(b); 34 CFR § 300.323(a)(d).

According to K.A.R. 91-40-16(a)(b) and 34 CFR § 300.323(a)(d), at the beginning of each school year, the LEA must have an IEP in effect for every child with a disability. The LEA is responsible for making sure that the Student's IEP is accessible to every person involved in their education, including regular education teachers, special education teachers, and related service providers. Furthermore, the LEA must ensure that each of these individuals is specifically informed about their own responsibilities for implementing the IEP, as well as the specific accommodations, modifications, and supports that must be provided for the Student.

The Parent alleged that the LEA failed to provide a communication binder, which was an accommodation listed on the Student's IEP. The Student was denied access to the bathroom, which was a listed accommodation, resulting in the Student having an accident.

The LEA maintained the Student's IEP was in full effect, and accommodations such as the Student's bathroom accommodation and the communication binder were implemented as written per the IEP.

Under the standard established in Van Duyn v. Baker School District 5J, 502 F.3d 811 (9th Cir. 2007), a failure to implement an IEP is only a violation if the deviation from the IEP is "material," meaning there is more than a minor discrepancy between the services provided and those required. The record indicated the bathroom incident on September 15, 2025, involved the Student wetting their clothing while already in the restroom, which does not support the Parent's allegation of a refusal to provide access. Further, staff statements and the March 2026 Accommodation Monitoring Form confirmed the Student was consistently allowed restroom breaks upon request. In terms of the communication log, the record showed that weekly summaries were sent home in the Student's backpack, achieving an 80% implementation rate for the school year. While the Parent did not receive these logs directly until approximately January 2026, the Primary Interrelated Teacher attributed this to a lack of notice regarding the Parent's change in residence rather than a failure to maintain the log itself. The Parent asserted these documents had yet to be sent to them. The documented progress across speech, reading, math, and OT goals in the February 2026 progress report further supports that the IEP was in effect and being actively implemented by the School team.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations it is not substantiated the LEA failed to ensure the Student's IEP was in effect or that required accommodations were not implemented.

Issue Five

Whether USD #259, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, provided the Parent with notice regarding proposed actions to change the Student's IEP when the Student's services changed, and when the Parent requested amendments to the IEP. K.A.R. 91-40-26, K.S.A. 72-3430(b)(2); 34CFR § 300.503(a)(b).

According to K.A.R. 91-40-26, K.S.A. 72-3430(b)(2), and 34CFR § 300.503(a)(b), written notice must be given to the parents of a child with a disability a reasonable time before the public agency proposes or refuses to initiate or change the identification, evaluation, or educational placement of the child or the provision of a FAPE. The notice must include a description of the action proposed or refused by the agency, an explanation of why the agency proposed or refused the action, and a description of each evaluation procedure, assessment, record, or report used as a basis for the decision. Additionally, it must include a statement that parents have protection under the procedural safeguards and how those can be obtained, a description of other options that the agency considered and the reasons why those options were rejected, and a description of other factors that are relevant to the agency's proposal or refusal. The notice shall be written in language understandable to the general public and provided in the native language of the parent unless it is not feasible to do so.

The Parent alleged the LEA did not provide PWN when they changed the Student's IEP, or when they refused to change the IEP per the Parent's request.

The LEA maintained that PWN of proposed actions for the IEP drafted on February 25, 2026 was sent to the Custodial Parent, in addition to the PWN sent to the Parent for the March 10, 2026 completed IEP. The LEA acknowledged that the March 10, 2026 PWN was insufficient and did not include all of the proposed changes.

The record showed the LEA provided the Parent with detailed PWN regarding changes to the Student's services and the LEA's response to requested amendments. Following the Custodial Parent's meeting on February 25, 2026, the LEA issued PWN detailing proposed changes. Additionally, following the March 10, 2026 meeting, the LEA issued a comprehensive PWN on April 13, 2026, which outlined material changes, including a reduction in speech services and an increase in specialized pullout instruction from 80 to 170 minutes. This notice also documented the LEA's actions regarding the Parent's specific requests for amendments, such as attributing verbatim concerns to the Parent, correcting pronoun errors, and reverting the Medicaid consent form to the Custodial Parent's name. By including the rationale for these actions, the data relied upon (e.g., District assessment data and teacher input), and the options rejected, the LEA fulfilled its obligation to provide a formal written explanation of the changes to the Student's educational program.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations it is not substantiated the LEA failed to provide the Parent with the required notice regarding proposed actions to change the Student's IEP or the team's decisions on requested amendments.

Issue Six

Whether USD #259, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, revised the IEP when the Parent requested inaccuracies to be changed, and whether the LEA considered the concerns of the Parent, and the academic, developmental, and functional needs of the Student when it changed the Student's bathroom accommodations. K.S.A. 72-3429(f)(2), K.A.R. 91-40-18(a)(c); 34 CFR §§ 300.324(b), 300.324(a)(4)(6).

According to K.S.A. 72-3429(f)(2), and CFR §§ 300.324(b), each agency shall ensure that the IEP team reviews the child's IEP periodically, but not less than annually to determine whether the annual goals for the child are being achieved; and revises the IEP, as appropriate, to address: any lack of expected progress toward the annual goals and in the general education curriculum, where appropriate, the results of any reevaluation conducted, information about the child provided by the parents, the child's anticipated needs, or other matters. In developing or reviewing the IEP of any exceptional child, each agency shall consider the results of the child's performance on any general state or districtwide assessment programs.

According to 34 CFR § 300.324(a)(4)(6), in making changes to a child's IEP after the annual IEP Team meeting for a school year, the parent of a child with a disability and the public agency may agree not to convene an IEP Team meeting for the purposes of making those changes, and instead may develop a written document to amend or modify the child's current IEP. If changes are made to the child's IEP in accordance with this process, the public agency must ensure that the child's IEP team is informed of those changes. To the extent possible, the public agency must encourage the consolidation of reevaluation meetings and other IEP team meetings for the child.

The Parent alleged the LEA refused to amend "inaccuracies" in the IEP after the Parent requested changes be made. The Parent alleged the LEA changed wording for bathroom accommodations without data to support the change.

The LEA maintained the IEP was revised when the Parent requested inaccuracies be corrected, considered their concerns, and the academic, developmental, and functional needs of the Student when it changed the bathroom accommodation.

The record showed the IEP team revised the Student's IEP to address the Parent's identified inaccuracies and incorporated the Parent's concerns into the revised, finalized IEP document. Evidence confirmed that after the March 10, 2026, meeting, the LEA acknowledged the Parent's feedback regarding clerical errors and omissions. On April 13, 2026, the LEA issued a corrected IEP and PWN that explicitly included the Parent's verbatim concerns, corrected pronoun errors, and reverted the Medicaid consent name as requested. Furthermore, the LEA demonstrated that changes to the bathroom accommodation and service minutes were based on a comprehensive review of the Student's academic, developmental, and functional needs. The LEA utilized data from District assessment, teacher/paraprofessional observations, and medical necessity to refine the restroom protocol and shift the Student to a more intensive pullout model, thereby ensuring the IEP was responsive to both parental input and the Student's evolving educational requirements.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated the LEA failed to revise the IEP when the Parent requested changes or neglected to consider the Parent's concerns and the Student's needs when adjusting accommodations. The record demonstrates that the District was responsive to the Parent's requests for correction and used multi-source data to justify modifications to the Student's services and bathroom protocols.

Issue Seven

Whether USD #259, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, ensured the Student was placed in the LRE when the Student's inclusion time was removed from their IEP at the February 25, 2026, IEP meeting. K.A.R. 91-40-21; 34 CFR § 300.114.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-21 and 34 CFR § 300.114, each public agency must ensure to the maximum extent appropriate, children with disabilities, including children in public or private institutions, are educated with children who are nondisabled. Special classes, separate schooling, or other removal of children with disabilities from the regular educational environment occurs only if the nature or severity of the disability is such that education in regular classes with the use of supplementary aids and services cannot be achieved satisfactorily. Each agency shall provide a continuum of alternative placements that includes instruction in regular classes, special classes, special schools, home instruction, and instruction in hospitals and institutions. The educational placement of each child with a disability shall be determined at least annually, shall be based on the child's IEP, and shall be as close as possible to the child's home. Unless the IEP of a child with a disability requires some other arrangement, the child shall be educated in the school that they would attend if nondisabled. In selecting the LRE, consideration shall be given to any potential harmful effect on the child or on the quality of services that he or she needs. A child with a disability shall not be removed from education in age-appropriate regular classrooms solely because of needed modifications in the general education curriculum.

The Parent alleged the LEA removed all inclusion time from the Student's most recent IEP and reduced the Student's speech therapy without the data to support the change.

The LEA maintained that the Student remains in their LRE following a non-substantial change in placement that relocated 80 minutes of special education services from the general education classroom to a special education setting.

The record indicated the IEP team made data-driven placement decisions tailored to the Student's specific academic needs. The increase in pullout services from 80 minutes of inclusive support to 170 minutes of specialized instruction for decoding, ELA, and math was based on District assessment data and teacher observations showing that the pacing of the general education classroom was ineffective for the Student's progress. Conversely, the reduction of speech services from 30 to 15 minutes was supported by the Student's functional gains, which maximized the Student's time in the general education setting for that domain. The record indicated that the IEP team, including the Parent during the March 10, 2026 meeting, considered these modifications and concluded that the benefits of intensive, separate instruction for core academics outweighed the impact of removal from the general education environment.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations it is not substantiated the LEA failed to ensure the Student was placed in the LRE. The District followed proper procedures by evaluating the Student's academic performance against the general education curriculum and providing a clear rationale for why a more restrictive setting for core instruction was necessary to provide the Student a FAPE.

Corrective Action

The Complaint Investigation did not substantiate any findings of violation, and there is no corrective action ordered.

Right to Appeal

Either party may appeal the findings or conclusions in this report by filing a written notice of appeal with the State Commissioner of Education, ATTN: Special Education and Title Services, Landon State Office Building, 900 SW Jackson Street, Suite 620, Topeka, KS 66612-1212. The notice of appeal may also be filed by email to formalcomplaints@ksde.gov The notice of appeal must be delivered within 10 calendar days from the date of this report.

For further description of the appeals process, see Kansas Administrative Regulations 91-40-51(f).

K.A.R. 91-40-51(f) Appeals.

(1) Any agency or complainant may appeal any of the findings or conclusions of a compliance report prepared by the special education section of the department by filing a written notice of appeal with the state commissioner of education. Each notice shall be filed within 10 days from the date of the report. Each notice shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect.

Upon receiving an appeal, an appeal committee of at least three department of education members shall be appointed by the commissioner to review the report and to consider the information provided by the local education agency, the complainant, or others. The appeal process, including any hearing conducted by the appeal committee, shall be completed within 15 days from the date of receipt of the notice of appeal, and a decision shall be rendered within five days after the appeal process is completed unless the appeal committee determines that exceptional circumstances exist with respect to the particular complaint. In this event, the decision shall be rendered as soon as possible by the appeal committee.

(2) If an appeal committee affirms a compliance report that requires corrective action by an agency, that agency shall initiate the required corrective action immediately. If, after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the agency shall be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following:

(A) The issuance of an accreditation deficiency advisement;
(B) the withholding of state or federal funds otherwise available to the agency;
(C) the award of monetary reimbursement to the complainant; or
(D) any combination of the actions specified in paragraph (f)(2)

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST
UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #512, SHAWNEE MISSION PUBLIC SCHOOLS
ON APRIL 1, 2026

DATE OF REPORT: APRIL 30, 2026

This report is in response to a complaint filed with the Kansas State Department of Education against USD #512 (Shawnee Mission Public Schools) on behalf of ------- by her mother, -------. In the remainder of the report, ------- will be referred to as "the student" and ------- as "the mother" or "the complainant."

The complaint is against USD #512 (Shawnee Mission Public Schools). In the remainder of the report, USD #512 will be referred to as "the Local Education Agency". When a special education complaint is filed against a school district that is a member of a special education cooperative or interlocal, or that uses any other state recognized public agency to serve children with disabilities, the term " local education agency (LEA)" in this report will include the school district, the special education cooperative or interlocal, and any other agency that is recognized by the state as an administrative agency for public elementary or secondary schools and is serving the educational needs of this student." Local Education Agency staff will be referred to In the remainder of this report as follows:

- Sherry Dumolien, Associate Superintendent of Special Education and Strategic Initiatives
- Emily Roach, Special Education Case manager
- Jessica Risinger, Principal
- Emily Demo, Special Education Coordinator for Gifted/Seek program
- Sarah Ingraham, Special Education Secretary

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) allows for a 30-day timeline to investigate a complaint from the date in which it was filed. A complaint is considered filed on the date in which it was received by KSDE. In this case, the KSDE initially received the complaint on April 1, 2026.

Evidence Reviewed

During the investigation, the Complaint Investigator, Donna Wickham, reviewed all evidence and documentation provided by the Local Education Agency and the parent. The investigator interviewed the mother by phone on April 16 and April 20, 2026 and exchanged emails throughout the investigation. An individual interview was conducted with the Associate Superintendent of Special Education and Strategic Initiatives and Special Education Coordinator on April 16, 2026.

The following materials were used as the basis of the findings and conclusions of the investigation:

Documents:

1. Local education agency April 13, 2026 response
2. Confidential Education Evaluation dated August 11, 2025
3. IEP dated August 13, 2025

Emails:

1. Email from parent to Special Education Secretary, Center for Academic Achievement dated March 30, 2026 at 6:08 p.m. requesting data the team intends to review in determining whether to proceed with a gifted evaluation
2. Email response from Special Education Secretary, Center for Academic Achievement to parent dated March 31, 2026 at 1:01 p.m. responding with the evaluation report and progress reports. The case manager and principal were additionally copied to address the parent's additional requests. for the other information.
3. Email exchange between the special education coordinator and parent dated March 31, 2026 between 1:21 and 1:41 p.m. verifying the NOM of the planned meeting and stating the purpose of the meeting will be to review the general education data and observations, response to differentiated opportunities, standardized academic scores, including iReady and MAP. The email further described the LEA's general criteria to indicate a need for a gifted evaluation. The parent replied that she had a right to the documents and again requested the documents.
4. Email from parent to Special Education Coordinator dated April 1, 2026 at 1:04 and 1:08 p.m. making a formal written request for a gifted evaluation and again requesting access to educational records.
5. Email from Special Education Coordinator to parent dated April 2, 2026 at 8:00 a.m. acknowledging parent request for a gifted evaluation.

6. Email from the school psychologist to the parent dated April 2, 2026 at 9:18 a.m. providing the parent the iReady and MAP scores and data.
7. Image of email from principal to parent with date not visible but timed at 4:16 p.m. attached Acadience math scores
8. Email from mother to school psychologist, special education coordinator, special education case manager, principal and special education secretary at the Center for Academic Achievement dated April 2, 2026 at 7:27 p.m. stating that educational request has not been fulfilled, formally requesting a written response (Prior Written Notice) regarding the request for a gifted evaluation and stating she would not be available for April 10, 2026 meeting.
9. Email exchange from the Associate Superintendent of Special Education and Strategic Initiatives to the parent dated April 3, 2026 at 3:46 p.m. requesting an IEP meeting and parent response stating that she would not meet.

11. Image of email from special education case manager to parent dated April 8, 2026 at 3:13 sending home draft IEP

Background Information

The subject of this complaint is a second-grade student at an elementary school in the LEA during the 2025-2026 school year who is eligible for special education under the category of Autism. The student's IEP dated August 13, 2025 includes a communication goal and includes direct and consultative speech therapy services and services for specially designed instruction. Additionally, the IEP lists six accommodations. The student was medically diagnosed with selective mutism, however the parent and school report that the student has started to talk more during the current school year leading the parent to request a reevaluation based on this change. On March 15, 2026, the parent requested a reevaluation because during previous standardized testing procedures the student typed responses on a communication device. Because the student's communication abilities have changed, updated cognitive testing under standard administration conditions would provide a more accurate measure of abilities. On March 25, 2026, the LEA provided a parent a prior written notice (PWN) to conduct a reevaluation. The parent then wrote in an email that the reevaluation did not mention gifted evaluation and that was what she wanted done. She then wrote that she did not want to sign the consent for reevaluation until she knew if the student would be tested for giftedness.

Issues Investigated

Issue One

Did USD #512 follow state and federal regulations of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) when responding to a parent request for educational records being used in consideration of a gifted evaluation during the 2025-2026 school year?

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.613(a) states that each participating agency must permit parents to inspect and review any education records relating to their children that are collected, maintained, or used by the agency under this part. The agency must comply with a request without unnecessary delay and before any meeting regarding an IEP, or any hearing pursuant to §300.507 or §§300.530 through 300.532, or resolution session pursuant to §300.510, and in no case more than 45 days after the request has been made.

Under 34 CFR § 300.611(b); K.A.R. 91-40-50; and 34 C.F.R. 300.32, educational record is defined as records that are: (1) Directly related to a student; and (2) Maintained by an educational agency or institution or by a party acting for the agency or institution. (b) The term does not include: (1) Records that are kept in the sole possession of the maker, are used only as a personal memory aid, and are not accessible or revealed to any other person except a temporary substitute for the maker of the record.

Parent Position

The parent wrote in her child complaint that she requested copies of all educational records the district intends to review in determining whether to proceed with a gifted evaluation for the student, including academic data, classroom work samples, progress monitoring data, and general education records, but only received records contained within the special education file. The district stated that records such as iReady, MAP, teacher observations and data regarding response to differentiated instruction will be reviewed and discussed at a scheduled meeting to determine whether to proceed with a gifted evaluation. The parent asserts that without access to these records in advance the parent cannot participate meaningfully in the evaluation decision process.

Local Education Agency Position

The Local Education Agency responded that the parent requested educational records in regard to an upcoming gifted evaluation on March 30, 2026 to prepare for an April 10, 2026 meeting. The LEA stated they complied, providing records before the April 10, 2026 meeting, within the 45-day timeframe.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

1. In response to a PWN dated March 25, 2026 from the LEA requesting consent for a reevaluation the parent sent in two emails on March 25 and March 26, 2026. She clarified in the emails and with the investigator that when initially requesting the evaluation on March 15, 2026 she has meant to request a gifted evaluation.

2. The Associate Superintendent of Special Education and Strategic Initiatives stated to the investigator that a meeting was scheduled with the parent on the April 10 was to consider the parent's request for a gifted evaluation along with determination of additional areas for the existing evaluation for which the LEA has requested consent in the March 25, 2026 PWN and review any parent concerns.
3. The parent made requests for "educational records" on March 30, 2026 to the LEA in response to the LEA's proposed April 10, 2026 meeting. The parent made follow-up requests each time documents were received listing those materials not yet received. The parent stated to the investigator that she was not told that the requested materials would be used in the LEA's consideration of a gifted evaluation but believed they would help her be prepared for her gifted evaluation request. The parent stated she was not ever told that some of the requested materials were not available to be shared.
4. The table below lists the parent's requested documents.

Conclusion

In this case the parent requested education records, specifically access to data, work samples, prior evaluation reports, teacher observations, progress monitoring and criteria and data for her student. Several regulations were considered in making a conclusion about whether the LEA followed IDEA and Kansas regulations when responding to the parent's request for educational records.

While the LEA responded that the educational documents were provided to the parent within the 45 day timeframe after the request it is important to note that federal regulations state that an LEA has a responsibility to provide parent access to education records before any meeting regarding an IEP, or any hearing pursuant to due process (§300.507) or manifestation determination or change of placement (§§300.530 through 300.532), or resolution session pursuant to §300.510. It is found that the parent's request for records was not in preparation of any of these meeting purposes.

IDEA, FERPA and Kansas define an educational record as documents "directly related to a student and maintained by the LEA." While the definition is fairly broad, an additional characteristic of an educational record is that it is typically part of an official record system. Under IDEA (via FERPA), educational records include things such as evaluation and assessment results, Individualized Education Programs (IEPs), progress reports and report cards, disciplinary records, attendance records, and special education service documentation.

In the case the investigator determined that the parent's request for reading and math levels, benchmark assessments and supplied as Acadience Math scores, iReady and MAPS reports, IEP progress reports and evaluation reports, including cognitive or psychological assessments met the criteria of an educational record. These documents were turned over to the parent via email by April 2, 2026.

The Kansas State Department of Education Kansas Special Education Process Handbook provides further clarification about an educational record on page 163 as > FERPA and IDEA have included definitions of "education records." These definitions, while expansive, in most cases do not include the staff's working files and anecdotal records. However, there are some important requirements. FERPA regulation 34 C.F.R. 99.3 states that the term "education records" does not include "records that are kept in the sole possession of the maker of the record, are used only as a personal memory aid, and are not accessible or revealed to any other person except a temporary substitute for the maker of the record.

The parent's requests for academic data, progress monitoring data with dates, classroom work samples, including independent work and any assignments used to assess performance, written teacher observations or documentation regarding academic abilities, including enrichment or differentiation and progress monitoring data collected across instructional areas, including how it is measured and frequency of collection does not meet the definition of educational record as it more closely describes "records that are kept in the sole possession of the maker, are used only as a personal memory aid, or are not accessible or revealed to any other person except as a temporary substitute for the maker of the record." The LEA stated to the investigator that these requested data are not routinely maintained by the school or included as part of an official record system; instead, these data and/or observations contribute to progress reports and grades. In the case of student work, the LEA stated its practice is to release it to the student after grading to take home or place in the classroom shred bin.

Therefore, it is found that the LEA did turn over educational records to the parent within timeline, thereby meeting the IDEA, FERPA, and Kansas regulations. Based on the foregoing, the LEA is found IN compliance.

Summary of Conclusions/Corrective Action

1. ISSUE ONE: A violation of 34 C.F.R. §300.613(a); 34 CFR § 300.611(b); K.A.R. 91-40-50; and 34 C.F.R. 300.32 was not found. Corrective action is not required.

Right to Appeal

Either party may appeal the findings or conclusions in this report by filing a written notice of appeal with the State Commissioner of Education, ATTN: Special Education and Title Services, Landon State Office Building, 900 SW Jackson Street, Suite 620, Topeka, KS 66612-1212. The notice of appeal may also be filed by email to formalcomplaints@ksde.gov The notice of appeal must be delivered within 10 calendar days from the date of this report.

For further description of the appeals process, see Kansas Administrative Regulations 91-40-51(f).

K.A.R. 91-40-51(f) Appeals.

(1) Any agency or complainant may appeal any of the findings or conclusions of a compliance report prepared by the special education section of the department by filing a written notice of appeal with the state commissioner of education. Each notice shall be filed within 10 days from the date of the report. Each notice shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect.

Upon receiving an appeal, an appeal committee of at least three department of education members shall be appointed by the commissioner to review the report and to consider the information provided by the local education agency, the complainant, or others. The appeal process, including any hearing conducted by the appeal committee, shall be completed within 15 days from the date of receipt of the notice of appeal, and a decision shall be rendered within five days after the appeal process is completed unless the appeal committee determines that exceptional circumstances exist with respect to the particular complaint. In this event, the decision shall be rendered as soon as possible by the appeal committee.

(2) If an appeal committee affirms a compliance report that requires corrective action by an agency, that agency shall initiate the required corrective action immediately. If, after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the agency shall be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following:

(A) The issuance of an accreditation deficiency advisement;
(B) the withholding of state or federal funds otherwise available to the agency;
(C) the award of monetary reimbursement to the complainant; or
(D) any combination of the actions specified in paragraph (f)(2)

In the Matter of the Appeal of the Report
Issued in Response to a Complaint Filed
Against Unified School District No. 512
Shawnee Mission Public Schools: 26FCFC512-014A

DECISION OF THE APPEAL COMMITTEE

Background

This matter commenced with the filing of a complaint on April 1, 2026, by ------- on behalf of her child, -------. In the remainder of this decision, ------- will be referred to as "the parent," and ------- will be referred to as "the student." An investigation of the complaint was undertaken by a complaint investigator on behalf of the Special Education, and Title Services team at the Kansas State Department of Education. Following the investigation, a Complaint Report, addressing the allegations, was issued on April 30, 2026. That Complaint Report concluded that there was not a violation of special education statutes and regulations

Thereafter, the parent filed an appeal of the Complaint Report. Upon receipt of the appeal, an appeal committee was appointed and it reviewed the original complaint filed by the parent, the Complaint Report, the parent's notice of appeal, and the district's response to the appeal. The Appeal Committee has reviewed the information provided in connection with this matter and now issues this final Appeal Decision.

Preliminary Matters

A copy of the regulation regarding the filing of an appeal [K.A.R. 91-40-51(f)] was attached to the Complaint Report. That regulation states, in part, that: "Each notice shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect." Accordingly, the burden for supplying a sufficient basis for appeal is on the party submitting the appeal. When a party submits an appeal and makes statements in the notice of appeal without support, the Committee does not attempt to locate the missing support.

No new issues will be decided by the Appeal Committee. The appeal process is a review of the Complaint Report. The Appeal Committee does not conduct a separate investigation. The appeal committee's function will be to determine whether sufficient evidence exists to support the findings and conclusions in the Complaint Report.

Discussion of Issues on Appeal

The report identified one issue:

Issue

Did USD #512 follow state and federal regulations of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) when responding to a parent request for educational records being used in consideration of a gifted evaluation during the 2025-2026 school year?

Much of the information requested by the parent was provided by the district. However, the investigator found that:

> The parent's requests for academic data, progress monitoring data with dates, classroom work samples, including independent work and any assignments used to assess performance, written teacher observations or documentation regarding academic abilities, including enrichment or differentiation and progress monitoring data collected across instructional areas, including how it is measured and frequency of collection does not meet the definition of educational record as it more closely describes "records that are kept in the sole possession of the maker, are used only as a personal memory aid, or are not accessible or revealed to any other person except as a temporary substitute for the maker of the record." The LEA stated to the investigator that these requested data are not routinely maintained by the school or included as part of an official record system; instead, these data and/or observations contribute to progress reports and grades. In the case of student work, the LEA stated its practice is to release it to the student after grading to take home or place in the classroom shred bin. Report, p. 8.

The investigator determined that this data did not meet the definition of the term “education record” and so the failure to provide this data was not a violation of law.

In her appeal, the parent argues that the investigator used “an overly narrow interpretation of what constitutes an education record.” According to the parent,

> The distinction between "maintained records" and "unmaintained data" should not allow a district to rely on information for educational decisions while simultaneously preventing parent access to that same information.
> In this case, progress reports were provided, but the district indicated that the data supporting those reports is not maintained. This raises concerns about how progress is measured, how decisions are supported, and whether those processed can be meaningfully reviewed.”

Ultimately, the parent argues on appeal that “the use of information that is not accessible to parents, interfere with meaningful participation in the educational decision-making process.

The Appeal Committee agrees with the parent that the definition of the term “education record” used by the school district does have a limiting effect on a parent’s “meaningful participation in the educational decision-making process." The Appeal Committee, however, does not agree that the district used "an overly narrow interpretation of what constitutes an education record."

The formal complaint process is not for determining whether a school district uses ideal procedures. It is for determining whether a district has used an unlawful procedure (34 C.F.R. 300.153(b)(1).

The report correctly cited the relevant law applicable to this complaint. First, federal regulations at 34 CFR. 300.613(a) state that each participating agency must permit parents to inspect and review any education records relating to their children that are collected, maintained, or used by the agency for special education purposes.

Under 34 CFR 300.611(b) the term "education records" is defined to have the same meaning as term "education records" in the Family Education Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA) where the term "education records" is defined as records that are: (1) Directly related to a student; and (2) Maintained by an educational agency or institution or by a party acting for the agency or institution. (b) The term does not include: (1) Records that are kept in the sole possession of the maker, are used only as a personal memory aid, and are not accessible or revealed to any other person except a temporary substitute for the maker of the record.

Thus, an essential element of the very definition of the term "education records" is that the record is maintained by a school district. This is not "an overly narrow interpretation of what constitutes an education record." It is the literal definition of what constitutes an education record. The parent may believe this definition should be more expansive to enhance her ability to participate equally in making educational decisions for her child, but the complaint process is not a proper vehicle for achieving that outcome.

Sufficient evidence exists to support the findings and conclusions in the Complaint Report

Conclusion

For the reasons stated herein, the Complaint Report is sustained in full.

This is the final decision on this matter. There is no further appeal. This Appeal Decision is issued this 20th day of May, 2026.

DECISION OF THE APPEAL COMMITTEE

Background

This matter commenced with the filing of a complaint on April 6, 2026, by ------- on behalf of her child, -------. In the remainder of this decision, ------- will be referred to as "the parent," and ------- will be referred to as "the student." An investigation of the complaint was undertaken by a complaint investigator on behalf of the Special Education, and Title Services team at the Kansas State Department of Education. Following the investigation, a Complaint Report, addressing the allegations, was issued on April 30, 2026. That Complaint Report concluded that there was not a violation of special education statutes and regulations

Thereafter, the parent filed an appeal of the Complaint Report. The Appeal Committee has reviewed the information provided in connection with this matter and now issues this final Appeal Decision.

Preliminary Matters

A copy of the regulation regarding the filing of an appeal [K.A.R. 91-40-51(f)] was attached to the Complaint Report. That regulation states, in part, that: "Each notice shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect." Accordingly, the burden for supplying a sufficient basis for appeal is on the party submitting the appeal. When a party submits an appeal and makes statements in the notice of appeal without support, the Committee does not attempt to locate the missing support.

No new issues will be decided by the Appeal Committee. The appeal process is a review of the Complaint Report. The Appeal Committee does not conduct a separate investigation. The appeal committee's function will be to determine whether sufficient evidence exists to support the findings and conclusions in the Complaint Report.

Discussion of Issues on Appeal

The report identified three issues and concluded that there were no violations of law. The parent appealed the conclusion in all three issues. The Appeal Committee will address each issue separately.

Issue One

Did USD #512 follow state and federal regulations of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) when responding to a parent request for educational records during the 2025-2026 school year?

The complaint report concluded that the district complied with law because it provided all of the requested records that it had kept. The conclusion portion of the complaint report stated:

> The parent's requests for writing samples, drafts, progress monitoring data, scoring data, and documentation of supports provided during writing assignments does not meet the definition of educational record as it more closely describes "records that are kept in the sole possession of the maker, are used only as a personal memory aid, or are not accessible or revealed to any other person except as a temporary substitute for the maker of the record." These requested data are not maintained by the school or included as part of an official record system; instead, these data and/or observations contribute to progress reports and grades. These documents are not routinely stored and the LEA stated that it does not keep student data once summarized into the quarterly progress report and student work is released after grading to take home or place in the classroom shred bin (emphasis added). Report, p. 6.

In the appeal the parent states:

> The decision concludes that writing samples, drafts, progress monitoring data, scoring data, and documentation of supports are not "education records" because they are not maintained as part of an official system of records. This conclusion is flawed. Under IDEA and FERPA, education records include records that are: Directly related to the student, and Maintained by the agency or by a party acting for the agency (emphasis added).

The parent's statement is a correct statement of law, but is misinterpreted. This law is saying that to be an education record the information must be both directly related to the student, and maintained by the agency or by a party acting for the agency. If information lacks either one of these essential requirements, it is not an education record and so not subject to access by parents.

The parent makes an interesting argument that when information is used in developing progress reports, IEP development, and communications with parents the information is not merely a personal memory aid. The parent is referring to a FERPA exception cited by the investigator. This specific exception appears in 34 C.F.R. 99.3 of the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA) federal regulations. That exception states that the term "education records" does not include "records that are kept in the sole possession of the maker, are used only as a personal memory aid and or not accessible or revealed to any other person except a temporary substitute for the maker of the record." When information is used to develop progress reports or IEP development, that information has been revealed to other persons. Thus, it does not qualify for the FERPA exception.

However, further analysis is needed. It is not enough that personal notes, or any other kind of information, contain personally identifiable student information, to be an education record. They must also be maintained by the district. What does it mean to be "maintained" by the district. In Owasso Independent Sch. Dist. v. Falvo, 36 IDELR 62 (S. Ct. 2002), no less authority than the United States Supreme Court ruled that the requirement for an education record to be a record that is "maintained" by a school district requires more than possession and use by a teacher or team. The court said, "The word 'maintain' suggests FERPA records will be kept in a filing cabinet in a records room at the school or on a permanent secure database... (emphasis added)."

There is no evidence that the information at issue in this appeal was information that was maintained "in a filing cabinet in a records room at the school or on a permanent secure database." Accordingly, while the information may have been in the temporary possession of a teacher or other provider, the information subject to this appeal was not maintained by the school district, itself. Thus, it was not information in an education record, at least according to the cited analysis of the United States Supreme Court, a source as strong as the legislature itself.

Sufficient evidence exists to support the findings and conclusions on this issue in the Complaint Report.

Issue Two

> Did USD #512 follow state and federal regulations of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) when implementing the student's IEP goals and accommodations specific to writing and spelling?

The Appeal Committee is mystified by this issue because it does not say what state and federal regulation is not being followed. The investigator cites the following as the applicable law:

> Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. require school districts to ensure that as soon as possible following the development of the IEP, special education and related services are made available to the child in accordance with the child's IEP. K.A.R. 591 40-1 6(b)(2) further specifies those services for which written consent has been granted as specified by law are implemented not later than 10 school days after parental consent is granted unless reasonable justification for a delay can be shown.

This indicates that the issue is an alleged failure to implement the student's IEP.

The report states that the parent's position is as follows:

> The parent wrote in her child complaint that based on her conversations with her child the IEP accommodations are not being implemented for writing. Specifically, the staff report > that the student declined help, and IEP accommodations, while the student reported that a request was made to receive assistance during the assignment. Additionally, the parent reported that the student does not independently spell certain common words, however a writing assignment was scored 1 6/1 6/ despite discrepancies in "sentence structure" and accuracy in the writing sample. Finally, the parent reported that in the writing sample the word, 'they/' is spelled correctly throughout, but when the parent asked the student to spell it, the student spelled, 'Ithay." This shows that the IEP is not being implemented as written.

There are apparently some typos in this explanation. However, the issue appears to be that (1) the student reports that IEP accommodations are not being implemented for writing; and (2) the student does not independently spell certain common words.

With regard to IEP implementation, the investigator concluded that IEP accommodations are being provided based on progress reports dated March 25, 2025, May 28, 2025, October 16, 2025, January 6, 2026 and February 17, 2026 (findings of fact 3), LEA service logs (finding of facts 4) and a training session and sign-in sheet dated August 7, 2025 about the purpose and importance of IEP accommodations and about how to use the student's specific accommodations (findings of fact 5). The weight of the evidence presented supports the conclusion of the investigator that the IEP services were provided.

The second part of this issue was described by the parent to be that "the student does not independently spell certain common words." This allegation seems to be tied to the student's writing goal and whether the goal is to measure the student's unassisted performance. In her appeal, the parent says, "If scoring allows supported or assisted work to be counted as independent mastery, then the data used to determine goal attainment is not valid."

The investigation report found that:

> The LEA reported that it is the school staffs practice to offer assistance but also to promote student's trying to work independently. They provide supervision during writing to be available and step in as they notice a student struggling or being off task. They state that the rubric ultimately defines independence for the goal (Finding of fact 7).

We note that the report also stated that the writing goal changed during the school year to:

"The IEP dated February 14, 2025 and amended on September 3, 2025 includes one writing goal, 'In 36 instructional weeks, when given a topic sentence, [student] will write a 3-5 sentence paragraph, with correct capitalization, punctuation, and spelling with 90% accuracy." (finding of fact 1)

The investigator further noted that" "The IEP dated February 17, 2026 revised the student's writing goal to state: 'In 36 instructional weeks and when presented with a writing prompt, [student] will compose a five sentence paragraph that scores at least '16 (16/16) points on a writing rubric (emphasis added)."' (Finding of fact 2). The Appeal Committee does not know what "on a writing rubric" means and neither party explained it. It appears that the parties do not agree on what rubric is to be used to measure progress on this goal

In finding of fact 6, the investigator wrote, "The rubric for spelling shows that a score of "4" is earned when 61 0/0-80 0/0 or more of total words are spelled correctly. The Appeal Committee has no idea what this means and assumes there are typos in it. Neither party to this appeal addressed this finding and so the Appeal Committee will also not address it.

The Appeal Committee agrees with the parent's statement that ""If scoring allows supported or assisted work to be counted as independent mastery, then the data used to determine goal attainment is not valid." On the other hand, providing specially designed instruction (special education) necessarily involves providing "supported or assisted work." This kind of disagreement may arise at any time, but it does not indicate a violation of law. When such disagreements arise, the IEP team should meet to determine precisely how progress toward goals will be measured and, if a specific rubric will be used, specify that rubric in the IEP in a manner that is clear to all members of the team.

The Appeal Committee finds that sufficient evidence exists to support the findings and conclusions in the Complaint Report on this issue, and will sustain the conclusion in the complaint report.

Issue Three

> Did USD #512 follow state and federal regulations of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) when developing challenging writing and spelling goals and appropriate writing and spelling accommodations for the student during the 2025-26 school year?

This is essentially the same concern as presented in Issue two. In her appeal, the parent cites the United States Supreme Court case of Endrew F. saying that an IEP must be reasonably calculated to enable progress that is: Meaningful and Appropriate in light of the child's circumstances, and then adds: "If progress data is based on supported performance rather than independent ability, then the conclusion that the student met her goal does not demonstrate meaningful progress."

The investigator described her conclusion on this issue as follows:

> In this case the parent expressed concern that the student was not performing independently in the writing goal, yet the LEA contacted the parent stating that the IEP goal had been met. The investigator concluded through interview that the distinction between meeting the student's IEP goal and student independence were not clear to the parent. Although confusing it is found that the LEA followed state and federal requirements when developing challenging writing and spelling goals for the student during the 20250026 school year and the LEA is found IN compliance (emphasis added).

From this description, the investigator clearly understood the parent's objection but did not agree with it. The Appeal Committee agrees with the investigator's conclusion for the same reason it agreed with the conclusion in Issue two.

However, this situation should not continue. Somehow the parent and other IEP team members left two IEP meetings with a different opinion on what rubric or measure should be used to assess the student's progress on a single IEP goal. The Appeal Committee reminds the district that its IEP teams have a duty to write measurable IEP goals and, although misunderstandings may from time to time arise, they should attempt to do so in a way that is clear to both parents and service providers. The situation described in this complaint is manageable. The parent wants a goal that is measured without any assistance from staff and staff want to be able to assist the student in making progress toward her goal. The team could do both by setting a goal that requires the student to perform completely independently at specified times throughout the school year and have that performance measured and recorded as independent progress. The team could also set a collaborative goal for the student to meet with assistance from staff. The goal for both could even be the same goal, except progress toward these goals would be measured differently, with and without assistance.

Sufficient evidence exists to support the findings and conclusions in the Complaint Report.

Conclusion

For the reasons stated herein, the conclusions in the Complaint Report are sustained.

This is the final decision on this matter. There is no further appeal. This Appeal Decision is issued this 20th day of May, 2026.

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST
UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #266
ON APRIL 7, 2026

DATE OF REPORT: MAY 28, 2026

This report is in response to a complaint filed with the Kansas State Department of Education on behalf of ------- and ------- by their mother, -------. In the remainder of the report, ------- will be referred to as "student A", ------- will be referred to as "student B", and both will be referred to "the students". In addition, ------- will be referred to as "the mother", "the parent", or "the complainant".

The parent's first language is not English but she has communicated in writing during this investigation in both Spanish and English. USD #266 reports that a translator is provided for all meetings with the parent and written documents are provided in both English and Spanish.

When a special education complaint is filed against a school district that is a member of a special education cooperative or interlocal, or that uses any other state recognized public agency to serve children with disabilities, the term " local education agency (LEA)" in this report will include the school district, the special education cooperative or interlocal, and any other agency that is recognized by the state as an administrative agency for public elementary or secondary schools and is serving the educational needs of this student."

In this case, the students were residents of the Maize Public Schools (USD #266) which employs its own staff to meet the requirements of the IDEA. In the remainder of this report, this responsible public agency will be referred to as "the LEA" or "the district".

The following LEA staff involved in this investigation will be referred to as follows:

- Christy Skelton, Assistant Superintendent for Special Services
- Michael Dome, Assistant Superintendent for Pre-K through Sixth Grade
- Bryan Wilson, Director of Special Services for Grades 7-12
- Lisa Ellis, Director of Special Services for ECSE – Grade 6
- Megan Lavelle, Maize Intermediate School Assistant Principal
- Chad Cramer, Maize Middle School Principal
- Lisa Burgess, Maize Middle School Assistant Principal
- Jennifer Fisher, School Psychologist
- Dawn Ingram, IEP Data Clerk in USD #266
- April Neal, Administrative Assistant in USD #230

- Tatiana Ticas-Guevara, Maize Intermediate School Communications Secretary
- Katie Jennings, Data Clerk in USD #266
- Makayle Overton, Data Manager in USD #266

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) allows for a 60-day timeline to investigate a complaint and allow for an appeal process from the date on which it was filed. A complaint is considered filed on the date on which it was received by KSDE. In this case, the KSDE initially received the complaint on April 7, 2026.

Evidence Reviewed

Both parties were contacted during the investigation to gather and clarify information.

The complainant requested that all communication be in writing via email. It is noted that the complainants first language is not English and, as such, communication was provided in both Spanish and English. The Investigator first contacted the complainant on April 13, 2026 and interview questions were sent to the complainant on April 15, 2026. The complainant responded to these emails and "objected to the limited scope of the investigation" and insisted that the IDEA investigation combine her other concerns related to Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act and the Mckinney-Vento Act against USD #259 and USD #230. The Investigator provided the complainant with resources to address her other concerns; however, the complainant continued to "formally REJECT your attempt to fragment my investigation" and never responded to the interview questions.

The LEA made the following school personnel from Maize Intermediate School and Maize Middle School available for a phone interview on April 24, 2026:

- Assistant Superintendent for Special Services
- Assistant Superintendent for Pre-K through Sixth Grade
- Director of Special Services for Grades 7-12
- Director of Special Services for ECSE – Grade 6
- Maize Intermediate School Assistant Principal
- Maize Middle School Assistant Principal
- School Psychologist

Written documentation was provided by both the LEA and the complainant. All the documentation was reviewed, and the following written documentation was used in consideration of the issue:

- Child Complaint Form completed by the parent
- Response to the Allegations written by the Assistant Superintendent for Special Services on April 17 and April 21, 2026
- Therapy Center Evaluation Report for student B written on September 9, 2025

- Email dated October 15, 2025 written by the parent to the Maize Middle School Principal requesting a special education evaluation
- Prior Written Notice (PWN) for Evaluation and Request for Consent for student B sent to the parent on October 23, October 29, and November 6, 2025 and signed by the parent on November 19, 2025
- Special Education Referral Form for student A dated October 24, 2025
- PWN for Evaluation and Request for Consent for student A sent to the parent on October 29 and November 19, 2025 and signed by the parent on November 19, 2025
- Discussion Notes from parent and staff team meeting for student B held on November 3, 2025
- Email dated November 5, 2025 written by the Maize Middle School Principal to the parent providing records requested
- Email dated November 21, 2025 written by the Maize Middle School Principal to the parent at 3:18 PM and parent response at 6:15 PM regarding the PWN
- Emails dated December 2, 2025 between the Administrative Assistant in USD #230 and the IEP Data Clerk in USD #266 regarding special education records
- Emails dated December 2, 2025 between the Administrative Assistant in USD #230 and the Data Manager in USD #266 regarding a request for educational records
- Email dated December 9, 2025 written by the School Psychologist to the parent regarding need for students to be in attendance for the evaluations to occur
- Records Request from Insight Virtual School in USD #230 dated December 10, 2025 showing a start date of January 6, 2026 for student B
- Records Request from Kansas Virtual Academy in USD #230 dated December 12, 2025 showing a start date of January 6, 2026 for student A
- Records Request Log from Maize Intermediate School showing records were sent on December 19, 2025 and the second semester grade card was sent on January 7, 2026

Background Information

The students were enrolled in USD #266 between October 20 through December 19, 2025. The students were previously enrolled in USD #259 and transferred to USD #230 after December 19, 2025.

Student A is in the 6th grade and attended Maize Intermediate School while enrolled in USD #266. Student A transferred into the district with a 504 Plan and English Speakers of Other Languages (ESOL) services. The parent reports the student has the following medical and mental health diagnoses: Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD), Autism, Asthma, Prediabetes, Farsightedness and Astigmatism, Depression, Anxiety, and the MAPK8IP3 gene mutation.

Student B is in the 7th grade and attended Maize Middle School while enrolled in USD #266. Student B transferred into the district with no special services and the 2022-23 Kansas English Language Proficiency Assessment (KELPA) records show she was rated as proficient in English. The parent reported and the Psychological Evaluation from the Therapy Center dated September 9, 2025 noted that Student B has the following medical and mental health diagnoses: ADHD and Autism (level 2) without intellectual or language impairments.

Issues Investigated

Based on the written complaint, four issues were identified and investigated for Student A and four issues were identified and investigated for Student B.

Student A

Issue One

USD #266, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to provide preferential seating for Student A during the 2025-26 school year.

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.8(a)(1) states that a "child with a disability" must have one of the qualifying disabilities described in the IDEA and need special education and related services because of that disability.

Federal regulations, at 34 C.F.R. 300.320(a)(4), require school districts to develop an IEP describing the special education and related services and supplementary aids and services to be provided to the child, or on behalf of the child, and a statement of the program modifications or supports for school personnel that will be provided to enable the child to 1) advance appropriately toward attaining the annual goals; 2) be involved in and make progress in the general education curriculum; 3) participate in extracurricular and other nonacademic activities; and, 4) be educated and participate with other children with disabilities and nondisabled children.

Complainant Position

The complainant believes that USD #266 should be providing preferential seating in the classroom for Student A based on his multiple medical and mental health diagnoses.

LEA Position

USD #266 acknowledged that the student is a student with a disability under Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act. The LEA reported student A is suspected of having a disability under the IDEA and was being evaluated to determine eligibility for an IEP; however, student A transferred to USD #230 prior to the initial special education evaluation being completed and an eligibility determination being made. The LEA believes that the parent's concerns should have been addressed under Section 504 during student A's enrollment in USD #266.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The following finding of facts is based upon interviews and record review.

1. The IDEA only provides the jurisdiction to address concerns that are related to students who have been found eligible for services under the IDEA.
2. Student A had not been found eligible under the IDEA and did not have an IEP during the time he was enrolled in USD #266.

Conclusion

In this case, Student A was not identified as a student with a disability under the IDEA and did not have an IEP while enrolled in USD #266. As such, this allegation does not fall under the jurisdiction of the IDEA. Based on the foregoing, the allegation of a violation of special education laws and regulations related to this issue is not substantiated.

Issue Two

USD #266, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to provide transportation as a related service for Student A during the 2025-26 school year.

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.8(a)(1) states that a "child with a disability" must have one of the qualifying disabilities described in the IDEA and need special education and related services because of that disability.

Federal regulations, at 34 C.F.R. 300.320(a)(4), require school districts to develop an IEP describing the special education and related services and supplementary aids and services to be provided to the child, or on behalf of the child, and a statement of the program modifications or supports for school personnel that will be provided to enable the child to 1) advance appropriately toward attaining the annual goals; 2) be involved in and make progress in the general education curriculum; 3) participate in extracurricular and other nonacademic activities; and, 4) be educated and participate with other children with disabilities and nondisabled children.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.34(a) and (c)(16) state that transportation can be considered a related service under the IDEA and that transportation includes 1) travel to and from school and between schools; 2) travel in and around school buildings; and 3) specialized equipment (such as special or adapted buses, lifts, and ramps), if required to provide special transportation for a child with a disability.

Complainant Position

Based on Student A's multiple medical and mental health diagnoses, the complainant believes that USD #266 should be providing transportation as a related service for Student A.

LEA Position

USD #266 acknowledged that the student is a student with a disability under Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act. The LEA reported student A is suspected of having a disability under the IDEA and was being evaluated to determine eligibility for an IEP; however, student A transferred to USD #230 prior to the initial special education evaluation being completed and an eligibility determination being made. The LEA believes that the parent's concerns should have been addressed under Section 504 during student A's enrollment in USD #266.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The following finding of facts is based upon interviews and record review.

1. Transportation can be considered as a related service in an IEP under the IDEA.
2. The IDEA only provides the jurisdiction to address concerns that are related to students who have been found eligible for services under the IDEA.
3. Student A had not been found eligible under the IDEA and did not have an IEP during the time he was enrolled in USD #266.

Conclusion

In this case, Student A was not identified as a student with a disability under the IDEA and did not have an IEP while enrolled in USD #266. As such, this allegation does not fall under the jurisdiction of the IDEA. Based on the foregoing, the allegation of a violation of special education laws and regulations related to this issue is not substantiated.

Issue Three

USD #266, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to conduct a comprehensive evaluation of Student A during the past 12 months, specifically by not considering medical reports and information provided by the parent.

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.301(a) require public agencies to conduct a full and individual initial evaluation before the initial provision of special education and related services to a child with a disability and federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.301(b) allows either a parent of a child or a public agency to initiate a request for an initial evaluation to determine if the child is a child with a disability.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.304(b) requires the evaluation to use a variety of assessment tools and strategies to gather relevant functional, developmental, and academic information about the child, including information provided by the parent, that may assist in determining whether the child is a child with a disability and the content of the child's IEP, including information related to enabling the child to be involved in and progress in the general education curriculum.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.503(a) require school districts to provide parents with prior written notice a reasonable time before they propose or refuse to initiate or change the identification, evaluation, educational placement, or the provision of FAPE to the student and federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.304(a) requires the prior written notice to describe any evaluation procedures the agency proposes to conduct.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.301(c)(1) require the initial evaluation to be conducted within 60 days of receiving parent consent for the evaluation and federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.301(c)(2) require the evaluation procedures to determine the educational needs of the child and if the child is a child with a disability under one of the eligibility categories in the IDEA and, because of that disability, is in need of special education and related services.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.301(d) allows exceptions to the 60 day timeline to complete the evaluation if the parent repeatedly fails or refuses to make the child available for the evaluation or if the child enrolls in a school of another public agency prior to the determination by the child's previous public agency as to whether the child is a child with a disability and in need of special education and related services.

Complainant Position

The complainant reported that she requested that student A be evaluated for special education when he enrolled him in USD #266. She believes the student should be eligible for an IEP because of his multiple medical and mental health diagnoses. The parent indicated USD #266 failed to consider student A's medical and mental health concerns when conducting the initial special education evaluation.

LEA Position

The LEA reported meeting with the parent to discuss her concerns and considered the medical and mental health information provided by the parent. This consideration resulted in the LEA proposing a comprehensive evaluation which included gathering new and existing data in the area of health/motor ability. USD #266 acknowledged that the initial special education evaluation for student A was not completed prior to his transfer to USD #230.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The following finding of facts is based upon interviews and record review.

1. The parent emailed the Director of Special Services for ECSE – Grade 6 and the Maize Intermediate School Assistant Principal on October 15, 2025 requesting an initial special education evaluation for student A.
2. Student A enrolled in USD #266 on October 20, 2025.
3. The Maize Intermediate School Assistant Principal emailed the parent on October 20, 2025 acknowledging the request and scheduling a meeting to discuss the referral.
4. This referral meeting was held on October 24, 2025 with the parent in attendance. The referral noted academic deficits and concerns in the areas of speech/language and health/medical.

5. The parent was provided with prior written notice on October 29, 2025 proposing to conduct an initial special education evaluation in the areas of vision, hearing, health/motor ability, academic performance, general intelligence, communication skills, and social/emotional status/behavioral status.
6. A second copy of the prior written notice proposing the initial evaluation be conducted was provided to the parent on November 19, 2025 and the parent provided written consent for the special education evaluation on that same date.
7. Student A's attendance record shows that between November 19, 2025 when consent was granted and December 19, 2025 when the student transferred to USD #230 there were only 15 school days and the student was in attendance for four of those school days.
8. Emails dated December 2, 2025 between the IEP Data Clerk in USD #266 and the Administrative Assistant in USD #230 show that a request for special education records was made and the records were sent on that date. The email written by the IEP Data Manager stated, "Attached is our referral form and a signed consent for evaluation for [student A]. Looks like we were in the early stages of evaluation for special services".

Conclusion

In this case, the parent made a request for an initial special education evaluation prior to the student's enrollment in the LEA. Following student A's enrollment on October 20, 2025, the LEA met with the parent on October 24, 2025 to discuss her concerns and gather parent input. Based upon that meeting, the LEA provided the parent with prior written notice proposing an evaluation in the areas of vision, hearing, health/motor ability, academic performance, general intelligence, communication skills, and social/emotional status/behavioral status on October 29, 2025. The parent provided written consent for the proposed evaluation on November 19, 2025; however, student A only attended four school days between that date and December 19, 2025 when he transferred to USD #230.

Based on the foregoing, USD #266 proposed a comprehensive evaluation for student A but was unable to complete the initial special education evaluation due to the student only attending school on 4 school days after the parent provided written consent. In addition, student A transferred to another public agency prior to the end of the 60 day timeline. USD #266 then notified and provided the special education records to USD #230 indicating an evaluation was in progress but not yet completed. As such, the allegation of a violation of special education laws and regulations related to this issue is not substantiated

Issue Four

USD #266, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to appropriately respond to a request for Student A's records from the Kansas Virtual Academy and the parent during the 2025-26 school year.

Applicable Law

In order to facilitate the transition for a child with a disability or suspected of having a disability to a new public agency during the school year, federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.323(g)(2) require the previous public agency in which the child was enrolled to take reasonable steps to promptly respond to the request from the new public agency.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.613(a) require each public agency to permit parents to inspect and review any education records relating to their children that are collected, maintained, or used by the public agency without unnecessary delay and before any meeting regarding an IEP, or any hearing related to disciplinary action, or resolution session related to due process, and in no case more than 45 days after the request has been made.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. § 300.611(b) states that "education records" means the type of records covered under the definition of 'education records' in 34 CFR part 99 (the regulations implementing the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974, 20 U.S.C. 1232g (FERPA))." Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. § 99.3 defines "education records as those records that are directly related to a student; and maintained by an educational agency or institution.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.613(b)(2) gives parents the right to request that the public agency provide copies of the records containing the information if failure to provide those copies would effectively prevent the parent from exercising the right to inspect and review the records. Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.617(a) allows public agencies to charge a fee for copies of records if that fee does not effectively prevent the parents from exercising their right to inspect an review those records.

Complainant Position

The complainant reported USD #266 failed to respond to the records request made by USD #230 in a timely manner when student A transferred on December 19, 2025. This caused a disruption to provision of special services to student A. In addition, the parent stated that USD failed to respond to her request for copies of all of student A's educational records by charging her for copies of these records.

LEA Position

The LEA reported they responded to the records request for student A from USD #230 on the same day it was received. The records request from the parent was made after the family had moved out of the district boundaries. The LEA noted this request was for "all records" and specifically included emails from specific staff members. The LEA sent the parent the same educational records that were sent to USD #230 but indicated that emails were not kept and maintained by the district as educational records; however, these emails could be located and sent to the parent for a fee. The parent did not agree to pay the fee and the emails were not retrieved.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The following finding of facts is based upon interviews and record review.

1. The Kansas Virtual School is an educational program administered by USD #230.
2. As noted in student A's findings in Issue Three, # 8, records show that USD #230 requested student A's special education records on December 2, 2025 and those records were sent on the same date notifying the new LEA that the student was suspected of having a disability and was in the process of being evaluated to determine eligibility for an IEP and related services but that eligibility had not yet been determined.
3. The parent emailed the Assistant Superintendent for Grades Pre-K to Grade Six on February 13, 2026 stating, "THEREFORE, I DEMAND THE FOLLOWING BY TUESDAY AT 4 PM: 00 PM: Complete unedited records for all three of my children (including [sibling's] results and [student B's] nursing notes. All internal and external communications (emails and call logs) from [the Maize Intermediate School Communications Secretary], [the Maize Intermediate School Assistant Principal], [the School Psychologist], and the school nurse, including the unfulfilled written promise of an interpreter. [Assistant Superintendent for Pre-K through Grade Six], I expect you to deliver this evidence within the established timeframe so that my legal representatives at DRC [Disability Rights Center] may proceed with the full record".
4. The Assistant Superintendent for Pre-K through Grade Six responded to the parent on February 17, 2026 in an email stating, "We maintain some of the documents you request within our student information system. These records can be retrieved and provided or made available to you relatively quickly. We can send these documents via certified mail or make them available at our Education Support Center for you to retrieve then at no charge. Including in this packet would be the documents that another school would have received as part of a records request. Your request for email correspondence and other documentation requires more extensive searching and review, which will take additional time to complete. These more complex searches will be subject to applicable record fees, which are permitted by Kansas law. Typically, the district will try to estimate any related charges and notify you in advance to see if you still wish to proceed with those items subject to fees. Let me know if you would like me to proceed with finding out what the charge would be; we would then request the fees be paid in advance in the form of a deposit. Let me know how you would like to move forward".

5. On February 20, 2026, the Assistant Superintendent for Pre-K through Grade Six emailed the parent again to ask how she would like to proceed with the records request.
6. On February 27, 2026, the Assistant Superintendent for Pre-K through Grade Six emailed the parent stating, "We maintain some of the documents you requested within our student information system. I have attached these documents to this reply. Your request for email correspondence and other records require more extensive searching and review, which will take additional time to complete. These more extensive searches are subject to applicable records fees permitted under Kansas law. We estimate that the cost for his request will be $120, which will need to be paid in advance as a deposit".
7. On March 6, 2026, the parent emailed the Assistant Superintendent for Pre-K to Grade Six requesting copies of student A's IEP. The Assistant Superintendent for Pre-K to Grade Six responded on March 11, 2026 stating, "There was no IEP in place for any of your children at the time you withdrew them from the Maize School District".
8. On March 26, 2026, the Assistant Superintendent for Pre-K through Grade Six emailed the parent and stated, "To date, 179 pages of records have been sent to you. These include academic records, attendance records, screening reports, documents received from USD #259 as part of the records request on 10/16/25, health records, the 504 plan for [student A] and the 504 evaluation information for [student B].

Conclusion

In this case, there were two separate requests for student A's school records. The first request was the email from USD #230 on December 2, 2025 requesting copies of special education records from USD #266. The IEP Data Clerk in USD #266 responded to this request without delay on December 2, 2025 by emailing the special education records and notifying USD #230 that student A was suspected of having a disability and was currently being evaluated to determine eligibility for an IEP.

The second request was made by the parent on February 13, 2026 in an email to the Assistant Superintendent for Pre-K through Grade Six. This request was for "complete unedited records" for both student A and student B for the purpose of providing the records to the DRC for legal purposes. It should be noted that the IDEA regulations only refers to the disclosure of "any education records relating to their children that are collected, maintained, or used by the public agency without unnecessary delay and before any meeting regarding an IEP, or any hearing related to disciplinary action, or any due process resolution session, and in no case more than 45 days after the request has been made".

In this case, USD #266 did not consider the emails and call logs of specific staff members as meeting the definition of an "education record". The request was not made prior to an IEP meeting, a hearing related to disciplinary action, or a due process resolution session; therefore, the "without unnecessary delay" and the "45 day requirement" would be applicable. The Assistant Superintendent for Pre-K through Grade Six sent emails clarifying the request and asking how the parent would like to proceed. Records show that the that the same educational records that were sent to USD #230 were emailed to the parent in an email written by the Assistant Superintendent for Pre-K through Grade Six on February 27, 2026. In that same email, the parent was informed that a fee would be charged for the cost to provide the copies of other requested material, including all the emails and call logs from specific staff. On March 20, 2026, less than 45 days from the original request on February 13, 2026, the LEA emailed the parent indicating that 179 pages of educational records had been provided for the students.

Based on the foregoing, the allegation of a violation of special education laws and regulations related to this issue is not substantiated

Student B

Issue One

USD #266, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to appropriately respond to the parent's request for a special education evaluation for Student B in October 2025.

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.301(a) require public agencies to conduct a full and individual initial evaluation before the initial provision of special education and related services to a child with a disability and federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.301(b) allows either a parent of a child or a public agency to initiate a request for an initial evaluation to determine if the child is a child with a disability.

The Kansas Special Education Process Handbook in Chapter 2, Section E: Referral for Initial Evaluation states, "The school must respond to the request within a reasonable period of time, which has been interpreted by the Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) as being no more than 15 school days, unless there are unusual circumstances."

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.503(a) require school districts to provide parents with prior written notice a reasonable time before they propose or refuse to initiate or change the identification, evaluation, educational placement, or the provision of FAPE to the student.

Complainant Position

The complainant believes that USD #266 did not respond to her request for an initial special education evaluation for student B in a timely manner.

LEA Position

USD #266 reported they responded to the parent's request for a special education evaluation for student B within the required timelines set forth by the KSDE. The LEA noted that the parent request was made prior to the student being enrolled in the district and that the request was acted upon as soon as student B enrolled at Maize Middle School.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The following finding of facts is based upon interviews and record review.

1. The parent made the request for an initial special education evaluation in an email written to the Maize Middle School Principal on October 15, 2025.
2. Enrollment records show student B was enrolled at Maize Middle School on October 20, 2025.
3. A Special Education Referral Form was completed for student B on October 23, 2025 by the Maize Middle School Assistant Principal and a prior written notice proposing an initial special education evaluation in all areas was emailed to the parent.
4. Following a phone call with the parent on October 27, 2025, the Maize Middle School Principal emailed the parent indicating the LEA was proposing to conduct a comprehensive special education evaluation and that a prior written notice proposing this evaluation had been emailed to the parent on October 23, 2025. The email also noted a meeting was scheduled on October 29, 2025 to further discuss student B's Psychological Evaluation which the parent had provided to the school nurse.
5. The parent was unable to attend the meeting and another meeting was rescheduled for November 3, 2025. The LEA sent another copy of the prior written notice proposing the initial special education evaluation to the parent on October 29, 2025.
6. Another prior written notice proposing the initial special education evaluation to the parent on November 6, 2025.
7. Documentation shows the parent provided written consent for the initial special education evaluation for student B on November 19, 2025.

Conclusion

USD #266 responded to the parent's request for an initial special education evaluation by providing the parent with prior written notice proposing the initial special education evaluation to the parent on October 23, October 29, and again on November 6, 2025. Based on the student B's date of enrollment, the 15th school day was November 7, 2025. In this case, the parent was provided with three separate prior written notices proposing an initial special education evaluation for student B within the 15 school day timeline required by KSDE.

Based on the foregoing, the allegation of a violation of special education laws and regulations related to this issue is not substantiated

Issue Two

USD #266, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to provide accommodations for Student B during the 2025-26 school year, specifically the use of noise cancelling headphones and early release from class to avoid crowded hallways.

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.8(a)(1) states that a "child with a disability" must have one of the qualifying disabilities described in the IDEA and need special education and related services because of that disability.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.320(a)(4) requires IEPs to include a statement of the special education and related services and supplementary aids and services, based on peer-reviewed research to the extent practicable, to be provided to the child, or on behalf of the child, and a statement of the program modifications or supports for school personnel that will be provided to enable the child to advance appropriately toward attaining the annual goals; to be involved in and make progress in the general education curriculum and to participate in extracurricular and other nonacademic activities; and to be educated and participate with other children with disabilities and nondisabled children.

Complainant Position

The complainant believes that USD #266 should be providing student B with noise cancelling headphones in the classroom and early release from class to avoid crowded hallways based on her multiple medical diagnoses.

LEA Position

USD #266 reported student B was not identified as a student with a disability under the IDEA while enrolled in the district. As such, the LEA had not obligation to provide the requested accommodations requested by the parent.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The following finding of facts is based upon interviews and record review.

1. The IDEA only provides the jurisdiction to address concerns that are related to students who have been found eligible for services under the IDEA.
2. Student B had not been found eligible under the IDEA and did not have an IEP during the time he was enrolled in USD #266.

Conclusion

In this case, student B was not identified as a student with a disability under the IDEA and did not have an IEP while enrolled in USD #266. As such, this allegation does not fall under the jurisdiction of the IDEA. Based on the foregoing, the allegation of a violation of special education laws and regulations related to this issue is not substantiated.

Issue Three

USD #266, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to conduct a comprehensive evaluation of Student B during the past 12 months, specifically by not considering medical reports and information provided by the parent.

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.301(a) require public agencies to conduct a full and individual initial evaluation before the initial provision of special education and related services to a child with a disability and federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.301(b) allows either a parent of a child or a public agency to initiate a request for an initial evaluation to determine if the child is a child with a disability.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.304(b) requires the evaluation to use a variety of assessment tools and strategies to gather relevant functional, developmental, and academic information about the child, including information provided by the parent, that may assist in determining whether the child is a child with a disability and the content of the child's IEP, including information related to enabling the child to be involved in and progress in the general education curriculum.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.503(a) require school districts to provide parents with prior written notice a reasonable time before they propose or refuse to initiate or change the identification, evaluation, educational placement, or the provision of FAPE to the student and federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.304(a) requires the prior written notice to describe any evaluation procedures the agency proposes to conduct.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.301(c)(1) require the initial evaluation to be conducted within 60 days of receiving parent consent for the evaluation and federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.301(c)(2) require the evaluation procedures to determine the educational needs of the child and if the child is a child with a disability under one of the eligibility categories in the IDEA and, because of that disability, is in need of special education and related services.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.301(d) allows exceptions to the 60 day timeline to complete the evaluation if the parent repeatedly fails or refuses to make the child available for the evaluation or if the child enrolls in a school of another public agency prior to the determination by the child's previous public agency as to whether the child is a child with a disability and in need of special education and related services.

Complainant Position

The complainant reported that she requested that student B be evaluated for special education and believes the student should be eligible for an IEP because of her multiple medical and mental health diagnoses. The parent indicated USD #266 failed to consider student B's medical and mental health concerns when conducting the initial special education evaluation.

LEA Position

The LEA reported meeting with the parent to discuss her concerns and considered the medical and mental health information provided by the parent. USD #266 acknowledged that the initial special education evaluation for student B was not completed prior to her transfer to USD #230.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The following finding of facts is based upon interviews and record review.

1. The findings from Issue One are incorporated herein by reference.
2. The prior written notice dated October 23, 2025 proposes to gather both new and existing data in the following areas: vision, hearing, health/motor ability, general intelligence, social/emotional status /behavioral status, academic performance, communication skills, and transition skills.
3. Enrollment documentation shows student B transferred to USD #230 on December 19, 2025.
4. Between November 19, 2025 when consent was granted for student B's initial special education evaluation and December 19, 2025 when student B transferred to USD #230, there were only 15 school days.
5. On December 2, 2025, the USD #230 Administrative Assistant in USD #230 emailed and requested student B's educational records. The Data Manager in USD #266 sent the educational records, including the special education records, on that same date.
6. The Data Clerk in USD #266 again sent student B's special educational records, including the signed prior written notice for the initial special education evaluation, to the Administrative Assistant in USD #230.

Conclusion

In this case, the parent made a request for an initial special education evaluation prior to student B's enrollment in the LEA. Following student B's enrollment on October 20, 2025, the LEA made a referral for an initial special education evaluation on October 23, 2025 and provided the parent with a prior written notice proposing a comprehensive special education evaluation in the following areas: vision, hearing, health/motor ability, academics performance, general intelligence, communication skills, social/emotional status/behavioral status, and transition skills on that same date. On October 27, 2025, the LEA proposed to meet on October 29, 2025 with the parent to review her concerns and student B's Psychological Evaluation from the Therapy Center. While the parent was unable to meet that day, another copy of the prior written notice proposing the initial special education evaluation was sent to the parent on October 29, 2025. The parent met with the LEA staff on October 3, 2025 and a third copy of the prior written notice was provided to the parent via email. The parent provided written consent for the proposed evaluation on November 19, 2025; however, there were only 15 school days between that date and December 19, 2025 when she transferred to USD #230. On December 2 and again on December 10, 2025, USD #266 provided USD #230 with the student's educational records, which included a copy of the signed prior written notice for the initial special education evaluation.

Based on the foregoing, USD #266 proposed a comprehensive evaluation for student B but was unable to complete the initial special education evaluation due to the student transferring to another public agency prior to the end of the 60 day timeline. USD #266 provided the special education records to USD #230 on December 10, 2025 so that the new LEA could proceed with the initial special education evaluation to determine eligibility. As such, the allegation of a violation of special education laws and regulations related to this issue is not substantiated.

Issue Four

USD #266, in violation of state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), failed to appropriately respond to a request for Student B's records from the Kansas Virtual Academy and the parent during the 2025-26 school year.

Applicable Law

In order to facilitate the transition for a child with a disability or suspected of having a disability to a new public agency during the school year, federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.323(g)(2) require the previous public agency in which the child was enrolled to take reasonable steps to promptly respond to the request from the new public agency.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.613(a) require each public agency to permit parents to inspect and review any education records relating to their children that are collected, maintained, or used by the public agency without unnecessary delay and before any meeting regarding an IEP, or any hearing related to disciplinary action, or resolution session related to due process, and in no case more than 45 days after the request has been made.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. § 300.611(b) states that "education records" means the type of records covered under the definition of 'education records' in 34 CFR part 99 (the regulations implementing the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974, 20 U.S.C. 1232g (FERPA))." Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. § 99.3 defines "education records as those records that are directly related to a student; and maintained by an educational agency or institution.

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.613(b)(2) gives parents the right to request that the public agency provide copies of the records containing the information if failure to provide those copies would effectively prevent the parent from exercising the right to inspect and review the records. Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.617(a) allows public agencies to charge a fee for copies of records if that fee does not effectively prevent the parents from exercising their right to inspect an review those records.

Complainant Position

The complainant reported USD #266 failed to respond to the records request made by USD #230 in a timely manner when student B transferred on December 19, 2025. In addition, the parent stated that USD failed to respond to her request for copies of all of student B's educational records by charging her for copies of these records.

LEA Position

The LEA reported they responded to the initial records request for student B from USD #230 on December 2, 2025, the same day it was received, and provided a second set of the educational records to USD #230 on December 10, 2025. The records request from the parent was made after the family had moved out of the district boundaries. The LEA noted this request was for "all records" and specifically included emails from specific staff members. The LEA sent the parent the same educational records that were sent to USD #230 but indicated that emails were not kept and maintained by the district as educational records; however, these emails could be located and sent to the parent for a fee. The parent did not agree to pay the fee and the emails were not retrieved.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

The following finding of facts is based upon interviews and record review.

1. The Kansas Virtual School is an educational program administered by USD #230.
2. As noted in student Bs findings in Issue Three, #5 and #6, student B's educational records including the signed prior written notice proposing an initial special education evaluation for student B, were provided to USD #230 on December 2, 2025 and again on December 10, 2025.
3. Records Request Log from Maize Middle School showing available records sent to USD #230 on December 11, 2025 and the second semester grade card sent January 7, 2026
4. As noted in student A's findings in Issue Four, #3, #4, #5, #6, and #8, USD #266 received the initial request for records from the parent on February 13, 2026 and provided the parent with copies the educational records for student B on February 27, 2026. The Assistant Superintendent for Pre-K through Grade 6 sent an email to the parent on March 20, 2026 which indicated that parent had received 179 pages of educational records for her students.

Conclusion

In this case, there were two separate requests for student B's school records. The first request was the email from USD #230 on December 2, 2025 requesting copies of special education records from USD #266. The Data Manager in USD #266 responded to this request without delay on December 2, 2025 by emailing the special education records, including the signed prior written notice for the initial special education evaluation. The Data Clerk in USD #266 emailed the same records to USD #230 again on December 10, 2025.

The second request was made by the parent on February 13, 2026 in an email to the Assistant Superintendent for Pre-K through Grade Six. This request was for "complete unedited records" for both student A and student B for the purpose of providing the records to the DRC for legal purposes. It should be noted that the IDEA regulations only refers to the disclosure of "any education records relating to their children that are collected, maintained, or used by the public agency without unnecessary delay and before any meeting regarding an IEP, or any hearing related to disciplinary action, or any due process resolution session, and in no case more than 45 days after the request has been made".

In this case, USD #266 did not consider the emails and call logs of specific staff members as meeting the definition of an "education record". The request was not made prior to an IEP meeting, a hearing related to disciplinary action, or a due process resolution session; therefore, the "without unnecessary delay" and the "45 day requirement" would be applicable. The Assistant Superintendent for Pre-K through Grade Six sent emails clarifying the request and asking how the parent would like to proceed. Records show that the that the same educational records that were sent to USD #230 were emailed to the parent in an email written by the Assistant Superintendent for Pre-K through Grade Six on February 27, 2026. In that same email, the parent was informed that a fee would be charged for the cost to provide the copies of other requested material, including all the emails and call logs from specific staff. On March 20, 2026, less than 45 days from the original request on February 13, 2026, the LEA emailed the parent indicating that 179 pages of educational records had been provided for the students.

Based on the foregoing, the allegation of a violation of special education laws and regulations related to this issue is not substantiated

Right to Appeal

Either party may appeal the findings or conclusions in this report by filing a written notice of appeal with the State Commissioner of Education, ATTN: Special Education and Title Services, Landon State Office Building, 900 SW Jackson Street, Suite 620, Topeka, KS 66612-1212. The notice of appeal may also be filed by email to formalcomplaints@ksde.gov The notice of appeal must be delivered within 10 calendar days from the date of this report.

For further description of the appeals process, see Kansas Administrative Regulations 91-40-51(f).

K.A.R. 91-40-51(f) Appeals.

(1) Any agency or complainant may appeal any of the findings or conclusions of a compliance report prepared by the special education section of the department by filing a written notice of appeal with the state commissioner of education. Each notice shall be filed within 10 days from the date of the report. Each notice shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect.

Upon receiving an appeal, an appeal committee of at least three department of education members shall be appointed by the commissioner to review the report and to consider the information provided by the local education agency, the complainant, or others. The appeal process, including any hearing conducted by the appeal committee, shall be completed within 15 days from the date of receipt of the notice of appeal, and a decision shall be rendered within five days after the appeal process is completed unless the appeal committee determines that exceptional circumstances exist with respect to the particular complaint. In this event, the decision shall be rendered as soon as possible by the appeal committee.

(2) If an appeal committee affirms a compliance report that requires corrective action by an agency, that agency shall initiate the required corrective action immediately. If, after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the agency shall be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following:

(A) The issuance of an accreditation deficiency advisement;
(B) the withholding of state or federal funds otherwise available to the agency;
(C) the award of monetary reimbursement to the complainant; or
(D) any combination of the actions specified in paragraph (f)(2)

INFORME DE QUEJA
PRESENTADA CONTRA
EL DISTRITO ESCOLAR NÚM. 266

EL 7 DE ABRIL DE 2026

FECHA DEL INFORME: 28 DE MAYO DE 2026

Este informe es en respuesta a una queja presentada ante el Departamento de Educación del Estado de Kansas en nombre de ------- y ------- por su madre, -------. En el resto del informe, se hará referencia a ------- como el "estudiante A" y a ------- como la "estudiante B", y se hará referencia a ambos como "los estudiantes". Además, se hará referencia a ------- como "la madre", "la progenitora" o "la reclamante".

El primer idioma del la progenitora no es el inglés, pero ella ha comunicado por escrito durante esta investigación tanto en español como en inglés. El Distrito escolar núm. 266 informa que se proporciona un traductor para todas las reuniones con la madre y se proporcionan documentos escritos tanto en inglés como en español.

Cuando se presenta una queja de educación especial contra un distrito escolar que es miembro de una cooperativa de educación especial o interlocal, o que utiliza cualquier otra agencia pública reconocida por el estado para atender a menores con discapacidades, el término "agencia educativa local (LEA)" en este informe incluirá el distrito escolar, la cooperativa de educación especial o interlocal, y cualquier otra agencia administrativa que sea reconocida por el estado como una agencia administrativa para escuelas públicas de educación primaria o secundaria y que esté atendiendo las necesidades educativas de este estudiante.

En este caso, los estudiantes eran residentes de Maize Public Schools (Distrito escolar núm. 266) que emplea su propio personal para cumplir con los requisitos de la Ley de Educación para Personas con Discapacidades (IDEA). En el resto de este informe, se hará referencia a esta agencia pública responsable como "la LEA" o "el distrito".

Se hará reference al siguiente personal de la LEA involucrado en esta investigación de la siguiente manera:

- Christy Skelton, superintendente adjunta de Servicios Especiales
- Michael Dome, superintendente adjunto de Preescolar a Sexto grado
- Bryan Wilson, director de Servicios Especiales para Grados 7-12
- Lisa Ellis, directora de Servicios Especiales para Educación Infantil y Primaria (ECSE) hasta 6.o grado
- Megan Lavelle, superintendente de Maize Intermediate School

- Chad Cramer, director de Maize Middle School
- Lisa Burgess, subdirectora de Maize Middle School
- Jennifer Fisher, psicóloga escolar
- Dawn Ingram, encargada de datos del Programa de Educación Individualizado (IEP) en el Distrito escolar núm. 266
- April Neal, asistente administrativa en el Distrito escolar núm. 230
- Tatiana Ticas-Guevara, secretaria de Comunicaciones de Maize Intermediate School
- Katie Jennings, encargada de datos en el Distrito escolar núm. 266
- Makayle Overton, administrador de datos en el Distrito escolar núm. 266

El Departamento de Educación del Estado de Kansas (KSDE) permite un plazo de 60 días para investigar una queja y permitir un proceso de apelación desde la fecha en que fue presentada. Una queja se considera presentada en la fecha en que fue recibida por el KSDE. En este caso, el KSDE recibió inicialmente la queja el 7 de abril de 2026.

PRUEBAS REVISADAS

Ambas partes fueron contactadas durante la investigación para recopilar y aclararinformación.

La reclamante solicitó que toda la comunicación se realizara por escrito a través de correo electrónico. Se señala que el primer idioma de la reclamante no es el inglés y, por lo tanto, la comunicación se proporcionó tanto en español como en inglés. El investigador contactó a la reclamante por primera vez el 13 de abril de 2026 y se enviaron preguntas de entrevista a la reclamante el 15 de abril de 2026. La reclamante respondió a estos correos electrónicos y "se opuso al alcance limitado de la investigación" e insistió en que la investigación de la IDEA combinara sus otras preocupaciones relacionadas con la Sección 504 de la Ley de Rehabilitación y la Ley McKinney-Vento contra el Distrito escolar núm. 259 y el Distrito escolar núm. 230. El investigador proporcionó a la reclamante recursos para abordar sus otras preocupaciones; sin embargo, la reclamante continuó "RECHAZANDO formalmente su intento de fragmentar mi investigación" y nunca respondió a las preguntas de laentrevista.

La LEA puso a disposición al siguiente personal escolar de Maize Intermediate School y de Maize Middle School para una entrevista telefónica el 24 de abril de 2026:

- Subdirectora de Servicios Especiales
- Subdirector de Preescolar a Sexto grado
- Directora de Servicios Especiales para ECSE – Grado 7-12
- Directora de Servicios Especiales para ECSE hasta 6.o grado
- Subdirectora de Maize Intermediate School
- Subdirectora de Maize Middle School
- Psicóloga escolar

La documentación escrita fue proporcionada tanto por la LEA como por la reclamante. Se revisó toda la documentación, y la siguiente documentación escrita fue utilizada para considerar el asunto:

- Formulario de Queja del Menor cumplimentado por la madre
- Respuesta a las Alegaciones escrita por la superintendente adjunta de Servicios Especiales el 17 y 21 de abril de 2026
- Informe de Evaluación del Centro de Terapia para la estudiante B escrito el 9 de septiembre de 2025
- Correo electrónico fechado el 15 de octubre de 2025 escrito por la madre al director de Maize Middle School solicitando una evaluación de educación especial
- Notificación previa por escrito (PWN) para la evaluación y solicitud de consentimiento para la estudiante B enviada a la madre el 23 de octubre, el 29 de octubre y el 6 de noviembre de 2025 y firmada por la madre el 19 de noviembre de 2025
- Formulario de Referencia de Educación Especial para el estudiante A fechado el 24 de octubre de 2025
- Solicitud de evaluación y solicitud de consentimiento para el estudiante A enviada a la madre el 29 de octubre y el 19 de noviembre de 2025 y firmada por esta el 19 de noviembre de 2025
- Notas de discusión de la reunión de la madre y el equipo de personal para la estudiante B celebrada el 3 de noviembre de 2025
- Correo electrónico fechado el 5 de noviembre de 2025 escrito por el director de Maize Middle School a la madre que proporciona los expedientes solicitados

INFORMACIÓN GENERAL

Los estudiantes se matricularon en el Distrito escolar núm. 266 entre el 20 de octubre y el 19 de diciembre de 2025. Los estudiantes estaban matriculados anteriormente en el Distrito escolar núm. 259 y fueron transferidos al Distrito escolar núm. 230 después del 19 de diciembre de 2025.

El estudiante A está en el 6o grado y asiste a Maize Intermediate School mientras está matriculado en el Distrito escolar núm. 266. El estudiante A se trasladó al distrito con un Plan 504 y servicios para hablantes de inglés de otras lenguas (ESOL). La madre informa que el estudiante tiene los siguientes diagnósticos médicos y de salud mental: Trastorno por déficit de atención con hiperactividad (TDAH), autismo, asma, prediabetes, hipermetropía y astigmatismo, depresión, ansiedad y la mutación del gen MAPK8IP3.

La estudiante B cursa el 7o grado y asistió a Maize Middle School mientras está matriculada en el Distrito escolar núm. 266. La estudiante B se trasladó al distrito sin servicios especiales y los registros de la Evaluación de Competencia en Lengua Inglesa de Kansas (KELPA) de 2022-23 muestran que fue calificada como competente en inglés. Según el informe de la madre y según señaló la Evaluación Psicológica del Centro Terapéutico fechada el 9 de septiembre de 2025, la estudiante B tiene los siguientes diagnósticos médicos y de salud mental: TDAH y autismo (nivel 2) sin deficiencias intelectuales o del lenguaje.

ASUNTOS INVESTIGADOS

Sobre la base de la queja por escrito, se identificaron e investigaron cuatro asuntos para el estudiante A y cuatro asuntos para la estudiante B.

ESTUDIANTE A

ASUNTO UNO

el Distrito escolar núm. 266, incumpliendo la normativa estatal y federal que aplica la Ley de Educación para Personas con Discapacidades (IDEA), no proporcionó un asiento preferente al estudiante A durante el curso escolar 2025-26.

LEGISLACIÓN APLICABLE

Las normas federales recopiladas en el título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) 300.8(a)(1) establecen que un "menor con discapacidad" debe tener una de las discapacidades contempladas en la IDEA y necesitar educación especial y servicios relacionados a causa de dicha discapacidad".

Las normas federales, recopiladas en el título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) 300.320(a)(4), establecen los requisitos para que los distritos escolares elaboren un IEP en el que se describan la educación especial y los servicios relacionados, así como las ayudas y servicios complementarios que se prestarán al menor o en su nombre, y una declaración de las modificaciones del programa o los apoyos para el personal escolar que se proporcionarán a fin de que el menor pueda: 1) avanzar adecuadamente hacia la consecución de los objetivos anuales; 2) participar en el plan de estudios de educación general y progresar en él; 3) participar en actividades extracurriculares y otras actividades no académicas; y 4) recibir educación y participar junto con otros menores con discapacidades y menores sin discapacidades.

POSICIÓN DE LA RECLAMANTE

La reclamante cree que el centro Distrito escolar núm. 266 debería proporcionar asientos preferentes en el aula al estudiante A en función de sus múltiples diagnósticos médicos y de salud mental.

POSICIÓN DE LA LEA

El Distrito escolar núm. 266 reconoció que el estudiante es un estudiante discapacitado según la Sección 504 de la Ley de Rehabilitación. La LEA informó que se sospechaba que el estudiante A tenía una discapacidad según la ley IDEA y que estaba siendo evaluado para determinar su elegibilidad para un IEP; sin embargo, el estudiante A se transfirió al Distrito escolar núm. 230 antes de que se completara la evaluación inicial de educación especial y se tomara una determinación de elegibilidad. La LEA considera que las inquietudes de la progenitora deberían haberse abordado en el marco de la Sección 504 durante la matriculación del estudiante A en el Distrito escolar núm. 266.

ANÁLISIS: DETERMINACIONES DE HECHOS

La siguiente determinación de hechos se basa en las entrevistas y en la revisión del expediente.

1 La ley IDEA solo establece la jurisdicción para abordar las inquietudes que estén relacionadas con los estudiantes que hayan sido considerados elegibles para recibir servicios en virtud de la ley IDEA.

2 El estudiante A no había sido considerado elegible según la ley IDEA y no tenía un IEP durante el tiempo que estuvo matriculado en el Distrito escolar núm. 266.

CONCLUSIÓN

En este caso, el estudiante A no fue identificado como estudiante con discapacidad según la ley IDEA y no tuvo un IEP mientras estuvo matriculado en el centro Distrito escolar núm. 266. Como tal, esta alegación no entra dentro de la jurisdicción de la ley IDEA. Basándose en lo anterior, la alegación de una violación de las leyes yreglamentos de educación especial relacionados con este asunto no está fundamentada.

ASUNTO DOS

el Distrito escolar núm. 266, incumpliendo la normativa estatal y federal que aplica la Ley de Educación para Personas con Discapacidades (IDEA), no proporcionó el servicio de transporte como servicio complementario al estudiante A durante el curso escolar 2025-26.

LEGISLACIÓN APLICABLE

Las normas federales recopiladas en el título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) 300.8(a)(1) establecen que un "menor con discapacidad" debe tener una de las discapacidades contempladas en la IDEA y necesitar educación especial y servicios relacionados a causa de dicha discapacidad".

Las normas federales, recopiladas en el título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) 300.320(a)(4), establecen los requisitos para que los distritos escolares elaboren un IEP en el que se describan la educación especial y los servicios relacionados, así como las ayudas y servicios complementarios que se prestarán al menor o en su nombre, y una declaración de las modificaciones del programa o los apoyos para el personal escolar que se proporcionarán a fin de que el menor pueda: 1) avanzar adecuadamente hacia la consecución de los objetivos anuales; 2) participar en el plan de estudios de educación general y progresar en él; 3) participar en actividades extracurriculares y otras actividades no académicas; y 4) recibir educación y participar junto con otros menores con discapacidades y menores sin discapacidades.

Las normas federales recopiladas en el título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) 300.34(a) y (c)(16) establecen que el transporte puede considerarse un servicio relacionado en virtud de la IDEA y que dicho transporte incluye: 1) los traslados hacia y desde el colegio y entre centros educativos; 2) los traslados dentro y en los alrededores de los edificios escolares; y 3) el equipamiento especializado (como autobuses especiales o adaptados, elevadores y rampas), si es necesario para proporcionar transporte especial a un menor con discapacidad.

POSICIÓN DE LA RECLAMANTE

Basándose en los múltiples diagnósticos médicos y de salud mental del estudiante A, la reclamante considera que el Distrito escolar núm. 266 debería proporcionar transporte como servicio relacionado para el estudiante A.

POSICIÓN DE LA LEA

El Distrito escolar núm. 266 reconoció que el estudiante es un estudiante discapacitado según la Sección 504 de la Ley de Rehabilitación. La LEA informó que se sospechaba que el estudiante A tenía una discapacidad según la ley IDEA y que estaba siendo evaluado para determinar su elegibilidad para un IEP; sin embargo, el estudiante A se transfirió al Distrito escolar núm. 230 antes de que se completara la evaluación inicial de educación especial y se tomara una determinación de elegibilidad. La LEA considera que las inquietudes de la progenitora deberían haberse abordado en el marco de la Sección 504 durante la matriculación del estudiante A en el Distrito escolar núm. 266.

ANÁLISIS: DETERMINACIONES DE HECHOS

La siguiente determinación de hechos se basa en las entrevistas y en la revisión del expediente.

1. El transporte puede ser considerado como un servicio relacionado en un IEP bajo la IDEA.
2. La ley IDEA solo establece la jurisdicción para abordar las inquietudes que estén relacionadas con los estudiantes que hayan sido considerados elegibles para recibir servicios en virtud de la ley IDEA.
3. El estudiante A no había sido considerado elegible según la ley IDEA y no tenía un IEP durante el tiempo que estuvo matriculado en el Distrito escolar núm. 266.

CONCLUSIÓN

En este caso, el estudiante A no fue identificado como estudiante con discapacidad según la ley IDEA y no tuvo un IEP mientras estuvo matriculado en el centro Distrito escolar núm. 266. Como tal, esta alegación no entra dentro de la jurisdicción de la ley IDEA. Basándose en lo anterior, la alegación de una violación de las leyes y reglamentos de educación especial relacionados con este asunto no está fundamentada.

ASUNTO TRES

el Distrito escolar núm. 266, incumpliendo la normativa estatal y federal que aplica la Ley de Educación para Personas con Discapacidades (IDEA), no llevó a cabo una evaluación exhaustiva del estudiante A durante los últimos 12 meses, concretamente al no tener en cuenta los informes médicos y la información facilitada por la progenitora.

LEGISLACIÓN APLICABLE

Las normas federales recopiladas en el título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) § 300.301(a) exigen que las agencias públicas realicen una evaluación inicial completa e individualizada antes de la prestación inicial de educación especial y servicios relacionados a un menor con discapacidad, y las normas federales recopiladas en el título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) §300.301(b) permiten que tanto los progenitores del menor como una agencia pública puedan solicitar el inicio de una evaluación inicial para determinar si el menor tiene una discapacidad.

Las normas federales recopiladas en el título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) § 300.304(b) exige que la evaluación utilice diversas herramientas y estrategias de evaluación para recopilar información relevante sobre el funcionamiento, el desarrollo y el rendimiento académico del menor, incluida la información facilitada por los progenitores, que pueda ayudar a determinar si el menor tiene una discapacidad y el contenido de su IEP, incluida la información relacionada con la posibilidad de que el menor participe y progrese en el plan de estudios de educación general.

Las normas federales recopiladas en el artículo título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) § 300.503(a) exigen que los distritos escolares proporcionen a los progenitores un aviso por escrito con una antelación razonable antes de proponer o denegar el inicio o la modificación de la identificación, la evaluación, la asignación educativa o la prestación de una educación pública gratuita y adecuada (FAPE) al estudiante, y las normas federales recopiladas en el artículo título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) § 300.304(a) exigen que la notificación previa por escrito describa cualquier procedimiento de evaluación que el organismo se proponga llevar a cabo.

Las normas federales recopiladas en el artículo título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) §300.301(c)(1) exigen que la evaluación inicial se lleve a cabo en un plazo de 60 días a partir de la recepción del consentimiento de los progenitores para la evaluación, y las normas federales recopiladas en el artículo título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) §300.301(c)(2) exigen que los procedimientos de evaluación determinen las necesidades educativas del menor y si este es un menor con una discapacidad que se ajusta a alguna de las categorías de elegibilidad de la IDEA y, debido a dicha discapacidad, necesita educación especial y servicios relacionados.

Las normas federales recopiladas en el título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) §300.301(d), permiten excepciones al plazo de 60 días para completar la evaluación si los progenitores, de forma reiterada, no garantizan la disponibilidad del menor para la evaluación o se niegan a que el menor se someta a la evaluación, o si el menor realiza la inscripción en un centro educativo de otra agencia pública antes de que la agencia pública anterior del menor haya determinado si este es un menor con discapacidad y necesita educación especial y servicios relacionados.

POSICIÓN DE LA RECLAMANTE

La reclamante informó que solicitó que se evaluara al estudiante A para educación especial cuando lo matriculó en el Distrito escolar núm. 266. Cree que el estudiante debería ser elegible para un IEP debido a sus múltiples diagnósticos médicos y de salud mental. La madre indicó que el Distrito escolar núm. 266 no tuvo en cuenta las preocupaciones médicas y de salud mental del estudiante A al realizar la evaluación inicial de educación especial.

POSICIÓN DE LA LEA

La LEA informó que se había reunido con la progenitora para hablar de sus preocupaciones y tuvo en cuenta la información médica y de salud mental facilitada por la progenitora. Esta consideración dio lugar a que la LEA propusiera una evaluación exhaustiva que incluía la recopilación de datos nuevos y existentes en el ámbito de la salud y la capacidad motriz. El Distrito escolar núm. 266 reconoció que la evaluación inicial de educación especial para el estudiante A no se completó antes de su traslado al Distrito escolar núm. 230.

ANÁLISIS: DETERMINACIONES DE HECHOS

La siguiente determinación de hechos se basa en las entrevistas y en la revisión del expediente.

1. El 15 de octubre de 2025, la progenitora envió un correo electrónico a la directora de Servicios Especiales para ECSE hasta 6.o grado y a la subdirectora de Maize Intermediate School en el que solicitaba una evaluación inicial de educación especial para el estudiante A.

2. El estudiante A se matriculó en el Distrito escolar núm. 266 el 20 de octubre de 2025.

3. La subdirectora de Maize Intermediate School envió un correo electrónico a la madre el 20 de octubre de 2025 donde acusaba recibo de la solicitud y programaba una reunión para discutir la remisión.

4. Esta reunión de remisión se celebró el 24 de octubre de 2025 con la asistencia de la madre. La remisión señalaba déficits académicos y preocupaciones en las áreas de habla/lenguaje y de salud/médica.

5. El 29 de octubre de 2025 se proporcionó a la madre una notificación previa por escrito en la que se proponía llevar a cabo una evaluación inicial de educación especial en las áreas de visión, audición, salud/capacidad motriz, rendimiento académico, inteligencia general, habilidades de comunicación y estado social/emocional/conductual.

6. El 19 de noviembre de 2025 se entregó a la madre una segunda copia de la notificación previa por escrito en la que se proponía la realización de la evaluación inicial, y la madre dio su consentimiento por escrito para la evaluación de educación especial en esa misma fecha.

7. El registro de asistencia del estudiante A muestra que entre el 19 de noviembre de 2025, cuando se concedió el consentimiento, y el 19 de diciembre de 2025, cuando el estudiante se trasladó al Distrito escolar núm. 230, solo hubo 15 días lectivos y el estudiante asistió cuatro de esos días lectivos.

8. Los correos electrónicos fechados el 2 de diciembre de 2025 entre el encargado de datos del IEP del Distrito escolar núm. 266 y la asistente administrativa del Distrito escolar núm. 230 muestran que se hizo una solicitud de expedientes de educación especial y que los expedientes se enviaron en esa fecha. El correo electrónico escrito por el administrador de datos del IEP decía: "Adjuntamos nuestro formulario de remisión y un consentimiento firmado para la evaluación del [estudiante A]. Parece que estábamos en las primeras fases de evaluación para servicios especiales".

CONCLUSIÓN

En este caso, la madre realizó una solicitud de evaluación inicial de educación especial antes de la inscripción del estudiante en la LEA. Después de la inscripción del estudiante A el 20 de octubre de 2025, la LEA se reunió con la madre el 24 de octubre de 2025 para hablar de sus preocupaciones y recabar su opinión. Basándose en esa reunión, la LEA proporcionó a la madre una notificación previa por escrito en la que proponía una evaluación en las áreas de visión, audición, salud/capacidad motriz, rendimiento académico, inteligencia general, habilidades de comunicación y estado social/emocional/conductual el 29 de octubre de 2025. La madre dio su consentimiento por escrito para la evaluación propuesta el 19 de noviembre de 2025; sin embargo, el estudiante A solo asistió cuatro días a la escuela entre esa fecha y el 19 de diciembre de 2025, cuando se trasladó al Distrito escolar núm. 230.

Basándose en lo anterior, el Distrito escolar núm. 266 propuso una evaluación exhaustiva para el estudiante A, pero no pudo completar la evaluación inicial de educación especial debido a que el estudiante solo asistió a la escuela 4 días lectivos después de que los padres dieran su consentimiento por escrito. Además, el estudiante A se trasladó a otra agencia pública antes de que finalizara el plazo de 60 días. A continuación, el Distrito escolar núm. 266 notificó y proporcionó los expedientes de educación especial al Distrito escolar núm. 230 indicando que se estaba realizando una evaluación pero que aún no se había completado. Como tal, la alegación de una violación de las leyes y reglamentos de educación especial relacionados con este asunto no está fundamentada.

ASUNTO CUATRO

el Distrito escolar núm. 266, incumpliendo la normativa estatal y federal que aplica la Ley de Educación para Personas con Discapacidades (IDEA), no respondió adecuadamente a una solicitud de expedientes del estudiante A presentada por la Kansas Virtual Academy y la madre durante el curso escolar 2025-26.

LEGISLACIÓN APLICABLE

Con el fin de facilitar la transición de un menor con discapacidad o del que se sospeche que tiene una discapacidad a un nueva agencia pública durante el curso escolar, las normas federales recopiladas el título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) §300.323(g)(2) exigen que la agencia pública anterior en la que estaba inscrito el menor adopte las medidas razonables para responder sin demora a la solicitud de la nueva agencia pública.

Las normas federales recopiladas en el título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) §300.613(a) exigen que cada agencia pública permita a los progenitores inspeccionar y revisar cualquier expediente educativo relativo a sus menores que dicho organismo recopile, conserve o utilice, sin demoras innecesarias y antes de cualquier reunión relativa a un IEP, o de cualquier audiencia relacionada con medidas disciplinarias, o de una sesión de resolución relacionada con el debido proceso, y en ningún caso más de 45 días después de que se haya presentado la solicitud.

Las normas federales recopiladas en el título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) § 300.611(b) establecen que por "expedientes académicos" se entiende el tipo de expedientes incluidos en la definición de "expedientes académicos" del título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (CFR), parte 99 (la normativa de aplicación de la Ley de Derechos Educativos y Privacidad de la Familia de 1974, 20 U.S.C. 1232g [FERPA])". Las normas federales recopiladas en el título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) § 99.3 definen los "expedientes académicos" como aquellos documentos que guardan relación directa con un estudiante y que son conservados por una agencia o una institución educativa.

Las normas federales recopiladas en el título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) § 300.613(b)(2) otorgan a los progenitores el derecho a solicitar que la agencia pública proporcione copias de los expedientes que contengan dicha información, si el hecho de no proporcionar dichas copias impidiera de manera eficaz que el padre o la madre ejerciera el derecho a examinar y revisar los expedientes. Las normas federales recopiladas en el título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) § 300.617(a) permiten a las agencias públicas cobrar una tarifa por las copias de los expedientes, siempre que dicha tarifa no impida de hecho a los progenitores ejercer su derecho a realizar inspecciones y revisar dichos expedientes.

POSICIÓN DE LA RECLAMANTE

La reclamante denunció que el centro Distrito escolar núm. 266 no respondió oportunamente a la solicitud de expedientes realizada por el centro Distrito escolar núm. 230 cuando el estudiante A se trasladó el 19 de diciembre de 2025. Esto causó una interrupción en la prestación de servicios especiales al estudiante A. Además, la madre declaró que el Distrito escolar no respondió a su solicitud de copias de todos los expedientes académicos del estudiante A y le cobró por las copias de dichos expedientes.

POSICIÓN DE LA LEA

La LEA informó que respondió a la solicitud de expedientes del estudiante A del Distrito escolar núm. 230 el mismo día en que la recibió. La solicitud de expedientes a cargo de la madre se hizo después de que la familia se hubiera mudado fuera de los límites del distrito. La LEA señaló que esta solicitud era para "todos los expedientes" e incluía específicamente correos electrónicos de miembros concretos del personal. La LEA envió a la madre los mismos expedientes educativos que se enviaron al Distrito escolar núm. 230 pero indicó que los correos electrónicos no eran guardados ni mantenidos por el distrito como registros educativos; sin embargo, estos correos podrían ser localizados y enviados a la madre si pagaba una tarifa. La madre no accedió a pagar la tarifa y los correos electrónicos no se recuperaron.

ANÁLISIS: DETERMINACIONES DE HECHOS

La siguiente determinación de hechos se basa en las entrevistas y en la revisión del expediente.

1. La Kansas Virtual School es un programa educativo administrado por el Distrito escolar núm. 230.
2. Como se señala en las determinaciones del estudiante A en el Asunto Tres, n.o 8, los expedientes muestran que el Distrito escolar núm. 230 solicitó los expedientes de educación especial del estudiante A el 2 de diciembre de 2025 y esos expedientes se enviaron en la misma fecha notificando a la nueva LEA que se sospechaba que el estudiante tenía una discapacidad y que estaba en proceso de ser evaluado para determinar su elegibilidad para un IEP y servicios relacionados, pero que la elegibilidad aún no había sido determinada.
3. La madre envió un correo electrónico al superintendente adjunto de Preescolar a Sexto grado el 13 de febrero de 2026 en el que indicaba: "POR LO TANTO, EXIJO LO SIGUIENTE PARA EL MARTES A LAS 4 P. M. : Expedientes completos sin editar de mis tres hijos (incluidos los resultados de [hermano] y las notas de enfermería de [estudiante B]. Todas las comunicaciones internas y externas (correos electrónicos y expedientes de llamadas) de [la Secretaria de Comunicaciones de Maize Intermediate School], [la subdirectora de Maize Intermediate School], [la psicóloga escolar] y la enfermera escolar, incluida la promesa por escrito incumplida de un intérprete. [Subdirector de Preescolar a Sexto grado], espero que entregue estas pruebas dentro del plazo establecido para que mis representantes legales en el DRC [Centro de Derechos de Personas con Discapacidades] puedan proceder con el expediente completo".
4. El superintendente adjunto de Preescolar a Sexto grado respondió a la madre el 17 de febrero de 2026 en un correo electrónico en el que afirmaba: "Mantenemos algunos de los documentos que solicita dentro de nuestro sistema de información estudiantil. Estos expedientes pueden recuperarse y facilitarse o ponerse a su disposición con relativa rapidez. Podemos enviarle estos documentos por correo certificado o ponerlos a su disposición en nuestro Centro de Apoyo a la Educación para que los recupere a continuación sin costo alguno. En este paquete se incluirían los documentos que otra escuela habría recibido como parte de una solicitud de expedientes. Su solicitud de correspondencia electrónica y otra documentación requiere una búsqueda y revisión más exhaustivas, lo que llevará un tiempo adicional. Estas búsquedas más complejas estarán sujetas a las tarifas de expediente aplicables, permitidas en virtud de la legislación de Kansas. Normalmente, el distrito intentará estimar los gastos relacionados y se lo notificará con antelación para ver si aún desea seguir adelante con los elementos sujetos a tarifas. Hágame saber si desea que proceda a averiguar cuál sería el costo; entonces solicitaríamos que las tarifas se abonaran por adelantado en forma de depósito. Hágame saber cómo le gustaría proceder".

5. El 20 de febrero de 2026, el superintendente adjunto de Preescolar a Sexto Grado volvió a enviar un correo electrónico a la madre para preguntarle cómo le gustaría proceder con la solicitud de expedientes.
6. El 27 de febrero de 2026, el superintendente adjunto de Preescolar a Sexto Grado envió un correo electrónico a la madre en el que le decía: "Mantenemos algunos de los documentos que usted solicitó dentro de nuestro sistema de información estudiantil. He adjuntado estos documentos a esta respuesta. Su solicitud de correspondencia electrónica y otros expedientes requiere una búsqueda y revisión más exhaustivas, lo que llevará un tiempo adicional. Estas búsquedas más amplias están sujetas a las tarifas aplicables a los expedientes permitidas en virtud de la legislación de Kansas. Estimamos que el costo de su solicitud será de $120, que deberán abonarse por adelantado en concepto de depósito".
7. El 6 de marzo de 2026, la madre envió un correo electrónico al superintendente adjunto de Preescolar a Sexto Grado en el que solicitaba copias del IEP del estudiante A. El superintendente adjunto de Preescolar a Sexto Grado respondió el 11 de marzo de 2026 y declaró: "No había ningún IEP en vigor para ninguno de sus hijos en el momento en que usted los retiró del Maize School District".
8. El 26 de marzo de 2026, el superintendente adjunto de Preescolar a Sexto Grado envió un correo electrónico a la madre y le dijo: "Hasta la fecha se le han enviado 179 páginas de expedientes. Estos incluyen expedientes académicos, expedientes de asistencia, informes de exámenes, documentos recibidos del Distrito escolar núm. 259 como parte de la solicitud de expedientes el 16 de octubre de 2025, expedientes de salud, el plan 504 para [estudiante A] y la información de la evaluación 504 para [estudiante B].

CONCLUSIÓN

En este caso, hubo dos solicitudes distintas de los expedientes escolares del estudiante A. La primera solicitud fue el correo electrónico del Distrito escolar núm. 230 del 2 de diciembre de 2025 que soilicitaba copias de los expedientes de educación especial del Distrito escolar núm. 266. La encargada de los datos del IEP en el Distrito escolar núm. 266 respondió a esta solicitud sin demora el 2 de diciembre de 2025, envió por correo electrónico los expedientes de educación especial y notificó al Distrito escolar núm. 230 que se sospechaba que el estudiante A tenía una discapacidad y que estaba siendo evaluado para determinar su elegibilidad para un IEP.

La segunda solicitud fue hecha por la madre el 13 de febrero de 2026 en un correo electrónico al superintendente adjunto de Preescolar a Sexto Grado. Esta solicitud era para "expedientes completos sin editar" tanto para el estudiante A como para la estudiante B con el fin de proporcionar los expedientes al DRC para fines legales. Debe tenerse en cuenta que la normativa en virtud de la IDEA solo hace referencia a la divulgación de "cualquier expediente educativo relativo a sus hijos que sea recopilado, conservado o utilizado por la agencia pública sin demora innecesaria y antes de cualquier reunión relativa a un IEP, o cualquier audiencia relacionada con una medida disciplinaria, o cualquier sesión de resolución de garantías procesales, y en ningún caso más de 45 días después de que se haya realizado la solicitud".

En este caso, el Distrito escolar núm. 266 no consideró que los correos electrónicos y los expedientes de llamadas de determinados miembros del personal cumplieran la definición de "expediente educativo". La solicitud no se hizo antes de una reunión del IEP, una audiencia relacionada con una medida disciplinaria o una sesión de resolución del debido proceso; por lo tanto, serían aplicables el "sin demora innecesaria" y el "requisito de los 45 días". El superintendente adjunto de Preescolar a Sexto Grado envió correos electrónicos donde aclaraba la solicitud y preguntaba cómo quería proceder la progenitora. Los expedientes muestran que los mismos expedientes educativos que fueron enviados al Distrito escolar núm. 230 fueron enviados a la madre en un correo electrónico escrito por el superintendente adjunto de Preescolar a Sexto Grado el 27 de febrero de 2026. En ese mismo correo electrónico, se informó a la madre de que se les cobraría una tarifa por el costo de proporcionar las copias de otro material solicitado, incluidos todos los correos electrónicos y expedientes de llamadas de personal específico. El 20 de marzo de 2026, menos de 45 días desde la solicitud original del 13 de febrero de 2026, la LEA envió un correo electrónico a la madre en el que indicaba que se habían proporcionado 179 páginas de expedientes académicos de los estudiantes.

Sobre la base de lo anterior, la alegación de una violación de las leyes y reglamentos de educación especial relacionados con este asunto no está fundamentada.

ESTUDIANTE B

ASUNTO UNO

el Distrito escolar núm. 266, incumpliendo la normativa estatal y federal que aplica la Ley de Educación para Personas con Discapacidades (IDEA), no respondió adecuadamente a la solicitud de la madre de que se realizara una evaluación de educación especial a la estudiante B en octubre de 2025.

LEGISLACIÓN APLICABLE

Las normas federales recopiladas en el título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) § 300.301(a) exigen que las agencias públicas realicen una evaluación inicial completa e individualizada antes de la prestación inicial de educación especial y servicios relacionados a un menor con discapacidad, y las normas federales recopiladas en el título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) §300.301(b) permiten que tanto los progenitores del menor como una agencia pública puedan solicitar el inicio de una evaluación inicial para determinar si el menor tiene una discapacidad.

El Manual del Proceso de Educación Especial de Kansas en el capítulo 2, sección E: Remisión para una evaluación inicial establece lo siguiente: "La escuela debe responder a la solicitud en un plazo razonable, que ha sido interpretado por el Departamento de Educación del Estado de Kansas (KSDE) como no superior a 15 días lectivos, a menos que existan circunstancias inusuales".

Los reglamentos federales de título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) §300. 503(a) exigen que los distritos escolares notifiquen previamente a la madre por escrito y con una antelación razonable antes de proponer o rechazar el inicio o el cambio de la identificación, la evaluación, la colocación educativa o la provisión de FAPE al estudiante.

POSICIÓN DE LA RECLAMANTE

La reclamante cree que el Distrito escolar núm. 266 no respondió a su solicitud de una evaluación inicial de educación especial para la estudiante B de manera oportuna.

POSICIÓN DE LA LEA

El Distrito escolar núm. 266 informó que respondió a la solicitud de la madre de una evaluación de educación especial para la estudiante B dentro de los plazos requeridos establecidos por el KSDE. La LEA señaló que la solicitud de la madre se hizo antes de que la estudiante se matriculara en el distrito y que se actuó en consecuencia en cuanto la estudiante B se matriculó en la Maize Middle School.

ANÁLISIS: DETERMINACIONES DE HECHOS

La siguiente determinación de hechos se basa en las entrevistas y en la revisión del expediente.

1. La madre hizo la solicitud de una evaluación inicial de educación especial en un correo electrónico escrito al director de Maize Middle School el 15 de octubre de 2025.
2. Los expedientes de matriculación muestran que la estudiante B se matriculó en Maize Middle School el 20 de octubre de 2025.
3. El 23 de octubre de 2025, la subdirectora de Maize Middle School rellenó un formulario de remisión a educación especial para la estudiante B y se envió por correo electrónico a la madre un aviso previo por escrito en el que se proponía una evaluación inicial de educación especial en todas las áreas.
4. Después de una llamada telefónica con la madre el 27 de octubre de 2025, el director de Maize Middle School envió un correo electrónico a la madre donde indicaba que la LEA proponía realizar una evaluación integral de educación especial y que el 23 de octubre de 2025 se había enviado por correo electrónico a la madre un aviso previo por escrito que proponía esta evaluación. El correo electrónico también señalaba que se había programado una reunión el 29 de octubre de 2025 para seguir discutiendo la Evaluación Psicológica de la estudiante B que la madre habían proporcionado a la enfermera escolar.

5. La madre no pudo asistir a la reunión y se reprogramó otra para el 3 de noviembre de 2025. La LEA envió otra copia de la notificación previa por escrito en la que se proponía la evaluación inicial de educación especial a la madre el 29 de octubre de 2025.
6. Otra notificación previa por escrito en la que se proponía la evaluación inicial de educación especial a la madre se envió el 6 de noviembre de 2025.
7. La documentación muestra que la madre dio su consentimiento por escrito para la evaluación inicial de educación especial de la estudiante B el 19 de noviembre de 2025.

CONCLUSIÓN

El Distrito escolar núm. 266 respondió a la solicitud de la madre de una evaluación inicial de educación especial proporcionándoles una notificación previa por escrito en la que se les proponía la evaluación inicial de educación especial el 23 de octubre, el 29 de octubre y de nuevo el 6 de noviembre de 2025. Basándose en la fecha de inscripción de la estudiante B, el 15o día lectivo fue el 7 de noviembre de 2025. En este caso, se proporcionaron a la madre tres notificaciones previas por escrito separadas en las que se proponía una evaluación inicial de educación especial para la estudiante B dentro del plazo de 15 días escolares exigido por el KSDE.

Sobre la base de lo anterior, la alegación de una violación de las leyes y reglamentos de educación especial relacionados con este asunto no está fundamentada.

ASUNTO DOS

el Distrito escolar núm. 266, incumpliendo la normativa estatal y federal que aplica la Ley de Educación para Personas con Discapacidades (IDEA), no proporcionó las adaptaciones necesarias a la estudiante B durante el curso 2025-26, concretamente el uso de auriculares con cancelación de ruido y la salida anticipada de clase para evitar los pasillos abarrotados.

LEGISLACIÓN APLICABLE

Las normas federales recopiladas en el título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) 300.8(a)(1) establecen que un "menor con discapacidad" debe tener una de las discapacidades contempladas en la IDEA y necesitar educación especial y servicios relacionados a causa de dicha discapacidad".

Las normas federales en título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) §300.320(a)(4) exige que los IEP incluyan una declaración de la educación especial y los servicios relacionados, así como de las ayudas y servicios complementarios, basados, en la medida de lo posible, en investigaciones revisadas por pares, que se proporcionarán al menor o en su nombre, y una declaración de las modificaciones del programa o los apoyos para el personal escolar que se proporcionarán a fin de que el menor pueda avanzar adecuadamente hacia el logro de las metas anuales; para que se integre y progrese en el plan de estudios de educación general y participe en actividades extracurriculares y otras actividades no académicas; y para que reciba educación y participe junto con otros menores con discapacidades y menores sin discapacidades.

POSICIÓN DE LA RECLAMANTE

La reclamante cree que el centro Distrito escolar núm. 266 debería proporcionar a la estudiante B auriculares con cancelación de ruido en el aula y salir antes de clase para evitar los pasillos abarrotados, teniendo en cuenta sus múltiples diagnósticos médicos.

POSICIÓN DE LA LEA

El Distrito escolar núm. 266 informó que la estudiante B no fue identificada como estudiante con discapacidad según la ley IDEA mientras estuvo matriculada en el distrito. Como tal, la LEA no tenía obligación de proporcionar las adaptaciones solicitadas por la madre.

ANÁLISIS: DETERMINACIONES DE HECHOS

La siguiente determinación de hechos se basa en las entrevistas y en la revisión del expediente.

1. La ley IDEA solo establece la jurisdicción para abordar las inquietudes que estén relacionadas con los estudiantes que hayan sido considerados elegibles para recibir servicios en virtud de la ley IDEA.
2. La estudiante B no había sido considerada elegible en virtud de la ley IDEA y no tenía un IEP durante el tiempo que estuvo matriculada en el centro Distrito escolar núm. 266.

CONCLUSIÓN

En este caso, la estudiante B no fue identificada como estudiante con discapacidad según la ley IDEA y no tuvo un IEP mientras estuvo matriculada en el centro Distrito escolar núm. 266. Como tal, esta alegación no entra dentro de la jurisdicción de la ley IDEA. Basándose en lo anterior, la alegación de una violación de las leyes y reglamentos de educación especial relacionados con este asunto no está fundamentada.

ASUNTO TRES

el Distrito escolar núm. 266, incumpliendo la normativa estatal y federal que aplica la Ley de Educación para Personas con Discapacidades (IDEA), no llevó a cabo una evaluación exhaustiva de la estudiante B durante los últimos 12 meses, concretamente al no tener en cuenta los informes médicos y la información facilitada por la progenitora.

LEGISLACIÓN APLICABLE

Las normas federales recopiladas en el título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) § 300.301(a) exigen que las agencias públicas realicen una evaluación inicial completa e individualizada antes de la prestación inicial de educación especial y servicios relacionados a un menor con discapacidad, y las normas federales recopiladas en el título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) §300.301(b) permiten que tanto los progenitores del menor como una agencia pública puedan solicitar el inicio de una evaluación inicial para determinar si el menor tiene una discapacidad.

Las normas federales recopiladas en el título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) § 300.304(b) exige que la evaluación utilice diversas herramientas y estrategias de evaluación para recopilar información relevante sobre el funcionamiento, el desarrollo y el rendimiento académico del menor, incluida la información facilitada por los progenitores, que pueda ayudar a determinar si el menor tiene una discapacidad y el contenido de su IEP, incluida la información relacionada con la posibilidad de que el menor participe y progrese en el plan de estudios de educación general.

Las normas federales recopiladas en el artículo título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) § 300.503(a) exigen que los distritos escolares proporcionen a los progenitores un aviso por escrito con una antelación razonable antes de proponer o denegar el inicio o la modificación de la identificación, la evaluación, la asignación educativa o la prestación de una educación pública gratuita y adecuada (FAPE) al estudiante, y las normas federales recopiladas en el artículo título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) § 300.304(a) exigen que la notificación previa por escrito describa cualquier procedimiento de evaluación que el organismo se proponga llevar a cabo.

Las normas federales recopiladas en el artículo título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) §300.301(c)(1) exigen que la evaluación inicial se lleve a cabo en un plazo de 60 días a partir de la recepción del consentimiento de los progenitores para la evaluación, y las normas federales recopiladas en el artículo título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) §300.301(c)(2) exigen que los procedimientos de evaluación determinen las necesidades educativas del menor y si este es un menor con una discapacidad que se ajusta a alguna de las categorías de elegibilidad de la IDEA y, debido a dicha discapacidad, necesita educación especial y servicios relacionados.

Las normas federales recopiladas en el título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) §300.301(d), permiten excepciones al plazo de 60 días para completar la evaluación si los progenitores, de forma reiterada, no garantizan la disponibilidad del menor para la evaluación o se niegan a que el menor se someta a la evaluación, o si el menor realiza la inscripción en un centro educativo de otra agencia pública antes de que la agencia pública anterior del menor haya determinado si este es un menor con discapacidad y necesita educación especial y servicios relacionados.

POSICIÓN DE LA RECLAMANTE

La reclamante informó que había solicitado que se evaluara a la estudiante B para educación especial y cree que la estudiante debería tener derecho a un IEP debido a sus múltiples diagnósticos médicos y de salud mental. La madre indicó que el Distrito escolar núm. 266 no tuvo en cuenta las preocupaciones médicas y de salud mental de la estudiante B al realizar la evaluación inicial de educación especial.

POSICIÓN DE LA LEA

La LEA informó que se había reunido con la progenitora para hablar de sus preocupaciones y tuvo en cuenta la información médica y de salud mental facilitada por la progenitora. El Distrito escolar núm. 266 reconoció que la evaluación inicial de educación especial de la estudiante B no se completó antes de su traslado al Distrito escolar núm. 230.

ANÁLISIS: DETERMINACIONES DE HECHOS

La siguiente determinación de hechos se basa en las entrevistas y en la revisión del expediente.

1. Las determinaciones del Asunto Uno se incorporan aquí como referencia.
2. La notificación previa por escrito con fecha del 23 de octubre de 2025 propone recopilar datos nuevos y existentes en las siguientes áreas: visión, audición, salud/capacidad motriz, inteligencia general, estado social/emocional/estado conductual, rendimiento académico, habilidades de comunicación y habilidades de transición.
3. La documentación de inscripción muestra que la estudiante B fue transferida al Distrito escolar núm. 230 el 19 de diciembre de 2025.
4. Entre el 19 de noviembre de 2025, cuando se concedió el consentimiento para la evaluación inicial de educación especial de la estudiante B, y el 19 de diciembre de 2025, cuando la estudiante B se trasladó al Distrito escolar núm. 230, solo hubo 15 días lectivos.
5. El 2 de diciembre de 2025, la asistente administrativa del Distrito escolar núm. 230 envió un correo electrónico y solicitó los expedientes académicos de la estudiante B. El administrador de datos del Distrito escolar núm. 266 envió los expedientes educativos, incluidos los de educación especial, en esa misma fecha.
6. La encargada de datos del centro Distrito escolar núm. 266 volvió a enviar los expedientes educativos especiales de la estudiante B, incluida la notificación previa por escrito firmada para la evaluación inicial de educación especial, a la asistente administrativa del Distrito escolar núm. 230.

CONCLUSIÓN

En este caso, la madre realizó una solicitud de evaluación inicial de educación especial antes de la inscripción de la estudiante B en la LEA. Después de la inscripción de la estudiante B el 20 de octubre de 2025, la LEA realizó una remisión para una evaluación inicial de educación especial el 23 de octubre de 2025 y proporcionó a la madre un aviso previo por escrito en el que proponía una evaluación integral de educación especial en las siguientes áreas: visión, audición, salud/capacidad motriz, rendimiento académico, inteligencia general, habilidades de comunicación, estado social/emocional/conductual y habilidades de transición en esa misma fecha. El 27 de octubre de 2025, la LEA propuso reunirse el 29 de octubre de 2025 con la madre para revisar sus inquietudes y la evaluación psicológica de la estudiante B realizada por el Centro de Terapia. Aunque la madre no pudo reunirse ese día, se le envió otra copia de la notificación previa por escrito en la que se le proponía la evaluación inicial de educación especial el 29 de octubre de 2025. La madre se reunió con el personal de la LEA el 3 de octubre de 2025 y se le proporcionó una tercera copia de la notificación previa por escrito por correo electrónico. La madre dio su consentimiento por escrito para la evaluación propuesta el 19 de noviembre de 2025; sin embargo, solo transcurrieron 15 días escolares entre esa fecha y el 19 de diciembre de 2025, cuando se trasladó al Distrito escolar núm. 230. El 2 de diciembre y de nuevo el 10 de diciembre de 2025, el Distrito escolar núm. 266 proporcionó al Distrito escolar núm. 230 los expedientes educativos de la estudiante, que incluían una copia de la notificación previa por escrito firmada para la evaluación inicial de educación especial. Basándose en lo anterior, el Distrito escolar núm. 266 propuso una evaluación exhaustiva para la estudiante B, pero no pudo completar la evaluación inicial de educación especial debido a que el estudiante se trasladó a otra agencia pública antes de que finalizara el plazo de 60 días. El Distrito escolar núm. 266 proporcionó los expedientes de educación especial al Distrito escolar núm. 230 el 10 de diciembre de 2025 para que la nueva LEA pudiera proceder a la evaluación inicial de educación especial para determinar la elegibilidad. Por lo tanto, la acusación de violación de las leyes y reglamentos de educación especial relacionada con este asunto no está fundamentada.

ASUNTO CUATRO

el Distrito escolar núm. 266, incumpliendo la normativa estatal y federal que aplica la Ley de Educación para Personas con Discapacidades (IDEA), no respondió adecuadamente a una solicitud de expedientes de la estudiante B presentada por la Kansas Virtual Academy y la madre durante el curso escolar 2025-26.

LEGISLACIÓN APLICABLE

Con el fin de facilitar la transición de un menor con discapacidad o del que se sospeche que tiene una discapacidad a un nueva agencia pública durante el curso escolar, las normas federales recopiladas el título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) §300.323(g)(2) exigen que la agencia pública anterior en la que estaba inscrito el menor adopte las medidas razonables para responder sin demora a la solicitud de la nueva agencia pública.

Las normas federales recopiladas en el título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) §300.613(a) exigen que cada agencia pública permita a los progenitores inspeccionar y revisar cualquier expediente educativo relativo a sus menores que dicho organismo recopile, conserve o utilice, sin demoras innecesarias y antes de cualquier reunión relativa a un IEP, o de cualquier audiencia relacionada con medidas disciplinarias, o de una sesión de resolución relacionada con el debido proceso, y en ningún caso más de 45 días después de que se haya presentado la solicitud.

Las normas federales recopiladas en el título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) § 300.611(b) establecen que por "expedientes académicos" se entiende el tipo de expedientes incluidos en la definición de "expedientes académicos" del título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (CFR), parte 99 (la normativa de aplicación de la Ley de Derechos Educativos y Privacidad de la Familia de 1974, 20 U.S.C. 1232g [FERPA])".

Las normas federales recopiladas en el título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) § 99.3 definen los "expedientes académicos" como aquellos documentos que guardan relación directa con un estudiante y que son conservados por una agencia o una institución educativa.

Las normas federales recopiladas en el título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales(C.F.R.) § 300.613(b)(2) otorgan a los progenitores el derecho a solicitar que la agencia pública proporcione copias de los expedientes que contengan dicha información, si el hecho de no proporcionar dichas copias impidiera de manera eficaz que el padre o la madre ejerciera el derecho a examinar y revisar los expedientes. Las normas federales recopiladas en el título 34 del Código de Regulaciones Federales (C.F.R.) § 300.617(a) permiten a las agencias públicas cobrar una tarifa por las copias de los expedientes, siempre que dicha tarifa no impida de hecho a los progenitores ejercer su derecho a realizar inspecciones y revisar dichos expedientes.

POSICIÓN DE LA RECLAMANTE

La reclamante denunció que el centro Distrito escolar núm. 266 no respondió oportunamente a la solicitud de expedientes realizada por el centro Distrito escolar núm. 230 cuando la estudiante A se trasladó el 19 de diciembre de 2025. Además, la madre declaró que el Distrito escolar no respondió a su solicitud de copias de todos los expedientes académicos de la estudiante A y le cobró por las copias de dichos expedientes.

POSICIÓN DE LA LEA

La LEA informó que respondió a la solicitud inicial de expedientes para la estudiante B del Distrito escolar núm. 230 el 2 de diciembre de 2025, el mismo día en que se recibió, y proporcionó un segundo conjunto de los expedientes educativos al Distrito escolar núm. 230 el 10 de diciembre de 2025. La solicitud de expedientes a cargo de la madre se hizo después de que la familia se hubiera mudado fuera de los límites del distrito. La LEA señaló que esta solicitud era para "todos los expedientes" e incluía específicamente correos electrónicos de miembros concretos del personal. La LEA envió a la madre los mismos expedientes educativos que se enviaron al Distrito escolar núm. 230 pero indicó que los correos electrónicos no eran guardados ni mantenidos por el distrito como registros educativos; sin embargo, estos correos podrían ser localizados y enviados a la madre si pagaba una tarifa. La madre no accedió a pagar la tarifa y los correos electrónicos no se recuperaron.

ANÁLISIS: DETERMINACIONES DE HECHOS

La siguiente determinación de hechos se basa en las entrevistas y en la revisión del expediente.

1. La Kansas Virtual School es un programa educativo administrado por el Distrito escolar núm. 230.
2. Como se señaló en las determinaciones de la estudiante B en el Asunto Tres, n.o5 y n.o6, los expedientes educativos de la estudiante B, incluida la notificación previa por escrito firmada proponiendo una evaluación inicial de educación especial para la estudiante B, fueron proporcionados al Distrito escolar núm. 230 el 2 de diciembre de 2025 y nuevamente el 10 de diciembre de 2025.
3. Registro de solicitud de expedientes de Maize Middle School que muestra los expedientes disponibles enviados al Distrito escolar núm. 230 el 11 de diciembre de 2025 y la tarjeta de calificaciones del segundo semestre enviada el 7 de enero de 2026
4. Como se señaló en las determinaciones del estudiante A en el Asunto Cuatro, n.o3, n.o4, n.o5, n.o6 y n.o8, el Distrito escolar núm. 266 recibió la solicitud inicial de expedientes de la madre el 13 de febrero de 2026 y proporcionó a la madre copias de los expedientes educativos de la estudiante B el 27 de febrero de 2026. El 20 de marzo de 2026, el superintendente adjunto de Preescolar a Sexto Grado envió un correo electrónico a la madre en el que le indicaba que había recibido 179 páginas de expedientes académicos de sus estudiantes.

CONCLUSIÓN

En este caso, hubo dos solicitudes distintas de los expedientes escolares de la estudiante B. La primera solicitud fue el correo electrónico del Distrito escolar núm. 230 del 2 de diciembre de 2025 que soilicitaba copias de los expedientes de educación especial del Distrito escolar núm. 266. El administrador de datos del Distrito escolar núm. 266 respondió a esta solicitud sin demora el 2 de diciembre de 2025 y envió por correo electrónico los expedientes de educación especial, incluida la notificación previa por escrito firmada para la evaluación inicial de educación especial. La encargada de datos del Distrito escolar núm. 266 volvió a enviar por correo electrónico los mismos expedientes al Distrito escolar núm. 230 el 10 de diciembre de 2025.

La segunda solicitud fue hecha por la madre el 13 de febrero de 2026 en un correo electrónico al superintendente adjunto de Preescolar a Sexto Grado. Esta solicitud era para "expedientes completos sin editar" tanto para el estudiante A como para la estudiante B con el fin de proporcionar los expedientes al DRC para fines legales. Debe tenerse en cuenta que la normativa en virtud de la IDEA solo hace referencia a la divulgación de "cualquier expediente educativo relativo a sus hijos que sea recopilado, conservado o utilizado por la agencia pública sin demora innecesaria y antes de cualquier reunión relativa a un IEP, o cualquier audiencia relacionada con una medida disciplinaria, o cualquier sesión de resolución de garantías procesales, y en ningún caso más de 45 días después de que se haya realizado la solicitud".

En este caso, el Distrito escolar núm. 266 no consideró que los correos electrónicos y los expedientes de llamadas de determinados miembros del personal cumplieran la definición de "expediente educativo". La solicitud no se hizo antes de una reunión del IEP, una audiencia relacionada con una medida disciplinaria o una sesión de resolución del debido proceso; por lo tanto, serían aplicables el "sin demora innecesaria" y el "requisito de los 45 días". El superintendente adjunto de Preescolar a Sexto Grado envió correos electrónicos donde aclaraba la solicitud y preguntaba cómo quería proceder la progenitora. Los expedientes muestran que los mismos expedientes educativos que fueron enviados al Distrito escolar núm. 230 fueron enviados a la madre en un correo electrónico escrito por el superintendente adjunto de Preescolar a Sexto Grado el 27 de febrero de 2026. En ese mismo correo electrónico, se informó a la madre de que se les cobraría una tarifa por el costo de proporcionar las copias de otro material solicitado, incluidos todos los correos electrónicos y expedientes de llamadas de personal específico. El 20 de marzo de 2026, menos de 45 días desde la solicitud original del 13 de febrero de 2026, la LEA envió un correo electrónico a la madre en el que indicaba que se habían proporcionado 179 páginas de expedientes académicos de los estudiantes.

Sobre la base de lo anterior, la alegación de una violación de las leyes y reglamentos de educación especial relacionados con este asunto no está fundamentada.

DERECHO DE APELACIÓN

Cualquiera de las partes puede apelar los resultados o conclusiones de este informe presentando una notificación de apelación por escrito al Comisionado Estatal de Educación a la siguiente dirección: State Commissioner of Education, ATTN: Special Education and Title Services, Landon State Office Building, 900 SW Jackson Street, Suite 620, Topeka, KS 66612-1212. La notificación de apelación también puede presentarse por correo electrónico a formalcomplaints@ksde.gov. La notificación de apelación debe entregarse en un plazo de 10 días naturales a partir de la fecha de este informe. Para una descripción más detallada del proceso de apelación, consulte el Reglamento Administrativo de Kansas 91-40-51(f), que puede encontrar al final de este informe.

K.A.R. 91-40-51(f) Apelaciones.

(1) Cualquier agencia o reclamante puede apelar cualquiera de las determinaciones o conclusiones de un informe de cumplimiento preparado por la sección de educación especial del departamento presentando un aviso de apelación por escrito ante el comisionado estatal de educación. Cada aviso deberá presentarse en un plazo de 10 días a partir de la fecha del informe. Cada aviso proporcionará una declaración detallada de la base para alegar que el informe es incorrecto.

Al recibir una apelación, el comisionado nombrará un comité de apelación de al menos tres miembros del departamento de educación para revisar el informe y considerar la información proporcionada por la agencia de educación local, el reclamante u otros. El proceso de apelación, incluida cualquier audiencia llevada a cabo por el comité de apelación, se completará en un plazo de 15 días a partir de la fecha de recepción de la notificación de apelación, y se emitirá una decisión en un plazo de cinco días tras la finalización del proceso de apelación, a menos que el comité de apelación determine que existen circunstancias excepcionales con respecto a la queja en particular. En este caso, el comité de apelación deberá tomar la decisión lo antes posible.

(2) Si un comité de apelación afirma un informe de cumplimiento que requiere una medida correctiva por parte de una agencia, dicha agencia deberá iniciar la medida correctiva requerida inmediatamente. Si, después de cinco días, no se ha iniciado la medida correctiva requerida, se notificará a la agencia la medida que se tomará para asegurar el cumplimiento según lo determinado por el departamento. Esta acción puede incluir cualquiera de las siguientes:

(A) la emisión de un aviso de deficiencia de acreditación;

(B) la retención de fondos estatales o federales de otro modo disponibles para la agencia;

(C) la concesión de un reembolso monetario al reclamante; o

(D) cualquier combinación de las medidas especificadas en el párrafo (f)(2).

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST
UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #390
ON APRIL 16, 2026

DATE OF REPORT: JUNE 2, 2026

This report is in response to a Complaint filed with our office on behalf of a student, -------, by their parent, -------. In the remainder of the report, the student will be referred to as "the Student" and the parent as "the Parent."

The Complaint is against USD #390 Hamilton Public Schools. In the remainder of the report, "the School" and the "local education agency (LEA)" shall refer to USD #390.

When a special education complaint is filed against a school district that is a member of a special education cooperative or interlocal, or that uses any other state recognized public agency to serve children with disabilities, the term "local education agency (LEA)" in this report will include the school district, the special education cooperative or interlocal, and any other agency that is recognized by the state as an administrative agency for public elementary or secondary schools and is serving the educational needs of this student.

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) allows for a 30-day timeline to investigate a child complaint. A complaint is considered to be filed on the date it is delivered to both the KSDE and the LEA. In this case, the KSDE initially received the Complaint on April 16, 2026 and the 30-day timeline ended on May 16, 2026.

Allegations

The following issues will be investigated:

ISSUE ONE: Whether USD #390, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), implemented the Student's Individualized Education Program (IEP), specifically their behavior log accommodation. K.A.R. 91-40-16(a)(b); 34 CFR § 300.323(a)(d).

ISSUE TWO: Whether USD #390, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, ensured the Parent was offered the opportunity to meaningfully participate in the Student's education when they were asked to speak only with the Principal. Further, whether the LEA provided the Parent with behavior data when requested. K.A.R. 91-40-25(b); 34 CFR §§ 300.322(a)(c), 300.501(b)(c).

ISSUE THREE: Whether USD #390, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, made reasonable attempts to obtain informed consent from the Parent when they made changes to the Student's IEP. K.A.R. 91-40-27(a)(3)(g), K.A.R. 91-40-17(e), K.A.R. 91-40-1(l)(mm)(sss), K.S.A. 72-3430(b)(6); 34 CFR §§ 300.9, 300.300(d)(2).

Investigation of Complaint

The Complaint Investigator interviewed the Parent on May 6, 2026. The following LEA staff were interviewed on May 6, 2026: The Principal, the Special Education Coordinator, the Special Education Teacher, and the Director of Student Services.

In completing this investigation, the Complaint Investigator reviewed documentation provided by the Parent and the LEA. Although additional documentation was provided and reviewed, the following materials were used as the basis of the findings and conclusions of the investigation:

1. Individualized Education Plan Amendment Form for Changes not Requiring a Full Individual Education Plan Team Meeting, 12/09/25
2. Prior Written Notice for Identification, Special Education and Related Services, Educational Placement, Change in Services, Change in Placement, and/or Request for Consent, 12/05/25
3. Notice of Special Education Meeting, 01/12/26
4. Team Meeting Record, 03/04/26
5. Prior Written Notice for Identification, Special Education and Related Services, Educational Placement, Change in Services, Change in Placement, and/or Request for Consent, 03/04/26
6. Team Meeting Record for Annual Individual Education Plan, 09/23/25
7. Notice of Special Education Meeting, 09/10/25
8. Progress Report, 2025-26 School Year
9. Individualized Education Plan, 03/25/25
10. Individualized Education Plan Contact Log, 08/26/25–09/03/25
11. Meeting Notes, 08/26/25-09/09/25
12. District Policy Book, no date
13. Behavior Tracker, 08/18/[25]-03/31/[26]
14. Interval Data Collection Sheet, no date
15. Timeline of Events, no date

17. Emails between parties, 08/11/25-05/11/26

Background Information

This Investigation involved a student who is currently a seventh-grader enrolled at a high school for seventh through twelfth grades in USD #390. The Student is currently receiving special education or related services as a child with a disability per the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA). The Student lives with the Parent. The Other Parent lives in a different state but is actively engaged in the Student's education.

Findings of the Investigation

The following findings are based on a review of documentation and interviews with the Parent and staff in the LEA.

1. An IEP, dated March 25, 2025, outlined the following relevant information for the Student:
    a. This IEP was written while the Student attended an elementary school for first through sixth grades in the LEA.
    b. The Parent participated virtually in the meeting.
    c. In the Team Meeting Record (notes) regarding social-emotional, it was written, "It was decided that there will be a weekly behavior log sent home each week."
    d. Also in the Team Meeting Record (notes) regarding the Parent's concerns, it was noted, "[The Parent] had no further questions or concerns. The IEP draft was accepted as presented by all team members."
    e. Under the Legal Education Decision Maker (LEDM) Input/Concerns section, it was documented that the LEDM participated in the development of the IEP and was involved in placement decisions. Under Parent/LEDM concerns, it was noted, "[The Parent] stated [they] would like to be contacted anytime there is are [sic] any behaviors." It was also noted, "The team decided to start keeping track of a [virtual drive] for anyone to put any positive or negative behaviors noted throughout the week. This form will be sent home every Thursday."
    f. Under the Social Emotional section of the IEP, it was noted "yes" the Student had needs in this area and required special education or related services. It was also noted "yes" the Student's behavior impeded the learning of others or oneself.
        i. Strengths: The Student maintained a consistent interest in art and drawing, occasionally becoming "animated" when discussing their work, though at other times they claimed a lack of involvement without explanation. The Student's demeanor shifted between being "pleasant" and appearing "sullen" or "dismissive." Additionally, the Student frequently used the phrase "I forgot" when questioned about their follow-through on assignments from the Previous Social Worker.
        ii. ii. Social-emotional performance and needs were documented as follows: "[The Student's] empathy with others appears low, [their] attitude toward teachers can be dismissive, and [the Student] focuses primarily on what interests [them] rather than work assigned."
        iii. iii. Social-emotional goal: "By the end of the IEP year, [the Student] will identify one attainable and realistic personal social goal, create an action plan for the goal, and demonstrate progress toward achieving the goal during twice-weekly sessions with the social worker. [The] [g]oal is to keep a notebook or journal that tracks [the Student's] progress of asking questions about a topic, doing research, and then discussing the results with the social worker. The purpose of the goal is to help [the Student] focus on something that interests [them], follow through on a commitment, and then discuss [their] progress with the social worker, all toward the ultimate purpose of recognizing and discussing [their] thoughts, feelings and perspectives, and identify ways to express empathy."

1. Progress data from May 1, 2025 indicated the Student had shown "slight improvement." It was noted the Student's "agreed-upon goal" with the Previous Social Worker was to perform an internet search on a subject chosen by the Student, "as a means of identifying and completing a goal, with the purposes being follow[-]through and stimulating [the Student's] curiosity and thought processes." The Student completed their search, kept notes and drawings in a notebook, and discussed the activities and thoughts with the Previous Social Worker.
2. Progress data from September 30, 2025 indicated the Student had shown "slight improvement." It was noted the Student had developed a personal goal regarding making school less stressful. The Student had identified "triggers" as loud noises, always being around the same classmates, and talkative people. Data collection sheet information showed "some recurring good days," though the Student still struggled with work completion and class participation.
3. Progress data from December 1, 2025 indicated the Student had "maintained performance." It was noted the Student had been "actively journaling" about how to make their school day "less stressful," and had shown interests in gaming and creating personal videos. It was also noted the Student had reportedly made "unkind" remarks in the classroom. However, "[The Student] has reported good days in class at times, which is why [they are] getting a maintained performance rating."
4. Progress data from February 18, 2026 indicated the Student had shown "slight improvement." It was noted, "[The Student] has reduced the amount teachers enter negative behavior points on [their] student data sheet. This indicates a reduction in negative reported behavior. Therefore, a success in [the Student's] reported personal goal."

g. All of the Student's listed accommodations were related to academic work in the general or special education classroom, such as frequent checks for understanding, preferential seating close to the teacher, repeated or restated directions, extended time, separate setting for tests, and having math tests read aloud. There were no behavior logs, school-to-home communication, or other behavior-specific accommodations listed.

h. Special education and related services: Social work services for 20 minutes, two days every week, from February 20, 2025 through February 19, 2026. No other behavior-related services were listed.

i. The Parent provided their signature on March 25, 2025 indicating they had received a copy of the IEP.

2. A screenshot of an August 11, 2025 email from the Previous General Education Teacher to an unidentified recipient included thumbnail images of attached screenshots of text messages and two emails. The email stated, "Here is what I have for conversations between [the Parent] and I [sic] regarding [the Student's] behavior." The Previous General Education Teacher said they believed the first text was sent on September 9, 2024, and they included a few other texts from "throughout the year." Additionally, the Previous General Education Teacher said it looked like the previous school "attempted" behavior logs after an incident on October 28, 2024. However, the Previous General Education Teacher noted, "This specific type of documentation did not end up being the best option because [the Student] was not wanting to take the clipboard with the behavior sheet with [them] to other classes and I became the only one filling out the log every class period and which [sic] became slightly redundant and did not fulfill the purpose of the behavior log like we had hoped it would. We continued to try to find ways to document behaviors that worked best for [the Student], [the Parent], and [the Student's] teachers." They mentioned the Parent had been "very responsive" to texts and messages, so the previous school ended up using that as a communication and incident documentation method.

3. On August 21, 2025, the Parent emailed the Principal and the Superintendent and thanked them "for the behavior log today."

4. On August 21, 2025, the Music Teacher emailed the Parent to provide an explanation in regard to a comment they made on the Student's behavior log that day.

5. The Principal emailed the Parent on August 26, 2025 and stated they were going to share the "ongoing digital documentation that is being logged by the teachers." They indicated this was so the Parent could "keep up daily" if they wished to do so.

6. According to therapy notes from the Social Worker, between August 25, 2025, and April 20, 2026, the Student participated in regular therapy sessions focused on journaling, self-advocacy, and social-emotional growth. During the initial months, the Social Worker established rapport through discussions about the Student's interest in gaming and soccer while identifying key environmental stressors, such as loud classroom noises, the competitive nature of P.E., and feeling singled out by the paraeducator in math class. The Student worked on communicating their needs, which led to the successful implementation of a math pull-out program that reduced the Student's academic stress. By late 2025, the Student showed notable behavioral progress, earning praise from the Principal and reporting fewer "bad days" on teacher data sheets. However, as the school year continued into early 2026, the focus of the sessions shifted toward more interpersonal issues. The Social Worker addressed recurring concerns regarding the Student's "honesty," "integrity," and "body language," specifically noting instances in which the Student misled staff or struggled to take responsibility for their actions. In the final months of the period, although the Student's general classroom behavior remained improved, the Student continued to work on developing empathy and understanding how their humor and behavior impacted their peers and family members.

7. A document, dated August 26, 2025, appeared to be notes from a meeting between the Parent, the Special Education Coordinator, and the Principal. The following relevant information was noted:
   a. "[The Principal] shared with [the Parent] the daily log that the school team is data tracking with." The Parent shared the Student was concerned about turning things in, and the Principal assured the Parent they had discussed that with the Student.
   b. The Parent shared their concerns regarding the Student's focus and the Student's relationship with their teachers.
   c. The Student seemed to "do better with subtle praise."
   d. The Parent shared that if anxious, the Student might say, "I am not listening, I am not doing that, [or] I don't care." The Parent shared the Student had been accessing outside support, which was discontinued, and was not taking any medications.
   e. The Parent's "biggest concern" was "bridging" the Student's understanding of their choices and behaviors and how those could affect their ability to succeed at the School.
   f. Moving forward, the Principal would share data collection with the Parent weekly.
8. A September 3, 2025 entry in the IEP Contact Log indicated the Special Education Coordinator had emailed the Behavior Specialist to "discuss and review" the Student's "[b]uilding plan to collect data and steps surrounding support."
9. Notes from an unidentified source, dated September 3, 2025, documented the following:
   a. On the morning of September 3, 2025, a meeting between the Parent, the Science Teacher, and the Principal "escalated" over allegations that a behavioral portion of the Student's IEP had not been implemented since the previous year. Following a report from the Superintendent that the Parent recorded the conversation, the Science Teacher was advised by an attorney to maintain separate documentation rather than contributing to shared digital records. In response, the School team engaged the Behavioral Specialist and the Social Worker to review the Student's IEP, support their goals, and communicate any needs to the School team. It was noted the Principal would ensure teachers continued to follow the IEP. To prevent further miscommunication, the team decided to transition from a live data-tracking document to a weekly summary, resulting in the Parents being removed from the live document. The team felt there was "confusion being created and miscommunication occurring due to the current method." Later that day, the administration met with the paraprofessional staff to reinforce confidentiality protocols and instruct them to redirect all parental inquiries to the Principal or the Special Education Teacher.

10. On September 3, 2025, the Special Education Coordinator emailed the Parent and stated, "Based on this morning's meeting, the team has determined that we will alter the behavior data collection that we have been taking to better meet needs." They added, "You will still receive a weekly summary, as discussed, but the format will look differently [sic]. This weekly email will come from [the Principal]. The focus of the data collection will still be to support [the Student's] current IEP. This weekly summary will start next week. Please understand and allow the team this [sic] next couple of days to re-align the needs."

    a. On the same date, the Parent replied to the Special Education Coordinator's email and stated, "Please see the previously agreed upon IEP and other information regarding the behavior log. I do expect to have the data available from each of [the Student's] teachers as previously agreed upon, in order to track disaggregated trends of behavior throughout the day/week and various classes. A summary is not a behavior log and a summary does not contain the information needed to look at trends of behavior. As offered and agreed upon before, the log provides information that I do not believe we will get from the principal who will not be present in each of [the Student's] classes and who clearly does not want [the Student] in the school. If the goal is to look objectively at [the Student's] behavior - both positives and negatives - and when [the Student] is struggling the most, and when [the Student] is doing well also, a summary from the principal will not provide that information."

    b. On the same date, the Other Parent also replied to the Special Education Coordinator, saying, "Please continue using the current format for [the Student's] weekly logs, with each teacher submitting their individual, detailed reports separately. This format is preferred to preserve the integrity of the information without any summarization. Moving forward, I'd like to receive these logs weekly, and I'll review them to address any challenges [the Student] is facing and provide feedback or corrections as needed."

    c. Also on September 3, 2025, the Principal replied to the Other Parent only, saying, "I wanted to respond to you individually and sincerely apologize. This document started out as information for our staff alone. After a very successful meeting with [the Parent] last week we felt we were all on the same page regarding [the Student's] education and desire for success. We thought it would be helpful to share this information with [the Parent] daily so [the Parent] could better address situations quicker with [the Student]. [The Parent] then asked me to add you to the document. However, following a meeting today with [the Parent] the document was quickly used against us with yelling towards myself and another staff member … this will not be tolerated. … You will be provided a weekly behavior document … it will just be in a different format. … Our team has moved forward and communicates on the daily on how to best serve [the Student] … and that will be the case throughout the year."

d. On the same date, the Other Parent replied to the Principal's email, saying, "As [the Other Parent] living out of state, I am finding it challenging to distinguish truth from misinformation due to the varied and conflicting details I've received about [the Student] from everyone. … If there are any issues affecting [the Student's] performance or behavior, I kindly request that you notify me promptly so I can address them. … Please feel free to share any relevant information or concerns about [the Student's] progress."

e. On September 4, 2025, the Principal replied to the Other Parent's email, saying, "I respect and agree completely. We will keep you informed."

11. On September 4, 2025, the Parent emailed unspecified individuals with the Special Education Coordinator listed as blind carbon-copied. The Parent formally requested an IEP meeting. They also stated, "I'm requesting a copy of all data and information used to determine [the Student's] goals. I am requesting a copy of the behavioral log from this year since [the Principal] removed access to that data." They also noted, "The attached version of [the Student's] IEP is what I am working from. Note, the behavior log is mentioned specifically in the document at least twice."

a. On the same date, the Special Education Teacher forwarded the Parent's email to the Principal and the Special Education Coordinator and said they were not sure how to proceed and asked for advice.

b. Also on the same date, the Special Education Coordinator replied to the Special Education Teacher's email, saying, "I will take care of it. We have 10 days to schedule a meeting with [the Parent]." They also mentioned they had called some attorneys to ask some questions and were meeting with the Director of Student Services. They concluded, "You do not have to respond back to this."

c. On September 4, 2025, the Special Education Coordinator replied to the Parent's email requesting records and an IEP meeting. They included copies of the Student's IEP, re-evaluation paperwork, including prior written notices (PWN)s, and a copy of the Parent Rights document. They also said they would work with the team to determine an IEP meeting date.

d. Later that same day, the Parent replied to the Special Education Coordinator, saying, "That is great, thank you." The Parent also mentioned including the Educational Advocate in their communication.

12. Notes from an unidentified source, dated September 5, 2025, documented the following:

a. The Special Education Coordinator and the Behavior Specialist met to refine the support strategies for the Student, emphasizing a shift from subjective narrative documentation to quantitative, objective data collection. They planned to conduct classroom observations focusing on staff interactions and an interview with the Student to better understand their personal goals and mindset. A priority was established to move away from "enabling" behaviors and instead foster the Student's self-advocacy and responsibility, including teaching the Student socially appropriate coping strategies to manage frustration or the urge to avoid difficult tasks. Additionally, they discussed how staff questioning the Student about not turning in assignments was "counter-productive to establishing relationships," and suggested a need to find ways to offer flexibility in how staff approached the Student about assignments. The Special Education Coordinator and the Behavior Specialist also discussed offering the Student choices, movement breaks, and restated instructions. The goal was to identify specific, teachable skills that aligned with the Parent's expectations and the Student's social-emotional needs while using clear data to track progress over time.

13. On September 9, 2025, the Parent emailed the Superintendent, the Special Education Coordinator, the Special Education Teacher, and the Principal and said they and the Other Parent requested to continue "the logs" as they had already been started, but noted their "view-only" access to the virtual sheets "that were working so well" had been removed. The Parent also mentioned, "During a meeting with [the Principal] and [the Special Education Coordinator], [the Principal] previously asked that we contact [them] directly instead of [the Student's] teachers about [the Student's] education … ." The Parent ended their email with, "I am once again requesting that the behavior logs with disaggregated behavior data for each class be shared with [the Other Parent] and I [sic]."

14. A Notice of Special Education Meeting, dated September 10, 2025, indicated a meeting to discuss possible IEP changes was scheduled for September 23, 2025. It was noted this was a parent-requested meeting. The boxes were checked next to planning to attend the IEP meeting and consenting to waive the right to a 10-day PWN of the meeting. The notice was signed and dated by the Parent on September 11, 2025.

    a. A Team Meeting Record for Annual IEP dated September 23, 2025, included notes from a meeting involving the General Education Teacher, the Special Education Teacher, the Principal, the Special Education Coordinator (note-taker), the Other Parent, the Parent, and the Education Advocate. The following relevant information was noted:

        i. Data log: The team discussed transitioning from narrative data to quantitative data. The Parent and the Other Parent expressed a desire for timely involvement from the School to enable proactive conversations with the Student at home. Both Parents remained active in monitoring the Student's homework, grades, and interpersonal relationships, though the Parent specifically noted their primary concern was the Student's disrespectful or disruptive behavior rather than the Student's academic performance. In response, the team discussed the Student's capabilities and existing supports to determine why they might be refusing tasks or failing to communicate their needs. The team discussed considering not following directions, disruptions, and not turning in assignments as "possible tracking needs." Additionally, the team wanted to consider positive interactions with staff and peers that were happening.

ii. Social-emotional discussion: The team discussed the Student's social work goal. The Student reportedly shared with the Social Worker that their stressors were "noise, math, same groups of people all the time, and needing to talk."

iii. IEP review: "IEP is in compliance, no changes were made." The team reviewed ideas of individual pull-out or separate setting when needed to help with focus, and discussed approaches to providing adult support, noting "less is more."

iv. Moving forward: It was noted, "Teachers will notify on issues that are related to: [D]isrespect, when [the Student] is completely shut down or if concerned with defiance." It was also noted, "[The Parent] has access to grade checks and the team is aware and value[s] grades, but determined that not turning in assignments and grades are a byproduct of the refusal, disrespect or shut down [sic] so that will be the focus of team efforts."

15. On September 18, 2025, the Parent emailed the Special Education Coordinator, the Special Education Teacher, the Superintendent, and the Principal. In their email, the Parent requested the Student's behavior logs. They said per their previous conversation, they wanted the "actual logs and not a summary." They also noted they had not received any updates in over two weeks. The Parent also wrote, "As it is written into [the Student's] IEP that we will receive them, we expect to have them so that we can discuss any concerns or successes with [the Student]."

a. On September 19, 2025, the Special Education Coordinator replied to the Parent's email, saying, "The previous email I had sent notified you that there would be a change to the data collection process. We are working on the implementation of a new approach to provide more accurate and efficient results for the Special Education team. The actual log you are referring to is no longer our focus. We are shifting from using narrative data to focusing on quantitative data. We have been collecting information this last week and a half from observations and interviews." They concluded by saying they could discuss the topic at the meeting the following week.

b. Also on September 19, 2025, the Parent replied to the Special Education Coordinator's email and stated, "I simply don't want to be in the same situation again at the beginning of the next school year where [the Student] is denied enrollment in the only school [they've] known since 3rd grade, when we moved here, for behavioral issues that we could have addressed and corrected had we known at the actual time they occurred." They also emphasized the decision had been made without their "input, agreement, consideration, or consent" and confirmed their in-person attendance for the following week's meeting.

16. On September 22, 2025, the Behavior Specialist emailed the Math Teacher notes from an observation of the Student conducted on September 16, 2025. During the observation, the Student demonstrated a socially reserved but engaged presence, interacting appropriately with a peer, the paraprofessional, and the Math Teacher throughout the class period. The Student remained consistently on-task, following all directives with two or fewer prompts for the duration of the session. While the Student occasionally slouched or fidgeted for brief intervals to refocus using classroom math tools, their behavior remained productive and did not impede their work. Although the Student did not finish the full assignment, their progress was consistent with that of their peers, and they took the remaining work with them to complete. The Student showed positive affect and engagement during a flashcard activity, responding effectively to a calm, encouraging tone and a support model that provided them with personal space while keeping a paraprofessional in close but not direct proximity.
17. On October 6, 2025, the Parent emailed the Special Education Coordinator to check in regarding the Student's behavior and attitude. They wrote, "We haven't received any communication from teachers whatsoever, but [the Other Parent] and I do not want any surprises so we would still like the occasional update from you or [the Student's] teachers on this matter (in addition to the communication from [the Student's] teachers if [the Student] has any major issues or concerns). … We don't want to get to August of [2026] and have [the Student] denied enrollment there again for things we could be correcting and handling now … using as teacher [sic] moments and discussion points."
    a. On October 7, 2025, the Special Education Coordinator replied to the Parent's email and stated the Student had a "pretty good week." They noted math was the "biggest struggle" with "refusal." They also noted, "[The Student] continues to show us [their] capabilities and is beginning to allow for re-direction. We are really working with [them] on redirection or correction of work."
18. On November 3, 2025, the Parent emailed the Special Education Coordinator and stated, "Behaviorally, we have not had any updates in a while … we do not want to be caught off guard with anything and we wish to be as supportive as possible."
    a. On November 6, 2025, the Special Education Coordinator replied to the Parent's email, thanking them for their patience as they were out ill earlier in the week. They said they were continuing to work with the Student on "refusal," which looked like "stalling, distracting with conversation or just sitting." They said the behavior was not consistent in any single subject area so the School staff wanted to continue building a supportive relationship with the Student. They noted, "There have not been any major concerns that teachers would need to report on based on disrespect, full shut down, etc."

b. On November 10, 2025, the Parent replied to the Special Education Coordinator's email, saying, "Thank you for the information. We are so glad to hear that there haven't been any major disruptions or concerns from teachers regarding disrespect, etc. We would really like a copy of the current quantitative data you've been collecting on [the Student] in order to make future education decisions for [them]."

19. On November 19, 2025, the Principal emailed the Parent and the Other Parent with an update on the Student's behavior for that week. They said, "We are noticing more of the negative comments being expressed and shut down or just turning in unfinished work." The Principal then described the following comments made by the Student:

    a. Math class: The Student exhibited "complete shut down mode" from academic tasks, refusing to show their work or accept assistance. When staff attempted to help, the Student told them to "get away." The Student expressed to the Math Teacher that they were "going to fail anyway so why do the work or try." Upon hearing about a potential move to a different math class, the Student remarked, "Good, then I can't fail."

    b. Agriculture class: During a project on barn quilts, when asked about their plans for the finished project, the Student stated, "develop a flame thrower and burn it," concluding the interaction with, "ANYWAYS [emphasis in original] thank you for reading this."

    c. Family and Consumer Sciences class: The Student initially refused to participate in a cooking activity because of the required apron, claiming, "They are useless anyways." While the Student eventually joined the lesson, they refused to assist their group with cleaning, telling a peer, "So sad, cry about it," when confronted.

    d. Social Studies and English: The Student repeatedly ignored directives to avoid violent themes in their writing and refused to remove their hat or backpack in class. When asked to comply with classroom rules, the Student responded, "Oh my God, it's the end of the world! End of the world!"

    e. Response to Feedback: When addressed by the Social Worker regarding these behaviors, the Student dismissed the concerns as misunderstandings and claimed, "I was just joking and I don't see why people would see me as disrespectful." The Student also asserted, "Others don't know the real me."

    f. On the same date, the Parent replied to the Principal, thanking them for the update and noting it was "quite a shift" from the Special Education Coordinator's update on November 6, 2025. They also said, "I appreciate the detailed accounts so that we can address these specific issues and behaviors as well as try to understand the shift in [the Student's] attitude."

20. On December 3, 2025, the Special Education Teacher emailed the Parent to propose moving the Student from their general education math class to a resource classroom for an adapted curriculum during the third hour. Data and recent observations indicated that despite current accommodations, the Student continued to struggle with key math concepts and skills. The Student expressed openness to this change, having already had positive working interactions with the Special Education Teacher. To move forward with this placement, the Special Education Teacher requested the Parent's approval and signature on an IEP amendment and a PWN.

a. On the same date, the Parent replied to the Special Education Teacher's email, stating they were "fine" with moving the Student to the resource classroom for an adapted math curriculum. They confirmed seeing the Student's math difficulties at home also. The Parent concluded their email stating they would like to review all written changes to the IEP before "signing off on those changes."

21. An IEP Amendment Form dated December 4, 2025, regarding the March 25, 2025 IEP, stated the LEA proposed to move the Student from the general education classroom with adult support to the special education classroom for direct instruction. The Student's "Study Skills math pull-out service" of 25 minutes, four days per week, would be discontinued. Instead, the Student would receive 50 minutes, four days per week, of "Agriculture Exploration" and 50 minutes of "pull-out instruction" for math in the special education classroom, four days per week. This change would occur on January 5, 2026.

a. It was marked "We agree to amend this Student's IEP as described above, and we do not wish to convene an IEP meeting." This statement was followed by the Parent's signature and dated December 9, 2025.

b. PWN documented this proposed change in placement based on a December 5, 2025 meeting. The box checked for this change in placement indicated that consent was not required, meaning it was not a substantial change. It was explained that the proposed change met the Student's needs in the least restrictive environment, the IEP goals had been updated to reflect current levels of performance, and accommodations would remain the same. Finally, it was written that the IEP team considered having the Student in their regular education environment all day. However, due to the Student's learning disability, they required [specially designed instruction] SDI outside of the general education classroom for math. It stated, "[The] Parent was in agreement to the proposed change." The PWN form was signed by the Parent on December 9, 2025, granting consent for the special education placement and services outlined in the notice.

22. A Notice of Special Education Meeting, dated January 12, 2026, indicated an annual IEP review meeting was scheduled for March 4, 2026. The notice was check-marked, "I plan to attend the IEP meeting for [the Student], at the mutually agreed upon date, time, and location provided to me via the Notice of Meeting." The notice was signed and dated by the Parent on January 14, 2026.

23. On January 22, 2026, the Parent emailed the Principal, the Superintendent, the Special Education Coordinator, and the Special Education Teacher and requested an update on "any behavior concerns." They said they had not heard anything recently, so they wanted to check in.

a. On the same date, the Principal replied to the Parent's email, saying, "We haven't noticed any major behavior concerns with [the Student]." They said the Student came back from break with a "great attitude" and had been doing "pretty well."

b. On the same date, the Parent replied to the Principal's email, thanking them for the update. They also noted the Student had said things were "better," but the Parent wanted to "stay on top of things."

24. On February 10, 2026, the Parent emailed the Principal, the Special Education Teacher, and the Special Education Coordinator to request an update on the Student's "behavior and attitude." They said the Student told them "things have been going well," but the Parent wanted to make sure the Student was doing what they should be.

a. On February 11, 2026, the Principal replied to the Parent's email and said, "[The Student] is sharing with you correctly about [their] behavior and attitude and that things [are] going well."

25. An IEP, dated March 4, 2026, outlined the following relevant information for the Student:

a. The Parent provided their signature documenting their participation.

b. The discussion summary of the meeting did not mention behavior logs.

c. It was documented that the LEDM participated in the development of the IEP and was involved in placement decisions. Under the Parent Input section, it stated, "Parent agreed with the IEP as written."

d. Under the Social Emotional section, it was noted "yes" that the Student had needs in this area and required special education or related services. It was also noted "yes" that the Student's behavior impeded the learning of others or oneself.

i. Strengths in this section were noted as, "[The] Student has not had as many negative behaviors recorded on [their] data sheet assembled by [the School] staff. This indicates an improvement by [the Student]. According to [the Principal], [the Student] does not cheat or steal. Also, [the Student] is reported to have some honest tendencies."

ii. Social-emotional performance and needs were documented as follows: Throughout the 2025–26 school year, data collected by the School staff and reports from the Principal indicated the Student experienced a general decrease in behavioral incidents compared to previous years. While the Student showed overall improvement, they continued to exhibit "stubbornness" regarding school rules, such as footwear policies, which at times led to incomplete assignments and difficulties with peers. Observations noted the Student struggled specifically in their Family and Consumer Science Class. Frustration with sewing tasks often prompted the Student to "act out," which presented a "distraction to any perceived weaknesses so as not to lose being accepted by other students." This pattern of behavior contributed to Strengths and Difficult Questionnaire (SDQ) data showing only three pro-social behaviors. Despite these interpersonal challenges, the Student demonstrated growth in self-advocacy and self-determination by requesting to reduce their therapy sessions to once a week to prioritize social time with their peers.

iii. Impact of exceptionality under the social-emotional section: Throughout the 2025–26 school year, the Student struggled to consistently complete work, and their distracting behaviors frequently created difficulties for teachers and peers. According to SDQ data and the Principal's reports, these behaviors caused a "medium" level of social friction and a "great deal" of academic concern. Specific classroom observations, such as an instance in their Agriculture class, noted the Student was easily distracted by their laptop and used avoidance tactics, such as claiming they could not find a pencil, before eventually returning to their tasks with peer prompting. While the Principal reported the Student's behavior had improved "lots" since the beginning of the year, SDQ data indicated fundamental character issues regarding honesty and follow-through persisted. Because these underlying challenges continued to impact the Student's academic and social success, the recommendation remained for the Student to continue meeting with the Social Worker twice weekly.

iv. Social-emotional goal: "Over the course of the IEP year, [the Student] will raise [their] pro-social behavior score from a 3 to a 10, by [March 4, 2027], on a social work assessment."

e. All of the Student's listed accommodations were related to academic work in the general or special education classroom, such as frequent checks for understanding, preferential seating close to the teacher, repeated or restated directions, extended time, separate setting for tests, and having math tests read aloud. There were no behavior logs or other behavior-specific accommodations listed.

f. Special education and related services: Social work services for 20 minutes, one day every week, from March 4, 2026 through March 3, 2027, to work on "pro-social behaviors that are hampering peer interactions." No other behavior-related services were listed.

26. PWN, based on the March 4, 2026 IEP meeting, indicated a change in services (consent not required) and other IEP changes not involving services or placement (consent not required). The notice documented what was listed in the IEP and was signed and dated by the Parent on March 4, 2026.

27. On April 6, 2026, the Parent emailed the Principal, the Special Education Teacher, the Special Education Coordinator, the Superintendent, and the Other Parent, to check on the Student's grades. They stated it had been "a month or more" since there were "updates to several of them … ." The Special Education Teacher emailed the Parent on April 6, 2026 about a music paper the Student needed to turn in for class.

28. A screenshot of an email, which did not show the date or the original sender, appeared to be from the Parent, and included the following relevant information: "Thank you for the behavior log today." The sender asked if there was a way to "stretch" the cells in the table so they could accurately read all of the information without it being cut off. The sender also stated, "If we haven't already done a Functional Behavioral Assessment, I would like to do so. I didn't see results from one in my information, but I may have missed it because I have a lot of papers in the [the Student's] files right now. … Once we have that, I'd like a Behavioral [I]ntervention [P]lan put into place."

29. On April 28, 2026, the Director of Student Services emailed the Principal for clarification regarding behavior tracking sheets. They noted from what they could tell, the behavior tracking "was not a need in the IEP." They asked, "Is this a general education intervention?" They also asked for the documents to be shared with them.

    a. On the same date, the Principal replied to the Director of Student Services' email, saying, "We used them in the beginning to keep the communication open between the teachers as to what was happening in each class. Some classes we would see defiance, others we would see incomplete work, others refusal to bring supplies to class. We have communicated these behaviors we were seeing with [the Parent] for years and we received no support from home. … We used this documentation for a couple of months and then things leveled out and they were not needed so we stopped."

    b. The Director of Student Services asked the Principal to confirm the logs were from general education and not special education and the Principal stated that was correct.

    c. Also, on April 28, 2026, the Director of Student Services asked whether and how the behavior-tracking logs were shared with the Parent. The Principal replied that it was not shared with the Parent. They stated, "In the beginning when we had more issues it was [and] then it was used against us … sometimes up to 15 emails a day and coming in and yelling at teachers and myself and we had to ask [the Parent] to leave etc. [The Parent] had access about 2 [to] 3 weeks I would say. We then removed [the Parent] and used it just between teachers and saw behaviors decrease."

30. In an email to the Complaint Investigator, dated May 7, 2026, the Director of Student Services wrote, "This is the proposed data tracking sheet that was not completed after the behavioral observation." A blank "Interval Data Collection" sheet was included and had the Student's name. Three target behaviors were written (assignment turned in, disruption, and not following instructions) and two environmental items (positive peer interaction and positive staff interaction).

31. In an email to the Director of Student Services, dated May 8, 2026, the Social Worker wrote, "[The Student] behavior sheet was put together by [the School] staff, and I utilized it for progress monitoring. Communication occurred between [the Principal] and [the Parent] … . The data sheet is a [virtual] sheet collected by [the School] teachers. This is something I utilized for progress monitoring. Behavior points were how many times teachers put something negative in about [the Student]. I was given access to [it] at the beginning of the school year."
32. An email, dated May 11, 2026, from the Special Education Coordinator contained the following relevant information:
    a. Regarding the March 25, 2025 IEP, they said, "The Team Meeting Record is an area to record conversation that happens within the meeting. It is not always that the follow up occurs within the IEP or creates changes within the IEP, it is documentation of the group discussion." The Special Education Coordinator stated a behavior log could be considered for either data collection or a communication tool to determine interventions, but it was not identified as an accommodation because it did not change how the Student accessed instruction, participated in class, or accessed testing or assessments.
    b. The Special Education Coordinator indicated the behavior log from the beginning of the 2025-26 school year was used to support the Parent's concerns about the Student's behavior and if there was a need to track it throughout the day as the Student transitioned to having multiple teachers. They explained the behavior log started using narrative data, and the School team moved to quantitative data and anything "to connect if we needed to continue or move forward finding information that would have warranted further involvement on the special education side." They stated the Behavior Specialist completed an observation of the Student on September 16, 2025 which confirmed the behaviors being discussed did not warrant further involvement on the special education side or from the IEP team, as it was within the realm of general education interventions and general classroom expectations.
    c. The Special Education Coordinator was not aware of how often the Parent was sent a summary of the Student's behavior data because "it was a general education intervention and not related to IEP needs."
    d. When asked why the behavior data collection was not included in the IEP, the Special Education Coordinator said, "The data collection was not documented because we were within the IEP as dated 3/25 and any changes necessary would have been either amended … or a new IEP developed … ." They added, "… if there was not changes being made to criteria within the IEP then the concerns are addressed and/or resolved outside of the IEP. Additionally, General Education Interventions, General Education Data Collection and Discipline are not documented within the IEP until behavior reaches a point in which the team feels additional service minutes are needed … . [The Student] did not meet any of that criteria."

e. The Special Education Coordinator stated they only responded if the Parent had a question regarding the IEP, and they were unable to answer parental requests on daily communication or behaviors within the general education classroom or with the general education teachers. They said, "I did not have any requests from [the Special Education Teacher] for any further information, documentation or intervention support. … Special Education did not create the behavior logs that the General Education teachers and [the Parent] had been discussing and sharing for some time."

f. The Special Education Coordinator did not believe the Parent communicating with the Principal impacted the Parent's ability to participate in the IEP. They indicated the special education staff still had access to communicate with the Parents as needed. They stated the Parents requested IEP meetings, which were held, and the Parents attended meetings and signed all documentation. They said, "I believe this is referring to the General Education side of [the Parent] sending numerous emails daily to multiple teachers and having [the Parent] contact [the Principal] for a more timely response in regards to daily behavior, grades, etc. … ."

g. The Special Education Coordinator indicated the Student's pull-out math instruction began on January 5, 2026. They explained their understanding was the Special Education Teacher and a general education teacher were discussing difficulties the Student was facing, and then there was another discussion to complete some interventions and a "trial" of the Student receiving "pull out" services to progress monitor and determine the Student's success, willingness, and cooperation in a different setting. They indicated with the success of the trial, the Parents were approached for approval to amend the IEP and change the Student's services.

h. The Special Education Coordinator said, "The student data sheet referred to, I believe, was the General Education tool and conversations. [The Social Worker] would have asked for any teacher input to help determine further needs."

33. Seven of the Student's teachers responded to a survey regarding the behavior log and communication with the Parent. The responses indicated:

a. 7 out of 7 of the teachers were aware of a behavior log for the Student during the time period of April 17, 2025 through April 16, 2026. 6 out of 7 indicated they entered data regularly during that time period and 1 out of 7 indicated they were aware of the behavior log but did not use it.

b. One respondent stated they entered information when the Student had a "great" or an "off" day, but had not used the behavior log during the 2025-26 school year. 6 out of 7 respondents stated they entered narrative descriptions into the behavior log, including social/peer interaction notes and academic updates. 2 out of 7 respondents indicated they entered information only after behavior incidents, 2 out of 7 entered information daily, 2 out of 7 entered information weekly, and 1 out of 7 input information 2-3 times per week.

c. 5 out of 7 respondents indicated they perceived the behavior log was a general education intervention available to all students, 1 out of 7 was unsure, and 1 out of 7 thought it was a special education intervention required by the IEP.

d. 7 out of 7 respondents indicated they were not aware of a directive for the Parent to only communicate with the Principal about the Student's education. None of the respondents felt their communication with the Parent was negatively impacted. Additional comments from the respondents included: "I was not given a directive and was encouraged to communicate with [the Parent] as I wished," "Communication with [the Parent] never ceased," and "I have always communicated with [the Parent] with any concerns."

e. Relevant additional comments included:

   i. The English Teacher wrote, "I entered data regularly from August-November 202[5]. I was not aware of documentation prior to August 202[5], as this is my first year employed here. Many of my documented comments are positive, rather than 'incidents.' I have communicated with [the Parent] multiple times this year, beginning in August - via email, parent-teacher conferences (in person), and [the Student's] annual IEP meeting (in person). [The Parent] and I have had a positive relationship."

   ii. The Science Teacher said, "I contributed to the documentation from August to September 3, 2025."

   iii. The Previous General Education Teacher said, "I had [the Student] in my class for the 24-25 school year, so I have not had to fill out any sort of behavior log this current 25-26 school year. We tried a couple of variations of behavior logs during my time as [their] teacher. April of 2025-May 2025 was the time period I had [the Student] in my class that fits the time frame of this investigation. At this point, we were updating [the Parent] by email if we had any behavior issues or concerns and documented if there were the instances [sic] and conversations."

   iv. The Agriculture Teacher wrote, "I responded in the document from Aug[ust] 2025 to September 2025."

34. Relevant information from a Behavior Tracker dated August 18, 2025 through March 31, 2026 included:

a. Each week contained data for Monday through Thursday; no Fridays were included.

b. On each day of the week, the Student had 10 classes. There would be a total of 40 cells available to comment in for each school week.

c. The tracker included positive and negative narrative data about the Student and their behavior.

d. Week of August 18, 2025: 29 of 40 cells contained narrative data.

e. Week of August 25, 2025: 25 of 40 cells contained narrative data.
f. Week of September 1, 2025: 21 of 40 cells contained narrative data. There was no school on September 1, 2025.
g. Week of September 8, 2025: 15 of 40 cells contained narrative data.
h. Week of September 15, 2025: 18 of 40 cells contained narrative data.
i. Week of September 22, 2025: 22 of 40 cells contained narrative data.
j. Week of September 29, 2025: 19 of 40 cells contained narrative data.
k. Week of October 6, 2025: 19 of 40 cells contained narrative data.
l. Week of October 13, 2025: 13 of 40 cells contained narrative data.
m. Week of October 20, 2025: 12 of 40 cells contained narrative data.
n. Week of October 27, 2025: 13 of 40 cells contained narrative data.
    i. Week of November 3, 2025: 4 of 40 cells contained narrative data.
o. Week of November 10, 2025: 9 of 40 cells contained narrative data.
p. Week of November 17, 2025: 14 of 40 cells contained narrative data.
q. Week of November 24, 2025: 1 of 40 cells contained narrative data. There was no school on November 26 and 27, 2025.
r. Week of December 1, 2025: 3 of 40 cells contained narrative data.
s. Weeks of December 8 and 15, 2025: 0 of 40 cells contained narrative data. There was no school December 22, 2025 through January 2, 2026.
t. Week of January 5, 2026: 2 of 40 cells contained narrative data.
u. Weeks of January 12 and 19, 2026: 0 of 40 cells contained narrative data.
v. Week of February 2, 2026: 3 of 40 cells contained narrative data.
w. Weeks of February 9, 16, and 23, 2026: 0 of 40 cells contained narrative data.
x. Week of March 2, 2026: 3 of 40 cells contained narrative data.
y. Week of March 9, 2026: 0 of 40 cells contained narrative data. There was no school March 16-19, 2026.
z. Weeks of March 23 and 30, 2026: 0 of 40 cells contained narrative data.
aa. In their interview, the Parent recognized this document as the behavior log which was started in the 2025-26 school year.

35. Relevant information from a timeline of events written by the Parent included:
    a. The Parent stated the behavior log was utilized by them and the Other Parent for about 2 to 3 weeks.
    b. In regard to a meeting on August 26, 2025 with the Principal and the Science Teacher, the Parent wrote, "I mentioned that they had not been implementing the behavior log in [the Student's] IEP, and [the Principal] stated several times that it is NOT [emphasis added in original] in [the Student's] IEP. Within days of this heated meeting, the behavior log … was taken away, despite both [the Other Parent] and I insisting that it stay in place. We were told we would get weekly reports from [the Principal] instead of [the Student's] classroom teachers, and they [sic] would be a summary of how the week had gone. This did not occur except for when we repeatedly asked for updates."

Parent Interview

36. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Parent stated when they signed the March 25, 2025 IEP, it was their understanding the Student's teachers would use a behavior log in the form of a virtual document they could access, and the Parent would receive regular updates from that document. The Parent perceived the Student's behaviors were to be documented in the behavior log so the Parent could review and address them with the Student.
37. During the interview, the Parent referenced two pages from the March 25, 2025 IEP. They explained the Student's Previous Special Education Teacher and Previous General Education Teacher expressed concerns and the team decided a weekly behavior log would be sent home to keep track of the Student's behavior within a virtual drive so the Parent could access it. The Parent stated they were told by the IEP team the virtual form would be sent home every Thursday. The Parent said, "This is what I believed to be a part of [the Student's] IEP and what we agreed on and what I signed … . They were going to set it up in [a virtual drive] so that we could all see it. We all had the same information. And as I followed up on that, it never happened. … It was my understanding though, as of March 25th of 2025 … because that was listed twice in the documentation and agreed upon in the documentation that that's what they would be doing and that [the Other Parent] and I would be receiving that … ."
38. The Parent stated they did not receive weekly emails from the Principal regarding the Student's behaviors, and that the Principal might have sent "one, maybe two" emails. The Parent indicated they had to send emails multiple times between September 2025 and the present time to ask for grade updates and behavior concerns and perceived they were "lucky to even get a response from anyone." The Parent explained the Student's teachers completed the behavior log for the first two weeks of the 2025-26 school year.
39. According to the Parent, during a meeting on August 26, 2025, the Parent shared the School had not been implementing the Student's behavior log they believed was part of the IEP. They indicated the Principal "argued back" that the behavior log was not in the IEP and the School "don't [sic] have to do that." The Parent shared that about a week later was when the behavior log went away. They referenced an email from the Special Education Coordinator in which they were told the Principal would send the Parent a weekly report instead. The Parent indicated they requested the behavior log remain in place.
40. When asked how the weekly summaries were different from the behavior log, the Parent indicated it was suggested the Student's teachers send any concerns, problems, or issues to the Principal, who would summarize it and send the Parent a brief summary. The Parent shared they received "maybe one or two" summaries at "the very beginning." They indicated since then, they requested information several times and "maybe got them, but most of the time didn't get any response whatsoever." The Parent did not recall how detailed the summaries were, and said, "I was satisfied with what was in them. I'm not satisfied with the fact that we only got maybe two of them all year and that I have requested them along with any other data and haven't even gotten any response, let alone the logs or summaries."

41. The Parent stated they were asked to communicate with the Principal about the Student's education after the August 26, 2025 meeting and an email on September 3, 2025 regarding the new weekly summaries. The Parent perceived this was because they had contacted the Student's teachers previously to gather information when there had been "major" behavior issues. They indicated the Principal would take the Parent's concerns to the teachers and then respond to the Parent. When asked how that changed their access to the Student's educational information, the Parent said, "I just feel like I am completely removed. … I noticed I wasn't getting responses. So I started slowly occasionally reaching out directly to [the Special Education Teacher]. … I can look up [the Student's] grades in a portal and see if [the Student] is missing something, but that's about it."
42. In regard to the behavior log, the Parent perceived the School removed a support they initially suggested and did not implement. The Parent said, "The removal of the behavior log without [the Other Parent's] consent or my consent impacted our ability to communicate with [the Student] about [their] education, what was going on in the classroom, grades, assignments, behaviors, all of the above. And we specifically requested to leave it in and were denied that."
43. The Parent expressed confusion about the "disconnect" of what was in the Student's March 25, 2025 IEP and what should have been implemented. The Parent perceived the behavior log was the support for the behavior issues the IEP team suggested and everyone agreed to.

Principal Interview

44. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Principal recalled the Student was given a "trial" of pull-out math services around December 1, 2025. The Principal stated this "trial" was communicated to the Parent through an email and a phone call from the Special Education Teacher. The Principal explained they discussed the Student's struggles in math and the Parent agreed to the trial period and then for the "full-time pullout."
45. Regarding the behavior log, the Principal said, "That behavior log in March of 2025, so that was being kept by [the Student's] regular ed[ucation] teacher who was communicating those type [sic] of things when [the Student] would have issues. And so when we started this school year, because we would see some of those defiance issues, then we kept it between all of us teachers as a thing just so that we could see if [the Student] was having a bad day, where [they] [were] struggling … .

And so we used them and then as time went on and [the Student] got settled in school … it became less and less … . The Principal did not know why the Parent perceived the behavior log as a special education intervention.

46. The Principal said of the behavior log, "We were receiving upwards of 15 emails a day from [the Parent] for various people and we weren't able to keep up with it. And so later … it was asked to communicate through me … because those teachers are like, we can't even respond fast enough before [the Parent] has sent another email. And so I asked [the Parent] to go through me and then I could relay it to the teachers, then they could respond in a timely manner … ."

47. The Principal stated the intent of the behavior log was to keep the Parent informed and reduce the number of emails the teachers would have to send to the Parent, who they perceived as "ask[ing] about all the different classes." The Principal perceived the Parent started "nitpicking" things from the behavior log and it was no longer beneficial. The Principal said, "As our discussion was, if we remove [the Parent], we were going to see if that helped to improve [the Student's] behavior where [the Parent] wouldn't know every single thing about every part of [the Student's] day. And so that's why we did that." The Principal explained the behavior log sheet from the 2025-26 school year was to be shared between the teachers and the Parent was added to it because they were concerned about the Student's behaviors. They reiterated the Parent was removed from it once the Parent was questioning what the teachers were doing and it was not focused on the Student's behaviors anymore.

48. The Principal stated the Parent had access to the behavior log sheet for a brief time in September 2025 and could access it every day during that time because it was a live document. The Principal indicated the behavior log was not discontinued and sometimes the teachers would occasionally add information to it. They stated the School "track[ed] all kinds of students, not just [the Student]."

49. The Principal indicated whenever a behavior happened, they would send a notification to the Parent. The Principal stated that after September 10, 2025, the Student had minor issues such as "not wanting to work," not having a pencil, or not completing their planner, but not major issues related to being disrespectful.

50. The Principal explained the behavior log from the start of 2025-26 school year was a virtual sheet that the teachers would input any "major incidents" from a particular day. The Principal stated the Parent wanted the School staff to look for when the Student had a refusal or denial. The Principal indicated the staff kept tally marks on those incidents and the Parent would receive those at the end of the week. The Principal recalled the Parent did not like the change and wanted to return to the original behavior log. The Principal stated they were the person who started sending the weekly summaries to the Parent.

51. When asked about the weekly summaries, the Principal explained they would send how many times a behavior happened related to the three behaviors the Parent wanted the School staff to log. They indicated the Parent did not agree with the process. The Principal did not recall how many times they sent the Parent a weekly summary after September 3, 2025. The Principal said, "… for a while we did it weekly or we would just say there were no issues this week or whatever it might be. … usually we would try to send them every Thursday if not the Monday following."

52. The Principal recalled the change from the behavior log to weekly summaries happened around September 15, 2025 and there was a meeting about it on September 23, 2025. The Principal explained they asked the Parent what they wanted School staff to focus on with the Student, and the Parent indicated they were more concerned about the Student's behaviors. The Principal stated they told the Parent time was needed to put the new form together and provide it to the Student's teachers.

53. The Principal said, "[The Student's] IEP only focuses on math and [their] social work time … . And so that's why I say when they're wanting this log of all these behaviors and it doesn't relate to [the Student's] IEP. … There's no behavior that goes to [their] IEP."

54. During the interview, the Director of Student Services added that part of the Special Education Coordinator's duties were communicating with parents.

55. The Principal indicated the Student's teachers could not keep up with the Parent's emails, so the Principal would refer something to the teachers if necessary, then the teachers would speak with the Principal, and the Principal would communicate that information to the Parent. The Principal said, "I don't think it changed any access. We can't notify parents of every little thing that goes on. … we let [the Parent] know a couple of times if [the Student] was missing assignments or whatever, [the Parent] was not interested in that. [The Parent] was more interested in the behavior … . And so if it was behavior that we would notify any other parent about, then we notified [the Parent] about that. If it's little things that we feel like that we can take care of in the classroom, that's what we did. If it was a repetitive thing that became an issue, then we would let [the Parent] know about that." They added, "If [the Parent] had stuff pertaining to the math or whatever, which was with [the Student's] IEP, [the Special Education Teacher] is also in constant contact with [the Parent] about [the Student's] math thing individually. And so it was more about the things that [the Parent] was asking about behavior-wise in the classroom, not pertaining to the math part."

Special Education Teacher Interview

56. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Special Education Teacher stated the 2025-26 school year was their first time working with the Student. They were responsible for writing the Student's IEP and for overseeing the services and accommodations within it.

57. The Special Education Teacher explained they and the Student's general education teachers observed the Student having some behaviors in the general education classrooms, so they created an informal tracking chart to document their observations. They indicated as the year progressed, the behaviors and documentation decreased. They said of the Student's behaviors, "… maybe refusal to … turn in an assignment or something like that, but nothing that escalated to a higher degree … ." They added, "… as the year progressed, really maybe after three months or so, behaviors decreased, teachers were forming really pretty solid relationships with [the Student] and really there were no concerns … ." The Special Education Teacher stated the information in the behavior log was not shared with the Parents, and it was mostly for the teachers and staff. They indicated since the Student's behaviors had decreased, and that they were minor behaviors such as seeking attention, there was nothing to do with the information.

58. The Special Education Teacher stated the behavior log was used as a general education tool.

59. The Special Education Teacher stated they were responsible for completing the Student's progress reports. They indicated the Social Worker provided the progress data and notes for the Student's social-emotional goal. They stated there was no data sheet the staff followed for that goal. When asked if the 2025-26 behavior tracking sheet was used to inform the Student's progress on their social-emotional goal as described in the progress report, the Special Education Teacher said, "Yeah. I mean, that's just what we were using to document how [the Student] was acting in class." They believed the term "behavior points" meant "… just recording our documentation on that points [sic] of behavior."

60. The Special Education Teacher stated they did not use data from the behavior log to inform the Student's special education support.

61. The Special Education Teacher shared the Parent never asked them for the behavior log or data, and was not aware of the Parent asking anyone else for that information.

62. The Special Education Teacher said, "In the beginning [the Parent] was communicating with the teachers fully, but I believe at one point the communication between [the Parent] and teachers had been overwhelming, I think for some of the teachers … . I think there was a point where [the Principal] may have said, 'Hey, we're going to stop that kind of communication … just go through me.' It was far too much for the teachers to withstand." They believed it was early in the 2025-26 school year when teachers were getting overwhelmed with "constant emails." The Special Education Teacher indicated their communication with the Parent was reasonable and they had no communication issues with them.

63. The Special Education Teacher stated they "fully and freely" communicated with the Parent and saw no impact on that from the Principal's directive for the Parent to communicate through them.

64. The Special Education Teacher observed no indication of changes being made to the Student's IEP without the Parent's consent.

65. The Special Education Teacher explained they spoke with the Student's general education math teacher and learned the Student was struggling, so around December 2025 they thought they would pull the Student out into the resource room for one-on-one work. They stated when they decided to try the pull-out, they completed an amendment for the change, which the Parent signed. They indicated they did not completely pull the Student out until they had the IEP amendment.

Director of Student Services Interview

66. During an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Director of Student Services stated the Special Education Coordinator had access to the Parent, and any IEP decisions were communicated to the Parent. They indicated the IEP team had some "wiggle room" in implementing or trying something, and they perceived there was communication with the Parent. They indicated the change in the Student's math services was not a substantial change and did not require parental consent, but the IEP team still received consent from the Parent. They believed that in regard to the Student's special education services, the IEP team did what they said they would do and communicated it to the Parent. They said, "I think the social emotional concern that is in the IEP is being addressed within that specialty design [sic] instruction with [the Social Worker], but that is not the same thing that the communication from classroom teachers was about because that communication was more of grades."

Positions of the Parties, Applicable Regulations, and Conclusions

Issue One

Whether USD #390, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, implemented the Student's IEP, specifically their behavior log accommodation. K.A.R. 91-40-16(a)(b); 34 CFR § 300.323(a)(d).

According to K.A.R. 91-40-16(a)(b) and 34 CFR § 300.323(a)(d), each agency shall be responsible for initiating and conducting meetings to develop, review, and revise the IEP of each exceptional child served by the agency. Each agency shall ensure that the following conditions are met: An IEP is in effect before special education and related services are provided to an exceptional child; those services for which written consent has been granted as specified by law are implemented not later than 10 school days after parental consent is granted unless reasonable justification for a delay can be shown; an IEP is in effect for each exceptional child at the beginning of each school year; and the child's IEP is accessible to each regular education teacher, special education teacher, related service provider, and other service provider who is responsible for its implementation. Each teacher and provider must be informed of their specific responsibilities related to implementing the child's IEP, and the specific accommodations, modifications, and supports that must be provided for the child in accordance with the IEP.

The Parent alleged the LEA failed to follow the Student's IEP by not completing a weekly behavior log.

The LEA stated they consistently provided the Student's mandated accommodations. They indicated a behavior log was not a specified special education accommodation, but the LEA used it as a general education data collection tool to monitor performance, satisfy present-level reporting, and maintain communication with the Parents.

According to Beer ex rel. A.B. v. USD 512 Shawnee Mission (2023), "School districts incur liability when 'a material failure to implement an IEP violates the IDEA.'" (citing Van Duyn v. Baker Sch. Dist. 5J, (9th Cir. 2007)). Additionally, E.C. by W.C. and K.C. v. U.S.D. 385 Andover (2020) states, "'[T]o prevail on a claim under the IDEA, a party challenging the implementation of an IEP must show more than a de minimis failure to implement all elements of that IEP, and, instead, must demonstrate that the school board or other authorities failed to implement substantial or significant provisions of the IEP.' ... Without further guidance from the Tenth Circuit on this standard, the Court proceeds with its analysis under the prevailing "materiality" standard from its sister circuits ... ." (citing Houston Indep. Sch. Dist. v. Bobby R ., (5th Cir. 2000)).

In this case, the evidence showed the Parent believed the behavior log was part of the Student's IEP because it was recorded in the March 25, 2025 IEP Team Meeting Notes. According to interviews from the Principal, the Special Education Coordinator, and the Special Education Teacher, in addition to survey data from the Student's teachers, the behavior log was not part of the IEP, but rather was a general education intervention and internal document. Additionally, the use of a behavior log was not included as a service, support, or an accommodation in the March 25, 2025 or March 4, 2026 IEPs. The Special Education Coordinator explained a behavior log could be considered for either data collection or a communication tool to determine interventions, but was not identified as an accommodation because it did not change how the Student accessed instruction, participated in class, or accessed testing or assessments.

There was clear evidence a behavior log was discussed and intended by the team, and its inclusion as part of the Team Meeting Notes in the IEP led to the Parent's confusion about the role it played in the Student's education. However, it was never part of the IEP as a service or an accommodation. The evidence did not indicate there was a failure, material or otherwise, to implement the Student's IEP.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to implement the Student's IEP, specifically their behavior log accommodation.

Issue Two

Whether USD #390, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, ensured the Parent was offered the opportunity to meaningfully participate in the Student's education when they were asked to speak only with the Principal. Further, whether the LEA provided the Parent with behavior data when requested. K.A.R. 91-40-25(b), K.A.R. 91-40-509(a); 34 CFR §§ 300.322(a)(c), 300.501(a)(b)(c), 300.613.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-25(b) and 34 CFR § 300.322(a)(c), each agency shall take steps to ensure that one or both of the parents of an exceptional child are present at each meeting concerning their child or are afforded the opportunity to participate. These steps shall include the following: scheduling the meeting at a mutually agreed-upon time and place and informing the parents of the information specified in subsection (c) of this regulation; and providing prior written notice of any meeting, in accordance with subsection (c) of this regulation, to the parents of the child. If neither parent can attend an IEP Team meeting, the public agency must use other methods to ensure parent participation, including individual or conference telephone calls.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-50(a), as used in this regulation, the following terms shall have the meanings specified in this subsection: "Destruction" means physically destroying the medium on which information is recorded or removing all personal identifiers from the information so that no one can be identified; "education records" means any document or medium on which information directly related to one or more students is maintained by a participating agency in accordance with K.S.A. 72-6214 and amendments thereto; and "participating agency" means any educational agency or institution that collects, maintains, or uses personally identifiable student information to provide special education and related services to children with disabilities.

According to 34 CFR § 300.501(a)(b)(c), the parents of a child with a disability must be afforded an opportunity to inspect and review all education records with respect to the identification, evaluation, and educational placement of the child and the provision of a FAPE to the child. The parents of a child with a disability must be afforded an opportunity to participate in meetings with respect to the identification, evaluation, and educational placement of the child, and the provision of a FAPE to the child. Each public agency must provide notice to ensure that parents of children with disabilities have the opportunity to participate in meetings. A meeting does not include informal or unscheduled conversations involving public agency personnel, nor does it include conversations on issues such as teaching methodology, lesson plans, or coordination of service provision. A meeting does not include preparatory activities that public agency personnel engage in to develop a proposal, or a response to a parent proposal, that will be discussed at a later meeting. Each public agency must ensure that a parent of each child with a disability is a member of any group that makes decisions on the educational placement of the parent's child. If neither parent can participate in a meeting in which a decision is to be made relating to the educational placement of their child, the public agency must use other methods to ensure their participation, including individual or conference telephone calls or video conferencing. A placement decision may be made by a group without the involvement of a parent if the public agency is unable to obtain the parent's participation in the decision. In this case, the public agency must have a record of its attempt to ensure their involvement.

According to 34 CFR § 300.613, each participating agency must permit parents to inspect and review any education records relating to their children that are collected, maintained, or used by the agency under this part. The agency must comply with a request without unnecessary delay and before any meeting regarding an IEP, or any hearing or resolution session, and in no case more than 45 days after the request has been made. The right to inspect and review education records under this section includes the right to a response from the participating agency to reasonable requests for explanations and interpretations of the records; the right to request the agency provide copies of the records containing the information if failure to provide those copies would effectively prevent the parent from exercising the right to inspect and review the records; and the right to have a representative of the parent inspect and review the records. An agency may presume that the parent has authority to inspect and review records relating to his or her child unless the agency has been advised the parent does not have the authority under applicable State law governing such matters as guardianship, separation, and divorce.

The Parent alleged the LEA limited the Parent's ability to communicate with the Student's teachers directly, allowing them to speak only with the Principal. The Parent also requested behavior logs and did not receive this information.

The LEA stated the Parents were provided meaningful opportunities to participate in the Student's education. The LEA indicated while the Parents were requested to funnel communications through the Principal, this did not preclude their involvement in the decision-making process or access to the Student's records. The LEA stated they provided general education intervention data as requested.

Parent Participation

In Forest Grove School District v. Student, (D. Or. 2018), the Court concluded a communication protocol to route communication through a single person at the school did not "seriously infringe" on the parents' opportunity to participate in their child's education.

In this case, the evidence showed School staff believed the Parent was directed to communicate with the Principal due to the Parent sending an "overwhelming" amount of emails to the Student's teachers. However, School staff also perceived this change did not negatively impact the Parent's ability to participate in the Student's education. The evidence demonstrated the Parent had access to the Student's grades, attended and participated in IEP meetings, and received copies of the Student's IEP paperwork and accompanying documents from the Special Education Coordinator in September 2025.

Documentation showed the Parent reached out to request behavior updates more often than this information was provided by the School. However, it was also shown that School staff responded when contacted. While the Parent stated they felt removed from the Student's education, there was not sufficient evidence to demonstrate this. The facts indicated the Principal would send weekly behavior summaries to the Parent, but the evidence did not support that this occurred weekly or regularly, including the Parent's and the Principal's testimony. The evidence demonstrated the Principal sent a detailed weekly summary one time during the 2025-26 school year, but the lack of summaries could have been because there were no other occasions to email the Parent about the behaviors the School team agreed to report on. The Principal also stated they reported behaviors they would share with any parent, but not situations they felt were taken care of in the classroom. However, this could not be determined conclusively from the facts. There was insufficient evidence to support that a lack of weekly summaries or a directive to speak only with the Principal negatively impacted the Parent's ability to participate in the Student's education.

Access to Behavior Data

The behavior log met the criteria for an "education record" as described in state and federal law. The information in the behavior log was collected and maintained by School staff, and was later referenced in the Student's progress data related to their social-emotional IEP goal. In this case, on September 3, 2025, the LEA removed the Parents' access to the live behavior log document. The evidence showed the Parent requested to view the behavior log on September 9 and 18, 2025, and on November 10, 2025, requested to view a copy of the quantitative data School staff were gathering. The evidence showed the School responded to the Parent with email updates on five occasions, but the facts did not show the Parent received the behavior logs after their access was removed.

The behavior log was used to inform the Student's social-emotional goal, as evidenced by the February 18, 2026 progress report data, the March 4, 2026 IEP, and written statements from the Social Worker and the Special Education Coordinator; therefore, it was an educational record to which the Parent should have had access. While less data was added to the behavior log as the 2025-26 school year progressed, there continued to be some usage by the Student's teachers, as shown in the evidence and in the Principal's interview. While the behavior log showed a decrease in entries, there were still entries as late into the school year as March 2, 2026, which the Parent should have had been provided as part of the Student's educational records.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to ensure the Parents were offered the opportunity to meaningfully participate in the Student's education when they were asked to speak only with the Principal. It is substantiated that the LEA failed to provide the Parent with behavior data when requested.

Issue Three

Whether USD #390, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, made reasonable attempts to obtain informed consent from the Parents when they made changes to the Student's IEP. K.A.R. 91-40-27(a)(3)(g), K.A.R. 91-40-17(e), K.A.R. 91-40-1(l)(mm)(sss), K.S.A. 72-3430(b)(6); 34 CFR §§ 300.9, 300.300(d)(2).

According to K.A.R. 91-40-27(a)(3)(g), except as otherwise provided in this regulation, each agency shall obtain parental consent before making a material change in services to, or a substantial change in the placement of, an exceptional child, unless the change is made under the provisions of K.A.R. 91-40-33 through 91-40-38 or is based upon the child's graduation from high school or exceeding the age of eligibility for special education services.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-17(e), an agency may conduct an IEP team meeting without parental participation if the agency, despite repeated attempts, has been unable to contact the parent or parents or to convince them that they should participate. If an agency conducts an IEP team meeting without parental participation, the agency shall have a record of the attempts that the agency made to contact the parents to provide them notice of the meeting and to secure their participation. The record shall include at least two of the following: detailed records of telephone calls made or attempted, including the date, time, and person making the calls and the results of the calls; detailed records of visits made to the parent's home, including the date, time, and person making the visit and the results of the visit; copies of correspondence sent to each parent and any responses received; and detailed records of any other method attempted to contact the parents and the results of that attempt.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-1(l) and 34 CFR § 300.9, consent means that all of the following conditions are met: a parent has been fully informed of all information relevant to the activity for which consent is sought, in the parent's native language or other mode of communication; and a parent understands and agrees in writing to the carrying out of the activity for which consent is sought, and the consent describes that activity and lists the records, if any, that will be released and to whom. A parent understands the following: the granting of consent is voluntary on the part of the parent and may be revoked at any time; if the parent revokes consent, the revocation is not retroactive and does not negate an action that has occurred after the consent was given and before the consent was revoked; and the parent may revoke consent in writing for the continued provision of a particular service or placement only if the child's IEP team certifies in writing that the child does not need the particular service or placement for which consent is being revoked in order to receive a free appropriate public education.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-1(mm), material change in service means an increase or decrease of 25 percent or more of the duration or frequency of a special education service, related service, or supplementary aid or service specified on the IEP of an exceptional child.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-1(sss), a substantial change in placement means the movement of an exceptional child, for more than 25 percent of the child's school day, from a less restrictive environment to a more restrictive environment or from a more restrictive environment to a less restrictive environment.

According to K.S.A. 72-3430(b)(6), the parents of exceptional children shall have the right to consent, or refuse to consent, to the evaluation, reevaluation or the initial placement of their child and to any substantial change in placement of, or a material change in services for, their child, unless a change in placement of their child is ordered pursuant to the provisions of K.S.A. 72-3433, and amendments thereto, or the agency can demonstrate that it has taken reasonable measures to obtain parental consent to a change in placement or services, and the child's parent has failed to respond. If the parent fails to respond to the request for parental consent to a substantial change in placement or a material change in services, the agency must maintain detailed records of written and verbal contacts with the parent and the response, if any, received from the parent.

According to 34 CFR § 300.300(d)(2), a State may require parental consent for other services and activities under this part if it ensures that each public agency in the State establishes and implements effective procedures to ensure that a parent's refusal to consent does not result in a failure to provide the child with a FAPE.

The Parent alleged the LEA made "changes to processes" in the Student's IEP without parental consent.

The LEA stated they made reasonable and documented efforts to obtain informed consent from the Parents regarding changes to the Student's IEP. They explained frequent school-home communication ensured the Parents remained informed of the Student's progress. The LEA stated the Parents were active participants in the decision-making process prior to any changes to the Student's special education or general education program.

The evidence showed the LEA obtained the Parent's consent when they made changes to the Student's IEP, such as on December 3, 2025, when the Parent consented to moving the Student to a resource classroom for an adapted math curriculum. This change was documented in a December 4, 2025 IEP amendment form and PWN, both signed by the Parent on December 9, 2025.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to make reasonable attempts to obtain informed consent from the Parents when they made changes to the Student's IEP.

Corrective Action

Information gathered in the course of this investigation has substantiated noncompliance with special education statutes and regulations. A violation occurred in the following area:

A. Federal regulation K.A.R. 91-40-50(a) defines what an education record is, 34 CFR § 300.501(a)(b)(c) states the parents of a child with a disability must be afforded an opportunity to inspect and review all education records with respect to the identification, evaluation, and educational placement of the child and the provision of a FAPE to the child, and 34 CFR § 300.613 states each participating agency must permit parents to inspect and review any education records relating to their children that are collected, maintained, or used by the agency.

In this case, the evidence supports the finding that USD #390 did not provide the Parent with behavior data when requested.

Based on the foregoing, USD #390 is directed to take the following actions:

1. Within 15 calendar days of the date of this report, USD #390 shall provide the Parent with a complete, unredacted (except where legally required) copy of all requested education records. The LEA must submit a signed statement from the school administrator or a tracking receipt confirming the Parent has received the records. All administrative and special education staff at USD #390 must complete a training session on K.A.R. 91-40-50(a), and 34 CFR §§ 300.501(a)(b)(c), 300.613.
2. Submit a written statement of assurance to Special Education and Title Services (SETS) stating that it will comply with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA at K.A.R. 91-40-50(a), and 34 CFR §§ 300.501(a)(b)(c), 300.613 by completing the aforementioned tasks and training.

Right to Appeal

Either party may appeal the findings or conclusions in this report by filing a written notice of appeal with the State Commissioner of Education, ATTN: Special Education and Title Services, Landon State Office Building, 900 SW Jackson Street, Suite 620, Topeka, KS 66612-1212. The notice of appeal may also be filed by email to formalcomplaints@ksde.gov The notice of appeal must be delivered within 10 calendar days from the date of this report.

For further description of the appeals process, see Kansas Administrative Regulations 91-40-51(f).

K.A.R. 91-40-51(f) Appeals.

(1) Any agency or complainant may appeal any of the findings or conclusions of a compliance report prepared by the special education section of the department by filing a written notice of appeal with the state commissioner of education. Each notice shall be filed within 10 days from the date of the report. Each notice shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect.

Upon receiving an appeal, an appeal committee of at least three department of education members shall be appointed by the commissioner to review the report and to consider the information provided by the local education agency, the complainant, or others. The appeal process, including any hearing conducted by the appeal committee, shall be completed within 15 days from the date of receipt of the notice of appeal, and a decision shall be rendered within five days after the appeal process is completed unless the appeal committee determines that exceptional circumstances exist with respect to the particular complaint. In this event, the decision shall be rendered as soon as possible by the appeal committee.

(2) If an appeal committee affirms a compliance report that requires corrective action by an agency, that agency shall initiate the required corrective action immediately. If, after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the agency shall be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following:

(A) The issuance of an accreditation deficiency advisement;
(B) the withholding of state or federal funds otherwise available to the agency;
(C) the award of monetary reimbursement to the complainant; or
(D) any combination of the actions specified in paragraph (f)(2)

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #458, BASEHOR-LINWOOD PUBLIC SCHOOLS
ON APRIL 16, 2026

DATE OF REPORT: MAY 22, 2026

This report is in response to a complaint filed with the Kansas State Department of Education against USD #458 (Basehor-Linwood Public Schools) on behalf of ------ by his mother, -------. In the remainder of the report, ------- will be referred to as " the student" and ------- as "the parent" or "the complainant." Subsequent to the complaint the parent secured an educational advocate, -------. In the remainder of the complaint ------- shall be referred to as "the educational advocate."

The complaint is against USD #458 (Basehor-Linwood Public Schools). In the remainder of the report, USD #458 will be referred to as "the Local Education Agency" or "LEA". When a special education complaint is filed against a school district that is a member of a special education cooperative or interlocal, or that uses any other state recognized public agency to serve children with disabilities, the term " local education agency (LEA)" in this report will include the school district, the special education cooperative or interlocal, and any other agency that is recognized by the state as an administrative agency for public elementary or secondary schools and is serving the educational needs of this student." In this case the Tonganoxie/Basehor-Linwood Special Education Cooperative serves the Basehor-Linwood Public School District. Local Education Agency staff will be referred to In the remainder of this report as follows:

- Chris Cullinan, Director of Special Education
- Melanie French, Special Education Assistant Director
- Kim Srubas, School Nurse
- Sara Henninger, Teacher
- Rebecca Romain, Principal
- Tiffany Lynch, Substitute Principal
- Cassie Cochran, IEP Case Manager
- Pierce Allen, Library Aide and Family Nanny

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) allows for a 30-day timeline to investigate a complaint from the date in which it was filed. A complaint is considered filed on the date in which it was received by KSDE. In this case, the KSDE initially received the complaint on April 16, 2026.

Evidence Reviewed

During the investigation, the Complaint Investigator, Donna Wickham, reviewed all evidence and documentation provided by the Local Education Agency and the parent and the educational advocate. The investigator talked with the mother by phone on April 20 and April 22, 2026. The investigator interviewed the mother and educational advocate on May 11, 2026. Emails were exchanged among the mother, educational advocate and investigator on April 22, 23, 24, 28, May 4, 5, 13, 14, and 15, 2026. An interview was conducted with the Director of Special Education, Principal, and Special Education Assistant Director on May 21, 2026. Emails were exchanged between the Director of Special Education and investigator on May 2, 7, 14, and 19.

While additional documentation was provided in consideration of this investigation and reviewed, the following materials were used as the basis of the findings and conclusions of the investigation:

Documents:

1. August 12, 2025 letter from Gastroenterology Department
2. October 24, 2025 Communication by mother with District Nurse via Superintendent

Background Information

The student is a kindergarten aged six year old who was initially identified as eligible for special education and related services under the category of developmental disability. The student additionally has health issues that necessitate an individualized nursing care plan. The student was new to the district during the 2025-26 school year. In anticipation of enrollment the parent contacted the LEA on June 24, 2025 of the student having medical needs and that special education services were needed. When enrollment documents were dropped off they included a statement of the student needing nursing supports and requested a meeting to share information and answer questions. Supplies were then dropped off at the beginning of school and each item was explained and opportunities to learn about the care and supplies were provided. The LEA received a copy of the GI orders outlining dietary restrictions and needs which were provided to food services and the student's teacher. It was agreed that the LEA's library aid that serves as the family's nanny during summers would assist with the student's medical needs to assist with the transition while the student was being evaluated for special education and related services. During this time, no incidents were reports while the LEA followed the parent's recommendations for ostomy care. Additionally, the student's teacher interacted with the mother frequently about the student ostomy monitoring, heat tolerance, and dietary requirements. On October 1, 2025, the superintendent met with the parent documenting ostomy care and expectations, discussing the role of the school nurse. On November 6, 2026, the student's IEP developed and IEP and Individualized Nursing Care Plan that were implemented following the parent's consent for the student to receive services. The IEP contained five goals and six accommodations. The student received 20 minutes of speech and language service outside of the general classroom two days every week and 30 minutes of special education outside of the general classroom five days every week. The Individualized Nursing Care Plan addressed food size and allowance for family-provided snacks and access to additional supplemental formula. It also addressed four situations to maintain a functioning stoma/ACE site at school.

Issues Investigated

Issue One

Did the LEA follow state and federal regulations of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) when implementing the student's IEP, specifically the Individualized Nursing Care Plan during the 2025-2026 school year?

Applicable Law

Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. §300.323(c)(2) require school districts to ensure that as soon as possible following the development of the IEP, special education and related services are made available to the child in accordance with the child's IEP. K.A.R. §91-40-16(b)(2) further specifies those services for which written consent has been granted as specified by law are implemented not later than 10 school days after parental consent is granted unless reasonable justification for a delay can be shown.

K.A.R.91-40-1. Definitions. (fff) "School health services" means health services that are specified in the IEP of a child with a disability and that are provided by a school nurse or other qualified person. (ggg) "School nurse services" means nursing services that are provided by a qualified nurse in accordance with the child's IEP.

From page 110 of the Kansas Special Education Process Handbook, "school health services are to be specified on the IEP of a child with a disability and are provided by a school nurse or other qualified person (K.A.R. 91-40-1(fff). School nurse services are services provided by a qualified school nurse (K.A.R. 91-40-1(ggg). School health services and school nurse services are related services, which must be provided whenever needed to assist a child with a disability to benefit from special education (K.A.R. 91-40-1(ccc); 34 C.F.R. 300.34(a))."

"Health services that may be performed by persons who are not physicians (nurses or other qualified persons) are related services which must be provided by the school when needed to assist a child with a disability to benefit from special education." "The Kansas Nurse Practice Act addresses the need for appropriate supervision and training for personnel providing services such as medication administration. Some procedures may not be delegated to personnel other than a nurse under any circumstances. For additional information, please consult the Kansas Nurse Practice Act Statutes & Administrative Regulations, https://www.ksbn.org/npa/npa.pdf."

Parent Position

The parent alleged the LEA was notified prior to the start of the school year that the student was moving into the district and provided documents showing the nursing supports the student would need. Throughout the year the LEA has not implemented them, putting the student at an elevated health risk and making the student's transition to this new school uncomfortable. Despite offering training to the school nurse, another LEA employee who is also employed by the family as a nanny has had to step in and provide direct medical care and provide training to the nurse. Despite all of these incidents the LEA continues to fail to implement the nursing plan.

Local Education Agency Position

The Local Education Agency responded that school staff met with the parent at the beginning of the school year to make sure school staff were prepared to safely meet the student's medical needs prior to the student being eligible for special education services. At that time they received the doctor order from the GI clinic regarding dietary needs and restrictions which was shared with food services and the student's classroom teacher. The student was evaluated for special education and found eligible on November 3, 2025 and an initial IEP including an Individualized Nursing Care Plan written and discussed during a meeting on November 6, 2025. The parent signed consent for the student's initial IEP on November 12, 2025. The LEA asserts that they have implemented the IEP as written during the school year using appropriately licensed and trained staff as needed. Following an incident on April 3, 2026 the IEP team met and revised the IEP to add more extensive oversight and checking by a nurse, however the parent did not sign consent for a material change in services so the initial IEP remains the IEP of record.

Analysis: Findings of Fact

1. The Initial IEP dated November 3, 2025 following the IEP team's determination that the student would qualify for special education and related services under the eligibility category of developmental disabilities was discussed at a meeting on November 6, 2025 according to the meeting notes. The Health section of the Present Levels of Academic Achievement and Functional Performance refers to the Clinic notes dated June 30, 2025 documenting: 1) Colostomy (Constipation - partial sigmoid resection MACE and colostomy) - see health plan; 2) Cerebral palsy; 3) Genetic susceptibility to malignant hyperthermia due to RYR1 (ryanodine receptor gene mutation positive; 4) Obstructive Sleep Apnea; 5) Fatigue; 6) Short Stature; 7) Hypotonia; 8) Pes Planus; 9) Trivial aortic root dilation with clockwise rotated aortic root (no cardiac specific restrictions); 10) Family reported that he showing signs of Autism to doctor on 6/30/25. Family indicated they are following up with neurologist for evaluation. Medications are listed but reported as given at home or as needed. Finally, it is listed that "Mom reported the following food restrictions: broccoli, apple skins, limited grape skins. Mom and the team report that [student] is aware of these restrictions." The question, "Does the student require Individual Nursing Care Plan?" Is checked "Yes". The IEP includes five academic/language goals. The services are for special education and speech. No Support for School Personnel are listed. Six accommodations are listed to assist in the Student's classroom academic participation.

2. The Nursing Plan dated November 3, 2025 records it was prepared by the school nurse. It lists the Medical Diagnosis/Symptoms as "Constipation s/p partial sigmoid resection MACE and colostomy" The Prescribed Treatment and Medication is from the local hospital's clinical documentation report dated May 19, 2025. It states that the family is currently flushing colostomy with 200mL water and 20mL glycerin at home each day. The June 30, 2025 hospital Pulmonology Clinic Notes report that the student chokes/coughs when eating and is at risk for aspiration. The August 12, 2025 hospital's Gastrointestinal Clinic orders include: 1. Bits of food should be dime-nickel in size 2. Allow snacks during the day per parents discretion 3. Allow the student to drink supplemental formula at school per parents schedule request. The Nursing Goal and Plan contained in the plan states that the student will maintain a functioning stoma/ACE site at school. The following plan is described.
    - If Mini-Ace (Antegrade Continence Enema) becomes dislodged or is accidentally removed the opening may bleed
        1. Immediately take student to nurse
        2. Cover area with gauze or bandage
        3. Call mother, (mother has requested that we do not call 911)
        4. Call father if mom is unable to answer
    - If Colostomy bag were to leak or rupture:
        1. Escort student to the nurse bathroom to clean up
        2. Replace external bag
    - If the mesh tape on body is rolled down: *check the mesh tape if student is holding abdomen or flicking pants at the waist and add the extended barrier bandage over the mesh
    - If the mesh tape on his body is disturbed to the point that the wax ring is visible
        1. Call mother
        2. Call father if mom is unable to answer

    Comments include Colostomy care supply bag kept at school; the mother will notify the school when changes to care are updated; the mother will ask for doctor's order for on or around November 17, 2025 during doctor appointment for 1. specific doctors order for changing bag, placing of extended barrier bandage, stoma prolapse care, and coloring/blistering of stoma; 2. size of food to be provided, food restrictions; and 3. restrictions due to fatigue or overheating. No concerns were identified regarding fatigue or overheating in the complaint.

3. The meeting notes from the November 6, 2025 IEP meeting show discussions about the draft health plan prepared by the school nurse. It is recorded that the students mother stated there will be more health updates. The draft Individualized Nursing Care Plan was reviewed for the processes that are followed due to the colostomy. Edits were made to the nursing/health plan based on the mother's clarification for the student's health needs. It is recorded that the health/nursing plan was updated to include the following: 1) if the external parts of the bag comes off or leaks/ruptures, the nurse will replace the external pieces, but if more internal parts or mesh sticker applicator portion completely comes off and the wax ring underneath is compromised the mother or father should be called. 2) Should the mesh start to roll up (not fully removed), there is an extended barrier in the nurse's office that can be put on to prevent it from coming off completely. 3) The student has an ostomy backpack in the nurses office and if the student is "playing with" the pants (flicking) or grabbing at the abdomen, it should be checked. 4) Follow doctor's order for nickel size food due to previous issues with swallowing, checking the color of the stoma, skin condition, blisters around area of stoma, condition of ostomy bag and parts. 5.) The student's mother is getting doctor's order should the student experience a prolapse, as has occurred previously. It is recorded that there will be a doctor's order to put sugar on it to make the prolapse go back in. 6) The student is not allowed to have broccoli, apple skin, minimal grapes cut in a specific size (long ways two times). The student knows that broccoli and apples are not permissible when getting hot lunch. Everything in the student's home lunch will be acceptable food. Though the student is doing well with larger pieces of food (sandwiches cut into 4 pieces), the student's mother would like to keep the nickel size pieces until she gets new orders from doctors.7) Finally, the student carries spare clothes in the backpack.

4. The PWN dated November 12, 2025 records the decisions made during the November 6, 2025 evaluation and initial IEP meeting to include the service minutes for special education, speech and accommodations. Consent was signed by the mother on November 17, 2025.
5. The LEA stated that the doctor's order for the ostomy care was provided to the LEA on December 18, 2025 and updated orders were received on May 1, 2026.
6. The Ostomy bag change record (recorded on the Medication Administration Record/MAR form) documents that the school nurse recorded that the colostomy bag was sent to the nurse by the teacher on January 12, 16, 27, 30, February 10, 18, March 22, April 1, 6, 8, and 20 to check on the bag. It indicates that the bag needed to be changed on February 18, 2026. The LEA reported that during the 2025-2026 school year the ostomy bag needed to be changed December 17, 2025 and January 16, 2026. The LEA stated that the MAR document did not lend itself to providing the information that was sought by the parent so the LEA created a document titled, Bag Checker, to provide more detail about the ostomy bag. It was implemented on April 20, 2026.
7. The mother notified the kindergarten teacher in an email on December 9, 2025 that "...[student's] ostomy bag was only attached at the bottom. I told [student] needs to tell you when it starts to come off." The teacher responded, "Thank you for reminding [student] to let me know right away. I didn't notice [student] holding it or rubbing it today, so I'm sorry I missed that it was coming loose. [Student] had a sub in PE this afternoon, and I let [sub] know to make sure [student] didn't overdo it. It's possible that might have been when it loosened. I'll keep that in mind for future days when there's a sub in PE."

8. An email from the school nurse to the parent on January 16, 2026 documents that the student's ostomy bag was starting to come off and the school nurse requested the LEA staff that was the family nanny to "show me exactly how to remove the adhesive as the last time the bag was completely off and I did not remove any adhesive."
9. The LEA staff who also serves as the family nanny provided a written statement detailing that the school nurse asked for assistance in how to best clean out the ostomy bag in mid fall of the 2025-2026 school year and then right before the winter break sought out this staff person to ask how to apply the adhesive to the ostomy bag as it was becoming dislodged. As the staff was starting to demonstrate re-adhering the bag the staff noticed that the bag was almost completely detached and needed a full bag change. The staff person noted that the nurse had to step out during the change to attend to another student's needs.
10. The email on January 23, 2026 records that the parent emailed school staff requesting a meeting after concerns with implementation emerged with the student getting access to an apple on January 13, 2026 and eating part of it before it was noticed and the student's sister stepping in to guide the student to the classroom and assist with food choices. The substitute principal responded and a meeting was scheduled and confirmed.
11. The principal emailed the parent on April 3, 2026 that a designated staff person will check the adhesiveness and security of the student's ostomy bag prior to and immediately following recess, physical education, and any activity involving increased physical movement following The April 3, 2026 incident. The parent responded on April 5, 2026 as follows:

    Due to recent events of coming home twice in a row of [student's] bag detached mesh and bag, the second day covered is dried fecal matter on [student's] body, clothes, and zero protection against [student's] stoma. There needs to be immediate action for training against this type of medical neglect as there has been ample discussions, opportunities, teachings, acknowledgment of abilities within their care and resources set up to ensure proper care and support for [student] is available and there is zero excuses for the condition our [student] came home in on Friday, the 3rd. This also is in complete violation of [student's] medical care supports in [student's] IEP. [Student] will receive individualized nursing support for ostomy care throughout the school day to maintain health, safety, and dignity. [Student] is unable to independently recognize or communicate ostomy care needs at this time, requiring staff-initiated and proactive monitoring. A trained staff member or school nurse will complete ostomy checks upon arrival to school, before and after recess, before and after physical education, and prior to dismissal. Additional checks will be completed as needed based on activity level or observable signs such as discomfort, odor, leakage, or changes in behavior. Staff will assess the adhesiveness, seal integrity, and fullness of the ostomy pouch during each check. Assistance with emptying or changing the appliance will be provided in a private, sanitary setting as needed. Ostomy care supplies will be maintained in a designated, accessible location at school. Staff will monitor for signs of skin irritation, breakdown, or complications and will promptly report concerns to the school nurse and communication with be given to us as the parents.

12. An IEP team meeting was held on April 8, 2026 to revise the IEP and Individualized Nursing Care Plan following the April 3, 2026 incident to avoid a recurrence. The PWN dated April 8, 2026 documented that the parent did not sign consent to update the student's IEP and Individualized Nursing Care Plan.
13. The principal notified the mother in an email on April 21, 2026 that another school employee who also served as the family's nanny will serve as a back up to the LEA's CNA when that person was not present. The email acknowledges that this staff person is not serving in a CNA role but working under the direction and oversight of a "licensed RN, in alignment with district guidelines and applicable regulations."
14. The Delegation of Specific Nursing Tasks in the School Setting for Kansas provides guidance as follows: "The following table is to be used to determine to whom Specialized Caretaking tasks or procedures may be delegated. Only the Registered Professional Nurse (RN) responsible for the student's nursing care may determine which nursing tasks may be delegated to an Unlicensed Assistive Person (UAP). The RN or the Licensed Practical Nurse (LPN) shall supervise all nursing tasks delegated in accordance with the criteria listed in KAR 60-15-101 through104. ...Basic Caretaking tasks (including bathing, dressing, grooming, routine dental, hair and skin care, preparation of food for an oral feeding, exercise – [excluding OT and PT], toileting and diapering, hand washing, transferring, and ambulation) may be performed by a UAP without delegation."
15. The Delegation of Specific Nursing Tasks in the School Setting for Kansas documents Ostomy care and care of skin with damaged integrity as requiring a provider order. In regard to following the provider order is an allowed scope of practice task for a Registered Nurse (RN); a supervised scope of practice task for a Licensed Practical Nurse (LPN) and a delegated task with RN or LPN supervision. Care of skin with potential for damage does not require a provider order and is an allowed scope of practice task for a Registered Nurse (RN); a supervised scope of practice task for a Licensed Practical Nurse (LPN) and a delegated task with RN or LPN supervision.

Conclusion

The implementation of the IEP including the Individualized Nursing Care Plan is based on the date that special education services were initiated, November 12, 2025. The IEP dated November 3, 2025 is the only IEP in effect during the 2025-26 school year. While an update was proposed at an April 28, 2026 IEP the change was a material change in service and the parent did not sign consent so the initial IEP and Individualized Nursing Care Plan remained in effect for the school year. In this case the IEP indicated that the student had an Individualized Nursing Care Plan that would be a part of the student's special education services. The IEP did not include nursing services, accommodations or specialized training in the Support for School Personnel section.

Dietary. The Individualized Nursing Care Plan addresses size of food, allowing snacks and supplemental formula as guided by parent request and the complaint does not address these as issues. It does not address dietary restrictions. The November 3, 2025 IEP meeting notes however document that the dietary restrictions as indicated in a food list were to be added to the Health Plan, but that change was not made. The Individualized Nursing Care Plan specifies that the LEA ensure the school is following doctor's feeding orders. The classroom teacher and parent indicated that they talked in the morning and the classroom teacher electronically communicated regarding the size of food, snacks and supplemental formula.

Ostomy/Stoma Care. In regard to the Ostomy/Stoma care the goal on the Individualized Nursing Care Plan was listed as maintaining a functioning stoma/ACE site at school. The plan does indicate the role of the nurse when dislodged, accidentally removed, bag leakage or ruptured or if the mesh tape is rolled down to the point the wax ring is visible. On December 18, 2025, the LEA received the doctor's order for the ostomy/stoma care allowing the LEA to begin to implement the nurse responsibilities since according to the Kansas Nurse Practice Act Statutes & Administrative Regulations.

When dislodged or accidentally removed the nurse is to cover area with gauze or bandage and contact the parents. The Individualized Nursing Care Plan specifies that the LEA note dislodgment or accidental removal of MiniACE button and contact the family.

When the bag leaks or ruptures the nurse is to replace the bag. The Individualized Nursing Care Plan specifies that the LEA note the leakage or rupture of bag and contact the family.

If the mesh tape is rolled down an extended barrier bandage is to be added over the mesh. If the mesh tape is rolled down to the point the wax ring is visible the parents are to be contacted. The Individualized Nursing Care Plan specifies that the LEA note the condition of mesh tape and wax ring and contact the family.

The Individualized Nursing Care Plan specifies that the LEA note condition of visual discomfort (holding his abdomen or flicking his pants at the waist), changes in color/texture of stoma and changes in amount of stool in bag/bowel characteristics and contact the family.

The LEA collected information on the Medication Administration Record (MAR) for the majority of the school year. The LEA stated that the classroom teacher set a timer to monitor the ostomy bag throughout the day and sent the student to the nurse's office when it was suspected that the nurse needed to examine the ostomy bag or stoma to determine if the procedures outlined on the Individualized Nursing Care Plan needed to be followed. The MAR recorded the number of times the student was sent to the Nurse and an anecdotal note indicated when the bag was changed. The LEA stated to the investigator that that the bag was changed three times during the school year at school. The lack of documentation in recording the procedures and notification demonstrates that the Individualized Nursing Care Plan was not implemented as written.

Finally, nursing service minutes or specified training were not written into the student's IEP so the LEA is not obligated to provide those per IDEA or Kansas special education regulations. The Individualized Nursing Care Plan did not specify training, regular checks on the adherence of the ostomy bag, nursing services to check on the bag, or menu items for the student.

Based on the foregoing, the LEA is found OUT of compliance for implementing the IEP, specifically the Individualized Nursing Care Plan and corrective action is ordered.

Summary of Conclusions/Corrective Action

ISSUE ONE: A violation of 34 C.F.R. §300.323(c)(2) and K.A.R. §91-40-16(b)(2) was found. Corrective action is required as follows.

1. The LEA shall provide to SETS assurances that it shall follow 34 C.F.R. §300.323(c)(2) and K.A.R. §91-40-16(b)(2) in regard to Individualized Nursing Care Plans within two weeks of the completion of this investigation.
2. The LEA shall revise the IEP/Individualized Nursing Care Plan to add the dietary restrictions as determined by the food list. The revised IEP/Individualized Nursing Care Plan will be provided to SETS no later than August 1, 2026 for approval to be ready to use at the start of the 2026-27 school year.
3. The LEA shall prepare a tracking sheet and call log for the school nurse to collect the necessary information contained in the Individualized Nursing Care Plan related to 1) if mini-ACE becomes dislodged or accidently removed; 2) if colostomy bag leaks or ruptures; 3) if mesh tape rolls down; and 4) if mesh tape is disturbed to the point that the wax ring is visible. This tracking sheet and call log will be provided to SETS no later than August 1, 2026 for approval to be ready to use at the start of the 2026-27 school year.
4. The LEA shall meet with all staff persons who will provide educational, nursing, dietary, or health services to the student during the 2026-27 school year to list 1) which tasks from the IEP/Individualized Nursing Care Plan can only be performed the school nurse; 2) the medical/health tasks that can be delegated to school staff following training; and 3) which health/medical tasks need to be monitored and what are the indicators of when the student should be sent to the school nurse. This meeting will occur prior to the student returning to school for the 2026-27 school year. The lists will be compiled and provided to all staff persons attending the meeting and in the student's file. A copy of the document created along with the staff and roles of who attended the training shall be provided to SETS within one week of the meeting. The document will be reviewed by the school nurse at the semester and revised as needed. A copy of the revised document shall be provided to SETS by the end of January 2027

Either party may appeal the findings or conclusions in this report by filing a written notice of appeal with the State Commissioner of Education, ATTN: Special Education and Title Services, Landon State Office Building, 900 SW Jackson Street, Suite 620, Topeka, KS 66612-1212. The notice of appeal may also be filed by email to formalcomplaints@ksde.gov The notice of appeal must be delivered within 10 calendar days from the date of this report.

For further description of the appeals process, see Kansas Administrative Regulations 91-40-51(f).

K.A.R. 91-40-51(f) Appeals.

(1) Any agency or complainant may appeal any of the findings or conclusions of a compliance report prepared by the special education section of the department by filing a written notice of appeal with the state commissioner of education. Each notice shall be filed within 10 days from the date of the report. Each notice shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect.

Upon receiving an appeal, an appeal committee of at least three department of education members shall be appointed by the commissioner to review the report and to consider the information provided by the local education agency, the complainant, or others. The appeal process, including any hearing conducted by the appeal committee, shall be completed within 15 days from the date of receipt of the notice of appeal, and a decision shall be rendered within five days after the appeal process is completed unless the appeal committee determines that exceptional circumstances exist with respect to the particular complaint. In this event, the decision shall be rendered as soon as possible by the appeal committee.

(2) If an appeal committee affirms a compliance report that requires corrective action by an agency, that agency shall initiate the required corrective action immediately. If, after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the agency shall be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following:

(A) The issuance of an accreditation deficiency advisement;
(B) the withholding of state or federal funds otherwise available to the agency;
(C) the award of monetary reimbursement to the complainant; or
(D) any combination of the actions specified in paragraph (f)(2)

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST
UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #314
ON APRIL 17, 2026

DATE OF REPORT: JUNE 3, 2026

This report is in response to a Complaint filed with our office on behalf of a student, -------, by their parent, -------. In the remainder of the report, the student will be referred to as "the Student" and the parent as "the Parent."

The Complaint is against USD #314 Brewster Public Schools. In the remainder of the report, "the School" and the "local education agency (LEA)" shall refer to USD #314.

When a special education complaint is filed against a school district that is a member of a special education cooperative or interlocal, or that uses any other state recognized public agency to serve children with disabilities, the term "local education agency (LEA)" in this report will include the school district, the special education cooperative or interlocal, and any other agency that is recognized by the state as an administrative agency for public elementary or secondary schools and is serving the educational needs of this student.

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) allows for a 30-day timeline to investigate a child complaint. A complaint is considered to be filed on the date it is delivered to both the KSDE and the LEA. In this case, the KSDE initially received the Complaint on April 17, 2026, and the 30-day timeline ended on May 17, 2026.

Allegations

The following issues will be investigated:

ISSUE ONE: Whether USD #314, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), obtained prior parental consent before personally identifiable information was shared with the other parent. K.A.R. 91-40-50(a), K.S.A. 72-6311(b); 34 CFR §§ 300.622, 99.3.

ISSUE TWO: Whether USD #314, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, ensured special education and related services were provided to the Student when the Student experienced seizures. K.A.R. 91-40-16(a)(b); 34 CFR § 300.323(a)(d).

Investigation of Complaint

The Complaint Investigator interviewed the Parent on May 13, 2026. The Administrator, the Interrelated Teacher, and the Nurse were interviewed on May 13, 2026. The Occupational Therapist provided written responses to interview questions.

In completing this investigation, the Complaint Investigator reviewed documentation provided by the Parent and the LEA. Although additional documentation was provided and reviewed, the following materials were used as the basis of the findings and conclusions of the investigation:

1. Message Exchange, 01/29/[26]-04/02/[26]
2. Supplemental Evidence, no date
3. Evidence Cover Sheet and Master Timeline, 04/23/16
4. Table of Contents, no date
5. DRAFT Individualized Education Plan, 09/03/25

16. Evaluation/Eligibility Team Report, 05/13/26
17. Emails from March 5, 2026 through May 5, 2026

Background Information

This Investigation involved an eighth-grade student enrolled at a K-12 school in USD #314. The Student is currently receiving special education or related services as a child with an Other Health Impairment per the IDEA.

Findings of the Investigation

The following findings are based on a review of documentation and interviews with the Parent and staff in the LEA.

Issue 1 Findings

1. In a screenshot of an April 14, 2026 text message to the Parent, the Student stated, "After you dropped me off at the [S]chool [Parent 2] came and in the hallway I heard [them] and the [Administrator] talking about what you did calling state and what state is doing about it and [the Administrator] said their [sic] just pushing it to the side and not going to do anything." In a timeline of events created by the Parent, the April 14, 2026 entry described what the Student "overheard" as the Administrator "dismissively discussing my formal state complaint, claiming the state is 'pushing it to the side' and 'not going to do anything.'"
2. The Administrator's notes regarding the April 14, 2026 hallway conversation with Parent 2 included:
    a. Location: The Administrator and Parent 2 "paused by the stairwell downstairs near the cafeteria" at approximately 1:00 p.m.
    b. Context: "I had been in contact with [Parent 2], being the primary caregiver, on days when [the Parent] would pull the kids from sports practice because it was [the Parent's] scheduled day with them, but the kids were missing out on school activities. I told [Parent 2] that a grievance was filed by [the Parent] with the school. I didn't go into detail about anything more as I had just received, the day prior, a certified letter from [the Parent] to the school with [the Parent's] claims of violating parental and student rights. I did state that I wasn't sure how the state would rule on the matter, but that the claims were exaggerated or false so they likely won't do anything."
    c. Additional context: The Administrator believed they spoke with Parent 2 about the Student using their phone to communicate with the Parent during school, which was a violation of school policy.
    d. The Administrator noted they spoke with Parent 2 for approximately four minutes and described interactions with other students around that time.
    e. the Student: The Administrator wrote, "[the Student] was observed in the upstairs hallway at that time and paused for about 5 seconds by the stairs. [the Student] knew I was talking with [Parent 2], but was not present long enough to hear the conversation. [the Student] was not a direct witness to the conversation. [the Student] spent time in the restroom and returned directly to class after [Parent 2] and I had already left."

Issue 2 Findings

1. A signed draft Individualized Education Plan (IEP), dated September 3, 2025, included:
    a. Parent/Legal Educational Decision Maker (LEDM) Concerns: Physical therapy (PT), occupational therapy (OT), and programming.
    b. Transition services.
    c. Goals in the areas of communication, OT, reading, and math.

d. Accommodations, modifications, supportive aids, and supports for school personnel.

e. Special Education and Related Services starting on September 3, 2025 and ending on September 2, 2026:

i. OT, as a direct service in the resource room, bi-weekly (handwritten) for 20 minutes.

ii. Pull-out instruction for math skills interventions in the resource room, daily for 15 minutes (handwritten).

iii. Inclusion support for core subjects in the general education classroom, daily for 240 minutes.

iv. Pull-out speech/language therapy in the speech/language room, once per week for 20 minutes.

v. Assistive technology services at school, once per semester for 20 minutes.

vi. Adapted Physical Education (APE)- Bowling at the bowling alley, once per month for 60 minutes.

vii. Transportation to/from bowling in a school vehicle, once per month, from the time it takes to get to and from the bowling activity.

viii. Signatures from the Parent and Parent 2 were included.

ix. Prior Written Notice (PWN) documented the information noted in the aforementioned IEP. The Parent and Parent 2 provided consent for the special education placement and services actions listed, via a checked box and signatures, on September 3, 2025.

3. The Student's attendance data from the Attendance Overview revealed:

a. From August 18 through October 10, 2025:

i. 33 school days = 264 instructional periods (8 periods per day).

1. 16 period absences = 94% attendance.

b. From October 13 through December 5, 2025:

i. 32 school days = 256 instructional periods.

1. 16 period absences = 94% attendance.

c. From December 8, 2025 through January 30, 2026:

i. 24 school days = 192 instructional periods.

1. 27 period absences = 86% attendance.

d. From February 2 through March 27, 2026:

i. 29 school days = 232 instructional periods.

1. 82 period absences = 65% attendance.

e. From March 30 through April 17, 2026:

i. 11 school days = 88 instructional periods.

1. 38 period absences = 57% attendance.

4. A Progress Report documented the Student's progress toward meeting their IEP goals:
   a. Communication: October 2025, "Slight Improvement"; December 2025, "Slight Improvement"; March 2026, "Maintained Performance."
   b. OT: October 2025, "Maintained Performance"; December 2025, "Moderate Improvement"; March 2026, "Maintained Performance."
   c. Reading: October 2025, "Slight Improvement"; December 2025, "Maintained Performance"; March 2026, "Slight Regression." Note: "Lately the computer is causing [the Student] to have episodes, so [the Student] isn't using [assistive technology] AT as much as normal. Much of [the Student's] work is being read aloud to [the Student] by a human reader to reduce the light stimulation … ."
   d. Math: October 2025, "Maintained Performance"; December 2025, "Slight Improvement"; March 2026, "Slight Regression"; Note: "[The Student] has been struggling more lately with [their] math problems. [The Student] struggles to recall basic facts and process information due to [their] episodes. When [the Student] is on, [the Student] is on, but more often than not lately, [the Student] has struggled to be in class and to participate. AT technology has been limited as to not bring about more episodes … ."
5. In a screenshot of a January 29, 2026 text message to the Superintendent, the Parent requested to be added as the Student's "primary parent to call … not just [Parent 2,] for all notifications and copies of all disciplinary reports." The Parent provided their email address and phone number. The Superintendent replied, confirming the Parent was added to receive "coach notifications," the phone number was correct in the Student Information System, and the email address was updated. On May 4, 2026, the Parent emailed the Complaint Investigator explaining these screenshots were proof that the School's "failure to call me during [the Student's] medical crisis wasn't a 'clerical error'- it was willful exclusion of a primary legal guardian."
6. From March 2, 2026 to March 25, 2026, notes taken by the Interrelated Teacher and the Paraeducator documented the Student's symptoms: headaches, motor impairment (dragging the right leg, stumbling), slurred speech, facial swelling, and episodes of non-responsiveness/staring spells. Additionally, the Student spent more time resting in the resource room due to pain and exhaustion.
7. A medication distribution log documented that from March 4, 2026 to April 16, 2026, the Student was provided Tylenol or Ibuprofen on six occasions for headaches.
8. On March 5, 2026, the Interrelated Teacher emailed LEA staff regarding the Student's health and said, "I've been working closely with [Parent 2] to try to make connections and figure out what is going on. We think [the Student] may be having blank stare seizures at this time. I think a trigger may be our new LED lights. [The Student] comes to school okay, but shortly after being here and sitting under the lights, [the Student] starts getting a headache. Even with pain meds, it doesn't improve." The Interrelated Teacher described the Student's symptoms, including staring, a slow response time, a tense body, sore hands, stiffness, a changed gait, and slurred speech, and wrote, "Please be on the lookout for these symptoms and document if you are seeing this. Call my room immediately, and we will come get [the Student] and assist [the Student] … . We do not want [the Student] alone at these times. [Parent 2] is needing this documentation to pass onto the neurologist. As of right now, they are not seeing these concerns at home, just at school. When we have given [the Student] time to rest in the dark for about 30 minutes to an hour, [the Student] comes back and seems [them]self, joking and laughing with us, in typical [the Student] fashion. Then we try to go to class, and within 20-30 minutes notice the same concerns again. Computers also seem to also be triggering at this time. I have been in contact with [Parent 2] each time we see these signs, which has been daily this week. [Parent 2] comes and checks [the Student] out, often taking [the Student] home due to concerns. [Parent 2] took [the Student] to the [emergency room] ER yesterday. [The Student] struggled to walk out of here. [Parent 2] thinks [the Student] had a seizure in the vehicle on the way there, but with typical seizure symptoms, not just the blank stare ones we have noticed. By the time [they] got to the ER, [Parent 2] had to nearly carry [the Student] inside." Additionally, the Interrelated Teacher wrote, "Be aware of any atypical behavior from [the Student]. [The Paraeducator] has been helping to monitor [the Student] more, especially days that we see more concerns. We will continue to do this if we are having concerns as we have this week." The Interrelated Teacher described a seizure protocol, asked staff to document symptoms they observed, requested the Student not sit directly under a light, and asked that staff exempt the Student's missing assignments for the past two weeks and into the future, "We need to reduce [the Student's] cognitive load … ." On March 6, 2026, the Nurse followed up with an email providing their cell number for communication, and attached forms and educational videos to help staff document symptoms and learn about seizure first aid.

9. Discharge information from a children's hospital indicated the Student was hospitalized for "Abnormal movements" from March 29, 2026 through March 31, 2026. Discharge instructions indicated the Student was diagnosed with psychogenic nonepileptic seizures (PNES), which "may look like seizures," but are "usually caused by psychological distress." Treatment included the continuation of the Student's medications, and indicated, "For [the Student's] PNES it is helpful to make sure [the Student] is in a safe place where [the Student] will not fall or hurt [them]self from the movements. It can also be helpful to talk to [the Student] and reassure [the Student] that [the Student] is safe during the episodes. Patients with PNES will have retained awareness and typically have different movements compared to true seizures."

10. On April 1, 2026, the Interrelated Teacher emailed staff to describe the Student's PNES, "… the neurologist says we must push through these episodes. Help [the Student] to feel safe, but build [the Student's] stress tolerance so that [the Student] can overcome this. [Parent 2] said that they explained it like the fight, flight or freeze instinct. In this case [the Student] is freezing when stressed. [The Student] still has awareness and just needs help to work through the stress. [Parent 2] said they talked about using sour candies, ice chips, cold packs, etc. to shock [the Student's] body and get [the Student] out of the episode. We talked about using small breaks for [the Student] to collect [them]self, but then return to the activity. [The Student] will try to let us know when [the Student] is beginning to feel overwhelmed so that we can time the break prior to [the Student] having an episode. I also did talk to [Parent 2], and have a signed consent for evaluation for [the Student]. I told him that although we want to try to get new information, we will take it day by day and if we start to see [the Student] get stressed, we will discontinue testing. [Parent 2] knows that while we are requesting new information, we may not get new testing in all areas we requested (Health/motor, communication, cognitive, academic, transition). We tentatively have [the Student's] eval[uation] meeting scheduled for May 13th[,] [2026] at 9:00 [a.m.]. The School Psychologist responded on the same day, "As for [the Student's] reevaluation[,] let's definitely proceed day by day with prioritizing [the Student's] comfort." The Speech-language Pathologist (SLP) agreed with the Interrelated Teacher and the School Psychologist, "I am with you. … Day by day and no stress for [the Student]."

11. In the Student's Patient Information Sheet, dated April 2, 2026, the Nurse described the Student's "spell"/seizure as impacting the whole body, and the eyes were staring, and staring and blinking. Notes indicated the Student "went to school with feeling funny" and "[the] Student approached [the] Nurse without feeling red. Temperature was 99.9 degrees and says [the Student] feels fine, just that [the Student] feels off & blank stare[s]." In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Nurse clarified their shorthand (as written above) and explained the Student "approached me without feeling red. [They] had told me [they] felt hot, and [they] thought [they were] turning red, but [they] then ended up saying that [they] didn't end up feeling red," which is why the Nurse took the Student's temperature.
12. A Notice of Special Education Meeting proposed a meeting date of May 13, 2026 to review the Student's evaluation, determine eligibility, and develop an IEP, and was signed by the Parent on April 28, 2026.
13. In an April 29, 2026 email to the Complaint Investigator and the Department, the Parent indicated the Student relayed they "suffered a seizure during 4th hour today and [the Student's] legs gave out. According to [the Student] there were four staff members present. … [The Student] explicitly stated that [the Administrator] told [the Student] [they] would call me. As of 4:00 [p.m.] I have received zero notification from the [S]chool."
14. In a May 5, 2026 email to the Complaint Investigator, the Parent shared screenshots of November 11, 2025 group text messages from a teacher regarding Student 2. The Parent indicated these messages "highlight the selective exclusion/reported regarding the March 4th and 5th[,] [2026] medical emergencies. The [LEA] possesses my contact info and the ability to use it."

15. Medicaid Service Log Records documented the Student's occupational therapy sessions with the Occupational Therapist during the 2025-26 school year:
    a. August 20, 2025: 20 minutes; August 27, 2025: 20 minutes.
    b. September 3, 2025: 20 minutes; September 22, 2025: 20 minutes, and September 30, 2025: 20 minutes.
    c. October 7, 2025: Provider absent. October 20, 2025: 20 minutes.
    d. November 3, 2025: 20 minutes; November 18, 2025: 20 minutes.
    e. December 2, 2025: 20 minutes; December 15, 2025: 20 minutes.
    f. January 12, 2026: 20 minutes.
    g. February 3 and 12, 2026: Student absent.
    h. February 17, 2026: 30 minutes, "This was a longer session this date due to missing last week due to medical concerns."
    i. March 10, 2026: 20 minutes, "It did appear that [the Student] had a focal seizure at the end of the session with [Parent 2] … present."
    j. April 9, 2026: 20 minutes, "This was the first session … [the Student] had since going back to the hospital for more testing."
    k. April 16, 2026: Student absent.
16. Medicaid Service Log Records documented the Student's speech sessions with the Speech-Language Pathologist during the 2025-26 school year:
    a. September 2025, 20 minutes each session.
        i. September 7, September 15, and September 22, 2025.
    b. October 2025, 20 minutes each session.

17. A draft Evaluation/Eligibility Team Report, dated May 13, 2026, described the following:
    a. "[The Student] has recently been experiencing PNES. These look like seizures, but are not caused by abnormal brain electrical activity and are usually caused by psychological stress. On days that [the Student] is experiencing these symptoms, [the Student's] balance and endurance do appear to also be impacted. [The Student] is not as steady when walking, and becomes more tired on the stairs. [The Student] has had frequent breaks from class due to these symptoms, and PE class attendance has been impacted."
    b. Social/Emotional: "Throughout this year, [the Student] has struggled more with coping skills and managing stress levels. Beginning in February of this year, [the Student] started having episodes that appeared to be blank stare seizures and had a few episodes at home that looked like real seizures, where [the Student's] body started to shake. [The Student] has been diagnosed with PNES, where [their] body reacts to stress and it appears like seizures, but they are not epileptic seizures."
    c. "An interview was conducted with [the Student]. [The Student] verbalized that [the Student] struggles with feeling overwhelmed and nervous. [The Student] reported that [the Student] gets seizures and it was clarified that although they have not all been seizures [the Student] is concerned they will [sic]. [The Student] reported liking school but is also engaging in avoidance behaviors of school and people because [the Student] feels that is what will keep the seizures away. [The Student] agreed [the Student] does not have a lot of skills on how to reduce [their] stress except for avoiding. [The Student] was very honest during the interview and agreed the pull[-]out counseling would be good and discussions around other strategies on how to reduce stress without avoiding would be explored."
    d. Math: "At this time, due to the PNES episodes that [the Student] is experiencing and [the Student's] shut down behavior in math, [the Student] has been working in the resource room for math in order to take it at a slower pace and receive more support."
    e. Transition: Due to the PNES, the Student "has struggled with remaining in class and completing [their] work. [The Student] requires frequent breaks and rest. Staff are working with [the Student] to increase [the Student's] time in class and working towards managing the stress [the Student] experiences better. [The Student] is receiving outside counseling as well to help with stress management."

Parent Interview

18. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Parent clarified the court order they provided to the LEA detailed, "Neither parent is superior [to] the other. We are both equal. We both have equal rights and access to all medical, all educational."

The Parent indicated the document noted, when it came to educational and medical decisions, "We are both to discuss before any arrangements are made." The Parent confirmed there was no "specific wording" that consent was required prior to Parent 2 receiving information about the Student.

19. When asked how the Parent communicated their concerns about the Student's symptoms related to PNES, the Parent stated, "I don't remember or recall communicating my concerns with the [LEA] just because, like I said earlier, [the Administrator] dismisses things. Anything that I say, [the Administrator] dismisses."
20. The Parent claimed the IEP logs demonstrated they were not called on March 4 or 5, 2026, when the Student had "emergencies. … It was always [Parent 2] that [the LEA] called." They asserted the LEA had the Parent's contact information, "But when it comes to [an] emergency, they do not call me and that is my concern."
21. When asked what part of the Student's special education and related services the Parent believed the LEA was not following, the Parent stated, "The emergency protocols. When there is an emergency, they're to contact the parents, [and] they do not do that."

Administrator Interview

22. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Administrator explained they communicate with the Parent and Parent 2, but have had "more in person with [Parent 2] than with [the Parent], [which] has been via text message or over the phone." They clarified the communication was the same as any other parent that is part of the LEA.
23. The Administrator described their interaction with Parent 2 on April 14, 2026 as an in-person "casual conversation in passing" where Parent 2 asked "how things were going and I just responded. … I took that question as [Parent 2] was wanting to know what contact [the Parent] had had further because of an incident that happened two weeks prior." The Administrator clarified they told Parent 2 they received a state complaint the Parent had filed, but "I was not worried of the outcome because I believe that we were following all procedures, and that the sheriff's office that was involved had noted that I was following the custody agreement correctly." The Administrator confirmed they did not use the Parent's name during this conversation, "there was no personal information," and "nothing was noted about the kids." The Administrator also confirmed they do not have any documentation that restricts Parent 2 from accessing information regarding the Student's education.
24. The Administrator explained an incident where the Student fell, was able to get up, and said they were fine. They clarified they did not call either parent on this occasion, and "If I told [the Student] I was going to call [the Parent], I do not recall that. … At the time, there was nothing noted of a seizure."

Nurse Interview

25. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Nurse described how they supported the Student after their diagnosis of PNES by talking with them and telling them to try sour candy if they "started to feel anxious and had that funny feeling, the blank stare feeling. … I had also suggested cold water. … So I just tried to listen to [the Student] and ensure that [they] had the candy [and water] when needed."
26. The Nurse clarified the LEA "write[s] all the health plans under the IEP and I am not on the IEP team. I had requested after I got those documents that I wanted to be a part of the team for the following school year."

Interrelated Teacher Interview

27. In an interview with the Complaint Investigator, the Interrelated Teacher confirmed they had "invited [the Parent] to meetings," they had "reached out," and the Parent had the Interrelated Teacher's phone number since the beginning of the school year. They recalled they "hadn't really heard too much from [the Parent] throughout the year." The Interrelated Teacher indicated Parent 2 also had their contact information since the beginning of the school year and noted they reached out to Parent 2 when the Student had an ambulance called for them because "[Parent 2] was the primary custodian." They clarified there was a "parenting plan and we were told that during school [Parent 2] was the primary contact and so that is why I reached out to [them], and it was my understanding that [Parent 2] was sharing information with [the Parent]." The Interrelated teacher noted the multiple conversations they had with Parent 2 were initiated by Parent 2.
28. The Interrelated Teacher described the Student's seizure-like symptoms as "star[ing] off into space," the Student seeming to "shut off," and "almost go[ing] non-responsive." They indicated they would touch the Student on the shoulder and say their name to get the Student's attention. "We were just kind of informally documenting [the symptoms] in our room, didn't have a ton of concerns with them and everything until that day in February, [2026]." The Interrelated Teacher recalled the Physical Therapist noticing a change in the Student's gait, which prompted them to call Parent 2, and they ended up calling an ambulance when "it was clear it was a medical thing happening right then."
29. The Interrelated Teacher confirmed implementation of each of the Student's special education and related services and reported the following:
    a. In regard to modifying the typing curriculum in computers so that it is left-hand only, the teacher for the Student's computer class was trained on the left-hand program and "anytime they had typing work, … [the Student] did that program instead."
    b. The Student carried the larger, left-handed wireless mouse with them, knew how to sync it with Bluetooth, and would ask for help with it when needed.

c. The Student "had pretty much as long as it took [them] to get assignments done." The Interrelated Teacher worked with other teachers to create alternative assignments and shared specific examples: a "simpler book," reading the book with the Student, eliminating answer choices, decreasing the number of problems to complete, and eliminating "extension activities" in math.

d. The Student had access to their calculator and the Interrelated Teacher used note cards as visuals and references for math formulas with the Student.

e. The Occupational Therapist worked with the Student on Tuesday mornings and worked "directly with [the Student] normally about 8:05 [a.m.] to 8:35 [a.m.]."

f. The Student worked with the Interrelated Teacher "daily" to "work through whatever homework [the Student] had," and to do any pre-teaching or re-teaching, as needed.

g. The Student had a paraeducator with them in their core classes. The Paraeducator took notes, read information and text, and would work with the Student one-on-one in a quiet room when needed.

h. Speech-language therapy was provided to the Student on Mondays at 11:15 a.m.

i. AT services consult was "at least once a month," and at the beginning of the year, consulting staff set up text-to-speech on the Student's computer and showed them how to use it. The Interrelated Teacher explained when AT was limited to avoid triggering episodes, the Paraeducator would "read all of the passages or any reading materials instead of using text-to-speech. … in [the Student's] classes, materials were read to [them]. … [We] had somebody writing for [the Student], [and] had somebody reading for [the Student]."

j. APE was "once a month" and the Interrelated Teacher would transport the Student in a school vehicle. "We did miss the February and March[,] [2026] dates because of the health issues at that time. We didn't feel like taking [the Student] off of campus was in [their] best interest. We talked to [Parent 2] about that and [Parent 2] was in agreement."

k. When the Student would rest in the dark or the resource room due to headaches and seizure-like symptoms, the Paraeducator would accompany the Student and monitor them. "We always had somebody with [the Student] during those times to make sure [they were] safe and nothing was happening."

30. When asked about documentation of rest time and missed services during the time the Student was experiencing seizure-like symptoms and had inconsistent attendance, the Interrelated Teacher stated, "We kind of put a pause on academics." They explained the Student "did have services," though "it may not have been in the classroom because we were meeting the needs of [the Student's] health." They added, "I don't know that we tracked actual minutes," and they described the focus being on observing symptoms and logging the times when the Student "would go upstairs" to rest.

31. The Interrelated Teacher explained the Student's slight regression in reading and math on the March, 2026 progress report as, "We weren't doing a lot of educational activities at that time. We were really concerned. These appeared what I'd seen very much like seizures. And after [the Student] would have an episode, [they were] just extremely worn out." They described the Student having slurred speech and "other things like that." They reiterated they were focused on the Student's safety and, "at that point, we determined that academics was the least of our concerns." They added this was communicated with Parent 2 because "[Parent 2] had custody during school. … I know that [Parent 2] was relaying information to [the Parent] - that is what I was told."
32. The Interrelated Teacher shared the Student "has a gen[eral] ed[ucation] healthcare plan. We've never had one as part of the IEP."

Occupational Therapist Written Question Submission

33. In written questions submitted to the Complaint Investigator, the Occupational Therapist indicated they "plan" to see the Student weekly for OT services. During their time with the Student, they "provide upper extremity strengthening and range of motion," and "functional fine motor skill training" for 20 minutes every other week.
34. The Occupational Therapist clarified the decrease in OT services starting January, 2026 was due to the Student's absences for medical needs, the Student starting track season, and the Occupational Therapist experiencing illness they "did not want to expose" the Student to. They indicated they made "several attempts" to provide services on other days, but "[The Student] was either still absent or had scheduling conflicts at school that prevented these sessions. The only change in service during this time was to change from doing [the Student's] upper extremity exercises using weights, to completing them with no additional weight added in case these activities could be affecting [the Student's] seizures." The Occupational Therapist added they did not directly communicate this to either the Parent or Parent 2 because, "I was still actively working towards [the Student's] goal, just with added safety precautions."

Positions of the Parties, Applicable Regulations, and Conclusions

Issue One

Whether USD #314, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, obtained prior parental consent before personally identifiable information was shared with the other parent. K.A.R. 91-40-50(a), K.S.A. 72-6311(b); 34 CFR §§ 300.622; 99.3.

According to K.A.R. 91-40-50(a), the following terms shall have the meanings specified in this subsection: "Education records" means any document or medium on which information directly related to one or more students is maintained by a participating agency in accordance with K.S.A. 72-6214 and amendments thereto. "Participating agency" means any educational agency or institution that collects, maintains, or uses personally identifiable student information to provide special education and related services to children with disabilities.

According to K.S.A. 72-6311(b), every board shall adopt a policy, in accordance with the Student Data Privacy Act and applicable federal laws and regulations, to protect the right of privacy of any student, or pupil, and such pupil's family regarding personally identifiable records, files, and data directly related to such student or pupil. Such procedures shall provide for the means by which any student or parent of a pupil, as the case may be, may inspect and review any records or files directly related to the student or pupil; and restrict the accessibility and availability of any personally identifiable records or files of any student or pupil and prevent the disclosure thereof unless made upon written consent of such student or parent of such pupil, as the case may be.

According to 34 CFR § 300.622, parental consent must be obtained before personally identifiable information is disclosed to parties other than officials of participating agencies in accordance with the law, unless the information is contained in education records and the disclosure is authorized without parental consent under 34 CFR part 99. Except as provided in the law, parental consent is not required before personally identifiable information is released to officials of participating agencies for purposes of meeting a requirement of the law.

According to 34 C.F.R. § 99.3, directory information means information contained in an education record of a student that would not generally be considered harmful or an invasion of privacy if disclosed. Directory information includes, but is not limited to, the student's name; address; telephone listing; electronic mail address; photograph; date and place of birth; major field of study; grade level; enrollment status; dates of attendance; participation in officially recognized activities and sports; weight and height of members of athletic teams; degrees, honors, and awards received; and the most recent educational agency or institution attended.

Disclosure means to permit access to or the release, transfer, or other communication of personally identifiable information contained in education records by any means, including oral, written, or electronic means, to any party except the party identified as the party that provided or created the record.

Education records are records that are directly related to a student and maintained by an educational agency or institution or by a party acting for the agency or institution. The term does not include records that are kept in the sole possession of the maker, are used only as a personal memory aid, and are not accessible or revealed to any other person except a temporary substitute for the maker of the record, records of the law enforcement unit of an educational agency or institution, subject to the provisions of § 99.8.

Personally identifiable information includes, but is not limited to, the student's name, the name of the student's parent or other family members, the address of the student or student's family, a personal identifier, such as the student's social security number, student number, or biometric record. Other indirect identifiers, such as the student's date of birth, place of birth, and mother's maiden name, other information that, alone or in combination, is linked or linkable to a specific student that would allow a reasonable person in the school community, who does not have personal knowledge of the relevant circumstances, to identify the student with reasonable certainty, or information requested by a person who the educational agency or institution reasonably believes knows the identity of the student to whom the education record relates.

Record means any information recorded in any way, including, but not limited to, handwriting, print, computer media, video or audio tape, film, microfilm, and microfiche. Student means any individual who is or has been in attendance at an educational agency or institution and regarding whom the agency or institution maintains education records.

The Parent alleged an administrator was observed in a school hallway "discussing" the Parent's confidential complaint with Parent 2. According to the Parent, the Student witnessed the "mockery" and "unauthorized disclosure."

The LEA denied the allegation, stating they complied with state or federal regulations regarding the disclosure of personally identifiable information. The LEA stated both parents of the student are provided access to educational information, including IEP-related documentation, consistent with the IDEA requirements, unless the district is provided with legal documentation limiting those rights. At no time has the LEA been provided with documentation restricting either parent's access to educational records.

According to the Parent, the court order provided to the LEA indicated neither parent is superior to the other, and both possess equal rights and access to all medical and educational records regarding the Student. While the Parent alleged that the Administrator dismissively discussed a formal state complaint with Parent 2 in a school hallway on April 14, 2026, the Administrator maintained that the interaction was a brief, casual conversation in passing. The Administrator acknowledged informing Parent 2 that a grievance had been filed, but asserted that no personal information or details regarding students were shared during this brief encounter. Additionally, the Parent confirmed there was no specific legal wording requiring consent before Parent 2 could receive information about the Student, and the Administrator verified that no documentation existed that restricted Parent 2's access to the Student's educational information. Furthermore, the LEA communicated with Parent 2 as the primary contact based on their understanding of the parenting plan and Parent 2's role as the primary caregiver during school hours. Because both parents retain equal legal rights to access information under the IDEA and FERPA, and no evidence was presented of a restrictive order, the LEA was not required to obtain prior written consent from one parent before discussing matters related to the Student's education or the Parent's formal complaints with the other legal parent.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to obtain prior parental consent before personally identifiable information was shared with the other parent.

Issue Two

Whether USD #314, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, ensured special education and related services were provided to the Student when the Student experienced seizures. K.A.R. 91-40-16(a)(b); 34 CFR § 300.323(a)(d).

According to K.A.R. 91-40-16(a)(b) and 34 CFR § 300.323(a)(d), each agency shall be responsible for initiating and conducting meetings to develop, review, and revise the IEP of each exceptional child served by the agency. Except as otherwise provided in the law, each agency shall ensure that the following conditions are met: an IEP is in effect before special education and related services are provided to an exceptional child; those services for which written consent has been granted as specified by law are implemented not later than 10 school days after parental consent is granted, unless reasonable justification for a delay can be shown; an IEP is in effect for each exceptional child at the beginning of each school year; and the child's IEP is accessible to each regular education teacher, special education teacher, related service provider, and other service provider who is responsible for its implementation. Additionally, each teacher and provider described in the law is informed of the following: that individual's specific responsibilities related to implementing the child's IEP; and the specific accommodations, modifications, and supports that must be provided for the child in accordance with the IEP.

The Parent claimed that the Student suffered seizures as a result of "administrative hostility" and contended the LEA violated the IEP by failing to follow "emergency" parent contact protocols.

The LEA denied the allegation, and asserted they have complied with providing appropriate special education and related services to the student.

The Student's September 3, 2025 IEP mandated several services. As the Student's medical condition progressed from early 2026, including a diagnosis of PNES, their attendance significantly declined by April 2026. During the periods the Student was present, the LEA adapted services to address medical needs. The Interrelated Teacher and the Paraeducator provided continuous monitoring and safety support during these episodes, prioritizing the Student's immediate health and safety over academic progress.

Documentation regarding the delivery of mandated IEP minutes was inconsistent. While speech sessions appeared to remain relatively consistent through March, 2026, the Occupational Therapist noted a decrease in services starting in January, 2026 due to the Student's absences, scheduling conflicts, and provider illness. Furthermore, APE sessions were canceled in February and March, 2026 because staff believed taking the Student off-campus was not in their best interest, a decision made in consultation with Parent 2, but without a formal IEP amendment. The Interrelated Teacher admitted the LEA "put a pause on academics" during the height of the medical crisis and did not track the actual minutes of services provided while the Student was resting or out of the classroom. This lack of tracking and the intentional stopping of certain educational activities led to reported "slight regression" in reading and math goals by March, 2026. While the LEA took significant steps to ensure the Student's physical safety and emotional well-being with their new diagnosis, the evidence suggests that the full scope of the Student's special education and related services, as defined in the IEP, was not consistently maintained or documented during the period of medical instability.

Under the standard articulated in Van Duyn v. Baker School District 5J, 502 F.3d 811 (9th Cir. 2007), which district courts have widely applied within the Tenth Circuit, a statutory violation of the IDEA occurs only when there is a "material" failure to implement an IEP, meaning the services provided fall substantially short of what was mandated, rather than minor or temporary deviations. This threshold is contextualized in the Tenth Circuit with Garcia v. Bd. of Educ. of Albuquerque Pub. Sch., 520 F.3d 1116 (10th Cir. 2008), which establishes that a LEA cannot be held liable for a drop in academic progress or missed service minutes when a student is physically or legally unavailable to receive them due to external circumstances.

The reduction in the Student's instructional and related service minutes was a direct consequence of the Student's severe medical crisis and resulting absenteeism, rather than a failure of implementation by the LEA. The Student's attendance decreased from 94% in late 2025, to 65% in February/March, 2026, and ultimately to 57% by April, 2026. The Occupational Therapist documented that the reduction in OT services starting in January, 2026 was driven by the extensive medical absences and scheduling conflicts. Under the reasoning in Garcia, because the Student was physically unavailable for large portions of the school week, the LEA was legally and structurally precluded from delivering those exact minutes. Furthermore, the decision to temporarily suspend APE sessions off-campus in February and March, 2026 was made out of immediate concern for the Student's physical safety during active seizure episodes and in direct consultation with Parent 2. This responsive safety measure does not constitute a systemic or material abandonment of the IEP.

Additionally, the LEA continued to provide continuous "inclusion support" and accommodations, modifying its delivery methods to safely fit the Student's changing medical circumstances. While the Interrelated Teacher informally stated the LEA "put a pause on academics" during peak seizure episodes, the factual record confirms that education and special education support never actually ceased. Instead, staff actively modified the environment to eliminate seizure triggers. When the Student was resting outside the classroom, a paraeducator remained with them to provide continuous monitoring and medical safety support. Because these adjustments were temporary, fluid, and tailored to the Student's acute health needs, they represent a good-faith, appropriate implementation of the IEP "in light of the child's circumstances" as mandated by Tenth Circuit jurisprudence. The temporary regression noted in reading and math was a manifestation of the Student's severe medical condition and absenteeism, not a material failure of the LEA's educational programming.

Based on the foregoing, according to IDEA and Kansas special education regulations, it is not substantiated that the LEA failed to ensure special education and related services were provided to the Student when the Student experienced seizures.

Corrective Action

Information gathered in the course of this investigation did not substantiate noncompliance with special education statutes and regulations. Therefore, corrective action is not ordered.

Right to Appeal

Either party may appeal the findings or conclusions in this report by filing a written notice of appeal with the State Commissioner of Education, ATTN: Special Education and Title Services, Landon State Office Building, 900 SW Jackson Street, Suite 620, Topeka, KS 66612-1212. The notice of appeal may also be filed by email to formalcomplaints@ksde.gov The notice of appeal must be delivered within 10 calendar days from the date of this report.

For further description of the appeals process, see Kansas Administrative Regulations 91-40-51(f).

K.A.R. 91-40-51(f) Appeals.

(1) Any agency or complainant may appeal any of the findings or conclusions of a compliance report prepared by the special education section of the department by filing a written notice of appeal with the state commissioner of education. Each notice shall be filed within 10 days from the date of the report. Each notice shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect.

Upon receiving an appeal, an appeal committee of at least three department of education members shall be appointed by the commissioner to review the report and to consider the information provided by the local education agency, the complainant, or others. The appeal process, including any hearing conducted by the appeal committee, shall be completed within 15 days from the date of receipt of the notice of appeal, and a decision shall be rendered within five days after the appeal process is completed unless the appeal committee determines that exceptional circumstances exist with respect to the particular complaint. In this event, the decision shall be rendered as soon as possible by the appeal committee.

(2) If an appeal committee affirms a compliance report that requires corrective action by an agency, that agency shall initiate the required corrective action immediately. If, after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the agency shall be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following:

(A) The issuance of an accreditation deficiency advisement;
(B) the withholding of state or federal funds otherwise available to the agency;
(C) the award of monetary reimbursement to the complainant; or
(D) any combination of the actions specified in paragraph (f)(2)

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST
UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #267
ON APRIL 27, 2026

DATE OF REPORT: MAY 27, 2026

This report is in response to a complaint filed with our office by ------- on behalf of her son, ------. For the remainder of this report, ------- will be referred to as "the parent" or "the student's mother." ------- will be referred to as "the student."

Investigation of Complaint

The investigator spoke by telephone with the Assistant Superintendent for Special Services for the LEA on May 1, 2026. The investigator spoke by telephone with the student's mother on May 8, 2026.

In completing this investigation, the complaint investigator reviewed the following materials:

- IEP for the student dated January 23, 2025
- Prior Written Notice for Identification, Special Education and Related Services, Educational Placement, Change in Services, Change in Placement, and Request for Consent dated January 23, 2025
- IEP Amendment for the student dated April 23, 2025
- IEP Amendment Form for Changes Not Requiring A Full IEP Team Meeting dated April 23, 2025
- Prior Written Notice for Identification, Special Education and Related Services, Educational Placement, Change in Services, Change in Placement, and Request for Consent dated April 23, 2025
- IEP Amendment for the student dated August 28, 2025
- IEP Amendment Form for Changes Not Requiring A Full IEP Team Meeting dated August 28, 2025

- Prior Written Notice for Identification, Special Education and Related Services, Educational Placement, Change in Services, Change in Placement, and Request for Consent dated August 28, 2025
- IEP Amendment for the student dated November 4, 2025
- Prior Written Notice for Identification, Special Education and Related Services, Educational Placement, Change in Services, Change in Placement, and Request for Consent dated November 4, 2025
- IEP Amendment for the student dated December 15, 2025
- Prior Written Notice for Identification, Special Education and Related Services, Educational Placement, Change in Services, Change in Placement, and Request for Consent dated December 15, 2025
- Prior Written Notice for Evaluation or Reevaluation and Request for Consent dated December 15, 2025
- IEP for the student dated January 21, 2026
- Prior Written Notice for Identification, Special Education and Related Services, Educational Placement, Change in Services, Change in Placement, and Request for Consent dated January 21, 2026
- Prior Written Notice for Identification, Special Education and Related Services, Educational Placement, Change in Services, Change in Placement, and Request for Consent dated April 21, 2026
- District Board of Education Board Policy regarding visitors/observers in the school setting and/or field trips
- Grade report for the student for school years 2024-25 and 2025-26
- Class schedule for the student for school years 2024-25 and 2025-26

Background

This complaint involves a 14-year-old boy who is enrolled in the 8th grade in his neighborhood elementary school. According to his IEP, the student has been diagnosed with Autism. Additionally, he has a heart condition that requires restriction on physical activity to avoid heavy lifting and any activities which could result in a blow to the chest.

The student is currently receiving support on a weekly basis from a school social worker for 20 minutes. He is served in a special education setting for math, literature, and ELA (grammar). The student is supported in the general education classroom for science and social studies and electives. The following accommodations are provided for the student:

- access to Text to Speech or a human reader;
- access to math and reading manipulatives (which can include but not limited to visuals, counters, and graphic organizers);
- access to a separate, quiet, or individual setting;

- permission to have directions read aloud or repeated for him;
- access to a calculator/multiplication chart;
- a copy of notes will be provided;
- writing tasks will be broken down into smaller manageable steps;
- he will be provided with frequent checks for understanding when given directions with more than one step; and
- when assignments are given, he will be allowed extended time to complete the assignment up to twice as much as peers.

Issues

In her complaint, the parent identified the following two issues:

Issue One

The paraeducator assigned to support the student has fallen asleep on the job and has therefore been unable to provide the student with the support his IEP specifies.

Position of the Parent

It is the position of the parent that because the paraprofessional assigned to support the student in the general education setting (including field trips) has fallen asleep during these activities, the student has not been provided with the services required by his IEP. Additionally, the parent contends that because the paraeducator fell asleep on the bus on the way to and from an out-of-town field trip, the paraeducator would not have been able to provide relevant information had an "incident" occurred.

Applicable Statutes and Regulations

Federal regulations, at 34 C.F.R. 300.101, require states to ensure that a free appropriate public education (FAPE) is made available to all children with disabilities residing within the state. Accordingly, Kansas regulations at K.A.R. 91-40-2(b)(1) require that each school district makes FAPE available to each child with a disability residing in its jurisdiction. Federal regulations, at 34 C.F.R. 300.17, define FAPE, in part, as special education and related services provided in conformity with an Individualized Education Program (IEP).

Position of the LEA Regarding Allegations Related to the Class Field Trip

It is the contention of the LEA that the IEP in place for the student at the time of the alleged incident did not require special transportation, that transportation is not identified as a related service, and the IEP did not require the provision of specialized supports, paraprofessional services, or other supplementary aids and services during transportation. The LEA asserts that the student independently makes use of general education transportation services provided by the district without special education support. According to the LEA, the paraeducator presence on the bus was incidental as she was riding the bus as a means of getting to the location where she was assigned to perform her actual responsibilities - providing services and support to the student once the class had arrived at the designated field trip site.

Investigative Findings Regarding Allegations Related to the Class Field Trip

The Supplementary Aids and Services section of the January 23, 2025 IEP for the student states

> "When part of [the student's] day requires transportation to and from a school sponsored activity/class, he will have a familiar adult with him...when being transported on a district provided vehicle...to and from the designated location..."

With the written consent of the parent, the student's IEP was amended on April 23, 2025 to include - in addition to the previous statement above - a statement regarding special education services. The revised IEP stated

> "(The student] will access [sic] to special education staff member for programs, assemblies, and field trips...in a general or special education setting..."

Additionally, the transportation section of the student's IEP was amended to show that > "[The student] requires special transportation for elective classes that are held outside of the attendance building...[and] due to overall safety needs, [the student] requires adult support when in transport to and from the enrolled building."

The parent was given prior written notice of this addition to the student's IEP and provided her written consent for that change.

Reference to the need for a familiar adult to accompany the student when being transported to and from school sponsored activities was removed when the IEP was again amended on August 28, 2025. The requirement for special transportation was also removed from the student's IEP. According to the IEP Amendment form

> "[The student] no longer demonstrates the need for specialized transportation with adult support to and from electives..."

The parent was given prior written notice of these changes and on August 29, 2025 provided her written consent for the removal of special education transportation and adult support.

A November 4, 2025 amendment to the student's IEP again modified the statement regarding services to the student when on field trips. The amended IEP stated

> "[The student] will have access to support for programs, assemblies, and field trips..."

No change to this section was made when the student's IEP was again amended on December 15, 2025.

An annual review of the student's IEP was conducted on January 21, 2026. The Supplementary Aids and Services section of the new IEP stated

> "[The student] will have access to support for programs, assemblies, and field trips when programs, assemblies, and field trips are conducted in a general or special education setting."

The parent provided written consent for the student's new IEP on January 21, 2026.

Eighth grade students in the district are allowed to enroll in an elective class at the high school in order to become more familiar with the building and to ease into the transition into full time enrollment in the high school for 9th grade. The student chose to enroll in Exploring Agriculture as his high school elective. The student is driven to the high school for this first hour class and then rides a general education bus back to the elementary school when the class is over. No adult support is provided to the student for that bus ride.

The student was scheduled to participate in a field trip on April 22, 2026. On that date, the student and other members of his high school elective agriculture class were to travel by bus to a regional college campus in a city an hour and a half from the student's elementary school.

Both parties report that the parent requested that a paraeducator not accompany the student on the trip. In a telephone conversation with the investigator on May 8, 2026, the parent stated that she wanted to observe the student on the trip and felt that she would be able to provide necessary support for the student thereby making the services of a paraeducator unnecessary.

According to a prior written notice form dated April 21, 2026, the parent told the building principal that she wanted to schedule a "non-amendment" meeting for that day to change the student's IEP to show that the parent would act as the student's paraeducator on field trips unless she was unavailable to attend. The parent wanted the student's IEP to show that a paraeducator would accompany the student on a field trip only if the parent was unavailable.

Noting that an IEP meeting was already scheduled for May 7, 2026, the LEA gave the parent prior written notice refusing the parent's request for a change to the student's IEP. According to the prior written notice form, the LEA was "obligated to provide everything the student needs in the school day as outlined in the IEP." The LEA noted that the parent was "still able to attend field trips in her capacity as a parent."

On the day of the field trip, both the student's mother and his paraeducator were allowed to ride to the out-of-town location on the same bus as the student. The bus was driven by the teacher of the student's Exploring Agriculture class.

During the bus ride, the parent observed that the paraeducator had fallen asleep. The parent took pictures of the paraeducator while asleep and subsequently shared those pictures with the district superintendent. Once at the off-site location, all students, the teacher, the parent, and the paraeducator disembarked the bus. The parent's written complaint and her statements to the investigator on May 8, 2026 confirm that once at the destination, the paraeducator provided supervision and support for the student.

Summary and Conclusions Regarding Allegations Related to the Class Field Trip

The student's January 23, 2025 IEP required that a familiar adult accompany the student when he was being transported to and from a school-sponsored class or activity on a district provided vehicle. However, the student's IEP was subsequently amended on April 23, 2025 with the written consent of the parent. At that time, the student's IEP was changed to show that the student would have "access to a special education staff member" for various activities including field trips. The IEP was also changed to show that the student required special transportation for elective classes held outside of the student's building of attendance.

The student's IEP was again amended with the written consent of the parent in August 2025. The IEP team determined that the student no longer demonstrated the need for special education transportation or for adult support while being transported, and both requirements were removed from the IEP.

The student's January 2025 IEP was amended yet again in November 2025. The amended document noted that the student would have access to support for field trips and other activities, but did not require support for transportation to off-site activities.

A final amendment to the student's January 2025 IEP (completed in December 2025) also did not include support for the student when he was being transported.

An annual review of the student's IEP was conducted on January 21, 2026. The new IEP - for which the parent gave her written consent - was in effect at the time of the April 22, 2026 field trip. That IEP required that the student have access to support for field trips but did not require special education support for transportation.

Both parties agree that the paraeducator was present and available to support the student at the off-site field trip destination as required by the student's January 2026 IEP. Because the IEP did not require the paraeducator to provide special education services to the student during the bus ride to the off-site location, the fact that the paraeducator fell asleep during that ride did not deny the student a FAPE. A violation of special education statutes and regulations is not substantiated on this aspect of this issue.

Position of the LEA Regarding Classroom Support

While the LEA asserts that it takes all staff performance concerns seriously and addresses those concerns through appropriate supervisory channels, it is the position of the LEA that the available educational data does not support a finding that any isolated lapse in attentiveness on the part of the paraeducator materially interfered with the student’s ability to access instruction, participate in the educational environment, or make appropriate educational progress. The LEA contends that evidence does not support the parent's contention that the student was denied access to a Free Appropriate Public Education (FAPE) or that the student failed to receive educational benefit as a result of the incident(s) described.

Investigative Findings Regarding Classroom Support

The student's January 2025 IEP and four subsequent amendments to that IEP stated that the student was to receive daily special education services in the general education classroom for science, social studies, and an elective class. When the annual review of the student's IEP was conducted in January 2026, the student's IEP team again determined that the student should have special education support in the general education setting for science and social studies and for the elective in which the student was enrolled at the local high school.

During the 2025-26 school year, a paraeducator has been available to provide support to the student in his elective Exploratory Agriculture class at the high school as well as his 8th grade Science class and his 8th grade History class (the social studies class referenced in the student's January 2025 and January 2026 IEPs).

In her complaint, the parent stated that she had been told by the student that the paraeducator has fallen asleep in class. According to the parent, the student's special education teacher has confirmed that this had occurred.

In a telephone conversation with the investigator on May 8, 2026, the parent stated that she had asked the student what he did when he needed help at a time the paraeducator was asleep. According to the parent, the student told his mother that he called the paraeducator by name to wake her and told the paraeducator that he needed help which the paraeducator subsequently provided.

The parent did not provide evidence of specific harm to the student that resulted from the paraeducator having fallen asleep. Grade reports for the student covering both the 2024-25 and 2025-26 school years show that the student has earned passing grades in all the general education classes for which special education support has been provided.

Summary and Conclusions Regarding Classroom Support

No evidence was uncovered during the course of this investigation to show that the student experienced a measurable loss of educational benefit or regression attributable to the alleged conduct of the paraeducator. The student reported to the parent that he was able to request support from an assigned paraeducator when needed. Under these circumstances, a violation of special education statutes and regulations is not substantiated on this aspect of this issue.

Issue Two

The paraeducator inappropriately intervened with the student while the parent was present during an off-site field trip.

Position of the Parent

It is the position of the parent that a paraeducator assigned to support the student during an off-site field trip acted inappropriately by intervening with the student regarding the student's interaction with the parent during that event. The parent contends that by telling the student he had been disrespectful to his mother, the paraeducator had "intervened on [the parent's] parenting [when the parent] didn't need her help in doing so."

Position of the LEA

It is the position of the LEA that the paraeducator was not only permitted to intervene when the student disengaged from the instructional field trip activity in favor of contacting and complaining to the parent but rather was arguably obligated to do so in order to preserve the educational purpose of the activity and prevent disruption to the instructional environment. The LEA contends that school-sponsored instructional activities remain under the authority and supervision of school personnel, and that staff are responsible for maintaining the integrity of the educational process.

When the student stopped participating in the instructional event and instead diverted attention toward contacting the parent to complain during the activity itself, the paraeducator would have been expected to manage and address such interference in real time rather than ignore it.

Applicable Statutes and Regulations

As noted above under Issue One, federal regulations, at 34 C.F.R. 300.101, require states to ensure that a free appropriate public education (FAPE) is made available to all children with disabilities residing within the state. Accordingly, Kansas regulations at K.A.R. 91-40-2(b)(1) require that each school district makes FAPE available to each child with a disability residing in its jurisdiction. Federal regulations, at 34 C.F.R. 300.17, define FAPE, in part, as special education and related services provided in conformity with an Individualized Education Program (IEP).

Investigative Findings

As noted above under Issue One, the student was to be provided with support during field trips to address his specially identified needs. It was the paraeducator's job to provide this service during the field trip even though the parent was present.

The student's January 21, 2026 IEP contains the following annual goal:

> "By the next annual IEP, given interventions, [the student] will demonstrate age appropriate interpersonal skills and self-advocacy skills in 85% of opportunities."

The "Needs" section of the "Social Emotional" portion of the student's January 2026 IEP notes

> "[The student] needs frequent reminders and adult support to maintain focus and complete tasks in both general education and special education environments. The amount of prompts is dependent upon the requested task. If it is something he is motivated by (example: Cat Cafe) he is able to complete the assignment/task to his independent level ability with minimal prompts. Other tasks that are outside of his preference, but still at his independent learning level, he requires maximum prompting. Maximum prompting looks like the adult sitting next to him reading and guiding him…He benefits from structured social interactions, explicit instruction…When working in groups, he has difficulty engaging in the activity at the same level as his peers and benefits from additional guidance and structured support and struggles with recognizing social cues and practicing age-appropriate interpersonal skills."

In the May 8, 2026 telephone conversation with the investigator, the parent explained that the student had come to her during the field trip of April 21, 2026 to complain that he was bored with the activity. According to the parent, the paraeducator subsequently took the student aside and told the student he had been disrespectful to the parent. The parent noted in her written complaint that the paraeducator "had good intentions" and told the investigator that she was "not totally upset" by the paraeducators actions but stated that she did not ask the paraeducator to intervene.

Summary and Conclusions

It was the responsibility of the paraeducator while on the field trip to provide special education services to address the student's IEP-identified needs (including those related to his need for direction and feedback regarding his interpersonal skills). While the parent may have preferred that the paraeducator not intervene regarding a situation that involved the parent, the actions of the paraeducator were in line with her responsibilities. Under these circumstances, a violation of special education statutes and regulations is not substantiated on this issue.

Corrective Action

Information gathered in the course of this investigation has not substantiated noncompliance with special education statutes and regulations on issues presented in this complaint. Therefore, no corrective action is warranted.

Destruction of Records

In compliance with federal regulations, at 34 C.F.R. 300.624, I am providing notice to both parties that, within 60 days of the date of a final decision, any personally identifiable information of any student obtained by the investigator in this investigation will be considered no longer needed to provide educational services to any such student and may be destroyed by the investigator. Any personally identifiable information regarding this complaint held by the Kansas State Department of Education will be deemed no longer needed to provide educational services to the above-named student six years after the date of the final decision and may be destroyed by the department at that time. After expiration of these timelines, a parent may request destruction of the information obtained in this complaint. If such request is made, the information will be destroyed.

Right to Appeal

Either party may appeal the findings or conclusions in this report by filing a written notice of appeal with the State Commissioner of Education, ATTN: Special Education and Title Services, Landon State Office Building, 900 SW Jackson Street, Suite 620, Topeka, KS 66612-1212. The notice of appeal may also be filed by email to formalcomplaints@ksde.gov The notice of appeal must be delivered within 10 calendar days from the date of this report.

For further description of the appeals process, see Kansas Administrative Regulations 91-40-51(f).

K.A.R. 91-40-51(f) Appeals.

(1) Any agency or complainant may appeal any of the findings or conclusions of a compliance report prepared by the special education section of the department by filing a written notice of appeal with the state commissioner of education. Each notice shall be filed within 10 days from the date of the report. Each notice shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect.

Upon receiving an appeal, an appeal committee of at least three department of education members shall be appointed by the commissioner to review the report and to consider the information provided by the local education agency, the complainant, or others. The appeal process, including any hearing conducted by the appeal committee, shall be completed within 15 days from the date of receipt of the notice of appeal, and a decision shall be rendered within five days after the appeal process is completed unless the appeal committee determines that exceptional circumstances exist with respect to the particular complaint. In this event, the decision shall be rendered as soon as possible by the appeal committee.

(2) If an appeal committee affirms a compliance report that requires corrective action by an agency, that agency shall initiate the required corrective action immediately. If, after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the agency shall be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following:

(A) The issuance of an accreditation deficiency advisement;
(B) the withholding of state or federal funds otherwise available to the agency;
(C) the award of monetary reimbursement to the complainant; or
(D) any combination of the actions specified in paragraph (f)(2)

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
SPECIAL EDUCATION AND TITLE SERVICES

REPORT OF COMPLAINT
FILED AGAINST
UNIFIED SCHOOL DISTRICT #497
ON APRIL 27, 2026

DATE OF REPORT: MAY 27, 2026

This report is in response to a Complaint filed with our office on behalf of a student, -------, by their parent, -------. In the remainder of the report, the student will be referred to as "the Student" and the parent as "the Parent."

The Complaint is against USD #497 Lawrence Public Schools. In the remainder of the report, "the School" and the "local education agency (LEA)" shall refer to USD #497.

When a special education complaint is filed against a school district that is a member of a special education cooperative or interlocal, or that uses any other state recognized public agency to serve children with disabilities, the term "local education agency (LEA)" in this report will include the school district, the special education cooperative or interlocal, and any other agency that is recognized by the state as an administrative agency for public elementary or secondary schools and is serving the educational needs of this student.

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) allows for a 30-day timeline to investigate a child complaint. A complaint is considered to be filed on the date it is delivered to both the KSDE and the LEA. In this case, the KSDE initially received the Complaint on April 27, 2026, and the 30-day timeline ended on May 27, 2026.

Allegations

The following issues will be investigated:

ISSUE ONE: Whether USD #497, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), ensured the Parent had an opportunity to participate in an Individualized Education Program (IEP) meeting after the Parent requested one. Further, the Parent alleged the LEA's denial of the Parent's observation of the Student in their classroom was a denial of their parent participation rights under the IDEA. K.A.R. 91-40-17(a)(e); 34 CFR § 300.322(a)(c).

ISSUE TWO: Whether USD #497, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, provided the Parent with prior written notice (PWN) when refusing services or the requests of the Parent. K.A.R. 91-40-26(a), K.S.A. 72-3430(b)(2); 34 CFR § 300.503(a).

ISSUE THREE: Whether USD #497, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, ensured the Student was served in the Least Restrictive Environment (LRE) and gave consideration to any potential harmful effects on the Student or on the quality of services the Student needed. K.A.R. 91-40-21(a)(g)(h)(i); 34 CFR § 300.114(a).

ISSUE FOUR: Whether USD #497, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, allowed the Parent to examine data, logs, staff notes, and incident reports related to the use of noise-canceling headphones. K.A.R. 91-40-50(a)(2); K.S.A. 72-3430(b)(1), 34 CFR § 300.613(a)(b).

ISSUE FIVE: Whether USD #497, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, ensured the Student's teachers were informed of the specific accommodations, modifications, and supports that must be provided to the Student. K.A.R. 91-40-16(b); 34 CFR § 300.323(a)(d).

ISSUE SIX: Whether USD #497, in accordance with state and federal regulations implementing the IDEA, provided the Student with a Free Appropriate Public Education (FAPE). K.A.R. 91-40-1(z); K.A.R. 91-40-2; 34 CFR §§ 300.17, 300.101.

Investigation of Complaint

The Complaint Investigator interviewed the Parent on May 15, 2026. The following LEA staff were interviewed on May 14, 2026: the Principal, the Special Education Provider, and the Director of Special Education. The following LEA staff responded to survey questions: the Science Teacher, the Art Teacher, and the Music Teacher. The General Education Teacher provided a written response.

In completing this investigation, the Complaint Investigator reviewed documentation provided by the Parent and the LEA. Although additional documentation was provided and reviewed, the following materials were used as the basis of the findings and conclusions of the investigation:

1. Individualized Education Programs, 02/14/25, 02/11/26, 04/23/26
2. District Policy, Visitors to the School, Section K, revised 01/27/26
3. Grade Report, 2025-26 School Year
4. Meeting Attendance Summary, 08/15/25-04/16/26
5. Behavior Entry Report, 09/11/25-04/15/26
6. Behavior Entry Detail, 2025-26 School Year
7. Board Policy KM - Visitors to Schools, approved 07/01/01
8. Special Education Beginning of the Year Checklist, 2025-26 School Year
9. eSignature Completion Certificate, 02/25/26-03/06/26
10. Digital Signature Details, 01/28/26
11. Progress Report, 12/19/25

12. Notices of Meeting, 02/11/26, 02/25/26, 04/10/26
13. Prior Written Notice for Identification, Initial Services, Placement, Change in Services, Change of Placement, and Request for Consent, 05/06/26
14. Individualized Education Program Meeting Notes, 04/23/26
15. Meeting/Scheduling Contact Log, 12/12/25-04/11/26
16. Schedule of Services, no date
17. Student Daily Schedule, no date
18. Emails between parties, 02/11/26-04/27/26

Background Information

This Investigation involved a kindergarten-aged student enrolled at an elementary school in USD #497. The Student is currently receiving special education or related services as a child with a disability under the category of Developmental Delay (DD) per the IDEA. The Student is a bright student with strong academic skills. They are friendly to all students and helpful.

Findings of the Investigation

The following findings are based on a review of documentation and interviews with the Parent and staff in the LEA.

1. According to a February 14, 2025 IEP, the following relevant information was documented:
    a. The Student had no academic needs at the time.
    b. The following functional needs, in the form of targeted classroom tasks, were identified:
        i. "Follows predictable classroom routines and transitions."
        ii. "Carries out Activities/Projects/Tasks from beginning to end."
            1. The baseline indicated the Student was performing at 0 out of 8.
    c. Goal #1 stated, "When in [their] educational environment, [the Student] will be able to demonstrates [sic] the skills to score 8 out of 8 outcomes in the Engagement Rubric at least 3 data collection days by the end of the IEP as measured by Rubrics."
    d. Parent input was collected during the evaluation through a caregiver questionnaire and an in-person interview with the Other Parent, who stated they believed the Student needed consistent routines and exposure to same-age peers.
    e. The considerations section indicated that the Student's behavior impacted their learning or the learning of others and would be addressed through goals and accommodations.
    f. Program Modifications and Supports included:

i. Proximity control in all subjects, to support transitions between activities and routines, until a transition was complete.

ii. Use of a visual schedule in all subjects presented at the beginning of the school day and throughout the day, prior to a change in routine/activity or transition, until the Student moves to the next activity or completes the transition.

g. The Student' IEP noted no support for school personnel was required, but did require round-trip special education transportation.

h. The Student would participate with children without disabilities in general education, extracurricular, and nonacademic activities.

i. The Student would receive early childhood education services for the duration of the early childhood integrated special education classroom sessions, four days per week.

ii. Beginning in August 2025 in kindergarten, the Student would receive:

1. Direct special education services in a special education setting to begin the school day, and during the day to learn small group social skills.

2. Direct special education services in a general education setting to support the Student with navigating their individual schedule, engaging appropriately with their educational environment, transitioning, engaging in social interactions, and following teacher-chosen directives and tasks. (P33-P44)

i. The Student's IEP Progress Report dated December 19, 2025, noted the following progress toward the Student's goal:

i. May 20, 2025, October 14, 2025, and December 19, 2025: Progress adequate to meet annual goal. (D78-D79)

2. A 2025-26 Special Education Beginning-of-Year Checklist outlined the steps case managers were required to complete by September 5, 2025. The relevant steps included:

a. Reviewing IEPs for all students on their caseload and emailing any related service providers.

b. "Ensure other responsible staff (e.g.[,] general education teachers, para[professional]s, etc.) have the information they need to provide [a] FAPE. All general education teachers can access IEPs at a [G]lance through PowerTeacher." A link to print bulk IEPs at a Glance was noted. (D30)

3. On August 22, 2025, electronic documentation indicated the Special Education Provider accessed and/or printed the Student's IEP, their goals and objectives, and the IEP at a Glance. (D151)

4. An "eSignature Completion Certificate" indicated:

a. A Notice of Meeting was sent electronically on January 28, 2026, to both Parents. A note on the document indicated this notice was for a February 11, 2026, meeting.
    i. A Notice of Meeting dated February 11, 2026, proposed a February 11, 2026, IEP meeting.
b. A Notice of Meeting dated February 25, 2026, listed the proposed meeting date of March 12, 2026. The notice indicated the meeting was scheduled to develop and discuss possible changes to the IEP and conduct an annual review. The Notice of Meeting was sent electronically on February 25, 2026 and was "processed" or signed on March 6, 2026 by both Parents. (D73-D74, D95-D97, D129-D130)

5. According to a draft February 11, 2026 IEP, the following relevant information was documented:
    a. The Student had no academic needs at the time.
    b. The Student had functional needs related to following directions, meeting class expectations, transitioning, and impulsive behaviors. Their disability impacted their ability to follow classroom and building expectations, and their ability to learn, interact, and form positive relationships with adults.
    c. Goal #1 stated, "When presented with a non-preferred activity, [the Student] will be able to transition to a non-preferred task (math, handwriting, cleaning up, or lining up) within 1 minute of a verbal prompt at 80% of opportunities on 4 out of 5 data collection days by [the] end of the IEP as measured by observation."
    d. Goal #2 stated, "When given an assignment/task during independent work time, [the Student] will be able to remain on task for at least 10 consecutive minutes across the school/building at 80% on 4 out of 5 data collection days. [sic] by [the] end of IEP as measured by [o]bservation.
    e. The considerations section indicated the Student's behavior impacted their learning or the learning of others and would be addressed with a behavior intervention plan (BIP).
    f. The BIP noted the following relevant information:
        i. The Student exhibited problem behaviors, including noncompliance, verbal disruption, elopement, and aggression.
        ii. Precursor behaviors included morning work, academic tasks, stating something was too hard, moving from a preferred activity to a non-preferred activity, making negative statements, blurting out, requiring redirection, and being corrected on work or actions.
        iii. The setting events and antecedents section described events that made the behavior more likely to occur, such as ending a preferred activity, being asked to have a quiet voice, being redirected, when work was presented, at "random occurrences," unexpected changes, verbal or physical redirection, a request being denied, and off-task behavior.

iv. The function of the behavior was listed as:
    1. Noncompliance was maintained by escape or avoidance of leaving a preferred activity, or by gaining access to a preferred item or activity.
    2. Verbal disruption and elopement were maintained by escape or avoidance of a non-preferred demand, activity, or setting, and to gain access to a preferred setting.
    3. Aggression toward others was likely maintained by escape from a non-preferred demand, activity, or setting and by gaining access to a preferred activity.
v. Replacement behaviors included teaching the Student how to:
    1. "… gain access to preferred activities by properly communication [sic] to an adult what [they are] wanting to do."
    2. Gain attention from adults by asking for help or clarification of directions by using appropriate verbal communication.
    3. Address their sensory needs by communicating their needs to an adult.
    4. Gain access to preferred activities by properly communicating to an adult what they want to do.
    5. Request a break or activity with a specific person.
    6. Use appropriate language to express their feelings or frustrations.
vi. Proactive strategies to prevent the problem behaviors included:
    1. School-wide tickets paired with behavior-specific praise.
    2. Use of a token board to earn access to a preferred item or activity.
    3. Use of a visual timer for breaks.
    4. Clarify what "finished" means if the task did not have a clear ending.
    5. Use a transition cue to communicate where the Student was transitioning next.
    6. Teach and reinforce replacement behavior.
    7. Target the use of complying with the presented choices when precursor behaviors were observed.
    8. Earned breaks, reinforced breaks, and sensory breaks.
    9. Priming and preteaching around transitions, task completion, verbal feedback, and using calming strategies.
    10. Staff language should lessen the use of verbal direction and reprimands, allow time for processing, and use phrases such as, "You seem upset. Can you tell me why, so maybe I can help?"
    11. Reactive strategies listed prompting the Student to follow through with the original direction using first/then statements; prompting the Student to use replacement behavior by modeling requests; modify original demands or allow for student choice, decrease verbal communication, increase visual support, reduce audience effect by moving peers or directing peers to ignore or attend elsewhere; staff should position themselves between the Student and exits; redirect the Student to safe options of a predetermined space or activity.

g. Modifications and accommodations included:
    i. Alert the Student to transitions throughout the day.
    ii. Allow extra time for transitions throughout the day.
    iii. Allow frequent breaks lasting no more than 10 minutes, with the option of one to two additional minutes.
    iv. Allow the Student to use alternative chairs, sitters, or standers throughout the school day.
    v. Allow extended time for tasks.
    vi. Provide frequent reminders of the rules during the school day.
    vii. Positive behavior support system.
    viii. Preferential seating when the Student needs space or to reset.
    ix. Proximity control to support transitions between activities and routines.
    x. Use a reinforcement system during teacher-led activities.
    xi. Use visuals when transitioning to a less preferred activity.
    xii. Use a visual schedule at the beginning of the school day and throughout the day, prior to changes in routine or activity, or before transitions.

h. Supports for school personnel stated the "special education teacher" would inform and train staff of the Student's BIP. (P1-P12)

6. The February 11, 2026 IEP Meeting Notes included:
    a. "IEP meeting was scheduled, parents attended, but [the] meeting did not take place as parents did not want to talk about [the] draft IEP."
    b. "[The Parent] stated [they] wanted to be written into the IEP and made a part of the team. It was explained … that parents are a part of the team and we weigh their input when writing the IEP."
    c. The team tried to discuss the IEP draft, educate the Parent about the IEP process, and reschedule the meeting without success. It was explained the Student's previous IEP would be implemented.
    d. "IEP meeting on hold until we hear back from parents." (D119)
7. On February 11, 2026, the content of a phone message from the Parent was sent to the Director of Special Education. According to the notes, the Parent requested a meeting with "all parties involved" regarding the Principal's denial of the Parent's request to drop off candy for the Student's class. (D70) The same day, the Parent emailed the LEA to "formally request recurring classroom observations for [the Student]" and indicated, "These observations are necessary for my meaningful participation in [the Student's] IEP process." The Parent cited the Student's behavior issues and concerns and requested "recurring classroom visits" to understand the Student's needs, monitor IEP implementation, review behavior concerns, prepare for an IEP meeting, and determine whether accommodations and supports were implemented. The Parent requested classroom observations "three to four times per week, for the entire day, on a recurring schedule that we can mutually agree upon. If the school believes any part of this request cannot be granted, please provide [PWN] explaining the refusal, including the reasons and data used to make that determination." The Parent asked, "Can you explain to me why the police were called as I waited in my car for a scheduled meeting to discuss my child['s] IEP today (2/11/2026). I was told by a [City] Police officer, the school principal,[1.1] that [the Police Officer] was to see if the School District was going to trespass me from the property or that I need to give the school 24 hours only because I wanted to be involved in the IEP process. Of my child.[2.1] I am being denied access to the IEP program process, m[3.1]y child." (D63)

8. The following email exchange occurred on February 12, 2026, between the LEA and the Parent:
    a. 2:42 p.m.: The Director of Elementary Services emailed the Parent to acknowledge their voicemail and email communications and clarified that a "no trespass" order had not been issued. They also clarified the meeting locations for conferences and ensured the Parent they would have a "point of contact" for the Student's teaching team, "so you can communicate, ask questions, and discuss [the Student's] progress and needs across content areas." Regarding the Parent observing the Student in the classroom, the Director of Elementary Services wrote, "The district has procedures in place to balance parent observation requests with student privacy, instructional continuity, and building operations. I have attached those procedures for your review." The Director of Elementary Services indicated the IDEA "does not establish classroom observation as a procedural right," and noted the IEP team "is working to schedule an additional IEP meeting to discuss [the Student's] educational needs, including your request on opportunities for collaboration." (D62)
    b. 4:45 p.m.: The Parent wrote, "I am writing to formally request immediate clarification and corrective action regarding the restrictions placed on my ability to enter [the School], walk my child to [their] classroom, and observe [the Student's] educational environment. These restrictions directly affect my ability to meaningfully participate in [the Student's] IEP process … ." The Parent cited Board Policy KM and identified specific restrictions imposed on them that were not addressed in the policy. (D32) Additionally, regarding observing the Student, the Parent wrote, "Observation may be required when necessary for a parent to understand the child's needs or the appropriateness of the placement." The Parent requested PWN to address the "specific action the district is refusing (observation, access, walking [the Student] to class)" and reasons for the refusal, the data the LEA used to make their decision, the specific federal and state statutes supporting the refusal, the options the LEA considered and rejected, and the factors relevant to the decision. (D34-D35)

c. 5:05 p.m.: The Special Education Provider emailed the Parent to state they were unable to review the Student's draft IEP the previous day. They indicated they were reaching out to reschedule[4.1] for the following week, and asked the Parent when they would be available, and provided 10 meeting date options. (P58)

d. 11:01 p.m.: The Parent emailed the LEA to state they had requested an IEP meeting, which was scheduled and then canceled. They shared "the district convened a meeting without providing required notice to either parent." The Parent added they were "led to believe" they were attending a parent-teacher conference, but indicated there was an IEP meeting afterward, which they were not prepared for and which was not properly noticed. They stated they felt the LEA had predetermined the Parent's access and observation rights, which affected compliance with special education law. The Parent requested the School provide them with the assessment tools used in the IEP. They asked whether any other assessments, including an FBA, were used. The Parent asked for the names, educational background, training, qualifications, and supervisors of the paraprofessionals who worked with the Student. The Parent asked the LEA to clarify its intent regarding the Parent's requested changes to the IEP, the Parent's participation rights, and whether the LEA plans to issue PWN for any refusal. (P55-P57)

9. On February 13, 2026, the Parent sent the following emails to the LEA:

   a. 10:44 a.m.: The Parent emailed the Principal to ask for clarification regarding why they were being followed "closely throughout the school." They asked if the Principal felt they posed a risk to children, staff, or other visitors. (P59-P60)

   b. 12:13 p.m.: The Parent emailed the Special Education Provider, the Principal, and the Director of Elementary Services to request recurring classroom observation to understand how the Student's IEP was being implemented and how the classroom environment affected the Student's behavior and learning. (P48)

10. On February 17, 2026, the Parent sent the following emails to the LEA:

    a. 12:14 a.m.: The Parent emailed the LEA to request a classroom observation of the Student. The Parent requested to observe how the Student interacted with peers and adults in the classroom, how staff were providing "consistent adult support," whether the behavior supports were being implemented as written, and whether the classroom environment was appropriate and safe for the Student. The Parent described a contradiction in the evaluation report, which indicated the Student had difficulty maintaining relationships, needed adult support, and had challenges with regulation, and the School "isolating [the Student] in a room." The Parent indicated a direct observation was "not only appropriate but necessary to ensure [the Student's] safety and the proper implementation of the IEP." The Parent requested PWN if the LEA refused their request to observe the Student. (P21-P22; D40-D41)

b. 4:58 p.m.: The Director of Special Education emailed the Parent to acknowledge receipt of the Parent's emails and to inform the Parent the IEP Team would need to convene for a meeting to discuss their requests and any related supports in the context of the IEP. The Director of Special Education asked the Parent to provide dates that would work for them. (P20; D41-D42)

11. On February 24, 2026, the Parent sent the following emails to the LEA:

a. 1:38 a.m.: The Parent requested a virtual meeting link for a March 2, 2026 meeting. (D42)

b. 6:30 p.m.: The Parent described their understanding of the Student being kissed and indicated they received a call from the School that day. (D48)

c. 9:07 p.m.: "I call an IEP meeting no one has responded[.] Please provide a zoom link 24 hours before the meeting[,] if you have no plan to provided [sic] zoom link prior to the meeting[,] please let me know by email [sic]." (D44)

d. 10:33 p.m.: The Parent indicated they were aware "that concerns were reported to [Child Protective Services] CPS regarding my child's emotional support and behavior." The Parent requested "the specific dates, observations, and data that led to the conclusion that I am not providing adequate emotional support or that counseling was required. Additionally, please provide the interventions and supports the school has implemented during my child's outbursts, as well as any behavior data collected." (D47)

e. 10:37 p.m.: The Parent wrote, "'Under IDEA, please provide [PWN] explaining the basis for your claim that I am not providing emotional support or that my child requires counseling." (D60)

f. 10:40 p.m.: "Please provide the specific observations, dates, and staff reports that support this claim. Also provide the interventions the school has implemented to support my child during these moments. Please save any video so it can be reviewed." (D61)

g. 10:47 p.m.: The Parent requested the "written basis" for recommending counseling, the School Psychologist's evaluation, the Multi-Tiered System of Supports (MTSS)/behavior data, the FBA, and the BIP to be provided within 24 hours. (D49)

h. 10:56 p.m.: "This email is to confirm what was stated today: the school reported that my child is having emotional outbursts and suggested I am not providing emotional support. I disagree with this characterization. Please provide the specific data, dates, and observations that led to this conclusion." (D53)

i. 11:15 p.m.: The Parent requested all "written reports, staff notes, emails, and internal communications referencing concerns about my child's emotional state or behavior. All dates, times, and descriptions of incidents the district relied upon. Any statements made by staff regarding my alleged lack of emotional support. Any data, assessments, or observations used to justify the claim that counseling was required. Any documentation showing the school attempted interventions prior to making these allegations. A list of staff members involved in reporting or discussing these concerns." (D50)

j. 11:22 p.m.: "I am formally requesting [PWN] regarding the district's statements and actions related to: Allegations that I am not providing adequate emotional support to my child; Statements that my child requires counseling; Any refusal to provide behavioral supports, evaluations, or interventions; Any conclusions the district has made about parent-child interaction." The Parent requested the LEA include the required components of PWN and asked for it to be provided in writing and sent via email. (D51)

k. 11:31 p.m.: The Parent wrote, "Given the school's recent concerns regarding my child's emotional outbursts, I am formally requesting immediate behavioral supports and data-driven interventions as required under the IDEA and Kansas regulations. Please provide: All behavior data collected to date, including frequency, duration, and context of outbursts. A Functional Behavioral Assessment (FBA) conducted by qualified personnel. A [BIP] based on the FBA results. Documentation of all interventions the school has attempted, including dates, staff involved, and outcomes. Information on the school's MTSS/behavioral tier supports currently being used. Any safety plans or crisis intervention procedures applied to my child." (D45)

12. On February 25, 2026, the following email exchanges occurred between the LEA and the Parent:

a. 11:41 a.m.: The Director of Special Education emailed the Parent to acknowledge they received "the eleven emails sent yesterday." They clarified the IEP team needed to meet to consider the requests and concerns in the context of an IEP meeting. The Director of Special Education wrote, "I understand you've requested to meet Monday morning. Unfortunately, this time does not work for the school team due to prior commitments." The Director of Special Education asked the Parent to provide them with "a few additional dates" that would work for them. (P52; D55)

b. 2:20 p.m.: The Special Education Provider emailed the Parent regarding scheduling the Student's annual IEP meeting. They stated all IEP team members were available on March 12, 2026, from 1:00 p.m. to 2:00 p.m. The Special Education Provider reminded the Parent of the draft IEP sent on January 21, 2026 and listed the changes the team proposed. The Special Education Provider indicated the meeting notice would be sent via email and could be signed electronically. The 2025-26 IEP and the draft 2026-27 IEP were attached. (P26; D56)

c. 3:28 p.m.: The Parent wrote that they had "made a request" at the last IEP meeting and "it didn't happen." The Parent added they followed up with a formal request and noted the LEA had not responded as of the date of the email. (P25)

13. The following email exchanges occurred on February 27, 2026 between the LEA and the Parent:
    a. 9:46 a.m.: The Director of Special Education emailed the Parent to confirm the IEP Team responded to the Parent's requests by offering to meet and consider the Parent's requests. They added the IEP Team had not yet had the opportunity to meet together to review the IEP, discuss the proposed services, or consider the requests shared. The Director of Special Education noted a meeting had been scheduled for March 12, 2026 at 1:00 p.m. (P24; D57)
    b. 12:51 p.m.: The Parent emailed the Director of Special Education to state they felt "harassed and intimidated," were "afraid to attend," and requested a virtual meeting because they believed the LEA "makes all the decisions" and the Parent had "no input." (P24; D58)
14. On March 4, 2026, the Special Education Provider emailed the Parent the link for the virtual IEP meeting for March 12, 2026, at 1:00 p.m. (D59)
15. On March 11, 2026, the Parent emailed the LEA, indicating they did not understand a document and "needed to get a better understanding of it before signing it." Additionally, the Parent requested the Student's "school records be email[ed] to me." (D39) The Director of Special Education emailed the meeting link to the Parent for the IEP meeting schedule for the following day and indicated the Notice of Meeting was sent more than 10 days in advance and did not require a signature. The Director of Special Education also shared the link to submit a records request. An IEP meeting agenda was attached. (D65)
16. March 12, 2026 IEP Meeting Notes included:
    a. The Parent shared concerns about homeschooling being discussed with the Other Parent.
    b. "[The Special Education Provider] attempted to discuss present levels and was met with interruptions from [the Parent]. [The Parent] expressed that [the Student] would do better if the school would let [the Parent] come in and support."
    c. "[The] [t]eam attempted to explain why this is a proposed goal and how the school team will work on it. [The Parent] said the team wasn't listening to [the Parent] when there was a response to a question from [the Parent]."
    d. "We were not able to get past the first goal of the IEP. [The Parent] said [they] saw earphones in the draft and doesn't want earphones used. [The] [t]eam said they would take that out as earphones were not used. They were listed as an option for sensory."
    e. "The team reached a time boundary and attempted to reschedule."
    f. "[The Parent] said [the Parent] has items [they] would like to request in writing and we will need to schedule another date/time to finish the meeting. [The [t]eam will email with new dates." (D119-D120)

17. On April 7, 2026, the Principal emailed the Parent after missing the Parent's phone call, "It was relayed to me that you had requested the date of our previous IEP meeting. We met on Thursday[,] March 12th, [2026] at 1:00 [p.m.]. [The Special Education Provider] proposed on March 30th[,] [2026] the dates and times below for a follow[-]up meeting: April 16th[,] [2026][from] 1:30 [p.m.] to 3:00 [p.m.]; April 21st[,] [2026] from 12:30 [p.m.] to 2:00 [p.m.]; April 23rd[,] [2026] from 1:30 [p.m.] to 3:00 [p.m.]." (D37) On April 9, 2026, the Parent indicated they may have a work conflict and wrote, "[The Other Parent] has my permission to make whatever decision concerning [the Student's] IEP. (D37-D38)
18. On April 10, 2026, the Special Education Provider emailed the Parents to propose an IEP meeting on April 23, 2026, from 1:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. and added they could provide a virtual link if necessary. The Special Education Provider informed the Parents that a meeting notice would be sent to their email and noted they could sign online. (P16-P17) An April 10, 2026 Notice of Meeting proposed a meeting on April 23, 2026, to develop and discuss the IEP and conduct an annual review. (D98-D99)
19. On April 14, 2026, the Parent emailed the LEA to request the Student's "proposal IEP program that we are meeting about." (D36)
20. April 23, 2026 IEP Meeting Notes included:
    a. "The meeting started w[h]ere the previous meeting had left off, after the goals. [The Other Parent] was present at [the] previous meeting and agreed with the goals presented."
    b. "[The] [t]eam went through [the] proposed [BIP]. [The Parent] stated [the Student] did not need headphones, [the] team agreed to remove [headphones] from the BIP."
    c. "[The Parent] also stated [the Student] does not need fidgets, which is listed under Proactive strategies under sensory breaks. [The Parent] does not agree with the use of fidgets or the purpose."
    d. "[The Parent] said [the Student] just needs [to] be told to stop and sit down. That is why [the Parent] wants to come in and support [the Student]. The team noted this request."
    e. "The team then went through program modifications and supports. It was explained to [the Parent] that a lot of these supports happen naturally in the classroom, i.e.[,] alerting [the Student] to transitions, alternate chair, extended time, frequent reminders of rules, etc. [The Parent] was insistent that [the Student] does not [need] extended time or anything different than other students. The team presented that all students learn differently and we are supporting [the Student] with [what] works for [the Student]. [The Parent] stated [they] did not feel [the Student] needed additional time or support."
    f. "[The] [t]eam explained that the purpose of the IEP goals, BIP, and specially designed instruction would target explicit instruction to support [the Student's] progress. [The Parent] said [the Parent] needs to be the one to do this because [the Parent] doesn't trust anyone else. [The Parent] shared a situation that occurred in private school when [the Parent] saw [the Student] did not have a voice. [The Parent] said it is [the Parent's] job to be [the Student's] voice at school."

g. "The team agreed to continue transportation when [the Student] is with [the Other Parent] until the end of the school year."

h. "Service minutes were proposed to [the Parent]."

i. "In the end, [the Parent] was upset about not being able to be in the classroom [Monday, Wednesday, Friday] MWF and [the Other Parent] [Tuesday, Thursday] TU/Thurs. [The Parent] said [the Parent] wants to do this for 6 months but would agree to only 3 months if allowed. [The Parent] also said [they would] agree to only 3 days a week instead of 5 days. [The] [team] restated that the services proposed[,] including the BIP[,] could support [the Student] and would include the types of supports [the Parent] felt [the Student] needed to be successful."

j. "[The Principal] reminded [the Parent] of the opportunities [the Parent] has to be a part of [the Student's] classroom."

k. "[The Parent] stated [they] did not trust us anymore and we wasted [the Parent's] time. [The Parent] said [the Parent] was blocking emails and would not respond. Meeting ended." (D120-D121)

21. On March 27, 2026, the Special Education Provider emailed the Parent to indicate it was decided at the last IEP meeting that another meeting would be needed to cover the remaining content of the Student's IEP. The Special Education Provider provided the next available date and time, April 13, 2026, and attached a copy of the Student's current and draft IEPs. (D67) The Parent responded that the April date would not work as they had clients and a hearing and wrote, "I don't understand why you guys haven't given … the information that I requested." (D66)

22. On April 10, 2026, the Special Education Provider proposed April 23, 2026, for an IEP meeting. (D69) On April 14, 2026, the Parent requested the documents that would be discussed at the IEP meeting. (D68) On April 15, 2026, the Special Education Provider attached the current and draft IEPs. (D68)

23. A draft April 23, 2026 IEP included:

a. Functional needs: The Student's ability to focus and follow classroom expectations occurred during non-preferred activities and transitions.

b. Impact of Exceptionality: "[The Student's] inability to follow classroom/building[-] wide expectations impacts [their] ability to learn, interact, and form positive relationships with peers and adults. [The Student] struggles with impulsive behaviors in and out of the classroom." (D133)

c. Service Delivery Statement: "[The Student] will receive the following services as the district's offer of a [FAPE]. [The Student] will receive the following special education services in [their] general education setting/classroom. During this time, [the Student] will be participating with non-disabled peers. [The Student] will receive 210 minutes a day, 4 days per week and 170 minutes a day, 1 day per week of in-class support and during specials for support with transitions, classroom expectations, review individual schedule, offer break choices and/or reinforcement/token system, hallway and building expectations, and social interactions with peers. [The Student] will receive the following services outside the general education classroom/setting. During this time, [the Student] will not participate with non-disabled peers. [The Student] will receive 90 minutes a day, 5 days per week, of direct special education instruction in the areas of compliance, task completion and executive functioning skills." (D131-D147)
